Aside from this fact, there are quite a few students in the University with scholarships or free tuition, who drive to class in automobiles. It is obviously unfair to allow such a thing to continue. A survey is now being conducted to determine the number of students on this campus guilty of this inconsistency.

It is bad enough for the students studying for the ministerial and teaching professions to be robbed of their free tuition, but there is absolutely no excuse whatever for allowing these other mentioned inconsistencies to exist any longer.

Grading Away An Education

Education as defined in Webster's Dictionary is the impartation or acquisition of knowledge, or the development of character, as by study or discipline. It is not, as the general student on the campus seems to think, the obtaining of grades. Nowhere in the definition is a system of grades mentioned as any part of education.

However, education has grown more and more to be merely the getting of grades instead of the acquisition of knowledge. When one hears two students talking of a course, it is seldom that they speak of the amount learned on the course but rather the grades which were secured from sitting in on the class. It matters little whether through taking the subject the student has become adept in that special branch of knowledge; it matters more that he has passed with a high average on the course.

The system of grades now in effect at the University has added several words to the vocabulary of the student. The word, "crip," is one of them. A crip course is one that requires little or no studying and obtains for the student a high mark. Even though the course is absolutely useless as far as cultural or practical value is concerned, it is thought a wise thing to take it for the grade alone.

It is recognized that some system of grading is necessary to estimate the abilities of the student and to give him an incentive to study, but it seems that by having a great number of marks he is given an incentive to acquire grades rather than a knowledge of the field for which he is preparing himself. It would be a much better method if the University were to decrease the number of marks used to show the aptitude of a student for a particular subject and adopt a system, preferably that of two marks, pass and fail, as given in the graduate school, that would place more emphasis on securing knowledge by lessening the emphasis placed upon the acquisition of grades.—F.P.G.

The Pot Begins To Boil

With the student election so near, the annual log-rolling contests have redoubled in fury: fraternities, dormitories, boarding houses and classrooms—to mention a few places—are agog with whispered conferences, blatant hand-shaking and imperious struttings-about; the campus politician is now indeed in his element.

The complexity of the electorate is enough to gray the heads of most campus wire-pullers, but refusing to be dismayed, these gentlemen have gone about their machinations with vigor and zest, confident before their candidates, obsequious toward prospective voters, acrimonious toward the opposition. It can be said, however, that this sort of thing constitutes an excellent training for our future "public servants." Of course, it is too much to expect the average campus politician to match our experienced lawmakers in the guile and the sagacity of wire-pulling, but on the whole, it must be stated that we here at the University should certainly not be ashamed of the local talent on display previous to class elections.

On the other hand, there are certain aspects of the situation which cause some concern to be felt as to the efficacy of this method of selecting student leaders. Especially is this true in the case of the more highly specialized student activities such as publications. Here, above all, the person chosen for the various positions should not be jeopardized by the fickle crosswinds of campus politics; the same also applies to other offices, but in somewhat less degree.

It is the duty of every student to weigh the the candidates as best he can, and in the light of his information and guided by his conscience, vote for the individual who would do credit to the University and its ideals.—V.J.L.

Training or Education?

There is gradually developing a group of educators who maintain that education, not training, is the end of a college career. Formerly in the minority, this group is gradually enlarging and promises to revolutionize our present theory of training. This group, headed in the recent conference by Dr. D. T. Howard, claims that it is not the purpose of our colleges to make intellectual robots, nor trained men qualified only for a routine position in life, but rather students with some intellectual independence who are qualified for leadership. Dr. Howard said in reference to our present theory of training: "We are thinking only of teaching people techniques; what we need to do is to provide the kind of training which will develop mental initiative in men. The preparation of students to live in the world is a different thing from teaching men to be specialists."

Are students to be trained or educated? The answer to this question is of utmost importance. Our present system, with its mass education and curriculum requirements, is obviously developed to train, not to educate. We must decide which is the proper end of a college career. If Northwestern desires to graduate a group of intellectual robots trained for a standardized position in life, the present theory may have some justification; if it chooses to have as alumni men of initiative, leadership, and intellectual independence, then the present methods must give way to a program that will be conducive to these ends.

Albert E. Wiggam, in his book "The Marks of an Educated Man," has something to say of our present theory of training. When speaking in reference to the parents of our college students, he says: "But many of them, after dropping five or twenty-five thousand dollars in a collegiate slot, when they get their boy or girl back out of the machine, are both amazed and disillusioned at the meager improvement achieved." This is by no means an exceptional observation; we have quoted throughout the year many competent authorities who express dissatisfaction with the present theory of training. It is a matter worth observing that many of our great leaders and most all of our prominent literary figures never graduated from college; they refused to be trained and standardized.

Even if we assume that there is a certain group in our colleges that desires only to be trained, and are capable of nothing more, there is at least a limited number that are qualified for something better. Our present method of training does not recognize this group, but assumes that all are alike and forces everyone through this intellectual training machine. It is time Northwestern makes a distinction, and permits those who choose to be educated to have a chance.—Daily Northwestern.

Vanitas Vanitatum

The Carolina Buccaneer, for whom this department entertains a violent affection, comes forth tomorrow afternoon with its long promised and much tooted "Vanitas Fair" edition. "Vanitas Fair," we understand, is the name of a novel by a young Thackeray fellow, which is selling blime well down Lunn way. We promise to review the new novel in an early issue.

One of the Buc's best features is the "Impossible Interviews" section. For impossible interviews, we suggest several more names: Dr. Frank Graham and Tam Bowie, Ogden Nash and John Masefield, Lulu and Bobbie Mason, Prof. Woodhouse and Herbert C. H., Chuck Collins and Marvin Ritch. Our Times and its home town bank whose assets would shame a Frigidaire.

Script

A correspondent in the American Near East writes us of a plan at Princeton University (a college for young men in New Jersey or Rhode Island) to furnish the student body with spending money during the recent banking difficulty. The Princetonian, a modest student daily newspaper, issued $500 worth of script, accepting the checks of students to the amount of five dollars. Now that the banks have opened, the Prince is in a bad spot. The script money, in the form of certificates good for twenty-five cents, has been hoarded by souvenir-hunting students. Some have been sold for as much as one dollar. But the Prince, hoping for a profit on its banking venture, must keep a reserve on hand to make good the script if anybody gets hard up.

Reply

Not long ago this department made several remarks regarding a statement in The New Yorker about George Gordon Battle. Mr. Battle, it was said, graduated from the University of Virginia, where "legions of Battles had preceded him." Several patriots here about drafted an irate letter to The New Yorker, repudiating the statement regarding the Battle legions. The answer arrived yesterday:

"Gentlemen, "We're sorry that Mr. Hellman's article offended the oldest university (don't let the University of Georgia see this or they will be offended, too). The fact was that Mr. Hellman was so limited to space that he confined himself to mentioning only the university from which Mr. Battle had graduated. Quite probably, more Battles attended the University of Virginia, but the point didn't come up.

"However, should the occasion offer at some future time, we shall be very glad to consider the interesting facts in your letter . . ."

But our friends have not abandoned the cause. They are now drafting more letters to the University of Virginia, the New York magazine, and anybody else that'll listen. We'll give you a bulletin in a further broadcast. In the meantime, stand by for the sinking of the Maine.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

To the Editor,
DAILY TAR HEEL:

May I have space in your columns to commend Mr. Jimmie W. for his reply to Mr. Berryman regarding the laundry?

Something more pertinent than its care of the laundry deposit (though it be with a certain parental severity that one is rebuked for wanting credit on what the laundry owes him), more pertinent than the efficient care of clothing (including the buttons, which the laundry retains at the plant to prevent loss by the students, at best thoughtless), more pertinent than even the free-handed but noiseless efficiency of the laundry in getting bundles from the rooms and down to the trucks (defying even rain and storm in the casting of bundles from third and fourth floor windows into the mud-puddle drive below)—something more pertinent than any of these insignificant side issues should be discussed in the column of the unmannerly and vicious Mr. Berryman, who dared to give a not so full or true account of our eagerly serving, never surly, munificent Laundry Department.

Time and again, Bell System engineers have demonstrated their pioneering bent in working out unusual telephone construction problems.

For example, they laid a huge conduit under the Harlem River. They dredged a trench in the river bottom, lowered enormous sections of iron pipe, sent down divers to join the sections, encased the finished tube in concrete. Through this they ran telephone cables forming one of New York's main lines of communication. Across the Gila River in Arizona they constructed a catenary span 2373 feet long. To bridge oceans, they developed radio telephony. They have built telephone lines over mountains, across deserts, through swamps.

Their resourcefulness in getting through, over or under natural barriers makes possible telephone service that is practically world wide in reach.

Golfers To Start Season With Match Against Richmond Today

Captain Billy O'Brien to Lead Team Composed of Smith, Michaels, and Coffin.

SMITH IS LOW QUALIFIER
Leads Tar Heels in Battle Which Opens Schedule; May Use Five Man Team.

The Carolina varsity golf team will open its 1933 schedule this morning at 9:30 o'clock with a 36-hole match with the University of Richmond, state champs of Virginia, at the Hope Valley course. The individual matches will be run off in the morning, and the foursomes at 2:30 o'clock will terminate the meet.

Captain Billy O'Brien will lead a strong aggregation against the Old Dominion invaders and will be ably supported by Alan Smith, Ed Michaels, and Wilson Coffin, all golfers of some note in collegiate circles. These players were selected to represent Carolina because of their low scores in the recent qualifying tests. Their scores and their positions are: No. 1—Alan Smith, 75, 74, 73—222; No. 2—Captain O'Brien, 79, 72, 77—228; No. 3—Ed Michaels, 76, 77, 76—229; No. 4—Wilson Coffin, 76, 79, 79—234.

The visiting team consists of George Swanson, Ed Meredith, Billy Grennan, and Roland Wright, who will play in that order.

Hope to Keep Up Record
The Tar Heels are opening their season with high hopes of equaling last year's record when they captured the Southern conference title. The Tar Heels completed last year's schedule with only one defeat, that being a close match that the boys dropped to Duke at Hope Valley. There is a rare possibility that Richmond will bring a five man team, and should they do this, Coach Kenfield will appoint either Erwin Laxton or Carl Cramer to hold down the fifth position for Carolina.

"BROADWAY BAD" IS SCHEDULED FOR SHOWING TODAY

"Broadway Bad," starring Joan Blondell and Ricardo Cortez, will show at the Carolina theatre tomorrow. The story deals with a Broadway star who, in order to keep her public, endeavors to hide her home life and maintain her sensational reputation. The cast also includes Ginger Rogers.

Constance Bennett in the lavish RKO-Radio production "Our Betters" is to be the Friday attraction.

"Our Betters" was adapted for the screen from W. Somerset Maugham's novel of the same title. Its action occurs in the ultra-smart and royal circles of Great Britain. Intimate glimpses of the ballrooms and galleries of Buckingham Palace add color to the production.

When Constance Bennett and Anita Louise, playing the heroine's sister, are presented to the king and queen, the scene is complete to the minutest detail. In the story an English nobleman marries the heroine, a wealthy American girl, for her money.

Varsity Track Squad

Coach Bob Fetzer announced yesterday that there would be an important meeting of all members of the varsity track squad this afternoon at 5:00 o'clock at Emerson stadium. It is absolutely essential that all members be present.

MONOGRAM CLUB WILL INDUCT NEW MEN TODAY

The first formal initiation of the re-organized Monogram club is being conducted today. There are thirteen men eligible for the initiation. President Phipps announced last night that those men desiring to join the club were to meet at Emerson stadium tonight at 7:30 o'clock. Present members of the club are also urged to attend and are reminded that to be able to take part in the initiation they must wear their sweaters.

SUTTER AND LOTT WILL PLAY GAME IN RALEIGH TODAY

Leading Tennis Stars Will Give Exhibition Match on Tennis Club Courts.

Tennis enthusiasts from every section of the state will gather at the Raleigh tennis club this afternoon to witness an exhibition tennis match, featuring two of the world's leading players, Clifford Sutter and George Lott. This match will differ from the other exhibitions that have been staged around here in that it is between amateur players; and it promises to be a real battle, for the two players are old rivals and are out to "get" each other, whether it may be in a tournament or an exhibition match.

This spirit of competition is something lacking in most of the matches between players of first ranking that the people of this section get the chance to see. Another detail that will add to the interest of the match is that Sutter and Lott, both fine Davis Cup prospects, belong to the class of hard-hitting and heady tennis stars, whom the public always get a thrill out of seeing.

Sutter Winner of Tiltles

Sutter has just terminated a campaign for the national indoor tennis title, losing the final round of the tournament in a hard five-set match to Gregory Mangin. His rise to tennis fame started several years ago when he played a spectacular match against "Big Bill" Tilden in the National Championships. Sutter was close to a victory when Tilden defaulted. Since this time the young star has won many titles and has upset many famous players. He will be particularly remembered by Carolina students as the ancient rival of the Tar Heel tennis idol, "Bitsy" Grant.

George Lott has been ranked as high as second in national ranking, and is a spectacular tennis player. In spite of his youth, he is an old hand at the game, and Sutter will have to play a supreme brand of tennis to beat him.

Harvey Harris, sophomore at Carolina and an imposing candidate for the tennis team, will also take part in the program, playing another North Carolina boy in a secondary match and playing in a doubles match with the two visiting stars.

The matches will start at 2:30 o'clock on the tennis club courts in Raleigh, known as the "best in the south." A small admission fee of forty cents, will be charged. A large group of Chapel Hill enthusiasts should take advantage of this chance to see a battle between the headliners of amateur tennis.

Athletic Pass Books

The athletic pass books for the spring quarter are now ready for distribution by the athletic association at the business office in South building.

GRIDSTERS BEGIN WORK FOR NEXT SEASON'S TEAM

Three Weeks of Hard Work to Close With Annual Monogram-Rookie Battle April 8.

With the return of good weather, Carolina's 1933 football candidates went through a long workout yesterday afternoon in Kenan stadium. Fifty-seven reported bringing the total near the number called.

Coach Chuck Collins, who has been on a trip to the western part of the state for the past week, returned today and personally directed the practice. Coach Collins visited Asheville, Charlotte, and other western Carolina cities in an effort to interest boys in attending the University next year.

Coach Collins is planning on sending next fall's football squad through some pretty tough workouts during the next three weeks. Three practice contests will be played with the first one coming this Saturday. The second will come the following Saturday and the season will close Saturday, April 8, with the annual Monogram-Rookie battle. Between these regular games several scrimmages will also take place.

Freshman Players

All freshman football players will be asked to report for practice regardless of baseball. The football lasts only three weeks after which there will be two months left for baseball. George Brandt, Jim Tatum, Johnny Phipps, and Bill Croom are the only regulars expected back next year who will not be called out as a result of varsity baseball.

Yesterday afternoon after a long warm-up drill, Coach Collins sent the squad through a stiff workout. The practice consisted mostly of tackling for the line and pass offense and defense for the backfield. Platt Landis, conference heavyweight champion, reported and may add much to next year's chances for a winning team. Harry Montgomery, freshman sensation last fall, who was not able to practice most of last quarter as a result of a bad knee, is in good shape again and ready to go.

It was brought out that those paying no tuition are minister's children, faculty members' children, ministerial students, and students agreeing to teach school after their graduation. The division is as follows: ministers' children, 38, all at the University; faculty members', 64, all at State College; and those agreeing to teach, 3,804, divided among the several institutions.

One senator pointed out that the income of the schools would increase $207,800 if free tuition were abolished.

The survey will compile a list of all students who own cars. If the car is being kept at school for personal use and not for business purposes, their names will be checked at the business office to see if they are on the free tuition list.

Nine persons were under the University physician's care at the infirmary yesterday. They were: J. W. Smith, W. H. DeVane, Ralph B. Cheek, W. C. Pitt, J. B. Jackson, C. P. Cameron, Jisaku Fukusato, Russell Mickle, and G. W. Marsden.

Carolina's Baseball Maestro Presents Interesting Study

Coach Bunn Hearn Is One of Baseball's Leading Characters; Has Varied Career.

If one were to wander out on Emerson field some week-day, he would see a tall, burly, left hander, surrounded by a group of youngsters, throwing a few balls leisurely to the awaiting receiver. Then he will stop and talk to that group and go through the procedure again. That man is Bunn Hearn, head baseball coach at the University and one of professional baseball's most remarkable personages.

Bunn has been closely connected with the national pastime some twenty-five years including twenty-two seasons in professional ball. He lives and breathes baseball and is one reason why the "good old game" is where it is now.

Hearn is the type of person one never forgets after coming in contact with him. Ring Lardner can attest to that, for the famous newspaper man used Bunn as his model in the well-known "You Know Me, Al" stories, which center about the new southern rookie coming up to the Big Leagues whose confidence was mistaken for conceit, but who later proved his ability.

Varied Career

Hearn's baseball career has been long and varied—playing with the St. Louis Cardinals, the champion New York Giants, the Boston Braves, and the champion Toronto team of the International League, and managing the Winston-Salem club of the Piedmont League before hanging up his shoes and glove and calling it a day. Bunn went to the Cards in 1910 from Wilson in the Eastern Carolina League and played with St. Louis for two years before joining the McGrawmen in 1913 in the midst of their successful fight for the pennant. Incidentally, Bunn toured the world that fall with a group comprised of Giants and White Sox. In 1917 Bunn practically hurled the Toronto Leafs to the International League championship as he and Tommy Thompson won over half the games won by the Leafs. Hearn ended his Big League career with Boston for whom he pitched from 1918-20.

In an interview with the writer Hearn gave several interesting sidelights concerning baseball as played in the old regime. He considers his relations with John McGraw, the little Napoleon of baseball, among his most pleasant in spite of the terrific riding he was forced to take from McGraw and Artie Latham the first time he hurled against the Giants. Hearn was playing with the Cardinals at that time, and was picked by Roger Bresnahan, then piloting the Cards, to oppose Hooks Wiltse, McGraw's number one southpaw. Wiltse eked out a 1-0 decision over the Carolina youngster, but Hearn made a hit with New York fans that day, and was seen with the Giants the following year. Under McGraw, Hearn really learned what discipline was. The Giants had to be in their rooms at eleven o'clock, and the Giant manager occasionally resorted to the use of a private investigator to check up on the athletes. One of these private men, Henry Fuller, gained notoriety as the special guardian of Bugs Raymond. This eccentric Giant star always tried to elude the ever watchful Fuller, succeeding once and celebrating this event by eating five ducks for supper.

When asked what he thought of this year's club, Bunn said: "We have a very young group of boys to work with this season—they're inexperienced, but they always hustle, and they can be developed in a year or so. You can't make ball players overnight, and too much shouldn't be expected for this season. Of course we lack pitchers, but we have two or three, who with the proper care should turn into first rate hurlers. Shortstop may also give us some trouble, but both Johnny Phipps and Dutch Leonard are good ball players and they may hold down that position adequately."

PHI DELTS ROUT DELTA TAU DELTA IN OPENING GAME

After having been twice delayed by the weather man's pranks, the spring intramural program finally got under way yesterday afternoon. A full program of baseball and tennis was run off to start the season in good style.

Phi Delta Theta proved to be the first team to require application of the rule ending games in the fifth inning if either team has amassed twenty runs. The Phi Delta outfit scored in every inning to crush Delta Tau Delta, 20-4. McLaughlin and Wolslagel, the battery for the winners, crossed the plate four times each to lead the attack. McCollum, with two runs, was the leader for Delta Tau Delta.

CONCERT PIANIST TO GIVE RECITAL HERE TOMORROW

Helen McGraw, Who Studied Under Famous Pianists, Is Acclaimed by Critics.

Helen McGraw, concert pianist, will appear tomorrow night at 8:30 o'clock in Hill Music hall in a special recital arranged by the committee on arrangements for the dogwood festival here this spring.

Miss McGraw has appeared in recital both in this country and in several countries in Europe, having made her debut in Paris and London last year. Press comments on her appearances in both cities predict a brilliant career as a concert artist. Olin Downes in the New York Times describes her as a young musician of obvious talent.

Helen McGraw began study for her concert career at the Peabody Conservatory of Music in Baltimore under Alexander Sklarewski, eminent Russian pianist. She was awarded the conservatory diploma of the conservatory in 1930.

Proceeds from the concert tomorrow night will be used to help stage the annual dogwood festival held here each spring.

House Fails To Vote On Second Reading Of Substitute Bill

In Murphy's amendment, which was prefaced by remarks at point of order sufficient to settle the question before the House, the figure under Section IV in the Bowie-Cherry bill was amended to read $832,000 for the University of North Carolina. The figure mentioned in the withdrawn amendment was $716,000. Murphy further requested a restoration of appropriation figure grants to negro institutions.

And thereupon Mr. Murphy set forth into one of the most brilliant orations of his career, if the testimony of old time pressmen in the newspaper section is any criterion. Tracing the development of education in North Carolina from 1789 to the present, Mr. Murphy illustrated his thesis with examples of the service the University (Chapel Hill branch) had rendered the state and nation. "From that day until this," said the veteran statesman "the University has gradually become recognized as the one great educational institution of the south. Speaking in the interest of all the people of North Carolina, I would feel untrue to my state not to ask for adequate support for the University and education in general."

Cites Glories

He pointed out the fact that thirty-two governors, the entire present supreme court, one president, one vice-president, two original senators from Alabama, seven senators from Tennessee, fifty-seven diplomats, and various other public servants have gone forth from the portals of the state University. Murphy also requested for a just deal to negro institutes, predicated on the abandoning of prejudice, hate, passion and greed. Mrs. Lillie M. Mebane, Rockingham, lone woman representative, followed up Murphy's remarks with an account of the valorous Cornelia Phillips Spencer.

Equally eloquent was Mr. Bowie, whose address of the evening might be entitled "Love, Honor, and Respect, but No Sales Tax." Mr. Bowie defended himself against the state press and the measure of public indignation over his bill by Dungan, editor of the paper, who had directed a campaign against the German club on the grounds that it had no right to stop the annual law school dance an hour earlier than was scheduled, was the moving spirit in the revival of the marshal controversy. He pointed out in an editorial that the German club's assumption of authority in the case of law school dance was preceded by its arbitrary retention of a privilege of the junior class.

Junior Class Again To Name Marshals

Attack Waged on Privilege
During the entire half of the winter quarter last year the daily waged a concerted attack of the powers of the dance group. In addition to the paper, many campus organizations went on record as disapproving of the German club as the unchallenged dominator of the social life of the campus.

The law school incident was merely the igniting spark which set off a considerable combustion of resentment against the organization. The ultimate result of the agitation was stripping the German club of its sole power to regulate dances by the creation of a representative dance council which is functioning at present.

As for the question of the selection of marshals, which was an out-growth of the larger issue of dance control, the German club was obliged to surrender this privilege to the junior class. Marshals for the commencement dances last year had already been appointed by the club when the controversy arose, but there was a strong sentiment for setting aside these men, and the election of new ones by the junior class.

When the German club relinquished its power, the junior class met subsequently to elect marshals and proceeded to choose the same men appointed by the club. The fact that these men had already had their pictures prepared for the Yackety Yack undoubtedly influenced the class in duplicating the choice of the German club.

In effect, therefore, the selection of commencement marshals tonight marks the first time in five years that the junior class has utilized this privilege.

stating his love for the University, the alma mater of a long line of Bowies including the former speaker. "If we had a surplus," shouted Mr. Bowie "I'd gladly vote my beloved University a million dollars, but why must we remain here and talk about what we'd like to do when we must realize that food, clothing, and shelter come before schooling for the young people of North Carolina."

As the two addresses and various side remarks occupied the major portion of the evening, a motion for adjournment was favorably entertained. The house meets this morning to continue discussion on the appropriations bill, and will move on to the second reading when all amendments have been added.

University Has Prepared Many Men For Diplomatic Service

Two Graduates of University Held Appointments Under Hoover's Administration; Others Were in Service Before Civil War; Two Recently Appointed by Roosevelt.

Again alumni of the University are entering the field of diplomacy, following a path already well-trodden by other Carolinians. Headed by the politically experienced Josephus Daniels of Raleigh, who has just been appointed ambassador to Mexico, and Robert W. Bingham of Louisville, Ky., who has been selected as ambassador to the court of St. James, Tar Heels are once more assuming a lofty position in international diplomacy. In the past there have been numerous alumni who have represented their country abroad. The number has not been quite as large as it might have been, for obvious political and historical reasons.

Two Hoover Appointments

During the Hoover administration there were two alumni who served with distinction in positions of importance. John Motley Morehead, one of the donors of the bell tower, acted as ambassador to Sweden, and Gilbert Baker Stockton headed the American embassy in Austria. Morehead graduated in 1891 with a B. S. degree. While a student he was active in school affairs, belonged to the S. A. E. fraternity and also to the Dialectic society. He entered the profession of engineering, specializing in the production of illuminating and heating gases, and after a few years became one of the engineers of Peoples' Gas Company of Chicago. During the war he was in charge of the production of T. N. T. in this country, and at that time he became acquainted with former president Hoover. While a minister to Sweden he recommended to the Wickersham Commission the adoption of the Swedish system of liquor control, believing it would work in this country with slight modification.

Stockton, who was minister to Austria under Hoover attended the University 1909-1910, and then went to Princeton, where in 1914, he graduated with the degree of Litt. B. He was a Rhodes scholar from the state of Florida and secured B. A. and law degrees from Oxford. As

OBSERVER EDITOR WILL SPEAK HERE TOMORROW

Julian S. Miller, associate editor of the Charlotte Observer, will speak in Memorial hall tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock. Freshmen attendance will be checked. The student body is invited to attend.

Miller is one of the best known of the state journalists. He resigned the editorship of the Charlotte News last summer to take a prominent position in the state relief campaign. His column, "Event and Comment," appears daily in the Observer.

Metzenthin's Topic at Raleigh

The topic of Professor E. C. Metzenthin's paper to be read at the forty-ninth annual convention of the North Carolina Educational Association in Raleigh will be "An Excursion in the Field of Unsolved Linguistic Problems." He is scheduled to speak tomorrow afternoon at 3:00 o'clock. It was announced previously that Professor Metzenthin's subject would be "Linguistics."

Columbia Professor to Talk

Professor J. R. McGaughy of Teachers College, Columbia University, will lecture to Professor E. W. Knight's class this morning at 9:30 in Peabody 208. All students and others who are interested are invited to hear him.

a member of the Commission for Relief of Belgium under Hoover, he commenced his friendship with the former president. He had excellent training for his post, having been a special assistant to Ambassador Walter Hines Page in London during the war years.

Several in Spain and Mexico

Preceding these alumni in the diplomatic field were several other graduates of the University. Forerunners of Daniels in Mexico were Thomas C. Manning, minister 1886-87, and Matthew Whittaker Ransom, minister 1895-97. Manning was a student during the years 1842-43, and Ransom received his A. B. degree in 1847. There have been numerous ministers to Spain who were former Carolinians, although none in recent years. John H. Eaton, R. M. Saunders, and D. M. Barringer were ministers to Madrid at different times before the middle of the past century. During the years 1893-98 Hannis Taylor, well-known professor of constitutional and international law of Columbia (now George Washington) University was minister to Spain. Taylor was a student here 1866-67. Eben Alexander, former University professor, was minister to Greece 1893-97.

Important Post

Not the head of an embassy, but nevertheless holding an important diplomatic position at the present time is Herschel V. Johnson, A. B., 1916. Mr. Johnson is an excellent example of a career man in the United States Foreign Service. At present he is chief of the Division of Mexican Affairs in Washington, D. C. At one time he worked under the late Senator Dwight W. Morrow in Mexico City. He has had a number of interesting experiences in his career. He was in Sofia, Bulgaria, when the Sacco-Vanzetti case was decided, and he was fortunate to escape with his life when a mob bombed the embassy there. While on duty at Tegucigalpa in the Honduras he entertained Lindbergh when the latter made one of his good-will flights and Hoover on another occasion.

Let us at last get down to elemental matters—such, for example, as the element used by the Laundry to eat our shirt sleeves (as though "they were my pet goat back home," one particularly sentimental friend of mine says with a pet frog in his throat).

Let us publish this so as to explain to those malicious malcontents who dislike the University Laundry why it is that there are cheap laundries to which many students can send bundles, paying postage both ways, and still make more economical arrangements than those possible in our own, our cooperative institution. Here is an impersonal, significant, and pertinent problem which, I am sure Mr. Jimmie W. will agree, is worthy a metaphysician's mental gymnastics and thaumaturgy if not the time and effort (foolish guy! I almost said thought) of the Cameron Avenoo crowd.

Alpha Kappa Psi

A meeting of the Alpha Kappa Psi fraternity is set for 7:15 o'clock tonight, in the Grail room of Graham Memorial.

Radio Enthusiasts To Meet Tonight

There will be a meeting of those interested in amateur radio experiments tonight at 7:30 o'clock in the physics lecture room, 206 Phillips hall. This will be the first of a series of meetings to take place this quarter. The meetings were held last quarter and such enthusiasm was displayed that it was decided to continue the plan this quarter. The prime object of the meetings is to discuss some technical topic of interest to the amateur, in a simple but thorough manner.

The lecturer for the first meeting will be Dr. K. H. Fussler who will take as his subject "Radio: Particles or Waves." Dr. Fussler will give an interesting demonstration of Cathode rays and associated phenomena, designed to indicate the difference between the wave and corpuscular theories of radio propagation.

The plan of conducting a meeting every Thursday will be continued indefinitely.

Roosevelt Signs Beer Bill
President Roosevelt signed the 3.2 per cent beer and wines bill into law yesterday immediately on receiving it from the Capitol. It legalizes the beverages to be sold where not otherwise prohibited as soon as the clock strikes midnight April 6. Fourteen states allow the beer, which must be not more than 3.2 per cent alcohol by weight or four per cent by volume.

Beer Kegs Bring Boom
A demand for staves for beer kegs has caused a boom in the Northwest Arkansas Ozarks and has given employment to farmers and mill workers in communities where stave mills are virtually the only active industry.

Today's Fish Story
With forty-three bills on its calendar, the House at Raleigh yesterday spent nearly an hour and a half on the Davis-Thomson bill to prohibit the use of long haul nets of more than 500 yards in length in certain waters of Hyde and Beaufort counties.

Prussia and Austria United
Prussia's new Diet acclaimed the policy of political union with Austria in its first meeting at Berlin yesterday afternoon. Controlled by Chancellor Hitler's Nazi party, it jammed through the election of officers and committees, cheered the keynote speeches by the aged General Karl Litzman, speaker pro tem, and Hans Kerri, who was re-elected speaker.

How To Avoid BONERS

A CATARACT IS A TRAINED CAT

AND still they let him live! Even after he said a refugee was a man who took charge of prize fights! There's just one thing to do—and high time somebody did it. Introduce Bill Boner to a good pipe and good tobacco. A pipe helps a man get down to straight thinking. College men know, too, that there's one smoking tobacco without a rival. That's Edgeworth.*

Here's an idea. Fill your pipe with Edgeworth Smoking Tobacco and light up. Now—take a good long puff. Ever try anything like that before? Of course not, for Edgeworth is a distinctive and different blend of fine old burleys.

Buy Edgeworth anywhere in two forms—Edgeworth Ready-Rubbed and Edgeworth Plug Slice. All sizes—15¢ pocket package to pound humidor tin. If you'd like to try before you buy, write for a free sample packet. Address Larus & Bro. Co., 120 S. 22d St., Richmond, Va.

*A recent investigation showed Edgeworth to be the favorite smoking tobacco at 42 out of 61 leading colleges.

REPORT IN HOUSE FAVORS ABOLITION OF FREE TUITION

Bill Which Passed State Senate
Tuesday Supported by House Education Committee.

The bill to abolish free tuition in state institutions, passed by the state senate Tuesday, was given a favorable report by the house education committee yesterday.

The measure encountered some opposition in the committee on the grounds that it might deprive worthy but poor youths of a chance at a higher education, but the objection was met by a provision giving governing authorities the power to accept student obligations for tuition at their discretion.

It is estimated that abolition of free tuition would bring in $200,000 a year additional revenue to the state colleges.

4,156 Get Free Tuition

The number of students in a half-dozen state-supported educational institutions who receive free tuition was given by Senator Hayden Clement as 4,156. According to his statement, of these 297 are students at Carolina.

There is a clause in the bill making it possible for trustees to raise the tuition for students from other states above the tuition for North Carolina students.

Sponsors of the bill declared that the present practice of granting free tuition has been greatly abused, and that many students now receiving free tuition are able to pay their way through college. Opponents saw in the bill "an effort to strike down higher education in North Carolina."

UPPERCLASSMEN TO HAVE ANNUAL DANCE AS USUAL

Clyde Boyles Is Elected Chief
Dance Leader of Junior Class Prom.

The junior-senior dances will be given during the week-end of May 12 and 13, it was definitely decided by the junior and senior executive committees in separate meetings yesterday. In view of this eight dance leaders and commencement marshals were elected at the junior class meeting last night.

Since funds in the treasuries of the two classes are not large enough to carry the total expenses of the dances, a fee of $1 will be charged each member of the classes who attends the set of three dances. The fee is not compulsory for all members of the classes.

Funds of the junior and senior classes are lower this year than during previous years because many members of the classes have not yet paid their registration allotted to each until all class bills are paid, it was announced.

Contracts for the orchestra, decorations and printing for the dances have already been given out, however, and consequently the executive committees considered it inadvisable to postpone the affair. Burt Lown and his Hotel Biltmore orchestra are scheduled to play for the dances.

Johnson Dictionary Presents Excellent Study Of Compiler

Old Maps Displayed
In Lobby Of Library

Two cases of very old North Carolina maps, dating back as far as 1616, have just been put on display in the lobby of the library. They are part of the North Carolina collection of the library and reveal several interesting facts.

The western part of the state, which was then unknown, is left practically untouched by most of the maps. On a map drawn in 1719, a large lake, which does not exist, is shown while another has a river running from Virginia into North Carolina. It seems that imagination as much as actual knowledge was used in drawing them.

SALON ENSEMBLE WILL PLAY TODAY

Thor Johnson Will Direct Group
In Concert at Music Contest
Beginning This Morning.

The Carolina Salon ensemble, under the direction of Thor Martin Johnson, will play this afternoon at the state-wide student musicians' and young artists' contest sponsored by the State Federation of music clubs in Hill Music hall beginning today at 10:30 o'clock.

The ensemble has been asked to appear before the meet as representative of a student musician movement which the federation is desirous of spreading over the entire country. The ensemble has attracted considerable attention as the only musical organization of its type in the south which is managed entirely by student musicians.

The group before which the ensemble will play this afternoon will consist of musicians between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one. Many of these contestants have attained distinction as winners in the annual high school music contest held every year in Greensboro. Johnson will conduct Saint-Saens' Prelude du Deluge, Stringfield's Mountain Song, and Donaldson's Danse Barbare.

Winners in today's contest will represent this state in the south Atlantic district contest sponsored by the federation in May. Subsequent first place awards in this contest will lead to competition in the National Federation contest for a cash award of $1,000 and a debut as performer with a major symphony orchestra.

Book Dedicated to Grove

The Outline of Sociology, by Dr. E. A. Ross, head of the department of sociology of the University of Wisconsin, has recently been dedicated to Dr. E. R. Groves, professor of sociology in the University.

Dr. Groves introduced the first college course in preparation for marriage. For this distinction Dr. Ross dedicated his book to him.

First Edition Is in Use by Students Interested in First English Dictionary.

Locked in a caged-off portion of the library stacks somewhere in the rear of the library building are two large and valuable volumes printed in 1775. They represent a first edition of Dr. Samuel Johnson's Dictionary of the English Language, which, unlike most originals of this work, are in exceptionally good condition. The dictionary was purchased by the library in 1923, when as Librarian R. B. Downs says, the library was buying books.

The volumes cannot be taken from the building, but the number of stamps on the dictionary's card indicates that it is being used by those interested in studying the first dictionary of any importance in the English language. In 1929, a good condition copy of the dictionary sold for $850. Today, Downs estimated its value at about $500.

A Discovery

Asked about the rumor that the dictionary had been "found" when the library did not know it had a copy of the famous book, the librarian replied that the officials had always known they had a copy. However, it was only after careful investigation, that it was identified as a first edition. The volumes are bound in dark leather, stand about fifteen inches high, and are about four inches thick. They made books big

DR. ABERNETHY IS LAID TO REST IN LOCAL CEMETERY

Rites Conducted by Reverend Walter Patten, Former Pastor of Methodist Church.

Funeral services for Dr. E. A. Abernethy, for a number of years University physician who died at his own hand here Tuesday night, took place yesterday at the University Methodist church.

The rites were conducted by Reverend Walter Patten of Fayetteville, who was assisted by Reverend Albee Godbold of the local Methodist church, Dr. W. A. Stanbury of Durham, and Reverend Eugene Olive, former pastor of the local Baptist church. Other local ministers were in attendance. The Methodist choir sang How Firm a Foundation, and Oh, Love, That Will Not Let Me Go. Burial followed at the local cemetery.

The funeral was attended by a host of friends including representatives from the University faculty and the student council. A large number of flowers bore testimony of the universal respect for Dr. Abernethy. Local stores were closed during the rites.

The community was saddened by the sudden death of Dr. Abernethy, who was a popular figure in Chapel Hill and on the University campus. His life was practically devoted to the University with thirteen years of service both on the board of trustees and as University physician. For several years prior to his death, he had been in declining health.

HELEN McGRAW PLAYS TONIGHT IN MUSIC HALL

Outstanding American Pianist Plays Tonight in Interest of Dogwood Festival.

Helen McGraw, who will play tonight at 8:30 o'clock in Hill Music hall, is one of three American concert pianists who have been able to qualify for instruction under Albert Cortot, eminent French pianist and instructor. Miss McGraw's recital here tonight is the culmination of a successful return to her own country after having won the praise of critics in Paris and London in 1932.

Miss McGraw began study for her career as a concert pianist at the Peabody Conservatory of music in Baltimore where she was awarded its artist's diploma under Alexander Sklarevski, famous Russian pianist, in 1930. In the same year she was winner of a national contest sponsored by the Walter W. Naumburg musical foundation. Her New York debut made under the auspices of the foundation and earned for her the praise of the New York press critics who were unanimous in declaring her a distinct musical personality. In New York Miss McGraw continued her studies under Ernest Hutcheson, dean of the Juilliard School of music.

Student at Paris

In Paris she entered the Ecole Normale de Musique where she received the artist's diploma under Cortot. Her Paris debut was made in April, 1932, and was followed by numerous concerts on the continent and in England. She first appeared in London in December, 1932, where the press writers repeated the French critics' declaration of her ability and promise as a leading artist.

Miss McGraw's recital here tonight has been arranged by the committee in charge of the annual Dogwood festival to be staged here this spring. Proceeds from the concert will be used to help defray the expenses of this event.

Miss McGraw's program will consist of the following selections: Prelude in E Flat, by Bach; Sonata in A Flat, by Beethoven; Sonata Fantasia, by Scriabin; Nocturne, by Chopin; Ballade, by Chopin; The White Peacock, by Griffes, and What the West Wind Saw, by Debussy.

Bingham Confirmed As English Minister

Robert Worth Bingham, alumnus of the University, President Roosevelt's choice for the major American diplomatic assignment, ambassador to Great Britain, yesterday was confirmed by the senate within a few hours after his nomination was approved by the foreign relations committee.

Confirmation of the Louisville newspaper publisher's name came without discussion and by unanimous consent late in the day after Senator McNary of Oregon, the Republican leader withdrew an objection that had blocked consideration a few hours earlier.

Josephus Daniels' appointment as ambassador to Mexico had been confirmed last week by the senate.

Kennedy To Offer
First Of Recitals

Professor Nelson O. Kennedy will present the first of his quarterly series of vesper organ recitals Sunday afternoon in Hill Music hall at 4:00 o'clock.

Professor Kennedy's program will include a sonata by Mendelssohn of three movements Grave-Adagio, Allegro maestoso e vivace, and Fuga; Fountain Reverie by Fletcher, Allegro Cantabile from the fifth symphony of Widor, Prelude and Fugue by Bach, Nocturne by Grieg, and Afterglow by Groton.

BELLE KEARNEY WINS CONTEST

Shelby High School Takes Team Leadership With Oxford and Charlotte Following.

Belle Kearney of Oxford high school won the annual state-wide French contest sponsored by the University extension division, it was announced by secretary E. R. Rankin yesterday. The contest took place March 10.

On the basis of the showing of three-man teams entered from each school, Shelby high school won the first place, followed in order by Oxford and Central high school of Charlotte. Sixty-three schools entered 707 students in the competition.

Rachel Connor of Shelby and Annabelle Hollowell of Elizabeth City gained second and third places in the individual contest, respectively. Honorable mention was accorded Colbert McKnight of Shelby, Effie Mae English of Monroe, Wilsie Bissell of Durham, Robert Parnell of Lumberton, Ethel Knott of Oxford, Louis Dover of Shelby, Oakley Campbell of Rockingham, Ruth Sexton of Edenton, and Louise Breninger of Central.

Professor J. C. Lyons of the University French department prepared the test that was used and directed members of the department in the correcting of the submitted papers.

ENGLISH INSTRUCTOR IS CONFINED TO HOSPITAL

John Scott, instructor in the English department who has been seriously ill at the Watts hospital in Durham during the past week, is improving, according to reports yesterday.

Scott was removed to the hospital in Durham following a sudden illness Monday. Though his condition is better, it is thought that he will not be able to return to the University this year.

Firemen Called Twice

The local fire department was called out twice yesterday morning to extinguish grass fires which occurred within a few minutes of each other. The first fire was on North street, and while the department was returning from this blaze, the alarm was sounded for a similar fire on West University drive extension. Neither of the two blazes offered much trouble to the firemen, who report that no damage was done.

Measure Succeeding House
Compromise Between Opposing Elements.

ARRANGED IN CAUCUS

University Here Would Receive $390,000; State, $187,000;
N. C. C. W., $182,000.

Hacked and hewn by the henchmen of the administration until it was scarcely recognizable even to its proponents, the much fought-over Bowie-Cherry bill eked out a somewhat doubtful victory by passing its second and third readings in the House yesterday. After the hectic session of Tuesday night when the University of North Carolina appropriations bore the brunt of the controversy, the lower group of the General Assembly met in a quieter mood yesterday afternoon to end the long fight by a compromise between the administration and the Bowie-Cherry aggregation in raising the Greater University allotment to $760,240.

The sudden change in the attitude of the House, which got out from underhand in the fight over the Barden-Cherry substitute bill, was brought about through a series of caucuses lasting until Wednesday morning which served to whip the parties back into line. Some strange maneuvering of the administration leaders even served to secure the vote of Tam Bowie, the "economist," for the amendment to raise the University appropriations.

NOMINATIONS OF CO-ED OFFICIALS SET NEXT WEEK

Annual Spring Elections of Woman's Association to Be Conducted April 5.

Members of the Woman's Association of the University meet at 4:30 o'clock next Tuesday afternoon for the purpose of nominating officers for the organization next year and of taking up other phases of their activities.

The annual spring election of the group will be conducted April 5, the same time as the yearly campus elections. The offices to be filled are president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer, house-president of Spencer hall, and president of the woman's athletic council.

Nominations Made

Nominations for these positions were made this week by a nominating committee composed of the woman's council and four members of the association appointed by the president. This committee will report its nominations at the meeting Tuesday and other nominations may be made from the floor.

The association will consider plans for the co-ed dance for the spring quarter. No arrangements for the affair have been announced as yet.

To Discuss Varsity Show

Another matter the group will discuss is the presentation of a varsity show in the interest of establishing a woman's loan fund at the University. Josephine Orendorff, chairman of the drama.

Big Dumb Athletes and The Monogram Club

As a result of a self-inflicted blow, the Monogram club was yesterday staggering in an attempt to regain its former position on the campus, and continue its aggressive program begun this year to make the organization more worthwhile and more respected on the campus. Having started off only a few weeks ago with a most enthusiastic meeting at which time it elected new officers and set out upon an organized program of action, it undoubtedly called the wrong play yesterday by entering into the class of rah-rah college orders and requiring its newly-eligible members to parade around the campus in white gym shirts over their clothing, carrying neophyte paddles.

How the officials of the Monogram club could have possibly thought that such an action on their part would have brought about any desired recognition of the group, is hard for anyone with any experience with college life to understand. If every organization that makes its initiates "shine" around the campus is considered a worthy and respected club, the naive, sophomoric social orders here would long ago have held the position of prime importance in the student body.

Organizations do not find their prestige or worthiness increased by the mere fact their presence is brought to the attention of students and faculty members. There must be something more than the tooting of horns, something more than the waving of flags, something more than the shouting from the house-tops before a good name is built up by any group. There must be sane and constructive action. There must be a well-planned program. There must be leaders with courage sufficient to carry out the plan.

A well-organized and well-led Monogram club on this campus can be invaluable to the life of the student body. But the step taken yesterday by that group was certainly not indicative of a presence of either of these necessities.

A Monogram club properly directed could raise athletics on this campus from their present mediocre position to one of the most respected and desirable activities here. It could first build up a little respect on the campus by seeing to it that its members, who have pledged themselves to abide by certain training rules during season, carry out these regulations in every respect. Nothing lowers the opinion of the public regarding an organization quicker than to see its members deliberately disobeying regulations which they have given their honor to uphold.

Nor would the work of the club necessarily have to stop here. By raising the academic standard of the members of the different squads, the term "big dumb athletes" could be once and for all wiped from the vocabulary as applying to Carolina athletes. The members of the organization could also have unlimited influence in determining the attitude of the spectators at athletic contests.

The group could also help in destroying the existing, selfish idea among a great many of the athletes that athletics is the most important activity on the campus. They have the idea that every other responsibility comes after the duty to the team. Academic work is a secondary matter to them. If the Monogram club could build up a more far-sighted attitude on this matter, by achieving this one goal alone it would render such a service to the University as to assure the group a more respected position in the minds of every student and faculty member on the campus than it has ever before enjoyed.

The Monogram club has a challenging opportunity, and it is hoped that it does not pass this up too lightly.

You Can Lead a Horse to Water—

"The House has changed its mind so frequently that none can predict the final outcome of the appropriations bill battle, but on the basis of the $76,000,000 biennial appropriations bill adopted by the committee of the whole, it is apparent that new sources of revenue must be tapped to balance the budget. That this means some form of sales tax is widely felt."—The News and Observer, March 23.

No sooner had Governor Ehringhaus presented his proposal for a sales tax to the General Assembly, declaring that it was absolutely necessary to the proper maintenance of state services and institutions, than the House bolted outright and passed on first reading the Bowie-Cherry substitute bill, which was lower even than the committee bill. Then, with the help of Representatives Barden and Turner and the persuasive "Pete" Murphy, the administration succeeded in curbing the stampede of the "economy" runaways in the House. On one item after another, the recalcitrant members were brought back to the original figures of the committee bill.

There were but two courses for the House to follow: that of drastic economy or that of adequate provision from new sources of revenue. Apparently, as this is written, the trend is towards adequate provision. However, the mind of the House is unsettled. Its members have caught a glimpse of the sales-tax halter that hangs in the stable towards which they are warily sidling and from which they may finally shy away.

If the members of the House do eventually decide that, in spite of these troublesome times, it is fundamental to maintain state institutions, whatever the cost may be, a sales tax may be expected. Having gone that far, they cannot back out. In that event, the University, along with other state institutions, can expect to get a better deal than past proposals have promised. We took hope when the Governor issued his ultimatum; we groaned when it was thrown back in his face; with the House now apologetic, hope springs again in our breasts. The Governor has led his horses to water, but can he make them drink?—E.C.D.

Got Mit Uns

"Deutschland uber alles" is being sung at official German meetings and the imperial colors are flying over the government buildings. The German people are once more under the yoke of a despotic government. Hindenburg, having sworn allegiance to emperor and constitution, now bends in senile servility to the control of the Nazis. The German Republic is of the past. Many harking to Wilson's plea to "make the world safe for democracy" were in 1917 under the impression that the allies were actually doing something great for the German people. Many thought they saw the heavy heel of the Junker military boot removed from the neck of a peaceful population. Perhaps they were right. The German is a peace loving individual but he is an ambitious one. He possesses intelligence and initiative and wants a fair chance to make use of these qualities.

Germany was the last of the great European powers to emerge as a nation. The handicap of time has been a tremendous one. Everything that the young nation has obtained was won at the price of bitter struggle. Unity came as the culmination of three wars, and these over, grave problems confronted her. Her colonies were the remains after the other great powers had gobbled up everything worth having. Her trade was extended against the most intense rivalry and competition. And on every side powerful foes hemmed her in.

Face to face with a hostile world the young nation born of war was forced to resort to military power to preserve her national integrity. To enforce her rights and privileges Germany of necessity had to develop the most perfectly trained and equipped army in the world. The German people did not love the autocracy of the martial empire but it offered opportunity and security and they died for it by the millions.

In 1918 the Germans became convinced through the fair promises of the allies that they were to be permitted to set up a new government free from military domination. Inspired by this hope they overthrew the tottering empire. But they sadly underestimated the greed of their conquerors. They did not dream that a false and odious confession of guilt was to be forced from them. They did not know that a reparations bill was to be forced upon them whose weight was to paralyze and stagger their weakened nation. They did not expect that their self determination was to be taken from them, that their colonies would all disappear and that parts of their own fatherland would be distributed among other nations.

Gradually Germany has come to feel and realize the miserable treatment that her conquerors have accorded her. Germany, desolate and hopeless, is seeking a way out. The minds of her people turn back to the good days before the war and are fired by promises of German glory as in the past. Without hope and maddened by despair Germany has turned as a last resort to the mailed fist. And who can blame her?—J.F.A.

In Times of Peace Prepare For—War?—Peace?

Those seeing the war film "The Big Drive" may comment on the gruesomeness of war. They may reflect that in the machine age, war has ceased to be the honorable business of former times. They may see that in modern warfare, the strong, the self-confident and picturesque warrior of medieval days becomes a trench-dweller with as much nobility left in his soul and body as a crippled plow horse.

But all the horror of it, all the death and suffering which one war causes is trivial in comparison with the after effects, including economic disruptions and the sowing of the seeds of future military and economic upheavals. Every war in the history of mankind has been followed by a depression, and later by a secondary depression like the one which now has so disorganized the world that 12 millions in this country alone are unable to provide for themselves, a large part of the world is off the gold standard and the richest nation in the world has closed the doors of all its banks.

In the midst of it all, some citizens still dare to drag up the thoroughly discredited slogans about the value of big armaments in preserving peace. Do we have relative peace and order in Minneapolis because every citizen goes about armed to the teeth?

Only when the nations of the world cease spending their sustenance like Chicago gangsters for portable arsenals and bullet-proof vests, only when they provide a world police force with a court to decide disputes will the earth's surface cease to be periodically torn up. The films and books showing the horror of war can depict only the smallest part of it. Unless the nations of the world mend their militaristic ways the millions who poured their blood into the clay and mud of northern France less than two decades ago will have furnished only a drop in Mars' bucket.

Instead of giving way to sentimental outbursts at the sight of starving women and children, shell-shocked soldiers, dismembered bodies and mangled covered corpses, we would do well to bear in mind that we cannot undo the past; the greater horror is the preparation now going on for future wars. "Civilized" nations have not yet attained a civilized attitude toward war. Now is the time to civilize nations by building up a peace psychology. The preparedness the country needs is preparedness for peace by the replacing of costly war implements with implements of reason, machinery for the non-military settlement of international differences. Only when we learn to substitute preparations for peace in the place of war-preparations will we be on the way to peace instead of war.

To the Editor, DAILY TAR HEEL:

It seems that in the rush for reducing expenditures and increasing tax receipts, two potential sources of revenue have not been given sufficient attention. The luxury tax has proved the life saver of numerous state budgets, and the states that place greater emphasis upon the collection of just taxes from intangible property have found this a property tax that nets a revenue return favorably comparable in amount to the income from land taxes.

The luxury tax, because of the fact that the articles taxed are specified, are in practically all cases passed on to the consumer, a quality that the sales tax from past experience is unable to boast of. A tax on moving picture tickets, cigarettes, perfumes, etc., can raise the price approximately the amount of the tax without serious inconvenience upon the consumers, or even their disapproval. The gasoline tax, a form of specified sales tax, has had an important part in building roads for North Carolina that rank among the finest in the United States.

One of the favorite means of profiteering in North Carolina is hiding securities from the property tax. During recent years about 7% of the intangible property has escaped taxation. Stocks which bring for its owners 6 and 8% returns with no labor on the part of the owners should be as carefully taxed as land that does not net the cost of fertilizer. If the officials would make careful investigations and use the means within their power to uncover this taxable property, and new and extremely productive source of taxes would become available.

But at any cost we must not have the sales tax. It would do more harm in the state in one year than the amount of revenue it would render could amend in years. In the first place, the very nature of the tax makes shifting impossible. If a 3-cent tax were charged for each dollar's receipt by the merchants, competition would make it impossible for the merchants to raise the price of the merchandise a corresponding amount.

A merchant selling a shirt for a dollar might decide to keep the price a dollar, instead of raising it to a dollar and three cents, anticipating additional sales. This would force any other merchant in the town selling dollar shirts to keep his shirts at a dollar. The same would be true of all other merchandise. In other words, the present proposal would mean a 3% tax on the merchants to be borne by the consumer.

It is needless to suggest the number of bankruptcies that would result, because there are extremely few merchants in the state breaking even, much less making a net profit of 3% of the year's total business. Three per cent is a rash estimate of the net profits made by merchants even in years of prosperity. The merchants near the border of the state would suffer particularly. Graft and tax-escaping would be encouraged.

The sales tax is not the last resort. It is not true that without the sales tax it would be necessary to close the University. There are other sources of taxation, more effective, more convenient, less harmful, and equally productive.

Unfortunate Oversight
In court, a lawyer turned to the opposing counsel and said angrily: "You are the biggest idiot I ever saw in all my life!" whereupon the judge gravely remarked: "Silence, sir. Please do not forget that I am present."

We Could, But We Won't
We could give your car a slapdash "grease job." But we won't—we never will. It's not our policy. We know what scientific lubrication is—what it means to a car. So we've equipped ourselves to render it. And the surprising thing about it is—it costs you but little if any more than hit-and-miss jobs.

Amazing Tire Reductions
Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company announces a big slash in tires and tubes as follows:
Double Eagle, Heavy Duty and Standard A. W. T. tires 20% off list.
Pathfinder, Heavy Duty and Regular tires 22 1-2% off list.

A. W. T. Truck and Bus tires 28% off.
Speedway tires 15% off.
Pathfinder Truck and Bus tires, 17% off.
Heavy Duty and Standard Tubes 10% off.
Pathfinder tubes, 5% off.
Pathfinder Truck and Bus tubes, 5% off.
Speedway tubes 5% off.
You can now equip your car with an entirely new set of tires and tubes at unheard of low prices.

Brought to Date
A sorrowing widow had this inscription carved on the stone over her husband's grave: "Goodbye, John, My Light Has Gone Out." A few months later she remarried and some wag added this line: "But I Have Struck Another Match."

Why Should a Car Be Tightened?
Because it not only eliminates those irritating squeaks and rattles, but the big thing is, it makes your car last longer, holds down repair bills, and forestalls accidents. A good time to have your car tightened is right after we lubricate it.

CHI PSI CONQUERS ALL OPPONENTS IN CAMPUS RACE

Five Baseball Games Played, While Two Out of Four Tennis Matches Forfeited.

Another fair day favored the intramural department yesterday and baseball and tennis campaigns advanced. Five baseball games were contested, while two of the four scheduled tennis matches resulted in forfeits.

Chi Psi scored eleven runs in the first frame and continued to roll up the score as it whitewashed Sigma Phi Epsilon, 24-0, in a game which was ended in the fifth inning under the intramural rule regarding one-sided contests. Heber and Yewens got four runs each for the winners, and Baukney and Rogers scored thrice each. The latter's pitching performance was well-nigh air-tight.

Score by innings:
Chi Psi 1152 6x—24

Laundry Club Scores

The newly organized Laundry Club, playing with seven men, finished up strong to down Aycock, 11-3. Ogburn, winners' catcher, crossed the plate three times.

Score by innings:
Laundry Club 210 400 4—11
Aycock 200 100 0—3

S. A. E. Defeats Phi Alpha

Sigma Alpha Epsilon, which was runner-up for last year's fraternity league championship, scored eight runs in the fourth to defeat Phi Alpha, 11-5. The losers went scoreless until the seventh, when they pounded Harris for all their runs.

Score by innings:
Phi Alpha 000 000 5—5
S. A. E. 002 810 x—11

A. T. O. Bows

Kappa Alpha bunched its runs in three innings to defeat Alpha Tau Omega, 9-4. Skinner and McGill, with three runs each, stood out for the winners. Menge, losing shortstop, played best for A. T. O.

Score by innings:
A. T. O. 120 100 0—4
Kappa Alpha 205 200 x—9

New Dorms Wins

New Dorms defeated Mangum, 9-6, in a game featured by long hits. Thompson and Barron connected for circuit drives for the winners, and Peterson got a four-bagger for Mangum.

Score by innings:
New Dorms 005 110 2—9
Mangum 042 000 0—6

TENNIS RESULTS

In the two matches which were actually contested, Sigma Nu had by far the easiest path to victory, defeating Delta Psi, 3-0, without the loss of a set. Jones defeated Blount, 5-0, 5-0; and Lynch won from Haines, 5-2, 5-3. The doubles match went to Sigma Nu by forfeit.

Chi Psi won a hotly contested match from Delta Kappa Epsilon, 2-1, the match being decided by the doubles set. In singles Atwood, of Chi Psi, beat Patterson, 4-5, 5-2, 5-3, and Morris, of D. K. E., beat Reynolds, 5-3, 4-5, 5-4. In the deciding doubles match, Atwood and Reynolds defeated Patterson and Morris, 5-4, 5-4.

GOLFERS DEFEAT RICHMOND TEAM

Tar Heel Aggregation Wins 10-8 In First Victory of Current Links Season.

The University golf team took its first victory of the season yesterday afternoon over the Richmond University combination 10 to 8. Ed Michaels of Carolina was the outstanding player of the day with three points to his credit.

Alan Smith of Carolina defeated George Swanson having registered a 76 for the Richmond representative's tally of 79. The playing score was Smith, 2; Swanson, 1.

Captain Billy O'Brien dropped his match to Reigel in the closest contest of the tourney. The visitor scored 77 to the Carolinian's 78. O'Brien scored one point to his opponent's score of two.

Ed Michaels of Carolina routed Roland Wright 74 to 76. The playing score was entirely in favor of the local player 3 to 0. Wilson Coffin topped Billy Grinnan 78 to 80 in the fourth match. Coffin registered 21½ points.

In the foursomes, Richmond University came out on top. Wright and Meredith added two and one-half points to their score over Michaels and Coffin. Smith and O'Brien dropped their match to Swanson and Reigel, two to one.

Carolina, Southern conference champions, will meet the Washington and Lee outfit at the Hope Valley course on Tuesday, March 28.

THIRTEEN TAKEN INTO MONOGRAM CLUB YESTERDAY

Ten Players and Three Managers Inducted at Organization's First Initiation.

Ten varsity players and three managers were formally inducted into membership in the Monogram club last night in the first formal initiation since the club's re-organization two months ago. The ceremonies took place in Bynum gymnasium.

The ten player initiates were required to wear NC running shirts all day yesterday, and each man also carried a paddle. Members of the club administered frequent caresses whenever the new men were encountered on the campus. The managers did not wear the running shirts though they came in for quite a bit of caressing.

The formal part of the initiation was conducted last night in the gymnasium where the following men were officially taken in: Long, Aitken, Glace, Beale, Glover, Parsons, Quarles, Giddins, McIntosh, and Davis as the ten players; and Barnard, Kerr, and Cate, the managers.

Coach Bill Cerney worked with the executive committee of the Monogram club in drawing up the initiation which was conducted last night. It is the idea of the club to hold one of these initiations at the conclusion of every athletic season.

Bill Granting $760,240 For Greater University Approved By House

(Continued from first page) phy and held over until yesterday, which was hoped to start a reactionary move, sank without a record vote. Murphy asked for $832,000 for the University as against the $640,000 appropriation which the House passed as a Committee of the Whole.

"I resent anything that comes from the mind of Henry Burke," the veteran representative from Rowan shouted in his charge against the amendment signed by Bowie, Doughton and Thompson. The remark brought forth the applause of the gallery, and Speaker Harris was forced to threaten clearance if order was not restored.

Many Amendments

Yesterday's session saw the House met with a veritable avalanche of amendments, at least twenty of which were considered and discarded. The present figures represent a decided compromise on the part of both the administration and the opposition. Under this bill the Chapel Hill branch will receive $390,000; State College in Raleigh, $187,000; and the Greensboro unit, $182,000.

The adopted amendment was presented by five representatives led by Doughton of Alleghany, and was strangely enough supported by Tam Bowie, who on the preceding day had fought the Barden-Cherry compromise amendment.

LARGE COLLEGES FACE FINANCIAL ATHLETIC CRISIS

Surveys by New York Times and Associated Press Reveal Grave Problem in Sports.

Philadelphia, Pa., March 23.—(NSFA)—Although the condition of college sports in the east is cause for concern, a nation-wide survey conducted by the New York Times shows that the eastern problem is not nearly as serious as that in most sections of the country. In every section except the Rocky Mountains, where there has never been any football inflation and where the falling off in revenue from the grid game has not been so serious, collegiate athletics are feeling the economic depression more than in this section.

The results of the Associated Press survey, which showed that schools remotely situated from the center by population suffered the most in the way of reduced gate receipts, was borne out in all sections of the country. For instance, the University of Southern California at Los Angeles had its biggest football receipts of its history in 1932, while Stanford, at Palo Alto, and California, at Berkeley, suffered a drop in revenue.

Purdue was the only team of the Big Ten which made more money last year from football than in 1931. Although Michigan's total attendance was within 4,000 of the preceding year, the income was far below normal because of the reduced price of admission. Northwestern was especially hard hit, its receipts being about $150,000 under that of 1931. Wisconsin has dropped its crew, and Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota have dropped hockey.

which called for only $716,800. It was rumored in newspaper circles Tuesday night that it was this opposition of Bowie to the Barden-Cherry substitute which caused the administration to ask for a recess until yesterday.

The bill as passed now goes over to the Senate for ratification where little opposition is expected unless the administration should not feel satisfied with its own compromise measure.

COACH COOMBS FEELS LOSS OF THREE HURLERS

Veteran Pitchers Cause Problem for Duke Coach as Team Faces Hard Grind.

Due to the loss of three veterans from last year's staff, Jack Coombs, former hurler for the Philadelphia Athletics, is for the first time in five years considerably worried about his Duke pitching staff. Duke's twenty-two game schedule, that opens on April 1 with Michigan State includes an annual northern trip of five games and ten Southern conference contests, and a complete round of two games each with state opponents. The outstanding attraction of the early season period is the Easter Monday double-header with the University of Maryland.

Following the annual game with Princeton that will open the northern trip, games will be played with Fordham and Manhattan during a two-day stay in New York. The trip will be closed with games at Maryland and George Washington. The game with George Washington is Duke's first night game.

STATE CLASS "A" RACE IN BASEBALL TO BEGIN

Rocky Mount high's baseball nine will invade Wilmington this afternoon for the season's opening game of the state class "A" competition. The teams are members of the eastern division of the state contest sponsored annually by the University.

Competition in the western section will not begin until April 7 when Greensboro and High Point clash at High Point. Charlotte of the western conference won the state title last year.

Several games have been played in the general baseball contest of North Carolina open to all except the larger high schools. A week's summary of the activities of this league will be announced later. Roanoke Rapids won the 1932 championship.

Coach Cerney sent his freshman baseball team through a long work-out yesterday afternoon, ending with a practice battle.

The squad dropped off considerably due to practice football, to which all the freshman football players, regardless of baseball, are reporting. Only about thirty are out at present. The football players will be able to come out after April 8, at which time only two games will have been played.

In the practice battle the reserves held the upper hand most of the time, due to the hurling of McKeithan and Mills. Hutchison, southpaw, who pitched for the first team also showed lots of ability, although he was a little wild. No one got any outstanding hits.

Austin at Third

In the first string infield Austin was at third, Irwin at short and Orr at first. Montgomery will probably fill in at second after football practice. Both Irwin and Montgomery are beautiful fielders and throwers, while the former is also an outstanding hitter. Austin is a steady fielder and Orr, although not an outstanding man in the field, is a fairly good batter.

Coach Cerney is still unable to find a good combination for the outfield. In yesterday's practice game Glasgow, a star pitcher was sent to the outfield and will probably work there on the days that he is not pitching. Coach Cerney plans to play the Chapel Hill high school team this afternoon if the game can be arranged. If the contest is played, Glasgow or Spiers will likely work on the mound.

When a much-advertised young actor played Hamlet very atrociously in New York, a critic penned this: If there is still doubt as to which wrote Shakespeare, Bacon or Shakespeare, let the graves of the two men be opened. LEGION PLEDGES SUPPORT OF NEW ADMINISTRATION

At the regular March meeting of the local post of the American Legion Friday, Legion members unanimously pledged support to the national administration during the present emergency and endorsed Henry L. Stevens, past national commander of the Legion, for appointment as assistant secretary of war.

A resolution was unanimously adopted in which members of the post pledged support to the administration and called upon their representatives and patriotic citizens to do likewise.

The Legionaires expressed their belief that the president will deal fairly with disabled veterans and declared that the present economic state of the country requires the same type of loyalty and patriotism as in war.

GRAIL DELAYS FIRST DANCE OF QUARTER

The Grail dance scheduled for this week-end has been postponed indefinitely. The dance at one time was moved up to Friday night to avoid conflict with other social affairs in the section, but the Grail was unable to secure an orchestra for the Friday night dance, necessitating postponement.

The freshman class last quarter was granted permission by the University dance committee to stage a dance Friday of this week-end. The Grail dance Saturday night was to have been in the series, but finances had previously caused the cancellation of the freshman dance.

College News Service Organized For Ohio

Greenville, Ohio, March 23.—(NSFA) — Opposing "childish inter-university rivalries" and expressing a belief that a "constructive interchange of ideas is more to be desired than athletic victories" among colleges, formation of the Ohio News Exchange, a co-operative agency to supply Ohio colleges with news of the various campuses, was announced today.

According to its platform, the Ohio News Exchange believes that the "constructive interchange of ideas can best be accomplished by frank newspaper stories, not written by publicity departments." Each member editor will send a weekly news letter to each other editor with stories for publication in the university newspapers.

Concerning freedom of the college press, the charter members adopted the following plank for their platform: "College newspapers should not violate standards of ethical newspaper practice as followed by reputable city dailies. Unwarranted attacks for the sake of sensationalism are disapproved. However, unethical suppression that violates the welfare of students is not to be countenanced."

Thompson Concludes Series of Recitals

George M. Thompson's final recital at the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina in commemoration of the 50th anniversary of the death of Richard Wagner completed a series of organ recitals started in January under the direction of the school of music.

Assisting him was Miss Gertrude Friedrich, violinist, of the school of music, who played "Walter's Prize Song" from "Die Meistersinger." Her accompanist was Miss Dorothy Clement, also of the school of music.

Although it took the French Academy forty years to turn out a dictionary of the French tongue, Dr. Samuel Johnson completed his in seven. Johnson had a hard life, his large body wracked with chronic disease, his poverty keeping him guessing where his next meal was coming from, and his pride warding off any possible help from others. It must have been under great difficulty that he produced his famous dictionary, as can be seen from reading in his preface:

"... with little assistance of the learned; without any patronage of the great; not in the soft obscurities of retirement, or under academic bowers, but amidst inconvenience and distraction, in sickness and in sorrow."

Strange Definitions

Strongly prejudiced as he was, Johnson often allowed his own feelings on a subject to color his definition. With his strong aversion for the Scotch, he defines the noble out as: "A grain, which in England is generally given to horses, but in Scotland supports the people."

A Edward Newton, in This Book-Collecting Game, quotes a number of Dr. Johnson's interesting definitions. Chicken had for one of its definitions one that sounds rather modern, "a term for a young girl." Johnson said of buxom, "It originally signified obedient. Before the reformation (Johnson must mean the Protestant Revolt) the bride in the marriage service promised to be obedient and buxom in bed and at board."

Lexicographer: "A writer of dictionaries; a harmless drudge, that busies himself in tracing the original, and detailing the significance of words."

Favourite: "A mean wretch whose whole business is by any means to please."

Pension: "An allowance made to anyone without an equivalent. In England it is generally understood to mean pay given to a state hireling for treason to his country." Johnson, at that time, was not one of the "ins" politically.

Excise: "A hateful tax levied upon commodities, and adjudged not by the common judges of property, but wretches hired by those to whom excise is paid."

One of the most valuable features, if not the most valuable feature, is the use Dr. Johnson made of quotations in his dictionary. Some are still used in modern dictionaries.

Johnson received the small sum of fifteen hundred pounds for the tremendous job. Soon after the publication of his "word book," Johnson was arrested for a debt of five pounds, eighteen shillings, and had to borrow that amount from a friend to keep from going to jail.

Samuel Johnson, lexicographer, author, and club leader; proud and defiant; half-blind, disease-ridden and poverty stricken, goes down in history as a colorful and romantic figure. Macaulay says that in the case of most writers, it is their works that keep alive their memory, but that in the case of Johnson, it is his memory that keeps his works alive.

'Spectator' Spanked But Not Obliterated

(By College News Service)

New York, March 23.—In the language of the New York metropolitan press, the Daily Spectator at Columbia University this week was "spanked but not obliterated."

On recommendation of a special investigating committee, the paper changed the designation in its masthead to read "the official newspaper of the students of Columbia College," rather than "of Columbia University," as it had formerly appeared. The college is one of the principal undergraduate schools of the university.

Spectator also accepted other minor recommendations of the committee, which, however, did not accept the proposal of Dean Carl W. Ackerman of the Columbia school of journalism that a professional newspaper under the jurisdiction of the journalism faculty be substituted for Spectator.

While the committee found Spectator's attitude to be "courteous, liberal and intelligent in its tendencies," the reported added that "it has often been mistaken, intolerant and ill-informed in its expression."

Constance Bennett Plays In 'Our Betters'

The feature attraction showing at the Carolina theatre today is "Our Betters," Constance Bennett's newest picture. This screen production was adapted from the play by W. Somerset Maugham which deals with the love intrigues in the royal and higher social life of England.

Miss Bennett has the role of a wealthy American heiress who was married for her money by an English nobleman. Shortly after the marriage she finds the nobleman in the arms of another woman whom he swears he will love always, and Miss Bennett as the heroine, seeks revenge, by becoming the most infamous woman in the English society circles. Color is added to the social life by intimate glimpses into the galleries of Buckingham palace.

Miss Bennett is supported in the production by Anita Louise, Gilbert Roland, and others.

AUDIT BOARD TO CHECK ACCOUNTS

The Student Audit Board has been working on the accounts of the various campus organizations since early last October. All organizations for which fees are paid through the business office are required to submit accounts to the audit board, while other organizations may do so if they desire.

R. H. Sherrill is the head of this board which has formed a centralized system of keeping the accounts. The duties of the board are as follows: 1. To make an audit of all accounts under the jurisdiction of the board. 2. To install and supervise a book-keeping system of such accounts. 3. To act in a purely advisory capacity in reference to student organizations under the jurisdiction of the Student Audit Board which do not already have an adviser.

According to the latest report, the work of the board has been progressing very smoothly, with the accounts already turned in found to be in good order. The DAILY TAR HEEL will publish the final report of the board when it is issued.

HYBRID MEASURE WILL COME UP IN SENATE TUESDAY

Upper Division Puts Appropriations Bill Evolved by House On Special Calendar.

COMMITTEE CONSIDERS IT

Approved by the house Thursday, the hybrid appropriations bill, including a grant for the University, was yesterday put on the senate's special calendar for next Tuesday morning.

This measure, which spent six tempestuous days in the house, would give the Greater University of North Carolina $760,240 annually for the next two years, approximately $390,000 of which would come to the University in Chapel Hill.

Original Bill Favored

After the Senate received the bill yesterday afternoon, Senator Clement of Rowan, appropriations chairman, told the upper division that he favored the original appropriations bill reported by the joint committee. This bill allotted some $83,000,000 for the next biennium, of which the Greater University would receive $832,000.

The senate, however, gave Clement's committee the hybrid bill evolved in the house which would appropriate $78,919,000 for state expenses for 1933-1934. The committee studied the question yesterday afternoon.

Time alone will tell what figures the senate will set as appropriations for the University and other state-supported agencies, but observers report that the senate is inclined to be more liberal with educational and other appropriations.

HELEN MCGRAW GIVES RECITAL IN MUSIC BUILDING

Outstanding Pianist Offers Program Culminating Series of Concerts in America.

Helen McGraw, one of the outstanding American pianists, gave a recital here last night in Hill Music hall, culminating a series of concerts following her return to this country from London and Paris.

Following her Paris debut last year, Miss McGraw gave a number of concerts on the continent and in England and was then declared a leading artist. Since her return to her own country, critics have enthusiastically confirmed early predictions of her genius.

The program last night consisted of the following selections: Prelude in E Flat, by Bach; Sonata in A Flat, by Beethoven; Sonata Fantasia, by Scriabin; Nocturne, by Chopin; The White Peacock, by Griffes; What the West Wind Saw, by Debussy; and Ballade, by Chopin.

Miss McGraw's recital is sponsored by the committee in charge of the spring Dogwood festival. Proceeds from the concert will be used to help defray the expenses of this event.

Sheiks Announce Pledging

Kirk Swann of Phi Delta Theta and Hal Miller of Alpha Tau Omega have been pledged to the Order of Sheiks. They will be initiated into the order later in the spring.

J. D. Winslow Will Represent Carolina At State Meeting to Promote Friendly Relations.

The Carolina sophomore class will be represented by J. D. Winslow, president of the class, at a meeting of sophomore class presidents from leading North Carolina colleges in Raleigh tomorrow. The formal meeting will be conducted in the Sir Walter hotel at 3:00 o'clock.

The purpose of the meeting is to promote friendly relations and mutual understanding among colleges of the state. Tentative plans have been made to have annual meetings at a one-day convention each year until the class of '35 graduates.

MISS KIMEL WINS CROWN IN YOUNG ARTIST CONTEST

Contralto From Winston-Salem And Fletcher Moore, Pianist-Organist, Chosen Best.

Winners in the contest for young artists and student musicians sponsored here yesterday by the state federation of music clubs were announced by Mrs. Eric Norden of Wilmington, state chairman of the federation. Vocal judges for the contest were Professor Harold S. Dyer, Dwight Steer of Elon College, and Francis Griffith of Wilmington. Judges in the organ competition were Mrs. Eugene Davis, Professor Nelson O. Kennedy, and Mrs. Wheeler. Piano judges were Mrs. T. S. McCorkle, of Chapel Hill, Mrs. Atkisson, of Greensboro, and Mrs. Huneycutt of Lexington.

Winner in the young artist division was Miss Doris Kimel, contralto, of Winston-Salem. The young artist classification requires that vocal contestants have sufficient selections prepared for two concert programs, including two numbers suitable for performance with orchestra.

Moore Wins Piano Contest

Fletcher Moore of Burlington was winner in the piano and organ contests in the student musician division, which includes contests below the young artist ranking. In this division Miss Mary Mills, contralto, and Ward Wilcox, bass, were also selected by the judges as the outstanding contestants in their classifications.

These winners will compete in the contest of the South Atlantic district of the federation here in April from which winners will compete in the national contest of the federation in Minneapolis during May.

Oak Trees Planted

The planting of eighteen white oak trees that were bought by the University grounds committee from Mayor Paul Lindley, noted nurseryman, of Greensboro, has just been completed.

Sixteen were placed on the campus between the library and South building while the other two were planted in front of Graham Memorial and New East buildings. An expert was sent by Mayor Lindley to supervise their planting.

More Than $2,700 in Checks Has Been Returned to Merchants Since Bank Holiday.

Well over $5,600 has been tied up in Chapel Hill through checks returned due to banks being closed. Most of these checks will be made good when the banks reopen completely, but have caused considerable inconvenience in the meantime.

When Obie Harmon, manager of Swain hall, found that a little over $250 in checks had come back on Swain hall, and an additional $100 on him personally, he became a bit cautious about cashing checks. The business office reports that checks come back to them every day and that on one peak day they received $2,500 worth. The "Y" had twenty-five to thirty checks returned, valued at about $140, many having been taken in by the service rooms.

Merchants Hold Many Checks

A survey of several of the busier stores in town shows that the Chapel Hill merchants have had over $2,700 tied up in the form of returned checks. Pritchard-Lloyd's, who cashed a number of checks for students, reached the high water mark with 250, the combined value of which is about $1,000. The Strowd Motor Company had only a dozen returned, but is a close second from point of value because one was for $500. Altogether they had about $800 returned.

The Model-Market and Grocery, together with the A. & P., come next with $300 each. The Ledbetter-Pickard stationery shop had twelve to fifteen checks, worth $200, to come back. Sutton's had little trouble with only $40 or $50 tied up. Eubank's reported that checks were coming back at the rate of five a day, about $10 a day. Strangely enough, the Carolina theatre had little trouble with returned checks.

Most of the men consulted pointed out that the checks returned were not bad in any way but were merely being held up prior to the reopening of banks still closed. Little worry or hard feeling was manifested by those with returned checks on their hands, as they seemed to feel that when the smoke cleared completely on the financial front, there would be little loss sustained.

Dyer To Judge Music Contests In Salisbury

Professor Harold S. Dyer, head of the department of music, will leave this morning for Salisbury where he will act as principal judge in the music contest convened there today by the junior division of the North Carolina federation of music clubs.

Today's contest in Salisbury will decide the final winners for the state in the junior division composed of students between the ages of ten and eighteen. Contestants were chosen in the preliminary elimination contests over the entire state last Saturday.

Professor Dyer officiated as judge at the preliminary contest in the junior division here last week and at the young artists' and students' contest sponsored here by the state federation.

FUKUSATO MUST LEAVE COUNTRY BEFORE AUGUST

Bureau of Immigration Rules That University Student May Depart Voluntarily.

CASE CREATED INTEREST

Jisaku Fukusato, Japanese student whose difficulties with immigration officials have created considerable interest at the University, received word yesterday from the Bureau of Immigration that he may depart from the United States voluntarily and to any country of his choice, and that on the basis worked out by officials, is given until August 1 to make necessary arrangements.

Entered University in 1931

Fukusato entered the University as a graduate student in 1931 after having been admitted into the country on a consular visa. His inadequate knowledge of the English language hindered him in his scholastic work to such an extent that he was unable to meet the requirements of the immigration law relating to special foreign students. A warrant was executed for his detention pending deportation, but he was released to President Frank Graham after a fight in his favor by University officials. He has resumed his work in the University.

A report issued by Dean W. W. Pierson of the graduate school on February 26 stated Fukusato held two University scholarships. His linguistic difficulty was given as the main reason for his scholastic deficiency.

New Weather Records Set And Precedents Broken Last Year

Residents of State Experienced All Types of Out-of-Season Weather During 1932.

Last December 31 brought to a close a year the weather records of which are well-nigh unprecedented in the history of North Carolina. At certain periods, the year was the hottest, in others the coldest, in some the driest, and in some the wettest that has ever been recorded by the weather bureau.

The average temperature for the year 1932 was 62.2 degrees, 2.8 degrees above normal for North Carolina. With the exception of the years 1890, 1911, and 1921, this average has not been surpassed. This exceptional record was due largely to the extraordinary heat during the months of January, February, July, and August. On the other hand, the months of March and November were unusually colder.

Temperatures Compared

January topped the records of the other months with an average temperature of 51.4 degrees, 10.8 degrees above the normal. February followed closely with an average temperature of 51 degrees, which was 7.2 degrees above normal temperature for that month. July and August were 3.5 and 2.5 degrees above normal respectively.

The months whose averages fell below the usual temperature were March and November. The average temperatures

BAPTIST CHURCH PROPERTY BURNED

Firemen Called Early Yesterday to Put Out Fire at Old Parsonage On Church Street.

The local fire department was called out at 2:20 o'clock yesterday morning to extinguish a blaze at the old Baptist parsonage house on the corner of Rosemary and Church streets. The house, occupied by Willie McCauley, was burning in several places when the firemen arrived. The roof was the only part of the building badly burned. Most of the furniture and other articles were saved by volunteers.

The cause of the blaze is unknown, but a complete investigation is planned by local fire officials.

GRUMMAN ELECTED HEAD OF EXTENSION WORKERS

R. M. Grumman, director of the extension division of the University, was elected president of the North Carolina Association of Extension Directors at the annual meeting of the association in Raleigh Thursday.

E. W. Ruggles, assistant director of the extension division at State College, was elected vice president and John C. Hadley, extension director at Catawba College, was elected secretary and treasurer.

Redivision of territory to prevent duplication of effort, standards of work to be done by extension students, and plans for the coming year were major topics discussed by the association members.

President Graham Announces Vacation Which Will Last From April 15 to 24.

CAMPUS FAVORS ACTION

Regular spring holidays to begin noon Saturday, April 15, and to extend until Monday morning, April 24, were granted yesterday by President Frank Porter Graham. This announcement is in accordance with President Graham's declaration made at the general convocation, March 6, at which time he announced the postponement of the regular holidays between the winter and spring quarters.

President Graham had held final decision open for study and recommendation on the part of the Student Council. The Union Forum and several campus organizations voted overwhelmingly during the past week in favor of the nine-day holiday period, and petitions were sent by the law school and the graduate club.

The postponement of the originally-scheduled recess was made by President Graham with the unanimous recommendation of the Student Council in view of the complications which threatened to arise from the presidential and state-wide declaration of a national banking holiday on March 5. President Graham thought that if the University quit work with the holidays, many students would be unable to return, and that it would be advisable for them to remain in Chapel Hill until the momentary paralysis was over.

Regular classes will begin Monday morning, April 24, at 8:30 o'clock.

CHILDREN TESTED FOR PLAYMAKERS' JUVENILE DRAMA

Junior Playmakers Will Present "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves" April 21 and 22.

Approximately 100 children of the community have been tried so far for parts in the major Junior Playmakers production of the season, Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves.

The Arabian Nights story, rewritten by Harry Davis for the juvenile dramatic presentation, will be enacted with elaborate scenic and costume effects during the week-end of April 21 and 22. The second matinee performance will be especially for children.

Mrs. Harry Davis will have charge of costuming the cast, but assistance from the mothers of the players will be welcomed. Phoebe Barr will direct the oriental dances performed by slave girls in the play.

The Junior Playmakers, organized last year by Davis, offered Cinderella as their first presentation. Many requests for extra performances of Ali Baba, both out-of-town and in Chapel Hill, have already been received.

Although the cast has not been definitely chosen, the following are expected to take parts:

Milton Hogan, Nell Booker, Nancy Murchison, Virginia Clark, David Hofer, Lindon Correll, Kimball Dyer, Lauren McKinney, Henry Whitfield, George Hogan, Cameron Mur-

The Present Fate Of Education

With the appropriations to educational institutions being cut on every hand, not only in this but in other states, it is not taking the Pollyanna attitude to predict that the ultimate result will be a reorganization of the present system of education, culminating in a far more desirable and more intelligent program than is now being followed. The change must come; it is inevitable. Being hastened by the numerous attacks which have been flung at the present system, this change must of necessity come in the next few years if the colleges and universities of the country expect to hold their deserved positions of importance in the public mind.

Nor is any other group in a better position to bring about this change than the faculty members themselves, upon whose shoulders rests the responsibility for the present break-down. The only difficulty, however, is that there are at present no individuals in this group with sufficient vision or leadership to instigate the first move.

It would seem to some that this viewpoint is entirely unmerciful in the light of the enormous salary cuts that the poor faculty members have lately been forced to undergo. Some would think it a case of striking a man when he is down. That would be the temporary opinion. But when the matter is considered from the standpoint of how it might affect the future of education, it takes on an entirely different outlook.

If nothing else is brought out by the present financial troubles and its reaction on education, the realization of the need for a change in the present system of education will certainly come about. Education as it is looked upon today has proved itself inadequate to meet with the problems of the day. In their striving for higher budgets and more buildings during the last decade, the educators have paid too much attention to the material meaning of the word "progress" and have not kept pace accordingly in the classroom. The development of the physical plant of the universities and colleges in the country has far exceeded that of the mental branch. And before anything can be accomplished, before present-day education can hope to continue to lay its claim to usefulness to society, before the United States finds itself adequately supplied with sufficient leadership once more, the educational system must be reorganized.

The Hermes-Salt Shaker tells us this: "Brevity is the soul of modern journalism. A young journalist was told to never use" (oh, oh, split infinitive) "two words where one would do. Here was his report on a fatal accident:

"John Jones struck a match to see if there was any gas in his car. There was. Age sixty-five."—Ulysses.

The New York Times has discovered, in a survey recently completed, that the chief effect of the depression on colleges in this country has been to reduce the number of student automobiles and the amount of campus gayety, and thus to focus the attention of the student bodies on their studies.—Marshall Parthenon.

The Daily Nebraskan also reveals to us that more than $10,000 is spent annually on the commencement party at Harvard University. We'd like to comment on that, but we can't see the typewriter keys through these tears.—Oklahoma Daily.

Meeting the Payments

If we deny education, we must provide more space in jails and penitentiaries. If we restrict the opportunities provided, we will invite social disaster. One cannot disassociate the American school program from the future stability of our government.—Professor Strayer of Columbia University before the National Education Association.

In their struggle for a just deal in education, protagonists of the schools and institutions of higher learning hold high the Torch of Futurity. This seems to be the strongest talking point for the equitable maintenance of teaching salaries and operating costs of grade, high, and secondary schools. It is predicted on the principle of social insurance—insurance for the future.

The leaders of the recent "economy" crusade in the North Carolina House of Representatives countered with a demand for "food, clothing, shelter, then education." When raised in the Senate, this chorus-for-a-balanced-budget-irregardless may still sound like a panacea to an amazingly large portion of the populace. The bug-bear of increased taxation, police terminology for Sales Tax, has kept a distraught section of the House on the proverbial pins and needles for many weeks. This atmosphere will pass on to the Senate, where the case for education must again mark time in obeisance of legislative wrangling, horse trading, and pyrotechnical oratory.

With the passing of the compromise education bill, doling out $760,240 to the Greater University, the measure goes to the Upper House. Since the disagreement of the Lower and Upper bodies of the Legislature is notorious, it is possible that the original appropriation figure of $832,000 will be granted in the Senate bill. This will bring it back to a joint committee, probably resulting in another compromise and the sum of $800,000. This is certainly the highest possible appropriation that may be crammed down the hoarse throats of the "economy" legions, and then only with a concerted massing of education sympathizers.

But the Governor's investigation revealed that the University could exist on a pittance of $596,000. This figure is nearly $100,000 short of the President's bare estimate. The House measure will grant approximately $206,000 short of the gubernatorial figure, and don't let these figures confuse you, for there's enough confusion in Raleigh, let alone Chapel Hill.

All this leaves us with an unbalanced budget. The Bowie-Cherry political nuptials culminated in a similar state of affairs, though the scales tipped to within approximately five million dollars of the balance. Thus it seems inevitable that a Sales Tax must come. The question of a Representative on the floor of the House, "How can we appropriate money we haven't got?" is all too significant. A Sales Tax of sufficient size is inevitable, however "odious." The state must choose between the evils of reeking taxation and a lapse in the policy of educational insurance.—D.C.S.

The Spectator Falls From Grace

One of the political and social rights which our present American social order is justly proud is its acquisition of the rights of free-speech for the press. Philosophers and progressive thinkers of all ages have pled for the rights of the press with such eloquence that the pleas have become a part of the world's great literature. Although the collegiate papers have been the last to free themselves from the oftentimes tyrannical reigns of censorship, the undergraduate papers in the most progressive institutes have won the right to free expression.

Nowhere is this freedom more in evidence than on the campus of this University where the paper is run entirely by students who answer to no one, nor elsewhere is there a paper more sincere in its fight for free thought. Yet we feel that this, like all things, may be carried to the point where a good becomes an evil. In the past the DAILY TAR HEEL has come ardently to the support of those editors who have been in danger of losing this prerogative, and in this spirit sympathized with the Columbia Spectator and its editor, Reed Harris, in their fight last year. But in carry on its program under the present administration the Spectator has, in this paper's opinion, overstepped the bounds of propriety.

For the past five years the Spectator has held an enviable position in collegiate journalistic circles for its progressive editorial pen. Up to and including the editorship of Reed Harris this progressiveness was marked by a common sense viewpoint and a sincere desire to accomplish something on the Columbia campus. The present editor, however, seems to have been overcome by the reputation of his paper for crusading and in an effort to carry on has let it degenerate to the status of one who knocks institutions for the publicity the knocker receives.

The Spectator is the only student newspaper on the Columbia campus and as such it owes to the students a sane and unbiased editorial column. Its recent attacks on various campus and college institutions have, it is felt, been made without the proper facts in hand and in an effort to keep the paper before the collegiate eye. The attitude of the editor in refusing to print a proclamation of the Student Board is not only a breach of ethics but is a confession of his fault.

The Spectator's fall from its pinnacle is accompanied by sighs of regret, and it is hoped that it will turn again to sane progressiveness and regain its lost laurels.—V.C.R.

Eastern Front

Glancing back over our left shoulder, we notice outside the office windows the much-mutilated terrain of the North campus, where short-cutters to Graham Memorial will soon find another walk to disregard. We are somehow reminded of the war scarred fields of Jehol, in which we are very much interested. There are two lines of trenches and a lot of wires running around through conduits, which might be barbed wire. The Japs hold the left trench. (All trees with pink blossoms are cherry trees, even if the grounds committee insists that the thing is a judas tree or something—nobody in the office knew, so judas will do as well as anything else). The Chinese army is just about thirty feet across in another trench running from the direction of Mrs. Ledbetter's toward a sophomore in a leather jacket headed toward Old West. The Russian border is not far in the background.

Trick

Our "Fun to Be Fooled" department presents the following illustration of some first rate parlor magic culled from the advertising ballyhoo of a cigaret company. If you can understand our purely hypothetical directions, your friends will be startled, your fortune made, all aches and pains cured, and the old age of your children made safe and happy.

Here is how the trick is done: Go to your nearest dealer or send in to this station with a facsimile of the same buy a pack of smokes. Cash awards of five thousand dollars will be offered in this contest which closes at midnight and the decision of the judges is final in all cases except those in which the sponsors are trying to boost their sales in a particular section. With a knife, razor blade, can opener, butcher knife, or tomahawk (one at a time), cut a slit crosswise the back of the pack. Being careful not to mar the cellophane which keeps out moisture, dust, and harmful irritants, extract a cigaret and put it back again, but this time through the slit. Don't try this trick when anyone is around or you'll have to take all of them out without putting them back. Half of the cigaret, provided that you fixed the pack in a dark closet, will be on the outside of the pack. Hold this side turned away from the audience. Now place your lower finger under the cigaret and push it up slowly, making magic passes over same all the time with your left hand. The cigaret appears to rise obligingly and mysteriously from the pack. If you have any trouble, let us know and we'll come around and tape up the finger you'll cut trying to slit the pack.

More Food Value for Less Money

The experience of 120 practical housewives; recently conducted by a New York city welfare organization, shows that 25 percent of every food dollar—if spent for dairy products—gives you more food value for less money than you get by spending a larger percentage for other products.

It showed further that the families using dairy products generously had better health than those who did not.

SMALL NUMBER REGISTERED FOR TENNIS CARNIVAL

Intramural Points Will Be Given For Entering Meet Against Duke April 3-8.

Since the registration for the Carolina-Duke tennis carnival has reached but ninety, the intramural department has offered its co-operation by offering intramural points to the men entering. Any student, in the graduate or undergraduate school, is eligible to enter the meet which is scheduled for the week of April 3 to 8.

Two points will be awarded to each organization for each man who enters and plays in the meet. The organization which enters the greatest number of men will be credited with twenty-five points. The team with the second largest number of entries will receive twenty points. The third greatest entry will win fifteen points, the fourth, ten, and the fifth, five.

Credit Towards Grail Trophy
Credit will also be given towards the Grail trophy. A man who wins his match will be given five points, and a man who loses will be awarded one point for having entered. It is hoped that this plan will draw a large number of players.

The registration at Carolina has been disappointing, with Duke having already listed more than 150 contestants. It has been planned to play 200 or more men from each school. Since this is the first meet of its kind known to have ever been attempted by any university, it is hoped that it will be a success.

A notice has been posted on the bulletin board at the tennis courts on which entries can be posted. Everyone is invited and urged to enter. Carolina will endeavor to match Duke man for man and more.

Entry Fee
The only entry fee will be one new ball, which each contestant is requested to furnish. Transportation will probably be provided in student automobiles for that half of the players who will play at Duke. The

FOOTBALL GAME SET FOR TODAY

First of Series of Winter Grid Practice Games Scheduled For 2:30 O'clock.

The first game of a series of three is scheduled for the final period of winter football practice this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Coach Collins did not name the starting lineups yesterday. The squad will probably be divided about equal with varsity men, reserves, and freshmen on both teams. Players will likely be shifted from one team to the other in an effort to find some working combinations. Many freshmen will see action during the afternoon in order to give them as much experience as possible.

Games will also be played next Saturday and the Saturday following. The contest April 8 is to be a Monogram-Rookie affair which always closes winter practice.

Yesterday afternoon Coach Collins sent his squad through only a light workout in preparation for today's battle. The practice consisted mostly of a signal and blocking drill. A new blocking dummy is being constructed which will be put in use next week. It is a big stuffed canvas bag made larger at the bottom so that it will stand up firmly.

FRESHMEN HAVE PRACTICE GAME

Outfield Positions Are Uncertain as Cerney Shifts Baseball Squad In Game Yesterday.

Coach Cerney gave his freshmen baseball team another practice game yesterday afternoon in an effort to find a working combination.

The outfield is still uncertain. Bullock, who just came out a few days ago shows promise of being a heavy hitter and may be used in centerfield. Mahaffey, although a little slow in the field, is a fairly good batter and will probably see some action, while Glasgow, who connected for a four-bagger yesterday, may be used in right field on the days that he is not pitching.

Pitching was again the main thing in yesterday's battle. Glasgow who worked most of the game for the regulars looked plenty hot, retiring many batters by the strikeout route. Barnes, a half-pint southpaw, hurled most of the game for the second team and showed ability in spots and even fooled his catcher on an attempted trick delivery. Spiers did some nice relief work in the box after taking Barnes' place.

Today's practice will be called at 2:00 o'clock.

With only four days remaining before the opening contest with Washington and Lee, the Tar Heel baseball squad put on the finishing touches yesterday at Emerson stadium in preparation for the curtain raiser.

Today another practice game is scheduled for 2:30 o'clock, and this contest should be the best to date. For one thing, it will be the performances today that will determine who will start Tuesday's shindig, and the boys will be playing their

HARRIER OUTLOOK FOR NEXT SEASON APPEARS BRIGHT

Nine Prospective Letter-men and Numerous Reserve Strength Bolster Prospects.

With nine possible letter-men scheduled to return for cross-country next fall, Carolina's harriers should have one of the strongest cross-country clubs in many years. Besides this large number of veterans, there will be a fine-looking group of reserves and freshmen to bolster the harrier's roster.

Sullivan to Captain Team
The Sullivan twins, Louis and Henry, were elected co-captains of the 1933 varsity cross-country team at a recent meeting of the letter men. Louis has won two hill and dale monograms while also copping a track letter; brother Henry won his first cross country letter last fall. They hail from Anderson, S. C.

Here is a partial list of the nine possible cross-country lettermen: Co-captains Louis and Henry Sullivan, Curlee, Donnell, Goldman, Groover, McRae, Hensen, and Pratt. A quartet of likely reserves should also come through for service, Wal-drop, Haywood, Gwyn, and Kimery.

GEORGETOWN TO MEET TAR HEELS

Carolina Track Team Will Engage Washington Aggregation in Informal Dual Meet.

Georgetown University track team will meet the Carolina Tar Heels in an informal dual meet this spring, it was officially announced yesterday by Coach R. A. Fetzner, director of University athletics. The actual date for the meet is still tentative, but the meet will come either April 1 or 8.

The usual early track meets, that Carolina has every spring, have been dropped from the varsity schedule, but the Georgetown track team wants to get some early training in Dixie and has picked Carolina as the ideal school. The Catholic university will spend more than two days working out with the Tar Heels prior to their meet.

Because of the proximity of the meet, Coaches Fetzner and Ranson are pressing their charges hard in preparation for the Washington invasion, and in accordance with their plans are holding longer and harder drills. The workouts will begin today at 3:00 o'clock sharp; all men are asked to report promptly for work.

PHI SIGMA KAPPA WINS GAME FROM ZETA PSI BY 9-2

Carr, Sigma Chi, and Manly Are Other Winners in Intramural Baseball Contests.

Zeta Psi, which had emerged victorious in its contest earlier in the week, was upset by Phi Sigma Kappa, 9-2, in the outstanding game of yesterday's intramural baseball program. The winners got to Harrison early and pounded him for seven runs in the first two frames. Zeta Psi steadied here, but to no avail.

Score by innings:
Zeta Psi 001 100 0—2
Phi Sigma Kappa 340 110 x—9

Manly Scores
Manly scored nine runs in the first two frames to take a lead which Ruffin could never overcome and won handily, 11-7. Joyce scored three runs for the winners.

Score by innings:
Ruffin 200 140 0—7
Manly 630 011 x—11
Everett and Phi Gamma Delta registered 7-0 wins over Old East and Pi Kappa Alpha on forfeits.

Carr Wins
Carr took a clean-cut 7-1 decision from Swain Hall as Anglin, on the mound for the law.

Don't you get Pipe Hungry

The Granger pouch keeps the tobacco fresh

"MAYBE it's back to Nature. Maybe it's something else. I don't know just what it is, but somehow or other I've just got to slip out in the woods and sit down on a log. I always take the old pipe along. Thinking somehow seems easier when you are smoking a pipe. I can fill up my pipe with Granger, and somehow just seem to see things clearer than at any other time.

"Don't know what it is about Granger, but it must be made for pipes—real pipe tobacco.

"Somehow, there's a flavor and aroma about Granger I never found in any other tobacco. When I pack my old pipe tight and good with these big Granger flakes, it's about the coolest smoke I ever enjoyed. It makes me downright pipe hungry every time I look at the package."

Some years ago we made a painstaking, scientific study to find out, if we could, the kind of tobacco best suited for pipes.

Down in the Blue Grass regions of Kentucky, we found a tobacco called White Burley. There is a grade of this tobacco between the kind used for chewing and the varieties suitable for cigarettes that is best suited for pipes. This tobacco is used in Granger.

This tobacco is prepared by a method worked out many years ago by Mr. J. N.

Wellman. It gives Granger a fragrance and mellowness that pipe smokers like, and makes it burn to a clean, dry ash. Granger never gums a pipe.

Granger has not been on sale very long, but it has come to be popular, and there is this much about it: We have yet to know of a man who started smoking it, who didn't keep on. Folks seem to like it.

CONFERENCE FOR NEARBY COUNTIES SCHEDULED HERE

Meeting Planned for Purpose of Broadening Interest of the Country Church.

Sessions for the Country Life conference are scheduled to take place here Friday and Saturday, April 21 and 22.

This conference is for the eight counties nearest Chapel Hill, which will include the counties of Orange, Durham, Chatham, Alamance, Caswell, Wake, Randolph, and Person, and is to study the church, the school, public health, and the home. The primary purpose of the meeting is to broaden the interest and activities of the country church and to form a more active link between the country church and the school.

Sponsored by Schools

The conference is sponsored by an independent committee made up of representatives from State College, Duke, and Carolina; it is the intention of this committee to bring to the conference all preachers, teachers, and as many farmers as possible. State College, and Duke University have two representatives on this committee, and the University has four.

The representatives to the conference are to be entertained by the University. Graham dormitory will be turned over to the group as its quarters during the two day period.

The speakers and leaders in the conference will be selected from the faculty of the three institutions.

ALUMNI ATTEND MEETING OF N. C. EDUCATION GROUP

Alumni of the University of North Carolina attending the meeting of the North Carolina Educational Association conducted their annual supper at the Y. M. C. A. in Raleigh last night.

Ray Armstrong, superintendent of schools of Goldsboro, was toastmaster at the supper. Mr. Armstrong is second vice-president of the University Alumni Association.

Dean M. C. S. Noble of the University's school of education spoke at the gathering.

PORTER WILL LECTURE IN DURHAM TOMORROW

William Wallace Porter, C. S. E., will deliver an address at the Carolina theatre in Durham tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock entitled: "Christian Science, the Habitation of Good." The lecture is being sponsored by the First Church of Christ, Scientist, of Durham. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Dr. Bloom to Offer Sermon

Dr. W. Knighton Bloom of Washington will preach in the United church at the 11:00 o'clock Sunday morning service. Dr. Bloom's sermon is expected to be of interest to students, since he has had considerable experience with student groups in this country and in England.

Nominations

Because of the fact that there has been a recent influx of contributions to the Open Forum column of this paper advocating various candidates for election to offices on the campus, the editor has seen fit to refuse the publication of any articles of such nature. Consequently no articles will be published in this paper defining the qualifications of any candidate, unless the contribution is paid for at the regular advertising rate.

Worth Heads Second Year Medical Class

At a meeting of the members of the first year medical class this week, Thomas C. Worth was elected president of the group for the coming year. To serve in the other offices were elected, Jake Fritz, vice-president; D. L. Moore, secretary and treasurer; and Richard Fleming student council man.

Worth is a member of the class of '33, a Phi Beta Kappa student, and is at present serving his second term as circulation manager of the TAR HEEL. Before entering the medical school he took an active interest in the activities of the Y. M. C. A. and the Philanthropic Assembly.

Although not all the freshmen, who won numerals last fall are in school, a promising group of first year men, hardened by one year of freshman experience should help the Tar Heels' varsity: Carraway, Conte, Garrison, Keeney, McPhail, Mark, Napier, Neal, J. J. Sullivan, and Winstead.

The schedule has not been completed, but two meets have been decided definitely. Carolina will again be host to the Southern Conference cross-country runners in a family meet and will also meet Duke on the Carolina course in a dual meet.

other half of the meet will be played here.

The team winner will be decided by the greatest number of single victories. The winner will receive a trophy to be donated by the Durham Herald. This trophy will be rotated to the winner of the tourney in each successive year.

Pharmacy School Honor Roll

Nine pharmacy students made the honor roll for the winter quarter: C. H. Cobb, C. S. Curry, L. Gilbert, F. B. Ham, W. L. Hickman, H. M. Lawrence, H. C. McAllister, C. L. Neal, and R. S. Whiteley. Cobb led the group with the grade of "A" on every subject, and also led the group during the fall quarter, when only eight made the honor roll.

yers, struck out twelve and pitched masterly ball. With the exception of Snooks Aitken, losing pitcher, who got a triple and scored his team's lone run, Swain Hall was unable to solve Anglin's slants.

Anglin was instrumental in winning his own game, crashing a homerun and bringing home another tally as well. Gillespie got three hits, two doubles and a single, to lead the winners at the bat.

Score by innings:

Carr 013 201 0-7
Swain Hall 000 100 0-1

Sigma Chi Victorious

Sigma Chi scored at will to crush Sigma Phi Sigma, 17-2, in a game ended in the fifth on account of darkness. Barnes and Atkins led the attack for the winners, scoring three times each. Froneberger, losing moundsman, scored both his team's markers.

Score by innings:

Sigma Chi 547 1x-17

TENNIS RESULTS

S. A. E. easily defeated Delta Tau Delta, 3-0, as both teams inaugurated their intramural net campaigns. Connor defeated Jackson, 5-0, 5-1, and Harris downed Rouiller, 5-0, 5-4. Delta Tau Delta forfeited the doubles match.

Best House dropped a 2-1 decision to Aycock, which won both singles engagements but dropped the doubles encounter. Jones beat Morris, 5-2, 5-3, and Cortland beat Hunt, 5-1, 5-1, in the singles, while in the tandem setto, Morris and Alexander downed Jones and Cortland, 5-1, 3-5, 5-3.

A victory in the doubles match decided the victory of Phi Delta Theta over Phi Alpha with the Phi Delta team of Williams and Parker coming through with a 5-4, 5-0, win. In singles, Levitt, of Phi Alpha, beat Williams, 5-2, 5-4, while Parker won from Margulis, 5-2, 5-3.

Theta Kappa Nu won from Sigma Phi Epsilon, 2-1, when the latter team, after winning the first singles match, forfeited the two remaining contests. Seawell gained the lone point for Sigma Phi Epsilon, beating Vaughn, 2-5, 5-1, 5-2.

In the longest match of the day, the Grimes - Mangum match was won by Grimes by virtue of a triumph in the doubles. In singles Onasch, Grimes, defeated Furches, 5-1, 5-2, while McMichael, of Mangum, won from Morrison, 5-2, 5-3. In the deciding doubles match Grimes won 5-3, 3-5, 5-4.

Dr. Meyer to Speak

Dr. Harold D. Meyer of the University sociology department will be the principal speaker at the social standards conference to take place at the Alexander Graham high school in Fayetteville on March 28. The conference, whose theme is wholesome living, will also be addressed by several other speakers of Fayetteville.

BASEBALL SQUAD TAPERS OFF FOR OPENING FRACAS

best ball in an effort to show Coach Bunn Hearn their ability. Old Man Jinx, which visited the Tar Heel camp Thursday in the form of injuries to George Brandt, outfielder, and Joe Griffith, ace right-hander of the hurling corps, may handicap Coach Hearn's squad Tuesday. Both lads suffered fairly severe sprains, and his injuries may prevent Griffith from starting on the mound against the Generals. In that case Hearn will have to select a moundsman from among Crouch, Whitley, Brown, Joyner, Manley, and Scarboro.

Today's practice session will witness the closing stages of hectic battles for positions in the outfield, infield, and behind the bat. From among Brandt, Vick, Croom, Hornaday, Peacock, and Zaiser, Hearn must pick three, although Croom, Zaiser, and Peacock will probably get first call as a result of hitting superiority.

In the infield the main battles are over the first and shortstop positions with the likelihood being that veterans will again get the call Tuesday. Dixon and Temple, both left handed hitters are the first sack candidates, and to date there is little to choose between them, although the former is more of a slugger. Also Dixon has made great strides as a fielder, but should he fall own Temple will make a worthy substitute.

Johnny Phipps and Dutch Leonard have been staging a merry battle for the short field position. Lately Johnny has been meeting the ball squarely and his fielding has also been above par. In addition Johnny is a right handed hitter and should fit in well in a lineup clogged with hitters who swing from the port side.

Captain Willie Powell and Vergil Weathers are fixtures at third and second respectively. Great things are expected this season of Carolina's captain. Willie has been digging them out of the dirt all round third base and has shown more power with the stick.

Red Mathewson seems to be in fair line to catch Tuesday. Red is a powerful hitter and his handling of the hurlers has been good. However, Tatum, McCaskill, Strayhorn, and Parker are not far behind, and will of course see plenty of action before the campaign is over.

Little is known of the Washington and Lee club, but reports say that the Generals will be represented by an excellent team, lead by Fitzgerald, the slugger who made such a fine record last year.

Ten Confined to Infirmary

Ten persons were confined to the infirmary yesterday. They were: W. J. Scott, G. F. Brandt, R. F. Blunt, Erik U. Kjellisvig, I. D. Lieberman, W. C. Pitt, Ralph B. Cheek, Jisaku Fukusato, C. P. Cameron, and W. B. Kingston.

New Weather Records Set During Last Year

for these months, however, were slightly less than customary, in March, 1.2 degrees below, and in November .5 degrees under normal. The highest temperature of the year, recorded August 31, was 106 degrees, and the lowest, 17 degrees, was recorded March 10.

Rainfall Above Normal

Rainfall for the year also exceeded the average precipitation of other years. The average of 49.46 inches raised the normal by 2.2 inches. The excessive rainfall occurred, however, at an unusual time of the year. The winter and summer seasons, usually the wet periods of the year, had such little precipitation as to almost approach a drought, while the fall, which is generally the dry season, had unprecedented rainfall.

The heavy rains which began in October continued through December. The precipitation in both October and November were above the usual mark, and the average for these two months was the highest ever recorded.

Heavy Storm in March

March 6, 1932, saw the worst storm in several years. The storm which caused excessive damage in the portions of North Carolina which were in its path, was caused by the lowest barometric pressure on record in this state.

Chief Cook and Bottle-Washer

Joel Morris, captain of State's 1933 baseball club, takes the cake for versatility.

Morris has filled every position on the State diamond outfit save that of catcher. "Chick" Doak, State mentor, will probably use Joe pretty regularly on the mound this season, but whenever there is an infield post vacant, Cap'n Morris will be on hand. One absent outfielder won't cause Doak much worry either, for Joe has proved a capable gardener on several occasions.

Duke Has Strong Track Team

The 1933 edition of Duke University's track team will have a quintet of Dixie champions and three record-holders.

Record holders are: John Brownlee, both indoor and outdoor record for the high hurdles; Al Reichman, indoor record for the 440; and Charlie Bradsher, 880 indoor record. Henry Fuller, 440, and Red Lewis, two miler, are the other champs.

The Devil trackmen also boast an outdoor champion mile relay outfit.

Grail Will Sponsor Dance This Evening

The first Grail dance of the quarter, much shifted and postponed, will be staged by the organization tonight, it was definitely announced yesterday.

A series of complications arose during the past week resulting in the shifting of dates and the postponing of the affair, but between the hours of 9:00 and 12:00 tonight couples will dance to the music by Jack Wardlaw and his band in the Bynum Gymnasium.

The Order of the Grail and the local maestro are going to much trouble to make the affair tonight one of the most successful social events of the season.

MANDAMUS SUIT TO BE RESUMED COMING TUESDAY

Dr. Wilson Testifies That Durham Negro Did Not Show Proper Entrance Credits.

The mandamus hearing of Dr. Thomas J. Wilson, Jr., registrar of the University, to show cause why Thomas R. Houghton, Durham Negro, should not be admitted into the local pharmacy school, was continued by Judge M. V. Barnhill in the Durham county superior court yesterday.

Judge Barnhill ordered a recess yesterday afternoon after several witnesses had been examined. The hearing, which was continued from Friday afternoon until yesterday, will be resumed Tuesday when arguments will be presented. Judge Barnhill's decision will follow.

Dr. Wilson testified that Houghton had exhibited in his application for entrance to the school of pharmacy no qualifications other than his record at the Hill Park high school in Durham. In addition, he failed to present a record of his work at North Carolina College for Negroes, which the plaintiff's counsel admitted.

Dr. Wilson, against whom the suit is brought as official of the University, is represented by Attorney-General Dennis G. (Continued on page three)

DAVIDSON GROUP COMES HERE ON DEPUTATION TRIP

Team Headed by Brown and Thompson to Lead Three Discussions Today.

A special deputation group of twelve cabinet members from the Davidson College Y. M. C. A. arrived here last night to visit the local "Y" organization over the week-end.

The team is composed of Paul F. Brown, president of the Davidson "Y," W. M. Thompson, newly elected president for next year, Tom Phifer, Charlie Moore, Francis Scott, Bob Orr, Sam Wiley, Bob Coit, Rufus Morrow, Ed McNair, Jake Mackorell, and E. L. Powell.

This morning the Davidson group will take charge of the student Bible class at the Presbyterian church at 10:00 o'clock. Tomorrow will teach the class. At 11:00 o'clock Rev. Ronald Tarnblynn will preach a special short sermon addressed to the cabinet membership of both Davidson and Carolina.

Discussion Meeting

This afternoon at 2:00 o'clock in the parlor of the Presbyterian church there will be a discussion meeting concerned with reports of the various departments and phases of the work of the Carolina Y. M. C. A.

Tonight at 7:00 o'clock in the Presbyterian church Sunday school room the Davidson team will have charge of the regular student forum, with Brown leading and Thompson speaking. McNair and Orr will furnish special music for the meetings.

The meeting tonight will take the place of the regular Monday night Y. M. C. A. cabinet session. All members of both cabinets are urged to meet the members of the Davidson team and take part in the program.

'Y' Will Nominate

All Cabinets Will Meet Tomorrow to Name Officers for Next Year.

A meeting of all members of the Young Men's Christian Association has been called for 7:00 o'clock tomorrow night in Gerrard hall to consider a revised constitution and to nominate officers for next year.

This meeting is called not only for cabinet members and officers but also for all members of the local "Y." The student forum meeting to be conducted by the Davidson deputation team tonight at 7:00 o'clock in the Presbyterian church Sunday school room will take the place of the regular Y. M. C. A. cabinet meetings.

Senate Will Discuss Inflation Of Currency

Three bills of state and national interest will be discussed Tuesday night by the Di senate. The bills are:

Resolved: That the Di senate go on record as favoring that the state of North Carolina manufacture fertilizer and sell it to the farmers at cost.

Resolved: That all public utilities be owned and controlled by the federal government.

Resolved: That the best and most effective method which congress could adopt to remove the depression and stimulate business is to inflate the currency.

NO ASSEMBLY MONDAY; MILLER TO SPEAK FRIDAY

The regular student assembly will not meet Monday as usual, but will meet Friday of this week. Dr. Julian Miller of the Charlotte Observer will speak. Freshman attendance will be checked and all others are invited to attend.

COMMITTEE WILL REPORT TUESDAY

Senate Appropriations Group Does Not Tamper With Figure for University.

Leaving appropriations to the Greater University of North Carolina up to the body itself, the appropriations committee of the senate will report a greatly altered budget supply bill into the upper division for consideration Tuesday morning.

While it took eight days for the house to evolve an appropriations bill for the next biennium, the senate committee took three hours Friday to raise every item, cut in the house sessions except allotments for the Greater University, back to figures contained in the joint appropriations committee's bill. The house made fifty-four cuts in the committee's bill, and the senate group has restored fifty-three of them to the original figures.

The fifty-fourth was not even considered. Friday Senator Clement, chairman of the committee, took the position that nothing the committee would do would stop the fight to give the University more money. The figure as it now stands is $760,240 for the Greater University, or approximately $390,000 for the Chapel Hill division.

George Horton First Wrote in Chapel Hill and, After Civil War, in Philadelphia.

There is one Carolina poet who never got his just renown. When speaking of the men of letters who have lived in Chapel Hill in the past, no one ever rushes forward to tell of him. A poet who could not distinguish one verse scheme from another, a writer of short stories who, at one time, could not distinguish one word from another—that was George Horton, Negro, one-time resident of this university town, whose works show the soul of a true literary man, a true artist.

George Horton forerunner of Langston Hughes, Countee Cullen, and other gifted poets of his race was born in 1798 in Chatham county, on the property of one James Horton. As a farm hand he was not of much use to his employer, spending all his spare time wrapped in deep reverie. It is said that he once heard some verses that were published in an old Carolina Magazine, and he became fired with a zeal to go to the place where these were written. The next we hear of him he was tramping the dusty streets of Chapel Hill seeking employment.

Turns to Poetry

Hard put to find means to support himself he turned to the Muse of poetry, invoking her aid in the struggle to keep body and soul together, just as many of the seekers after the (Continued on last page)

DATE OF SKINNER PORTRAYAL HERE MOVED UP A DAY

"Wives of Henry VIII" Will Be Presented Tuesday, April 11, Instead of Wednesday.

The Wives of Henry VIII, creative performance of Cornelia Otis Skinner, famous American actress, which will be performed in Memorial hall as the seventh in the series of student entertainments, will be presented April 11. Miss Skinner was originally scheduled to appear here Wednesday, April 12.

The dramatic portrayal of Miss Skinner, who is the daughter of Otis Skinner, dean of the American theatre, will be the only presentation of the Student Entertainment Committee during the spring quarter.

Miss Skinner's original performance is a series of character sketches in which she interprets in turn Catherine of Aragon, Anne Boleyn, Jane Seymour, Anne of Cleve, Kathryn Howard, and Matherine Parr, the six wives of the famous Tudor king. The first presentation when first given last spring in London was accorded a tremendous ovation. One London critic who attended the opening night remarked: "To come under her magic spell is worth living and waiting for."

Is Veteran Trouper

Miss Skinner is a veteran trouper in addition to being a well-known writer, her pen having produced poems, plays, and magazine articles. She made her stage debut in a small role in Blood and Sand in the (Continued on last page)

STURTEVANT WILL ADDRESS GARDEN CLUB TOMORROW

Landscape Architect and Authority on Horticulture Making Trip Through South.

Robert Swan Sturtevant, nationally known landscape architect and authority on horticulture, will lecture to the Chapel Hill Garden Club at 3:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in Davie hall. All residents in the community who are interested in the subject are invited.

A luncheon is to be given for Sturtevant tomorrow by Mrs. H. R. Totten. Sturtevant will also visit W. L. Hunt, University graduate student and horticulturist, here and later at Hunt's home in Greensboro.

Studying Vegetation of South

Sturtevant is at present making a trip through the south studying the types of vegetation peculiar to various localities and the difference in plants' blooming caused by climatic changes. A graduate of the Harvard school of landscape architecture, he gained his interest in horticulture from his father, Dr. E. Lewis Sturtevant, who was the first director of the New York state experiment station and author of many articles about his agricultural researches.

A sister of the lecturer, Miss Grace Sturtevant, specializes in hybridizing iris and is the originator of some of the most beautiful modern varieties.

INITIAL DOGWOOD EVENTS TO EXTOL NORTH CAROLINA

Plans for Appearance of Cherokee Indians in Native Ball Game Abandoned.

Folk lore, pottery native to the State, and a general glorification of the natural beauties of North Carolina will feature the program of the Dogwood Festival to take place here Saturday, April 29, according to R. M. Grumman, chairman of the festival committee.

Original plans, calling for a more glittering program and the presence of Cherokee Indians who were to perform in a game of Indian ball, were decided to be too costly, and only the simpler and less expensive plans have been retained.

The festival committee, which hopes to inaugurate a movement for the preservation of the natural beauties of the state and particularly of dogwood trees, has arranged for weavers from the western part of the state, potters from Jugtown, wrought-iron workers, and others to contribute exhibits.

Folk Music Program

Lamar Stringfield, composer and conductor, will direct the folk music program, and Miss Josephine Sharkey will be in charge of the dances, which will be quaint and representative of the traditional folk dances of the state.

The handicraft exhibits will be in Graham Memorial, and the dancing and musical programs will be in the Forest theatre, Chapel Hill's outdoor playhouse where trees and flowers furnish background and ceiling, atmosphere and walls.

Extension Division Will Conduct Institute For College Graduates

Debate Try-outs

Japanese Policy in Far East Will Be Topic of Discussion.

Try-outs for the debate with Georgia Tech, April 13, will take place at the meeting of the debate group, Monday night at 9:00 o'clock in Graham Memorial. Carolina will take the affirmative side of the question, "Resolved: That the Japanese policy towards China be condemned."

The debate with Georgia Tech, April 13 will be followed by a debate with Boston University, April 14, on the question of war debts. Both of these debates will be given in afternoon when the high school debaters come to the University.

Nelson O. Kennedy To Give Organ Recital

Professor Nelson O. Kennedy will render the first of his quarterly series of vesper organ recitals at 4:00 o'clock this afternoon in the Hill Music hall.

Professor Kennedy's program will include a sonata by Mendelssohn of three movements Grave-Adagio, Allegro maestoso e vivace, and Fuga; Fountain Reverie by Fletcher; Allegro Cantabile from the fifth symphony of Widor; Prelude and Fugue by Bach; Nocturne by Grieg; and Afterglow by Groton.

DR. CALDWELL WILL TALK AT BULL'S HEAD MEETING

Dr. W. E. Caldwell, of the University history department, will speak at the weekly Bull's Head meeting Tuesday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. He will review The Greek Way by Edith Hamilton and will touch briefly on other classical works. Dr. Caldwell was scheduled to speak last week but was unable to attend the meeting.

HIGH SCHOOLS TO MEET IN DEBATE

All Triangles Will Engage in Forensic Battles on Sales Tax March 31.

Two hundred and fifteen high schools will participate Friday, March 31, in the twenty-first annual triangular debating contest of the High School Debating Union of North Carolina, it was announced yesterday by Secretary E. R. Rankin.

The query which will be discussed is, "Resolved: That North Carolina should adopt the sales tax as a feature of its state system of revenue."

The schools winning both of their triangular debates will send their teams to Chapel Hill to compete April 13 and 14 in the final contest for the Aycock Memorial cup, the trophy which has been donated to the High School Debating Union by the intercollegiate debaters of the University.

Keen Interest Displayed

Keen interest has been displayed for the past several months by high schools in all sections of the state in the approaching debates, and an unusually interesting state-wide contest is anticipated.

Will Provide Intellectual Development for Those With Enforced Leisure.

NO EXTRA COST TO STATE

As one method of meeting the challenge of the depression as it affects the alumni of colleges and universities, the University extension division announced yesterday that it would conduct during the remainder of the present academic quarter an Institute for College Graduates.

The purpose of the Institute is to provide opportunity for worthwhile intellectual and cultural development for both men and women college graduates, who because of enforced leisure or for other reasons may desire to return to college to improve their educational qualifications. To meet this demand, such an institute has been suggested to the University by executives of some of the great corporations usually employing large numbers of college graduates.

Registration During Spring

Students may register in the institute at any time during the spring quarter which ends about June 1, but are advised to report by Monday, March 29, if they wish to receive the maximum benefit from the instructional program.

Institute students will attend institute classes, but will re- (Continued on page three)

GRADUATE CO-EDS TO DEBATE PLANS FOR ORGANIZATION

Mrs. Mary R. Beard to Speak at Dinner Tomorrow Night in Graham Memorial.

Women graduate students of the University will meet tomorrow night at a dinner in Graham Memorial at 6:30 o'clock to discuss plans for an organization of graduate women.

Mrs. Mary R. Beard, a leader in women's movements, will be the principal speaker of the occasion, presenting a talk on "A Changing Intellectual Climate for Women." Mrs. Beard is a well-known writer and is now on a visit to Chapel Hill.

At the meeting tomorrow a committee appointed to investigate the plausibility of organization will report. The group will then consider the report and discuss plans for forming a society for graduate women.

One of the plans now under consideration is the organization of an association similar to the male graduate club now at the University. Should this be done and should the project secure the necessary support, the group will attempt to have a separate dormitory for graduate women.

All graduate women have been asked to make arrangements to attend the dinner tomorrow. Those who have not already done so have been asked to call Miss Marjorie Mendenhall at 5556 before 9:00 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Dr. Poteat Here Today

Dr. W. L. Poteat, president-emeritus of Wake Forest College and well known speaker in religious circles throughout the state, will deliver the sermon at the Baptist church this morning.

School Days for The Unemployed

Investigations by federal authorities have revealed that the ranks of the unemployed in metropolitan centers are abnormally swelled by thousands of highly trained college graduates in almost every conceivable field of technical endeavor. Hundreds of medicos, engineers, pharmacists, pedagogues, lawyers, and business men, many with Phi Beta Kappa keys dangling from their thread bare vests, haunt the employment offices and bread lines of New York alone. The situation in the East is typical of other portions of the country.

As it exists in the South, the situation will be met here on the University campus by the extension division, which contemplates an Institute for College Graduates. The institute will provide opportunity for intellectual and cultural development for those who may turn again to college halls at the behest of enforced leisure. The extension division proposes an immediate application of the plan this quarter, and has sent out the call to men and women college graduates to report if possible by Monday, March 29. The University faculty has aided in the arrangement of special lectures and discussion periods, and the library will be placed at the disposal of the Institute for research purposes. All will enjoy the regular social and cultural advantages of the remainder of the student body.

England today contemplates a great army of unemployed collegians as does Germany, France, and other countries to our east. The perennial student in Europe is no phenomenon. He remains on the college campus often as long as ten years, perhaps for life. Recently his incumbency has been agitated by increasing unemployment in the brackets of the highly educated.

Our extension division displays foresight in the installation of the Institute on this college campus. There is no cost to the state involved, for the small blanket fee required for instruction, board, and room, covers adequately the expenditure contemplated by the University and the extension division. The perennial student situation may never invade this section of the Southland, but temporary provisional measures to provide for this large portion of the skilled unemployed will fill the gap until Normalcy turns the corner with its kinsman Prosperity.—D.C.S.

Reunion of Vienna—And Berlin

From all possible evidence on hand, it seems plausible to say that this year of 1933 is witnessing the formal passing of what might be termed the Post-War period; the beginning of a new era in the world's history may well be dated from the present time. Of course, such periodizations are purely a matter of convenience in coordinating the great movements of man's development in the mind of the student of world affairs, and do not represent sharply differentiated periods. One of the most important manifestations of the new epoch is in regard to the War "settlements."

At the Versailles conference, the signers of the treaty affixed their signatures to the paper with an air of finality and permanent accomplishment. The great majority of these gentlemen believed that the treaty was the culmination of the most careful balancing of national interests and well-being, and would provide the basis for a contented and stable Europe. The manifest absurdity of this position was realized almost immediately thereafter by the French, who were too realistically minded about politics to keep themselves in a state of hypnosis over a long period of time. Seeing its inadequacies and the probability of vigorous and effective protest later by a renaissance Germany, they endeavored to provide themselves with additional safeguards, additional "security" by alliances and cross-alliances. They were not trying to set things aright, but to prepare for the inevitable—a reactionary and Chauvinistic Germany.

The initial wedge to be used by Hitler in his attempts to break the force of the treaty is to be the proposed union with Austria, which is expressly forbidden under the terms of the Versailles agreement. Perhaps the decisive blow for treaty revision was delivered by Britain's Premier MacDonald in his speech at Geneva last week, when he made the following momentous statement in front of the French prime minister: "Either Germany is given justice or freedom or Europe will risk destruction."—V.J.L.

North Carolina's Way Out

Frequently it is difficult for the layman with a normal interest and a doubtful faith in state and national politics to credit the political ballyhoo and oratorical slush which emanates from our legislative halls, and more especially so when they see so many would-be statesmen doing Bowie-reverses and switching horses in mid-stream. Psychological sources often become confused with the validity of an argument when the public wonders which big-business faction is lobbying its representatives into their expressed opinions.

Consequently when someone appears with apparently no affiliations and calmly talks sense it comes like water into a thirsty soul. In such a category was the address delivered Friday to a Greensboro audience by Dr. Albert S. Keister in which he urged the need, however undesirable, of a broad sales tax. Dr. Keister, it has been observed from experience, cuts through the superficial appearances of economic problems to the rock bottom, salient facts.

With tables Dr. Keister showed the financial status of North Carolina under the headings of taxes, debts, expenditures, receipts of general and highway funds and cuts already made. According to his figures the state receives $88,000,000 from all its present forms of taxation, and the general fund shows a deficit of around $6,000,000 which represents a considerable drain upon her resources.

According to Dr. Keister, the cuts already made in the last three years in the state's expenditures fell heaviest on the educational institutions. The state government has taken twenty-six per cent; educational institutions thirty-six; and the charitable and correctional institutions eleven per cent.

Reasoning from Dr. Keister's figures, it would seem that the repeal or reduction of the property tax, while relieving the tax burden, would increase the deficit to ten million. Further onslaughts into the allotments of state owned institutions would result in their annihilation without materially reducing the tax burden or the deficit.

There remains, then, the sales tax as the only way out of the five million dollar hole we have dug for ourselves. It is the only tax we haven't already which could be depended on for further revenue. A not too heavy, though sufficiently broad, sales tax would more than balance our budget and be the least felt by the people of the state.—V.C.R.

Millenium Through The Mail

The newest style in chain letters is with us again. From the Pacific coast has come "An Open Letter to Congress" and the nation at large that tells us with vim and vigor and vitality that "our entire social structure is tottering . . . that it is imperative to initiate a rational and constructive program at once before we are confronted with some radical or destructive alternative." We are requested to send one each of these letters to our members in Congress and five more to our friends.

With a vocabulary almost flowery in its extreme verbosity we are told that something must be done about the depression, that we must seek causes and not effects, and that the solution must be fair to all classes. All this has been said before by everyone who has suggested remedies for the depression. This frantic cry that something must be done immediately to aid the thousands who are starving which farmers burn their produce to keep the prices up not only lacks originality in this respect but actually smacks of triteness.

It must be admitted that credit control by the government as a stabilizing factor to prevent emotional reactions upon the part of the people raising or lowering unnecessarily the credit of the nation has qualities which would make the idea worthwhile if such a plan could be put into operation. Also the remonetization of silver as a means to re-establish trade connections with the countries who operate upon a silver basis as recommended by this letter, would perhaps help a great deal in our trade relations with these countries.

The authors evidently have their hearts set upon removing politics from the country, for they suggest that the only elective offices be that of President and those of the members of Congress. All other offices, federal, state, county, and municipal, would be appointed by Congress and the President. Not realizing that by making only a few offices elective and all other offices appointive under the jurisdiction of this national committee they would increase the element of politics and possibly cause a reversion to the old spoils system of former years, the propounders of this idea go on blissfully with their beautifully painted pictures of the results accruing from such a method. Neither do they realize that by placing all of the offices in the nation in the hands of the federal government they are proposing that an already overworked body of men take on a responsibility far beyond their abilities.

Sir Thomas More with his Utopian scheme of things could never have imagined the wonderful results which the composers of this letter claim would be in effect as soon as their plan should be adopted. Everyone would be employed; our laws would be simplified; every man would have an added incentive in life; taxes would be reduced; graft, crime, and corruption would be almost entirely eliminated; man would live in harmony with his neighbor; culture and finer emotions would be developed, and spiritual enlightenment and understanding would be natural result. All that would be necessary to make the impossible happen would be the mere adoption of this brilliant cure for the depression.—F.P.G.

Cantor Program Tonight

The attention of those students who are Eddie Cantor fans is called to the fact that every Sunday night at 8:00 o'clock a broadcast of the comedian's program is received on the radio in the lounge of Graham Memorial. A large number of students have been coming out regularly Sunday nights to hear this feature, and the crowd is increasing rapidly.

Monday, March 20, 1933

The week of March 20-26, a headline hunter's heaven, began auspiciously Monday morning with a convocation of students in Memorial hall. Dr. Frank Graham, president of the University. The president urged concentrated opposition to the Bowie-Cherry bill in the House of Representatives, requesting students to wire parents to oppose the drastic economies of the anti-sales tax forces.

Tuesday, March 21

Athletic Teams To Get Into Full Swing With This Week's Events

University Will Meet W. and L. In Baseball Tuesday; Michigan State Thursday.

FIVE CONTESTS ON BILL

Golfers Have Won One Match This Season; Engage W. And L. Tuesday.

Shaking off winter's last stand, the spring sports schedule is set to get into full swing this week with a golf match and four baseball games on tap. The baseball team opens its season and the golfers encounter their second foe.

Coach Bunn Hearn's bunch of youngsters square off Tuesday with Washington and Lee at 4:00 o'clock on Emerson field. The starting battery combination is uncertain due to Griffith's injury though it is probable that it will be Andrews and McCaskill. This will be the first opportunity to see how Carolina's young squad will react under fire.

Coach Kenfield's golf team will open its stand against Southern conference competition Tuesday with Washington and Lee on the Hope Valley course. The competition will be run off in the morning and afternoon, the twosomes playing early and the foursomes after lunch.

Michigan State will meet the Tar Heels on the diamond in a two-game series beginning on Thursday. The middlewestern club is one of the few college teams taking a southern trip and they are reported to have one of the strongest clubs in their section.

The second game of the Michigan State series will be played Friday. The middlewesterners will journey over to Durham to play Duke Saturday.

Saturday the Tar Heels tramp over to the metropolis of Burlington to engage the Elon team in the fourth baseball game of the week for Coach Bunn charges. Coach Chuck Collins also plans to hold his second intra-squad football game in Kenan stadium at 2:30 o'clock.

Extension Division To Conduct Institute For College Graduates

(Continued from first page) receive no academic credit toward a degree. They will have access to the University library and opportunity to profit from a variety of musical, dramatic, social and religious programs offered by student, faculty and community organizations. By the co-operation of the faculty, special lectures and discussion periods may also be provided for the group. There will be a registration fee of sixty-five dollars which will cover room, board and other charges. Certificates of attendance will be issued to those requesting them. Consultation service, including educational and vocational guidance, will be offered institute members through the co-operation of the psychology department and the office of dean of students.

Under the general direction of the extension division, the institute will be guided in its development and work by a special advisory committee, now being organized, to be composed of representative business, educational, and professional leaders of this and other states.

CLAIBORN M. CARR

PERCY IDOL DESERVES A lot of praise despite the fact that he lost his opening round match in the national intercollegiate wrestling tournament at Lehigh University, Friday night. Coach Chuck Quinlan drove Percy up to the meet, stopping off at Lexington to take along one of the V. M. I. grapplers. Before leaving, Quinnie placed the Lehigh 175 pounder and the light-heavy from Indiana as the two strongest men in Perc's class. It was just Percy's luck to draw the Indian in the first tilt. At that, the Tar Heel lost a time decision of four minutes. Idol finished a season this year with no defeats and only two victories were registered without falls. He had to prepare for the national with little or no opposition to work with. He worked for more than a week on all the wrestlers in school, taking 'em on two at a time. Hats off to Percy, he can still grapple for my money.

OLD POP YEAGER AND THE new tackling dummy down in Kenan stadium have been having a grudge fight recently. It seems that the new playmate is a tough hombre and has been giving the gridsters pains everywhere. Yeague is a tough 'un himself but the little brown fella' found his weakness. The freshman candidate for an end position went busting in there once at a terrific speed and hit the dummy. The latter came down but as it did, three of Pop's teeth rolled loose. Yeague smiled, and picked up the teeth. Now he leaves his false ones in the locker-room. Really though, Pop's not so old as all that.

IRWIN WALKER, STAR END for Carolina the last three years, recently received a letter from the Providence Steam Rollers, one of the leading professional football teams, in which the management extended Walk a sort of a kinda' invitation to join the rough boys. The epistle was in the form of a questionnaire which endeavored to find out Irwin's feelings towards playing professional football. Walker said that it was all very nice about them wanting him in on their party but just the same. That's quite an honor, though seriously, 'cause the letter was not sent as a joke. 'Course they might be looking for a good, cheap end. Right or left?

A WEEK-END THAT OUGHT to be looked into immediately is the one that four of our athletic beau-brummels spent in Maryland. George Brandt, Raiston LeGore, and Gene Zaiser chaffered George Barclay up to LeGore's heck of the woods to see the babes. Barclay went to see Winnie who wrote him that stuff about letting "rhythm take its course" and the others found plenty of gals in LeGore's woods. Zaiser was a little neglected though, his chief thrill coming when he saw Winnie come in and wake Georgie up Sunday morning. All Gene could say then was "Boy, can I cluck that rock now?" Poor Gene, his gal even went to sleep on 'im, that is, while he was in the kitchen. Barclay got a letter from Winnie Friday with a lot of mush in it but on the back were several pictures. Across from the bedroom scene which showed Georgie Porgy being awakened gently, there was another carton of Zaizer at the bat. The caption read, "Boy, can I cluck that rock now?"

SPRING BASEBALL AND TENNIS BEGIN IN INTRAMURALS

Nine Fraternities and Five Dormitories Emerge Victorious In Baseball for Week.

After the intramural schedule had been twice altered by weather conditions, the spring contests opened Wednesday in both tennis and baseball.

In the diamond race nine fraternities and five dormitories emerged victorious in their only games of the week, and two additional fraternities broke even in two contests.

Beta Theta Pi, Chi Psi, Delta Kappa Epsilon, Kappa Alpha, Kappa Sigma, Phi Delta Theta, Phi Gamma Delta, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, and Sigma Chi are the fraternities which came through the first week without a setback, while at the head of the dormitory league are Carr, Everett, Laundry Club, Manly, and New Dorms.

Sensational among last week's contests were the free-scoring settos which resulted in several cases. On opening day, Phi Delta Theta pounded out a 20-4 win over Delta Tau Delta and the following afternoon Chi Psi gained the only shutout of the week as it crushed Sigma Phi Epsilon, 24-0. The only real upset of the week was Zeta Psi's 9-2 defeat at the hands of Phi Sigma Kappa Friday.

Winners in Tennis

Grimes jumped into the lead in the dormitory tennis league as a result of wins over the Atlantics and Mangum. Both triumphs were scored at 2-1. Close behind in the list of undefeated dorms are Aycock, Everett, and Ruffin with one win each. Best House won from Old East but lost out to Aycock Friday.

In the fraternity loop eight teams are tied for the lead with one win in one start. Beta Theta Pi, Chi Psi, Phi Delta Theta, Phi Gamma Delta, Pi Kappa Phi, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Sigma Nu, and Theta Kappa Nu are the teams which are showing the way to the fraternities.

Due to the fact that there will be varsity baseball games three days this week, intramurals will be contested on Monday and Wednesday only. The schedule for the week is as follows:

Monday

Baseball: 3:45—(1) Theta Kappa Nu vs. Delta Psi, (2) Best House vs. Steele, (3) Delta Kappa Epsilon vs. Alpha Tau Omega; 4:45—(1) Manly vs. Swain hall, (2) Tau Epsilon Phi vs. Beta Theta Pi; (3) Pi Kappa Alpha vs. Phi Kappa Sigma.

Tennis: 3:45—(1) Sigma Chi vs. Chi Phi, (2) Aycock vs. Carr, (3) Old East vs. Grimes; 4:45—(1) Sigma Phi Sigma vs. Kappa Sigma, (2) Everett vs. Atlantics, (3) Zeta Psi vs. Phi Kappa Sigma.

Wednesday

Baseball: 3:45—(1) Laundry Club vs. Ruffin, (2) Old West vs. Mangum, (3) Pi Kappa Phi vs. Phi Gamma Delta; 4:45—(1) Phi Sigma Kappa vs. Chi Phi, (2) Grimes vs. Carr, (3) Phi Alpha vs. Sigma Phi Epsilon.

Tennis: 3:45—(1) New Dorms vs. Best House, (2) Steele vs. Manly, (3) Delta Kappa Epsilon vs. Beta Theta Pi; 4:45—(1) Theta Chi vs. Tau Epsilon Phi, (2) Kappa Alpha vs. Delta Tau Delta, (3) Zeta Beta Tau vs. Theta Kappa Nu.

Baseballers See Dean Hobbs

Coach Bunn Hearn reminds the members of the varsity baseball squad that they must sign their eligibility slips before Tuesday's game with Washington and Lee. All members of the squad must sign the papers in Dean A. W. Hobbs' office in the South building before being eligible to play.

VIRGINIA CINDER MEN TO ENGAGE IN SIX CONTESTS

Lauck, Abramson, Sackett, and Coles Leaders on Strong Cavalier Team.

Four dual meets, a state meet, and the conference combat have been arranged for the University of Virginia's track squad this spring. Navy, V. M. I., and Maryland will be met at Charlottesville and Carolina here, April 22.

Billy Lauck is captain of the Cavalier cinder men. He is the boy who set a new indoor conference record in the mile and then came back to win the two mile race in the recent indoor competition held here. Ballard, two miler; Cary, half miler; Dudley, quarter miler, are other leading distance men.

Abramson and Sackett, two veterans, will take care of the dashes, while Everett and Antrim will run the hurdles.

Coles Leads Field Artists

George Coles, who came with in a fraction of equalling the indoor shot put mark, will lead the Cavalier field artists. He will also throw the discus and have help from Gentry conference boxing king, and Flock in the shot put. Johnson, Virginia's versatile athlete, and Edmondson will work in the high jump; Wyllie in the pole vault; Tompkins with the javelin; and Sackett in the broad jump are other field performers who should add points.

Coaches Former Olympic Stars

The Virginians have two Olympic sprinters as coaches for this season. Archie Hahn is head coach and is the only sprinter ever to win three Olympic records in a single year, and the only dash man ever to be successful in defending a title. Coach Hahn ran in the Olympic games of 1904 and 1906. He won the Olympic championships in the 60, 100, and 200 meter races in 1904 and then defended his 100 meter championship successfully in 1906.

Henry Cumming is the assistant track coach and was a member of the United States Olympic team in 1928. He was a finalist in the 100 meter race at Amsterdam but failed to place. Cumming holds the Virginia state mark for the 100 and 220 yard dashes. Cumming was also a member of the world record relay team for the quarter mile which set the mark in 1927.

Brummitt, Assistant Attorney-General A. A. F. Seawell and Victor S. Bryant, Durham attorney.

W. H. Hastier of Washington, D. C., official of the National Association for the Advancement of the Colored Race, and C. O. Pearson and C. H. McCoy of Durham, all colored, represent Hocutt.

It was intimated yesterday that counsel for the plaintiff would ask the court to throw the action aside because of a deficiency in the application for the writ.

J. W. Davison, assistant principal of the Negro high school, the first witness of the plaintiff, brought out that Hocutt's grades at the school were barely sufficient to gain promotion. Hocutt then took the stand and testified. He was asked to read his list of qualifications but had some difficulty in pronouncing the words.

Following this Dr. Wilson presented his testimony, saying the Negro's credits were deficient.

SPRING PRACTICE FOR BOXING WILL BEGIN TOMORROW

Coach Crayton Rowe Announces Spring Practice Season Will Start at 4:00 O'clock.

Coach Crayton Rowe and his assistant, Archie Allen announced yesterday that spring boxing practice would begin Monday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock. This practice is for all varsity and freshman boxers and any others interested.

Coach Rowe stated that practice would be held every afternoon in the Tin Can and that the spring session would end in the annual spring intramural tournament. The tourney is indefinitely set now to be run off in about three weeks.

All members of the varsity and freshman squads are urged to come out and any others that might be interested in going out for boxing next year. The various campus organizations and dormitories contemplating entering men in the intramural mit tourney should get their men down for these preliminary work-outs under the tutelage of Coaches Rowe and Allen.

Norment Quarles, Carolina's conference featherweight champion, and Nat Lumpkin, varsity boxer, have been working out regularly and are in good shape.

Checks to Game Room

Mayne Albright, manager of Graham Memorial, reports that he still has on hand fourteen checks totaling $28.90 that were taken in the game room during the recent bank holiday. Payment on the large majority of these checks is being withheld because of the failure of the banks to open, and it is thought that the checks drawn on these banks will be good.

The game room reports that over half of the students to whom credit was extended during the holiday have paid their bills.

ORANGES WIN 7-6 FROM BLUE TEAM IN PRACTICE TILT

Brothers Blocks Punt for Orange Touchdown and Arthur Kicks Extra Point.

The Orange downed the Blue 7 to 6 in a close and fast practice football game yesterday afternoon on Kenan field. It was a cold, wet day but the field was in excellent shape.

Coach Collins had the two teams well divided as shown even more by the closeness of the first downs, each having five. Both teams had strong lines, the longest run of the afternoon from scrimmage being fifteen yards. Many shifts in the regular positions of the players were made. Babe Daniels was changed from center to tackle, while Denti and Arthur, freshman ends, and Bryan, yearling tackle, were all tried at center. In the backfield, George Moore, a fullback and Watt Jones, a quarterback, were both tried at half during the afternoon.

Scoring in Second Half

Both teams counted in the last half, the Orange score coming in the third quarter and the Blue touchdown in the fourth. The first score came on a blocked punt. Martin of the Orange got off a beautiful punt from mid-field which was downed on the Blue three-yard line. Woolen, of the Blue, attempted to kick out but the punt was blocked by Brothers, Orange end. Denti, other Orange end, fell on the ball behind the goal. Arthur made the extra point which proved to be the winning margin on a place kick.

The Blue marker came on a pass. With the ball on the fifty yard line George Moore took a fifteen yard pass and dashed the rest of the way down the field for the score with about

UNIVERSITY MEN SPEAK TO STATE EDUCATION GROUP

President Graham Commended By Resolution; Metzenthin to Head Germanic Group.

Faculty members of five departments of the University were speakers at the annual convention of the North Carolina Education Association which met in Raleigh this week. The association passed several resolutions one of which stated: "We commend President Frank P. Graham of the Greater University for his patriotic stand in behalf of public education."

In the higher education meeting Dr. Francis F. Bradshaw, dean of students, spoke. Dr. H. R. Huse was principal speaker at the modern language meeting, and Dr. Harold S. Dyer addressed an assemblage of music teachers.

Dr. Harry Russell and G. F. Horner addressed the English representatives.

In the modern languages division Dr. Sturgie E. Leavitt spoke on Spanish and Spanish-American bibliography at the University. Dr. J. C. Lyons spoke on certain phases of the contemporary French novel. Dr. S. A. Stoudemire was elected chairman of the Spanish section of the association.

Metzenthin Heads German

Professor E. C. Metzenthin of the University German department was elected president of the Germanic section of the North Carolina Education Association. Two members of the German department here attended and read papers. Professor Metzenthin's contribution was "Excursions Into the Field of Unsolved Linguistic Problems," and Dr. Meno Spann presented a paper "Problems in the Teaching of German Literature."

Speakers from the Woman's College in Greensboro include Dr. B. Frank Kyker, L. B. Hurley, Anne Kreimeier, Chandler Shaw, Marie B. Denneen, Alice Abbott, Christine White, Dr. A. P. Kopard, and Rebecca Wall.

Pharmacy Dance

Jelly Leftwich Will Play for Dance April 7 in Bynum Gymnasium

Bynum Gym, scene of most of the better dances of the year, will be the scene for the annual Pharmacy School dance which will take place Friday, April 7. Jelly Leftwich and his orchestra from Duke University will supply the music. Although most of the bids will be given to pharmacy students, there will also be a limited number given to outsiders.

The committee which has charge of all arrangements for the dance is as follows: C. S. Curry, W. G. Dudley, W. H. Hauser, and R. S. Bunn.

in the educational phase of his profession. He was for many years director of the Lowthorpe School of Landscape Architecture in Groton, Mass., his birthplace.

At present Sturtevant is instructing at the Cambridge School of Landscape Architecture and at Simmons College in Boston, as well as giving a series of lectures for the Massachusetts University extension department. He is also secretary and editor for the American Iris Society and member of several other horticultural associations.

World News Bulletins

Secretary Demands Support
Secretary Wallace said yesterday that nothing less than the Roosevelt Farm Relief measure would suffice to meet the present situation. He further stated that as congress had already given this power with banks it should now do so to meet the agricultural emergency.

Labor Head Hits Measure
President William Green of the American Federation of Labor is offering vigorous opposition to President Roosevelt's reforestation bill which provides employment at one dollar per day.

Bank Merger Considered
Yesterday there was presented for consideration of the stockholders and directors of North Carolina industrial bankers a proposal for a gigantic merger. Hood stated that plans for such a merger were now being formulated.

Reynolds Case Opens
The circuit court of Baltimore has before it a case to decide the validity of the marriage of Smith Reynolds and Libby Holman, of the divorce from Anne Cannon, and of the status of the claims of the son of Libby Holman.

Jews Blamed
Hitler took over dictatorial powers and began dealing with the Jews, who are held by the Nazis to be responsible for the present distressing condition in Germany. A German dispatch yesterday suggested that they would be exiled from the palatinate.

Settlement of Liquor Problem
In reply to a request for co-operation in settling the liquor problem on the part of the Crusaders, an anti-prohibition organization brought retort from the W. C. T. U. that such co-operation was impossible while other prohibition groups indicated their willingness to co-operate.

LIBRARY GROUP TO DISCUSS FINANCES

Biennial Meeting of Library Association Will Convene at Woman's College in Greensboro.

The biennial meeting of the North Carolina library association, as announced by Mrs. Lillian Griggs, president, will take place at the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro May 10 and 11.

The meeting will be concerned with a discussion on the subject of a decrease in income and an increase in demand for books in the maintenance of library service. Dr. Frank Graham will be among the many well known persons to address the meeting.

Mrs. May Lamberton Becker, a member of the editorial staff of the Saturday Review of Literature and the New York Herald Tribune "Books," will be the speaker for the dinner meeting May 11.

Mrs. Griggs also announced that sections of the association will hold their meetings the mornings of May 11. Several interesting programs have been arranged for these groups.

Oral Examination
The final oral examination of Miss Mathilde M. Parlette for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in the department of English will be conducted Friday, March 31, at 2:00 P.M., in Saunders 212. All the members of the graduate faculty of the division of languages and literature are invited to be present.

Poems Of Carolina Negro Among Early Works Of His Race

Beautiful and the True have done before and after him. His only sources of knowledge were the Bible, the contents of which he became familiar with by hearing it read, and the melodies of the Methodist hymnal, which he delighted in singing. There soon sprang up a steady demand for the output of his pen. The young Don Juans welcomed an artist who could turn out fresh and glowing acrostics on ladies' names, write heart-rending poetry of love, and formulate love letters that would have done credit to an Abeldar. Piney Prospect moved him to this bit of verse:

At length the silver queen begins to rise,
And spread her glowing mantle in the skies,
And from the smiling chambers of the east,
Invites the eye to her resplendent feast.

Those who contracted for his work never told the source of their material. A new group of poets made their appearance in the Carolina Magazine, George's customers. In fact so profitable became his business venture that he offered his owner fifty cents a day for his time. It was against the law at that time for a Negro to hire his own time, but the law was evaded by having a white man as his nominal employer.

George felt strongly about his servitude. In the poem "The Hope of Liberty" he expressed himself.

Am I sadly cast aside,
On Misfortune's rugged tide?
Will the world my pains deride
Forever?

Must I dwell in Slavery's night
And all pleasure take its flight,
Far beyond my feeble sight,
Forever?

And when transient life shall end,
Oh, may some kind eternal friend
Bid me from servitude ascend,
Forever?

A Colonial Minstrel
George's favorite scheme for raising money recalls medieval times. He would write sad verse about members of his family, then go from room to room and read these to his former patrons, closing with the words, "Lend a hand to an old, unfortunate bard." George hoped to save enough money to purchase his freedom, when he would go to Liberia. But when his restraining influence, Dr. Caldwell, then president, died, he turned to drink.

Horton continued to live near Chapel Hill until the coming of the United States cavalry in 1865, when he accompanied an army officer to Philadelphia. He developed his gift for story telling; his tales, which were modelled on old stories of the East—some of which were lifted bodily from the scriptures—were widely circulated. Somewhat on the style of the poets of the Mermaid tavern during Elizabethan days, he matched poems against one another.

Contrasted Poetry
The Pleasure of a Bachelor's Life.

O tell me not of Wedlock's charms
Nor busy Hymen's galling chain.
But rather let me fold my arms
From pleasure which will end in pain.

Pain of a Bachelor's Life.
When Adam dwelt in Eden's shade
His state was joyless there,
He there the general scene surveyed
Not true delight the world displayed
To him without the fair.

Horton's literary career was something of a paradox. He did very little work before he was forty. And unlike others whose creative powers diminish with age, his most productive period was in the decade between his sixtieth and seventieth year. He died in 1883, in Philadelphia, having reached the patriarchal age of eighty-five.

Freshman Gives New System Of Transportation

Steve Cobb of Ruffin Offers Occupants of First Floor Wheelbarrow Rides.

Stowe Cobb, freshman rooming in Ruffin, is the proud proprietor of a novel and economical transportation system confined to the first floor of his dormitory.

A wheelbarrow left by some of the buildings department's employees in front of the building has been utilized as a taxi by this young man, who possesses business foresight and inventive genius beyond his years.

Rate Reasonable

For the sum of one cent, or its equivalent: a stick of chewing gum, a penny piece of candy, or an I.O.U., Cobb will ride first floor residents to the showers, the washroom, or the dormitory store. Two persons may ride at one time for three cents for the round trip. The price of one round trip fare is two cents. "Excursions"—trips up and down the hall at break-neck speed are considerably cheaper—for the sum of five cents, one may take twelve round trips; that is, if one can endure the roughness of the journeys—for of course the taxi has no springs.

Plans Improvements
On the bleak week-end, students who did not have sufficient funds to go home, gave Cobb much business. He plans to paint the barrow with the school colors and to provide cushioned seats for its occupants if business continues to increase.

half of the Orange team on his heels. The try for extra point failed. Probably the outstanding work of the afternoon was that of the quarterbacks. Woollen, for the Blue, and Martin and Burnett, for the Orange, all punted well besides directing the teams flawlessly. Woollen also made some nice returns of punts and caught several passes for gains.

In the Blue backfield besides Moore and Woollen, Thompson and McCahren were outstanding, the latter doing some fine work backing up the line on defense. The passing and running of Jackson and the line smashing and defensive work of Snyder, were best in the Orange backfield.

Barclay, guard, Moore, end, Daniels, tackle, and Kanner, center, all starred in the Orange line, while Joyce, guard, Evins, tackle, and Yoder, center were best in the Blue line.

Her interpretations in The Wives of Henry VIII were the result of a long study on her part of the personalities and modes of that age, and she performs them in costumes copied from paintings by Holbein. STUDENTS MAKE ROWDY PROTEST TO DANCE RULE

Iowa Students Answer Expulsions For Dancing With Eggs And Oranges.

Students of Simpson College at Indianola, Iowa, broke up a chapel meeting by booing shouting, firing pistols, and turned it into a turmoil by throwing eggs and oranges at the acting president, A. V. Proudfoot.

Proudfoot had called the meeting to explain and defend his action in expelling six students for dancing in one of the college buildings. The six hundred youths and co-eds listened quietly for a few minutes while their president addressed them; suddenly they arose in protest, raising placards condemning the expulsions, shouting, and firing pistols at the ceiling.

The president pleaded for silence, and to his query of "Is there nothing that can be done to quiet this student body?" a shower of eggs and oranges went hurtling toward the platform. The president was struck by none of the missiles, but they splattered all around him. The meeting then broke up in disorder.

EPSILON PHI DELTA WILL MEET TUESDAY

Epsilon Phi Delta, the Cosmopolitan club, will meet Tuesday night at 8:15 in Graham Memorial. Dr. E. C. Metzenthin will address the group on the present political situation in Germany.

As one of the objects of the organization is a better understanding of international problems to stimulate better relations between native American and foreign students, all members are urged to be present and to be prepared to participate in the discussion.

Music Group to Meet

Phi Mu Alpha, honorary music fraternity, will conduct its regular weekly meeting in Hill Music hall at 9:30 o'clock tonight.

MOVIE BILL FOR WEEK OPENED BY RONALD COLEMAN

Joan Crawford Will Offer Her Version of "Rain" at Carolina Wednesday.

Ronald Coleman, star of a long line of screen successes, opens the week's bill of attractions at the Carolina theatre tomorrow with "Cynara," his latest and, in the opinion of his friends, his best United Artists picture.

As in "Arrowsmith," his last movie, Coleman trods on new ground, this being one of his first efforts in urbanity and sophistication. He is supported by Kay Francis and a new comer to the motion pictures, Phyllis Barry, a young English girl who has never before appeared in Hollywood pictures. King Vidor was the director for the work.

Dimpled knees play a part in the attraction Tuesday and it is Mary Brian displaying them in "Girl Missing." Miss Brian, in the role of a cheerful little gold-digger, is supported by Ben Lyon.

Joan Crawford's Rain
Joan Crawford comes to the Carolina Wednesday in her version of "Rain," the stormy, romantic drama based on W. Somerset Maugham's story. Walter Huston, William Gargan, Guy Kibbee, and Walter Catlett are members of the supporting cast.

Kay Francis makes her second appearance during the week at the Carolina Thursday, co-featured with George Brent in "The Keyhole," a Warner Brothers production.

Ten well known artists contributed their bits to write The Woman Accused, the Paramount-Liberty magazine story to be shown at the Carolina Friday. Rupert Hughes, Vicki Baum, Zane Grey, Vine Delmar, Irvis S. Cobb, Gertrude Atherton, J. P. McEvoy, Ursula Parrott, Polan Banks and Sophie Kerr took part in the authorship; Nancy Carroll, Cary Grant, and John Halliday have parts in the cast.

A zoo, and a dangerous one, is in the final attraction on the Carolina's bill for the week. "Murders in the Zoo," is the title of the production and Charles Ruggles, Lionel Atwill, Kathleen Burke and Randolph Scott have parts in the cast.

Rates Changed

The rates for books in the Bull's Head rental library have been changed from fifteen cents for the first four days and four cents for each day over that to ten cents for the first three days and four cents for each day over-time, Miss Mary Dirnberger, proprietress, announced yesterday.

'Y' NOMINATIONS POSTPONED UNTIL MEETING TONIGHT

Disagreement on Interpretation Of Constitution Causes Adjournment of Session.

Disagreement in constitutional interpretation by the nominating committee and the organization membership of the University Y. M. C. A. caused a postponement last night of the nominations for next year.
A similar meeting to approve the committee's list of candidates and to hear nominations from the floor for the various officers will take place tonight at 7:15 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

Important business, however, was transacted last night when the assembled Y. M. C. A. members voted almost unanimously for the adoption of an entirely new constitution which was drafted by a special committee and presented at the session.
Many integral and minor changes were effected in the new articles.

Members Disagree

The assembly voted for the postponement of the nominations when the nominating committee omitted the office of vice-president the members stating that the office was understood to be filled by the candidate for president who received the second highest number of votes cast in the presidential election.
The gathered membership, however, interpreted the constitution differently, expressing that distinct nominations and balloting should be held for the office of vice-president. A completely new set of candidates by the committee was recommended for tonight's meeting.

Changes in the constitution were mostly grammatical, but

PLANS FOR TENTH DRAMA FESTIVAL RELEASED TODAY

Secretary Fussler Announces
Complete Schedule of Events
For Annual Meeting.

The complete program for the tenth annual state-wide Dramatic Festival to take place in the Playmakers theatre here Thursday, Friday, and Saturday was released yesterday by Mrs. Irene Fussler, secretary of the Carolina Dramatic Association, which is cooperating with the University extension division in sponsoring the event.

Tomorrow evening, prior to the opening of the festival proper, preliminary contests for four schools and three colleges unable to meet for elimination earlier are scheduled. The high schools playing this night are Hugh Morson of Raleigh, Southern Pines, Broughton of Raleigh, and Chas. L. Coon
High School of Wilson. Duke University, Elon College, and N. C. C. W. are the colleges engaging in competition Wednesday night. The winner will meet the Catawba-Lenoir
Rhine winner Saturday night.
The program commences at 6:30 and there will be a small admission charge.

Medford Reports

More Than 340 Bad Checks Involve
$3,276.25 in Winter Quarter.

The records of William Medford, chairman of the bad check committee, show that for the winter quarter up to March 11 there were 340 bad checks written and involving a total amount of $3,276.25. Medford still has on hand several bad checks issued during the bank holiday, and these will be reported on the report for the spring quarter.

There have been a lot of checks written during the banking holiday returned, but the students are taking them up as fast as possible, and so far there has been no evidence of an attempt to defraud. Medford on the behalf of the committee expresses pleasure at the attitude of cooperation that has been taken by the students.

MANY LIBRARIANS WILL MEET HERE FOR CONFERENCE

President Graham Calls Conference
For April 7-8; Nearly a Hundred Expected to Attend.

The library conference, called by President Graham of the University to meet at Chapel Hill on April 7-8 promises to be attended by seventy-five to one hundred representatives from ten of the southern states: West Virginia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, Louisiana, and Texas.

The conference will consider the library in its relation to the other agencies of the community and in its governmental aspects, with a view to discovering how it supplements the activities of the other agencies. At the same time plans will be discussed by which present facilities can be extended. The most recent survey of libraries in the south show that two thirds of the people are without access to local public library service.

Leaders of the sessions will be Howard B. Jones, editor, National Municipal Review, New York; Wilson Gee, director Institute of Research of the Social Sciences, University of Virginia; and Harold F. Brigham, librarian, Louisville Free Public Library, Louisville, Kentucky.

Phi Initiation Takes Place In Hall Tonight

The first initiation ceremonies of the spring quarter for the Phi Assembly will take place at 7:15 o'clock tonight in New East building. All students intending to join the Phi are urged to attend the meeting.

The following bills will also be discussed: "Resolved: That the foreign policy of Japan be condemned"; "Resolved: That the method of writing in Vanity Fair issue of the Buccaneer be commended and continued in the future issues"; and "Resolved: That the present method of debating, as used in the University debates, be changed so to create more interest in college debating."

7:00 o'clock.

Spirit Of University Has Been Emblemized By Different Seals

Latin Abbreviations Translated Reveal Simple Wording Encircling Symbol on Seal.

Latin not being in daily use, much less Latin abbreviations, it is doubtful that many students have mastered the Roman short-hand encircling the University seal. Considerable conjecture as to the meaning of the symbols has been ventured, but when transcribed it is a most obvious group of words. The abbreviations stand for "Sigillum Universitatis Carolinae Septemionalis," which, literally translated, means merely "Seal of the University of North Carolina."

Even more patent is the meaning of the "Lux, Libertas" which runs across the center of the present seal. As most students have already ascertained, these words, "Light and Liberty" have long symbolized the University's attitude and approach to education.

The seal now in use is not the original one of the University. The first seal, which was selected by three men in July, 1791, at a meeting of the Board of Trustees. "They chose," says Kemp Plummer Battle in his history of the college, "the face of Apollo, the God of Eloquence, and his emblem, the rising sun, as expressive of the dawn of higher education in our State."
When the University was closed following the Civil War, this seal, along with books belonging to the office of the treasurer, was deposited with State Superintendent of Schools
McIver. Because of legal technicities, McIver had to allow suit to be brought against him

University Seals

The radiant head depicted on the University seal of the early '90's (above) is that of Apollo, god of Wisdom and of Light. It can hardly be said to be a masterful portrait of the god.

It was not long before the seal shown below was adopted, this being used in 1894-96. This was followed by the University seal which is now used, designed by Dr. Francis Kingsley Ball, then Professor of Greek in the faculty.

so that the University could regain the articles.

In the Alumni Review of January, 1933, two former University seals, with brief commen-
parently, the first seal is not included here, as there seems to be no rising sun depicted. It would appear, then, that the University of North Carolina has had at least four different emblems, viz., the first one described above by Battle, the two pictured, and the one now in use.

Cab Calloway Refuses To Play When Gate Is Crashed By Mob

Harlem Leader of Red-Hot Rhythm Band Seeks Safety in Loft of Warehouse When Angry and Drunken Crowd of Durham Negroes Attempt to Force Him to Continue.

A large amount of Carolina cash went for naught early yesterday morning when the King of Hi-de-hi-de-ho, Cab Callowway, failed to hold sway at Roycroft's warehouse in Durham as scheduled.

Calloway and his Cotton Club orchestra had been booked to furnish the rhythm for a negro dance starting at 12:01 o'clock Monday morning. A special section had been reserved for white people wishing to hear the latest interpretations of the Harlem "torch" songs and to see the newest versions of the Charleston and the Black Bottom.

The special section was rapidly filling, mostly with Carolina and Duke students and their "dates," when several hundred negroes rushed the southeast gate, overturned the ticket booth, and rushed madly to the stage where the Harlem king of Jazz was just warming up.

Gate Crashed

Some 2,000 other negroes and hundreds of whites waiting outside to purchase tickets thronged through gateways despite the efforts of ten or more policemen and attendants armed with sticks to stop the mad rush.

As the mob neared the stage,
Calloway and members of his orchestra stopped playing and began packing up their instruments. Several inebriated negroes mounted the platform and threatened dire vengeance upon Calloway and his band unless they proceeded with the brawl. Others who had been unfortunate enough to buy tickets before a less expensive way had been provided surrounded the cashier, seeking a refund. Sensing a delicate situation, policemen escorted Calloway and his orchestra to the loft, where they remained through the long hours of the night.

Appeal of No Avail

The management appealed to those who had rushed the gate to leave, declaring that the Har-lemite had refused to play until the "One-Eye" Connelly's had paid the admission price. A
and some of the more intoxicated negroes mounted the stage and put on a show of their own for the amusement of the crowd.

The Carolina and Duke students broke up several large cases and armed themselves with improvised clubs.

The crowd dispersed slowly but at 2:00 o'clock more than 1,000 were still wandering aimlessly about, some still hopefully demanding their money back. Members of the negro post of the American Legion who were sponsoring the Deficit Threatens

Drive Will Commence to Finance Open Forum Lecture Series.

With a large deficit looming in the financing of the 1933
Open Forum lecture series, members of the executive committee and a large number of students and faculty members interested in the series are making efforts this week to raise necessary obligations of the Forum for speakers' fees, advertising, and incidental expenses.

Members of the committee declared yesterday that efforts would be made to solicit back fees and collect donations previously promised by a large group who underwrote the program.

Students and faculty members desiring to aid in the drive may send cheques to Don Seawell, 329 Tenney Circle.

GEOLOGISTS WILL STUDY CAROLINA COASTAL PLAINS

Members of Department to Investigate Sumetrical Depressions on Coast for Meteoric Origin.

During the spring holidays, several members of the geology department, Dr. W. F. Prouty, Dr. G. R. MacCarthy, J. A.
Alexander, and an assistant, plan to investigate a number of symmetrical depressions or "bays" in the coastal plains of North and South Carolina. This investigation, which was scheduled for the original date of the spring holidays, is being made possible through the generosity of the Rockefeller Fund for Research in Pure Science, and will be extended as far from the starting point at Myrtle Beach as vacation time permits.

The purpose of the investigation is to ascertain, if possible, the origin of the depressions.
For this purpose the magneto-meter will be chiefly employed as it is capable of showing the presence of meteoric bodies, provided they have not undergone complete chemical disintegration. Regional geological methods will also be used in addition to the physical methods.
It is hoped that some of these depressions will yield sufficient information for the party to come to definite conclusions as to their origin. If evidence is hard to obtain near the coast, it is possible that depressions further inland may give better results.

Three Measures To Be Discussed By Di

The Di senate will discuss the following bills at the weekly meeting in New West at 7:00 o'clock tonight:

Resolved: That the Di Senate go on record as favoring that the state of North Carolina manufacture fertilizer and sell it to the farmers at cost.

Resolved: That all public utilities be owned and controlled by the federal government.

Resolved: That the best and most effective method which Congress could adopt to remove the depression and stimulate business is to inflate the currency.

Carr to Have Smoker

The series of dormitory smokers begun last quarter will be resumed this week, the first building of the list for this quarter being Carr building.

ASSOCIATION HAS VARIED BUSINESS SLATE SCHEDULED

Nominations for Offices Will Probably Be Major Part Of Group Affairs.

A heavy and varied slate of business will be taken up by members of the Woman's Association of the University when that group gathers for the spring quarter meeting in Graham Memorial at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon.

Probably the chief item of business to be considered will be nominations for officers of the association during the coming year. The nominating committee will make its report while other nominations will be made from the floor.

Candidates for president, vice-president, secretary, and treasurer of the association and for house-president of Spencer hall and president of the Woman's Athletic council will be nominated at this time. Elections will take place April 5.

Dance to Be Considered

The quarter's co-ed dance will also be considered at the meeting and arrangements made for it.

The alumnae committee, appointed to investigate the possibility of setting up an active alumnae association for women graduates of the University, will report this afternoon and its findings will be considered.

Another item expected to create interest at the meeting is the report of the dramatics committee. At the last meeting the committee was appointed to make tentative plans for a varsity show to be sponsored by the Woman's group in interest of a loan fund for undergraduate women. Plans for such an enterprise will be considered this afternoon.

ANNUAL WESTERN TOUR BY PLAYERS IS WELL RECEIVED

Walter Spearman, Charlotte
"News" Critic, Favorably Reports Playmaker Offering.

Returning from their annual spring tour through Elon, Charlotte, Ellerbe, and Campbell's College, the Playmakers report thoroughly satisfactory receptions from a total audience of 2,000 drama patrons.

Playing at the Queens-Chicora College in Charlotte Thursday night, they were praised by Walter Spearman in the Charlotte News for "a program of three one-act plays which in variety, literary quality, and acting maintained a high dramatic level."

Fitz-Simons Honored

Foster Fitz-Simons, playing in his own Four On A Heath and in Davy Crockett, was given the honors of the evening by Spearman. "Sharing honors with him were Marion Tatum as Mary Crockett, whose emotional restraint was so perfectly handled that it held the audience tense; Betty Barnett as old Martha and Robert Proctor as Uncle Dick, whose characterizations of aged mountaineers were authentic and thoroughly convincing; and Eugenia Rawls as Kate, the charming and coquettish niece of the tavern-keeper."

Nothing to Lose, Everything to Gain

With the hardest part of the battle still ahead of it the much mutilated Bowie-Cherry substitute appropriation bill enters the docket of the Senate this morning, and with it the last hope of the University for a larger allotment. When the House suddenly hit a more subdued mood last Thursday afternoon and raised the greater University appropriation to $760,000, it seemed that at last a definite compromise had been reached between the administration and the opposition and that further raises were beyond all hope. Only the most optimistic of the University's defenders dared dream but what the Senate would pass the educational section without a murmur.

But the action of the Senate investigating committee in making no recommendation to that body on this section of the bill is good indication that the administration has no intention of letting the matter drop without further fight. For the past few weeks the University has been as a drowning man, grasping at every straw with its life in the balance. The House has renounced, to all purposes and intents, the Bowie-Cherry forces and refused to sentence its institution of higher learning to an unnatural death. Yet even so, they have given it but the meagerest plot of land on which to stand during the flood. Should the state's resources fail, as will probably happen, to measure up to expectations and the appropriations are given a percentage cut, the University will have little to cut from.

The University has always been ready to assume its share of the burden, yet so great is the stake of future generations that it must and should fight for its due. Education is making its last stand. There is nothing to lose, and the world to gain.—V.C.R.

"A Gargantuan Blue-Nose Posed On the Face of Carolina"

Sinclair Lewis took several full-length novels to vent his denunciation of Babbitry, Gantryism, and kindred species of American hypocrisy, but W. J. Cash, a North Carolina newspaper man, runs the whole gamut of indignation in his article in this month's American Mercury and centers his entire tirade about his native state's foremost example of Piedmont prosperity—Charlotte, N. C. The occasion for the outburst against what he calls Charlotte's militant Toryism seems to be the repeated hostility shown to the University by one of the town's foremost citizens, the redoubtable Dave Clark.

But Mr. Cash does not stop there. In the article, "Close View of a Calvinist Lhasa," he digs up all the unwanted bones in the Queen City's family skeleton: in 1926, the formation of a Committee of One Hundred, "which had for its aims the enactment of a monkey-law and the throttling of the University's appropriations unless it agreed . . . to fire every man of any honesty from its faculty"; in 1928, the Anti-Smith Committee, bent upon convincing the public that the Pope was knocking at the White House door; in 1929, the incitement of Gastonia to the massacre of Communist strike-leaders; and finally in 1932, the Tatum petition, "which demanded that the Governor of the state forthwith expunge from the University library the works of . . . everybody who has had anything to say since 1800."

It is difficult to pass judgment on Mr. Cash's assertions concerning all that is undesirable in Charlotte, for it must be admitted that he has had ample opportunity to gain first hand knowledge of whatever religious bigotry and economic stupidity may exist there. Not only was he born near Charlotte (in Lincolnton, N. C.), but he worked for a number of years on the Charlotte Daily News, on the experiences of which background he seems to have based his conclusions.

Though it is still to be hoped that Mr. Cash has confused the part, as exemplified by Clark, Tatum and Co., with the whole of Charlotte, one thing is certain. The Queen City has had quite a shameful history of reactionarism and one which will require years to live down. Whether the rest of its picture is as dark as Mr. Cash paints it, will have to be left to its conscience and what he calls its "dour Presbyterian God."—A.T.D.

With Contemporaries

Elder Statesmen

In a significant address recently at the Alumni Day luncheon, Arthur Krock, veteran journalist, suggested the organization of a group of non-partisan leaders—Dr. Butler, according to him, being "an inevitable choice"—to aid the new Administration in carrying out budgetary reductions.

It would be the task of these leaders, according to Mr. Krock, to focus the country's attention upon the dilatory tactics of Congress "and unhesitatingly and publicly denounce . . . all evidences of snipping or legislative delaying. . . ." By the use of such a club, the speaker declared, our legislative body could be compelled to swallow such an ugly dose as slashing veterans' expenditures.

The Treasury of the United States today faces a deficit of approximately two billions of dollars in the fiscal year ending June 30. Veterans' appropriations totalling about $900,000,000 have not been reduced appreciably because a vacillating Congress, fearing the powerful veterans' lobbies, has refused to tread upon dangerous soil. Mr. Krock's idea is intriguing. It would mean setting up a group of Elder Statesmen, as in Japan, to chastise and urge reform where necessary. We cannot conceive of a group of men like Dr. Butler, ex-Governor Alfred E. Smith, or Owen D. Young pursuing the same timid course as the majority of our Congressmen and Senators have been following.

Yet, the sharp attack leveled against the veterans' lobbies has obscured the activities of another one, almost equally as expensive and far more perilous. There has been little or no reduction as yet in the appropriation for national defense, which, according to Secretary Mills, is about $635,000,000.

Our military men have been buzzing around Congress with harum-scarum tales about our pitifully small army and navy. General MacArthur, for example, pointed out recently that our army was eighteenth among the armies of the world. His statistics were effectively bombarded by Representative Ross Collins, who demonstrated that the army was not the innocent babe which General MacArthur had depicted.

Besides eliminating the swollen appropriations for our ex-servicemen, an even more stringent curtailment of appropriations for national defense should be adopted. Useless army posts, especially in the state of Senator Gerald P. Nye, should be razed. The expensive manoeuvres of our fleet in Pacific waters, upon which Japan casts a fishy eye, should be eliminated. Our cruiser program should be diminished.

The money thus saved should be used for constructive purposes, the most important of which would be for unemployment relief. The Federal government should inaugurate a system of national unemployment insurance, which shall not be dependent upon the enlightened despotism of our industrial leaders, in whom Walter Lippmann has such an abundant faith.

Unless such retrenchment is adopted, the new Administration will be a failure. Calvin Coolidge was called a lucky man because he retired before the storm. Someday, Herbert Hoover may be called even more blessed by the Parcae for having been thrown out before the storm actually began.—Columbia Spectator.

A professor at Georgia Tech recently gave a test to one of his classes to determine how accurately a man's character and occupation may be judged by seeing his picture. He used pictures of Lewis Lawes, warden at Sing Sing prison; Walter Lippmann, editorial writer; Sinclair Lewis, novelist, H. L. Mencken, critic. They were identified as follows: Lewis Lawes: banker, politician, statesman, doctor, factory worker, aviator. Walter Lippmann: lawyer, gangster, plumber, governor, preacher, musician. Sinclair Lewis: carpenter, murderer, explorer, gangster, radio announcer, insurance agent, astronomer. H. L. Mencken: butcher, beer baron, mill worker, gambler, detective, traveling salesman, gangster, and bootlegger.—Technician (N. S. F. A.).

Crisis vs. Deluge

A twelve o'clock graduate English class was soberly absorbing the intricacies of restoration drama yesterday afternoon when the professor, expounding proficely on his subject, was summoned from the room to answer the telephone call. It was 12:30, and the hurried request to the phone seemed by way of being a crisis. The class, so an informant relates, twitched nervously in prophecy of some sort of minor catastrophe. Five minutes passed, and then the instructor entered the room, laughing. "The hot water pipe at home has busted," he announced. "Class dismissed. I'll have to go home and turn off the water connection."

Parlez-vous

This department was mildly interested in an eating house sign posted in the Y last week urging students to eat at so-and-so during the "Spring Quatre." We went back later to give the sign a more careful examination and discovered that "Quatre" had been changed to the anglicized "Quarter."

The "Quatre" business we feel sure is an outcropping of that old French influence which was responsible some years ago for the innovation of "en classe" or "on class." A studious perusal of volumes of University data residing in the library reveals that there was once a very definite trend toward the abandoning of English on this campus in favor of French. This was during the "dark days" of the University (not to be confused with 1933) when it seemed imminent that North Carolina would have to secede from Mecklenburg county (appropriations, etc.). A movement grew to abolish English as a campus tongue, and such phrases as "Avez-vous a date ce soir?" and "Donnez moi une shot of . . ." gained popularity overnight. "En classe" (there, it slipped out before we could explain that we're violently anti-French) became the conventional term for the ascent on class.

What with the war debts and all, we feel that some move should be launched to drive "on class" off the campus. Some more about that later, for we've got to go on a two o'clock class tout suite.

Some cheeks hereabouts will redden on reading W. J. Cash's "Close View of a Calvinistic Lhasa" in this month's American Mercury. . . . Cash used to write for the Charlotte News and is now free lancing . . . When asked why he didn't do something about stopping the dusky gate crashers at his dance in Durham Sunday night, Cab Calloway remarked "Boss, Ah ain't messin' with them folks. Ah knows mah own people" . . . we are suing the Buc for ten thousand dollars on account of putting Lulu in the Nominations for Oblivion section . . . will settle for six free copies and a bad cheque for five thousand dollars . . .

ODDS 'N' ENDS

Hero

Two of Carolina's gentlemen, slightly befuddled by an overconsumption of Orange county "white lightning," were back of the co-ed shack several nights ago, their purpose being to serenade one of its fair residents.

They shouted at her window for several minutes, and finally she protruded her head and told them they had better leave; but they felt too good for that, so for several minutes she was favored with their vocal efforts. Suddenly the mammoth spotlights of the shack flashed on and the boys were caught in its glare.

They ran.

The more befuddled one tripped over a stone and fell, fell hard. His companion came back to help him pick himself up, but the prostrate man bravely motioned him to continue. "Go on, pal," he said, "they've got me!"

Ads of the Month

Most fragrant: "Rain, sudden and slanting and silver, enters the garden . . . brushes the honeysuckle, fingers the roses, lingers by the jasmine . . . and passing as swiftly leaves, souvenir to the sun, a more enchanting fragrance than before."—Perfume ad in Vanity Fair.

Most foolish: "Illusion: The magician . . . saws through the center of the box and apparently through the woman. Explanation: One method of performing this illusion requires the presence of two girls in the box . . . Nobody is saved in half."—Camel's exposure series.

Idea

Power companies, textile mills, and tobacco big-shots of this state are rich—partly so because they know how to hang onto their money. When the North Carolina General Assembly meets to make taxes, these companies do not sit calmly back and hold silent prayer that their tax rate be small. No sir! They hustle down to Raleigh and ply the legislators with wine, woman, and perhaps, harmony. Well-created, the not ungrateful lawmakers may then go easy in the levying of taxes on their generous friends.

It seems to me a pity that the zealous workers for the University cause are restrained by a sense of delicacy from employing like methods. If only they could hire some of the power companies' expert lobbyists away from them, and could send them to Raleigh with sufficient funds to entertain lavishly—who knows how well off the University might be next year!

Text

One of Carolina's professors, an expert in a certain line of botany, who has written a textbook on the subject, decided to go abroad to a certain famous college in Germany to take an advanced course in his line of study.

So, last summer, he communicated with, and had himself registered at that college. When the opening day approached, he drew his money from the bank and embarked on his journey to new fields of learning.

It is easy to imagine what eagerness he awaited the first class meeting of his advanced study, but it is not so easy to imagine how he felt when he learned that the text the class was to study was the one he had written himself!

Lyon and Brian Stars In Show At Carolina

"Girl Missing," Warner Brothers production starring Ben Lyon and Mary Brian, is the feature at the Carolina theatre today. The film was directed by Robert Florey.

Others in the cast are Glenda Farrell, Guy Kibbee, Lyle Talbot, Harold Huber, Peggy Shannon, Edward Ellis, and Ferdinand Gottschalk.

Lyon is one of the few stars who have been able to make their way from the rank of extras, and he explains his success by his stage experience. He secured his first job as extra in the days when the movie industry was begging for players. Later, finding that he had no chance to rise above his first position, he deserted Hollywood for the stage.

After playing in Booth Tarkington's "Seventeen" and in "The Wonderful Thing" with Jeanne Eagles, he returned to the films. Lyon managed to get parts opposite Pola Negri and Barbara La Marr and from then on his progress has been rapid until he gained his present position.

The story of "Girl Missing" was written and adapted for the screen by Carl Erickson and Don Mullaly.

How To Avoid BONERS

A CATARACT IS A TRAINED CAT

AND still they let him live! Even after he said a refugee was a man who took charge of prize fights! There's just one thing to do—and high time somebody did it. Introduce Bill Boner to a good pipe and good tobacco. A pipe helps a man get down to straight thinking. College men know, too, that there's one smoking tobacco without a rival. That's Edgeworth.

Here's an idea: Fill your pipe with Edgeworth Smoking Tobacco and light up. Now—take a good long puff. Ever try anything like that before? Of course not, for Edgeworth is a distinctive and different blend of fine old burleys.

Buy Edgeworth anywhere in two forms—Edgeworth Ready-Rubbed and Edgeworth Plug Slice. All sizes—15¢ pocket package to pound burn-dor tin. If you'd like to try before you buy, write for a free sample packet. Address Larus & Bro. Co., 120 S. 22d St., Richmond, Va.

*A recent investigation showed Edgeworth to be the favorite smoking tobacco at 42 out of 54 leading colleges.

EDGEWORTH SMOKING TOBACCO

Tar Heels Open Season Today With Game Against W. and L.

President Graham to Open Battle by Throwing Ball From Grandstand.

LINE-UP IS DETERMINED

Yesterday's Work-out Devoted to Hard Batting Practice With Coach Hearn Pitching.

North Carolina's baseball team opens its 1933 campaign today with a conference game with Washington and Lee on Emerson field at 4:00 o'clock.

The opening day ceremonies are taking on a big league atmosphere with President Frank P. Graham scheduled to start the ball rolling by throwing out the first ball. President Graham, a star baseball player in his undergraduate days, has been an ardent supporter of the Tar Heel nine.

Yesterday's workout, the last before today's game, was devoid of the usual practice game; instead an intensive batting drill was the order of the day with no less a personage than Coach Bunn Hearn throwing them over to the hitters.

Joe Griffith, Carolina's only letterman hurler, is slated to start today's game. If so, this means that Joe will not see service in the Michigan State series Thursday and Friday, but will start against Elon in Burlington Saturday. If Griffith does not start, his place will be taken by Crouch. McCaskill will get the call behind the bat.

In the infield Dixon will start at first, Weathers at second, Phipps or Leonard at short, and Captain Willie Powell at third. Johnny Phipps, a right handed hitter, will probably get the call in the short field to balance the line-ups, which is clogged with southpaw sluggers.

Johnny Peacock and Bill Croom are certain to start in the center and left respectively, while there is some doubt as to whether Zaizer or Vick will start in right field.

The Carolina team will bat in this order: Peacock, cf; Phipps or Leonard, ss; Weathers, 2b; Dixon, 1b; McCaskill, c; Powell, 3b; Croom, lf; Zaizer or Vick, rf; and Griffith, p.

Hearn Gives Hot Practice

For a man forty-two years old, Bunn Hearn can still get a hop to his fast one, and his curve ball had the boys biting before they finally caught up with him. Bunn was giving his left handed hitters an idea of what they might expect this season from a southpaw.

Big Dixon took an awful riding from the bench when he was up taking his cuts at the ball, which all added to the length of the first sacker's drives. He was hitting them all over the lot, and is slated to start today's ball game.

Captain Willie Powell inherited the traditional No. 1 unie, which goes to the captain.

Dixon wasn't the only player taking a riding from the boys. When Joe Parker was catching, he remarked that he was straining his stomach, whereupon Coach Bo Shepard replied, "well, if you do, you can use your other sixteen."

METZENTHIN TO SPEAK TO COSMOPOLITAN CLUB

Members of Epsilon Phi Delta Cosmopolitan club will meet tonight in room 210, Graham Memorial building, to hear a discussion of the present political situation in Germany, with Professor E. C. Metzenthin. The speaker, recently elected president of the Germanic section of the North Carolina Education Association, has been in constant touch with relatives in Germany and sympathizers with existing conditions in the United States.

For the first time this season the cry of "Play Ball" will be heard in Emerson stadium today as the Tar Heels face Washington and Lee's baseball team. Also for the first time this year, a true line can be had as to whether Carolina will have a potential champion nine or "just another club." However, too much shouldn't be expected of Coach Bunn Hearn's squad. Few Carolina baseball teams of the past few years have been so inexperienced—only one seasoned hurler, two rookie infielders, and the probability of a new garden-er. It will take more than one season to make a championship club from this material. But in spite of these rather discouraging features, it is the writer's hunch that the 1933 edition will go far. For one thing, the lads are hustling all the time, and that alone will cover many, many faults. And then again, we have several money players, who are at their best when the going is toughest. Captain Willie Powell, Johnny Peacock, Bill Croom, Joe Griffith, and Verge Weathers can be depended upon in crucial spots.

It is about this time that professional baseball begins its six months' heyday, where all other sport news is surpassed by the national game, and so too begins the Roman holiday of the rookie, but alas, that usually terminates within a month, or two at the most. Every March and April dreams are written in the daily newspapers about the young country boy who is sure to out-Ruth the Babe; make fans forget the memory of Christy Mathewson and the Big Train; make them forget there ever was a Hal Chase, or Joe Jackson, or Ty Cobb, or Tris Speaker. But when June and July rolls around these youngsters, their enthusiasm dampened somewhat, are either "riding the Pines" or burning up a Class B. league. Well, that's baseball, and it's this same keen competition that has placed the game on the high standard it has today.

Here and There

Spurgeon Chandler, former University of Georgia baseball and football star, seems to have a pitching berth cinched with the minor league champion Newark Bears. . . . Albie Booth, Yale's concentrated T.N.T., has been granted the franchise of the New Haven team in the Eastern League. Albie is following the footsteps of another Eli luminary, Bruce Caldwell. . . . There's a strong rumor current that John McGraw will oust Lew Fonseca as pilot of the Chicago White Sox. . . . Everybody in the "know" says that Don Hurst's departure for California and Hollywood from the Phillies' camp was meant for the benefit of club officials. This Hurst boy is no Adonis and hasn't a chance of breaking into Hollywood circles. . . . John B. McNaughton, veteran 155 and 165 pounder, has been elected captain of Navy's boxing team. . . . Yale is the favorite to take the intercollegiate swimming laurels from Northwestern, with Rutgers regarded as the dark horse.

Contrary to custom, the club will conduct an open meeting. German language and history students are welcomed. The meeting is scheduled for 7:30 o'clock.

VARSITY TENNIS SQUAD CONTINUES DAILY PRACTICE

Individual Challenges Being Played To Establish Ranking for Spring; To Meet Duke Next Week.

The varsity tennis squad is continuing to carry on its much needed daily practice. The entire squad is working to get into shape for the Carolina-Duke mass tennis meet to be played next week. Challenge matches are being played daily among the players to establish a spring ranking.

Most of the boys are still in need of good deal of priming before their first meet. Walter Levitan lost a closely contested match to Dave Morgan, 6-2, 7-5. Morgan will retain his position of No. 5 on the squad.

Lawrence Jones won his place among the first ten in defeating John McGlinn yesterday, 6-2, 6-4. He replaced McGlinn who was in tenth on the list.

The same doubles teams are working out as usual with Hines and Wright as one, Harris and Levitan, Morgan and Shuford, and Dillard and Willis as the others.

TWELVE BOXERS REPORT FOR FIRST SPRING PRACTICE

Intramural Boxing Tournament Work-outs Take Place at 4:00 O'clock Every Afternoon.

Coach Crayton Rowe, assisted by freshman coach Allen, sent the Carolina boxers through their first workout of the annual spring practice yesterday afternoon in the Tin Can.

Twelve boxers reported during the afternoon. The varsity men working out were Norment Quarles, conference featherweight title-holder, Pete Ivey, Cliff Glover, and Nat Lumpkin. Several freshmen also reported as did a few men getting an early start for the intramural tourney. Sam Giddins came down during the afternoon but will not start working until today. Last season's captain, Marty Levinson, was also down watching his old teammates go through their paces. Captain-elect Platt Landis will not be able to practice until after April 8, as he is working out with the football team.

Champion Quarles is in excellent shape as he has been working since the end of last season. The blonde lightweight took a long workout, however, and was one of the last boxers to leave the Can. Lumpkin is also in good shape, having boxed with Quarles for the past few weeks. Lumpkin went into the ring for a couple of short rounds with Hornaday, a freshman. These boys were the only ones that boxed during the afternoon.

Practice will take place every afternoon in the Tin Can starting at 4:00 o'clock. The practice will last about three weeks, ending with the annual spring intramural tourney. All those expecting to enter the intramural tournament should start work at once. None of the boxers that were on the freshman or varsity teams will be eligible to fight.

Varsity Ball Men

All varsity baseball men are again reminded that they must sign the conference eligibility slips before game time this afternoon if they are to play against Washington and Lee. The slips are in Dean A. W. Hobbs' office in the South building and can be filled out this morning.

BETA INTRAMURAL CLUB GETS CLOSE TILT OVER T. E. P.

A. T. O. Tallies in Last Inning To Defeat Delta Kappa Epsilon by Score of 9 to 8.

Two close games and two free-scoring setos developed yesterday as the second week of the intramural baseball season got under way. Beta Theta Pi downed T. E. P., 4-2, and A. T. O. tallied in the last frame to beat Delta Kappa Epsilon, 9-8. Pi Kappa Alpha downed Phi Kappa Sigma, 17-9, and Swain Hall crushed Manly, 21-8.

Joe Wilson, Beta pitcher, held the T. E. P. nine throughout the game except for the sixth inning when Gross and Sovitsky crossed the plate. Beta scored once in each of the first three innings and again in the fifth. Bob Barnett was the leading batter for the winners, crashing a homerun with the bases empty in the third inning as well as bringing home another run. Barnett's fielding was sensational, as was that of Henry Anderson. For the T. E. P.'s Kanner pitched well while Sovitsky, the catcher played a stellar game.

Score by innings:
Beta Theta Pi.....111 010 0-4
Tau Epsilon Phi.....000 002 0-2

Dekes Bow

Alpha Tau Omega scored a run in the seventh inning to break an 8-8 deadlock and defeat Delta Kappa Epsilon, 9-8. After the Dekes had taken a one-run lead in the opening frame, A. T. O. came back with four tallies in the second. The Dekes tied it up at 6-6 in the fifth, and each outfit counted twice in the sixth. Unable to score in the last round, the Dekes dropped the decision.

Alan Smith, for the winners, and Hanes Lassiter, for the losers, drove out four-base blows. Stimpson also excelled at the bat for the winners. The outstanding fielders were Basil Hall, of the losers, and Alan Smith.

Score by innings:
D. K. E.102 032 0-8
A. T. O.040 022 1-9

Swain Hall Wins

Scoring twelve times in the second inning, Swain Hall downed Manly, 21-8, in a loosely played contest. Gillie, Funderburke, Beale, and Harrington crossed the plate thrice each for the winners, while Katz and Kessleman, with two tallies each, stood out for the losers.

The game was the first defeat for Manly and the first win for Swain Hall in the current season.

Score by innings:
Swain Hall.....1120 320 3-21
Manly.....1 30 004 0-8

Pikas Down Phi Kaps

Pi Kappa Alpha gained its first win of the season as it scored in every inning of an abbreviated contest to down Phi Kappa Sigma in the latter's initial contest, 17-9. Fawcette crossed the plate four times for the victors, while Clarke and Rhodes added three each to the total.

Score by innings:
Phi Kappa Sigma.....130 23-9
Pi Kappa Alpha.....145 7x-17
Best House and Theta Kappa Nu won from Steele and Delta Psi on forfeits when the latter teams failed to appear for their scheduled contests.

TENNIS SCORES

Everett, last year's dormitory league champion and runner-up for the campus championship net honors, suffered its first defeat of the season yesterday, losing to the Atlantics, an independent outfit, 3-0. In the singles Jack Watson defeated Kasen, 5-4, 5-0, and Fire Fiore won

FROSH TRIUMPH OVER DURHAM HI IN TENNIS MEET

Freshmen Hold High School Team to No Score; Next Match in Duke-Carolina Meet.

The Carolina freshman tennis team opened its season yesterday afternoon by drubbing the Durham High School combination 7 to 0. Bernie Friedman won his match from the Durham player, Ted Collins, 6-0, 6-2.

Hunter Lott encountered very little competition in downing his opponent Nick Ashby, 6-3, 6-3. Bearo of Durham dropped his match to Jimmy Johnston, 6-4, 6-3.

Sloan of Durham was the victim of Sid Sobol of Carolina by the scores of 6-0, 6-2. Mark Lynch played a fine game in trimming Joe Levine, 6-2, 6-1.

The first doubles tilt was won by Baukney and Primrose of Carolina from Collins and Ashby, 7-5, 6-0. The other doubles affair was settled by Taylor and Williams of Carolina over Beard and Sloan, 6-3, 6-4.

FETZER PREPARES TEAM FOR MEET

Georgetown University Track Team to Compete With Tar Heels Here April 8.

With their first meet a little more than a week off, the Carolina track artists are working hard and long in an effort to uphold their enviable record in dual meet competition.

The first meet is with Georgetown University here April 8 which will be an informal contest. The northerners are putting in a little spring training in the south and sought Carolina as fair grade competition. Coach Bob Fetzer is waiving no time whipping his men in shape. He walks around Emerson field with his starting pistol, sending sprinters on their way and with the same little weapon holding up baseball men to direct them as to track traffic rules.

Due to the fact that the Carolina-Washington and Lee baseball game will be going on the latter part of the afternoon, Coach Bob is anxious to have all the track squad out early so as to get his work in before the game starts.

from Kalb, 5-4, 5-4. Watson and Fiore paired to down Kasen and Kalb, 5-4, 5-4, in the doubles.

Grimes forged ahead in the dormitory circuit, marking up its third win in as many starts, this time at the expense of Old East, 3-0. Onasch won from Allred, 5-2, 5-0, and Morrison defeated Stadium, 5-0, 5-3, in singles, and the doubles match went to Grimes by default.

Sigma Chi took a 2-1 decision from Chi Phi as the latter suffered its first setback of the current season. Hailer defeated Wilkinson, of Chi Phi, 5-3, 4-5, 5-4, and Hudson, of Chi Phi, won from Peacock, 5-3, 2-5, 5-3 in singles. In the deciding doubles match Hailer and Peacock beat Wilkinson and Hudson, 5-1, 5-3.

Carr inaugurated its net campaign with a 2-1 victory over Aycock. Carr took both singles matches, Bailey beating Cortland, 5-2, 5-3, and Markham beating Rosenstrauch, 5-1, 5-4, but Aycock won the doubles as Cortland and Rosenstrauch won from Bailey and Markham by forfeit.

Zeta Psi scored over Phi Kappa Sigma and Sigma Phi Sigma won from Kappa Sigma on forfeits.

No intramural games will be contested in either baseball or tennis today on account of the Washington-Lee vs. Carolina varsity baseball game.

TENNIS TOURNAMENT WITH DUKE WILL BEGIN NEXT WEEK

Over Two Hundred Entries Expected to Compete From Each School.

The University is expecting to have 200 entries in the mass tennis tournament with Duke which will start simultaneously on the courts at Carolina and Duke next Monday.

The meet, which is believed to be the largest and longest athletic contest on record between two universities, is in charge of John Kenfield, Carolina tennis coach, and K. C. Gerard, Duke director of intramural athletics. The Durham Herald-Sun papers are donating a trophy to the institution winning the most matches.

Coach Kenfield said he had slightly more than 100 entries from Carolina students yesterday, and with the intramural athletics department announcing that it will give credit for students and teams participating and winning their matches, Carolina should easily match the 200 entries Duke expects to have.

All students, undergraduate and graduate, and including freshman and varsity players, are eligible. The number one and all other odd matches will be played here; the number two and all other even matches will go to Duke.

The number one match will be played here Monday afternoon probably at 3:00 o'clock and is attracting especial attention since it will match Wilmer Hines and Merrimon Cunningham, probably the two most outstanding college players in the south this year.

Hines is Carolina's number one player this year and a former national junior champion. Cunningham is a graduate student at Duke but is ranked above the Blue Devil varsity netters since winning the state tournament at Raleigh last year. He is a Rhodes scholar-elect and took his undergraduate work at Vanderbilt.

Tennis Practice Early

Coach J. F. Kenfield is anxious to have all members of the varsity and freshman tennis squads work out this afternoon earlier than usual so as not to interfere with the Carolina-Washington and Lee baseball game. Coach Kenfield will be on the courts from 2:00 o'clock on.

SENATE'S ACTION AND NEGRO CASE CREATE INTEREST

Senate Will Discuss School Appropriations Bill; Negro Entrance Fight Continues.

Students and faculty members of the University will be viewing two things happening out in the state today with a great deal of interest. Both of these matters are connected with this institution.

In Raleigh this morning the Senate will enter its eighty-fourth day of the present session with consideration of the appropriations bill which is on the special calendar. Included in this, of course, is the biennial grant for the University which only a week ago created a storm in the House.

The House passed a yearly grant of approximately $390,000 for the University, and that is how it will be reported in the Senate this morning, although the body's appropriation committee raised every other cut made by the house to nearly the same as originally reported by the joint appropriations group.

Negro's Case

In Durham today attorneys for Thomas Hocutt and for the University will present arguments in the mandamus hearing against Dr. Thomas J. Wilson, Jr., University registrar, to show cause why Hocutt, negro, should not be admitted into the University school of pharmacy.

Testimony was presented before Judge M. V. Barnhill in the Durham county superior court Saturday, in which Dr. Wilson brought out that the negro did not present sufficient credits for admission.

The case is seen to be carried on as a test case by a younger group of negroes with the view of trying to get the state to provide facilities for training in pharmacy for the race.

'Yackety Yack' Staff Will Gather Today

There will be a meeting of the Yackety Yack staff at 2:00 o'clock this afternoon in the offices of the publication. This meeting is of vital interest to staff members, and no member is to be absent unless excused.

The following are asked to be present: Alexander, Steinreich, Andrews, Pitt, Drane, Woerner, Long, Howard Manning, Webb, Pool, Anderson, Binder, Craige, Debardeleben, Eagles, Elmore, Fawcett, McLeod, Maupin, Mickle, Devane, Sprunt, and Worth.

JOHN SCOTT REPORTED BETTER BY OFFICIALS

John Scott, instructor in the University English department, who became suddenly ill last week and was taken to the Watts hospital in Durham, was yesterday reported as resting comfortably. Physicians believe that he is on his way to recovery, although no specific diagnosis of the case has been made as yet.

Passbooks Necessary Today

The business office announced yesterday that the athletic passbooks would be given out all day today, in the business offices in the South building. The athletic department stated that all students would have to present their books in order to gain admission to the Carolina-Washington and Lee baseball game.

Gift for Campus

The eighteen small white oak trees which were planted on various parts of the campus last week were the gift of Dr. and Mrs. E. P. MacClainroch.

Dry Forces Mobilize

The dry forces will be at Raleigh in strength this afternoon for a hearing before a senate judiciary committee on the Francis bill to legalize beer in North Carolina. The Francis bill would legalize beer and wines of the same alcoholic content as the beverages already legalized by the federal government. A state tax of $2 per barrel would be levied.

Japan Withdraws From League

Japan's formal notification of withdrawal from the League of Nations was communicated yesterday to the league secretariat. The state department at Washington yesterday refused to comment on the withdrawal, describing the matter as one between the Japanese government and the League.

France Favors Economic Meet

Simultaneously, the English and French views on economics, which the Roosevelt administration considers is closely linked with European debts, were presented yesterday to the president and his secretary of state at Washington.

included several important additions. Two members were added to the board of directors under the new articles and terms of office lengthened to three years. Membership to the association was to include students attending three meetings of the association or the councils per quarter instead of six per academic year. The preamble and the articles relating to principles and objections were shortened and made clearer. Other minor changes were also included.

The two additional members to the board of directors as nominated by the board are Dr. E. L. Mackie and Coach R. L. Fetter. Professor A. C. McIntosh was nominated by that group to succeed the late Dr. E. C. Branson.

dance, unable to distinguish those who had paid from those who had rushed the gate, refused to refund any admissions. Shortly after 2:00 o'clock, the money collected from the tickets sold was smuggled out under the coat of a policeman.

Not to be balked, several of the disappointed protested by phone to police and city officials. Calls were put in for City Manager R. W. Flack, Chief George Proctor, Clerk of Superior Court W. H. Young, and Chief Detective W. E. Burgess. The police promised an investigation.

Mob Becomes Destructive

Unable to obtain satisfaction, the mob proceeded to give vent to its fury by breaking out lights and windows, tearing down the cloth decorations and the stage, and appropriating the orchestra seats. One defender of law and order reported later that he found a part of the stage on one of the main streets.

At 2:30 o'clock more than 500 were still pacing the warehouse floor. The police attempted to disperse them by turning off the lights but to no avail. An hour later the floor was finally cleared of the last protesting victim, but Calloway remained in the loft for some time. It is reported that while the Harlem king was held at bay in the loft, he added several new shakes and twitches to the contortions for which he is famous as an orchestra leader.

FACULTY COMMITTEE PUNISHES FRESHMEN

Through violation of the honor system during the winter quarter examinations, one freshman was deprived of credit in one course and five freshmen were deprived of credit for all courses during the quarter, according to the report of Professor C. Spearman describes Four On A Heath as "the most interesting piece of experimental drama attempted by the Playmakers," declaring that the make-up, lighting, acting, and lines have been skillfully synchronized to produce the highest effect. Davy Crockett is commended for the fresh and vital humanity of a heroic drama of the common people.

Management Announces Change in Arrangements

The announcements that deal with activities around Graham Memorial have been made by the management.

The individual bowling and ping-pong tournaments that have been planned for the students will not be run off until after the spring holidays.

A new policy is now in force in the bowling alley: any person making a score of 175 or over will be given a free game, or will not be required to pay for the game in which the 175 pins was scored.

At 7:30 comes the final contest in production of original plays from community organizations: The Voice of the People, by Walter Spearman of Charlotte; Judgment Comes to Daniel, by Bernice Kelly Harris of Seaboard, the Seaboard Players.

At 8:30 o'clock the senior college final productions will be given, in which the winner from the preliminary on Wednesday night, between N. C. C. W., Duke University, and Elon College, will compete against the winner from the preliminary contest between Lenoir-Rhyne and Catawba to take place Tuesday night March 28.

At 10:00 o'clock the curtain rises and falls on the grand finale with Professor F. H. Koch's announcements of all winners and President Frank Graham's presentation of awards.

R. S. STURTEVANT HEARD BY LOCAL GARDEN SOCIETY

Noted Landscape Artist Gives Advice on Planting and Arranging Gardens.

Robert Swan Sturtevant, nationally known landscape architect and authority on horticulture, lectured for the Chapel Hill garden club yesterday afternoon, and was heard by a large attendance of garden club members and others interested in landscaping.

Sturtevant, who is making a study of vegetation peculiar to certain localities, criticized the custom of southerners using foreign plants instead of native ones in landscaping. He expressed his surprise in finding the absence of yellow jessamine in the planting scheme.

Imported evergreens are not satisfactory for this climate. Sturtevant advises inexperienced gardeners to seek the advice of those of experience upon the selection of plants suitable for particular localities. Many useful suggestions as to the development of various garden areas, their backgrounds and entrances, and the selection of plants for accent were given.

Sturtevant at present is instructor at the Cambridge School of Landscape Architecture and at Simmons College in Boston as well as lecturer of a series of lectures for the Massachusetts University extension department. He is also secretary and editor for the American Iris Society and member of several other horticultural associations.

Barnhill Denies Issuance Of Writ To Durham Negro

Hocutt Gives Notice of Appeal
To State Supreme Court
After Decision.

JUDGE DECLARES NEGRO NOT ENTITLED TO ORDER

University's Argument Presented by Dennis G. Brummitt
And A. A. F. Seawell.

The application for a writ of mandamus of Thomas R. Hocutt, Durham Negro, seeking admittance into the University's school of pharmacy, was yesterday denied by Superior Court Judge M. V. Barnhill in Durham. The plaintiff gave notice of appeal to the State Supreme Court.

Hocutt, who was refused admission into the University, applied for writ of mandamus, designating Dr. Thomas J. Wilson, Jr., dean of admissions, as defendant. Dr. Wilson was required to show cause why the Negro should not be admitted.

Finds Four Facts
Judge Barnhill yesterday found four facts in the case:

1. That the Negro applied for admission into the school of pharmacy.
2. That he did not present complete evidence of his educational history as required by the regulations of admission.
3. That he was excluded solely because he was a Negro.
4. That he was not entitled to a writ of mandamus.

Judge Barnhill gave no indication in his decision as to whether Hocutt, should he have been a properly qualified candidate, would have been entitled to admission.

Following the dismissal of the case, attorneys for the Negro gave notice of appeal to the Supreme Court.

In the session yesterday Attorney-General Dennis G. Brummitt and Assistant Attorney-General A. A. F. Seawell pre-

KOCH ANNOUNCES SPRING PROGRAM OF PLAYMAKERS

Drama Group to Stage Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream" at Forest Theatre.

Plans for an extensive program of productions by the Playmakers during the spring quarter were announced yesterday by Professor F. H. Koch, among the features of which are the Forest theatre and Junior Playmaker presentations.

The Playmaker production of Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream in the Forest theatre is the greatest attraction of the season. This last public production of the year will be presented with Mendelssohn's music, directed by Lamar Stringfield, and with dancing under the direction of Phoebe Barr.

Junior Production
The Junior Playmakers will present their widely-anticipated juvenile drama, Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves, April 21 and 22. The production, to be enacted by young talent from the community, is directed by Harry Davis.

The fifth regular production of the year and the next of the Twelve Dorm Store Profits Are Surveyed

A recently completed survey shows that the twelve service rooms located in the dormitories over the campus had a total realized profit of $1,070.80 for the winter quarter, which does not include accounts receivable. The average profit for each of the service rooms was $89.24, a greatly decreased figure over that of the fall quarter.

Mainly dormitory showed the greatest profit with a total profit of $138.70, followed by Ruffin and Aycock with $120.17 and $119.01 respectively. Steele was next to low with $68.00, and Lewis, showing a profit of $67.32, was last on the list.

MRS. BEARD GIVES TALK ON PRESENT WOMAN'S STATUS

Graduates Make Plans to Institute Separate Division of Woman's Association.

Sixty graduate women of the University gathered at a dinner meeting in Graham Memorial Monday night to hear Mrs. Mary R. Beard present an address on "A Changing Intellectual Climate for Women" and to discuss recommendations for a graduate woman's association. Miss Marjorie Mendenhall presided at the meeting.

Mrs. Beard, a prominent writer and leader of woman's movements, gave an interpretation of the position of women in history. She traced their participation in the rise and fall of civilization, giving particular emphasis to their activities in American life.

She further stressed the need for women to see the University in the particular and to spend their energies in concern with the fundamentals of life.

The speaker was introduced by Mrs. Laura Weil Cone of Greensboro, trustee of the University. Miss Mary Frances Parker, president of the Woman's Association, traced the history of the organization.

Amendments Offered

Four amendments to the constitution of the Woman's Association, setting up co-ordinate graduate and undergraduate divisions for the organization, were reported by a committee investigating the position of graduate women in the University. A group of by-laws for the graduate division were also reported.

The group decided to bring the recommendations before the Woman's Association Tuesday afternoon.

Members of the investigating committee were Miss Elizabeth Head, Mrs. Annie Beam Fundenburk, and Miss Letitia Currie.

Debate Try-outs Conducted

Try-outs for the coming debate with Georgia Tech April 13 were conducted at the meeting of the debate council Monday night. However, the debaters were not decided upon, so try-outs will take place again at the next meeting, Monday night. Carolina will take the affirmative of the question: "Resolved: That Japan's foreign policy be condemned."

COMMITTEE GIVES NOMINATIONS FOR Y.M.C.A. OFFICERS

John Acee, L. H. Fountain, and W. T. Minor Were Nominated For Presidency of "Y."

The nominating committee of the Y. M. C. A., last night delivered its report on nominations for Y. M. C. A. officers for the coming year. Nominations were made jointly for president and vice-president so that the man receiving the second highest number of votes is automatically elected vice-president. The nominating committee also made its selections in this manner as it was believed by the committee that the nominees for the presidency also included the men most capable for the office of vice-president. Nominees for president are thus running for two offices rather than for only one.

The election date has been set for April 4. If four or more men run for the presidency, there will be a run-off election.

Committee's Nominations

The following are the selections of the nominating committee: for president, John Acee, Lawrence H. Fountain, and W. T. Minor, Jr.; for recording secretary, Julian D. Winslow, Lock, S. Sloop, Jr., and F. M. S. Patterson; and for treasurer, Thomas G. Nisbet and Rufus A. Pool.

For the board of directors, the following men were nominated: for 1933-35 term, Professor E. J. Woodhouse, Maryon Saunders, and A. C. McIntosh; and for the 1933-36 term, Dr. English Bagby, Dr. E. L. Mackie, and R. A. Fetzer.

Movement For Dividing Woman's Association Fails

A movement to divide the Woman's Association into graduate and undergraduate groups fell through yesterday afternoon when the members of the association, meeting at Graham Memorial, voted down four proposed amendments to the constitution of the organization.

The amendments as proposed at the gathering are as follows:

Article I: There shall be two co-ordinate divisions of the Woman's Association, the undergraduate and the graduate divisions.

Article II: The executive body of each division shall consist of six members, a president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer, and two other members elected as the respective divisions see fit.

Article III: Matters of common interest shall be decided by the two executive bodies meeting in a common council.

Current membership dues shall be administered by this common council, and at the end of the spring quarter in every year there shall be a pro rata division of remaining funds.

Article IV: The time of electing officers, of holding meetings, and the determination of particular policies shall be left to the respective divisions.

By-Laws Defeated

By-laws incorporated in four articles advanced for the proposed graduate division of the Woman's Association were also defeated by the group.

DRAMATIC GROUP FESTIVAL BEGINS HERE TOMORROW

More Than 200 Participants in Twenty-Eight Plays to Have Part in Celebration.

Twenty-eight plays from sixteen towns in North Carolina, featuring eighteen different dramatic groups, will be presented in the final tournament of the tenth annual Dramatic Festival, opening here tomorrow and continuing through Saturday, according to announcement from Mrs. Irene Fussler, secretary of the Carolina Dramatic Association which is cooperating with the University extension division in sponsoring the event.

More than 200 participants in the Festival have already made dormitory reservations. This number will be greatly enhanced by participants from nearby towns who will make the round trip from home to Chapel Hill daily.

Varied Competition

The Festival offers eleven categories of competition: play production of junior high schools, county high schools, little theatres and community organizations, junior colleges, city high schools, senior colleges, individual members, and community organizations.

The sixteen towns entered in the Festival are: Winston-Salem, Garner, Hallsboro, Paw Creek, Durham, Lenoir, Goldsboro, Wilmington, Raleigh, Asheville, Mars Hill, Charlotte, Biltmore, Buies Creek, Hickory, and Seaboard. Of this group Winston-Salem has entered three schools, competing in two categories; Biltmore Junior College of Asheville.

Over Three Hundred Make Honor Roll Last Quarter

Eighteen Members Of Staff Make Honor Roll

Eighteen members of the editorial staff of the DAILY TAR HEEL made the winter quarter honor roll which was announced yesterday. Five of these students made "A" on all courses. Staff members making all "A's" are as follows: J. F. Alexander, A. T. Dill, Milton Stoll, J. J. Sugarman, and L. S. Thompson.

SENATE FAILS TO CONSIDER GRANT FOR UNIVERSITY

Upper Division of Legislature Will Probably Reach Appropriation Measure Today.

Side-tracked to the discussion of the Francis beer bill which yesterday afternoon received the recommendation of the Senate judiciary committee by a ten to three vote despite the hot opposition offered by the dries, the Senate last night resolved from the committee of the whole to its legislative function without considering the University appropriations.

During the morning session and the early hours of the evening the Senate met as a committee and considered item by item the recommendations of the investigating committee on the House appropriations bill which it completed down to the University item listed under section four.

The University allotment, which was expected to come up last night, would have been reached had it not been for the argumentativeness of Senator Larry Moore who consistently opposed every item but two of the committee's recommendations. Senator Moore's well meant criticisms, however, met with no support from the Senate, which adopted the recommendation in every instance except the Labor item when it accepted an amendment offered by Wayne Guilford.

Senate Quiet

The Senate was in an unusually quiet mood in last night's session. After the oratorical ravings of Pete Murphy and Tam Bowie in the hectic session in the House of the bill which ended in a compromise between the administration and the opposition, the Senate discussion more nearly resembled a tea-party in which Senator Clement of Rowan served the cakes. The biggest fight of the day and the Winter List Larger by Eighteen Than Roll Announced at End of Fall Quarter.

THIRTY-THREE STUDENTS MAKE AVERAGE OF "A"

School of Liberal Arts Leads Other Divisions in Number Making Honor List.

The names of 306 University students, thirty-three of whom made a record of all "A's," were included on the honor roll for the winter quarter of this year, according to figures released yesterday by the registrar's office.

The honor roll for the past quarter was larger by eighteen than the list for the fall quarter, which showed a total of 288 students who made an average grade of "B" or better.

The junior class, with twelve members making all "A's," led the other classes in this respect, followed by the sophomore class with eight, the freshman with seven, and the senior with six.

Seniors Lead List

In the total number of members on the roll, the senior class stood at the top with eighty-seven, the other classes standing as follows: sophomore, eighty-four; juniors, seventy-one; and freshmen, sixty-four.

The list of thirty-three students making the grade of "A" on all courses follows:

F. P. Abernethy, J. F. Alexander, J. K. Barrow, Jr., W. S. Branning, M. J. Brown, N. H. DeBardeleben, K. N. Diamond, A. T. Dill, A. G. Engstrom, E. E. Eutsler, Jr., Frank Ginsberg, P. R. Hayes, W. C. Hewitt, J. E. Hunter, Erwin Jaffe, B. C. Keeney, G. J. Koch.

DAILY STAFF TO MEET TOMORROW FOR NOMINATIONS

All Members of Editorial Staff Will Convene to Nominate Candidates for Editor.

A meeting of the DAILY TAR HEEL staff has been set for tomorrow afternoon at 3:00 o'clock.

The purpose of the gathering will be to make annual nominations for editorship of the paper and all members on the staff are required to attend this gathering. Those members of the staff unable to attend must receive excuse from the editor. They will be allowed to leave written proxies for nominations or votes with him.

The meeting tomorrow is in accordance with the regular policy of the paper in making a staff nomination to the editorship. This plan last quarter received the endorsement of the student activities committee.

Other publications are planning nomination meetings during this week, though definite dates have not yet been set.

Another item that will be considered at the staff meeting tomorrow afternoon will be the annual TAR HEEL banquet which is conducted every spring.

To the Fore For the Forum

The Open Forum Discussion series, a group of lectures and discussions sponsored by five University student groups, launches a drive this week to raise sufficient funds to alleviate a large deficit accumulated during the past year. The inability of many students to meet subscriptions, frequent advertising, and incidental operating expenses have placed the cost of the series at a much higher figure than previously anticipated.

The Di Senate and the Phi Assembly have both contributed financial support to the program while the "Y" Senior Cabinet, Epsilon Phi Delta, and several other campus organizations have lent moral assistance. Numerous professors and independent students have contributed small sums to the fund, which though considerably imposing, is still far short of the necessary fund.

Balanced by opposition speakers in order to represent both sides of the questions introduced, eight lectures on Agriculture, Labor, Power, Social Relief, International Affairs and two general topics were brought to the campus and given a thorough airing. This was in accordance with the University's policy of welcoming discussions on both sides of every controversial question. If the Forum is able to solve its financial difficulties of the present year, efforts will be made to obtain a similar program for 1934. This will doubtless be forthcoming if the student body evidences the same enthusiasm of the past season in supporting this worthy endeavor.—D.C.S.

Shake Off The Leeches

Depressions are caused by forces which for the most part are beyond the control of man under our present system. The business cycle revolves and will continue to do so bringing good times and bad. The capitalistic system may well be the best, it is certainly the most palatable to human nature which is difficult to mold particularly when money and property are concerned. There are, however, certain phases of our present condition which permit of remedy and under the duration of which capitalism does not have a fair chance to operate.

There has always been in America a tendency to follow the almighty dollar in hot pursuit though honesty, business ethics, and fair play be trampled in the chase. After the Civil War corruption got off to a fine start under the Grant administration. The building up of the Fisk, Gould, Stanford, and other fortunes followed lines which are an eternal blot upon our national history. The methods of the Rockefellers and the Mellons in the monopolizing of the oil and aluminum markets are nothing of which to boast and there are numerous other examples like them.

Under Harding the American people were shown what a handy tool their government might be in the hands of the corrupt interests, but the reaction was mild. Now the "dear peepull" are suffering at the hands of the present generation of big time crooks. Many of these swindlers are going to prison but that offers small consolation to men robbed of their life savings, to aged and to widows suddenly deprived of the support provided for them, to folks without homes or food, and to the kin of suicides.

Marcus and Singer, heads of the great Bank of the United States, are serving time for their acts in that capacity. Charles Mitchell resigned from the presidency of the National City bank under peculiar circumstances. Joseph Harriman is under indictment for misuse of funds and the chief of the great Insull interests is a fugitive from justice. Stunz of the Washington Park Savings Bank shot himself with his bank a million and a half short. And North Carolina offers to swell the list of worthies our own Colonel Luke Lea.

There have always been men to whom honor is an empty word—a joke. There have always been men ready and eager to sacrifice every vestige of human decency for accumulation of wealth. But when such as these are allowed to control the nation's destiny then the millions of Americans who fought and died for freedom died in vain. When men of this calibre can use our organs of government for their own ends, plunge us into war, and make and break whom they choose, then something is rotten in our system.

It is not capitalism that is at fault. It is the bovine attitude of the American people and the disintegration of the moral fibre that claimed this nation from a wilderness. Fraud on this large scale is found in Sweden, in France, in England, but there it is so rare that the world is amazed when it occurs. In this country business honesty has become a curiosity; the only sin is getting found out.

When we can produce honest bankers and business men, when we can evolve a code of square dealing, there will be hope. When the American ceases to grovel at the feet of wealth no matter how gained and when militant public pressure and clean uncorruptible government combine to exterminate the human leeches feeding on the blood of the poor and helpless then our system can be given a fair chance and perhaps be evaluated in its true light.—J.F.A.

Tears, Cheers, Beer and Pretzels

At last. A panacea for the nation's ills has been found. Beer. Beer. Beer. We want beer. We want beer. More claims have been made for the healing and curing power of beer than were ever made for Peruna or Indian Snake Oil. It will lift the national debt, not to mention the debts of the several states. It will ease the idle hours of the laboring man. It will revive lethargic trade. It will keep us cool in summer and warm in winter. It will put honest men to work and ruin the bootlegger's business. There is nothing that it will not do, except remove corns, bunions, and warts.

Franklin D. Roosevelt promised the new deal but beer is now being credited with delivering the goods. The press, the platform, and even the movies have eulogized, idolized, and idealized suds and pretzels. The daily papers bring us stories of the numbers of men, the tons of hops and the numbers of barrels that are being employed in making beer. Milwaukee put on a gala celebration in honor of the return of King Beer. An expert in brewing announced that of all possible beers 3.2 per cent beer was the best. He painted a sunshiny picture of the proper surroundings for beer-drinking. Two recent comedies at the Carolina theatre were "What, No Beer?" and "The Fatal Glass of Beer."

Then, yesterday, the beer question was debated in the North Carolina Judiciary Committee No. 1. "Steins of foaming beer were pictures as cups of destruction and as draughts of joy that swell the streams of state revenue," the Raleigh News and Observer reports. Opposed by the W. C. T. U., the State Grange, the Baptists, and the United Dry Forces, Senators Francis and Clement, with the moral support of the North Carolina Federation of Labor, are trying to get beer for North Carolina, claiming that it will bring the state $1,500,000 in revenue and make life more bearable in many other respects.

More than a million people in North Carolina would have to drink a glass of beer a day to furnish the revenue which the would-be beer-legalizers claim, says the News and Observer, sniffingly. And no doubt, there will be a lot of tear shedding in Raleigh before the argument is ended. If North Carolina does get beer, it will probably be well diluted with salty water. Why can't we Tar Heels join in with the rest of the nation and take our beer straight, with the proper joy, hilarity, hoopla, and ballyhoo? Whether or not the beer itself will do us any good, the psychological effect of doing something rash at a time like this will help a lot.—E.C.D.

Safe for Democracy?

Little more than a decade ago, an urgent call went out to the American people to "Make the world safe for Democracy." Well meaning sages proclaimed to our youth that the time had come, once for all, when the down trodden of the world were to be delivered from the cruel hands of the haughty oppressor. The response to these calls every one knows. Thousands of our fittest youths fought and bled and died in the name of humanity and freedom, little realizing how cheaply their lives were sold.

The war was not ended before the victorious allies, forgetting, or disregarding, the cause for which they had, allegedly, been fighting, turned on their unhappy victims with terms more opprobrious than had been the rule of the most tyrannical of autocrats, and the game of oppression has gone on until it has become unbearable to the countries most vitally concerned.

The German people have decided not to lie under the yoke any longer, and peace loving and intelligent people though they be, have turned again to absolutism in government which was probably never rivaled by the Kaiser himself. The outside world looks on the spectacle and shudders as Hitler and his Nazi's assume control of affairs. It trembles more violently as Austria and Germany become one nation. The oppression of the Jews is certainly a near-sighted policy and one which will likely rebound to the hurt of the administration, but this only marks the beginning of an aggressive, new born nation, seeking to reestablish itself in the family of nations, and is not apt to be the last, nor most odious of its strokes at what it believes to be its enemies.

Europe is again seething with unrest and war clouds hang low and heavy over the distraught continent. Alliances and ententes are forming and many competent judges predict that this generation will again see the world steeped in war.

The League of Nations, a noble, but feeble barrier to future wars, is gradually crumbling and becoming ineffectual, and already, one great initial member has withdrawn—Japan.

Instead of making the world safe for Democracy, there have grown up a long series of dictatorships, as a result of the late war. Italy, which enjoyed a comparatively Democratic government before 1914, now has a most absolute and tyrannical dictator. Russia is no more free from autocratic rule now than when the Tsar presided in Petrograd. Germany and Austria bid fair to show the world a new trick in the way of absolutism, all of which shows how futile is any war in the name of humanity or democracy unless the conquering nations are willing to lead the way in equity and fair play in international affairs.—W.A.S.

Co-operative Buying

Greek organizations at various universities are making use of co-operative buying plans in an effort to reduce expenditures to conform with drastically reduced budgets. The fraternities form groups, thus pooling buying power, and by making use of collective bargaining are able to take advantage of wholesale prices on house supplies. Organizations are furnished wholesale price lists from which they make their purchases. Merchants usually evince willingness to co-operate and express their satisfaction with a buying plan by which they can make bids for business of sufficient quantity to warrant wholesale prices.

Fraternities and sororities at the University might make use of this plan. It should be a means of lowering the operating expenditures of the houses, and that is of paramount consideration right now. Lawrence merchants should not be opposed to the plan, since they must realize that Greek organizations on the Hill are hard pressed financially, and must economize at every corner. Failure to cut a bit here, reduce an expense there, and slice a dollar or so from that cost, can easily result in closing down of some houses. Already several of them have been unable to make ends meet, and have had to discontinue operation. This hurts local merchants. Meeting the emergency calls for co-operation from all concerned.—University Daily Kansan.

"RAIN" IS PICTURE AT LOCAL THEATRE TODAY

The picture showing at the Carolina theatre today is "Rain," the second filmization that has been made of the sensational story by W. Somerset Maugham. This version of the picture stars Joan Crawford with a supporting cast of Walter Huston, William Gargan, and Guy Kibbee. The first adaptation of the story, made several years ago, starred Gloria Swanson.

In this version, Miss Crawford plays the part of the lady of light, if any morals, while Huston plays the part of the preacher with intentions of reforming the derelict. Gargan has the role of the rough-and-ready sailor or sweetheart of Miss Crawford.

vile is competing in three categories, Mars Hill in two, Charlotte in two, Seaboard in two, Lenoir Rhyne in two, and Durham organizations in three.

St. Augustine College of Raleigh for Negroes is offering guest performance.

Preliminary competition begins prior to and during the program of the Festival proper, of several groups will add more glamour to the week-end event. Wednesday evening at 6:30 o'clock Wilson, Raleigh, and Southern Pines high schools will contend for the eastern championship. Friday morning Kings Mountain, Murphy, R. J. Reynolds high of Winston-Salem, and Lenoir will contend for the western championship. The two winners will compete in the Festival Friday night.

Wednesday evening Duke University, the Woman's College of the University, and Elon College are to compete in a preliminary here. The winner will meet in the Festival the opposing winner from the Lenoir Rhyne-Catawba College preliminary at Salisbury.

season-ticket series is to be given May 11-13, and will include studio productions of new plays from the playwrighting classes together with one-act plays by professionals.

To Stage German Play

The first forthcoming presentation, offered in conjunction with the German department, is a German play of the World War, Der Flieger, to be presented April 7 and 8. The play, directed by Dr. Meno Spann, will be partly in German, partly in English. Experimental productions of ten new plays from Professor Koch's playwrighting classes will follow on April 12.

The next monthly Playmaker reading will be Edmond Rostand's Cyrano de Bergerac, presented by Dr. Urban Holmes on Sunday evening, April 30. Mrs. Holmes will take the part of Roxane.

Other events on the program for the quarter will be the Playmakers Annual Capers, May 27, and the commencement performance on June 3. Try-outs for the Forest theatre presentation will be conducted Monday, April 24.

Tar Heels Defeat W. and L. Team By Score Of 5-1 To Open Conference Season

Joe Griffith Gives Only Six Hits During Game to Visiting Virginia Team.

GRAHAM PITCHES FIRST BALL TO BEGIN GAME

Carolina Nine Garners Twelve Hits From Jarrett; Phipps Smacks Home Run.

With President Frank Graham throwing out the first ball and the veteran Joe Griffith yielding but six hits, Carolina's baseball team defeated Washington and Lee 5-1 yesterday on Emerson field before a crowd of about 2,500 persons. It was a Southern Conference contest.

The Generals, fresh from a 7-2 defeat by Wake Forest, were completely outclassed by the Tar Heels. Coach Hearn's squad garnering twelve hits and playing a steady game afield, while the visitors could touch Griffith for one double and five singles, all of which were scattered, not more than one hit being allowed in an inning.

Washington and Lee threatened to score in the very first frame but a fast throw by Weathers nipped a General at the plate. Violet, the lead-off man, fanned. Cooke walked, Jarrett singled to center sending Cooke to third and taking second on the throw to nail Cooke. Fitzgerald slashed a grounder to Weathers and Cooke was thrown out at the plate ending the inning.

Tar Heels Start Slow
After wasting four hits in the first two innings, the Tar Heels broke the ice with three hits to score two runs. In this frame McCaskill belted a line drive to left field and circled the bases, but Fitzgerald retrieved the ball and stepped on third, claiming that the Carolina catcher had failed to touch the bag. In this he was supported by Umpire Kearney, and "Mac" was credited with a double instead of a homer. Johnny Peacock started this session with an infield out. Phipps singled to left and advanced to second on Weather's infield hit. Dixon fanned and McCaskill cleared the sacks with his double.

Phipps Clucks One
A home run by Johnny Phipps in the seventh climaxed a three hit flurry which netted the victors three runs and removed all doubt of victory. Croom's grounder was too hot for Cooke at third to handle and went for a hit. Hornaday walked; Griffith reached first on a fielder's choice and Dixon was permitted to run for the Tar Heel pitcher, and both Hornaday and Dixon scored when Phipps came through with his "Merriwell."

The visitors escaped a shut-out, scoring a tally in the eighth on a hit by Burrows which scored Short who had reached first via a poor throw by Captain Powell.

Johnny Phipps, with a home run and two singles out of four times at bat, led the Tar Heel hitters, being closely followed by Weathers who had two for four and Powell with two out of three times at bat. Jack Cooke was the only visitor who was able to touch Griffith for more than one hit, getting two out of three.

Briefs
In the third inning Griffith lost control momentarily and walked two batters filling the bases, but he got out of this bad spot by throwing three called strikes on Cremin. Incidentally Joe retired six General batsmen via the strike-out route.

SHIFTS MADE IN SPORTS SCHEDULE

State Tennis Tourney Moved to Duke; Several Frosh Engagements Are Put Off.

Carolina's spring holiday, extending from April 15 to April 24, will cause few changes in the University's intercollegiate athletic program, which was drawn up before the holiday was postponed.

All five varsity baseball games will be played according to schedule during the period of the vacation, but the three freshman games, two with Oak Ridge and one with Duke, will be put off until later in the season. No definite dates have been set for these games as yet.

Tennis Match to Come Off
The varsity tennis team has only one match listed, that with Davidson. This match will be played as planned. The frosh netmen have no engagements set for the period of the holiday.

The state tennis tournament, scheduled here, April 15-17, has been moved to Duke on account of the vacation here.

The state golf championships will be run off as planned on the Hope Valley course April 20 and 21. The track meet with Virginia scheduled for April 22 will probably be put off until the following Monday, April 24.

Presbyterian Supper Tonight

There will be a congregational supper at the Presbyterian church this evening at 6:30 o'clock. All members of the church are invited. Mrs. G. A. Harter is chairman of the supper committee.

Before President Graham threw the first ball to Violet, he warmed up with Johnny Phipps along the Tar Heel bench. President Graham's warm-up activities served him in good stead, for Umpire Kearney called the first ball a strike.

Short, Washington and Lee catcher, had both his thumbs swollen as souvenirs of the Wake Forest encounter, which was why Jarrett was holding the Tar Heels close to first and lessening the risk of a throw to second.

Carolina's left-handed hitters certainly had the Washington and Lee infield crossed, for no less than three drives went for safeties in the left field area in the first five innings.

TAR HEELS TAKE EASY VICTORY IN GOLF FROM W. & L.

Carolina Registers Second Consecutive Win of Season by Score of 15½ to 2½.

The Tar Heels defeated Washington and Lee 15½ to 2½ in a one-sided golf match over the wind swept Hope Valley course yesterday to register their second straight win of the season. Alan Smith was the low scorer for the day.

In the morning Carolina made a clean sweep of the singles: Alan Smith defeated Cohen of W. and L. 3 to 0; Carl Cramer smothered Mc David 3 to 0; Captain O'Brien won over Alexander 2 to 1; and Ed Michaels nosed out Willard 2 to 1. Smith's 72 was the lowest score for the morning round. He was followed by Cramer who scored 75, O'Brien who turned the course in 76, and Michaels who had a 78. The lowest score for the opposition was turned in by Mc David, a promising young player, who breezed around in 77.

Clean Up in Foursomes

The Tar Heels walked off with both of the foursome matches in the afternoon, winning each by 3 to 0. Smith and Michaels white-washed Cohen and Mc David by a decisive margin, hanging up a best-ball score of 67. Smith's individual score in his round was a 70, the lowest score of the match; Michaels turned in a 75. In the second foursome Captain O'Brien teamed with Carl Cramer to beat Alexander and Willard of Washington and Lee 3 to 0. In this foursome Captain O'Brien made the best showing, tallying a par, equalling 71. Carl Cramer was right on his heels with a 72. Cohen was the outstanding performer for W. and L. in the foursomes.

Meet Duke Monday

This marks the second straight win of the season for Coach Kenfield's boys, having beaten Richmond University last Thursday. The Tar Heels next match is with Duke on Monday at Hope Valley. This should be one of the season's closest matches as Duke beat W. and L. Monday by the same score that Carolina did.

PLANS MADE FOR BOXING TOURNEY

Practices for Intramural Race Taking Place Daily in Tin Can.

Coach Crayton Rowe is planning to conduct the annual spring intramural boxing tournament approximately the first week in May, the second week after the holidays.

Practices are taking place every afternoon in the Tin Can, starting at 4:00 o'clock, under the direction of Coaches Rowe and Allen. All those thinking about entering the tourney should come out as soon as possible so that they will be in good condition before the holidays begin.

Best House has held the championship for the past three tournaments; downing Lewis last fall 185 to 135. The individual titles will be wide open this time as none of the boxers on the freshman or varsity teams are eligible to box. Five of the eight championships in last fall's tourney were won by freshmen who have since then fought on the yearling team.

The freshman winners not eligible are Eutsler, 115 pounds; Frucht, 125 pounds; Sutton, 145 pounds; Ellisberg, 175 pounds; and Kanner, heavyweight. The three defending champions who will be eligible to fight in this tourney are Kalb, 135 pounds; Pratt, 155 pounds, and Ed-

AROUND the FIELD

By CLAIRBORN M. CARR

THE BATTLE BETWEEN JIM
Dixon and Tommy Temple over the first base job took a strange turn yesterday and when the ink dried, Dixon was the only man left. This Temple has been to a number of colleges in his day and back a while he played baseball for the University of Delaware where they have no rule against freshman playing on varsity teams. When Tommy went to sign his eligibility slip yesterday, Dean Hobbs had to ask him whether or not he had played collegiate ball elsewhere. Our little George Washington came through and admitted he had. When he came out he was raging. He ran at Jackie Taylor, baseball manager and the man supposed to act as wet nurse to the sentimental ball players, and asked, "Gees, why didn't ya' put me wise?" Despite the remorse at having one of the most colorful and amusing fights over a position end, Temple did just what he should have and his actions should help Carolina. I mean as far as our athletic books are concerned. Coach Bunn was sorry to lose the man but was glad he answered as he did.

LAMY McCASKILL IS BENT
on winning all sorts of letters this year. Duke is still talking about giving him a football sweater for his excellent work for them last November and now the Washington and Lee boys are going to recommend his name to their athletic association after yesterday's exhibition on that home run. Mac has a .500 average though, he touched home and first, which is pretty good. He might as well have run down to first and then back to home. Lamy looked good behind the bat in his first game, working Griffith well and stopping 'em all. He ought to round out to be a snappy receiver. Then too, he'll touch the bases from now on, or else?

BOTH THE WASHINGTON and Lee coaches had a nice word for the Tar Heels. Head Coach Dick Smith said that he thought Wake Forest had a more experienced club but that we looked good and should improve with (Continued on next page)

INTRAMURAL RACE CONTINUES TODAY

Six Baseball Games and Six Tennis Matches Scheduled.

After a one day lay-off on account of yesterday's baseball game with Washington and Lee, the spring program of intramural athletics will be resumed this afternoon with six baseball games and six tennis matches on the card.

Because of the baseball games with Michigan State on Emerson field tomorrow and Friday, this afternoon's contests will be the last of the week for intramural entries.

Today's games follow:
Baseball: 3:45—(1) Laundry Club vs. Ruffin, (2) Old West vs. Mangum, (3) Pi Kappa Phi vs. Phi Gamma Delta; 4:45—(1) Phi Sigma Kappa vs. Chi Phi, (2) Grimes vs. Carr, (3) Phi Alpha vs. Sigma Phi Epsilon.

Tennis 3:45—(1) New Dorms vs. Best House, (2) Steele vs. Manly, (3) D. K. E. vs. Beta Theta Pi; 4:45—(1) Theta Chi vs. Tau Epsilon Phi, (2) Kappa Alpha vs. Delta Tau Delta, (3) Zeta Beta Tau vs. Theta Kappa Nu.

wards, 165 pounds. All men coming out now, regardless of experience, will be given special instruction by the coaches and members of the boxing team.

LIST OF ENTRIES FOR BIG TOURNEY PASSES 100 MARK

Ranking of Members of University Net Delegation Expected To Be Finished Saturday.

Entries for the Duke-Carolina mass tennis carnival will now be received at the intramural office as well as on the bulletin board at the tennis courts. The number of contestants has passed one hundred, but it is the hope of Coach Kenfield to amass at least 220 players before Friday night.

The odd-ranked players will play on the courts here, and the players ranked in even numbers will travel to Duke. It is expected that the rankings will be made by Saturday. Transportation to Durham will be supplied in student automobiles.

The only entry fee required of each contestant will be a new tennis ball. There are no other entry rules other than that one must be registered in either the undergraduate or graduate school of the University.

To encourage registration, the intramural department is offering points to those organizations and players entering the meet.

Twenty-five points will be awarded to that organization with the largest number of entrants. Twenty points will be given to the group with the second greatest number of entries. Fifteen markers will be credited to the team with the third largest number, ten for the fourth, and five for the fifth.

Besides these points, two points will be awarded for each man who enters and plays in the meet. Credits will also be given toward the Grail trophy. Each individual who wins his match will be given five points, and a man who loses will be awarded one point.

Coach Kenfield has emphasized the fact that talent is not necessary when one considers entering the meet, and that Carolina should be able to match Duke man for man and more in this meet. Reports have come from the Durham campus that their total entries has long surpassed 150 players.

Late Bulletin

According to late reports last night, Joe Kirkwood took the lead at Pinehurst yesterday in the North and South Open with a 36-hole score of 135. He was followed by Craig Wood, the defending champion, who tallied 139. Other leaders were Walter Hagen, Henry Picard of Charleston, S. C., Paul Runyan, and Charles Guest.

Coach Collins sent his football squad through its usual workout yesterday afternoon, regardless of the baseball game.

The practice was taken up mainly with drilling the line in the various plays. The forward wall went through a long scrimmage with the different linesmen pulling out and blocking. The backfield remained stationary and there was no tackling done in the scrimmage. The line, however, went through a tackling drill on the dummy.

Moore Shifted to Half

Little can be told yet how the various shifts will effect the strength of next year's team. In the line the shifted men are new to their positions and will probably not show their real ability for a couple of weeks yet. George Moore, changed from fullback to right half, showed lots of stuff in last Saturday's game and will likely see action there next fall.

On paper the various shifts look like a sure thing to add strength to the team. Babe Daniels will add another big man to the important tackle position. While Jim Bryan, a small freshman tackle, who had little chance of seeing much action at that post, is willing to put everything he has into the game and may come through at center.

A practice game will be played as usual Saturday afternoon on Kenan field. Coach Collins will divide the squad into two parts and most of the squad will see action during the contest.

Horace Williams Worried By Lack Of Scholarships

Head of Philosophy Department Has Twenty Applicants Already for Kenan Awards.

Dr. Horace Williams, head of the philosophy department of the University, has long taken pride in the fact that he has helped many of his students solve their problems.

But Dr. Williams now finds himself against a stone wall on a problem he himself faces. Only two fellowships in philosophy are offered by the University graduate school each year, and to date no less than twenty candidates have applied for these two for next year.

Maybe somebody will come along and alleviate Dr. Williams' distress by establishing some more fellowships. That's about the only way he hopes to solve this problem, for he recognizes it is going to be powerfully difficult to pick two men from twenty good candidates.

The two fellowships now available were established by Mrs. Graham Kenan in memory of her husband, who was an alumnus and trustee of the University. They are supported by the income from an endowment of $25,000.

Applicants this year include students from India, Harvard, Pennsylvania, Oxford, and Virginia.

SENATE FAILS TO CONSIDER GRANT

nearest approach the session saw to any attempted flights of oratory was Larry Moore's attack against the Library Commission, which he proposed to abolish. After nearly an hour's fighting Senator Moore received not a single vote in support of his stand.

The postponement of the University item until today was seen as a strategic move to enable the Senate to docket the Francis bill as a special order and at the same time give the educational forces more time for organization. Little hope was held, however, that the University figures would be raised to $832,000 unless the Senate was in a state of mind to support a sales-tax.

The figures passed yesterday in most instances uphold the figures of the joint appropriations committee calling for a total of nearly $83,000,000, as against the House bill of $79,000,000. These figures will carry an estimated biennial appropriation $4,000,000 more than the House bill and restores salaries to sixty-three per cent of normal.

The discussion of the day was monopolized by Senator Clement, chairman of the investigating committee, and Senator Larry Moore, who set himself up as an authority on all the items on the bill. Senator John Sprunt Hill, of Durham and Orange, frequently came forward in a quite Murphian manner to settle the Senate disputes. The only spark of life in the session was furnished by the Hill-Moore controversy over the treasury item which showed signs of approaching the Bowie-Turner fights of last week's House session.

At the conclusion of the executive and administrative figures, the Senate reported its progress, and turned to a motion that the Francis bill be given a special tabling which would make it immediately follow the appropriations bill. The motion carrying, the Senate adjourned until 11:00 o'clock today.

Results Indicate Advantages Of Freshman Department Placements

Grades of Better Prepared English Students Also Show Generally Better Preparation in All Other Subjects; Some Students Now May Take Sophomore English.

From the results of the English placement test, quiz on fundamentals, given to freshmen during orientation week, and from an original composition written by the entrants, the English department attempts to classify students according to ability. Approximately fifty of those whose indicated proficiency was quite superior were placed in two advanced sections, while about the same number, whose papers showed that they had been inadequately prepared for freshman English were placed in sub-freshman English, known to the campus at large as English 0.

Students placing between these two extremes were sectioned without regard for differences within these extremes. These arrangements, made on the basis of the quiz, were tentative and were subject to checks made from observation of the student's actual work in the first weeks of the fall quarter. It was decided that students might be promoted or demoted at any time.

Tests Reliable

The general reliability of the placement tests given in English is indicated by figures obtained on the work of the freshmen placed in an advanced section known as the "Flying Squadron." Of forty-eight people none flunked English. And of twenty-two men in one advanced section on the basis of this placement test, fifteen made the honor roll for the first quarter. All made "C" or above in English, and there were only five failures on all courses taken by the twenty-two, three of which were contributed by one man. In addition to being a rather conclusive proof that these tests are accurate, the results show a close correlation between the preparation tion of students for English work and their general preparation for University scholastic work.

An application of the results of the placement system this session was the promotion of certain students in advanced sections to English 21 at the beginning of the spring quarter. This promotion, one quarter in advance of the normal procedure, was made on the basis, not only of the student's record in an advanced English section, but on his whole academic record as a student at the University. All students who were promoted to English 21 had an average of approximately "B" for the first quarter's work.

Advantage to Student

Placement in an advanced section of freshman English gives the student a double advantage: It gives him the opportunity of doing work more in accordance with his ability and training, and it offers him the opportunity of entering English 21 at the beginning of the spring quarter of his freshman year, thus offering him the chance to earn extra credits toward graduation during his freshman year.

From the results set forth, it is apparent to the English department that the revival of the advanced sections this year has been successful. Although "Flying Squadrons" were formed for some years prior to 1931, in that year the freshman division of the department decided against continuing the practice.

The wisdom of promoting the best students in the sections (with regard to other work as well as English) will be checked at the end of this quarter. The results of this check will, in part, determine the permanent policy of the English department toward this type of promotion.

STUDENTS AT STATE BACK FOR NEW TERM

Students of North Carolina State College returned Monday for the spring term, and many have registered. Due to many requests for credit and time in which to pay bills accumulated during the fall and winter terms, however, registration will be continued through Thursday.

According to W. L. Mayer, registrar, the registration Monday was comparable to that of the winter quarter and the total registration should exceed that of the winter term. Students who registered before leaving last Tuesday for the holidays returned yesterday.

games. Coach Twombly, assistant to Smith and a former St. Louis Cardinal star hurler, spoke very highly of Joe Griffith's pitching and also complimented the brilliant play of Johnny Phipps at short. Well, what about the Dutchman?

JACK JARRETT, THE WASHINGTON and Lee twirler, and Johnny Peacock were having a friendly battle throughout the game. It seems that Johnny and Jarrett played together up in Covington, Virginia, a few years back and they both went courting the same girl. Jarrett won the toss in the end. Perhaps that was why Peaky was so polite to the General. Did you hear him ask for a base-runner for Griffith? "Jack, may we please have a runner for the pitcher?" Jarrett was also a basketball star for the Generals. It was he who had to be removed from the Washington and Lee-N. C. State game in the conference tourney at Raleigh. His ankle was wrenched in the first scrimmage of the fray.

WILLIE POWELL STARTED the season right yesterday. Captain Willie bagged two hits in three tries and played a beautiful game at third. One little bobble marred his day but how 'bout those bullet-like throws to Dixon at first? Wee-Willie is a born ball player and should easily be the best third sacker in the state this year. Jack Cooke, General third baseman took a beating, no less than four hits bounding off him to count as bingles. He was asleep in the first inning but so was Goat Weathers later in the game. Virge slunk off to his position like a whipped poodle after being caught off first—Yeah poodle.

Beer Bill Favorable

The hearing on the Francis beer bill to legalize beer and wine in the state of North Carolina was conducted yesterday afternoon before senate judiciary committee No. 1, of which Senator Hinsdale of Wake county is chairman. It was being freely predicted that despite strenuous opposition from the "dry" forces the bill would get a favorable report from the committee and that it would pass the senate with votes to spare.

German Kaiser May Return

In the midst of scattered disorders attending the beginning of a boycott against Jewish shops, the town of Bad-Homburg in Germany issued an invitation to former Kaiser Wilhelm yesterday to make his home there if he should decide to return to Germany. Representatives of the Hohenzollerns at Berlin said that although there was much talk about the Kaiser returning, he had expressed no intention of coming back to Germany.

Beer Bootlegger Arrives

DRAMA FESTIVAL GETS UNDER WAY HERE LAST NIGHT

Four High Schools and Three Colleges Begin Tenth Annual Dramatic Contests.

Preliminary contests by four high schools and three colleges initiated the program of the tenth Dramatic Festival here last night. The program will be continued with the junior high school finals this afternoon at 2:00 o'clock.

Among the high schools contesting last night were Hugh Morson of Raleigh, Southern Pines high school, Broughton of Raleigh and Coon high school of Wilson. In the college division plays were presented by Duke University, Elon College, and the Woman's College. The winner of this competition will meet the winner of the Catawba-Lenoir-Rhyne contest on Saturday night.

Junior Contests Tomorrow

The junior high school contest opens this afternoon with North junior high school of Winston presenting Thompson's Sham in competition with South junior high school presenting Tilden's Enter Dora, Exit Dad. At 3:00 o'clock county high school finals begin with Garner offering Jerome's Barbara, Hallsboro playing Tarkington's The Ghost Story and Paw Creek presenting Giorloff's Jazz and Minuet. Following these the Durham Y. W. C. A. dramatic club will present Wilbur Stout's Dogwood Bushes.

Final contests in Little Theatre and Community Organization productions are scheduled for 8:00 o'clock tonight. Contestants will be the Durham community players with Tother's In The Darkness, Lenoir Little Theatre with Thru'ts (Continued on last page)

COMMITTEE WILL PRESENT CONCERT TO RAISE FUNDS

Directors of Dogwood Festival Will Offer Second Concert April 10 to Raise Money.

The Dogwood Festival committee will present a concert by Lamar Stringfield, flutist, Adeline McCall, pianist, and Ralph Weatherford, cellist, Monday evening, April 10, at 8:30 o'clock in Hill Music hall. The concert has been arranged in order to raise funds for the staging of the Dogwood Festival here this spring.

The program will consist of flute and cello solos in addition to a group of trios. Compositions played will represent composers from Bach to the modern French and American writers. A trio by Eugene Gossens, prominent living conductor and composer, will be featured.

The festival is being arranged as a celebration of the blooming of the dogwood. It will continue an entire day in which music, dancing, and athletic events will be featured. The committee in charge of arrangements for the festival recently sponsored Helen McGraw here.

Year Book Staff to Meet

Members of the business staff of the Yackety-Yack will meet this afternoon at 2:00 o'clock at Graham Memorial.

Student Opinion Varies Regarding Negroes' Attendance At Carolina

Co-eds Plan Varsity Show For April 26

The varsity show which the woman's association is planning to present April 26 at Memorial hall is creating much interest among women students on the campus. According to the co-eds, the purpose of the show is to raise money for a loan fund.

A definite program has not yet been arranged, but it is planned to have a one-act play and a number of stunts by groups of women students. Miss Josephine Orendorff, chairman of the woman's dramatic association, and a committee of co-eds majoring in dramatics are in charge.

TENTATIVE CAST PICKED FOR PLAY

Junior Playmakers to Present "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves" April 21-22.

The probable cast for the Junior Playmakers production of the season, Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves, which will be presented April 21-22, was announced yesterday by Mrs. Harry Davis.

Several fascinating Oriental dances in the production, executed by alluring young slave-girls from the community, are being directed by Phoebe Barr. Three elaborate sets of scenery are nearing completion in the Playmakers scene shop under the direction of Foster Fitz-Simons. The sets are Ali Baba's hovel, a robbers' cave glittering with gold and diamonds, and the sumptuous mansion of wealthy Abou Cassim.

Selections for Cast

The tentative cast for Ali Baba includes the following Junior Playmakers: Ned Hamilton, Ali Baba; Harry Brooks, Ali's son Ishak; Virginia Clark, Ali's wife Zuleika; Julia Peebles, Fatimah; Lindon Correll, Abou Cassim; Jean Breckinridge, Morgiana; Kimball Dyer, Koja Hassan; H. Hobbs, Abdallah; the robbers, Lauren McKinney, Cameron Murchison, Junior Whitfield, George Hogan, Sunny Kenfield; hand-maids to Morgiana, Carolina House, Eleanor Carroll, Edith Crockett, Jewel Hogan; dancing-girls, Jean Hogan, Phyllis Bradshaw, Lila Marie Wright; black slaves, Billy Koch, Sandy McClamroch, Richard Bradshaw; attendants to Zuleika, Mollie Holmes, Jane Knight.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF PHI BETA KAPPA MEETS

The executive committee of Phi Beta Kappa met last night to consider possible candidates for membership. The election will probably take place April 10. To be eligible for membership, a student must have averaged the grade of 92.5 for eight consecutive quarters and have never failed a course.

Fifteen in Infirmary

Fifteen students were confined to the infirmary yesterday. They were: J. U. Woodard, L. C. Lee, R. L. Connelly, H. R. Barnhardt, J. N. LeConte, R. H. Proctor, Jr., H. S. Rubin, Frank Causey, J. M. Glace, Jr., W. C. Pitt, Virginia Hendricks, E. M. Spruill, C. L. Royster, Ralph B. Cheek, and Katherin Jamison.

Daily Tar Heel Survey Reveals That Feeling Is Definitely Opposed to Race Equality.

That, on a whole, campus opinion here is hostile to the entrance of Negroes into the University of North Carolina, became apparent from the result of a symposium of student opinion recently conducted by the DAILY TAR HEEL feature staff member. Such hostility runs all the way from a mild distaste for such social and racial equality up to wild emotional talk of lynching, tarring and feathering, and the like. In between are those who feel that, if the colored applicants did gain admission to the college, life would be made so unpleasant for him by the student body that he would soon leave.

"I just don't believe in that much equality," replied one student after being asked for his reaction to Thomas R. Hocutt's application. Numerous replies opposing his entrance were put in the sort of language which, while far from being uncertain, could not be printed here.

"Tickled"

One self-professed "Yankee" from Maryland declared that the whole thing "tickled" him, and that in the north people have forgotten that there ever was a Civil War and a Negro question. TAR HEEL EDITOR TO BE NOMINATED BY STAFF TODAY

Eligible Members of Editorial Staff to Meet at 3:00 O'clock To Nominate Candidate.

Annual nominations for the editorship of the DAILY TAR HEEL for next year will be made today at a meeting of the editorial and reportorial staffs at 3:00 o'clock in Graham Memorial.

All members of the staff in good standing will be able to make nominations and cast their votes for the official nominee at this meeting. Work on the staff of the paper for the past quarter constitutes good-standing at the meeting.

Every member of the staff is expected to attend the meeting and previous excusal by the editor will be required in case a man finds himself unable to attend. A member of the staff may leave a written nomination, vote, or proxy in case he cannot be present at the meeting this afternoon.

Although editorship of the DAILY TAR HEEL will be decided by the student body in the general elections next week, nominations by the staff today will be considered official. According to a ruling of the student's activities committee, all nominations for editors of publications will be made by active members of the staff of which the candidate is a part.

Other items of business have been slated for consideration at the meeting this afternoon.

World Cruise Brings Playwright To United States For First Time

George Bernard Shaw Stops in Los Angeles and Will Spend Twenty-Four Hours in New York on First Trip to Country Whose Acclaim Has Made Him World Famous.

George Bernard Shaw first set foot on the soil of America, to which he owes so much, March 24 of this month. After two days in San Francisco, where he landed from the Empress of Britain, he went to Los Angeles, leaving there March 27 for the remainder of the world cruise which will take him through the Panama Canal, and land him in New York April 11, here he will spend twenty-four hours, and, as his present plans are constructed, according to Dr. Archibald Henderson, after addressing the Academy of Political Science at the Metropolitan Opera house, he is scheduled to return to England the following day.

Although this is the first time Shaw has ever visited America his connection with this country covers a period of nearly half a century.

Wrote for American Magazines

As early as 1887 he began contributing to the magazine Liberty, a publication long since defunct, and not to be confused with the present-day popular magazine, on Socialist subjects. The most important of his articles which appeared in this magazine was a slashing criticism and review of Max Nordau's "Entartung," translated "Degeneration." Shaw defended many modern writers, including Ibsen and Tolstoi, from Nordau's charges that many modern artists were degenerate in their writings. Shaw ranks himself as an artist on the side of Ibsen and Tolstoi, and in their ranks, and titled his article "A Degenerate's View of Nordau." This essay, which filled nearly an entire issue of the old Liberty, afterwards appeared in various forms in England and America under the title "The Sanity of Art."

Shaw's real contact with the theatre-going public of the United States began in 1894, with the production of Arms and the Man by Richard Mansfield, followed in 1897 by the production of The Devil's Disciple.

Early Play Censored

Aside from the publication of Shaw's novels, which won slight hearing in America, little interest was displayed in his writing until Arnold Daly's production of many of his plays, beginning with Candida, and including productions of Arms and the Man, The Man of Destiny, How He Lied to Her Husband, John Bull's Other Island, and finally Mrs. Warren's Profession. This last was first produced in New Haven, and caused great excitement because it dealt with the forbidden subject of prostitution. When produced in New York a few days later, it was closed by the police. After an extended trial the case against Daly and the cast was dismissed, and the judge in his summary of the case stated that the play's moral was distinctly good, rather than evil.

State Senate Increases University Allotments By $72,000 To $832,240

Julian S. Miller Will Address Assembly

Julian S. Miller, associate editor of the Charlotte Observer, will speak tomorrow morning in Memorial hall at 10:30 o'clock. Freshman attendance will be checked.

Miller is a well-known newspaperman in the state. His column, "Events and Comment," appears daily in his paper. Miller was formerly editor of the Charlotte News, which position he left to fill the role of relief director under Governor O. Max Gardner.

GIRLS IN DEBATES OUTNUMBER BOYS

Team Elimination by Triangular Debating in High Schools Begins Tomorrow.

Girls will outnumber boys in the triangular debates March 31 of the high school debating union of North Carolina, it was announced yesterday by Secretary E. R. Rankin.

Statistics which have been compiled show that 208 high schools, out of the total 215 participating schools, will be represented by 468 girls and 364 boys.

The query which will be discussed in all of the debates, in high schools scattered from Murphy to Beaufort, is: Resolved, That North Carolina should adopt the sales tax as a feature of its state system of revenue.

The schools which win both debates in the triangular contest Friday will send their teams to Chapel Hill to enter the competition April 13 and 14 for the Aycock Cup, the trophy which has been donated by the intercollegiate debaters of the University.

Complete Teams of Girls
Thirty-three high schools will be represented by four girls each in the debating contest. This list is as follows:

Almond, Arthur, Banoak, Beaufort, Burlington, Conetoe, Edward Best, Engelhard, Fairfield, Farmville, Four Oaks, Franklin, High Point, Jasper, Kings Mountain, Lilesville, Lincolnton, Morven, Mt. Vernon, New London, Newport, Paw Creek, Pine Level, Rockingham, Rowland, Roseboro, Sand Hill, Selma, Southport, Sumner, Troy, Whiteville, and Union.

CONSTRUCTION OF WALKS IS PROGRESSING STEADILY

Construction on the new walks in front of Graham Memorial is progressing steadily and is expected to be completed some time next week, pending favorable weather. The walk immediately before Graham Memorial must yet be graded and laid with gravel. Another section to New Dorms has been begun.

Groves' Book Recommended

The Catholic magazine America has recommended Dr. E. R. Groves' book Sex in Marriage to Catholic Confessors. The magazine states that priests "may find certain materials in the book helpful in counseling the maladjusted." Groves wrote the volume in co-operation with Gladys Hoagland Groves.

Upper House Settles Down to Business and Pushes Appropriation Amendment.

BILL IS OPPOSED BY MOORE

Senators Sign Amendment to Appropriation $16,000,000 for Eight Months School.

The North Carolina Senate, meeting yesterday as a committee of the whole, laid aside the tea-party quibbling of Tuesday's session to get down to business and allot the greater University $832,240 as it continued in its policy of restoring the joint committee figures to the biennial appropriations bill.

Senator Larry Moore came to the fore again, however, and waged a stubborn though hopeless fight against the amendment calling for the raised University allotment. The Newbernite's defeat on this proposal which was offered by Senator John Sprunt Hill gives him a clean sheet to date for having consistently failed to receive the senate's support on any of the items of the appropriation bill. It was Senator Moore who threw the monkey wrench into Tuesday's session and refused to take the tea cakes offered by Senator Clement, chairman of the investigating committee.

Amendment Adopted
The Moore-Hill fight, which seemed like a continuation of their battle of the previous day waxed furious as the Gentleman from Craven stubbornly refused to weaken after an hour's debate. The whole controversy, however, seemed to be superfluous as the Senate adopted Senator Hill's amendment without a record vote.

DR. BROOKS GIVEN PLACE ON TEXTILE SURVEYING GROUP

Head of State College Placed on Committee to Determine Extent of Textile Education.

Dr. E. C. Brooks, vice-president of the Raleigh unit of the Greater University of North Carolina, has been selected by the Textile Foundation as one of a committee of three to make a survey of textile education in the United States, with a view to broadening and raising the standard of such education in the nation.

The other two educators to be associated with Dr. Brooks are Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Dean Robert E. Doherty of the Yale engineering school.

Authorized by Congress

The Textile Foundation is an incorporated organization created by Congress to conduct scientific and economic research for the development of the nation's textile industry. The advisory committee to which Dr. Brooks has been named will meet at an early date, probably in New Haven or Boston, to formulate plans for the survey.

It is felt that recognition of State College in the personnel of this committee is due to progress made by the school in broadening textile education.

Where Do We Go From Here?

"What am I going to do when I finish college?" This lamentation in the form of a question has probably been experienced at one time or another by almost every student at the University. Of course, there are a few fortunates who have something definite in view when they graduate, but their number is pitifully small. Others are specializing in one profession or another, but assurance of pecuniary return later in life from these efforts is not at all possible. In our exasperation at all this preparation for life and so little prospect for the use of it, there is small wonder for the outcry against needless apprenticeship.

"Send him out into the World of Hard Knocks, it will make a man of him"; one hears this statement on all sides, made by persons who are ill-equipped to serve as advisers to the youth of the country. They do not realize the immeasurable importance of mind-training which the schools are engaged in. Strange to say, students are sometimes as guilty as others in condemning the conditions under which they are forced to attend school from their sixth to their twenty-second year. These persons have never considered the significance of their apprenticeship period in the light of man's knowledge and experience. One need only to observe the human infant in the almost painfully slow process by which he adapts himself to his environment, and contrast it with any of the lower animals. The higher one goes in the scale of organisms the more complex and slower-maturing is the animal. The salamander, in a few hours after its first movements, swims as well as it ever will; the dog requires only a few months to become thoroughly acquainted with the niche he is to fill in his world. Not so with man! Twenty years is the average, a third of his life's span! The explanation lies in the greater development of brain areas devoted to conscious processes. Man depends much more on his will to carry him through life than does the lower animals. The reflex and the instinct becomes less important for existence as one progresses from the amoeba to man.

One may take a legitimate step further and compare civilizations or cultures. Those civilizations which are of a lower degree require less apprenticeship from the members of the group. Less time is necessary. In the modern world, the longer the training or educative period the higher the plane of civilization. Efforts to curtail this most important training period are destructive to the best interests of society in every sense of the word.—V.J.L.

Just Before the Deluge, Mother

For the first time in quite a number of years North Carolina bids fair to become wet. Those who advocate the return of beer and wine, even though it may be only 3.2 per cent alcohol, have been actively engaged in circulating petitions to ask the legislature to enact a law repealing North Carolina's dry laws.

From Greensboro a petition signed by several thousand people from every station in life asking for the return of beer was sent to Raleigh. From Wilmington a delegation of over fifty cars went to Raleigh as a committee asking for beer. From all over the state similar petitions and delegations were carried to the legislature with this purpose in mind.

Meanwhile the dries are doing almost the same thing that the wets did before prohibition came into effect. Still proclaiming that they are the party in power they merely sit, talk, and send an occasional letter to the newspapers re-telling the oft told evils of drink. Refusing to employ the methods of the wets to any great degree they are standing by while their opponents rush in and apply pressure to secure their ends.

It is more likely that the two parties are nearly equally divided in strength, but the party making the most noise is more likely to win out in its fight for new legislative enactment on beer and wines. There has always been a tendency for the exponents of a system already in use to think that their system is the best and will consequently stay in use, and that is true now in the State, for the dries are sitting by talking while the wets are out fighting actively for the cause that they favor.—F.P.G.

The Old Order Blusheth

A storm of indignation was aroused recently in sedate Oxford circles when the Oxford Union Society, called "the training-ground for Parliament," threw a bombshell at the old order. "This house will in no circumstances fight for its King and Country." This resolution cannot but cheer the hearts of those who dare to hope for a new day. The universal condemnation of this drastic resolution by the London and Manchester press shows to an alarming extent the long and hard road that must be broken by the faithful. The journals rise as one in abhorrence at this action, the only action which will have any results in the crusade for world peace.

It seems clear that nations of the world talk peace pretty well, but it is the kind of talk that will be easily drowned by the first shout of "for God and country," "God save the King," "pour la France," or "Viva l'Italia." Whether people fight for democracy or empire, for the new Germany or the Soviet, they will fight. In the "war to end war" the world has met with ignominious defeat, yet still it stumbles on, a slave to the first slogan or brightly-colored cloth that is cast its way. Compared to the struggle for world peace that is ahead, the world war with all its terror and inglorious disillusionment will seem as nothing. But how to rally the forces of peace? What catch-phrase, what manner of band music, what sort of gaudy cloth will be necessary to fill these ranks?

The young people of the world, those in schools and colleges today, cannot escape the accusation of failure. How may we excuse the shirkers from the ranks of peace, those who, in honoring their country, dishonor humanity? Youth has shown a terrible indifference to the cause of peace. Campaigns for Hoovers and Roosevelts should give way to an active, practical campaign for enlightened inter-nationalism. No longer should youth listen to outworn definitions of honor, to outgrown rationalizations of militarism. This is the dawn of a new day, even though that dawn be so faint as to appear a belated twilight.

Yet it is not entirely upon the shoulders of youth that the blame must be placed. The teachers of today show short-sightedness and inconsistency. They preach a superficial and idealistic doctrine of brotherly love, only to return to the history class-room to praise the battle of this and the victory of that. When they speak of war, they are fervent and gloriously enthusiastic; when they speak of peace it is with insincerity and sentimental vaguery. What wonder that young people of today fail to see consistency where there is none. It is not by sticky sentimentalism nor by praising the glories of wars, past or present, that the gospel of peace can be spread. It is only by hard-headed practical thinking, by using that common-sense which modern thought has applied in other ways to science and literature. Youth must learn that just as loyalty to county, town, and state was paramount in pre-Revolutionary days, but is so no longer, so irrational devotion to flags and countries is to be thrown aside. As the experience of the world has become wider in science, art, and literature, so it must experience a new breadth of vision in politics. So must nationalism give way to a newer and greater inter-nationalism.—B.B.P.

"Most people would rather go to a movie than a mediocre play," said Noel Coward in a recent interview with a Princetonian reporter. "As a result the screen has weeded out the poorer stage productions. This has been hard on the road companies, but has raised the general standard of the legitimate stage, and first class plays are as successful as ever, since everyone would rather see a fine play than a good movie.—The Princetonian (N.S.F.A.)

A little man of ten or thereabouts stopped us on the street the other day and requested that we give him a dime to see the movie.

"What's on today," we asked, in our best my-fine-little-man manner.

"Cynara," he responded. "But you wouldn't like that type of picture, son. You're too young for such stuff," we rationalized.

"I'll bet I know more than you do," he said, and proceeded to launch forth into the merits of the cinema, the elements of tragedy, comedy, and a delineation of the drama from ancient Greece to the present. He got to the love interest and we found ourselves blushing.

Gave him three cents for candy butter fingers and rushed away in confusion.

Beer

THE DAILY TAR HEEL, among other local journals, has a special operative in the field this morning in an effort to locate the brewers who will come in with the return of beer to North Carolina, subject of course to the approval of the legislature. An item from the College Publishers' Representative, Inc., says:

"We believe, however, that local brewers who are obviously covering your college community and town should be primarily interested in your newspaper. But your nearby brewers may not appreciate that special copy is advisable for many reasons . . . please let us know what brewers are interested in helpful copy service which will be absolutely safe from any reasonable criticism and which will suggest in a tactful way the times and places for consumption of beer."

So if there are any brewers in Chapel Hill, we wish that they would contact our operative (who hangs around a downtown drug store with a thirsty look on his face) and let us know whether or not they will come to a little beer party we're giving, bringing, of course, the beer.

WOMAN'S COLLEGE PLANS SUMMER SCHOOL SESSION

Tentative plans are being made at the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina for a summer session which will begin June 12 and extend to July 31. Dr. John H. Cook, director, has announced that despite the status of the banks and the legislature there will be a summer school if present plans go through.

Life and Letters

The Private Life of Tom Jones

Tom Jones asked me to write this column. He said he thought people ought to know about him. Personally, I think he's somewhat jealous of Mary Smith who pirouetted into the limelight last week. Tom knows Mary, but he offers her scant sympathy since he says his own case is sadder and he's a wiser person than she is anyway. That is this column's reason for being. To be or not to be may have been the question with Shakespeare's now famous character, but with Tom Jones it is an entirely different matter. He had rather not be at all than not to be superlative.

In order that you may better understand what manner of man he is, I consider it essential that certain hitherto unpublished facts be now revealed. Shortly after birth he was christened Tom Jones, but his mother still calls him Thomas for short. He was a precocious child and on his sixth birthday announced his intention of going to college.

"No Jones has ever been to college," thundered his father. "My father didn't go to college; I didn't go to college; none of your brothers or sisters are going to college. Come now, be a good boy. Prepare yourself to earn an honest living."

But Tommie, rank individualist that he was, had already started on a career with trailing clouds of glory. His intellect was phenomenal, his perseverance gratifying, and he seasoned the whole with a dash of good common sense. Like O'Brien, his father bragged to the neighbors that his boy was graduating "with cum laude." Father Jones was so pleased with his educated son that he offered to take him into partnership, but looking for greener educational pastures on which to gambol, the prodigal son came to the University of North Carolina.

He was so good in his chosen field that he won the respect of his professors and the admiration of any fellow-students who were good sports enough to admire one so far above them in natural ability. He acquired another degree. His thirst for knowledge still insatiable, he began the struggle for the third degree after accepting in his modest manner a part-time teaching position. I said he began the struggle, and he has struggled ever since, for the depression struck and left him flat broke. With out-of-state tuition fees to pay, with board and room rent due on the first of every month, his salary dwindled to nothing after the ten per cent cut. It has been dwindling to less than nothing ever since.

"Mary's lucky," he said, "in that she has some old clothes to make over." Then he revealed his racket. He took a worn-out suit back to the store from which he had bought it and demanded an adjustment (which isn't exactly the same thing as an alteration) because it had worn out. He neglected to state that he had worn it practically every day for a year. He got a new suit. "It wasn't dishonest," he rationalized with a smile perched upon his seraphic countenance (it would have to be seraphic since seraphim rank higher than cherubim in the hierarchy of angels), "because I had no money and I had to have a new suit."

And now that salaries have reached their unprecedented low level, his interest in things scholastic has waned (his friends all say he will not get his degree), and he goes begging not for bread but for relish and pickles. No matter whose home he may be invariably asks, "Lady, can you spare some relish?" His philosophy of eating seems to be that if you have no meat with which to eat the relish, eat the relish anyway.

He asked that these facts about his private life be published because he is expecting at any time to become a public charge. Personally, I think he'll join the Marines to see the world, thereby becoming Private Tom Jones.

With an impressive 5 to 1 Southern Conference victory over Washington and Lee behind it, Coach Bunn Hearn's Carolina ball team will try to capture its second win of the season when it tangles with the traveling troupe of ball performers from Michigan State at 4:00 o'clock this afternoon on Emerson field.

Traveling in automobiles, the Spartans are touring North Carolina for their spring training. Always having one of the consistently good baseball teams in the middlewest, the Michigan State club will be handicapped in today's contest in that it has had little opportunity for outside practice.

Whip Elon 6-5

The East Lansing aggregation scored a close 6 to 5 win over Elon College in its inaugural game of the season. Elon rallied in the closing frame and registered five runs before Coach John Knox's charges halted the Carolinians.

Crouch or Andrews Hurl

Either Freddie Crouch or Nathan Andrews will do the mound performing for Carolina today, Coach Hearn announced. Crouch will probably get the call to silence the big guns of the Spartans, Captain Fawcett, Eliowitz, and Kircher. Hearn will start the same line-up against Michigan State as he did in the opening encounter, though Zaizer and Vick may play some in the outfield.

RUFFIN SWAMPED AS LAUNDRY CLUB STAGES SLUGFEST

Heavy Scoring Features Play In Intramural Baseball Loop Yesterday.

Baseballs were driven to all corners of the intramural field yesterday as three of the four games contested resulted in slugfests. The Laundry Club put on the best exhibition of the afternoon, winning over Ruffin, 32-2, in a game which terminated in the fifth inning under the intramural rules regarding one-sided contests.

The Laundry outfit got off to a good start with eight runs in the initial frame. Ruffin came back with one as Denti, its lead-off man, negotiated successfully the circuit of the bases. In the second frame eight more runs were made by the nine from "Dean" Paulsen's establishment. Ruffin made a last weak attempt to dive in another tally, but here its opposition crumpled and the game became a battle to keep the score down rather than a fight for victory.

After getting six runs in the third, the Laundry juggernaut relaxed and was content with a mere three in the fourth. It finished up triumphantly, however, as it added six runs to its total in the last frame.

Bill Moore, the lead-off man for the winners, headed his team's scoring as he crossed the plate six times. His contribution to the hit column was a homerun, a triple, and three singles. Quarles, ring star, scored five times, while Ogburn, G. Moore, and Yeager scored four each.

Phi Sigma Kappa Wins

Another free-scoring contest developed as Phi Sigma Kappa systematically disposed of Chi Phi to the tune of 29-2. Misin-hunir and Peetz scored five runs each for the winners while Fitzgerald and Halstead got four each. Messick scored both Chi Phi's runs. The victors hung up their second win in three starts, and the losers dropped their second game in a row.

Score by innings:

| Phi Sig. Kappa | 12 0 3 4 10—29 |
| Chi Phi | 1 0 3 0 1—2 |

Phi Alpha won from Sigma Phi Epsilon, 13-4. Loszowicz led the offensive attack, scoring three times for the winners, and Jack Bessen played a stellar game afield. Allen drove a four-bagger for the losers.

Score by innings:

Carr applied the whitewash brush to Grimes to take the best game of the afternoon, 3-0. Anglin, winning pitcher, was in control at all times, and kept the Grimes hits scattered. Ray and Markham led at bat for the winners.

TENNIS RESULTS

Yesterday's tennis matches were the last intramural matches to be played for some time. Due to baseball games with Michigan State here today and tomorrow, no matches will be contested the rest of this week. Next week the Carolina-Duke tennis carnival will occupy the courts. Although no intramural league contests will be staged that week, it is hoped by the authorities that all intramural teams will enter the carnival. Entries close tomorrow night.

Beta Theta Pi won its second straight match in defense of its campus championship, beating D. K. E., 3-0. Reid and Linker won the singles from Morris and Willis, respectively, and the doubles went to the champs by forfeit.

Kappa Alpha won from Delta Tau Delta, 3-0. Gossett beat Jackson and Schriver won a hard match from Davis in singles, while the doubles went to the winners on a forfeit.

Best House won from New Dorms, 2-1. Thompson, of the losers, gained his team's point by winning in straight sets from

FRESHMEN TAKE HEAVY WORK-OUT

Line-up Uncertain for Opening Yearling Baseball Game Scheduled Saturday.

Coach Cerney is still uncertain as to the starting freshman baseball line-up in the opening game Saturday and as a result he gave the yearlings probably their longest workout of the year yesterday afternoon.

After a signal drill in Emerson stadium, Coach Cerney took his squad out to freshman field. There they went through a long batting drill followed by a snappy fielding practice. After this the first year squad was taken to the sawdust pit in order to work on their sliding. Coach Cerney attempted to teach the players the hook-slide but the efforts made to master the supposedly easy slide were in most cases rather humorous.

The likely starting infield in the first game will find Austin at third, Irwin at short, Tatum at second, and Orr at first. However Irwin seems to be the only Morris. Alexander beat Austin, however, for Best House, and then paired with Morris to down Austin and Thompson in the deciding doubles match.

Manly won from Steele, T. E. P. won from Theta Chi, and Zeta Beta Tau downed Theta Kappa Nu, all on forfeits.

KENFIELD SENDS GOLFERS THROUGH HEAVY PRACTICE

O'Brien, Smith, Cramer, and Michaels Are Probable Line-Up for Duke Contest.

Carolina's varsity golfing forces went through strenuous practice work-outs yesterday in preparation for the match with Duke next Monday, April 3. The entire squad, including Captain Billy O'Brien, took part in yesterday's work-out, which included driving and putting practice, practicing recovery shots and trap shots, and actual playing.

The coming match with Duke has aroused much interest among the players as the boys want to keep their slate clean for the entire season. Last year the Tar Heels divided a two match series with the Blue Devils, and this season they are out to make it two straight. Unsure starter as the other positions have much competition. The outfield still remains a problem.

The Tar Babies open their season Saturday on Emerson field, opposed by Roanoke Rapids, champions last year among the high school class "B" teams. Suits will be issued today so that the players will have a chance to get used to them before opening the season.

less the line-up is changed before Monday, Carolina will be represented by Captain O'Brien, Alan Smith, Carl Cramer, and Ed Michaels. Duke will be captained by Roger Peacock, who will be ably supported by June Caldwell, Jake Sullivan, and others.

Schedule Announced

After the Duke match the Tar Heels will compete in the state championship, which will be held at Hope Valley, April 20 and 21. The next day the Heels will take on Davidson at Charlotte. Then comes the northern trip, which starts on April 24 with V. P. I. at Lynchburg. Following this on successive days Coach Kenfield's boys match strokes with Georgetown at Washington, Virginia at Charlottesville, William and Mary at Williamsburg, Richmond University at Richmond, and Washington and Lee at Lexington. The next match comes on May 6 when the Tar Heels play Duke again at Hope Valley.

ILLUSION:

A "strong man" once gave public performances in which he stopped a 9 lb. cannon ball shot from a fully charged cannon. The audience gasped when the gun flashed and the human Gibraltar stepped forward out of the smoke uninjured, with the 9 lb. shot in his hands.

EXPLANATION:

The trick lay in the way an assistant prepared the cannon for the performance. He used the regulation amount of powder and wadding, but placed the greater part of the charge of powder ahead of the shot. The cannon ball was propelled only by the small charge behind it which was just sufficient to lob the 9 lb. ball over to the strong man.

A performance sometimes staged in cigarette advertising is the illusion that cigarettes are made easy on the throat by some special process of manufacture.

EXPLANATION: All cigarettes are made in almost exactly the same way. Manufacturing methods are standard and used by all. A cigarette is only as good as the tobaccos it contains.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

In costly tobaccos you will find mildness, good taste, throat-ease. Smoke Camels critically, and give your taste a chance to appreciate the greater pleasure and satisfaction offered by the more expensive tobaccos. Other cigarettes, we believe, will taste flat and insipid to you forever after.

DATE NAMED FOR FRAT DANCE SET

May Frolics for 1933 Scheduled By Seven Lodges for Week-End of April 28-29.

The May Frolics for 1933, annual series of dances given each year by a group of seven fraternities, will take place on the week-end of April 28-29. The set will consist this year of five separate dances given at various times on these two days.

The Thirteen Club will open the series Friday, April 28, from 5:00 to 7:00 o'clock, with a tea dance. This dance will be followed by a formal evening dance in the Tin Can from 9:00 to 1:00 o'clock. The series will continue Saturday with a luncheon dance to take place from 12:30 to 2:30 o'clock at the Washington Duke Hotel in Durham. A tea dance will be featured from 4:30 to 6:30 o'clock in the Tin Can. The set will be closed Saturday night by another formal evening dance in the Tin Can lasting from 9:00 to 12:00 o'clock.

This annual social event of the spring quarter is given by seven fraternities including Delta Kappa Epsilon, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Kappa Sigma, Zeta Psi, Beta Theta Pi, Sigma Nu, and Sigma Chi. This is the fourth year in which the dances have been given.

Officers for this year's set and their sponsors are: Fred Laxton, president, with Miss Nell Adams; Bob Reynolds, vice-president, with Miss Hittor Roller; Bobby Carmichael, secretary-treasurer, with Miss Marjorie Reis; Pete Tyree, assistant secretary-treasurer, with Miss Margaret Williams; Alex Webb, dance leader, with Miss Louise Brown Michaels; and Pig Skinner, second assistant dance leader, with Miss Cotten Skinner.

Definite announcement concerning the orchestra will be made early next week.

Two Stars Appear In Carolina Attraction

"The Keyhole," a picture of romance and gay adventure, unique in plot and glamorous in setting, in which the two popular Warner Brothers stars, Kay Francis and George Brent appear together for the first time, opens at the Carolina theatre today.

The picture, which is based on the Adventures, a novel by Alice Miller, concerns the adventure of a beautiful young dancer who marries an elderly man of great wealth who is jealous of her, and hires a private detective to keep watch over her doings. The ensuing situations are quite involved and the action takes place in various settings from New York to Havana. Most of the scenes are taken on board a ship travelling between those two ports.

Glenda Farrell and Allen Jenkins supply the comedy in the film, while other supporting players are Monroe Owsley, Helen Ware, and Henry Kolker. Michael Curtiz, director of "Doctor X" and "Twenty Thousand Years in Sing Sing," directed "The Keyhole."

Date Changed for Graduate Papers and Examinations

Changes in dates for the fulfillment of certain requirements in the graduate school were announced yesterday by Dean W. W. Pierson. New dates were set because of the postponement of the holiday period.

May 1 is the new date set as the last day for the submission of doctoral dissertations and master's theses for the June commencement. May 6 is the last date for the written examination for candidates for the master's and doctor's degree at the same commencement.

World News Bulletins

Mexicans Protest Daniels
The stoning of the American embassy last Friday night as a protest to the appointment of Josephus Daniels as the United States ambassador to Mexico has been disclosed. Several windows were broken. He was accused of being an imperialist while others called him the murderer of Azueta and Uribe, Mexicans killed when the United States forces landed in Vera Cruz in 1914 when Daniels was secretary of the navy.

Nazis' War on Jews
Germany's boycott of Jews, although it does not officially begin until the morning of April 1, already has begun to take form. Yesterday morning the Berlin government ordered that after April 1 all supplies for municipal projects and offices be purchased only from nationalist merchants.

South Carolina Has Beer
With opposition apparently laid, the South Carolina legislature yesterday prepared to put the finishing touches on a bill which will give the state legal beer (3.2 per cent) by the time the new federal law goes into effect.

Roosevelt Demands Honesty
President Roosevelt asked congress yesterday to provide federal supervision of investment securities. In another direct message, his sixth in less than three weeks, the chief executive declared the public has sustained "severe losses through practices neither ethical nor honest."

Student Opinions Vary On Negro Attendance

prejudice as most of the natives of Dixie. In the public schools of the north, Negroes mingle with the white students. Pointing to this fact, one of the "Yankees" hinted that Northerners were already used to equality in the schools.

As evidence of the fact that his college education was having some effect, another student said, when asked for his opinion on the Negro question, that he had changed so many of his ideas since coming here (he is a freshman) that he wouldn't like to say.

"Has Got to Come"
Because he feels that sooner or later "it has got to come," still another man suggested that it would be much easier for the University to let Hocutt in and then "bust him out."

"I think it would be a mighty fine thing for North Carolina to lead the way," replied a student, declaring that it was time for the school to put into practice some of the "seat-of-liberalism-in-the-south" preaching that students have heard so much of. Admitting that he was in the minority, he nevertheless argued ardently for equality.

Speculating on future events and the motives of Hocutt's backers, it was thought by one man that possibly there would be so many applications by Negroes for whom the legislature would have to pay out of state tuition, that eventually the legislature would break down and order the University to let members of the black race in.

No Trouble at Virginia
According to a letter from the registrar, the University of Virginia has never had an application for entrance from a Negro. The letter says in part "... we have to advise you that we do not find that there is any record available indicating that there has been an application of this nature."

World Cruise Brings Playwright To Country

ren's Profession, which had also forbidden production in England, turned Shaw against America, and prompted him to write his most vigorous essay against this country, "A Nation of Villagers," which appeared in Everybody's Magazine. In this article he made a violent attack on false prudery in the theatre and in literature generally, which he lumped under the general term "Comstockery."

Man and Superman First Hit
The first outstanding success of any of Shaw's plays in America was the run of Man and Superman. Before the coming of the Theatre Guild and its long, unbroken succession of Shavian plays, the two outstanding successes were Caesar and Cleopatra, with Johnston Forbes-Robertson and Gertrude Eliot, and Pygmalion, with the famous Mrs. Patrick Campbell as Eliza Doolittle.

Almost from the beginning of the organization of the Theatre Guild, it has been producing at least one Shavian play a year, and since that time the greater number of Shaw's plays have been produced by that organization, the greatest successes having been achieved by The Devil's Disciple, Major Barbara and Saint Joan.

Katharine Cornell produced Candida with great success, and another notable production was that of Captain Brassbound's Conversion, with Ellen Terry in the role of Lady Cicily Waynflete, written for Ellen Terry and an actual portrait of the English actress.

Shaw a Communist
It has often been wondered why Shaw never visited America. He is a confirmed Socialist, or, as he prefers now to be called, a Communist. He thinks that there is no half-way ground between Communism and Capitalism, and that the two outstanding examples of these two are Russia and the United States. He believes that Capitalism in its present form is doomed, and that the Russian experiment is pointing the way for a future reconstruction of society. His vehement anti-capitalistic views may have influenced him not to visit this country, in view of the fact that he considered America lacking in freedom of speech.

In reply to innumerable invitations to come to the United States, Shaw has always jocularly refused by saying that it was totally unnecessary for him to make the trip because everybody of importance in America comes to see him. He has further stated that the excitement over his visit might disorganize business.

It is interesting to note, however, that three American citizens, Thomas Davidson, head of the The Fellowship of the New Life, Henry George, famous advocate of the single tax, and Edward Bellamy, author of Looking Backward, have exercised tremendous influence on Shaw's thought.

Another bond of close association between Shaw and America is exhibited in the fact that the only person he has authorized to write his biography is an American, Dr. Archibald Henderson, head of the University mathematics department.

Two of Shaw's plays, The Devil's Disciple, a tale of the American Revolution, and The Shewing-Up of Blanco Posnet, are set in this country. In the New York Times Dr. Henderson has pointed out that Shaw is much closer to the American type than to the British in nature, temperament, and disposition.

State Senate Increases University Allotments

a committee throws out the figures of the House which gave the University $760,000, thus raising the allotment $72,000 and necessitating a re-submission of the substitute bill to the lower body when, and if, it carries the necessary three readings.

Besides the raised University appropriation, hope was strong yesterday that the eight months school bill would carry the Senate. Senator Bailey, co-author of the bill, claimed that twenty-seven senators, more than a majority, had signed his amendment. This bill will call for the striking out of the figures $14,000,000 in the public schools item, and substituting therefor the sum of $16,000,000.

Amendment Held Back
The amendment was being held back yesterday by its proponents pending the sitting of the Senate as a committee of the whole over the public schools item of the appropriations bill. The authors state that the twenty-seven senators will vote for the amendment, although they refused to release the names to the press last night.

The Senate was in a more active mood than it had been for several days and dispensed with a great many minor bills in short order. Except for Senator Moore's oratorical outbursts over the University item, and although Senator Gwyn once became lost in technical speculation over figures, the meeting moved forward with unusual rapidity.

Beer Bill Today
The action of the Senate yesterday leaves the way open for a discussion of the beer bill this morning. The bill received the recommendation of the Senate judiciary committee Tuesday by a ten to three vote and was immediately docketed to follow the appropriations bill.

Koch to Speak
At the 10:30 o'clock session in the Playmakers theatre tomorrow morning talks will be made by Professor F. H. Koch, Mrs. Loretta Carroll Bailey and Professor Samuel Selden. A make-up contest will follow at 12:00 o'clock. James A. McLean will speak at 12:30 o'clock.

Other events tomorrow afternoon and night include the St. Augustine College production by colored players, junior college and high school original plays, and the Eastern-Western high school finals.

a cordial invitation to Shaw and his wife to visit him at Chapel Hill, but it is not thought possible that he can accept the invitation, as his present plans call for a stop of only twenty-four hours in the east.

A great deal of interest has been displayed in Shaw's forthcoming address before the Academy of Political Science. This will be his lone formal lecture in America. Dr. Henderson is a member of the Academy of Political Science and plans to attend the special meeting April 11 in New York at which Shaw will speak.

Phi Inducts Six Men At Spring Initiation

The Phi Assembly initiated six members at the first initiation ceremonies of the spring quarter Tuesday night. The new members are: Frank Rogers, Rome, Ga.; Frank Watson, Winston-Salem; Francis H. Fairly, Monroe; B. S. Smith, Farmville; Robert L. Bolton; and A. S. Mowry, Chapel Hill.

John Goode, of Woodard, a former Phi member, gave a brief speech about his experience in the Phi. The bill, "Resolved: That the method of debating as used in the University debates be changed to the cross-questioning plan or some other method so as to create a greater interest in debating" was defeated.

Next Tuesday, there will be a joint meeting with the Di Senate at which the University debating team will debate Vermont University.

The Di Senate, besides accepting the Phi invitation to hear the Vermont debate, acted upon a number of bills, one of which was to return to the usual meeting time of 7:00 o'clock.

Cate Names Committees

Lindy Cate, president of the senior class, announced yesterday that Bobbie Mason, Louis Skinner, Elmer Powell, Sara Parker, A. T. Griffin and Mary N. McMillan have been appointed to compose the senior week committee. Members of the commencement committee named yesterday by Cate are: C. C. Hamlet, Charles Rose, Mary Waldo, Ralph G. Fleming, A. O. Curl, and J. D. Winstead.

Reading Exam Scheduled

The reading knowledge of Spanish examination will take place Saturday morning, April 8, at 9:30 o'clock in 306 Murphey hall.

MUSIC CLUB WILL PRESENT CONCERT

Woman's Chorus of Community Club Will Sing at Hill Music Hall Monday Night.

The music department of the local Community club will offer a concert by the woman's chorus of the club in Hill music hall at 8:30 o'clock Monday night. The chorus was organized in January as a unit of the state's Federation of Music Club festival chorus which will combine in Raleigh April 7 in the second annual festival concert.

Twenty-five leading woman singers of Chapel Hill, under the direction of Harold S. Dyer, will perform three groups of choral music Monday. Harry Lee Knox will accompany as piano soloist. A trio, composed of Mrs. Adeline McCall, Lamar Stringfield, and Ralph Weatherford will sing.

Knox will play numbers by Brahms and Rachmaninoff. The feature of the chamber music playing will be Lamar Stringfield's composition entitled "Mountain Suite." This composition has been performed in several cities since it was written and has been most favorably received by audiences hearing it. No admission is to be charged.

Miss Elizabeth Manget Will Visit University

Miss Elizabeth Manget, traveling secretary of the South Atlantic region for the Student Volunteer movement during the past year, will visit the University Monday and Tuesday. She will speak at the Y. M. C. A. cabinet meetings and also at several special conferences and meetings. Miss Manget is a graduate of Duke University. She was president of the North Carolina Student Volunteer movement last year.

PRELIMINARIES IN DRAMA CONTESTS CONTINUE TODAY

Kings Mountain, Winston, Murphy, and Lenoir Will Present Plays This Morning.

The program of the Tenth Dramatic Festival progresses with completion of the Little Theatre and Community organizations finals last night. High school preliminaries will be run off in Memorial hall this morning and contests will continue throughout the day.

Four high schools will compete today. At 9:00 o'clock tonight the winner will meet Southern Pines, which won Wednesday in the eastern division with Kelly's Flattering Word. Schools to play this morning are R. J. Reynolds of Winston, King's Mountain, Murphy and Lenoir, to decide the western high school division representative.

Professor F. H. Koch will talk on "Art and Agriculture" at 10:30 o'clock this morning in the Playmakers theatre. Other speakers will be Mrs. Loretta Carroll Bailey, speaking on the subject "Judging Original Plays," and Professor Samuel Selden on "Suggestive Scenery." At 12:00 o'clock a make-up contest will be conducted by A. T. West of Duke University.

James A. McLean, founder and director of the Southern School of Creative Arts in Raleigh, will lecture on "Composition and Color in Stage Scenery."

Negro players from the St. Augustine College in Raleigh will present a guest performance of Ridgely Torrence's Granny Maumee, under the direction of Julia B. Delany. Last year this group won enthusiastic favor with a drama from Les Miserables.

Simmons holds the Ledoux fellowship in chemistry here at the University, and has published in the Elisha Mitchell Journal and the Journal of Physical Chemistry articles dealing with the research carried on under the terms of this fellowship. Simmons expects to continue his work in physical chemistry at the California institution.

PARTIAL PLANS ARE ANNOUNCED FOR SENIOR WEEK

Program to Start With Smoker And End With Dance Saturday Night.

Plans for Senior Week, which were announced yesterday by Lindy Cate, senior class president, include a week of varied entertainment, beginning Monday, April 8, and closing with the final dance of the Junior-Senior series under Bert Lown's music on the following Saturday.

A smoker in Swain hall at 9:00 o'clock Monday night will start the week's program. Following, on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday nights short vespers meetings will be conducted under the Davie poplar at 7:00 o'clock each evening. Prominent alumni have been secured to speak at these gatherings. On Friday the first of the Junior-Senior dances will be given in the Tin Can from 9:00 o'clock to 1:00 o'clock with Bert Lown's famous dance band furnishing the music. A tea dance Saturday afternoon, followed by the final dance of the series that evening from 9:00 o'clock until 12:00 o'clock will bring the Senior Week schedule to a conclusion.

The date for the free show, which is the custom for Manager E. Carrington Smith to give to the graduating class, has not been definitely decided upon yet. Arrangements are also being made with local merchants for the usual free drinks, shoe shines, and other courtesies usually extended.

MILLER LECTURE PUT OFF FOR DRAMA MEET

No assembly will take place this morning because of a conflict with the high school dramatic preliminaries in Memorial hall, it was announced yesterday afternoon by the Dean of Students. Julian S. Miller, associate editor of the Charlotte Observer who was scheduled to appear today, will be presented here April 10.

Miller's appearance has been twice postponed. He was unable to appear here last Monday as scheduled.

Murchison Speaks

Dr. Murchison was speaker for the evening at the economics seminar Wednesday night. His subject for discussion was: "Does the present economic situation justify inflation?" Inflation is highly desirable if undertaken with the proper machinery, stated Dr. Murchison.

Students Double Use Of Graham Memorial Union During Past Year

Figures Released by Director of Union Reveal That 15,000 Students Patronize Building Each Month as Compared With Average of 6,400 Last Year.

Use of Graham Memorial during the past year has been more than double the year of its opening in November, 1932, according to figures released yesterday by Mayne Albright, director of the student union building. The figures are based on the average of the first three months in 1933 as compared with an equal period in 1932.

The average for one month in 1932 was as follows: fifty-one meetings, four banquets, and two smokers, with eleven different organizations using the building more or less regularly. This year the average for each month has increased to seventy-four meetings, four smokers, and the number of different organizations using the building has increased to twenty-two.

The figures do not include meetings of various publications and of student government which have offices in the building. There have been fewer banquets during the winter quarter, 1933, than during the previous year, but the increased popularity of luncheons has more than made up the difference. There have been at least six each month, and many organizations have been glad to take advantage of a hitherto unused hour in the day for short discussions and business meetings.

Among those organizations which hold weekly or semi-weekly meetings in the Union are the debate squad, the Grail, Interfraternity Council, Dormitory Council, University dance committee, Socialist club, Lutheran students, French and Spanish clubs, informal English classes, a dancing class, and the Student Welfare committee.

The game room has shown an even greater increase in patronage than that of the activities' rooms. New games and improved facilities have brought in an average of 15,000 students and visitors each month as compared with 6,400 of the year before. These figures, obtained from the receipt numbers issued from the manager's counter in the game room are fairly accurate, the only estimate being in regard to the use of the free games. In addition to this increase, the bowling alleys have proved immensely popular. They have been in use practically every minute of the ten hours a day they are open, and since their installation in November have been used for over 20,000 games.

This increased patronage has brought in greater revenues to the Union, but the expenses of running a Union of this type make necessary the support of student fees. During February of this year the total income

Women Continue To Enlarge Influence In University Life

After Being Kept Out of University by Faculty Ban, Women Now Serve on Board of Trustees of Greater University And Play Prominent Part on Campus.

This is still a man's University. But the inroads of the feminine brigade, both as students and faculty members, point to the fact that a former stronghold of masculinity will abdicate entirely in the near future. The feminine touch, long absent, is apparent, even on the board of trustees. Since the consolidation act, women are now numbered among the trustees of the Greater University, trustees of N. C. C. W. as well as those of State combining with trustees for the University to form a board for the Greater University.

Women Banned Until 1927

For a long time the idea of adding women to the faculty was anathema to the trustees. All attempts to add them to the teaching staff were blocked. But opinion veered around to a more rational outlook on the matter—woman also had her place in the educational curriculum, and in 1927 Miss Sallie B. Marks was added to the teaching staff of the school of education—the first to scale the barrier which prevented a member of her sex from teaching.

Miss Marks conducts courses designed to prepare the future teacher to enter the field of elementary education. It is her hope to turn out well-rounded graduates, and she advises them to enter wholeheartedly into extra-curricular activities—the Playmakers, athletics, and publications.

Several in Library Science In 1931, Dr. Susan Grey Akers came to the University, taking a position on the staff of the school of library science. She is now acting-director of that school. Among her colleagues are the Misses Nora Beust, and Lucille Kelling, assistant professors of library administration.

It is apparent in the instance of the library school as in other cases of woman faculty members that they teach, as a rule, members of their own sex. All of Miss Marks' students are young women as are most of those registered in the school of library science.

Extension Claims Many

The extension department also numbers on its staff women. Miss Cecilia H. Bason, the first woman member of that staff, came to the University at the same time as did Miss Marks, the former, however, entering the extension division. Among the number of student and research assistants there are again members of the feminine contingent.

Not directly connected with the University, but yet an intimate part of research work here is the institute for research in social science which has on its staff three women: Dr. Katharine Jocher, assistant director; and the Misses Harriet L. Herrington, and Julia C. Spruill, research assistants. Mrs. Gladys Angel Beard is also a member of the faculty as director of physical education for women and assistant professor of health and physical education in extension training.

Country Life Group Will Meet In Raleigh

Sessions of the Country Life conference scheduled to meet here April 21 and 22 have been postponed and merged with the Farm Life Institute which will take place at State College the latter part of July.

The conference as originally planned was for the eight counties nearest Chapel Hill, which will include Orange, Durham, Chatham, Alamance, Caswell, Wake, Randolph, and Person. The primary purpose was to broaden the interest and activities of the country church and to form a more active link between the country church and the school.

MANY SCHOOLS COMPETE TODAY IN FIRST TRIALS

High School Debaters Winning Tonight Will Debate Here April 13 and 14.

Two hundred and fifteen state high schools will engage today and tonight in the twenty-first annual debating contest sponsored by the high school debating union of North Carolina. Each school will have two teams in the participation. The school winning both debates will send their teams to Chapel Hill, April 13 and 14, to compete for the Aycock memorial cup.

The query which will be discussed is: Resolved: That North Carolina should adopt the sales tax as a feature of its state system of revenue. The final competition here will be one of the features of the annual high school week in Chapel Hill.

The high school debating union was inaugurated twenty years ago by the Di and Phi societies and the University extension division. Acting Dean N. W. Walker of the school of education is in charge of the competition this year and E. R. Rankin of the extension division is secretary and general supervisor.

Curry high school of Greensboro represented by Katherine Keister and Nash Herndon won the debate finals last year.

MEMBERS OF PUBLICATION STAFF RECEIVE REWARDS

Vergil Lee, Bernard Perry, Pat Gaskins, Donald Becker, and Lonnie Dill were yesterday awarded guest tickets to the Carolina theatre through the courtesy of the management. These tickets are presented for outstanding work on the publication for the past two weeks.

Tau Beta Pi Meeting

There will be a supper for the Tau Beta Pi engineering society tonight at 6:30 o'clock in 214 Graham Memorial. Regular spring election of officers for next year will be conducted.

Carolina Magazine

In view of the fact that no official notice was published of the meeting of the Carolina Magazine staff to conduct official nominations to editorship for the coming year, a new election was called by Editor Robert W. Barnett late last night. This meeting will take place in the office of the publication at 3:00 o'clock this afternoon.

TAR HEEL STAFF CASTS ITS VOTE FOR SHOEMAKER

Members of Daily Paper Nominates Chairman of Editorial Board for Editor.

Yesterday afternoon the staff of the DAILY TAR HEEL voted its preference for the forthcoming editor of the TAR HEEL by voting 30 to 16 in favor of Don Shoemaker, chairman of editorial board over Claiborn Carr, sports writer for the past year.

After the floor was thrown open to nominations for the editorship, Claiborn Carr was nominated, with the man making the nomination elaborating on the merits of his candidate.

Don Shoemaker was next nominated, followed by a short talk by the nominator giving Shoemaker's various campus activities and his qualifications for the position.

After the nominations had been closed, the editor then requested the two candidates to appoint four members of the staff to count the ballots, each nominee appointing two men. Ballots were then passed around, and the staff members cast their votes unsigned. These were taken up by the four appointed counters, who took them along with the proxy votes into another room to count.

With the announcement of the final result of the vote, after a short discussion the meeting adjourned.

The staff nomination, although not barring others from being made from the floor on the day of campus nominations which are to take place Monday, April 3, is usually recognized as being the official nomination.

Suggestions were also made for the annual staff banquet, Thursday, April 13, being set as a temporary date, and a committee composed of E. C. Daniel, Bob Woerner, and Carl Thompson being appointed to prepare the program.

ENGINEERS WILL MEET IN DURHAM

University Juniors and Seniors In Engineering Will Convene at Duke.

The junior and senior classes of the electrical engineering school will attend the annual spring meeting of the North Carolina section of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers which will take place at Duke University Friday, April 7.

An especially entertaining and beneficial program has been arranged. Dr. William P. Few, president of Duke University, will open the meeting with an address of welcome at 2:00 o'clock. Dr. J. Lester Woodbridge, chief engineer of the Electrical Storage Battery company will give a talk, illustrated with lantern slides, on "Operation of Storage Batteries." Following this, C. M. Schoonover, chief load dispatcher of the Duke power company, will discuss "The Load Dispatching System of the Duke Power Company."

The afternoon program will feature an address by W. S. Lee, president of the American Engineering Council, on "The Engineer's Relation to the Public."

By a Beer Margin

Now that a bill has been presented in the Legislature for the legalizing of beer in this state, the Legislators heretofore decrying the lack of sufficient funds to be spent for educational purposes have an excellent opportunity to end their worries on this matter by favoring a revenue tax on this much-demanded beverage. It is true, of course, that North Carolina has not yet gone wet. But indications are good that the Old North State will be soon joining the damp ranks in advocating the return of light wines and beer.

Assuming that such does take place, the state could present a well directed taxation program on beer which would insure enormous revenue returns not being realized at this time. It would not only make possible the balancing of the budget much more effectively than under the plans now being presented, but, more important, it will enable the state to make somewhat larger appropriations to the educational institutions.

Many of the more conservative Legislators will balk at this plan solely on the grounds of their personal objections to any form of legalized beer. In taking this stand, however, they will be sacrificing the good of the state for a merely personal conviction. Were they to take the more intellectual position, they would advocate that plan whereby the state's revenue could more profitably be increased. The passage of the beer tax seems to be a logical solution to the state's present plight.

It is almost certain to come eventually. And the sooner this state begins to take advantage of this source of revenue, the better off it will find itself financially.

Pshaw!

Somewhat or other the Great Shaw with his pink Communistic beard managed to sneak into this country without your worthy editorial writer finding it out until after several blasphemies and insults against American citizens had issued from the Shavian walking, talking oracle. Lions—literary, social and otherwise—usually display the worst manners of any class of people on the face of the earth. And they get away with it. Shaw is no exception.

First he insulted the United States of America by saying that he didn't need to visit this country because all the worthwhile people here would come to England to see him. Then, when he arrived in America, he discourteously told an interlocutor who was assisting him in an interview with Helen Keller that all Americans were deaf as well as dumb. Moreover, on a visit to Hollywood, he brought tears to the eyes of Ann Harding by accusing her of acting in a play plagiarized from his work.

And after all this country has done for the world's greatest Egoist. Not only has he annually taken his share of American dollars in royalties from his plays, but he has borrowed ideas from American thinkers and depended on American writers to boost his stock with the play-going, book-reading public. And what does America get in return? Insults, ridicule, and scorn that only a country cousin would take.

The amusing thing about the whole business is that Shaw is making himself even more ridiculous than the American people. George Meredith was right when he said that the Egoist furnishes the best subject for comedy, because he so frequently and unwittingly exposes himself to laughter. Shaw is an Egoist and the American people have what five years ago would have been called an inferiority complex. If we will just ignore what Shaw says about us and listen to how he says it, the writer has an idea that we will find Shaw very amusing and more often than not, ridiculous. To Shaw, we say, "If you don't like this country, why don't you go back where you came from?"—E.C.D.

Gin and Beer It

We must not get too sanguine yet about this beer business. It is true that there are parties going on, but not in gardens or parlors or around heavily be-steined dinner tables. There are forty-eight parties going on in forty-eight separate legislatures in forty-eight of these United States. Our great states and commonwealths it seems are now busily engaged in America's great national pastime: making laws. Greedily, impatiently, forty-eight august bodies are closing in on the unsuspecting beer law. Happily our legislators are leaping forward for the kill. Restrictions, amendments, limitations have already surrounded Mr. "3.2," a mere infant as yet. Until his puerile yelps cannot but wring the hardest hearts.

There are to be licensing boards, liquor control commissions, legal sale permits, beer depots, and distributing points. Surely it would not do to have any simple, lucid legislation on the subject which would make it possible to secure the foamy prize with ease. On the contrary, our nation's politicians have not been trained in vain. Hemmed in by restrictions and limitations, surrounded by amendments, clauses, and by-laws, charmingly bound with tape of the most resounding red, forty-eight little beer laws will appear, forty-eight ingenious bundles of incomparable incomprehensibility.—B.B.P.

Justifiable Protest

Nine states concur in the arguments to be presented by Professor Sveinbjorn Johnson, legal counsel for the University, before the United States supreme court to determine the legality of the collection of custom duties on scientific instruments imported for use of the universities. Besides our own interests, Nebraska, Minnesota, Kansas, Kentucky, New York, North Dakota, Texas, and Vermont have notified Professor Johnson that they agree with his contention that we should not be compelled to pay this duty.

The brief bases the contention on the theory that the University "is solely a governmental agency of and created by the State of Illinois and is engaged in performing a strictly governmental function." The review of this case comes up after the supreme court gave its consent for a review of the decision of the court of customs appeals. Last October the federal court of customs and appeals upheld the Chicago collector of customs in his assessments on chemical glassware from Germany, optical instruments, and electrical machine parts besides other scientific apparatus.

A tariff is only valuable when it serves a purpose for which it is intended. Surely such a tariff is not intended to prevent the furtherance of scientific experiments in this country in order to be abreast and a little ahead of our times. As long as experiments are to be made it is only logical that the best equipment should be used. It is not against the spirit of a protective tariff to purchase abroad materials of such a nature that they cannot or at least are not made in this country, especially when they are used by such agencies as the University purely for experimental purposes that will benefit mankind.

Far from being discriminatory against American industry in these purposes, the act is rather challenging to our home producers. When it is known that such equipment can be produced and would be of benefit to science and consequently the people of the world the manufacturers should take it upon themselves to furnish such equipment.

Professor Johnson expects a final decision on the case before the end of the semester. We trust that it will be given in favor of the University in this matter. We do not advocate that such things be bought abroad in preference to products of equal quality in this country, but when an experimental work is being paid for by the taxpayers' money it is absolutely imperative that the experiment be given every possible chance to be a success. To do this only the proper materials and equipment should be used, and surely a tariff of any kind should not apply to cases where benefit to the world may be gained. That is allowing a technicality in law to retard progress in science as an aid to man.—Daily Illini.

Fritz Kreisler Returns!

Fritz Kreisler will return to Ithaca. On the face of it, this statement arouses no great interest except in the minds of those who will welcome this opportunity of hearing one of the world's mightiest virtuosos of the violin. But to those few of the old guard who recall the distressing occurrence during his last visit, this news will bring cheering satisfaction that another of the nasty grievances incited by World War hatred will pass into oblivion.

Herr Kreisler's last concert in Ithaca came during that period of stress just prior to America's entrance in the great war. At that time patriotism ran at fever heat and pronounced opposition to the appearance here of an Austrian was wide expressed in local circles. During the concert in Bailey Hall, despite redoubled vigilance on the part of the Proctor, a gang of hoodlums from an Ithaca "patriotic" organization brought their bitterness to a crux by cutting the light wires and plunging the Hall in pitch darkness. With the perfect composure of true artists Kreisler and his accompanist finished their selection in darkness and completed the remainder of the program with the feeble light of candles hastily procured for their aid.

As an artist and a gentleman the great violinist was deeply hurt at this most outrageous conduct, and although the miscreants were rounded up and run off the University property, and the master was quick to absolve Cornell of all blame and implication, a rumor was circulated to the effect that he would never reappear in Ithaca. This has been repeatedly denied by Kreisler himself, but despite efforts of University officials to stamp it out, it has persisted in remaining on many tongues.

News that the music department has at last been able to guarantee another concert by the Austrian genius, both the University and townfolk will rejoice in the chance to remove the community from a stigma which has been a sore spot these sixteen years. It is the universal hope of all concerned that Kreisler will enjoy a reception that will banish all remnants of bitterness and serve to cement the international goodwill which such a profound artist richly deserves.—Cornell Daily Sun.

Honor Systems

Recently an entire class at Syracuse University received a grade of incomplete as a result of the action taken by five of its members. These five students walked out of an examination room, refusing to compete with the cribbing which was being practiced, and which was defeating the purposes of the honor system in use there.

This is just another instance where the honor system of conducting examinations has failed. It has been tried in numerous American colleges and universities, but in most cases has faded out, due to inherent dishonesty of a few irresponsible students.

It is interesting to note, however, that in some institutions the plan does work, and works well. An example is Antioch College, a relatively small coeducational institution. When an examination is given there, the instructor, upon entering the examination room, gives out the questions and paper, and immediately walks out, leaving the matter of cribbing up to each individual. Students are permitted to leave the room at any time, and may return at any time within three hours duration of the examination. This is a privilege which is highly valued there, and any students observed cheating are immediately ostracized by their fellow-classmates.

It is a well known but deplorable fact that the honor system is not effective in colleges and universities whose only entrance requirement is scholastic proficiency in some small degree. Too many students are intelligent enough to be admitted, but lack of integrity necessary to make the system a success.—Purdue Exponent.

GRADUATE GROUP RECEIVES INQUIRY

Extension Division Conducting Institute for College Graduates.

The first inquiry in regard to the institute for college graduates, which is being experimentally conducted by the extension division, was received immediately following the press announcement of the institute last Saturday.

The inquirer is a recent graduate in engineering from a southern university, planning to work in architecture. Being unable financially to attend a northern school of architecture, he wishes to utilize the opportunity offered by the institute to further his knowledge in the fields of archaeology and business law.

Though he may not receive any credit toward a college degree from his registration in the institute, he may secure the broadening and developing of his powers which the University affords at barely more than the cost of living elsewhere.

According to R. M. Grumman, director of the extension division, the institute is expected to attract a number of persons who may be thus benefitted. If the institute proves to be of definite benefit it will be continued next year.

Will Rogers Will Debate Professor

(By College News Service)
Pullman, Wash., March 30—

The long-heralded debate between Will Rogers and Professor Claudius O. Johnson of Washington State College on "Ignorance versus Knowledge" or some allied subject, will take place in the near future.

Both of the prospective contestants gave out assurance this effect this week in the form of telegrams which they exchanged between Pullman and Beverly Hills, California.

Said Will in his wire to Professor Johnson: "Don't want you folks to think I have forgotten you but Mrs. Rogers has not been so well since coming home and I haven't been away at all. Missed the inauguration. From looks of the movie business I am liable to have a lot of debating time on my hands pretty soon. If you can't read this writing it's because these earthquakes keep us groggy."

Dr. Johnson, who is head of the political science and history department at the college, suggested in his reply that the debate be held sometime between April 14 and May 13 and that proceeds be turned over to unemployment relief organizations.

The more formal title which has been suggested for the debate is: "Resolved, That the store of knowledge assembled from newspapers and travel is sufficient to serve as a basis upon which to advise the American people on international problems."

Rogers, whom Johnson charged with being a poor authority on national and international affairs, would uphold the affirmative.

FACULTY MEMBERS ATTEND CONVENTION

Dr. J. M. Bell and Dr. F. K. Cameron of the chemistry department of the University are attending the meetings of the American Society of Chemistry at the annual sessions which are being conducted at Washington. Dr. Cameron, with B. L. Johnson, presented a paper yesterday dealing with research work on rubber, which has been carried on under a special research grant. They are expected to return to Chapel Hill tonight.

CAROLINA

Tar Heel Nine Defeated By Michigan State, 6-5

Poor Fielding Responsible for Coach's Loss of His First Game.

TEAMS MEET AGAIN TODAY
Captain Willie Powell Leads Teammates in Bat With Three Hits.

Failure to play heads up ball in the field caused Carolina to drop a 6 to 5 verdict to the traveling troupe of Michigan State ball performers yesterday on Emerson field. Twelve lousy hits came from the bludgeons of Bunn Hearn's proteges, including home runs by Peacock and McCaskill, but seven untimely errors led to Rookie Freddie Crouch's downfall to the Spartans. Three thousand fans saw the game.

Carolina will try to even the score this afternoon at 4:00 when it has its second engagement with the Michigan State contingent on Emerson field. Nathan Andrews will do the mound gracing for the Tar Heels with Lefoy Brown in reserve. Fiedler or Little is Coach Kobs' choice for the hurling duties.

First Stanza

Scoring activities by both teams were mild the first two frames, but in the third stanza the Spartans registered after Norton singled, pilfered second, and came home on an error. Captain Fawcette got life on another error and crossed the plate when Kircher singled. A double play, Phipps to Weathers to Dixon, ended the inning and pulled Freddie Crouch out of a tight hole.

Captain Powell brought home Carolina's initial marker in the fourth canto when he doubled off Rouse's glove and scored on Gene Zaiser's one ply blow.

Opening with a single in the fifth, Norton took second on another Carolina misplay. Parker reached the key sack on a bad throw, and a moment later Kircher sent the boys scampering home with his single.

Johnny Peacock gave the Carolina fans a thrill in the fifth when he caught one of Parker's slants and slammed it to the left field fence for a home run. With one down, Weathers singled, and McCaskill then drove in Weathers with a terrific clout into deep center which went for a four base blow, and tied the score 4-4.

Tie Ends

Carolina's tie lasted but a short time, the Spartans scoring two more runs in the sixth canto to break the deadlock. Eliowitz reached first on Carolina's sixth miscue, took second on Morse's sacrifice, and scored ahead of Langer whose single went for a home run when a fielder let it get away from him.

A free ticket to first, a sacrifice hit by Crouch, and Phipps' single sent Zaiser home with the final Carolina tally in the sixth.

Bunn Hearn's coterie threatened to deadlock the count in the last half of the ninth. Weathers opened with a single to center. McCaskill forced Weathers. Dixon popped to Rouse. Captain Powell walked. Hornaday pinch hitting for Croom laced down the third base line for a hit, but McCaskill overran the base to have Rouse tag him out to terminate the afternoon's game.

Freddie Crouch pitched excellent ball and had his mates given him any kind of support he would have won his first game as a Carolina regular. Captain Willie Powell led the Tar Heel hitters with two singles and a double in four times at bat. Kircher, patrolled the left field garden nicely for the Spartans,

Ten Authors Write Film Billed Today

"The Woman Accused," the Paramount-Liberty Magazine all-star story, written by ten nationally-known authors is being shown at the Carolina theatre today.

Rupert Hughes, Vicki Baum, Zane Grey, Vina Delmar, Irvin S. Cobb, Gertrude Atherton, J. P. McEvoy, Ursula Parrott, Polan Banks, and Sophie Kerr combined their talent in writing this story, which was recently published serially in Liberty magazine.

Nancy Carroll, Cary Grant and John Halliday head the cast. The story centers around Miss Carroll, who on the eve of her wedding to Grant, just as they are about to sail on a week-end "cruise to nowhere" and be married by the captain of the vessel, is confronted with the demand of a former rival that she return to him. Infuriated at her refusal, he phones a gangster acquaintance with the object of having Grant "bumped off." Before he can do it Miss Carroll hits him with the nearest object at hand and kills him. Halliday follows when she flees aboard the boat with Grant and digs up evidence incriminating her. He is almost successful until Grant steps in at a dramatic climax, clears her and carries her off to freedom.

while Langer with three for four and Norton with two for four led the bludgeon work.

A free ticket to first, a sacrifice hit by Crouch, and Phipps' single sent Zaiser home with the final Carolina tally in the sixth.

Bunn Hearn's coterie threatened to deadlock the count in the last half of the ninth. Weathers opened with a single to center. McCaskill forced Weathers. Dixon popped to Rouse. Captain Powell walked. SECOND STATE CONTEST COMES THIS AFTERNOON

Michigan State Game Today in Emerson Field Is Last of Two Game Series.

Carolina's baseball team continues their big schedule today and tomorrow, playing Michigan State in the last of a two game series on Emerson field, starting at 4:00 o'clock, and Elon, respectively. The first contest is on Emerson field and the latter at Burlington.

Coach Hearn will probably use the same line-up today that played yesterday's battle with Michigan except for the battery. Andrews is slated to do the hurling with Matheson doing the backstopping. There is also a chance that some shifts will be made in right field with Zaiser or Vick playing some of the game. Johnny Phipps seems to have a strong hold on the short-stop position, but Dutch Leonard may get the call for one of the games.

Saturday the Tar Heels play Elon on the recently constructed park in Burlington. This is Tom Whitley's home town and as a result Coach Hearn will likely call on the little right-hander to perform on the mound as an added feature for the Burlington fans. Tatum or Strayhorn may see action behind the plate as McCaskill has played twice this week and Matheson is slated to catch this afternoon.

Coach Hearn will probably take a large squad with him to Burlington so in case the contest is not too close he will be able to give some of the reserves experience fielding and batting in a regular contest.

ESSAYS IN SCIENCE CONTEST DUE TODAY

Essays of contestants entered in the annual science contest sponsored by the North Carolina Academy of Science are due today. The winner will be announced at the academy meeting at Davidson College, April 5 and 6.

The contest is held every year for high school students. Papers are written on subjects in biology, botany, zoology and geography. Frances K. Foust of Greensboro was the winner of a silver loving cup in the contest last year. Officers of the academy are J. B. Bullitt of the University, president; Earl H. Hall of the Woman's College, vice-president; and H. R. Totten of the University, treasurer.

MONOGRAM CLUB PLANS SELECTION OF CHEERLEADERS

Meeting of Athletes and Coaches
Make Plans to Revive Spirit Of Student Body.

Realizing the sad state of cheering here, Haywood Weeks, president of the student body, called a meeting last night of representatives of the Monogram club, the coaching staff, and students interested in cheerleading, to consider plans for reviving student spirit.

President John Phipps, Bill Collins, Peyton Brown and Ralston LeGore were the Monogram men; Coach Bill Cerney and Coach Dale Ranson, represented the coaches; Ernest Hunt, cheerleader for the past year, and three other new men attended the meeting.

All men in the upper three classes who had had any previous experience in cheerleading were notified of the meeting and asked to attend. Of the ten men who were in school, three answered the call. They were Pete Ivey, D. Plesser, and L. Ostrow. Hunt, who has been connected with Carolina cheering for the past three years, is anxious to get some definite organization among the cheerleaders as soon as possible and requests anyone else interested to leave their names at the athletic offices in Emerson stadium.

The Monogram club is working on some plan to provide for the proper selection of cheerleaders and together with Hunt the executive committee of the club expects to have a definite system drawn up soon.

from the game room and the bowling alleys was $454.21, and the concessions brought in $85.00, making the total monthly income $539.21. Operating expenses for the same month included $441.80 in salaries for twelve people, $211.20 for heat, lights, water, power and service, and $49.08 for supplies and incidentals, making the total monthly expenditure $702.08. This shows the excess expenditure over income to be $162.87 for the month of February. The figure does not include entertainments, contributions to campus programs, purchases except for supplies or repairs. From the income from student fees is reserved a minimum of $500 per year for major repairs and replacements.

The Union is a genuine student co-operative enterprise. If any profit is made in any of the Union activities, such surplus is turned back to the students in the form of additional social and recreational equipment and facilities.

Entries For Tennis Match Close Today

Entries for the mammoth Carolina-Duke tennis carnival close today. All players desiring to compete should enroll either at the tennis courts or with Herman Schnell at his office at Emerson field.

Duke's entry is still much larger than Carolina's and authorities here are in hopes that a last-minute rush of entries will bring the University's forces nearer those of the Blue Devils.

In an attempt to increase the entry list here intramural points are to be awarded to all players participating. As no intramural tennis matches are to take place during the week of the carnival, many intramural netmen are expected to participate.

Art Class Students Sketch In Charcoal

Fourteen students of art are working in charcoal as a preliminary to design painting under the instruction of James A. McLean, instructor for the art guild of Chapel Hill.

The art guild has been organized only a short while, but is making considerable progress. Classes are held Tuesday and Thursday evenings between the hours of 7:00 and 9:00 o'clock on the second floor of Hill Music hall, where instruction in drawing is given. During the summer, classes will be held out-of-doors for nature sketching.

The guild is attempting to secure two art exhibits in the near future: one, composed of a group of forty oil paintings, selected works of advanced students in the Pennsylvania academy of fine arts of Philadelphia; the other, paintings of Danville painters.

McLean is a former student of the Pennsylvania academy of fine arts. He is also founder and director of the Southern School of Creative Arts in Raleigh.

CERNEY LETS UP ON FROSH NINE

Yearlings Meet Roanoke Rapids
Tomorrow in Opening Contest Scheduled.

As a result of the varsity game yesterday, Coach Cerney sent his first year baseball squad through only a short work-out.

After a short exercise drill Coach Cerney completed the afternoon with a long batting session. Coach Cerney is planning to give his men a fifteen minute exercise drill every afternoon as a means of conditioning them. However most of the practice days are to be taken up with batting, as the yearlings are especially weak in this department. Coach Cerney also plans to give his squad plenty of work on sliding as this is another phase that needs improving.

Yesterday the first uniforms were given to the frosh, fourteen suits being issued. Those receiving suits were McKeithan, Spiers, Glasgow, and Mills, all right-handed pitchers; Hutchinson, a southpaw hurler; Orr, first base; Tatum, second base; Irwin, shortstop; and Austin, third base. In the outfield Shapiro, Bullock, and Mahaffey and behind the plate King and Ogburn got uniforms.

The Tar Babies' opening contest is scheduled for tomorrow with Roanoke Rapids high school.

"KING KONG"

On Skull Island "King Kong" the great ape who lives atop Skull Mountain and of whom every living creature lives in terror, awaits the sacrifice of a brown girl from the natives. Against him the natives have erected a tremendous wall. It is on the ceremonial day when the adventuring producer, Carl Denham, lands with his motion picture troupe.

"A white and gold bride for King Kong!" The natives offer six of their dusky belles in exchange for Ann Darrow, golden blonde leading lady of the picture company. Jack Driscoll, in love with Ann, is for violence, but Denham and Capt. Englehorn realize they must keep the good will of the natives. Vowing friendship and promising to return tomorrow, they go back to their good ship, the Adventurer.

Alone on deck, that night Ann is seized and abducted by the natives. She is not allowed to scream. As they roughly put her over the ship's side to the dugout, she is afraid in a way that she has never imagined.

"Another bride for King Kong!" The natives open the huge defensive gates and place her outside on an altar. They gather on the ramparts and strike the great gong, signal to "King Kong." Treetops tremble and fall. "King Kong is coming!" Then Ann sees leering down at her on her high altar—an ape fifty feet tall! Helpless, she screams!

GERMAN DRAMA TO BE OFFERED HERE TWO DAYS

Dr. Spann Takes Leading Part
And Directs German
War Play.

The German play Der Flieger, with Dr. Meno Spann directing and leading the cast, will be presented by the German department under the auspices of the Playmakers April 7 and 8, in the Playmakers theatre. Casting the play was made possible through co-operation of the French department.

Der Flieger was chosen by Dr. Spann because it is a good example of modern German drama and because it will not offer unusual language difficulties. The German lines are simple and parts of the plot are revealed by conversations between the hero and an English prisoner.

War Play

The hero of the play is Frank, leader of a German air squadron, who must combat an English ace known as "The Colonel." The German realizes that his opponent is the better man and knows that he will be killed. His patriotic duty to sacrifice his life and his human desire to live conflict within him throughout the play.

He meets and defeats the Englishman, only to find that his victim is not the dreaded Colonel, who has been on leave. Though this is a terrible blow to Frank, he flies a second time to meet the Colonel. This encounter marks the climax of the play.

The cast as announced by Dr. Spann is as follows: Dr. Spann, Frank; Foster Fitz-Simons, the Colonel; German pilots, T. Johnson, B. Thurman and R. W. Linker (both of the French department); German soldier, Dr. Urban Holmes of the French department; Orderly, G. Helling; Volunteer, J. Aaron; and a French girl, Ellen Stewart.

In order that those who do not speak German may understand the entire action, a synopsis of the scenes will be included in the programs. Flying outfits for the production are used through the courtesy of pilots at the local airport.

World News Bulletins

School Opponents Fail
Determined efforts on the part of senate anti-eight months school forces to undo the work of the upper house in appropriating $16,000,000 for a state-supported extended term met with failure Thursday but opponents succeeded in putting off final passage of the biennial supply bill by recessing until last night.

Maneuvers to "put the skids under" the school proposal, which were adopted Wednesday night in the form of an amendment bearing the signatures of twenty-seven senators, came in form of a motion by Senator Patton, of Macon, to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was approved and another by Senator Blackstock, of Buncombe, to permit special districts to levy taxes on real estate for extended term and supplemental purposes. Both motions were ruled out of order and the senate passed the appropriations bill upon second reading but refused to suspend the rules for final action.

Extortion Attempt
Representative Giles W. Cover, Jr., of Cherokee, was the recipient of extortion letters demanding $5,000 or death to him or members of his family in Cherokee county. The source of these letters is supposed to be from proponents of the dry law of which Cover is an uncompromising enemy, fathering a bill in this legislature to repeal the Turlington Liquor Enforcement act in this state.

Bowie Continues Fight
The house's economy leader, Representative Tam Bowie, of Ashe, Thursday night admitted that he is holding meetings with a group of house members, who are determined that the proposed senate program for the state-supported eight months school term shall not pass the senate.

Appeal to Roosevelt
A resolution urging President Roosevelt to take such action as is possible to halt attacks by the Hitler government on Jews was left at the White House today by a delegation representing the Jewish war veterans of the United States.

Forest Bill to President
The senate today accepted the house amendments to the forest unemployment bill and sent it to the White House. President Roosevelt expects to begin enlistments for the forest conservation work almost immediately.

British Kidnapped
British gunboats were searching off the Manchurian coast today for a daring gang of Chinese buccaners who kidnapped four British officers yesterday from the British merchant ship Nanchang.

WOMAN'S COLLEGE PLANS OBSERVANCE OF MAY DAY

Plans have been advanced at the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina for a special observance of May Day to take place on the campus front May 1. Miss Helen Coogan of Bryn Mawr is chairman of the festival.

Although the queen and attendants have not yet been chosen, Miss Eloise Cobb, president of the class of 1933, has been appointed as King of the May. The text of the story, which will be read at the festival by Miss Nedy Patterson, was written by Miss Arline Fonville.

Sidelights On Playmakers

By Foster Fitz-Simons
It seems that Playmaker tours are not confined to the serious presentation of serious drama; the trip from which the group returned last Sunday morning was marked by everything from the setting up of small harems to enthusiastic political meetings. The masculine members of the troupe, untrammelled by home campus inhibitions or conventions, allowed themselves to be lionized at every stop by an admiring feminine gatherings, and in their best nautical manner left a girl in every port of call. In fact the gentlemen had the best of it at every turn as they were by far in the majority among the troupers and the places at which they played were largely feminine in nature and population, it was only natural that they should feel that their stock had gone up far above the home-par.

More specifically along these lines, at Elon College the "boys" were given individual hostesses whose business it was to see that they thoroughly enjoyed their stay. All in the spirit of hospitality, of course. There have been no complaints as yet. Even "Proff" Koch and Harry Davis were surrounded by a bevy of admiring belles.

At Queens-Chicora in Charlotte the situation was even more fraught with danger and eager females. One of the boys was even virtually kidnapped, and was so upset by the experience that he was unable to remember who his real hostess was and went wandering about the streets of Charlotte looking for her domicile until the wee small hours of the morning. It was also gratifying to some of the gentlemen of the ensemble to find at this particular place that the ancient and honorable but long lost institution of stage door Marys was revived in all its splendor.

TRIALS OF CASTS TO BE CONDUCTED BY PLAYMAKERS

Local Drama Group Works Out Plans
For Experimental Productions
To Be Offered April 12.

Try-outs for experimental productions of eight new plays written in Professor F. H. Koch's playwriting classes will be conducted in the Playmakers theatre at 4:00 o'clock Monday afternoon. The plays, containing about forty-five characters, will be presented before an invited audience on April 12.

The plays, with the number of parts in each, are as follows: Isult, a poetic fantasy by Martha Hatton (three women); Discontent, a play of industrial strife by J. M. Ledbetter, Jr. (eight men); Etovalh Plantation, a legend of the land by Eugenia Rawls, based on the story of Sherman's march through the south, (three women and seven men); Farewell To Glamour, a modern American comedy by J. P. McConaughy, (five men and three women).

The Son's Return, the tragedy of a south-west trapper by Frank P. McIntosh (four men); The Queen Was In The Kitchen, a modern farce by Ellett Stewart (two women and one man); Blow Me Down, a comedy of Long Island by Bill Bonyon, (three men, one woman); Four Hearts In Sep Time, a modern comedy by J. P. H. Millhouse (three women).

Community Club Will Meet

The Community Club will meet at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon in the Episcopal parish house. The literature department will be in charge.

Considering the trip in a little more serious vein, although most of the edge was off of it as a tour due to the previous trip during the winter, it was a revelation to all the players concerned to be treated—or rather overwhelmed at almost every turn with a superabundance of that once famous virtue called Southern Hospitality. Especially was this evidenced in the private homes in which they were entertained at Ellerbe. There they were stuffed to repletion with such unheard of delicacies as fried chicken and home-made pies.

It was at Ellerbe that Professor Koch during his talk between plays instructed the audience in the fine art of applause. The actors at the end of the first scene of "Davy Crockett" were dismayed by the total silence with which their efforts had been greeted, and the subdued and restrained nature of the handclapping following the last scene. It seemed that the audience, unused to dramatic presentations, was afraid to let itself go in its enthusiasm as they did not wish to appear too entirely naive. But after "Proff's" excellent and tactful suggestion there was no lack of enthusiastic noise the rest of the evening.

Crowd Cheers Koch
At Campbell College "Proff" Koch was given an ovation during which the audience rose to its feet and virtually cheered for some moments the man who had discovered Paul Green, who is an alumnus of the institution, and "Proff" in return gave one of his most inspired and moving talks about Green and the Native Drama ending with a quotation from "Davy Crockett" concerning the University and state culture saying—"No, we'll not die; We'll grin down off the walls of the Alamo and the Americans'll lick up the Mexico like salt!"

REVIEWERS FAVOR PUBLISHED FORM OF McNAIR TALKS

Lectures Given by Kirk and Millikan Receive Favorable Comment in Religious Organs.

Two University Press publications on theological subjects, Stars, Atoms, and God by Dr. Harris E. Kirk and Time, Matter and Values by Dr. R. A. Millikan, received favorable reviews in religious organs.

Stars, Atoms and God, composed of a series of three McNair lectures made here by Dr. Kirk in 1931, is described in the Christian Observer as "worthy of a place in any man's library, but it is especially a book that young men and women in college ought to read."

"The literary style makes these lectures well worthy to stand along side of those which have preceded. Keeping in mind that he is talking in these discussions to young men, the author has shown himself a master of exposition, taking the difficult discussions of men like Eddington, Jeans and others and translating them into pellucid, easy-flowing prose that charms the aesthetic faculty and illumines the understanding," is the Observer's comment.

Time, Matter and Values, composed of lectures made by Dr. Millikan last year, has as its theme, "Dogmatic materialism in physics is dead," according to a review in the Southern Churchman. The Churchman concedes the book to be rather profound, but says the reader "will be rewarded on reaching the last in which Dr. Millikan gives his personal outlook on the new ideas about values caused by new knowledge of the universe."

"Alfalfa Bill's" Orders Alarms School Heads

(By College News Service)
Oklahoma City, March 30.—Executives of two of Oklahoma's leading institutions of higher learning this week were pondering with alarm Governor William H. Murray's executive order providing for numerous drastic changes and consolidations in college divisions.

The order affects the University of Oklahoma at Norman and the Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical College at Stillwater and provides: That the university's college of engineering and school of home economics be transferred to the A. and M. college. That all pre-medical and pre-law students and the school of geology be transferred from the Stillwater campus to the university at Norman. That normal schools at both institutions be abolished and that education students in these divisions be transferred to regular state normal schools in other parts of Oklahoma.

Numerous difficulties were being encountered in carrying out the order which caught both institutions by surprise, inasmuch as the re-organization would necessitate the transfer of some 1,400 students to the A. and M. campus, with the university receiving only about 100 in return.

MUSIC CLUBS TO MEET AT RALEIGH FOR CONVENTION

Dyer to Direct One of Choruses Appearing in Concerts at Meeting Wednesday.

Concerts and convention sessions of the North Carolina Federation of Music clubs will take place in Raleigh from Wednesday through Saturday of next week. Carolina students have been invited to attend the concerts, which will be offered in Raleigh's Memorial auditorium, by Mrs. Joseph S. Correll, chairman of the federation. Dr. H. S. Dyer will direct one of the choruses.

The program will begin with a choir festival at 8:30 o'clock Wednesday night. The choir will include about three hundred singers of central North Carolina, presenting hymns and anthems. Professor Max Noah of Guilford College will direct.

Chorus Included

The St. Cecilia chorus and a Raleigh male chorus will present a concert, assisted by the Meredith College trio, at 8:15 o'clock Thursday night. The combined chorus will be directed by Professor W. H. Jones of St. Mary's School, Raleigh.

Friday afternoon the All-State Ladies' Chorus, directed by Dr. Harold S. Dyer, will give a concert. Solo artists of the state will assist. The chorus will include about a hundred voices.

All sessions of the convention, to which Carolina students are invited, will meet in the Sir Walter hotel ballroom.

PRESS RELEASES DR. RAPER'S BOOK

The Tragedy of Lynching, a detailed study of lynching in the south, has recently been published by the University Press. The preparation and publication of the work were made possible by the Commission on Interracial Co-operation and the Southern Commission on the Study of Lynching. Dr. Arthur F. Raper, research and field secretary of the commission and a former graduate of the University, is author.

A summary of all lynchings from 1889 to 1932 is given, but the major portion of the work is devoted to a detailed description of the lynchings of 1930 of which the scenes of each were visited by the author as chief of research and investigation.

The facts completely demolish the claim that lynching is a means of protecting southern women and the barbaric notion that the use of violence will teach the Negro to "keep his place."

CAROLINA

MARY F. PARKER IS NOMINATED AS MAGAZINE EDITOR

Given Official Nomination by Staff Over E. C. Daniel by Vote of 17 to 10.

Miss Mary Frances Parker, poetry editor of the Carolina Magazine, yesterday was made the official nominee of the publication's staff for the editorship next year. E. C. Daniel, associate editor of the publication, was also named at the meeting and received ten votes to Miss Parker's seventeen.

This is the first time that a co-ed at the University has received the nomination for an elective campus office. Miss Parker's name will be turned over to the president of the student body to be read as the staff choice at the meeting for campus nominations, April 3.

Other Names to Be Proposed
The staff nomination does not prevent other nominations from being made from the floor at the general session scheduled for next Monday. It is, however, considered the official nomination.

Following the nominations of Miss Parker and Daniel, several proxy votes were presented to Robert W. Barnett, editor of the Magazine, who presided over the meeting. After some discussion as to the advisability of accepting such ballots, the staff voted to include these votes with those of staff members in attendance at the meeting.

Yesterday afternoon's meeting was the result of a formal protest filed after the original nomination meeting Wednesday evening. It was held that since no public announcement of such a meeting had been made, the results were invalid and unjust.

ANDREWS CHOSEN AS NOMINEE BY YEARBOOK STAFF

Nominated for Next Year's Editorship Over Morrie H. Long
At Meeting of Group.

Alex B. Andrews, Jr., managing editor of the Yackety Yack, yesterday gained the official staff nomination for editor over Morrie H. Long by a 15-11 vote.

After the floor was thrown open for nominations for the editor's chair, Morrie H. Long was nominated; this nomination was followed by Andrews' name being presented. By an unanimous vote all discussion concerning the candidates was tabled.

Each candidate appointed one man to represent his cause in counting the secret ballots. The votes were counted before the entire staff in the same room in which the group had assembled.

Editor H. N. Parsley urged that the staff adopt plans for having an annual banquet following the distribution of the annuals. This plan met with hearty approval, but no date was named for the social function, which will come off during the late spring.

Although the staff election does not bar others from being made on the date set for the regular campus nominations which are set for Monday, April 3, the staff selection is generally considered the official nomination.

SENIOR WEEK WILL START MONDAY, MAY 8

Contrary to an announcement appearing in yesterday's DAILY TAR HEEL, senior week will begin Monday, May 8, and not April 8. The week's program will begin on this date with a smoker in Swain hall that evening at 9:00 o'clock. Vesper meetings will be conducted several times during the week under Davie poplar, and the program for the week will be concluded with the annual Junior-Senior dance set in the Tin Can, with Bert Lown and his band furnishing the music.

DRAMA FESTIVAL WILL END TODAY

Original Plays and College Production Finals Will Conclude Tenth Celebration.

Original plays and college production finals today and the announcement of winners tonight will feature the last day of the tenth Dramatic Festival.

High school finals were completed last night with Southern Pines, eastern North Carolina representative, presenting Kelly's Flattering Word and Lenoir, western winner, presenting Poor Aubrey. Junior college finals, with Biltmore College, Campbell College, and Mars Hill competing, were also played. The results will be announced tonight.

Program This Morning
Today's program begins with a business session and election of officers at 10:30 o'clock. Dr. George Coffman will talk on "The Story of Making a Pageant" at 11:30 o'clock, to be followed by a costume review and contest conducted by Mrs. Ormae Davis of the Playmakers, and "Dancing and the Actor with Demonstrations" by Phoebe Barr, former Denishawn dancer. There will be a director's luncheon in the Carolina Inn at 1:00 o'clock.

At 2:30 o'clock will be given senior college original plays: Oasis by Harry C. Willis of Duke, Judgment Delayed by Huffman of Lenoir-Rhyne. Individual original plays will follow at 3:30: Unto Us A Child Is Born by Kneale Morgan of Asheville Biltmore College Junior Players, and Vergil by Bernice Kelly Harris of Seaboard Players.

The final contest in original plays from community organizations comes at 7:30 o'clock: The Voice of the People by Walter Spearman of Charlotte, the Little Theatre of Charlotte; Judgment Comes to Daniel by Bernice Kelly Harris of Seaboard, the Seaboard Players.

The senior college finals will be given at 8:30 o'clock, when the eastern and western winners will meet. The grand finale takes place at 10:00 o'clock, with Professor F. H. Koch announcing all winners and President Frank Graham presenting awards.

BATTLE WILL ADDRESS LAW SCHOOL BANQUET

The law school will conduct a banquet Wednesday night, April 12. Speakers for the evening will be Kemp P. Battle, president of the North Carolina Bar Association, Hon. Walter Murphy, and W. C. Jackson, of the University. F. W. Hanft, professor of law, will act as toastmaster.

United States Would Be Foolish To Go To War, Declares Dr. Beard

Noted Historian and Author Compares Hitlerism With Ku Klux Klan in This Country; Points to Russia as Admirable Example for Other Nations to Follow.

Before he left Chapel Hill yesterday, Dr. Charles A. Beard, who delivered the Weil lectures here last February, discussed "the whole universe" with a member of the feature board in his suite in the Carolina Inn. Touching on the possibility of another general war, Dr. Beard declared that "we should be fools if we went in another." He believes no nation really wants war at this time, but he pointed out that no nation wanted war in 1914 (with the possible exception of Russia), although it came. He sees possible danger in another "incident."

Beard believes that America's entry into the European melee in 1917 was for the best, because, had Germany won the war, he believes it would have been impossible to get along "with that Potsdam gang." If Germany had won the war, Dr. Beard believes they would have challenged the Monroe Doctrine. While "you can negotiate with England and France," Beard seems to think that the old German regime was particularly hard to get along with.

Wilson and Versailles
President Wilson, said Dr. Beard, saw the grave failings in the Treaty of Versailles, but hoped that the League of Nations would liquidate them. The great mistake on the part of the Allies was the fact that they made no concessions to the early and peaceful post-war German governments, and it was not until "Von Papen shook his fist in their faces at Lausanne" that Germany gained any relief. Germany, Dr. Beard thought, would be unlikely to get her old colonies back, as neither France nor England would be willing to relinquish them.

Hitler and Ku Klux Klan
Comparing Hitlerism in Germany with the wave of Ku Klux Klan popularity that spread over parts of the United States after the War, Beard declared that it would be hard to tell where the United States would be if this country had been under the strain Germany has been under since the World War.

Dr. Beard agreed with Dr. Alley, who spoke recently in Gerard hall, in that Hitler is being supported in Germany by reactionary forces opposed to genuine socialism.

The "Next War"
Speculating on the possible course of events if another war should be precipitated, Dr. Beard guessed that Germany would have to rely on Italy to hold the fort until Germany could organize her civilian air forces for gas warfare. It is obvious to anyone with any imagination at all that the horrors of another great war would be infinitely greater than the last. Perhaps, Beard thought, Communism would have to come along after it "to liquidate the junk." He believes Russia's "tending to her own garden" is an admirable example for other nations to follow. He is of the opinion that the

Freshmen Tremble With Fright As "Hell Week" Arrives In Full Glory

Neophytes Forced by Fraternity Brothers to Go on Wild Goose Chases and to Serenade Co-eds; Treasure Hunting and Gandhi Imitations Favored by Tormentors.

"Hell Week" is here again. With all its battered anatomies, befuddled brains, and bruised reputations, the long-standing period of jollification for the initiated members of fraternities and torture for their yearlings is now giving the campus one of the best shows of the season.

Although it scarcely compares to the rip-roaring "Hell Weeks" of our forebears, the present product nevertheless has provided its share of quaking hearts, inextricable situations, and hopeless mix-ups.

Tabulation is apparently one of the favorite methods of occupying the initiate. One was required to count all the ties in the railroad from Carrboro to Durham; another had the doubtfully entertaining nocturnal experience of reckoning the number of tombstones in the local cemetery, aided only by a flashlight; counting the number of "dopes sold in Pritchard-Lloyd's for two hours and keeping track of the number of times the local traffic light changed were other variations of this entertainment.

Lest the feminine interest be neglected, one lodge arranged to have a pledge garbed in Indian brave costume build a fire, and cook ham and eggs over it. He was joined by a fellow sufferer who then performed a violent war dance—all before the portals of Spencer hall. His limbs were not nimble, his voice was not cultured, and his mortification was tremendous. A kindred spirit found himself being wheeled past the same place attired in baby clothes, sucking a bottle—containing milk.

These were, however, minor attempts to permit the co-eds to share in the benefits of "Hell Week." The major event occurred last week when Mrs. Lee, guardian of Spencer, became alarmed at 2:00 o'clock in the morning at the spectacle of two girls leaning out of the windows and talking in excited tones. Two men were outside, loudly inviting the inmates to come down and join them.

Mrs. Lee turned on the powerful spot-lights that are attached to the building and the cause of the excitement beat a hasty retreat into the surrounding darkness. To her amusement, Mrs. Lee later discovered that the disturbers were merely filling the orders of their fraternity in order to become formal members of the lodge. Perhaps she guessed it on the spot.

Treasure hunting is a popular form of furnishing the greatest amount of discomfort possible to future Greek letter men. The neophytes are given notes that have to be deciphered in order to learn the location of some particular spot, usually in the woods around Chapel Hill. Another

SMOKER CONDUCTED BY CARR RESIDENTS

The residents of the Carr dormitory met Thursday night in Graham Memorial for a business meeting and a smoker. Bill Markham was elected president for next year. After this matter was disposed of a smoker was conducted. After an informal discussion, the residents were served refreshments and entertained at the Carolina theatre through the courtesy of E. Carrington Smith.

The next of the of smokers will be Thursday night, at which time Mangum will be feted.

OVER 900 LOANS MADE THIS YEAR

Students Have Received $59,878.28 in Loans Since Beginning of Scholastic Year.

Nine hundred and ninety loans amounting to $59,878.28 have been received by University students so far this scholastic year, it was announced yesterday by J. A. Williams, assistant dean of students. It is estimated that a large number of loans will be granted during the remainder of the term. This report included both long-term and short-term loans.

In arranging the statistics by quarters, 430 loans were made during the fall quarter, totaling $25,389.28. The loans averaged $59.04 apiece. Three hundred and sixty-five were granted during the winter quarter, and totaled $22,198, an average of $60.82 each. Thus far in the spring quarter, 195 loans have been made for $12,291, an average of $63.82.

It was estimated that five hundred different students received the pecuniary aid through the Student Loan Fund, which is slightly more than nineteen per cent of the entire student body. Williams expressed the probability that over twenty per cent will avail itself of the fund before the termination of the year.

A report issued yesterday on the Masonic Loan Fund showed that the original grant of $4,000 made in 1922 has increased to $4,855.29. The latter amount is represented by notes held by fifty-six students in the University.

Pierson Announces Fellowship Awards

Announcement of awards of twenty-six University fellowships, numerous assistantships, scholarships, and research appointments by Dean W. W. Pierson of the graduate school will be made today. Six hundred and twenty-one applications have been received.

Nearly every state in the country and several foreign nations were represented in the list of applications.

The stipend of the fellowships of the University is $500 and free tuition. The twenty University scholarships carry a stipend of free tuition alone. The Kenan fellowships provide a stipend of $700 in addition to free tuition, and the Ledoux chemistry fellowship $300 and tuition.

Club Meets Friday

The Playreaders club will meet at the Baptist church at 8:00 o'clock next Friday evening. Mrs. Sturgis Leavitt will direct a reading of Robertson's David Garrick.

BOARD WILL FILL SALARIED POSTS ON PUBLICATIONS

Applications to Be Filed With J. M. Lear by April 5, Day Before Selections Made.

Selection by the Publications Union board of men for salaried positions of the campus publications will be made Thursday afternoon, April 6, it was decided by the group at a meeting yesterday afternoon.

The positions to be filled are as follows: business managerships of the Yackety Yack, THE DAILY TAR HEEL, and the Buccaneer; and the managing editorship and circulation managership of THE DAILY TAR HEEL.

Applications Due April 5
It was announced yesterday that written applications for these positions must be filed with Professor J. M. Lear on or before Wednesday, April 5. The candidates will appear in person before the board at 2:30 o'clock the next day at the office of Professor Lear at 109 Bingham.

The new managing editor of THE DAILY TAR HEEL is the only one of the men to be selected who will assume office this spring. He will take office Saturday, April 8.

The board moved yesterday afternoon to postpone action on the question of acceptance of beer advertising by the campus publications until the administration takes some action on the matter.

HEADS OF LOCAL Y. M. C. A. WILL BE CHOSEN TUESDAY

Only Active Members Will Be Allowed to Cast Ballot; Polls To Be in Lobby of "Y."

Election of the Young Men's Christian Association officers for next year will take place Tuesday, April 4. The polls will open at 10:00 o'clock Tuesday morning in the lobby of the Y. M. C. A. and will close at 5:30 o'clock.

Only those students registered on the rolls of the association as active members are eligible to vote, including both those students holding membership cards and those who have attended at least three regular cabinet meetings each quarter.

At the meeting of the members and officers of the association Tuesday night, it was decided that candidates nominated for the presidency should also run for the vice-presidency. The man receiving the most votes will become president and the one receiving the second highest number will serve as vice-president.

Nominees

The committee nominated Ike Minor and Lawrence Fountain for president and John Acee was also named when nominations were thrown open to the floor. Nominees for the other offices as named by the committee are Simmons Patterson, Locke Sloop, and J. D. Winslow for secretary and Tom Nesbit and Jack Poole for treasurer.

The Daily Tar Heel

The official newspaper of the Publications Union Board of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill where it is printed daily except Mondays, and the Thanksgiving, Christmas, and Spring Holidays. Entered as second class matter at the post office of Chapel Hill, N. C., under act of March 3, 1879. Subscription price, $4.00 for the college year. The Folk Play Is the Thing

This week-end Chapel Hill is host to the state-wide dramatic festival in which are participating schools, colleges, and community players from the mountains to the sea. Within the next few days the Playmakers Theatre will see the presentation of plays by professional writers and more important still the efforts of North Carolina folks who have already contributed such writers as Paul Green, Ann Bridges, and Loretto Carroll Bailey.

While the University of North Carolina is a leader in southern education in the field of the drama we stand with the leaders of the nation. The Carolina Playmakers are known throughout the country as one of the most eminent of collegiate dramatic organizations and the plays of some of our young writers are the equal of any in the collegiate field.

Not content with the fostering of the drama merely in Chapel Hill the University's dramatic department under the leadership of Professor Koch have sounded the note of a new and vital interest in the folk play that has reached every hamlet and village of North Carolina and has extended its influence through all the south.

American culture though at present puny is striving vigorously to equalize the great handicap of its recent origin. For years American writers were content to ape the European, but gradually our literary output acquired a genuine American style and tone. The drama, however, has lagged behind in this Americanization and it may almost be said that our only great American playwrights are living ones so late has come our development in this line.

America looks to the folk play as her hope for a drama that is purely native and able to place our stage on a par with that of the old world. Here in North Carolina the movement has acquired its greatest impetus and the University which has already done much bids fair to become a major influence in the creation of a truly American theatre.

Many of us here tend to overlook what is in our midst and are not cognizant of the mighty happenings here in Chapel Hill. Perhaps these few days will serve to interest the student body in a force among us that is attracting the attention and praise of the nation.

The student body should be proud of the part we are playing in this great field of national literature and proud of the men and women who are directing the great movement. And the University is proud and happy to play host to the eager folks, young and old, who under the inspiration of our leaders are doing a great share to instill the vital stream of the folk drama into a national theatre inferior to none.—J.F.A.

Flies in The Ointment

This University boasts a campus unexcelled for natural beauty in the entire nation, yet the visitor is likely to leave Chapel Hill with something of a feeling of aesthetic disappointment, for, if we have pensive buildings, mantled in ivy and softened by age; if over these grounds stately oaks, ancient as the institution itself, stand sentinel, and if these greenswards, with their park-like dimensions, and bordering stone walls and walkways, form a picture to delight the soul of the most discriminating connoisseur, there are also eyesores which would do credit to the most abominable slum scenes in our most backward cities.

As one walks from Gerrard hall to the Library, his eye is distracted by a heap of rusty rails, mangled bricks, rotting logs and fragments of useless building materials, which the feeble hedge bordering the walk can not obscure from view. Further to the right will be seen a mass of decrepit sheds with caving roofs and dangling walls, surrounded by dirty oil drums and a veritable junk-yard of obsolete machinery and tools. Forming a disgusting background for Patterson-Morehead tower is another line of shabby sheds which passing motorists can not but notice, and which can scarcely add to the aesthetic impression of the University grounds.

In these days of depression, these eyesores can readily be excused on the grounds of insufficient revenue; but with almost no outlay of money and with small effort on the part of the buildings department, these charnel houses could be cleared away; cheap sheds could be removed to less conspicuous places, and much of the junk could be consigned to the dumping grounds with no great loss to the University. It seems that Federal money for relief might be obtained sufficient to effect these changes, and the flies which have for so long infested the aesthetic ointment of the University grounds could be temporarily picked out.—W.A.S.

Hark to The Bell

For quite a number of years it has been customary for a class period to last only fifty-three minutes out of the hour and for the students at the University to have a seven-minute interval in which they may go from class to class. This is not only a custom in use by the students but a schedule laid down by members of the faculty.

Occasionally, however, there are a few members of the teaching staff who have the regrettable habit of keeping the pupils after the fifty-three minutes allowed for the class. Sometimes this is due to the fact that the professor has already outlined a lecture which is to be given during the period and persists in finishing it although it may mean that the student is late to his next class and may have to take an unexcused absence for his tardiness, even though he is late through no fault of his own. More often this overtime lecture is the result of the professor not having heard the bell. In either case it is the student who has to take the blame for not reaching his next class in time.

The student has the right to leave the class at the appointed time but hesitates usually to take advantage of this because in so doing he may incur the wrath of the professor for thus leaving the class so unceremoniously in spite of the fact that the teacher is encroaching upon the time of another faculty member. Whether the student is late for his next class and receives an absence or whether he leaves before the preceding class before the conclusion of the lecture, he is forced to take the blame regardless of the fact that he has no choice in the matter.

There are only a few professors on the campus who have this lamentable habit, but their conscious or unconscious violation of the prescribed schedule may cause a disruption of this schedule for many others throughout most of the day. If these few professors would be a little more careful in the preparation of their lectures or in listening for the bell, there would be a much smoother routine during the day, fully as much could be told in a lecture, and there would be much less inconvenience caused to others.—F.P.G.

That Old Custom Of Saying "Hello"

Several years ago, all the freshmen were required to say "Hello" to upperclassmen whether they had been formally introduced to each other or not. Also the upperclassmen were required to address the freshmen in a similar manner. Moreover this same spirit was supposed to prevail between the upperclassmen.

This school year found the upperclassmen giving a brief, occasionally hearty greeting to the incoming freshmen until rushing season was terminated. Then, all semblance of cordiality was dropped. The average student, instead of greeting his college mates as formerly, is in many cases cloaked with an impenetrable mantle of reserve. The University that was once distinguished by a typical geniality once cheerily pervading the campus atmosphere, has slowly begun to change.

The whole-hearted custom of saying "Hello" to fellow collegians was one which, in the course of the year, enabled the average freshman to become acquainted not only with his peers but upperclassmen as well. It permitted the upperclassmen an opportunity to recognize and become friendly with newly matriculated students. It also gave the experienced ones a chance to welcome the green freshmen to the brotherhood of the students at the University of Vermont.

Let us consider the results of a self-contained student body. There are many colleges where the student is intent only in his own thoughts.

The boys over in the House, and we don't mean the Big House or the Housepital, but the House of Representatives, are still laboring along with that same sense of humor we described here several weeks back. Since it is apparent that the General Assembly will occupy Raleigh until July, a conservative estimate, the House has to act up a little now and then to keep everyone in good spirits.

Several weeks ago an enterprising representative got hold of some boxes of trick matches—the kind that crack when you light one of them. He distributed them around on the desks of the legislators, and every time somebody gets up to speak, all the boys pull out their matches and crack 'em. They're also got some exploding cigarettes, reserved for appropriation bill amendments. When somebody cracks a match or explodes a cigarette, everybody jumps, and then they all grin and slap one another on the back. Just to sorta' keep courage up.

Mistake

The search light story by Mr. Berryman, who columns for this publication, reminded us of a little skit down south campus way the other night. It seems that three or four gentlemen set out last week-end for Spencer hall. It was rather late in the evening, a Saturday evening. Arriving at what they thought was Spencer, they hallowed up at a light in a second floor window.

A head appeared in the window. It was a lady, and she remarked derisively, "Scram."

The gentlemen persisted. The window opened again and the fair one's head emerged. "Listen, this is Bingham hall, not Spencer. This is not room 20—it's Dr. ———'s office. And I'm not Nelly, but Dr. ———'s secretary."

He hurries madly here and there, an insignificant iota in the hectic scramble for existence at that institution. He is cold and aloof to outsiders; his personality fails to invite the warm fellowship that a smile and a welcome word will so easily do. The college becomes more of a factory, its students, cogs of an inhuman machine. There are a great many colleges in the United States in which hypocrites, sophisticates and snobs reign, but it has been the laudable custom at Vermont to avoid any tendency towards such a condition.

And so, let us not forget that the convivial "Hello" should always be kept on the Vermont campus. This slight gesture of friendship, which will bind together all Vermont men in the ties of friendship and college spirit, is something that should be retained at this University—an institution which is advancing steadily year by year. A struggling young graduate is always thankful for a familiar face in the business world. A friend of college days means much in these times of economic distress, with that thought in mind that we take the opportunity to recommend to all men of Vermont that the custom of saying "Hello" to each other whether formally introduced or not should never become a dead custom.

And so it is, with that with a thought for the present and a glance at the future that we recommend the complete resurrection of this amiable greeting between college mates.—Vermont Cynic.

United States Would Be Foolish To Fight, Declares Dr. Beard

trend of the future will not be towards a world state, but towards such "tending to their own garden."

Asked if the hegemony of France in Europe would not be as bad as the hegemony of the Central Powers prevented by their defeat in 1918, Beard declared emphatically that it would not, that France has a small population and would not be dangerous.

Who Is Lying?

Asked "who is lying, the newspaper correspondents in Germany or the minister who denied their reports?" Dr. Beard said, whimsically, that he should not like to have to fix a numerical percentage, but that probably ninety-five per cent of the newspaper reports leave an erroneous impression. He did not lay such an erroneous impression at the door of out-and-out falsehood but drew the analogy that, if there were a half-dozen lynchings in the south in the same month and all crowded on the front page of a newspaper, that, too, would leave a false impression. He pointed out that there have been killings in Germany since the war.

Economic Regulation Coming

Declaring that the world had already moved far away from the old economic policy of laissez-faire, Dr. Beard foresaw an increasing tendency towards socialization, "Perhaps a swing in one direction, and then another swing back." The problem of obtaining the benefits of group ownership while at the same time retaining individualism "is for you youngsters to solve."

Dr. Beard speaks in his home with the same delightful manner that he carries to the public rostrum. Every now and then one corner of his mouth will be wrinkled into a whimsical smile, while at the same time one of his bushy eyebrows will rise. He is deaf, finding it necessary to rely on an earphone when holding a conversation.

At the present time, Dr. Beard is working on a book in which he will try to indicate what "national interest" is. It will be remembered that this was the thesis of the three Weil lectures he delivered last month. Dr. Beard expects the volume to be published within the next few years.

note which is hidden at that spot directs them to a second place, equally as distant. The search goes on indefinitely, and the last mission usually leads to a place where a tadpole, a crayfish, a chaste cat, or a nanny goat is the adventurer's reward.

The guiding genius of one house conceived the ingenious idea of rousing all the pledges in the dead of night to lead them out on the front lawn for a thorough dousing with a convenient hose. Another result of heavy cogitation was requiring the freshmen to walk upstairs backwards for a number of days and to make appropriate exotic obeisances upon entering the house.

One unfortunate lad was hoisted into a tree with only an alarm clock, two eggs, and a paddle for company. In addition to making himself comfortable up there, he had to shout the reliable "Cuckoo" at every passerby. Breakage of the eggs speedily brought the paddles into play.

Not among the least well-known diversions of embarrassment is dressing the initiate in some outlandish costume and forcing him to parade Franklin street. In addition to several crude imitations of Mahatma Gandhi, students have been noted with automobile tires around their bodies, attired as members of the opposite sex, and laden with dogs and kittens on their arms.

When "Hell Week" finally closes, sighs of relief come from every quarter. But not even the harried pledges will have better right to feel relieved than Mrs. Lee, because most of the performers are obliged to visit her establishment at least once, and Dr. Archibald Henderson, who has lost count of the number of times he has attempted to explain the Einstein theory of initiates.

WOMEN'S CHORUS TO GIVE CONCERT

Singers to Appear in Hill Music Hall Monday Night; Group Numbers Twenty-Five.

Women's chorus of the music department of the local community club will appear Monday evening, April 3, in Hill Music hall. Professor Harold S. Dyer will conduct the group. This organization was formed in January for the purpose of participation in the state choral festival in Raleigh next week. It is composed of twenty-five voices.

Monday evening's concert will present a variety of classical and secular songs including those which will be sung by the chorus in Raleigh. Lamar Stringfield, Adeline McCall, and Ralph Weatherford will play the Mountain Sketches of Stringfield. Harry Lee Knox, pianist, will offer a group of Debussy compositions. Mrs. L. C. McKinney, Mrs. R. H. Wettach, and Miss Virginia Hufty will soloists with the chorus.

The program will include Summer's Morn by Gilchrist, Daybreak by Harris, Who Is Sylvia by Schubert, River, River a Chilean folk-song, Senorita by Dessauer-Houseley, Danza by Durante, In Joseph's Lovely Garden arranged by Dickinson, To The Children by Rachmaninoff-Kramer, A Song of India by Rimsky-Korsakoff, and It Was a Lover and His Lass by James Dunn.

Michigan State Hands Tar Heel Team Second Straight Defeat, 5 To 3

Spartans Shove Over Five Runs In Fifth Inning to Take Game From Carolina.

McCASKILL GETS HOMER

Tar Heels Meet Elon at Burlington This Afternoon With Griffith to Pitch.

One bad inning in which Michigan State scored five runs yesterday was enough for the Spartans to inflict the second straight defeat upon the Tar Heels at Emerson field before a crowd estimated at about 2,500. The final score was 5-3.

Nathan Andrews, former Presbyterian Junior College hurler, was Coach Bunny Hearn's choice to stop the invading Spartans, and Nate did a fine job, holding the heavy hitting mid-westerners to six hits, but five of them were bunched in the fatal fifth frame, which was enough to down Carolina.

Carolina's hitters fell on Feidler, visiting hurler, in the initial session as if they meant to finish the slim right-hander off in a hurry, bunting three hits to score three runs. With one out and the bags empty, Johnny Phipps slammed a screeching line drive to right field which was good for three bases. Weathers crossed up the Michigan State infield, which was playing in close for a bunt by punching a sharp hit through second to score Phipps. McCaskill, hitting in the clean-up post laid the wood on a fast ball to drive it into deep right center for a home run.

Bad Fifth Inning

Andrews was pitching beautiful ball, and until the fifth inning had allowed one hit. In the fifth, momentary wildness and five hits netted the Michigan State margin of victory. Rouse, opening the inning, grounded to Weathers. Klewicki singled to center, Feidler walked, and both scored on Langer's long triple to centerfield. Kircher then laid down a bunt to squeeze in Langer, and was safe when he slid in under Dixon. Captain Fawcette scratched a single to the box, advancing Kircher to second. McCann was hit by a pitched ball, and Eliowitz scored. Kircher and Fawcette with a sharp single to center. Rouse who had started the inning, finished it by grounding to Dixon.

In spite of the fact that they reached Feidler occasionally, the Tar Heels didn't threaten again until the eighth, but snappy fielding by the visiting infield prevented Carolina from scoring and ended the last threat. Phipps led off with his second hit of the game, a line drive single to left, Weathers walked but McCaskill, Powell, and Dixon all hit to the infield and that was that.

Kircher's snagging of fly balls was the highlight of the game, although McCaskill executed a beautiful play when he pulled in Norton's high foul right next to the fence.

Carolina showed a complete reversal of form yesterday. Instead of the Comedy of Errors that was seen Thursday, the boys all played heads-up ball. The two Carolina errors came on chances that were very difficult.

In spite of the two losses to Michigan State, the Tar Heels still have the makings of a good club. Their hustle and spirit are hard to beat, and this seems to have attracted more people to Emerson. The increase in attendance over last year is a tribute to Coach Hearn and his club.

GOLFERS OPPOSE DUKEMEN MONDAY

University Outfit to Match Clubs With Blue Devils on Hope Valley Course.

Carolina's golf team will face its third foe of the season when they take on the strong Duke team at Hope Valley Monday. This is the outstanding match on the Tar Heels' schedule as each team is rated as one of the strongest in this section of the country.

So far this season both teams have clean slates, each having won two victories. Duke has defeated Rollins and Washington and Lee, while the Tar Heels have triumphed over Richmond University and Washington and Lee. Each team defeated Washington and Lee by the same score, 15 1-2 to 2 1-2.

Close Contests Certain

The probable Carolina lineup will be Alan Smith, no. 1; Captain Billy O'Brien, no. 2; Carl Cramer, no. 3; and Erwin Laxton, no. 4. The feature match Monday should be between Alan Smith, Carolina ace, and Roger Peacock, Duke captain and no. 1 man. Last year Peacock defeated Smith by a narrow margin with a par-smashing 67. The match between Captain O'Brien and June Caldwell, former Duke captain, should also attract much attention.

HAWTHORNE, ABERNETHY VIE TO LEAD HURDLERS

Two sophomores, Tom Hawthorne and Frank Abernethy, will carry much of Carolina's hopes in the hurdles, and it is hard to tell at this stage which is going to be the better boy. Outdoors last year Hawthorne regularly held the upper hand, and turned in best times of 15.8 seconds for the 120 highs and 25 seconds flat for the 220 lows. The Southern conference indoor games this year were another story. Abernethy placed second in the 70 lows and third in the 70 highs, both of which were done in record time, but Hawthorne didn't place. They are both practicing intensely now, and their mutual rivalry should spur them on to some good performances this year.

INTRAMURAL RACE AFFECTED LITTLE BY WEEK'S GAMES

Betas and Phi Gams Lead Fraternity League; Laundry and Carr Lead Dormitories.

Last week's intramural athletic program, which was conducted on only two days, and was further abbreviated by forfeits, had little bearing on the standings of the teams in either league of either sport.

In the dormitory circuit, Carr and the Laundry Club are setting the pace, and a fast pace at that. The Law outfit has won two fast contests, downing Swain Hall 7-1 last week and taking a 3-0 win from Grimes this week. The Laundry nine, after a slow start when it defeated Aycock, 11-3, went on a scoring spree Wednesday and beat Ruffin by a tremendous margin of 32-2.

Other undefeated dormitory nines include Best House, Everett, and New Dorms. All have one win to their credits.

Betas and Phi Gams Lead

Beta Theta Pi and Phi Gamma Delta are leading the pack in the fraternity circuit. The Betas have won from Phi Sigma Kappa, 5-4, and from T. E. P., 4-2. Phi Gam has gained both its wins by forfeit.

The Betas are also showing the way in the tennis race for fraternities. Last year's campus champs, with shutout wins over Kappa Alpha and Delta Kappa Epsilon to their credit, are the only net team to have won two matches.

Grimes is showing the way in dormitory tennis, with three wins to its credit already. The Atlantics, Mangum, and Old East are the teams which have lost to this fast moving team.

Other teams which are undefeated in tennis are Carr and Ruffin in the dormitory league and Phi Delta Theta, Phi Gamma Delta, Pi Kappa Phi, S. A. E., Sigma Chi, Sigma Nu, Sigma Phi Sigma, T. E. P., Zeta Beta Tau, and Zeta Psi. All these teams have won only one match.

LETTERS WILL BE AWARDED MONDAY

Nine Athletes and Three Managers Will Be Given Monograms at Club Meeting.

The first formal presentation of athletic letters by the Monogram club will be conducted at the regular meeting of the group, which is set for Monday night at 7:30 o'clock in Graham Memorial.

President Phipps announced yesterday that nine athletes and three managers would receive their sweaters at the meeting. The athletes are: Aitken, Beale, Davis, Giddins, Glace, Glover, Long, McIntosh, and Quarles. The three managers are Cate, Kerr, and Barnard.

Members Urged to Attend

All members of the Monogram club, the coaching staff, and the athletic council are urged to be at the meeting. President Frank Graham and Dr. Charley Mangum have been invited to make short talks to the men.

The executive committee of the club is anxious to have as large an attendance of active members of the club as possible at the meeting. It is planned to make this presentation program one that will take place after every sport season.

The members of the athletic council who are expected to attend the program are: C. T. Woolen, Dean A. W. Hobbs, Dr. R. D. W. Connor, Dean H. G. Baity, and Dr. Foy Roberson.

Last Day For Entries In Tennis Meet Finds 170 Men Registered

Baseball Shorts

By MORRIE LONG

Michigan State's traveling ball team is enjoying a most successful southern invasion this season what with three wins out of four starts, two over Carolina and one over Elon. Tomorrow the Spartans journey over to Duke with the hopes of stretching their victories to three straight. Their best pitcher will be in shape and should give the Blue Devils a lot of trouble.

While on the subject of Michigan State, it might be fitting to mention that Charlie Bachman, the ex-Florida football coach, has taken over the gridiron duties at the East Lansing school. He is replacing Fred Crowley, one of Chuck Collins' old buddies at Notre Dame. The Spartans had a honey of a season last year, scoring wins over Fordham and Syracuse while dropping a close one to Michigan, Big Ten winner. Kircher, Eliowitz, and Klewicki were members of the Michigan State football team.

Old "Babe" McCaskill continued his bludgeoning activities in great style in yesterday's game. Mac leaned on one of Feidler's slants for another four base wallop to score Weathers in the third. This makes the third home run the mighty one has swatted the last three games. Looks like he is an improved ball player from last year when he hit for a two figure mark.

It was up to Kircher, the left field garden patrol for the Spartans, to turn in the most spectacular catches. In the second stanza, Kircher made a beautiful running catch of Croom's long fly, while in the third and fourth the southpaw robbed Phipps and Hornaday of base knocks when he miraculously got under two fly balls.

Rookie Nate Andrews, like Freddie Crouch in Thursday's game, did his first mound performing for Carolina. Andrews was given much better support by his mates than Crouch received, and but for one bad inning when the Spartans bunched five hits for as many runs, he would have won his first varsity victory. Andrews permitted only six safe blows and struck out six. He hurled for Presbyterian Junior College at Maxton before enrolling here. Both Crouch and Andrews will prove valuable hurlers this year for Coach Hearn.

Johnny Phipps to date is the most consistent hitter on the squad. He has been clouting the old American potato for the lusty average of .500 or 7 for 14. Johnny's play in the field has been considerably above par, and it looks like Bunn Hearn's shortstop worries are over.

TWINS RUN FOR CAROLINA AND JUDGES SEE DOUBLE

Two of Carolina's leading prospects in the distances are Louis and Henry Sullivan, twin-brothers from Anderson, S. C., who look, think, act, and run so much alike that their mates couldn't choose between them and so named them co-captains of next year's cross country team.

Coaches Bo Shepard, Chuck Quinlan, and Crayton Rowe will present the sweaters to the men winning letters in basketball, wrestling, and boxing respectively.

Tournament Will Begin Monday; Continues Through Next Saturday.

POINTS WILL BE AWARDED Intramural Department to Give Credit; "Herald-Sun" Papers Will Present Plaque.

Although the number of entries for the Carolina-Duke tennis carnival have not yet reached the desired number of 200, the entry list is well on its way to completion with 170 already registered. Today is the last day that entries will be accepted at either the tennis courts or in the intra-mural office.

Duke had listed 152 players Thursday and by now the list should be much larger. The Duke representative will meet Coach Kenfield here this morning to arrange the pairings for the meet, which will begin this Monday and continue through Saturday.

No Doubles Matches

The winner of the meet will be decided by the greatest number of individual matches won. There will be no doubles matches. Play will be carried on in the afternoons, with one half of the meet to be played at Duke and the other half here. The odd ranked men will compete on our courts.

Points are being awarded by the intramural department to both organizations and individuals. Two points will be awarded to each organization for each man that enters and plays in the meet.

The organization with the largest number of entries will be awarded twenty-five points; the team with the second greatest number of entries will be given twenty points; third, fifteen; fourth, ten; and fifth, five.

The entry fee will be one new ball required of each contestant. Players who will participate will be carried over to Durham in student automobiles.

Points will also be given towards the Grail trophy. Five points will be given to each man who wins his match, and one point will go to the man who is defeated. This trophy is for the outstanding intramural athlete. The varsity and freshmen have been ranked by Coach Kenfield: Hines, Wright, Friedman, Willis, Harris, Morgan, Dillard, Lott, Levitan, Minor, Shuford, Jones, Lynch, Johnston, Sobol, and McGlinn. Other rankings will be announced today.

This is the first meet of its kind ever known to have been attempted by any university. It is hoped that a registration of at least 200 will be reached in both schools. Carolina, with today still open for entries, should surpass the desired number.

Rotating Trophy

A rotating trophy will be awarded by the Durham Herald-Sun papers. It will be kept in possession of that school which wins the meet in any particular year. It will be endeavored to make this an annual affair.

Anyone registered in either the graduate or undergraduate school of the University is eligible to enter the meet. No other qualifications are necessary. There are still a number of good or average players on this campus who have not yet signed their names to the entry list.

Merrimon Cunningham of Duke, a Rhodes scholar and a graduate student, will probably play first man for the Blue Devils. He formerly played at Vanderbilt University, and is the leading player at the Durham school. He will be matched with Wilmer Hines.

FROSH BASEBALL TEAM TO OPPOSE ROANOKE RAPIDS

McKeithan or Glasgow Slated to Pitch for Yearlings in Game Here at 3:00 O'clock.

Carolina's 1933 freshman baseball team is scheduled to open its season this afternoon at 3:00 o'clock against Roanoke Rapids on Emerson field.

Roanoke Rapids won the high school state championship among class 'B' teams last year. It has almost the same outfit back, man for man, and is favorite to down the yearlings.

Frosh Weakened

Coach Cerney's first year team was weakened greatly by football practice which took away several of the outstanding candidates for the first nine. These men will, however, be back for the first battle among Big Five yearling teams. The freshmen have a fairly strong defense both in the infield and outfield but the batting is weak. Irwin, shortstop, and Tatum, second base, are both heavy hitters but little can be said for the rest of the team.

Coach Cerney hadn't decided yesterday who will do the hurling, but it will either be McKeithan or Glasgow. McKeithan has more stuff but not as good control as Glasgow. Both are good pitchers and will do most of the mound work for the yearlings during this season. If McKeithan pitches, Glasgow will probably be used in the outfield as a result of his ability with the bat.

Yesterday Coach Cerney got an early start and gave the whole squad a fairly long workout. Today the team will be called to practice at 1:30 o'clock, one and a half hours before game time. The starting lineup and the order in which they hit follows:

Austin, 3b; Tatum, 2b; Bullock, cf; Irwin, ss; Orr, 1b; King, c; Shapiro, lf; Mahaffey, rf; McKeithan or Glasgow, p.

Doak in Trouble

Chick Doak, N. C. State diamond mentor, is in trouble. He has seven good hurlers on his squad for this year, but they're all righthanders—not a southpaw in the lot. Every now and then Chick ascends the mound in practice games, but even he is right-handed; and so any student who can chuck a ball from the portside will be mighty welcome at the Raleigh institution. Cap'n Joel Morris, Rudy Sietz, seniors; Jimmy Cooper and Hyman Dave, juniors; and Willie Lynn, Rupert Cox and Dave Rodwell are the seven star-board chunkers at State.

SPEAKERS NAMED FOR CONGRESS OF FEDERATION HERE

President Graham, Dean Bradshaw, and Carl Goerch Will Address Group.

President Frank P. Graham and Dean Francis F. Bradshaw of the University and Carl Goerch, newspaper editor, have accepted invitations to address the third annual congress of the North Carolina Federation of Students which is to convene here Friday and Saturday, May 5 and 6.

Haywood Weeks of Swansboro, president of the federation, will preside over the meetings.

A luncheon in Graham Memorial at noon May 5 will open the meeting. General and committee sessions are scheduled for Friday afternoon and night and will be continued over Saturday. The convention is to be closed with a banquet and dance Saturday night.

Delegates will represent every institution of higher learning in the state. Student problems of all sorts are to be discussed with emphasis on the workings of honor systems.

The federation was formed in the spring of 1931 at the instigation of John Lang, then a graduate student in the University. The organization has grown steadily in prestige and effectiveness.

CAVALIERS CARD MEET WITH YALE

Ring Teams of Two Schools to Fight at Richmond in February of Next Year.

University, Va., March 31.—Virginia's Southern conference champion boxers will meet Yale's ring team in Richmond on the night of Saturday, February 10, 1934, according to arrangements just completed by James G. Driver, Virginia's athletic director.

The Yale-Virginia bouts next season will be the first venture of the Cavaliers with boxing in neutral territory.

Driver has almost completed the 1934 boxing schedule. It will probably be the most difficult undertaken by the Cavalier sluggers since 1926 when the ring card included V. M. I., Washington and Lee, Colgate, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Penn State, and Notre Dame. Virginia won six matches, lost one.

The Yale match will be the next to last of Virginia's dual engagements. The regular season will be closed against Navy in the Memorial gymnasium on February 17, in accordance with the home and home agreement. Last month Virginia's team handed the Tars their first home ring defeat in fourteen seasons.

Matches with Yale and Navy just before the eighth Southern conference boxing tournament will make a severe test for the Virginians in defending their Dixie title, which they have held for three seasons. But Coach Johnny LaRowe is willing for his charges to try it. Last year Virginia defeated Yale 6 to 1 in a home meet.

Driver points out that the meet with Yale is something of an experiment. The success or failure of the bouts in Richmond will probably determine whether Virginia will arrange for future matches on neutral territory.

The University of Virginia has a faculty rule against football games away from the home campus of either institution. This does not, however, apply to other sports.

World News Bulletins

Beer Bill Goes to House

North Carolina, legally dry, but more or less illegally wet since 1908, may usher in May Day to the chorus of the famous "Drinking Song" if advocates of light wines and beer continue their march through the general assembly with the same speed that has marked progress of the Francis bill to permit the sale of 3.2 alcoholic beverages. The measure passed the upper house on the second reading 34 to 14.

Jews Plead for Mercy

The Jews, their backs to the wall as their last appeals for mercy fell on deaf ears, have visualized their financial ruin and ultimate isolation from German cities and towns. Reports from the United States that Chancellor Hitler's Nazi party might be persuaded at the last minute to refrain from launching its drastic economic war on the Jews today seemed only to add fuel to the fire yesterday. A proclamation defined the action as the beginning of a war on the entire Jewish race of the world. A party declaration said that it will be fought "until victory is ours."

Roosevelt Takes Farm Bill

President Roosevelt yesterday took into his own hands the administration farm bill, summoning to a conference the members of the Agriculture committee after they had failed to agree among themselves on what to do with the bill.

Basketball Team Plane Falls

A big tri-motored private airplane carrying the championship basketball team of Canada, the Canadian Toolers, crashed near Neodesha, Kansas, yesterday, costing the lives of four of the occupants and seriously injuring the other ten players.

Cyrus Frazier Dead

Cyrus Frazier, 80, retired educator and manufacturer and prominent in North Carolina Republican circles, died at his home in Greensboro Thursday afternoon after a long illness. Frazier, the father of Clifford Frazier, Republican candidate for governor last year, taught at Trinity College, now Duke University, for many years.

CAROLINA TRACK TEAM HAS 120-POUND STAR

One of the most colorful members of the Carolina track team is Floyd Higby. He weighs only 120 pounds, but is a veritable workhorse. In addition to holding the University record in the broad jump (22 feet 9 3/4), he is also one of the leading prospects for the 220, 440, and relay, and is making exceptionally fine record in one of the most difficult schools at the University—engineering.

Clemson Starting Early

If Coach Joe Davis' plans work out, Clemson College basketball team are going to go places in next year's Southern Conference cage tourney. He has called for basketball team candidates to turn out for spring practice just like the gridiron aspirants do in the winter. Davis says that he expects plenty of results.

Fifteen in Infirmary

Fifteen students were confined to the infirmary yesterday. They were: John McGlinn, Robert M. Wallace, Ben Brothers, Elizabeth A. Kinney, C. L. Royster, R. H. Proctor, J. V. Woodard, Katherine Jamison, H. R. Barnhardt, J. N. LeConte, H. S. Rubin, W. C. Pitt, J. M. Glace, Jr., Louis Hampton, and R. E. Gee.

FOOTBALL TEAMS TO CLASH TODAY

First and Second Outfits to Team Up Against Reserves in Game at Kenan.

After a week of hard, enthusiastic practice, Coach Chuck Collins will choose two teams from his squad of spring footballers and hold the second of the three spring games this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in Kenan stadium.

The spirit of the entire squad has shown a remarkable improvement and the competition for berths on the varsity eleven is the hottest seen on the Tar Heel gridiron in the past few years. The rugged tackling dummy which caused the squad trouble galore at first of the spring practices, has been taking an awful beating lately; in fact he has been sent to the repair shop twice recently.

Coach Collins announced last night that he planned to use his first and second string men against the reserves today in the second of the series of three games. Spring practices are to be ended next Saturday with the regular monogram-rookie contest.

The first team this afternoon will probably show: Frankel and Yeager, ends; Barrett and Daniels, tackles; Barclay and Kahn, guards; Kanner, center in the line. Martin will be at quarter, with Snyder at fullback and Jackson and Shaffer at the halves.

The third team will have Townsend and Orr, ends; Hobgood and Moser, tackles; Landis and Harrell, guards; and Denti, center in the line. Jones at quarter, McCachren at full, and MacDonald and Thompson at halves will make up the backfield combination.

Michigan State Hands Tar Heel Team Second Straight Defeat, 5 To 3

The Tar Heels play Elon this afternoon in Burlington with Griffith slated to see mound duty for the locals. Michigan State ends an invasion of this state against Duke with their star, Pemberton, scheduled to hurl.

Andrews showed yesterday that he might easily develop into a star with a little more time. Nate has plenty of speed and fair control, but what pleased most was his ability to field his position like a veteran. Just watch this boy.

The outfield couldn't complain of overwork yesterday. Up until the ninth inning, Hornaday caught one fly, and two more in the last frame, while the other two gardeners didn't have a single put-out.

Old Rules Disclosed

Just to show the boys and girls what an easy time they have now, the University of Cincinnati News dragged out some of the rules in effect at Salem College, at Winston-Salem, back in 1772. For instance:

"Baths can be taken only by special permission, and at times indicated by the instructors.

"The strictest order is to be observed in the embroidery room.

"Pupils are never to go out of sight or hearing of the instructor when out walking."

Approximately 700 books are stolen from the University of Wisconsin library each year.

TIME TRIALS SET THIS AFTERNOON

Field Events Will Begin at 2:45 O'clock, and Running Events At 3:00 O'clock.

Coach R. A. Fetzner will put his track proteges through their first official time trials of the season this afternoon beginning with the field events at 2:45 o'clock and the running events at 3:00 o'clock. All the events will be conducted on the Emerson field track.

It is very important that all men note the events in which they are scheduled to participate so that each individual will have ample time for a thorough warming up.

All freshman track candidates are expected out by Coaches Fetzner and Ranson. The yearlings will participate with the varsity men, and each first year man will be required to see either of the track mentors in order to see what event he is scheduled to participate.

Partial List of Varsity Events
The following is a partial list of the events in which the varsity men will participate. The time called for the event is also given beside the names of the candidates.

3:00, 100-yard dash, Childers, Alexander, and Hubbard; 3:10, 3-4 mile run, Jensen, McRae, Cordle, and Waldrop; 3:20, 220-yard dash, Higby, Childers, and Waldman; 3:30, high hurdles, Hawthorne and Glenn; 300-yard run, Pruden, Fox, Bost, Trubnick, and M. H. Smith; 3:50, six laps, L. Sullivan, H. Sullivan, and Hayward.

4:10, low hurdles, Hawthorne, Glenn, and Trubnick; 4:20, 660-yard run, Kimrey, Marsden, Donnell, Goldman, and Finch.

Field events: 2:45, shot, Mullis and Hodges; 2:45, high jump, Hamlet and Reid; 3:15, discus, Mullis, Schmuckler, Hodges, Henry, and Dameron; 3:30, pole vault, Smith, Aitken, Reid, Jackson, and McDonald; 3:45, javelin, LeGore, Chandler, Armfield, and Olman; 3:45, broad jump, Higby, Hubbard, Childers, and Aitken.

Dameron in Line-up

It may seem like a typographical error or shades of old times, but Sandy Dameron's name is supposed to be in the field event trials today. Dameron has been coaching the boys in the field events and will show his wares this afternoon in the discus.

The following men will not be able to participate: Gunter, 220 yard dash; Abernathy, low and high hurdles; Hubbard, six laps; Williamson, 660-yard run; and Stafford, high jump.

Wildcats Wallop Indians

Davidson College got its baseball season off with a bang Thursday when the Wildcat diamond warriors chalked up a decisive 14-2 decision over the Catwaba Indians on the former's home diamond. The 'Cats' club bunched hits in the fourth, sixth and eighth stanzas for their victory. Mackorell, hot corner guardian, topped Davidson batsmen with a double and a single. Skinny Pearce, hurler for the Presbyterians, allowed but a half dozen hits.

Duke Schedules Track Meet

Duke University will play host to both state and Southern tracksters this year.

The state track meet is slated for Saturday, May 13, in the Duke stadium; and the Southern Conference meet will come as a postlude one week later in Duke stadium also. The Dixie gathering, however, will last for two days, one day, Friday, being for running off the first heats.

HOGAN ADDRESSES LOCAL ROTARIANS

Declares Banks Unopened Since Holiday Are as Safe as Those Reopened Immediately.

Banks that haven't reopened since the banking holidays will be just as safe as those that reopened immediately when they are permitted to resume operations, in the opinion of Milton E. Hogan, cashier and executive head of the Bank of Chapel Hill and district chairman of the North Carolina Bankers association, who spoke before the local Rotary club Wednesday night about banking conditions.

Another speaker was Collier Cobb, Jr., who discussed and praised the work of the program committee which Bill Neal has headed this year.

Praises New Legislation

Hogan praised the new legislation proposed by President Roosevelt to protect investors in securities.

Analyzing conditions that led to declaration of the bank holidays, he pointed out that at the time the deposits in banks in this country amounted to forty-five billions, while there were only seven billions in circulation and approximately half of the latter was being hoarded. There were only three billions in gold in circulation, and returns of gold to banks since then show that half a billion, or one-sixth, of this was being hoarded then.

He also pointed out that with present governmental regulations a run on any bank would be impossible now.

Carolina Squad Boasts Two Former Harrier Captains

The Carolina track squad includes two former cross country captains, Bob Hubbard, who led last year's team, and Clarence Jensen, who captained the 1931 harriers while a junior and led them in first place to a victory in the annual Southern conference cross country run. Jensen is a former Southern conference indoor record holder for the mile, but Billy Lauck of Virginia lifted his record at this year's meet. His best time outdoors last year was 4 minutes 28 seconds while Hubbard's best in the two mile was 9 minutes 53.3 seconds.

"MURDERS IN THE ZOO" SHOWING AT CAROLINA

Showing at the Carolina theatre today will be "Murders in the Zoo," a weird drama dealing with a scourge of the jungle known as "Green Mamba." "Green Mamba," however, has a deeper meaning—it is really the symbol of the machinations within the mind of a mad zoologist, Eric Gorman, played by Lionel Atwill.

In his insane jealousy for all who look on his beautiful wife, Kathleen Burke, Gorman plots a horrible death for his victims. His designs fail, however, when a young scientist in the zoo finds incriminating evidence against Gorman.

PRIZES WILL BE OFFERED DURING DOGWOOD EVENT

Committees to Make Awards for Exhibits in Handicraft, Photography, and Poetry.

Prizes for the best exhibits in handicraft, photography, and poetry were announced yesterday by the committee arranging the first Dogwood Festival to be conducted in Chapel Hill April 29.

In the handicraft division, of which Mrs. George Howe is chairman, dogwood must be used as the motif of the design.

Mrs. Phillips Russell of Chapel Hill is chairman of the committee for the poetry contest which closes April 25. Naturally the poems submitted must be about dogwood.

Another prize is being offered for the most artistic photograph of dogwood in its native setting. Mrs. Joseph Hyde Pratt is chairman of this committee.

Those entering the contests are requested to write directly to the chairmen of the respective committees.

One purpose of the festival is to help create sentiment against mutilation of dogwood trees. The sponsors feel that dogwood trees should be cherished in this country just as cherry trees are cherished in Japan.

DUKE MATCH TO OPEN NET YEAR

Hines Clinches No. 1 Position; Strong Wind Impedes Preparation for Opening Meet.

The varsity tennis team has yet to get in shape for its spring campaign, which will open with a meet against Duke next Saturday. A strong wind yesterday prevented the players from getting any valuable practice, and still the team is playing raggedly.

Walter Levitan retained his place on the ladder in seventh position when he withstood the challenge of Harley Shuford yesterday afternoon. The match was close and not well played. The scores were 6-2, 2-6, 7-5. Both players carried their game with over-cautious shots.

In recent challenge matches, Wilmer Hines downed Lenoir Wright in two straight sets, 6-0, 6-0. This match assured Wilmer of first position on the team. Ricky Willis won from Harvey Harris, 6-3, 6-3. Willis is still playing poor tennis, although his strokes looked better from yesterday's practice.

Both Morgan and Dillard have registered wins over Levitan. Harris drubbed Dillard in three sets, 5-7, 5-4, 6-3. The varsity ranking has not changed in the past week. It is still: Hines, Wright, Willis, Harris, Morgan, Dillard, Levitan, Minor, Shuford, and Jones.

A change has been made in the freshman rankings to Friedman, Lott, Lynch, Johnston, Sobol, Baukney, Linker, Primrose, Williams, and Margulis. Bernie Friedman and Hunter Lott worked out in practice yesterday, with the number one man winning a practice singles match. Mark Lynch is rounding into shape from daily practice.

Twenty-Six Appointments To Fellowships Announced

Other Scholarships, Assistantships, and Fellowships Will Be Made Later.

CARRY STIPEND OF $500

Nominations Have Been Sent to Members of Association of American Universities.

Dean W. W. Pierson of the graduate school announced yesterday the appointments to twenty-six University teaching fellowships for the year 1933-34. Announcement of the selection for the twenty University scholarships, the graduate assistantships in the Institute for Research in Social Science, the Graham Kenan fellowships in philosophy, and the Ledoux fellowship in chemistry will be made at a later date.

The teaching fellowships carry a stipend of $500. Each fellow is expected to render part time service to the department to which he is assigned.

The following list of nominations for the fellowships was sent to the members of the Association of American Universities by Dean Pierson:

Botany

Budd Elmon Smith, A.B., and candidate for A.M., University of North Carolina. Alternate: Andrew Clark Mathews, A.B., and A. M., University of North Carolina.

Chemistry

Thomas Douglas, B.S., S.M., University of North Carolina; Robert Herschel Belcher, B.S., Georgia State College for Men, S.M., University of North Carolina. Simpson Douglas Sumnerford, B.S., Mississippi Agricultural and Mechanical College, candidate for S.M., University of North Carolina. EASTERLING WILL ADDRESS N.C. CLUB TOMORROW NIGHT

Director of Local Government Commission Will Speak on Current Problems.

W. E. Easterling, director of the North Carolina local government commission will speak on current problems of local government at the North Carolina club meeting tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock in the rural social economics library.

Easterling will discuss activities of the commission and specifically the debt situation and steps being taken to secure a refunding of local debts. He will also discuss the new legislation in respect to tax delinquency.

Speaker Held County Job

Easterling was chosen as assistant under C. M. Johnson when the county government advisory commission was created in 1927. The commission was instituted to assist county officials in their administrative duties, particularly in meeting their bookkeeping and financial problems.

Two years ago the commission's supervision was extended to all local unities of government. Its powers were enlarged and it was known as the local government commission. Easterling became acting director of the agency upon the appointment to state treasurership a few months ago.

DEBATE TRY-OUTS WILL TAKE PLACE

Vermont, Boston, and Agnes Scott Scheduled to Meet Debaters Here During Coming Month.

Try-outs will again take place at the debate council Monday at 9:00 o'clock in Graham Memorial on the question, "Resolved: That Japan's foreign policy be condemned." This is the subject of the debate with Georgia Tech April 13.

A short debate on the cancellation of war debts will follow the try-outs as practice for the debate with Vermont Tuesday night and one with Boston University April 14. Don Seawell, Red Rankin, Edwin Lanier, and Ben Proctor will be in this short debate assisted by Alvin Kaplan and Bill Eddleman.

Agnes Scott College of Atlanta, Georgia will debate here April 24 on the question of socialism; they will take the affirmative side of the subject.

COUNCILMAN FOR ENGINEERS STILL UNDER DISCUSSION

Weeks Gives Reasons That No Definite Action Has Been Taken by Student Representatives.

Haywood Weeks, president of the student council, last night gave the reasons that no arrangements have been worked out to seat a representative of the engineering school on the council.

This question has been under consideration of the council since the new administration went into office, and Weeks has conferred with Dean H. G. Baity of the engineering school, Dean of Students F. F. Bradshaw, and Dean J. C. Beard of the pharmacy school on the question several times.

The continued movement to put the honor system on a different basis last spring, and a new program submitted by the council this year, both of which would have solved the need for an engineering school councilman, were given by Weeks as the reasons that no definite action has been taken.

The new program, which would have to make a change in pharmacy school representation now that that school is operated on a four-year basis, is slated for the next meeting of the student activities committee to take place immediately after campus elections.

Buccaneer Staff Will Pick Nominee Tonight

The Carolina Buccaneer will fall into line with the staffs of the other student publications and nominate an official candidate for next year's editorship at a called meeting of the editorial division in Graham Memorial at 7:00 o'clock tonight.

The official nominee of the staff, together with those of the other publications, will be presented at the general student nominating convocation in Memorial hall tomorrow morning. Other candidates for the position may be nominated then.

Editor Bobbie Mason has urged that all members of the staff attend this meeting tonight. The meeting was originally set for tomorrow but has been moved up to tonight.

WOMEN'S CHORUS, TRIO AND SOLOISTS WILL ENTERTAIN

Joint Program Will Offer Varied Selections for Music Lovers Tomorrow Night.

A joint concert will be presented by the women's chorus of the local Community club, Harry Lee Knox, pianist, and the Stringfield trio tomorrow evening at 8:30 o'clock in Hill Music hall. Professor Harold S. Dyer will conduct the chorus.

The women's group numbering twenty-five voices will participate in the choral festival sponsored by the state federation of music clubs in Raleigh the latter part of this week. Professor Dyer will be in charge of the festival as national chairman of choral festivals for the federation.

Stringfield Trio to Play

Mrs. F. B. McCall, pianist, Ralph Weatherford, a cellist, and Lamar Stringfield, flutist, will play the Mountain Sketches by Stringfield. This is a set of two pieces In a Log Cabin and Morning which since their completion in 1924 have become widely popular as chamber music compositions. This work has been performed by many outstanding groups in this country. It was featured by the original Stringfield trio in a series of concerts in the eastern cities.

Harry Lee Knox, student pianist, will offer a group of compositions by Debussy. Mrs. L. C. MacKinney, Mrs. R. H. Wetlack, and Miss Virginia Huffy will appear as soloists with the chorus.

R. B. HOUSE GIVES PRIZES IN DRAMA FESTIVAL CLIMAX

Merit in Dramatic, Costume, and Make-up Ability Are Bases For Prize Winning.

Climaxing the tenth annual state-wide Dramatic Festival, R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, representing President Frank P. Graham, presented awards to winners of the various dramatic, costume, and make-up contests, after the victors were announced last night by Professor F. H. Koch.

Duke University Players presenting George Kelly's Finders-Keepers, were winners in the senior college group and the Seaboard Players, presenting Bernice Kelly Harris' Judgment Comes to Daniel, won in the community original play contest, both of which were offered last night.

Winners in the college original plays were the Duke University Players, with Oasis by Harry Willis; and in the individual original plays were the Biltmore College Players of Asheville, with Unto Us a Child Is Born by Kneale Morgan.

Closing Of Tenth Drama Festival Recalls History Of These Events

Carolina Dramatic Association, Begun by Professor Koch, Aims to Preserve Interest in the Natural Folk Poetry and Drama Extant in North Carolina Rural Communities.

With the closing of the tenth annual festival of the Carolina Dramatic Association yesterday, another chapter was completed in the North Carolina section of a national volume of customs, manners, and colorful vernacular known as American folk drama.

To Professor Frederick H. Koch there was something—something fine—in "them thar hills" of North Carolina and in "them thar sandy stretches" of the coast, not to mention the towns and cities, the native poetry and drama of which, he thought, should be preserved for posterity. So he labored with the Playmakers to bring this about.

State Sought Aid in Dramatics

Out of the interest in a folk-theatre, awakened by the activities of these itinerant Playmakers who swaggered in piratical hip-boots and who, as tenant-farm women, sniffed snuff and spat tobacco juice, there arose a state-wide demand for guidance in dramatic expression. To meet this need the Bureau of Community Drama was organized by the director of the Playmakers, Professor Koch, in 1918. A play-book service was inaugurated, practical instruction in play production and in construction of stage scenery was sent out.

The Carolina Dramatic Association, whose members have been entertaining audiences at the Playmakers theatre these past three days with plays of all varieties of finish and interest-value, grew out of the Bureau of Community Drama. The Dramatic Association was organized in the autumn of 1923 under the direction of Professor Koch, who has continued in an advisory position since.

Off-Stage Drama

The players from the high schools, little theatre associations, junior colleges, and colleges dramatize life. Their trials and tribulations before reaching Chapel Hill, where they are to "strut and fret" their hour upon the stage for the benefit of an audience that, critical though it is at many times, is yet sympathetic, would fill volumes. It is known that last year one group sold handkerchiefs on the streets of Asheville in order to finance their transportation here. Another group staged a minstrel show, allowing youngsters to enter free so that their parents would perforce have to come along. Whether or not this group staged a Euripidean tragedy when they came here is not known.

It has been asserted that the festival and contest provides an excellent training ground for future playwrights. Loretto Carol Bailey, whose productions, Job's Kinfolk and Strike Song, are quite familiar to Chapel Hill audiences, first received recognition of her talents in the 1925 festival, when, although only a senior in the Winston-Salem high school, her play

Campus-Wide Nominations Will Be Made Tomorrow

GUEST SPEAKER TO ADDRESS Y GROUPS

Miss Elizabeth Manget Will Speak At Joint Meeting of Junior Senior And Sophomore Cabinets.

Miss Elizabeth Manget, traveling secretary of the South Atlantic region for the Student Volunteer Movement during the past year, will speak at a joint meeting of the Y. M. C. A. junior-senior and sophomore cabinets tomorrow night at 7:15 o'clock in the Y. M. C. A. building.

Miss Manget, a graduate of Duke University, was president of the North Carolina Student Volunteer Movement last year. She will be here all day Monday and probably Tuesday to conduct special conferences with anyone interested in mission work.

The freshman friendship council will also meet at 7:15 o'clock tomorrow night in the senior room of the "Y" to nominate officers for next year.

TAU BETA PI WILL CONDUCT TAPPING THURSDAY NIGHT

Engineering Honorary Group Will Choose Men at Joint Meeting Of Four Societies.

At a meeting of the members of the Tau Beta Pi, honorary engineering fraternity, Friday night, it was decided to conduct the annual spring tapping at a joint meeting of the four engineering societies Thursday night at 7:30 o'clock.

An interesting program has been planned for the occasion with the tapping at the center attraction. A motion picture, "Blasting a Dam into Position," will be shown, and refreshments will be served.

Those tapped will come from the upper eighth of the Junior class, and must show qualities of leadership, integrity, breadth of interest, adaptability, unselfish activity, character, and social qualities.

Tau Beta Pi is a national honorary fraternity and tends to honor those who have conferred honor on their Alma Mater and to foster a liberal spirit of culture in the Engineering schools of America.

Playmakers To Have Try-outs Tomorrow

Try-outs for the next series of Playmakers experimental productions will be conducted in the theatre at 4:00 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Eight new plays, written in Professor F. H. Koch's playwriting classes, will be presented before an invited audience on April 12. About forty-five characters will have parts in the plays.

VERMONT WILL DEBATE DI AND PHI TUESDAY

Vermont University will debate Carolina at a joint meeting of the Di Senate and the Phi Assembly Tuesday night at 7:15 at the meeting place of the Phi Assembly in New East.

The subject of the debate will be: "Resolved: That the war debts be cancelled." Edwin Lanier and Ben Proctor will take the affirmative side of the question.

Student Council Will Conduct Meeting in Memorial Hall At Assembly Period.

CLASS MEETINGS AT NIGHT

Senior, Junior, and Sophomore Nominees Will Be Selected At 7:15 O'clock.

For the third time during the past month, students of the University will gather in Memorial hall at assembly period tomorrow to participate in a student convocation. The purpose of the meeting is concerned with student affairs for next year, since tomorrow official nominations for thirteen campus-wide offices will be made.

More nominations will follow this meeting. Tomorrow night in various halls on the campus three classes will meet and go through the process of nominating candidates for class offices.

Election Date Set

Election of these officers, as well as for the already nominated candidates for the Woman's Association's roster of next year has been set for Wednesday.

Campaigning so far this year indicates that the election will be one of the hottest in recent years. Two, and in some cases three, candidates have thrown their hats into the ring for each office, quite a contrast with last year when only three positions of the twenty-eight were contested.

Haywood Weeks, head of the student body, will preside at the convocation. Following opening remarks the floor will be thrown open to nominations for the campus-wide positions. By a ruling of the student council, nominating speeches will be limited to two minutes. No seconding is necessary.

SOUTHERN PINES WILL HEAR LOCAL SINGERS TONIGHT

University Glee Club Will Present First of Spring Concerts at 8:00 O'clock.

The University glee club, directed by Professor Harold S. Dyer, will present the first of its spring series of concerts tonight at 8:00 o'clock in the Church of the Wide Fellowship in Southern Pines.

The glee club will make several out of town appearances this quarter.

Tonight's program will feature three students as soloists. Harry Lee Knox, accompanist for the group, will play a group of piano compositions by Debussy. Earl Wolslagel, violinist, will offer works of Tartini and Albert Spalding. William G. Barnett, baritone, will sing a group of three selections.

Program Numbers

The entire program will include O Bone Jesu by Palestrina, Plorate, Filii Israel by Clarissimi, In Dulci Jubilo an old German carol, the two Negro songs Go Down Moses and Steal Away, a group of three American songs Ashes of Roses by Wolfe, Andrew's By the Sea, and A Plainsman's Song by Bliss, Scotch Border Ballad by Maunder, and the Bohemian folk tune The Reaper's Song. The program will conclude with the alma mater.

The Daily Tar Heel

The official newspaper of the Publications Union Board of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill where it is printed daily except Mondays, and the Thanksgiving, Christmas, and Spring Holidays. Entered as second class matter at the post office of Chapel Hill, N. C., under act of March 3, 1879. Subscription price, $4.00 for the college year.

Bouquets for the Student Loan Fund

When the Student Loan Fund was first organized on the campus last year, it was not anticipated that the move would actually act as a life saver for the education career of some five hundred students or more this early. Had it not been for this source from which these students could borrow money for their actual expenses here in the University, there is little doubt but what they would have had to drop out of school when banking matters reached their crisis a few weeks ago. With everything so tied up financially as it is now, to have dropped out of school at this time would undoubtedly have meant that for the larger part of them their college education was over. Nor is there any doubt that if these students had had to discontinue their education at this time, the state would have sooner or later felt the disastrous result of the fact.

At no other time could a loan fund of this nature be of more value to the student body, as well as the University. Each quarter during these strenuous times that any students are being allowed to continue their education as a result of the Student Loan, the praise for the proponents of the idea becomes more pronounced and wide-spread. It was unquestionably one of the wisest moves anyone could have possibly made last year to have started this fund, and its innumerable advantages become more and more evident as the depression continues.

War Clouds Hang Low

Most international political commentators observe that political conditions in Europe are in a more tumultuous state than the period preceding the World War. Germany is convulsed in a minor civil war; Great Britain nears a break with the powerful communistic dictatorship of Russia; Italy is still straining under the iron hand of Mussolini; and France sits serenely over her underground vaults filled with the gold of the world, which is being quietly used to finance the small states in and around the Balkan territory.

Only fifteen years have passed since the Armistice was signed to end the most destructive war the world has ever known; and already countries are flagrantly violating the terms of the bulky Versailles Treaty. Germany was being smothered by the overwhelming restriction placed not only upon her commerce and armaments but upon the liberties of her people. Great Britain had no terms which she could greatly violate; she also paid her debts. United States gained nothing through her losses of millions of dollars and hundreds of thousands of men; she could not violate. France, who greedily asked for more and more reparations and land, was the real winner in the war in which the United States was victor.

France made the most of this wide-open opportunity, and setting up many small states along the Balkans, has obligated them to her by the financing of their armies and governments. While she was thus preparing offense or defense, spending millions, she refused to recognize her legal debts to the United States and has not yet paid the debt installment which would help alleviate the financial troubles of the United States.

Only when the countries around her, which had heretofore been antagonistic to each other, came together in a common bond, then did

France advocate paying her debt to United States, saying that she would be worthy ally in any war to come.

By experience the United States should be through meddling in the affairs of the old world. She gained nothing from the last war; she would gain nothing from the next. Her help would only be scorned as it has been by France since the last one. Any conflicts arising in Europe in future years should be viewed from across the Atlantic by the United States unless it be actually threatened by an attack from an ambitious country.—C.G.T.

1933—the Age

Of Enlightenment?

There are good arguments on both sides of the Negro question that has been recently forced to the front because of the efforts of one of the black race to enter the University. But it is hard to condone the talk—even if it is nothing more than talk—of “stringing him up” or running him out in twenty-four hours if he did get here, etc., etc., ad nauseum. The University is the seat of liberalism in the south. The University has retained her intellectual honesty against the onslaughts of reactionary forces. The University boasts of “Lux, Libertas”—“Light, Liberty.” Then University students do not give way to educational mob psychology that talks of lynchings and the like! University students may have strong ideas and prejudices on race subjects—most people do—but truly enlightened college men arrive at their conclusions after cool reasoning; they do not jump at the same emotional conclusions that used to be arrived at in an era that is not now considered, as ours is, the last word in intellectual enlightenment.—D.B.

With Contemporaries

In the Minds of Students Is Arising a Belief Which May Effect a New Order

Walter Lippmann's cry for liberation from destiny at the recent Charter Day ceremonies will strike home in the hearts and minds of University students.

Mr. Lippmann, long noted for his analyses of the economic situation, became a philosopher yesterday and gave the assembly some ideas which indicate a revolution in thought. A world drifting aimlessly, with each individual selfishly striving for his ends is the very thing Mr. Lippmann condemns. Pleading for an “ordered” existence, he struck the keynote of ideal student thought.

Undergraduates, of all people, are the ones loaded with the burden of bringing about this order. We have lived through several periods of chaos and recognize the important symptoms of such a situation. With such knowledge, and a fresh, young viewpoint students can accomplish much.

What is the first step? Even Mr. Lippmann could not answer this question, for it is one thing to say something is wrong and quite another to say, “If you do this or that you will have accomplished the remedying of the evils of the situation.”

But miracles have a strange way of happening. An idea is born in somebody's head. Another and another receives its impact until finally there is unanimous agreement. Then one bold individual steps out into reform and the rest, concentrated in a single will, follow and complete the action by sheer mass.

This may be the way our modern intellectual revolution will take place. We are nearly unanimous now in our agreement that something is wrong. Let one practically-minded person start the move toward “order” and the progress will have begun. Not in this century or perhaps next, as Mr. Lippmann said, will this result occur. But occur it will and with it a safer, saner world.—Daily Cardinal.

Lower Priced Parties And Sell-Outs . . .

The days of elaborate campus parties with nationally known bands seem to be over and, if we may judge by the box office receipts of the Frosh Frolic and the Slide Rule Dance, students have definitely gone on record as favoring less expensive parties. The Frosh Frolic led toward cheaper parties by reducing the price of tickets to $1.50, with the result that there was a complete sell-out the day before the dance. So successful was the party that the Slide Rule committee decided to follow suit and was equally successful, having a sell-out after the tickets had been on sale for only two days.

The popularity of these two dances clearly shows that the campus will no longer pay high prices to dance for a few hours to the music of a famous band. Ben Bernie, who played for the J-Hop, hardly drew enough people to pay the expenses. It would therefore be wise for those who are planning dances in the future to profit by the success of our last two parties and reduce their prices to a level within the reach of the majority of students.—Michigan Daily.

Closing Of Drama Fete Recalls History

The Deserter won first prize in the Dramatic Tournament and also received honorable mention in the National Little Theatre tournament in New York the same year.

Many Negro Productions—It is interesting to note that for the third year a play about Negroes produced by a Negro troupe was included on the program. The St. Augustine College players of Raleigh held the attention of the audience with a superb display of their histrionic ability in a play, the outstanding scene of which was lynching.

It is not often that an original high school play presented at the festival is of such excellence as to be published in the Carolina Playbook, but Death Comes to Sonia, a play of the Russian revolution by a sixteen year old Winston-Salem high school girl, presented at the 1930 festival, attained that eminence.

The past festival was well attended. Although no official figures have been issued, the number of players participating and the number attending the performances are expected to be far in excess of the figures of last year, when 119 players performed before approximately 1,500 play-goers.

Tar Heel Nine Defeated By Elon In Close Contest

Carolina Team Makes Ten Hits But Is Unable to Push Run Across.

ELON GETS THREE HITS
Christians Score One Run by Bunching Hits in Second Inning to Win, 1-0.

Despite a fine three-hit pitching performance by Joe Griffith, Carolina's baseball team was blanked by Elon yesterday, 1-0, in the West End Park in Burlington.

Joe Waters, Christian mound ace, was on the hill for the victors and the Tar Heel batters found him for ten hits including a double by Weathers, but for the most part the hits were scattered or came with two out.

Elon crossed the plate in the second inning by bunching two of its three hits and pulling a neat double steal. Clark, first batter, fanned. Lindley singled sharply to right and immediately stole second. Cheek scratched a single to Dixon, placing Lindley on third. Lindley and Cheek then worked a pretty double steal with the former tallying the only run of the game.

Tar Heels Threaten

With one out in the sixth inning the Tar Heels threatened to score, but fast fielding by the Christians removed that danger. Powell, Dixon, and Croom singled, filling the bases, but Hornaday grounded to the pitcher and Griffith lined to right center.

Johnny Peacock led the Tar Heel hitting brigade with three singles in five times at bat. Bill Croom was the only other player getting more than one hit, hitting safely twice in four official times at bat. Cheek, Elon first sacker, got two of Elon's three hits.

TAR HEEL TEAMS HAVE FULL SPORT CARDS THIS WEEK

Giant Tennis Match With Duke Heads Events Including Golf, Baseball, and Track.

Carolina undertakes one of its really big schedules this week with thirteen events on the card, including baseball, tennis, golf, track, and football. Seven of the events and part of another are scheduled for Chapel Hill, however, neither the varsity baseball nor tennis teams have games at home.

Probably the longest match with the greatest number of contestants in the history of Tar Heel sports starts tomorrow and lasts through Saturday. This is the giant tennis meet between Carolina and Duke with almost two hundred entered from each school. Half of the matches will be played at Duke and the other half on the Carolina courts.

Play Duke in Golf

Two more events are also scheduled for tomorrow. Duke and Carolina meet again, this time in golf on the Hope Valley course. It is the first meeting of the two teams this year and should be close as both have two wins and no defeats so far this season. The freshman baseball team plays their second game of the season, meeting A. M. A. prep school here.

The Durham high school tennis team defeated the local high school netsters yesterday afternoon on the University courts 7 to 0. The Durham lads romped off with honors in the five singles and two matches.

TRACK CHARGES HAVE FIRST TIME AND FIELD TRIALS

Odell Childers and Sandy Dameron Outstanding as Trackmen Are Put Through Paces.

With Odell Childers taking the lead in individual scoring and Sandy Dameron smashing the state and school discus records, Coaches Fetzer and Ranson put their varsity and freshman track charges through the first time and field trials of the season. Childers gained two firsts and one second, winning his premiers in the 100 and 220 and second in the broad jump. Dameron, field coach for the Tar Heels, showed his ability in the discus throw by heaving the discus 139 feet, beating the old state and school mark by a good foot.

Ed McRae, blonde haired middle-distance runner, turned in the next best individual performance by running a fine three-quarter mile in 3:15 minutes. He led the field by a good twenty yards.

Hawthorne, Glenn in Dead Heat

In the 120 high hurdles, Tom Hawthorne and Woody Glenn put on probably the best race of the afternoon. Hawthorne appeared to have the lead until the last barrier where Glenn spurred up and appeared to have the race as the men simultaneously hit the tape. The judges would not declare any individual winner, since there was no necessity for an individual winner and declared the race a dead heat.

Since a fast and high cross wind was sweeping over Emerson field, the Carolina coaches would not permit the javelin tossers to compete.

Georgetown Meet Saturday

The first meet of the season will be with the Georgetown University aggregation Saturday afternoon. The meet will be quite informal, but both the visiting coaches and the Tar Heel mentors hope that their proteges will make favorable showings. The catholic school has a great sprint star in Arch Kelly.

Summary

Broad jump: Hubbard, Childers and Aitken (all varsity men). 21 feet 4 3-4 inches.

Shot: Mullis, varsity; Hodges, varsity; and Powell, frosh. 43 feet 4 1-2 inches.

High jump: Rankin, frosh, and Hamlet, varsity, (tied for first) and Reid. 5 feet 9 inches.

Discus: Dameron, asst. coach, Mullis, varsity, and Schmukler, varsity. 139 feet.

660: Marsden, Donnell, Goldman, and Kimrey, (all varsity men). 1:27.2 minutes.

1 1-2 mile: L. Sullivan, H. Sullivan, and Haywood, (all varsity men). 7:19.9 minutes.

330 yard run: first heat, Fox, varsity, Montgomery, frosh, DeBardleben, frosh, and Bost, varsity. 34 seconds; second heat: Keeney, frosh, Trubnick, varsity, Pruden, varsity, and M. H. Smith, varsity. 34 seconds.

120-high hurdles: Glenn and Hawthorne, (both varsity men), tied for first in dead heat. 16.2 seconds.

220 yard dash: Childers, varsity, Higby, varsity, Napier, frosh, and Singletary. 22.8 seconds.

160 low hurdles: Hawthorne, varsity, Rankin, frosh, Glenn, varsity, and Trubnick, varsity. 18.4 seconds.

Three-quarter mile: McRae, varsity, Cordle, varsity, Waldrop, varsity, and Jensen, varsity. 3:15 minutes.

100-yard dash: Childers, varsity, Hubbard, varsity, Keeney, frosh, and Walls, frosh. 10.1 seconds.

AROUND the FIELD

By

CLAIBORN M. CARR

THE MONOGRAM CLUB IS TO hold its first formal presentation of sweaters Monday night at their regular meeting. The coaches of the three winter sports, Shepard, Quinlan, and Rowe are to hand out the awards and President Frank Graham and Dr. Charley Mangum will make short talks to the members and initiates. President Phipps and the executive committee of the club are anxious to have all members at the meeting. This act of adding ceremony to the awarding of letters is another stride forward which the re-organized athletes have made in the last three months. Heretofore, the sweaters have been passed through the supply window in Emerson stadium just as the socks and other equipment. There are not many of us who wouldn't give anything to win a NC and those who do feel that the honor of wearing a Carolina monogram has slipped somewhat recently, should take notice of the excellent and sincere work our athletes are doing now to revive their standards.

THERE HAS BEEN A VERITABLE renaissance of spirit among the candidates for positions on Carolina sport teams recently. Led by the veterans who have been inspired both by the spirit of the re-organization of the Monogram club and the determination that they will regain that "something" observers say they have lost, the rookies have fallen in line and are doing their part. Competition over positions such as those being waged by Johnny Phipps and Dutch Leonard for shortstop; Norman McCaskill, Jim Tatum, Profest Strayhorn, and Red Matheson for the catcher's berth; and Thurman Vick, Gene Zaiser, and Lefty Hornaday for left field is just the sort of thing that can and will raise the spirit of the team. It not only can but has done this. Every man on the baseball squad is hustling and the spirit is excellent. The veterans are playing their hardest, and the rookies are giving them plenty of competition for the jobs.

DOWN IN KENAN STADIUM the same thing is happening. Freshmen like Herman Snyder, Harry Montgomery, Pop Yeager, Bill Moore, Murry Kanner, Emmet Joyce, and Tom Evins are pushing the veterans. Reserves who have been sitting on the bench in the past and becoming a bit cynical over their chances, have suddenly snapped out of it. The results are evident to all. Snyder, Yeager, and Kanner are the frosh running on the tentative first team. Don Jackson, Alan MacDonald, and George Moore are three reserve backs who have left the bench. Jackson has shown such improvement as to be placed on the first team. The competition is keen and the best man will get the call. That "something" is certainly there now and the men are determined it will stay. The material is promising and with work, Duke, Georgia, State, Vanderbilt, Georgia Tech, and the rest will be given fits next fall. Ask Emma, the dummy, about how these babes are hitting 'er.

THIS REVIVAL OF SPIRIT ON the part of the athletes themselves leaves the student body but one alternative and that is to show some enthusiasm and backing to the players on the field. The cheering has got to be improved before next fall and there is no better time for practice than these baseball games.

ORANGE MACHINE RUNS OVER BLUES BY LARGE MARGIN

Woollen and Burnett Lead Victors to One-Sided Win; 40-0 Is Final Outcome.

Charlie Woollen and Henry Burnett tripped here and there on Kenan turf yesterday as their Orange club clicked in a 40-0 victory over the Blue team.

Burnett ran at half yesterday, being shifted from quarterback and his hard running was one of the beauty spots of the afternoon's exhibition. Woollen's pass receiving, punt returning, and generalship also stood out and along with Burnett, the pudgy quarterback led the Orange attack.

The score at half time was 6-0 for the Orange and the tally, made in the first period, resulted from a short pass from Jackson to Woollen. Charlie took the heave and squirmed some forty yards for the score. Big Murry Kanner missed the try for point. No scoring was made at all the second quarter though the Orange machine missed several golden opportunities.

Orange Fails Twice

In the second half the Orange team failed again on two occasions before Burnett slipped loose for thirty yards to the Blue ten-yard line. Mac Bell drove it over from here for the second score, Babe Daniels place-kicked the point.

As the third quarter closed, Yeager recovered a Blue fumble on their twenty-yard line. Frank Kenan then passed to Woollen for ten yards. Charley Shaffer opened the final period by slipping around end for ten yards and a score. Babe again place-kicked the point.

Charlie Woollen took Jim McCahren's long punt over his head, circled around and came back some twenty yards in a beautiful play. Harry Montgomery went in for Woollen and took a fifteen-yard pass from

ROANOKE RAPIDS NINE OVERCOMES TAR BABIES, 7-5

Glasgow, Freshman Pitcher, Allows Only Six Hits But Loose Fielding Is Disastrous.

Carolina's freshman baseball team opened its 1933 season with a 7 to 5 loss to Roanoke Rapids high school yesterday afternoon on Freshman field. The game was close throughout but slow and loosely played, with the Tar Babies especially making errors and pulling several bonehead plays.

Glasgow, who hurled for the freshmen, pitched great ball, holding Roanoke Rapids to seven hits and four of these were gotten as a result of bunts and slow fielding. He fanned seven batters. The Carolina team threw away several good chances to score by poor base running.

Visitors Take Long Lead

The yearlings opened the run making in the second inning with one run. Orr got life on an error and was brought around on King's safe bunt and Shapiro's long single. The high school team took a long lead in the first half of the fourth inning, scoring five runs as a result of a bombardment of bunts. Dickens got on when his pop-up to right field was dropped, and Allsbrook also went to first, being hit by one of Glasgow's pitches. This was followed by five straight bunts, three of them going for hits and another getting safe on a fielder's choice. As a result of these bunts four runs crossed the plate and a fifth scored on Grant's long fly.

Carolina tied things up in the fifth, counting twice in both frames. The same bunting game was used to get the first two runs, after Glasgow had reached first on an error, King, Shapiro, and Mahaffey then laid down successive bunts, the first two going for hits, and Glasgow and King scoring. Irwin connected for a home run which rolled to the left field road, after Tatum had gotten a bingle to account for the Tar Babies' last two runs.

The high school club won the game in the eighth as a result of errors. Orr, Tar Baby first baseman made two straight errors letting Garriss and Stark get on. Sullivan then came through for the winners blasting out a double, which scored the former two men.

The Tar Babies outthit their opponents both in number and distance, getting nine hits to Roanoke Rapids' seven. Tatum and Shapiro led the Carolina hitting with three singles each. Irwin also looked good, getting a four-base knock and hitting a couple of hard liners which happened to be right in fielders' hands. Bullock laid down a couple of nice bunts.

CAROLINA BRINGS FIVE FINE SHOWS HERE THIS WEEK

'Christopher Strong' With Katharine Hepburn Heads Attractions at Local Theatre.

The Carolina theatre offers this week a number of outstanding productions, among which are "Christopher Strong," "42nd Street," and "King Kong."

This list of fine productions opens with "Christopher Strong" scheduled for Monday. The featured role is played by Katharine Hepburn, the star of "A Bill of Divorcement," and she is supported by a cast including Colin Clive, Billie Burke, and Helen Chandler.

"Pleasure Cruise" Tuesday

The picture for Tuesday is "Pleasure Cruise," featuring Roland Young and Genevieve Tobin. The story deals with a wife on a holiday and a husband on the run amid the cooing, kissing, and caressing that goes on beyond the three-mile limit.

Al Jolson returns to the screen after a long absence, but with that "happy I'm alive" attitude more pronounced than ever. In "Hallelujah, I'm a Bum," Jolson, looking younger than ever, still retains his enthusiasm, and his eagerness to please the public. All his fine talent goes into the making of this picture, and he gives a fine portrayal as a novice in films.

The immense popularity of "42nd Street" brings it back to Carolina Thursday. The screen play, based on a popular novel by Bradford Ropes, is said to contain every ingredient for a good picture. The picture has a strong dramatic underlying theme, and reveals the spectacle of a musical comedy show in preparation and as a finished piece. "42nd Street" is made a success through the efforts of an imposing cast, including Warner Baxter, Bebe Daniels, George Brent, and Ruby Keeler.

Friday and Saturday the thrill picture "King Kong" is billed. This highly imaginative picture has a Beauty and the Beast theme and is based on an idea of Edgar Wallace and Merian Cooper. The picture shows what might happen to a man-made civilization if a fifty-foot ape were to run amuck through the streets of New York. The role of Beauty is played by Fay Wray and she is supported by Robert Armstrong, Bruce Cabot, and Sam Hardy.

ORANGE MACHINE RUNS OVER BLUES BY LARGE MARGIN

Burnett which put the ball on the Blue fifteen-yard marker. Shaffer went over for his second score, hurdling the line for the last few yards. Daniels placed-kicked his third point, making the score 27-0. The Blues took the ball but soon kicked and the Orange juggernaut got underway again. Shaffer flipped to Pop Yeager for thirty yards and a touchdown. Daniels missed his first try for point from placement.

Barclay Recovers Punt

George Barclay, Orange guard, recovered a blocked punt for his club and pulled a Ellis Fysal with a belated dash down the field. The Orange club drove down the field and Herman Snyder went over for the last score of the afternoon. Daniels made good the extra point, his fourth in five tries for the afternoon.

A one-day boycott on the means of livelihood of all Jews in Germany began at 10:00 o'clock yesterday morning. Berlin's busiest business streets bore a holiday aspect as the brown-shirted Nazis busily moved to and fro, pasting signs of identification on Jewish stores, standing guard or picketing before shops and driving through streets in motor cars, displaying boycott signs.

Tuesday. Wednesday the varsity and freshman tennis teams journey to Wake Forest to hold a dual match with the Deacon netmen. The Tar Baby baseball team is the only team on the card for Thursday, playing Jim Magner's diamond club here.

Friday the varsity baseball team plays the first of a two-game trip into Virginia and also their second Conference contest, opposed by V. P. I. on the latter's field. Also on Friday the frosh tennis team meets Devitt School from Washington, D. C., on the Carolina courts.

The week's schedule comes to a climax Saturday with baseball, tennis, track, and football all being played. Besides the last day of the giant Duke-Carolina tennis meet five other events are carded. The Tar Heel outdoor track team opens its season on Emerson field opposed by the crack Georgetown cinder team. On Kenan field Coach Collins concludes the winter football practice with the annual Monogram-Rookie battle. The third event scheduled for Chapel Hill is a tennis match between the Tar Baby team and Darlington prep school from Rome, Georgia.

Both the varsity baseball and tennis teams are away from home. The baseball club completes its Virginia trip meeting V. M. I. there. Rivalry is continued with Duke, the varsity tennis team matched against the Blue Devil netmen on the Duke courts.

Directors' Meeting

The board of directors for Graham Memorial is scheduled to meet Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in room 202. A number of important matters are to be brought up and discussed.

Campus Nominations To Be Made Monday

Nominations will be made for the following positions: president and vice-president of the student body; editors of four publications—THE DAILY TAR HEEL, Carolina Magazine, the Buccaneer, and the Yackety Yack; president and vice-president of the athletic association; three representatives on the Publications Union board—senior, junior, and at-large; two representatives on the debate council, and chief cheer leader.

An assembly Tuesday morning will be devoted to speeches by the nominees to the presidency of the student body, allowing them to present their platforms and merits for the position.

Class Meetings

Nominating meetings of three classes have been called by the class presidents for tomorrow night. The junior class will convene in Gerrard hall at 7:15 o'clock to choose nominees for president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer, and student council representative of the rising senior class.

At the same time the sophomore class will begin nominating men to the same five offices for the rising junior class in the auditorium of Bingham hall.

Also at 7:15 o'clock the freshman class will meet in the auditorium of Murphey and make its nominations for the same slate of officers for next year.

All of the nominees will stand for election Wednesday, April 5. The affair will be conducted by the student council under the Australian ballot system. Polls will be open in Graham Memorial between the hours of 9:00 a. m. and 5:00 p. m.

At the same time and under the supervision of the student council, the Woman's Association will conduct its elections for next year. Official nominees have already been chosen.

Twelve in Infirmary

Twelve students were confined to the infirmary yesterday. They were: C. C. Todd, Robert M. Wallace, Elizabeth A. Kinney, R. H. Proctor, W. C. Pitt, Louis Hampton, R. E. Gee, Katherine Jamison, H. S. Rubin, Frank Hennis, M. L. Tucker, and John McGlinn.

Yackety Yack Pictures

Members of the Monogram club will meet Tuesday morning at 10:30 o'clock in front of Manning hall to have their picture taken for the Yackety Yack.

CHORAL SOCIETY TO GIVE 'ELIJAH' AGAIN THIS YEAR

Music Department Authorized To Sponsor Feature of Last Year's Commencement.

Mendelssohn's Elijah, a feature of the Commencement exercises last year, will again be given as a part of the events this year by the Chapel Hill choral society.

The music department was yesterday authorized to sponsor the presentation of a major choral work during Commencement and Mendelssohn's oratorio was selected. The presentation will be directed by Professor Harold S. Dyer, head of the music department. An orchestral accompaniment is being arranged for the work.

This oratorio was given in Hill Music hall last year and the presentation was so well attended that Memorial hall will be used this year in order to allow accommodations for all desiring to attend.

Rehearsals of the chorus will commence in Hill Music hall Monday, April 17, at 7:30 p. m. Soloists for the work will be selected later.

Elijah, written by Felix Mendelssohn, is considered one of the greatest works in the oratorio field while the part of Elijah, the prophet, contains what is recognized as the foremost piece of writing for the baritone voice in any oratorio.

Excessive cheering at a ball game urks anyone, but about three cheers during the afternoon would lead to a noticeable improvement in next year's backing of a promising football team, as well as helping our baseball and track teams this spring. The golf team meets Duke tomorrow morning and afternoon at Hope Valley and the match will certainly be close and exciting. Duke has won every contest this year with Carolina with the exception of wrestling. With Alan Smith, Billy O'Brien, Carl Cramer, and Erwin Laxton playing golf for us tomorrow, the Tar Heels can come through with our support.

the costume contest, for the costuming of Admiral Crichton in The Admirable Crichton. Honorable mention in this contest was given the Lenoir-Rhyne Playmakers, for costuming in Little Women, and to the Duke Players, for costuming Nicola in Arms And The Man.

The award for stage models was given Winifred Hawk and Elle Robertson of Duke Players, for a model of The Florist Shop. Andrew S. Uhler and John Shope of Catawba College received honorable mention for models from The Admirable Crichton.

CLASS OFFICERS FOR NEXT YEAR ARE NOMINATED

Thirty Men Placed in Running
For Positions at Meetings Of Rising Classes.

Candidates for officers of the rising senior, sophomore, and junior classes were nominated at meetings of the various groups last night. Thirty men were placed in the running for positions, which will be voted on at the elections tomorrow.

The rising senior class, gathering in Gerrard hall, nominated the following men for officers: president, Nat Townsend and Vergil Weathers; vice-president, Tom Webb and George Brandt; secretary, Julian Frankel and Red Rankin; treasurer, Corney Bretsch and Dan Jones; and student council representative, Earle Beale and John O'Neil.

At the meeting of next year's junior class in Bingham hall, the names of the following men were proposed as officers: president, Harry Williamson and Stuart Aitken; vice-president, Simmons Patterson and Leo Manley; secretary, Richard Somers and J. D. Winslow; treasurer, Ezra Griffin and Jack Poole; and student council representative, Ed Martin and Harold Bennett.

Men for officers of the rising sophomore class were nominated at a gathering in Bingham hall. The following men were put up as candidates: president, Jack Clare and Russell Mickle; vice-president, Morty Ellisberg and Billy Yandell; secretary, David McIlheny and Vance Young; treasurer, Jake Austin and Billy Binder; and student councilman, Carl DuPree and Billy Coan.

Vermont Debaters Speak to Di And Phi

The Philanthropic assembly and the Dialectic senate will conduct their second joint meeting of the year tonight at 7:15 o'clock at the Phi meeting place in New East.

The University of Vermont will debate Carolina at the meeting on the question of War debts. Carolina will take the affirmative side of the question: "Resolved: That the war debts be cancelled." Edwin Lanier and A. S. Kaplan will debate for Carolina.

The Carolina representatives worked out last night against Eddleman and Russel.

Meyer Appointed To Advisory Committee

Professor Harold D. Meyer of the University department of sociology has just accepted an invitation to serve on the advisory committee of the education division of the National Safety council, it was announced here yesterday.

The appointment was made in recognition of Professor Meyer's active interest in this field for many years, chiefly through secondary schools. More than 500 local councils are scattered throughout the country. Professor Meyer is educational director for the Boy Scout movement in four southern states.

Other members of the education division of the council are: Dr. E. B. Cuberley, dean of the school of education at Leland Stanford University; William McAndrews, superintendent of schools of Chicago; Mrs. A. H. Reeve, international president of the Parent-Teacher congress; and Harold Rugg of the department of education at the University of Chicago.

ANNUAL Y. M. C. A. ELECTIONS TO BE CONDUCTED TODAY

Polls for Voting on Four Officers Will Be Open at Lobby From 10:00 to 5:30.

Polls in the election of officers of the Y. M. C. A. for next year will open this morning in the "Y" lobby at 10:00 o'clock and close at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon. Four new officers will be chosen to succeed Bill McKee, president; Jim Steere, vice-president; Ike Minor, secretary; and R. M. McMillan, treasurer.

Only those students registered on the rolls of the association as active members are eligible to vote, including both those students holding membership cards and those who have attended at least three regular cabinet meetings each quarter.

Candidates for the presidency will also run for vice-president. The man receiving the most votes will become president and the one receiving the second highest number will serve as vice-president.

The nominees selected by a nominating committee and accepted by the association last Tuesday night are: president, Ike Minor and Lawrence Fountain; secretary, Simmons Patterson, Locke Sloop, and J. D. Winslow; treasurer, Tom Nesbit and Jack Poole. John Acee was also nominated for the presidency when the nominations were thrown open to the floor.

Yackety Yack Meeting

There will be a very important meeting of the entire Yackety Yack staff this afternoon at 1:45. Nutt Parsley, editor of the publication, urges all men to be present at this meeting.

DAY FOR PARENTS IS POSTPONED BY UNION DIRECTORS

Event Originally Scheduled for This Spring Has Been Set For Next Fall.

The parents' day planned by Graham Memorial board of directors for this spring was postponed until next fall at the meeting of the group yesterday.

This day, which has as its purpose a definite program for having parents visit Chapel Hill on a designated day, was scheduled for this quarter but the board, by its action yesterday, set the event for October 12, when it will be held in concurrence with Founder's Day.

Arrangements for a reception for high school students Friday night, April 14, during high school week, were made at the meeting yesterday.

The board made a ruling that no dances requiring an orchestra can be given in the building. Small groups, however, will be allowed to dance following smokers or other entertainments.

Another matter considered yesterday was the publication of a booklet to be presented to visitors as a souvenir and to be sent to other unions. This booklet would give interesting facts about the local building and would include its history.

Second Grail Dance Set Saturday Night

The Order of the Grail will conduct its second dance of the spring quarter in Bynum gymnasium Saturday night between the hours of 9:00 and 12:00 o'clock, it was announced yesterday.

Following a custom inaugurated last spring, the Grail has announced that freshmen will be admitted to the dance Saturday night. Music for the occasion will be furnished by Jelly Leftwich and his orchestra.

The third and final dance of the school year will take place Saturday, May 6. At this dance, the new members of the Order, who will be chosen later this quarter, will be honored.

Student Cooperation During High School Week Is Urged

A list of high school contestants entered in the annual high school week events at the University, April 12 and 13, will be posted in the lobby of the Y. M. C. A. tomorrow. Students willing to room one or more chosen contestants for one night during the two-day competition are asked to sign up at the desk in the "Y."

High school week officials, headed by E. R. Rankin of the extension division, have asked the freshmen friendship council to help in the rooming of the two hundred high school students. Definite steps have been taken by the group under the leadership of Jesse Parker.

Other Policies To Be Published Tomorrow

Because of a lack of space in this issue of the paper, the qualifications and platforms of the candidates for editorships of the Buccaneer and Yackety Yack will be published tomorrow.

Twenty-Nine Nominated For Campus-Wide Posts

Candidates To Give Views This Morning

Platforms, policies, and views of the three candidates for the presidency of the student body next will be presented in Memorial hall this morning at chapel period.

B. C. Proctor, Lindy Cate, and Harper Barnes, nominated to the position and standing for election tomorrow, will speak at this time, each presenting the reasons why he should be elected.

The program of the gathering this morning follows the custom of allowing candidates for the position to speak their minds on the conception of the office. All students of the University have been especially urged to attend.

Buccaneer Nomination Goes to Karl Sprinkle

At a meeting of the Carolina Buccaneer staff Sunday, Karl Sprinkle, art editor, received the staff nomination for next year's editorship of the publication over Pete Ivey by a vote of fifteen to five.

The meeting for the purpose of nominating the next year's editor was originally scheduled for last night, but it was moved up in order that the name of the candidate picked by the staff might be proposed at the nominations in Memorial hall yesterday morning.

Other nominations were not prevented by the staff nomination, and Ivey's name was presented to the students yesterday. However, the nomination of the staff is generally regarded as official.

NAMES PROPOSED AT CONVOCAION

Ernest Hunt Re-elected as Chief Cheerleader as His Nomination Goes Unopposed.

POLLING IS SET TOMORROW

Twenty-nine students of the University were yesterday nominated as candidates for fourteen elective campus-wide offices for next year at a student meeting in Memorial hall. Elections for thirteen of these offices will take place in Graham Memorial tomorrow.

Ernest Hunt, candidate for the fourteenth office, was re-elected cheerleader when his nomination yesterday went unopposed.

Approximately six hundred students attended the meeting yesterday, over which Haywood Weeks, president of the student body, presided. Long rounds of cheers and applause greeted each nomination.

Hot Campaign

The meeting yesterday presented a contrast with the nominations of last year when all but three of the nominees received no opposition and went into office without standing for election. Already this year a hot campaign has developed, and plenty of political fireworks are expected.

Nominations for the president of the student body were Harper Barnes, Arlindo S. Cate, and B. C. Proctor, while nominees for vice-president are Benton Bray and Lee Greer.

For president of the athletic association Floyd Higby and Dave McCachren were named. Norman McCaskill and Norman McCaskill and Nor-

Candidates For Presidency Of Student Body Give Qualifications And Policies

HARPER BARNES

Qualifications: Permanent president senior class of 1932; representative on student council for sophomore class of 1930-31; carry-over representative of student council for 1931-32; president of Dormitory Store association; elected best student of his senior class; average of 93 on four years' work; representative on Student Forum; Epsilon Phi Delta Cosmopolitan club; Amphoterothern, honorary discussion group; member TAR HEEL editorial staff.

Policy: Believing that the students of the University are intelligent enough to realize that there are natural limitations on what the President of the student body can accomplish, I pledge myself as a candidate for the Presidency of the student body to make student government truly representative of student opinion and to further all causes which are the express desires of the student body.

It is my conviction that actual qualifications and a wide personal experience in dealing with student problems are of greater importance than the proclamation of promises.

It is obviously incumbent upon the President of the student body to do all in his power to bring about "a close cooperation between the student body and the University administration"

Qualifications: President of the senior class; manager of varsity basketball; student councilman from junior class last year; carry-over member and secretary of the council this year; member board of directors of Graham Memorial; Monogram club; junior-senior dance committee last year; junior class executive committee; campus dance committee; honor roll student.

Policy: Believing that the Carolina student body should follow a policy of democratic unity with individual and collective effort toward University advancement, I pledge myself as a candidate for President of the student body to the following program:

1. A sane reduction of student fees for next year.
2. A thorough co-operation with the Woman's association.
3. A firm endorsement of the reorganized Monogram club.
4. A concerted effort for better campus spirit and a reorganized cheering system.
5. A close co-operation between the student body and the University administration.
6. To ascertain student opinion and secure its expression.
7. A program for a better understanding of the University by the people of the state.
8. An adequate program for

B. C. PROCTOR

In the past the job of president of the student body has been more an honor than a job for two reasons, namely: the lack of strong men in office and the fact that men in the office have owed political obligations for their election. The presidency could be of infinite service to the student body if there were elected a qualified man who owed no frame-up any thanks for political support. A person who owes no political obligations can act in accord with student opinion without asking whose style it cramps if he acts. A person who owes political obligations must watch his step for fear of treading upon a former supporters' toes. The position of an independent candidate has an advantage from the student body's point of view over party candidates.

The only motivation for running for office is self-interest. My future is intended to be in public service. It is then my best interest to serve the student body's best interest. To me the job is not an honor, but a trust of the student body and an opportunity, by serving efficiently, to help my own future.

With the exception of the secret orders on the campus, there are but few organizations with which I have no contact. Since my work has thrown me

DON SHOEMAKER

Qualifications: Official staff nominee; present chairman editorial board; reporter, sports columnist, assistant sports editor, 1930-31; desk man, city editor, feature writer, 1932; chairman feature board, editorial writer, 1932-33; editor Carolina Handbook 1932-33; associate editor, Carolina Magazine, 1932-33; representative-at-large Publications Union Board, 1931-32; contributor to Yackety Yack and Buccaneer; president Epsilon Phi Delta Cosmopolitan club; Di Senate; Y. M. C. A. cabinets; previous professional journalistic experience as reporter and sports editor.

Program: 1. A definite expansion of THE DAILY TAR HEEL in an effort to reach every member of the student body, making the paper truly representative of the whole University.

2. THE DAILY TAR HEEL is a newspaper, not a literary magazine, and therefore it shall strive to GET THE NEWS and report it ACCURATELY in a clear and concise style.

3. The editorial policy shall represent student opinion and be concerned with campus events, touching national and international questions only when they are directly connected with the campus.

4. I advocate weekly meetings of the staff so that the group

In Defense of The Jews

Undoubtedly the histories of the next generation will record Dictator Adolf Hitler's persecution of the Jews as one of the major crimes of history. Certainly there is no example of heartless and fanatical cruelty in this modern era comparable to the atrocity of the Nazi anti-Semitic campaign. It is an ironical reflection on advanced human intelligence that the dominant political party of a civilized nation should flaunt the swastika as its emblem. There is a vicious atavistic tendency in a people who will revert to racial prejudice as a basis for a national political creed.

Down through the years the Jews have been the object of unmitigated mistreatment from the Egyptians, from the Romans, and from the various nations of the Western world to which they scattered. Suffering has served only to make them stronger. To the exasperation of their enemies, they have flourished both materially and intellectually, maintaining always a surprising degree of racial integrity and religious unity.

To the world the Jewish race has given Moses and Jesus Christ in religious philosophy, Spinoza in philosophy and natural science, Karl Marx in political economy, the Rothschilds in finance, Disraeli in statesmanship, Mendelssohn and others in music. Today, such Jewish names as Straus, Brandeis, Cardozo, Rosewald, Guggenheim, Lehman, Flexner, and Steinmetz are familiarly and respectfully known in the United States, not to mention Eddie Cantor whose name is a household word.

In every field of human activity, the world has had its great Jews, especially in fields requiring the broadest capability for constructive imagination and thought. This is the race against which Hitler and his Nazis are conducting their bitter, unscrupulous campaign, grounded upon intolerance and prejudice of the basest sort. No wonder the world has protested against the policy that has driven the possessor of the most advanced mind of the modern era, Albert Einstein, into exile.—E.C.D.

Subversive Teachings Again

To say that Brown University's Daily Herald has created quite a stir because of its recently begun campaign to ascertain student opinion in regard to fighting for God and Country would be putting it mildly. Not only has the "War Against War" as it is called, put the Herald in the limelight of college journalism, but William A. Needham, Providence attorney, has practically threatened to put its staff-members in jail. For the aforesaid gentlemen, who incidentally is an alumnus of the aforesaid University, has denounced the movement as "a communist-inspired plot" and has informed United States Attorney Henry M. Boss, Jr., that the Daily Herald's pacific zeal is tantamount to (his conception of) treason.

Nevertheless, the "War Against War" has been endorsed by the official organs of Columbia, Yale, Bucknell, and Princeton universities, so the movement does not appear to be without the sanction of college journalistic policy. Polls have been conducted, and student sentiment has shown that a majority declare themselves not only against going to war except in case of invasion but, in some instances, against going to war at all.

From the activities of Attorney Needham, it appears that reactionary forces are busy against the liberalism of America's universities north of the Mason and Dixon line, as well as in our own state. "Communist-inspired" is a phrase that rings familiarly in the ears of Tar Heel students particularly, and the rantings and ravings of Attorney Needham are strangely reminiscent of those of a man named Clark.—A.T.D.

Attention, Mrs. Stull

Ever since that day long ago when somebody or other said that if a man bit a dog it was news, reporters with the old Leather-stocking Hawkeye for the unusual have been digging up the queer quirks of human beings and nature and offering them to the public as relish to the piece de resistance. The latest bit was supplied by national convention of the Widows and Widowers club in New York and picked up by a would-be Winchell of the United Press.

It seems that during the convention, which created as much excitement as would any side-show appearing in the dining room of the Knickerbocker, a Mrs. Stull of Elmyra, Ohio, proposed a resolution demanding that the marriage vow of the husband be changed to read, "with all my worldly goods and money I thee bestow." Of course the italics are ours, but Mrs. Stull seemed to put enough emphasis on the pecuniary side of it to justify them.

It's wonderful what reforms women can instigate when really given an opportunity to display their ingenuity, such reforms of which a mere man would never have dreamed. A group of women, it will be remembered, sometime ago successfully carried a move to eliminate the word "obey" from their side of the vow in an effort to liberate their sex. While Mrs. Stull's motion was being voted on, Will Osborne sang "In the Valley, Yo-Hoo," and the importance of the verdict was testified by the fact that five newsreel cameras whirled as it was announced that the motion had carried.

Such a move must be unqualifiedly recommended as it will undoubtedly bring the home into a closer union. However, the economic and social structure of the nation is fundamentally different from what it was when Mrs. Stull was first married, and she may have overlooked one vital thing. In many homes men are wholly or in part dependant upon their wives for financial assistance, and it is hardly fair to make them go begging to their better halves when they want a pack of cigarettes. We respectfully call this matter to Mrs. Stull's attention with the confidence that the club will take some immediate action.—V.C.R.

Estimating Beer Revenues

Like Bet on Horse-Race

It is perhaps just as well that the Revenue Bill await the outcome of House forensics on the subject of the beer bill, but it would be the depth of folly for the General Assembly to let the outcome of that battle materially affect its provisions for meeting by taxation the needs set up by appropriations.

Estimates of revenue are notoriously inexact, even when made in the case of tried and proved sources of income. Estimates of the revenue to be derived from legalized beer, if the stars prove true and it become a May Day fact, are scarcely better than pure guesses in the air or betting on an outsider in a horse race because he has a pretty name and a nicely arched neck. For nobody in the world, tax expert or other, can predict in any reasonable way what income beer taxes will produce.

Twenty-five years without beer leave this question an insoluble one. At the time State Prohibition was enacted beer drinking was on the increase, as the consumption of hard liquor was on the decrease. Since then there has grown up an entirely new generation of people, who so far as drinking is concerned, know only the potent stuff of bootleggers. How will they react to a tippie of which they know nothing, have never even tasted, and which certainly carries nothing like a moonshine kick? In addition, this new legal beverage of very modest alcoholic content must of necessity have to be sold at a stiff price, seeing that it must carry the burden of Federal, State, and local taxes. And since the Depression came along nothing has fallen more sharply in price than the strong illegal waters of the country.

To assume, therefore, that after the first few glasses taken as a novelty, the people of the State are going to become habitual beer drinkers (as would have to happen if rosetate revenue estimates are to be realized) is the sheerest speculation. In fact, this assumption of anything like general consumption of beer from the start of the race is one of the most violent imaginable.

There will be revenue from beer, but whether it be small or large, it certainly will not justify the passage of a revenue measure which takes it too seriously as a prospect.—Raleigh Times.

CECIL CARMICHAEL

Independent of any organized political support, and sincere in the desire to present a representative review of campus creative writing ability and to attempt to provoke thought, either negatively or affirmatively, on subjects of interest to University folk, I base my request for your vote on this policy:

To organize the Magazine staff into four departments, namely: poetry, stories, criticism, and editorial essays, each division to be in charge of a carefully chosen assistant. It shall be my purpose to canvass the campus for contributions and to ask frequently for special articles by capable writers on pertinent questions. Believing in the right of freedom of thought, my mind is open to any and all arguments on any matter. Both sides of any debate may have access to the Magazine columns, since in that way only can a truthful conclusion be reached.

My qualifications are: A set intention to make a living in the field of creative writing; experience gained from trying to write ever since grammar school days; and several courses in higher composition taught here in the University by recognized authorities.

I have no imposing record of honor built on honor, but should you see fit in view of the above statements, I shall highly appreciate your vote for me as editor of the Carolina Magazine.

How To Avoid BONERS

A SATIRE IS A

THIS sort of thing has gone too far! When asked what product we get from whales, Bill Boner said, "Little whales."

Let's take action at once. Get him a good pipe and a tin of good tobacco. We all know a pipe smooths out the wrinkles, clears the mind for its best thinking. And we all know what smoking tobacco goes best in a good pipe. For a recent investigation showed Edgeworth to be the favorite smoke at 42 out of 54 leading colleges.

Next time you "cram" for an exam, light up a pipeful of Edgeworth. Ah! See how that different blend of fine old burleys makes even the toughest

Carolina Goes Ahead Of Duke In First Play Of Net Tourney

Score at End of Opening Play Shows Carolina First by Score of 30 to 10.

HINES OPENS WITH WIN
Takes First Singles Match Over Merrimon Cunningham in Two Sets, 6-2, 6-4.

Carolina came out of the first day's play yesterday afternoon with the score of 30 to 10 over Duke in the first annual Carolina-Duke mammoth tennis carnival. Half of the matches were played here and the other half in Durham. Play will continue today and throughout the week.

Wilmer Hines trimmed Duke's hope in the first singles match, Merrimon Cunningham, 6-2, 6-4. Hines was not in his usual form but he was rather forced to chop Cunningham's shots in order to score points. The match was Hines' all the way, while the Duke graduate student continued to drive his shots into the net.

Wright Loses

The second singles match which was played over at Durham was lost by Lenoir Wright to B. Welsh, number one player of the Duke varsity. The scores were 6-2, 4-6, 6-4. Wright served a double fault on match point. Ricky Willis, who was not playing his game, took the worst beating of the day at Duke from Harris by the score of 6-2, 6-0.

Bernie Friedman downed J. Higgins of Duke in an easy style. The scores were 6-3, 6-1. Harvey Harris showed signs of returning to his usual form in drubbing R. Taylor 6-3, 6-3. Dave Morgan dropped his match to Parsons of Duke, 6-2, 6-4. John Dillard was playing better ball than usual over R. Butler. Dillard won in straight sets, 6-2, 6-4.

Lott Features at Duke

Hunter Lott featured in battle of services on the Duke courts where he was extended to three sets by J. Peake, a graduate student. The scores 4-6, 6-4, 11-9. Walter Levitan captured honors for Carolina in defeating R. Morefield, 3-6, 6-3, 6-1.

Harley Shuford won his match

by scores of 6-2, 9-7. Bill Minor tripped Bob Nixon 6-2, 6-3. Mark Lynch defeated J. Hamilton 6-2, 6-1. Sid Sobol downed F. Fletcher 9-7, 8-6. Jim Baley won from R. Piper 6-2, 6-4. D. Cortland won from R. Hardy 6-1, 11-9. I. Kasen took a drubbing from C. Atberton, Duke, 6-4, 6-1. Primrose of Carolina scored over F. Gable 8-6, 6-4.

C. Kunkel of Duke won laurels over B. Kalb 6-1, 6-3. Fred Sutherland won honors from L. Doyle in straight sets 6-3, 6-3. Gossett scored over G. Power of Duke 1-6, 6-3, 7-5. W. Wannamaker fell before the strokes of F. Shulman of Carolina 6-1, 6-3. Buck Harris tallied for Carolina in defeating H. Storms 6-4, 4-6, 6-2.

Pinky Connor won over J. Wilson, 6-2, 6-2. Bruce Old won for Carolina by a default over H. B. Wright. Jones lost to McNeil of Duke 5-7, 6-3, 6-3. Jimmy Johnston came out on top over Caton of Duke 6-0, 7-5. J. McGinn of Carolina was victorious over DuBose 6-4, 6-1. Baukney of Carolina scored over Kellmeyer, 6-1, 5-7, 8-6. G. Reid lost to Fogelman of Duke, 2-6, 6-3, 6-4. Linker won for Carolina over Maddox, 3-6, 9-7, 7-5.

Williams took his match from Graves, Duke player, 7-5, 6-3. Bennett lost of Seigler of Duke 8-6, 6-2. Levitt of Carolina defeated Beneke 6-4, 6-2. M. H. Kalb lost to Stewart of Duke 6-3, 6-4. Shriver lost to Pempfer of Duke, 7-5, 6-3. Hoyt defeated Goddard 2-6, 6-4, 6-2. D. P. Jones won from Duttreri of Duke 7-5, 6-4. Harrison downed Stanberry of Duke 6-4, 6-2. Carolina won a match when Bill Markham scored over Betz 6-1, 6-2.

Carolina has now 217 entries and Duke has 202 on its roster. Entries are going to be accepted at both schools all week in order to encourage more players to compete. About one hundred spectators turned out to see the matches in Chapel Hill.

TAR BABIES LOSE SECOND GAME TO AUGUSTA, 11 TO 3

Military Academy Holds Freshmen To Three Hits In Loose Contest Here Yesterday.

With Daughtery and Depoy pitching three hit ball, Augusta Military Academy yesterday afternoon handed the Carolina freshman baseball team its second defeat in two starts. The final score was 11 to 3. A strong wind blowing across the field complicated the play of the fielders and as a result both teams made several errors.

Daughtery, a right-hander, gave the freshmen only a run and a hit in two frames, but he was taken out in favor of Depoy, a southpaw. Depoy pitched good ball throughout, limiting the freshmen to a single and a double in two innings, although each hit resulted in a run. Spiers held the visitors to three hits in six innings but was wild, walking six men and hitting two others. He was taken out the first part of the seventh in favor of McKeithan.

Irwin Shines at Short

The one bright spot for the freshmen, Coach Cerney, and for the spectators was the spectacular fielding of Irwin, yearling shortstop. Irwin took every ball that came his way and on one play scooped up the second baseman's error and turned it into an out with a beautiful throw. Tommy had little chance to show his hitting ability, being walked by the careful visiting pitchers three times.

The Tar Babies scored first in the last of the second. Austin got a hit, went to second on Ogburn's bunt, and came home when the pitcher threw to centerfield trying to catch him asleep. Two errors, a walk, Klutz's single, and Hottingham's double accounted for four A. M. A. runs in the third. The winners scored two more in the seventh on a walk, a hit batsman, and Jones' double.

The freshmen scored one in the sixth and one in the eighth. Glasgow drove Irwin in with a double for the first one and Tatum counted the last one on another hit by Glasgow.

Glasgow with a single and a double in four times led the freshman hitting. Austin got the only other base knock for the Tar Babies. Klutz, Hottingham, and Depoy each registered two hits to lead the visitors at bat. One of Hottingham's blows went for two bases.

BEST HOUSE WINS FAST TILT FROM SWAIN HALL, 2-1

S. A. E., D. K. E., New Dorms, Phi Alpha, and Manly Are Other Winners.

Four games brought the intramural baseball schedule into its third week yesterday. The fastest game of the season was run off as Best House took a close one from Swain hall.

The two teams scored all their runs in the first frame when Childers and Sutton crossed the plate for Best House. Kennerly scored for the losers in the latter half of this inning after which each team put up six goose-eggs. The game lasted only twenty-eight minutes.

Score by innings:
Best House 200 000 0-2
Swain Hall 100 000 0-1

S. A. E. Wins

S. A. E. gained its second win in as many starts and broke the Phi Gams' streak of two, winning 5-2 in eight innings. Phi Gam got off to a 2-0 lead in the first frame, while S. A. E. was unable to score off Hoggard's fine pitching until the seventh when two runs crossed the plate. Driving in three more in the extra inning the winners assured themselves of the game.

Score by innings:
S. A. E. 000 000 23-5
Phi Gams 200 000 00-2

Phi Delta's Bow

Delta Kappa Epsilon took a free-scoring contest from Phi Delta Theta, 22-9, the contest ending in the sixth under the intramural regulation regarding one-sided games. Lineberger, Berry, and Nalle led the attack for the winners, crossing the plate four times each. Lineberger got a home run for one of his tallies.

Wolslagel, of the losers, was the leading batsman for his team, getting a good hit with the bases loaded.

Score by innings:
D. K. E. 295 213-22
Phi Delta Theta 020 142-9

Grimes Wins

New Dorms scored two runs in the seventh, but this final flurry was not sufficient to defeat Grimes, which managed to hold onto a one-run margin when the game ended. Wishniefsky, who scored twice, stood out for the winners at bat and in the field, while Barron, on second base, led the losers.

Score by innings:
Grimes 300 412 0-10
New Dorms 042 010 2-9
Phi Alpha won from Sigma Phi Sigma by forfeit and Manly won from Old West the same way.

Rankings have been prepared for today's play in the Duke-Carolina mass tennis carnival. Play began yesterday and will continue through Saturday afternoon, with half of the matches being played here and the other half at Duke.

MANGUM SPEAKS AT PRESENTATION OF MONOGRAMS

Local Athletic Order Conducts First Formal Awarding Of Sweaters.

Forty monogram wearers met last night in Graham Memorial for the first formal presentation of sweaters.

Dr. Charles Mangum, of the University medical school and a member of the football and track teams during his undergraduate days here, was the principal speaker and described a number of highly interesting anecdotes concerning the early days of athletics in the University.

He concluded his talk by warning the monogram men that the only way to push Carolina back to the top was by making sacrifices that would enable them to enter each game in the best possible physical condition.

Sweaters Awarded

President John Phipps presided at the meeting at which Coaches Bo Shepard, Crayton Rowe, and Chuck Quinlan awarded the sweaters to nine athletes and three managers.

J. G. Stikeleather, M. Gibbs, Freeman, Alex Andrews, Kirk Swan, F. M. Eagles.

Those entries to compete in Durham will be: A. Fiore, Taylor, M. Carson, Atwood, Trainer, J. Cope, Frazier, E. Novich, A. J. Brockett, M. Stoll, J. Wilkinson, Littin, Pollock, N. H. De Bardeleben, F. Thorpe, W. Bell, Porter, MacNair, J. Hudson, A. K. Froneberger.

All players should be dressed and at Emerson field ready to play at 3:00 o'clock. Those who are to travel to Durham will be transported in student automobiles. Everyone must have a new tennis ball before starting his matches.

Monogram Club Picture

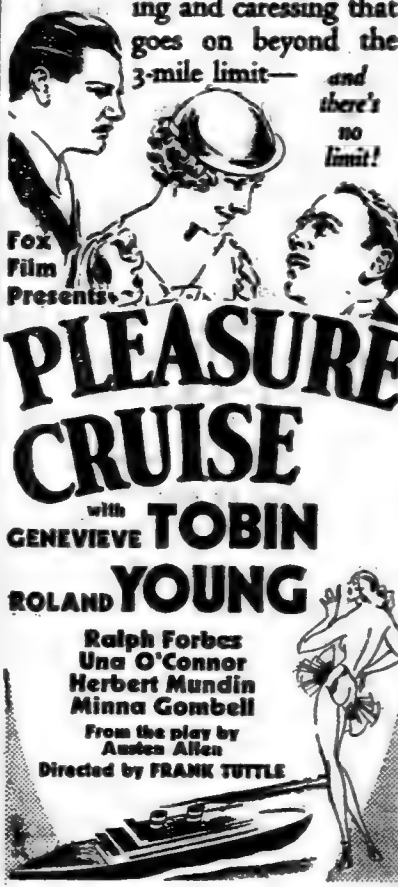

Members of the Monogram club will assemble in front of Manning hall this morning at chapel period for their picture for this year's Yackety Yack. Full attendance has been urged and all members have been asked to wear their varsity sweaters bearing the NC.

Net Team Plays Deacons

The Carolina varsity tennis team will open its campaign towards another undefeated season tomorrow when the combination meets Wake Forest. The match will be played away.

OF

The Daily Tar Heel

"To Give The Daily Tar Heel Back to the Student Body"

Below are eight definite objectives towards which the candidate will work throughout his term of office if elected:

1. To make the Tar Heel a more personal student publication, with the student himself the center of interest.
2. To encourage and recognize without discrimination any Open Forum letter submitted to the editor.
3. To provide for staff competition instead of appointment to executive positions on the board.
4. To inaugurate a policy whereby an editorial representative would attend all official meetings at which student problems are discussed in order to present the faculty view on such matters to the entire editorial board before any editorial stand is taken.
5. To make campus, local, and state affairs the chief topics of editorial comment.
6. To make of first importance events in which students participate and to give the student body an accurate, complete, and prompt coverage of campus activities.
7. To strive for better co-operation between the staffs of the four campus publications.
8. To organize a Tar Heel staff which will work together as a friendly, harmonious unit devoted to the interest of the entire student body.

THE UNIVERSITY PARTY

Twenty-Nine Named For Campus Posts

ment Quarles were put in the running for vice-president of the organization.

Nominations for editorships of University publications were as follows: DAILY TAR HEEL, Donald Shoemaker and Claiborn Carr; Carolina Magazine, Miss Mary Frances Parker, E. C. Daniel, and C. K. Carmichael; Yackety Yack, Alex Andrews and Morrie Long; and Buccaneer, Karl Sprinkle and Pete Ivey.

Miss Parker, Shoemaker, Andrews, and Sprinkle were proposed as official nominees picked by their respective staffs.

As representatives on the University debate council Ed Lanier, Phillips Russell, Don Seawell, and L. H. Fountain were named.

Publications Union board candidates were nominated as follows:

Senior representative: Vergil Lee and Bill Eddleman.

Junior representative: Lonnie Dill and Robert Drane.

Representative at large: Phil Hammer and Robert Ruark.

Elections will take place tomorrow with the polls being open between the hours of 9:00 a. m. and 5:00 p. m. in Graham Memorial. The affair will be conducted under the supervision of the student council.

At the same time class officers, nominated last night, will also be elected as well as officers of the Woman's association for next year.

5. In order to report the news when it happens and not forty-eight hours later, I propose that the press time be moved ahead so as to insure the printing of late news such as basketball games.

6. To insure accuracy and full news coverage, I propose to conduct a training class for new freshman reporters at the beginning of every quarter so that the elements of news writing, news gathering, and dependable reporting may be fully learned before the new men begin work.

7. I favor a livening of all news sections, placing important sports stories in places of prominence and presenting a balance of news.

8. As soon as it is financially possible, I favor: The printing of the paper in smaller type, in order to include more news in THE DAILY TAR HEEL; and the purchase of telegraph news rights.

9. The "Speaking the Campus Mind" column shall be open to the printing of all letters, so long as they remain within the bounds of journalistic propriety.

ROLAND YOUNG STARRED IN 'PLEASURE CRUISE'

Roland Young, popular little comedian with the eyebrow mustache, is starred opposite Genevieve Tobin in the subtle sophisticated comedy, "Pleasure Cruise," showing at the Carolina today.

Ralph Forbes, former husband of Ruth Chatterton, and Theodore von Eltz, a good double for Edmund Lowe, are cast as admirers of Miss Tobin and therefore are the chief objects of Young's jealousy and espionage.

Reporters to Check Copy

Reporters on THE DAILY TAR HEEL staff will check inches with Tom Walker this afternoon between the hours of 2:00 and 4:00 o'clock.

Carr Statement

for the fulfillment of the following objectives if elected to the editorship of THE DAILY TAR HEEL:

1. "To give THE DAILY TAR HEEL back to the student body."

2. To abolish any policy of favoritism or discrimination toward the interests of any individual member of the staff.

3. To make the TAR HEEL an interpreting and unifying force whereby the activities of the various campus and faculty organizations shall be placed on a harmonious workable basis.

4. To strive not only for co-operation among staffs of the four campus publications but also for understanding and esprit de corps.

5. To inaugurate an editorial policy which shall interpret rather than attempt to dictate student views.

6. To provide the student body with a paper which will give first consideration to prompt and accurate reporting of all news of vital concern to the campus at large.

JOHN ACEE WINS OVER MINOR FOR PRESIDENCY OF Y

Minor Becomes Vice-President
As Runner-up; Patterson and Winslow to Have Run-off.

POOLE MADE TREASURER

John Acee was elected yesterday president of the University Young Men's Christian Association for 1933-34. He succeeds Bill McKee. The vote was Acee 85, Minor 69, Fountain 21.

Acee, who lives in Asheville, is a junior in the University. He has been connected with the Y. M. C. A. for three years and last year served as president of the sophomore Y. M. C. A. cabinet. He has served two years on the staff of the DAILY TAR HEEL.

Ike Minor, another presidential nominee, received the second highest number of votes and will be the vice-president for next year. A tie resulted in the race for secretary when neither Simmons Patterson nor J. D. Winslow could secure a majority vote. A run-off will take place within a few days. The vote for secretary was: Patterson, 73, Winslow, 71, and Sloop, 27.

Jack Poole won the treasurer post by a vote of 122 to Tom Nesbit's 47.

Acee was a member of the freshman friendship council and was president of the sophomore Y. M. C. A. group. He was a member of the sophomore executive committee, and a member of the International Relations club. He is also a member of the Phi assembly.

TENNESSEE RIVER PROJECT LAUDED AT GROUP MEET

Graham Says Mastery of Mankind's Productive Rests With Schools and Research.

Speakers at a convention meeting here under auspices of the southern regional committee of the social science research council, the southern regional study work group, and the southern tax committee declared Monday that the development of the Tennessee river basin, according to President Roosevelt's plans, will be a great boon to eight southern states and will favorably influence the nation at large.

Regional aspects of optimum production in the south and the Tennessee river basin project were discussed at sessions Monday by invited experts in sociology, economics and agriculture from a number of southern states.

Odum Opens Conference

Dr. Howard W. Odum, head of the University institute for research in social science and director of the southern regional study, opened the conference with an address, outlining a social-economic-agricultural program for the south.

"In natural wealth and resources or in their potential development the south is extraordinarily rich in quality, range, and variety," Dr. Odum said.

Close Organization In Frame-Ups Recent Trend In Campus Politics

Spring Is Time for Polishing Up Smiles and Back Slapping as Elections Approach; Master Politicians Have Sometimes Seen Advisability of Running Individually.

In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of elections. The approbation of his fellow man suddenly assumes tremendous proportions for the unhappy victim of politomania. Ear-to-ear smiles are dug out of dark and gloomy corners and refurbished for the coming season. So the glamorous past has shown; so the present is exhibiting for observers.

"Frame-ups"—nay, the more polite term "organization" is applicable—have been in evidence in nearly every past election. The political structures have been built with care, and in the past, success apparently fell to the better organized party, as a study of the successful will evince.

But not always do the most complete "frame-ups" win. There were times when parties were so well organized that they succeeded in putting most of their men into office unopposed. Then hitherto insignificant giant-killers appeared on the scene, and through a mist of apathy generated by the paucity of competition, these managed to steal the coveted prize. 1932 was such a year when the All-Campus party managed to put something like twenty-six of its cohorts into office unopposed. Interest declined in the contest for the other three campus offices—the most important of which was that of president of the student body—and Haywood Weeks, running as an independent, won over Hamilton Hobgood by thirty-four votes.

Sometime in the early part of the year 1931 a movement was started to create a large non-fraternity party. The implications in such a bid for the non-fraternity members—a majority on the campus—was evident to fraternity politicians, who finally succeeded in outwitting such a movement by creating an all-campus party—composed of both factions. So successful was this movement that every office was captured. Mayne Albright, the standard-bearer, almost doubled his opponent's vote.

The election of 1931 was featured by a

FIFTY-ONE STATE HIGH SCHOOLS TO SEEK AYCOCK CUP

High Schools From Throughout State Will Send Debating Teams Here.

Fifty-one high schools won both sides of the debates sponsored by the high school debating union of North Carolina Friday night, and will be represented in Chapel Hill in competition for the Aycock Memorial cup, April 13 and 14. E. R. Rankin, secretary of the contest, announced yesterday that full returns have not been received, however.

Two hundred and fifteen high schools engaged in the statewide debating contests, the query of which was: Resolved: That North Carolina should adopt the sales tax as a feature of its state system of revenue. Each school entered teams on the negative and affirmative sides, the schools whose teams won both being eligible for representation in the finals here. The event will be one of the features of the annual high school week.

The high schools winning both debates Friday night are: Bath, Henrietta-Caroleen, Pine Level, Tarboro, Troy, Altamaha-Ossipee, Loggett, Burgaw, Curry, Garner, Oakhurst, Raleigh, Rutherfordton, Salisbury, Sand Hill, Sanford, Smithfield, Southport, Thomasville, Wendall, Arcadia, Four Oaks, Harmony, Belmont, Cornete, Cove Creek, Gastonia, Spruce Pine, Wilson, and Weekesville.

tures on Genetics.

The North Carolina chapter of Sigma Xi will bring Dr. Charles Stockard to the campus April 6 and 7 for its official lecture presentation of the year. The two public lectures will take up the subject of genetics, and will be delivered in Phillips hall at 8:00 o'clock.

Dr. Stockard is at present a member of the faculty of the department of anatomy at Cornell University medical college, and has long been recognized as one of the outstanding lecturers and authorities in this field.

Effect of Genetics

Thursday's illustrated lecture will treat the subject, "How are genetic possibilities expressed into characters?" There will be a general consideration of the transmission of hereditary constitutions in relation to the development processes through which the characters of the individual must finally be expressed. "In other words," quoting from Dr. Stockard's pamphlet, "Does the same hereditary make-up always give rise to similar individuals, or may it develop in various ways?"

"The genetics and development of form and type in dogs and men" will be the topic of the lecture Friday night. It will be a discussion of the experimental analysis of peculiar growth types thought to be associated with modifications in the glands of internal secretion. A special consideration of the causes and development of dwarfs and giants, and other peculiar forms, as elucidated.

Yackety Yack Nominees Declare Their Platforms For Candidacy

ALEX ANDREWS

Qualifications: Official staff nominee; managing editor of the present book; five years experience in editing annuals, three of which have been spent on the Yackety Yack; received Yackety Yack charm; two years pre-college experience in both annual and newspaper work; reporter and sports writer for DAILY TAR HEEL; honor roll student.

Policy: If elected editor of the Yackety Yack, my policies will be as follows:

1. To put the annual out on time, and to simplify the method of distributing copies to the student body.

2. To organize a staff of photographers to specialize in securing good sports pictures and pictures of general interest to the campus.

3. To avoid all errors in the annual by a more complete and careful system of proof-reading.

4. To give the Yackety Yack more color and originality both in art work and in content, and to avoid any yearly repetitions which tend to become monotonous.

5. To establish an impartial method of choosing staff members based on merit and competition.

Qualifications: Morrie Long has served two and one half years on the Yackety Yack staff aiding the activities and sport divisions one year, while controlling the sport section this year. Previous to his experience on the Yackety Yack, Long was a member of the annual staff at Northwestern University, and has been identified with annual work for six years, year in college and three in prep school.

A member of the DAILY TAR HEEL staff, Long has been desk man, news man, assistant city editor, city editor, assistant sports editor, and sport columnist. He is well acquainted with writing, having been employed three summers on a daily newspaper.

Morrie was a member of this year's varsity basketball team and at the conclusion of the season was rewarded with a letter. He is also a member of the Monogram club, and a pledge to Alpha Kappa Psi, national commerce fraternity.

Policy: 1. I promise to make the Yackety Yack, if elected, once more a publication edited by men selected impartially from the whole campus.

2. I pledge myself to a policy which will give just representation to all groups.

Comer Goes To Georgia For Father's Funeral

H. F. Comer, secretary of the University Y. M. C. A. left for Comer, Georgia yesterday afternoon about 1:00 o'clock to attend the funeral of his father, Townes Comer, who died early in the morning as a result of a sudden attack of heart failure.

The funeral will be conducted this afternoon at 5:00 o'clock from the Methodist church in Comer, Georgia. Mrs. Comer did not accompany her husband.

It is expected that the Y. M. C. A. executive will return to Chapel Hill late Friday or early Saturday to resume his work here on the campus.

Returns From Convention

George Gorham has returned from the sessions of southern branches of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers which met in Birmingham March 31 and April 1. Gorham won third prize of $10.00 for his paper, "Wind Tunnel Experiments on the Influence of Ground Effect on Aerodynamic Drag." This prize was donated by the Birmingham section of the A. S. M. E.

LIBRARIANS WILL HAVE CONVENTION HERE THIS WEEK

American and Southern Association
Sponsor Sessions Here
Friday and Saturday.

To determine the relation of the library to other educational agencies and to develop co-ordination, a southern library conference will convene here Friday and Saturday. The conference will bring together authorities in religion, education, cultural and social welfare.

The advance program of the conference, which is sponsored by the American and Southern Library Associations, stresses the fact that the library is conspicuously underdeveloped in the south and that at the same time it is increasingly necessary.

Leaders and Speakers

Leaders of the sessions will be Howard P. Jones, New York editor; Wilson Gee, University of Virginia social science director; Harold F. Brigham, Louisville, Ky., librarian; Mrs. Lillian Baker Griggs, Southern Library Association president; and J. O. Modisette, Louisiana library commission chairman.

Speakers will include Dr. Howard W. Odum, Southern Regional Study director; Dr. Paul W. Wager, rural social economics professor; Dean W. C. Jackson, public administration school; and Dr. Edward W. Knight, rural education professor—all of the University; Sidney B. Hall, Virginia education department superintendent; Carl H. Milam, American Library Association secretary; F. A. Whiting, American Federation of Arts president; W. A. Stansbury, Duke Memorial church pastor; Tommie Dora Barker, regional field agent of American Library Association; and Clarence Poe, Progressive Farmer editor.

Polls Will Be Open From 9:00
To 5:00 Under Supervision
Of Student Council.

CAMPAIGN PERIOD ENDS

Several Weeks' Vigorous Solicitation for Votes Culminates
In Final Drive.

Vigorous campaigning which has lasted over a period of several weeks will come to a close today when the student body of the University goes to the polls in Graham Memorial to elect thirteen campus-wide and fifteen class officers for next year.

The Woman's Association will also elect its leaders for the coming year at the same time. All voting will be conducted in Graham Memorial between 9:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m.

In the student nomination meeting Monday B. C. Proctor, Arlindo Cate, and Harper Barnes were named as candidates for the presidency of the student body. Yesterday these men presented their platforms, their conceptions of duties of the office, and their qualifications to an assembly of students in Memorial hall.

Other Candidates

Other men standing for election to campus-wide offices today are: Benton Bray and Lee Greer, vice-president of the student body; Claiborn Carr and Don Shoemaker, editor of the DAILY TAR HEEL; Cecil Carmichael, E. C. Daniel, and Miss Mary Frances Parker, editor of the Magazine; Pete Ivey and Karl Sprinkle, editor of the Buc.

No Shoulder

Today is the day for the democratically-inclined undergraduate to have his say in campus politics. Every man's vote is as good as any other man's, and those who are continually criticizing the conduct of campus affairs, the lack of democracy in the student council, the breezy undercover work of well-oiled machines have a chance to act. But act they must. It is not by lying back and muttering skeptical remarks at long range that students can express their will. It is only by turning out at the polls today and expressing in practical form the will they purport to have that any practical result can be forthcoming.

Twenty-nine student nominations have been made, the candidates' opinions and ideals have been broadcast. The line-ups are definite, the policies clear, but the final judgment rests with the student body. If the student body wants what it wants in a positive and open way, there is no doubt but that its desire can be fulfilled and that thoroughly. But an apathetic student body, a hodge-podge of indifferent individuals, an aloofness and misplaced nonchalance on election day can result only in general dissatisfaction. If student voters feel the weight of their responsibility and vote with their own judgment and the interests of the whole as determinants, there can be no justification for post-mortems. On the other hand if men sit back and then bewail the fact that their favorites have not copped the laurels, let them not turn their tear-stained faces in this direction, for there will be no shoulder to weep on.—B.B.P.

To Beer or Not to Beer

Contrary to all the pre-legislature dope on the improbability of the passage of the beer bill, it's beginning to look as though we could all get legally drunk by May day. This became assured Monday night when the Francis bill, which had already waddled through the Senate, took a sudden turn for the better and rode through the House on a veritable landslide. Yesterday's third reading was as nonsensical as President Roosevelt's signing a postmaster's appointment. But there is one point in the issue which has never been quite clear to the layman, uneducated in the political ramifications of the problem. Congress, in passing the 3.2 bill, stated that this percentage was not considered legally intoxicating, nor ever had been. If we are to accept the statement of our highest legislative body, then beer never was illegal and cannot be now. Out of ten of the standard old pre-war beers, only two, we are informed, have alcoholic content of more than 3.2 per cent, and the mere fact that persons were seen staggering after imbibing them does not prove that one was cause, the other effect. It but strengthens the recent theory advanced by Heraclitus that our sense perceptions play us false.

Such seems to be the logical deduction to be drawn from the proclamation of our Congress. But if, however, one prefers to be unpatriotic and skeptical over the validity of our law-givers' statement, he only finds himself in a worse dilemma. If it is intoxicating notwithstanding the views of our senators and representatives, then it is unconstitutional, for the constitution says that it shall not be manufactured, transported or sold. If, again, it is not intoxicating, why should it be discriminated against as opposed to Coca-Colas, Root Beers, or any other soft drinks which are at present openly sold.

The whole matter seems too complex to hope for solution, and the only fortunate thing is that nobody cares so long as the people get the beer and the state gets the tax.—V.C.R.

Swords On Paper

In a university of free thinking students, it would seem unnecessary that much stress be laid on the importance of having every student take an active part in all major campus activities of a political nature, yet, if the size of the audience to which the candidates spoke yesterday in Memorial hall bears any relation to interest in the subject at hand, a little stress, even at so late a date, would not be amiss.

The candidates have all stated their platforms and sent forth their pleas, so that no voter need cast his, or her, ballot in ignorance. Every member of the student body owes it to himself, or herself, as the case might be, as well as to the school as a whole, to analyze each candidate thoroughly, turning over the qualifications and limitations of each one, in his own mind, and trying to arrive at a logical conclusion as to whom his ballot should go. This is not a matter which should be lightly entered into, for upon the way in which the ballots are cast today will depend the course of student affairs for the next scholastic year. The array of nominees this year is a most promising one, and campus activities would not suffer under any one of them. There are, however, certain qualifications which differentiate each candidate, and of these qualifications the voter should take cognizance, making his decision in the light of all the fact. It is not enough that a candidate be a member of any definite party, or enjoy campus wide popularity, he, or she, should be judged only by ability, qualifications, and zeal for the advancement of student activities.—W.A.S.

In the Woods

Twenty-five years ago Theodore Roosevelt was completing an organized program for the conservation of national forests. Against the combined opposition of congress, backed by wealthy lumbermen, and his wall street opponents, Roosevelt had reserved millions of acres covered with valuable lumber from the ruthlessness of greedy lumbermen. After Roosevelt's driving force had left the White House his constructive laws were openly violated and his program allowed to stagnate.

Today another Roosevelt is the power in the White House and he too has recognized the urgent need for forest conservation. Among his new programs, Franklin D. has combined two problems of national interest into one and has advanced a forest conservation and unemployment relief program which will put thousands to work at the same time it protects the national forests throughout the country.

To head this organization was appointed Robert Fechner, a union labor leader and a man capable of handling the enormous projects and numerous men to which he is entrusted. He will work in unison with the departments of war, agriculture, interior, and labor.

Work will commence within a week and the first section where the projects will be put into effect is in the southern states. The expansive forests of the south have long been ravaged by industries eager for the valuable tar substances in the pines and the building value of the other woods. That the work is to commence in the south is partially due to the fact that weather conditions here are at the time more favorable, but also because it will be a part of Roosevelt's constructive program in the Smoky Mountain range.

This program shows the extensiveness of Roosevelt's campaign to reorganize the important national industries and interests which have been so utterly ignored during the past administrations.—C.G.T.

With Contemporaries

Let's Use

What We Have

There is encouragement in the optimist of James Truslow Adams' article, "America's Real Job," in the April Scribner's, for Mr. Adams, who back in 1928 predicted the crash, now foresees the dawn of a new era if we can stop our dreaming and face facts.

Paradoxically enough, Mr. Adams in advancing his theory encounters opposition similar to that he experienced in 1928. In that year, pointing out the inherent weaknesses of the mass-production theory, he was told that he did not understand the "new era" of mass-production paradise. Now that the crash has come and Mr. Adams asserts his faith in the American people to work out their own salvation with what they already possess, he is told that he does not understand the "new era" of mass-production despair.

The author of The March of Democracy counsels against hypothetical plans and beautiful dreams which call for the scrapping of our present form of society and the subsequent substitution of an untried formula.

To accomplish this revision with the aid of our present tools is what Mr. Adams believes to be America's real job. Plans may have their place, he admits, but suggests that they be reserved until the emergency has been dealt with. And that the American people have the ability to deal with the emergency he has no doubt providing they tackle the specific problems at hand and settle them before talking about grandiose planning schemes.—Daily Bruin.

Our Times

By Don Shoemaker

Visitor

A former editorial colleague of ours dropped in the office yesterday afternoon for an interview, and the printable part we are passing on to our reader. Mr. X, the ex-colleague, is now at work writing an autobiography of an ex-colleague, which he writes in between classes at Yale, the Connecticut college.

The interview was rather short, but we obtained some interesting views on life, manners, politics, etc., as the boys at Yale see things. Our first question was concerned with 3.2 beer, and we asked our victim what he thought about beer.

"What do you think about 3.2 beer?" we asked.

"Darn (sic) fine stuff," he answered.

"What do you think about Hitler, huh?"

"Darn fool, Hitler," he answered.

"What do you think of Roosevelt?" we queried next.

"Darn fine fellow, Roosevelt."

"What do you think of this nice weather," we asked, pretty desperate by this time.

He said he didn't know much about it. "I don't know much about it," he said.

Curse

We have at last found somebody who is really worried about things in this country, a Mr. James Crenshaw, editor of the College News Service. He sends us a hot editorial that he wrote cussing out Congress for not whipping into line as it ought to behind Mr. Roosevelt. "Let's Give 'Em Hell!" is the title of his editorial, which is five pages long and filled with ! marks and lots of capital letters. Mr. Crenshaw sends along a little note which runs "Do you mind the word 'Hell'? If you do, don't bother to read what follows. If you don't, stick around and see the fireworks . . . However, they (Congress) and Mr. Roosevelt need our help. The times have passed when college students can watch the caricature scenes of the governmental drama flash by and do nothing . . ."

We like the last paragraph best: "I am asking you to do one of three things: Forget the whole thing—and blame only yourself if you are broke six months from now." Which we will.

Beer

We are wondering what's goin' to happen if beer comes back. Nooschpaper writers (whew it's hot in here) will have such a time tryin' to write becaush even the typesetters will make shrdlu errors netmoy yttre alsho.

L. H. Fountain, Ed Lanier, Phillips Russell, and Don Seawell, representatives on the debate council; Bill Eddleman and Vergil Lee (senior), Lonnie Dill and Bob Drane (junior), and Phil Hammer and Bob Ruark (at-large), representatives on the Publications Union Board.

Ernest Hunt, candidate for the fourteenth campus office, that of chief cheerleader, was swept into his position Monday when his nomination went unopposed.

Class Officers

Nat Townsend and Vergil Weathers are running for the presidency of the rising senior class while candidates for the other positions are: Tom Webb and George Brandt, vice-president; Julian Frankel and Red Rankin, secretary; Dan Jones, Corney Bretsch, treasurer; and Earle Beale and John O'Neil, student council representative.

Harry Williamson and Stuart Aitken, president; Simmons Patterson and Leo Manley, vice-president; Richard Somers and J. D. Winslow, secretary; Ezra Griffin and Jack Poole, treasurer; and Ed Martin and Harold Bennett, representative on the student council, are aspirants to rising junior class offices.

Men running for rising sophomore offices are: Jack Clare and Russell Mickle, president; Morty Ellisberg and Billy Yandell, vice-president; David McIlhenny and Vance Young, secretary; Jake Austin and Billy Binder, treasurer; and Carl Dupree and Billy Coan, student councilman.

Woman's Association Candidates

Candidates for offices in the Woman's Association to be voted on today are: Laura Ross and Jayne Jolly for president; Jo Orendorf, Louise Capps and Mary Parker for vice-president; Elizabeth Johnson and Dot Bradley for secretary; Mollie Lou Daniels and Betty Durham for treasurer; Eleanor Bizzell and Margaret Olmstead for house-president; and Jayne Smoot and Vivian Grissette for president of the woman's athletic association.

Voting Procedure

The election this morning will be conducted under the Australian ballot system with the student council supervising. The council has arranged for a registration table in the lobby of the Union building. Students will fill out cards and proceed to tables where their names will be checked, their cards filed, and their ballots handed out by members of the council.

Special booths have been arranged and here students will mark their ballots, depositing them in boxes.

The council will count the votes in the student government office and from time to time announce the results from the window of the office.

"Likewise, in population and human resources, the region credits a surplus of people. On the other hand, in technology, wealth and resources, including science, invention, technology, and management, the south reflects almost unbelievable consistent deficiencies, while in its institutional resources of social, educational, and general cultural and economic organization, the south lags in many ways."

Other speakers of the first session were Professor Milton S. Heath of the commerce school and Miss Martha McKee of the southern study group.

Dr. Frank P. Graham spoke at a luncheon session, saying that the productive power for mankind will be mastered by schools and colleges and social scientific research.

Among the speakers at the afternoon session were Col. J. W. Harrelson, head of the department of conservation and development; and Dr. W. F. Prouty, acting head of the geology department; Dean Dudley Carroll, of the commerce school; and Charles E. Ray, chief engineer of the conservation and development department.

Carolina Tennis Players Increase Lead In Mammoth Meet With Duke

Tar Heels Win in Twenty-Five Matches to Bring Total Score to 55-25.

DUKE REGISTERS 15 POINTS

Play Will Continue This Afternoon With Twenty Playing Here, Twenty at Duke.

Carolina gained a 25 to 15 victory in the second day of play in the Carolina-Duke tennis carnival yesterday afternoon making the total score 55 to 25 for the meet thus far. Play will continue this afternoon and on through Friday.

The third group of forty players will compete this afternoon. In Chapel Hill yesterday, Carolina scored fourteen matches to eight of Duke. At Durham the Carolina players tallied eleven points over Duke's nine.

Carson Wins

Merle Carson won the No. 41 match for Carolina over An-crum, 6-2, 6-1. Larry Rosen-strauch beat Dewick 6-0, 7-5. C. Napier downed Platt of Duke 6-3, 7-5. E. Odum was victorious over McDavid of Duke 6-2, 6-0. Alan Smith scored for Carolina over Bagwell 6-0, 6-0. B. Willis won from Tyler of Duke 6-3, 8-6.

Duke scored when Casper defeated Parker in three hard fought sets 8-6, 3-6, 6-4. J. A. Alexander of Carolina won over Reed 6-3, 6-1. Kaveny lost to Hippolitis of Duke 4-6, 6-1, 6-2. Stokes downed Benner of Duke 6-4, 6-1. Sides of Duke took a match from Watson 6-3, 6-1.

Gentry scored over Bratzel of Duke 6-3, 6-4. McMichael of Carolina tallied over Wollet 6-0, 6-2. Dick Weesner, manager of the varsity tennis team, took a cautiously played match from Rockett of Duke, 8-6, 6-3. Furches of Carolina lost to Summers of Duke 6-1, 6-2. Ruff chalked up a victory for Duke in defeating M. Gibbs 6-4, 6-4.

Al Cohen took his match for Carolina over Gouldman 6-4, 6-4. Williams of Carolina scored over Belvin 6-0, 6-0. Brooks of Carolina dropped his match to Lewis 6-3, 3-6, 6-4. Watson lost his match to Honeycutt of Duke 6-2, 7-5. Mutt Carson tallied over Addelson of Duke 2-6, 6-2, 7-5.

Margulis was victor over Briell of Duke 6-2, 6-0. Fiore dropped a well-played tilt to Powers of Duke 6-2, 6-4. Win-stein of Duke fell before the on-slaughter of Taylor 6-3, 6-0. Jer-nigan of Duke downed Atwood 7-5, 6-4. Trainer took his match from Wilson of Duke in straight sets 6-0, 6-2. J. Cope trimmed Williams of Duke 6-4, 6-2.

Frazier of Carolina was ex-tended by Jones to a 14-12, 6-4 match. Stein of Carolina lost to Nixon 6-2, 7-5. Barackett was a winner for Carolina over Bernstein 6-3, 6-4. Funkhauser of Duke scored over J. G. Stoll in three sets, 3-6, 6-3, 6-2.

Hamlin took a match for Duke over Wilkinson 6-2, 6-2. Miller won for Duke by a 6-3, 6-1, decision over Litten. Grier won for Carolina over Booth 6-3, 6-1. DeBardelen lost a match for Carolina by default. Barnham won for Duke over Harilee 6-1, 6-4. Pettees finished Warren Bell of Carolina in short order, 6-0, 6-1.

Carolina won the last three matches when Wilson defeated Vaughn, 6-1, 6-2. MacNair downed Bearse 6-2, 6-3, and Jim Hudson scored over Arnold in three sets 6-4, 1-6, 6-4.

Carolina's entry has grown to 226. Nothing has been learned of the size of registration at Duke.

ured by the first paid publicity. Reverting to the political tradi-tions of the early part of the century, giant torch-light par-ades were staged.

The year 1930 witnessed what has been termed a "sensational and dramatic" election. For the first time in about six years the organization developed by Tay-lor Bledsoe of S. P. E. crashed to defeat when R. C. "Red" Greene won over Marion Alex-ander, who had succeeded to the toga of Bledsoe and others.

Ray Farris rode in on his tremendous popularity won on the football field to become president of the student body unopposed. At that time three parties were in the field, but most of the candidates played the parts of lone-wolves and party loyalty was absent. In 1928 Ed Hudgins won over Charlie Lipscomb for president. Most of the presidents of the student body have been either graduate or law school student, Farris being the only under-graduate in recent years to hold that office.

TAR HEEL TRACK STARS SET GOOD MARKS SATURDAY

Ed McRae Runs Three-Quarter Mile in 3:15 Minutes for Best Time in Trial Heats.

The Tar Heel trackmen, drill-ing for their opening practice meet with Georgetown here Sat-urday, made several good marks for early season at their last time trials.

Perhaps the best was Ed Mc-Rae's time of 3:15 minutes for the three-quarter mile, which is only a little over the state record for that event. If Mc-Rae can keep up the same pace for the full mile this year, he may turn in some 4:25 miles or maybe better. There is also the possibility that he may smash the conference mark of 4:21.2 set by Elliot of Carolina in 1926.

Odell Childers, sophomore hope who turned in an impres-sive performance in the indoor meet, is a leading sprint pros-pect. In the trials he won the 100-yard dash in 10.1, and the 220-yard dash in 22.2.

Sophomore Hurdle Stars

Another pair of sophomore stars is the combination of Tom Hawthorne and Frank Aber-nethy in the hurdles. In last year's frosh season, Hawthorne beat Abernethy consistently, but the latter has improved so much this year that he scored several points for Carolina in the in-door meet while Hawthorne was eliminated early. However, when the trackmen turned to the cinders Hawthorne improv-ed considerably and won the low hurdles and tied with Woody Glenn in the high hurdles Sat-urday. Abernethy was not run-ning however due to a sore leg.

Dennis Fox, a junior, and Barney Keeney, a freshman, won the two heats of the special 300-yard race for quarter mil-ers. Both ran the distance in 34 seconds. This time in only fair, and the quarter-milers will need a lot of practice before they can hope to score for Caro-lina.

L. Sullivan Leads Two Milers

Louis Sullivan, co-captain of the Tar Heel harriers, paced the two-milers with a time of 7 min-utes 19.9 seconds over a special-ly shortened course of a mile and a half. Other winning marks in the time trials were as follows: Jay Marsden, 1:27.2 seconds for the 660-yard run; Red Hamlet, 5 feet 9 inches for the high jump; Charlie Hub-bard 21 feet 4 3/4 inches for the broad jump; and Oscar Mullis 43 feet 4 1/2 inches for the shot and 126 feet 10 inches for the discus.

Several of the regular pros-pects were not permitted to com-pete in the time trials because of minor injuries, including Crook Stafford a veteran.

CHANGE TAR BABY NINE'S SCHEDULE

Postponed Holidays Result in Change in Game Dates; An-other Contest Added.

As a result of the postponed holidays, several changes have been made in the freshman base-ball schedule and one more game has been added, leaving twelve games yet to be played.

Two contests with Oak Ridge and one with Duke freshmen were scheduled for the week of April 16 to 24 but were changed, as this is the week of the annual spring holidays. One contest with Oak Ridge has been changed to next week while the other will not be played until May 13. The game with the Blue Imps was put on the end of the schedule, closing the yearling season May 17.

Schedule

One more game has been added to the original card. Danville high school of Virginia is to be played in Chapel Hill May 1. The rest of the schedule for this season follows:

April 6—Mt. Pleasant, here.
April 11—Durham high, here.
April 13—Oak Ridge, here.
April 27—N. C. State, here.
April 29—Wake Forest, here.
May 1—Danville high, here.
May 4—Davidson, here.
May 8—Wake Forest, there.
May 9—N. C. State, there.
May 12—Duke, there.
May 13—Oak Ridge, there.
May 17—Duke, here.

Hitting Drill

Yesterday afternoon Coach Cerney sent the entire fresh-man squad through a long hit-ting drill. This was shown to be the outstanding weakness in Monday's game against A. M. A., when the freshmen were held to three safe blows.

The whole team will probably be revamped next week when the players who have been busy with football report. Coach Cerney will have his full strength ready for the first Big Five con-test as it is not scheduled until after the holidays.

SIGMA XI BRINGS NOTED LECTURER HERE THURSDAY

citated by genetic study of the various breeds of domestic dogs will also be treated. This lec-ture will have lantern slides to augment the discussion.

The members of Sigma Xi so-ciety will entertain Dr. Stock-ard at a formal dinner at the Carolina Inn Thursday evening at 6:30 o'clock.

The committee of the society which is responsible for bring-ing such a well known anatomist to the campus is composed of: Dr. A. S. Wheeler, president; Dr. E. T. Browne, vice-president; Dr. E. L. Mackie, secretary-treasurer; and Drs. J. N. Couch and A. M. White, members.

NETMEN CHOSEN FOR THIRD ROUND

Line-up of Forty Men Selected For Court Play Here And At Duke Today.

The third group of forty play-ers has been selected to compete in the first annual Carolina-Duke mass tennis meet as it en-ters the third day of competition this afternoon. Players who are listed below will compete this afternoon and must have a new ball on hand before beginning a match.

Those men scheduled to par-ticipate in Chapel Hill are: J. H. Alexander, C. Shohan, G. Black-well, J. L. Kessler, C. Holley, H. Manning, Ben Willis, W. D. Wisnant, G. Adams, Phil Jones, R. M. Daley, P. Lawrence, B. Bernhardt, L. Simmons, Billy Wood, G. Marsden, N. Ames, H. Coffield, A. E. Dudley, Don Jackson, and Billy O'Brien.

Need Transportation

Those players who will travel to Duke will be carried over to Durham in student automobiles. Anyone with a car would be ren-dering a great favor in offering his services, since there is a lack of automobiles.

Carolina will be represented in Durham by J. Farr, F. An-derson, Mayne Albright, J. Sprunt, B. Beck, F. Rogers, A. Cohen, J. Acee, R. Burnett, L. Fisher, J. M. Morris, Dick Som-ers, N. A. Simmons, W. Roth, Mutt Carson, P. Hayes, R. Ber-man, J. Farrel, F. McLaughlin, T. Hicks, and M. L. Tucker.

Players who will go to Dur-ham must be in front of Em-erson field at 3:00 o'clock dressed and ready to leave. The line-up for Thursday will be announced tomorrow morning.

Al Jolson Play Runs At Show House Today

Al Jolson, looking younger than ever, still reveals his eag-erness to please the public in "Hallelujah, I'm a Bum," the picture showing at the Carolina theatre today.

To have seen him on the scene of action during the filming of the picture, one would have thought that his very life de-pended upon its success.

The picture is something like ninety per cent musical, but in every instance the music and lyrics are an inherent part of the story. Madge Evans takes the principal feminine role.

LEWIS GETS WIN FROM OLD EAST IN BALL LEAGUE

Aycock Takes Victory From Ruf-fin by Scoring Four Runs In Extra Inning.

With no forfeits to mar the day's schedule, intramural ball players put in a busy afternoon yesterday. Of the teams partic-ipating, only Sigma Chi and Lewis finished the day among the undefeated. Sigma Chi gained its second win of the season at the expense of Theta Kappa Nu, 7-2, while Lewis opened its campaign with an 8-7 triumph over Old East.

Peacock, Sigma Chi pitcher, had little trouble with the Theta Kappa Nu batsmen, who man-aged to score only in the fifth frame when two runs crossed the plate. Sigma Chi had al-ready compiled a lead of five runs, however, and added two more in the sixth to assure its triumph.

Besides Peacock, Lacy and Hines played well for the win-ners, while for Theta Kappa Nu Longest put up the best game.

Score by innings:
Theta Kappa Nu.....000 020 0—2
Sigma Chi.....120 202 x—7

Old East Bows

A three-run flurry in the sev-enth inning was not quite enough to match Lewis' lead and Old East dropped its second game of the season, 8-7. Lewis rolled up five runs in the first three frames, while Kleitman was holding Old East scoreless. In the fourth and fifth, however, Old East got four runs. Lewis added two more in the sixth and one in the seventh. Then, tak-ing their last turn at the plate, the Old East batters went to work and drove across three tal-lies before being halted. The game was featured by the work of Kleitman and Unger, for the winners, and Henry for the losers.

Score by innings:
Lewis.....212 002 1—8
Old East.....000 220 3—7

Pika Loses

Climaxing its attack by scor-ing ten runs in the fourth, Phi Alpha won its third game out of four starts this season, beat-ing Pi Kappa Apha, 17-5. Lazow-ick drove out a home run to feature the winners' attack. Phi Alpha was aided by frequent errors on the part of the losers

"KING KONG"

Ann in his arms again, "King Kong" rips up a section of elevated track and a train crashes to destruction. He leaves a trail of horrible death and terror. A great city is alarmed as never before. All forces of the police department are called into play, but how can puny bullets wound a body that has survived for millions of years?

"King Kong" has always lived at the top of a mountain. He wants a moun-tain now and these man-made peaks are amazingly easy to climb, though his cap-tive thinks any moment her heart must stop beating. Surely there is a limit to the amount of terror she can endure. She can see not a chance in the world for her rescue now.

On the topmost peak, like the Pterodactyl on Skull Island come flying things at "King Kong." He thrusts out a fist and a bombing plane crashes into splinters! He grabs another in his fist—more wreckage! Thousands of bullets are being pumped into his giant body—is it possible he is death-less?

A heart that has beat for mil-lions of years at last gives up, full of lead. With one last drum-ming of his chest and a mighty roar, "King Kong" falls to the street, a thousand feet below! Ann is snatched in time from the dizzy parapet by her sweet-heart, Driscoll.

World News Bulletins

Diribible "Akron" Wrecked
United States Navy dirigible Akron fell into the Atlantic Ocean early yesterday with seventy-six men aboard. Of the four men rescued from the stricken monster of the air, one died soon after. The ship was caught in an electrical storm twenty-five miles off the New Jersey coast shortly after midnight and plunged into the sea. Coast guard destroyer Tucker went out to pick up survivors after the Asbury Park station received an S.O.S. call. Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the Navy's Aeronautics Bureau, is among those missing.

Beer Doings

Legalized 3.2 per cent beer will be sold in North Carolina by May 1 for the first time since 1908. The House passed the bill on its third reading, making only one slight change. Representative Cowles, Wilkes Republican, was supported in his motion that beverages with alcoholic content should not be sold to minors under 18. The bill was sent to the Senate for concurrence on the revision, and that august body wasted little time in accepting it.

Michigan's special state convention will favor the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution next Monday. Eighty-six out of a possible 100 are pledged to support repeal. Additional returns from last Monday's referendum showed the tremendous strength of the anti-prohibition forces. The total vote in 2,488 of the state's 3,417 precincts gave: for repeal 706,843; against 94,504.

Stamp Tax Sentiment

The sub-committee of the joint finance committee of the General Assembly has finally drafted its proposed two per cent sales tax bill to be included in the 1933 revenue bill. Stamps worth as little as one-fourth of a cent may be issued for use on articles the retail price of which range from five to twelve and a half cents.

Representative W. T. Culpepper of Pasquotank in a round table discussion of the stamp tax scheme claimed that application to movie houses such as he operates in Elizabeth City would work an injustice. A sub-committee was named to confer on the matter.

Governor Blackwood of South Carolina in addressing that state's General Assembly yesterday declared that there was the alternative of a sales tax or a school holiday. The threatened holiday would extend from about May 1 until "the first Monday in January, 1934."

Applications To P. U. Board Are Due Today

Today is the deadline for applications to be submitted to the Publications Union Board. Letters should be in the hands of Professor J. M. Lear before midnight tonight.

These applications are for the business managerships of three publications, and the managing editorships and circulation managership of the DAILY TAR HEEL.

Interviews will begin promptly at 2:30 tomorrow afternoon in Professor Lear's office in Bingham hall.

Bids to Pharmacy Dance Will Be Distributed Today

Bids to the pharmacy school dance will be given out this morning from 10:30 to 12:00 o'clock at the pharmacy building. Everyone expecting a bid will have to call by for it.

EDDLEMAN AND RUSSELL TO DEBATE GEORGIA TECH

Bill Eddleman and Phillips Russell were chosen at the try-outs Monday night to debate against Georgia Tech here April 13. Carolina will take the affirmative of the question "Resolved: That Japan's foreign policy be condemned."

Ed Lanier and A. S. Kaplan gave a short practice debate Monday in preparation for their contest with the University of Vermont which was conducted last night at a joint meeting of the Di and Phi.

APPLICANTS FOR VACANCY IN NAVY POST CALLED FOR

April 25 Is Deadline for Seeking Position of Transportation Rate Clerk in the Navy.

Applications for the position of transportation rate clerk to fill a vacancy in a Navy Department bureau at Washington will be accepted until April 25 by the United States civil service commission. Full information may be obtained from S. W. Bynum at the local post office.

Applicants for the position must have had at least three years experience in positions where they have become thoroughly conversant with various passenger rates and tariffs and rules of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Two years experience in distribution of passenger revenues between carriers on through traffic and the determination of proper land-grant law deductions is also required.

The salary of the position is $2,000 dollars a year, with deductions which will not exceed eighteen and one-half percent.

Easterling Advocates Strict Local Economy

Several interesting points were brought out by W. E. Easterling, assistant director of the local government commission, in his address on financial problems of local government, Monday night before the North Carolina club.

Easterling stated that a large number of local units of government in the state will never be able to meet their debt obligations unless some plan of financing is adopted and economic conditions improve materially. He also asserted that much of the public debt in North Carolina was the result of counties not living within current means, making it necessary for local units to fund the current operating deficit.

TAR HEEL STAFF TO SEE 'KING KONG' TOMORROW

Members of the DAILY TAR HEEL staff will be guests of the Carolina theatre at a pre-showing of "King Kong" tomorrow night at 11:00 o'clock, through the courtesy of E. Carrington Smith.

"King Kong," featuring Fay Wray, Robert Armstrong, and Bruce Cabot, will be shown at the Carolina theatre Friday and Saturday this week.

Aeroplane Motor Given

Through the efforts of J. Frederick Kistler, a former graduate of the University, the engineering department has been presented a Pratt-Whitney Wasp aeroplane motor.

The motor has a H.P. of 440 and is capable of 2,100 r.p.m.

Thirteenth President Of Student Body Stands For Election Today

The president elected by the student body today will be the thirteenth to be elected by the vote of the entire campus.

Prior to 1921, the president of the senior class, elected only by the members of that class, automatically became the president of the student council, which was the highest student office in the University.

The first student to be elected to the office of president of the student body was Garland B. Porter, who is now on the advertising staff of an Atlanta, Georgia, newspaper.

Lawyer Chosen

Following Porter, J. Obie Harmon, now manager of Swain hall, was elected. These two were seniors in the undergraduate school when elected, but Julian R. Allsbrook, the next president, although in his fourth college year, was chosen when he was in the law school. Allsbrook is now an attorney in Roanoke Rapids.

President in 1924 was William J. Cocke, a Rhodes scholar, who is now associated in the capacity of attorney with a bond company in Asheville. The fifth president of the student body Jefferson B. Fordham, is also connected with the legal profession. He is a member of the faculty of the law school in the University of West Virginia. After Fordham, Sydney G. Chappell, who is now the principal of Norlina high school, was chosen president.

Graduates Elected

At this time it became the tendency to elect to this office a graduate student. All the presidents of the student body heretofore had been in their fourth year. The first man to break this precedent was Charles G. Jonas, at present an attorney practicing in Lincoln, who assumed the position of president when he was a third year law student.

With the exception of Ray S. Farris, who was chosen to serve in his senior year, all the remaining men were graduate students. D. Edward Hudgins, a Rhodes scholar, and now an attorney, preceded Farris in the office, while Ralph C. Greene, sales manager for the McCall Magazine company, followed Farris.

Six of the twelve presidents of the student body are attorneys, and Mayne Albright and Haywood Weeks expect to enter the legal profession.

Mayne Albright, who was president last year and who is now director of Graham Memorial, expects to enter law school next year, and Haywood Weeks, the out-going president, who is now in the law school, expects to retire from his five years of participation in student activities and devote his time to a continuation of his law studies.

Aspirants For Buccaneer Post State Policies For Next Year

PETE IVEY

Qualifications: Two years on Buccaneer staff; associate editor of Buccaneer; received Buccaneer charm freshman year; eight years experience on the Rocky Mount Telegram, printing, writing, reading copy and contributing to humor column; have had jokes and humorous articles accepted by Life, Colliers, Richmond Times-Dispatch and American.

Policy: The policy of the Carolina Buccaneer should be a policy of representation. The Buccaneer should represent all phases of campus life, not just a part. This policy I intend to follow, if elected editor of the Buccaneer. Every one on the staff will have an equal chance. There will be no discrimination and no favoritism. No one person's name will be featured on the drawings and no one person's name will be continually flaunted in the face of the readers. Credit will be given for every bit of work done. The originator of the ideas, as well as the artist, will be given credit. A page will be devoted to suggestions and criticisms from the student body, in order to more thoroughly represent the campus at large. The women students will be represented on the staff and in special sections called "Beauty and Brains." The law school will be featured in special sections, as will the other professional schools. The fraternities will be represented, and the non-fraternity students will be given a section. The forgotten student will be remembered. I intend to give the students what they want.

PETE IVEY.

Twelve Confined to Infirmary

Twelve students were confined to the infirmary yesterday. They were: R. H. Proctor, Jr., James Gilliam, Jim Cook, H. S. Rubin, Doris Schneider, E. A. Gaskill, Jr., George A. Moore, John Withers, John Orendorff, G. J. Hellinger, J. H. Workman, and Vida Miller.

NOMINATIONS MADE FOR SOPHOMORE 'Y' OFFICERS

Three men were nominated for president of the rising sophomore cabinet of the Y. M. C. A. Monday night. The nominees were Butler French, Jesse Greer and Phil Hammer. Elections will take place next Monday night.

Marcus Lynch and B. S. Smith were nominated for vice-president, Ralph Bergin and Russell Mickle for secretary, and Paul McKee, Billy Yandell, and Billy Anderson for treasurer.

Theta Chi Wins

In another free-scoring setto, Theta Chi gained its first victory of the season, and handed Kappa Sigma its first setback, 15-10. The losers got six runs in the last inning, but their rally was to no avail. Haywood Weeks and Ralston LeGore stood out for the winners while for Kappa Sigma Eagles and Rennie played best. The latter hit a home run, but neglected to touch second and was put out.

Score by innings:
Theta Chi 501 531 0-15
Kappa Sigma 000 202 6-10

Aycock Scores

Scoring four runs in the eighth, Aycock took an extra-inning game from Ruffin, 9-5. Shpack, at third, played best for the winners, scoring three runs and turning several good fielding plays. Barbano and Leight stood out for Ruffin.

Score by innings:
Aycock 020 021 04-9
Ruffin 110 130 00-5

Zeta Psi Wins

Zeta Psi turned in its second win in three starts at the expense of Lambda Chi Alpha, which dropped its second game in a row, 9-3. Clark and Barber played well for the winners, while Lothian excelled for Lambda Chi Alpha.

CHORAL FESTIVAL TO OPEN SESSION IN RALEIGH TODAY

Over Forty-Five Choirs Will Be Represented With 400 to 500 Voices Participating.

A group of forty-five choirs composed of from 400 to 500 voices will participate in the opening of the choral festival of the state federation of music clubs in Raleigh today, according to an announcement by Professor Harold S. Dyer, national chairman of choral festivals for the federation. Professor Dyer and Dr. Max Noah of Guilford College will accompany the singers.

This is the first group of its kind to be organized in this state and its purpose is to further an interest in choir organization and to present a correct interpretation of hymn singing. The choir of the Chapel of the Cross, directed by Professor Nelson O. Kennedy, will send singers to the festival. Mrs. L. C. MacKinney will appear as soloist. The choir of the Duke Memorial church in Durham, directed by Professor Dyer, will appear as a solo group at the federation dinner tonight.

The women's chorus of the Chapel Hill community club which presented a concert here Monday evening will represent this district in the federation chorus Friday.

Thesis Dance Planned

The Shirley Graves Graduate club will sponsor a Thesis dance Friday night, April 7, in the lounge room of the graduate club building. Members of the dance committees have formulated plans for the dance. A small admission charge will be made.

Campus Parties Virtually Split On Class Positions

University Organization Seats Eight of Fifteen Officers In Class Elections.

FAILS IN PRESIDENCIES

Vergil Weathers To Head Seniors Next Year; Brandt Is Chosen Vice-President.

In balloting characterized by split tickets and by margins based on the popularity of the various candidates, the All-Campus and University parties virtually divided class offices in the annual spring elections yesterday. The University group had a bare margin of one in the class office section, gaining eight to its opponent's seven.

The University organization gained four out of the five in the sophomore division, three in the junior, and only one in the senior. It failed, however, to take any of the presidencies.

Vergil Weathers, varsity basketball player, gained the presidency of the rising senior class yesterday as the All-Campus party took four out of the five elective positions. Weathers defeated Nat Townsend by a vote of 227 to 166.

Other All-Campus men winning offices were George Brandt as vice-president over Tom Webb, 226 to 154; Red Rankin, secretary over Julian Frankel, 203 to 174; and John O'Neil, student councilman for the class over Earle Beale, 192 to 197. Dan Jones, University party, defeated Corney Bretsch, 213 to 153.

ACTIVITIES GROUP TO TAKE ACTION ON COUNCILMAN

Committee Meets Tonight to Discuss Representation of Engineering School.

Student council representation for the engineering school will be taken up at the meeting of student activities committee in Memorial hall at 7:00 o'clock tonight. Haywood Weeks, president of the student body, urged that every member attend. The quarterly dinner will be served.

A student councilman for the engineering school has been under discussion for the past year and was again brought to the forefront during the present political campaign.

The question has to be considered from several different angles according to student councilmen. The pharmacy school's representation will have to be considered as that division now operates on a four-year basis and requires class fees. The student council's program for representation will be offered and discussed tonight. The activities committee, composed of leaders in campus activities operating in an advisory capacity, will make recommendations for action on the matter.

Other important items of business affecting several phases of University life are slated for consideration tonight.

JANIE JOLLY IS CHOSEN AS HEAD OF CO-ED GROUP

Jo Orendorff Elected Vice-President; Elizabeth Johnson, Secretary; Betty Durham, Treasurer.

Balloting for next year's officers in the elections yesterday, the Woman's Association of the University decided that Janie Jolly would be president of the organization. She defeated Laura Ross by a vote of 103 to 46.

The vote yesterday was considered fairly heavy, twenty more ballots being cast yesterday than in the election last year.

Other officers elected were Jo Orendorff, 78, over Louise Capps, 67, in the race for vice-presidency; Elizabeth Johnson, 89, over Dot Bradley, 58, for secretary; and Betty Durham, 76, over Mollie Lou Daniels, 66, for treasurer.

Eleanor Bizzell was elected house president of Spencer hall, having a 43 vote margin over Margaret Olmstead. The vote was 93 to 50. Jayne Smoot was chosen president of the Woman's Athletic Association, defeating Vivian Grisette 76 to 64.

Deputation Trip Will Be Made To New Bern

A special deputation team led by Jack Poole and composed of James Craighill, Phil Hammer, Charlie Edgerton, Tom Hicks, and Roy Rosser is to leave this afternoon at 2:00 o'clock to spend the week-end in New Bern.

The team will visit the New Bern hospitals, and shut-ins, and will present programs at the schools, boys and girls Hi-Y clubs, and the civic clubs.

Dr. W. S. Bernard will make the trip to New Bern Sunday morning to close the deputation trip with an address at the Methodist church. The team will return Sunday night.

OFFICERS OF METHODIST GROUP ELECTED SUNDAY

The Wesley Student Association of the Methodist church met last night for the election of new officers. John Entwistle of Rockingham was elected president; Betty Durham of Chapel Hill, vice-president; Frances White, of Chapel Hill, secretary and Maurice B. Winstead of Ransonville, treasurer.

These officers will be installed at the regular meeting next Sunday night. The president will announce the names of the members of the council for next year.

Troop School Meets Tonight

The 316th Field Artillery troop school will meet in Davie hall tonight at 7:30 o'clock. All reserve officers and interested civilians are urged to attend.

Pharmacy Nominations Today

Students of the pharmacy school will make nominations for student council representative and president of the pharmacy school today at 10:30 o'clock. The elections are scheduled Wednesday, April 12.

BOARD TO NAME MANAGERS TODAY

Applications for Salaried Positions On Publications Filed With Board Yesterday.

Written applications for salaried positions of the campus publications were filed with Professor J. M. Lear yesterday and selections will be made this afternoon by the Publications Union board. The candidates will appear in person before the board at 2:30 o'clock at the office of Professor Lear at 109 Bingham.

The positions to be filled are: business managerships of the Yackety Yack, the DAILY TAR HEEL and the Buccaneer; and the managing editorship and circulation managership of the DAILY TAR HEEL.

The new managing editor of the DAILY TAR HEEL is the only one of the men to be selected who will assume office this spring. He will take office Saturday, April 8.

Members of the Publications Union board are: Professors J. M. Lear and Phillips Russell, faculty members; Tom Walker, representative from the senior class; Bob Woerner from the junior class; and Lonnie Dill, representative-at-large.

BOOK RELEASED BY LOCAL PRESS RECEIVES PRAISE

"Time, Matter, and Values" by R. A. Millikan Was Published By University Press.

Sunday's issue of The New York Times Book Review makes favorable comment on Dr. R. A. Millikan's book, Time, Matter and Values, published by the University of North Carolina Press. Time, Matter and Values is a publication of the John Calvin McNair lectures delivered by Dr. Millikan in the University last year.

Thus writes Waldemar Kaempfert concerning the work for the Times Review, "In less than a hundred pages he has managed to present all that a well-informed man should have at his finger-tips about modern physics. Relativity, the quantum theory, the electron theory of matter, wave mechanics—Dr. Millikan runs through the gamut like a skillful virtuoso."

Bequest Pays for Lectures

The McNair lectures are given as the result of a bequest made by the Reverend John Calvin McNair with the stipulation that the trustees of the University of North Carolina "shall employ some able scientific gentleman whose duty it is to show the mutual bearing of science and theology upon each other and to prove the existence and attributes, as far as may be, of God from nature."

"Dr. Millikan," continues Kaempfert, "assuredly fulfills the qualifications that a 'scientific gentleman' must have to deliver the course of lectures of the kind that Reverend John Calvin McNair had in mind. One may not agree with his particular way of reconciling science and religion, but one must respect it as that of a man of deep and strong convictions."

NATIONAL CLUB OF PROFESSORS MEETS

Local Chapter of A. A. U. P. Discusses Problems of University Instructors.

The local chapter of the American Association of University Professors convened at the Episcopal parish house Tuesday night.

In view of reduced salaries, a plan for cheaper living quarters, especially among the younger members of the faculty, was studied. A steering committee was appointed to draw up a program for future activities of the chapter, and the question of continuing the organization was considered. The entire chapter strongly favored a hospitalization and health insurance plan, which would allow medical attention to the faculty at low cost.

The association is a national body composed of 110 chapters. There are 12,000 members. The object of the association is to facilitate a more effective cooperation among teachers and investigators in universities and colleges, for the promotion of higher education and research, and to increase usefulness and advance the standards and ideals of the profession.

CORNELIA SKINNER TO APPEAR HERE TUESDAY EVENING

Famous Actress Will Offer Interpretations of Six Fateful Wives of Henry VIII.

The Wives of Henry VIII, creative performance of Cornelia Otis Skinner, will be presented in Memorial hall at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday night as the seventh in the series of student entertainment. Miss Skinner, famous American actress, will give interpretations of the six fateful wives of the notorious Tudor ruler.

The dramatic portrayal of Miss Skinner will be the only entertainment presented this quarter by the Student Entertainment Committee.

Series of Sketches

The original performance includes a series of character sketches featuring in turn Catherine of Aragon, Anne Boleyn, Jane Seymour, Anne of Cleve, Kathryn Howard, and Katherine Parr. It has been widely acclaimed as an outstanding piece of interpretative work. The first presentation in London brought forth universal applause, and one London critic who attended remarked that "To come under her magic spell is worth living and waiting for."

Not only is Miss Skinner a talented actress and playwright, but she also has contributed poetry and articles to some of the outstanding magazines of the country. She made her stage debut in a small role in Blood and Sand, and since then has appeared in such successful shows as Tweedles, In the Next Room, and The Wild Westcotts. She wrote Captain Fury, in which Otis Skinner, her father and the dean of the American theatre, had the leading part.

Paper By Dr. Russell Appears In Magazine

Several items of interest concerning University professors were contained in the April issue of the American Historical Review.

In the account of the Toronto meeting of the association of last December is a short abstract of Dr. J. C. Russell's paper upon the "Procedure of Medieval Assemblies," which he read before the medieval section. Dr. Russell has recently received a grant from the American Council of Learned Societies for research in Medieval English History this summer.

Among the personal items is the note that Professor R. D. W. Connor will be a visiting professor at the University of Colorado this summer. He is a member of the Committee on Radio of the American Historical Association. Professor J. G. deRoulhac Hamilton is chairman of the Historical Manuscripts Commission of the Association. Professor L. C. MacKinney's review of Sike's Peter Abailard appears among the book reviews.

Music Program Planned

There will be a program of Palm Sunday Music Sunday evening at 8:00 o'clock in the Methodist church. Thor Johnson is in charge. The choir will be assisted by the Carolina Salon Ensemble.

At 11:00 o'clock in the morning Dr. Godbold will speak on "The Measures of Life."

Claiborn Carr Has Forty-One Vote Lead In Race For Tar Heel Editorship.

McCACHREN'S LEAD WIDE

E. C. Daniel Lacks Majority By Eight Votes As Tenth Ballot Is Announced.

As the student council early this morning waded through the heaviest vote ever cast in annual spring elections at the University, slow announcements of results indicated that the campus political contests yesterday were as a whole, the closest in the history of the University.

It seemed evident that there would be two run-off elections Friday morning for the position of president of the student body and editor of the Carolina Magazine.

On the tenth ballot at 2:30 o'clock this morning, Harper Barnes was leading for the presidency of the student body with 503 votes to Arlindo Cate's 428 and B. C. Proctor's 145. Barnes' gain in this division was steady and a run-off between him and Cate is expected.

In a three-fold contest for the Carolina Magazine editorship, E. C. Daniel lacked 8 votes of a majority, having 532 to 475 for Miss Mary Frances Parker and 65 for Cecil Carmichael.

Carr Leads

In a nip and tuck battle lasting through the night, Claiborn Carr had a 41 vote margin over Don Shoemaker at the tenth ballot. In this, the race for the editorship of the DAILY TAR

STOCKARD WILL ADDRESS SIGMA XI THIS EVENING

Authority Will Speak on "How Genetic Possibilities Are Expressed Into Characters."

Dr. Charles Stockard, nationally prominent authority in biology, will lecture on "How Genetic Possibilities Are Expressed Into Characters" tonight at 8:00 o'clock in 206 Phillips hall. Those who are interested are invited.

The lecture tonight is the first of two presented this year by the North Carolina chapter of the Sigma Xi society. Dr. Stockard will speak again Friday night on the genetics and development of form and type in dogs and men. Both lectures will be illustrated.

Dinner Planned Tonight

There will be a formal dinner for Dr. Stockard at the Carolina Inn at 6:30 o'clock tonight.

Dr. Stockard is past president of the American Society of Zoologists and the American Association of Anatomists, is a member of the National Academy of Sciences and many other societies of advanced science. He is one of the most advanced investigators in biology in America.

Officers of the North Carolina chapter of the Sigma Xi society are Dr. A. S. Wheeler, president; Dr. E. T. Browne, vice-president; and Dr. E. L. Mackie, secretary-treasurer.

Justifying Its Own End

One striking factor which has been much in evidence during the past few weeks is that the Carolina campus is politically minded. The University has long held a reputation among southern colleges as being the most politically conscious student center. The past campaign indelibly imprinted this upon the minds of those who participated, for we are informed by the old political minds, many of whom are shade of the past, it was indeed the most strenuous election period the Old Poplar has seen in many a day.

Newcomers to the University and those who like to profess a worldly weariness and pseudo-intellectual cynicism feel that this interest in politics is detrimental to the spirit of the University, and they label it all as dirt. It is true that there is a certain amount of underhand maneuvering in every political campaign, there always has and there always will be, but there is much more to campus politics than that, much more that is good.

One of the vital weaknesses which is being continually pointed out in democratic government is that the people refuse to take an active interest in their political affairs. The complaint is often made that the average American calmly views the political merry-go-round without raising a finger to make it go the way he feels it should. Yet he is quick to criticize the actions of those whom he helped into office by his passiveness.

At least, such a criticism could not fairly be made against the student body of the University. If there be no other virtue in campus politics, it gives the students a keen and real interest in bestowing their offices upon the men they think most fit. The University can do more towards making useful citizens out of its men than by instilling in them a personal desire to back their convictions—V.C.R.

The Calm After The Storm

A casual visitor to the University would not recognize this noble institution as the same one that was in existence yesterday. No longer is one disturbed by having some unwanted visitor drop into the room, offer him a cigarette, and slap him upon a back already overburdened with studies. Quietness reigns supreme except for perhaps an occasional person, who having won, is celebrating victory or, who having lost, is drenching his sorrows. Elections are over.

The campus has at last settled down to its former funeral aspect. There is a slight amount of talk about the ballot boxes being stuffed and people who have voted although they have not been in school since the last time they voted for William Jennings Bryan. A tiny puff of wind occasionally nonchalantly lifts a scrap of paper bearing the qualifications of a meritorious candidate and deposits it in a corner. Bunk, blah, and ballyhoo are things of the past. Everywhere people are studying in order to maintain their Phi Beta Kappa average.

The campus has dried up completely, with respect to water at least, for no longer is mud needed to besmirch the fair name of some member of an opposing frame-up. Peace, tranquility, and a shady nook where one can study can be found in spots where formerly the haunts of politicians existed. The whole University is like a tomb where only spirits thrive. The library force is overworked by students seeking books;

the professors are overworked grading belated papers, and light bills run high as students burn the midnight oil. Today study is the only end on the campus, for tomorrow spring fever laziness starts.—F.P.G.

With Contemporaries

Radical Collegians

Apparently because the majority of college newspapers are prone to break out of the rut of conservatism which has trapped many of our American dailies, the latter get all steamed up over what they term the "radicalism" of college editors. To be different, in their estimation, is to be undesirable.

Lately, another in the long series of attacks on the college press was offered to the public, this time by a Columbus paper. It lamented, "The truth is, sad to say, that the college undergraduate paper which seriously and consistently aims to be truly representative of its institution is a 'rare bird' in the college life of the present generation. To the class of undergraduates who usually manage these publications, sensationalism offers the most attractive line of effort."

To which we reply, "Hooley."

If the attack went no further than that, it wouldn't be worth noticing. But it continued, "And, sad to say again, the fields of sensationalism most easily worked are pictures going far into the territory of indecency, jests, poems, and supposedly humorous articles which deliberately violate ordinary rules of propriety, and ill-considered assaults on the policies of the managing board, the professional ability of members of the faculty, or the conduct of groups of individuals in the student body."

Such condemnation is absurd. It is true that liberalism probably pervades collegiate newspapers more thoroughly than it does the general American press, due, perhaps, to the youth of the college editors and the fact that they have nothing to lose in any upset of the established order. On the other hand, in our opinion, they tend to regard things through the eyes of their professors, which is only natural, considering the time spent listening to them.

But to say that they "deliberately violate ordinary rules of propriety" shows surprising lack of knowledge of those papers which are being criticized.

And if it's "ill-considered assaults" that worry our critics, let them look among their own kind for the best illustrations. Who does a better job of attacking our modern college professors or our undergraduates than the staid old dailies who lament the "communist propaganda" coming off college campuses?

To make this particular attack more foolish, it is combined with one against the American Civil Liberties Union, that freedom-seeking organization universally hated by conservatives and reactionaries upholding all forms of gags and restrictions against free speech, free press, and so on.

But college papers and the union need have little fear of the attacks. They are so absurd and unintelligent as to warrant no consideration by those who profess to do even a little thinking. It is more to be regretted that American newspapers will stoop to such practices.—Ohio State Lantern.

Study—

A Lost Art

Speaking before a meeting of Mu Sigma Rho last week, Dr. Charles W. Pipkin made some interesting statements with regard to the position of the student and scholar in university life today. "Football ballyhoo and juvenile politics" have supplanted the scholar in importance on the college campus and the tradition, he said, seems to be away from the very purposes for which the university was founded. We have completely lost sight of the academic side of the university which in the last analysis is the only excuse for its being.

The truth of Dr. Pipkin's statements can hardly be questioned. The wonder of it all is how such conditions should have come about. As a certain professor on this campus is reported to have said—"in these modern times students insist on getting their money's worth out of everything but college." The paradox of such an attitude is self-evident. We attend colleges to form backgrounds upon which we can establish values, but in the preliminary we distort the significant value of college itself. How can we account for such discrepancies?

We cannot determine the cause and effect relationships of such a transition with any accuracy or proof, but it is ventured that the youthful psychology of the college student has been changed. The American concept of action, of the bigger and better, has invaded the classrooms. The malleable American youth has become the enthusiastic man of action with the result that the ponderous methods of the scholar, his even tenored persistence on study and unemotional concentration, have no appeal for the average college student. The practical circumstances of life have been stressed without giving due credit to the theoretical and academic sources of which they were indigenous. The whole complexion of education was changed from the liberal theory to practical preparation.

Then came the inroads of athletics and the simultaneous glorification of football and physical development. The entire emphasis on college life was changed not only by the students themselves but also by the administrations who sponsored such wholesale expansion in sports. Today it is a well accepted fact that football is crowding out the university as such. It has become a festering parasite on the side of scholastic development in the colleges. In the large eastern schools the error has been cited and is now in the process of being corrected. Football is on the wane. It is only a question of time until we of the south and in the smaller schools reach the same point of evolution.

Especially is a realization of this academic divorce in college life significant at the present time when the depression has unpleasantly jarred us to sober analysis. It would be well to re-define for ourselves the purpose of university training, and presupposing that such a definition will be along the accepted lines, it would be well for us definitely to ally ourselves for or against the perpetuation of such a conception. It is possible that some new type of institution devoting itself entirely to the athletic and social aspects of youth may be necessary. At any event the existence and overdevelopment of those aspects in the colleges today is like a malignant growth sapping all its strength from the original stem.—Louisiana Revue.

LAMENT FOR THE ELECT

INTRODUCTION

Should you ask me whence these stories?

Whence these legends and traditions,
With the heat of campaigns on them,
With the sunshine of the springtime,
With the scent of japonicas clinging,
With the curling smoke of cigarettes,
With the "spouting" of the nominees,
With their frequent repetitions,
And their wild reverberations,
As of thunder in the mountains?
I should answer, I should tell you,
"From the campus, from the streets,
From the meetings and bull sessions
'Round about this college town
Over which stand groves of trees
Budding forth in balmy air,
Ever sighing, ever singing."

Fort upon the political sea,
On the shining Big-Sea Water,
With his interesting line of chatter,
With his promises and back-slappings,
Forth to catch the nomination,
Desired above all things on earth,
On his political platform exulting,
All alone went Jim-the-Vote-Getter.
Through the clear, transparent water
He could see the suckers swimming,
Cast his line so as to catch them,
Caught and bound and held them fast.

In days that followed other students
All of them on mischief bent,
Hearing of the Vote-Getter's prowess
In winning adherents to his cause,
Jealous of his popularity
And his noble words and actions,
Made at length a league against him,
To molest him and destroy him.
Armed with handbills and with satire,
Forth they went to spoil his chances,
Dash his hopes, and drag him down,
Defeated by their righteous god,
Himself aspiring to high office.

III
And you shall hear how Soap-Box-Orator,

He, the handsome master of words,
Whom the people called a crack-brain,
Mounted on his soap-box pedestal,
Gathered gaping crowds around him:
"Ye whose hearts are fresh and simple,

Who have faith in toil and study,
Who believe that in all the ages
Men of the people serve us best,
Vote for me and I will give you
All of what is right and just."

IV
By the portals of Graham Memorial,

By the tall and stately columns,
Within sight of the ballot boxes,
In the pleasant springtime morning,
Jim-the-Vote-Getter stood and waited.
All the air was full of freshness,
All the earth was bright and joyous,
And before him, through the sunshine,
Swarming across the village green,
Trooped the students by the hundred,
Trooped the students by the thousand,
To cast their ballots for the best man
As their consciences desired
Or party affiliations dictated.

V
From the brow of Jim-the-Vote-Getter

Gone was every trace of sorrow,
As the fog from off the water,
As the mist from off the meadow,
With a smile of joy and triumph,
With a look of exaltation,
As of one who in a vision
Sees what is to be but is not,
Sat and thought Jim-the-Vote-Getter,
Defeated by fraternal frame-up:
"Lo, how all things fade and perish
From the memory of all men.
Pass away the great traditions,
And achievements of campus politicians,
Wise men speak; their words of wisdom
Perish in the ears that hear them,
Do not reach the generations that Are as yet unborn . . . What's an Office, more or less, when an under-ling

Is freer to travel his own path
Through the green lanes of the country
Where the barberry-bushes
Hang their tufts of crimson berries
Over stone walls gray with mosses,
Pause by some neglected graveyard,
For a while to muse and ponder
Of the Here and the Hereafter."

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

To the Editor,
DAILY TAR HEEL:

Attempting to visualize the public, legal sale of beer in Chapel Hill is just about as easy as trying to picture Mrs. Ella Boole, "Grand Goblin" (H. L. M.'s delectable term—it struck me as being so hilariously apropos that I had to use it) "of the W. C. T. U." pie-eyed under a speakeasy table. How can anyone for a single moment honestly believe that our sanctimonious Assemblymen will ever as much as contemplate allowing beer in Chapel Hill even though the state-wide prohibition has been repealed, when they go so far as to refuse to permit a bowling alley within the "four mile limit?"

But, for a moment, letting our imaginations run riot, we will allow the impossible. State prohibition has been repealed! Hurray, beer will be on sale in Chapel Hill within the week! Headline: Book Ex will keep Pilsener on tap for late breakfastsnatchers. This, and lots more of it. Is our imagination running riot?

Picture, if you can, sidewalk tables in front of Harry's, Sutton's and the rest of the refreshment places, and Carolina's hundred per centers "hoching" away for more lager. But outside of some open-air tables and a few augmented girths (many professorial, I don't doubt) I fail to see how beer will affect this campus very much except to make it possibly more temperate, or, sticking strictly to fact, less drunk. How many students around here have sufficient spare money to purchase enough beer to get soused with? Not many, I'll wager, whereas who hasn't the cash to get hold enough corn to get on beautiful, shining jag?

There are a few minor effects that beer might have. Instructors and students might be able to meet on a more or less common ground. Thus friendlier relationships may be created, for beer is a wonderful catalyst as regards human amities. All this provided some of the faculty bend enough to drink with students. Another thing—some of these snooty co-eds may come off their horses, for who can be haughty and dignified with a bellyful of turbulent and rather vociferous (speaking from experience) beer?

All in all, I think, therefore, we must be careful not to attach too much emphasis to all this ballyhoo. The probability is that beer will never be sold as more openly in Chapel Hill than corn is at present, whatever is the significance of that, and beer is sold legally, what difference does it make, except to give David Clark et al more rant and yelp about?

"42ND STREET" SHOWS AT CAROLINA TODAY

That elaborate production "42nd Street," revealing the spectacle of a musical comedy show in preparation and after completion comes back to the Carolina theatre today. This production was shown here several weeks ago, but because of its immense popularity has been rebilled.

The screen play is based on a popular novel by Bradford Ropes, and is said to have everything that makes for a good picture. The show has an imposing cast made up of Warner Baxter, Bebe Daniels, Ruby Keeler, George Brent, and Guy Kibbee, all of whom have had experience on the professional stage.

Carolina Registers Slight Gain Over Blue Devils In Net Meet

Tar Heels Now Have Margin of 34 Points Over Duke Players in Carnival.

PLAY CONTINUED TODAY

Local Tennis Men Gain Four Point Margin in Matches Contested Yesterday.

The Carolina netsters increased their lead by four matches in the third day of play in the first annual Carolina-Duke mass tennis meet yesterday afternoon by winning 12 to 8 at Duke and scoring 10 to 10 in Chapel Hill. The total score for the meet is now 77 to 43. Play will continue this afternoon.

Of the matches played in Durham, Fred Anderson of Carolina scored over Decker, 6-1, 2-6, 7-5. Brown lost to Belknap of Duke 6-2, 6-3. J. H. Morris of Carolina dropped his match to Martin, 6-0, 6-1. Milton Stoll added another victory for Carolina in defeating McQuade, 6-2, 6-2.

Burnett drubbed Sanders of Duke in three sets, 5-7, 6-2, 6-3. Baird defeated Froneberger of Carolina, 6-1, 2-6, 6-3. B. Tucker lost to Fischer, Duke, 6-4, 6-4. Novick lost for Carolina to Harmon, 7-5, 6-2. Fischer scored for Carolina over Lundgren, 7-5, 6-4. L. S. Morris tallied for the Tar Heels over Rogol, 6-2, 7-5. Jimison defeated Beatty of Duke, 6-4, 6-1. N. A. Simmons won for Carolina over Richmond, 6-2, 6-0. Duke scored when Crone downed Roth, 6-3, 6-1. Hayes of Carolina lost to Wiley, 6-2, 6-0.

Jones Wins

Philip E. Jones of Carolina drubbed Trainer in straight sets, 6-3, 6-2. Farrell of Carolina was extended to three sets by Tate, 2-6, 6-2, 6-4. Laughlin won for Carolina over Beachman, 6-2, 6-1. T. Hicks scored over Miller of Duke, 6-2, 7-5. M. L. Tucker of Carolina won from Cossman, 6-0, 6-4. O'Brien lost to Blair of Duke, 6-1, 5-7, 7-5.

Mayne Albright lost to Allen White, 8-6, 6-2. C. Shohan scored for Carolina over J. Cheely, 6-2, 6-0. Carolina won another match when G. Blackwell defeated D. C. Hoover 6-1, 6-1. J. Cole of Duke won over J. L. Kessler, 6-2, 6-1. Beck defeated Long of Duke in three hard sets, 3-6, 6-3, 7-5. C. Washer of Duke scored over H. Manning, 7-5, 1-6, 6-4.

Mahaffey lost to H. G. Thomas of Duke, 6-3, 6-0. Don Jackson, Carolina dropped his match to John Cox, 6-1, 6-2. G. Adams lost to Roland Goode of Duke, 6-4, 4-6, 6-2. Henley defeated F. T. Scott of Duke, 6-1, 6-2. R. M. Dailey won for Carolina over Wentworth 12-10, 1-6, 6-3.

Lawrence Loses

P. Lawrence lost to Blessing of Duke, 6-3, 9-7. Morrie Ditch scored for the Tar Heels in three long sets over Getz, 6-3, 2-6, 6-2. N. L. Simmons scored over A. Blumenthal of Duke, 6-1, 6-2. Kestler took his match for Carolina over W. C. Hoover, 6-1, 6-0.

G. Marsden of Carolina lost to R. Shultz in straight sets, 6-0, 6-2. Nat Ames of Carolina lost to N. H. Miller, 6-3, 6-1. H. Coffield took his match for Carolina over Hayes, 6-2, 2-6, 6-0. E. Dudley dropped his tilt to Wagner of Duke, 6-0, 6-0. Whisnant of Carolina was victorious over Kades, 1-6, 6-0, 6-3.

Carolina has 230 players on the entry list now, while Duke has listed 210 players. Play will probably continue through Saturday. Anyone desiring to enter the tournament may register at Emerson field. The entry fee is one new ball.

Boxers Requested To Report For Practice

Coaches Rowe and Allen have requested that all men interested in boxing turn out for daily practices in the Tin Can. The initial spring practice begins this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock. The coaches are especially anxious that all freshmen who won numerals last year report for the workouts.

Following the spring practices, a tournament of intramural boxing will be conducted. Intramural points will be awarded to individuals and teams entering the tournament.

SALON ENSEMBLE WILL PLAY TOMORROW NIGHT

The Carolina Salon Ensemble, directed by Thor Johnson, will appear tomorrow and Saturday evenings in connection with the production of the play Der Flieger at the Playmakers theatre.

The group will play Bizet's Farandole from the Arlesienne Suite No. 2 as an overture. The following numbers will be played between the acts: Aubade from Le Cid by Jules Massenet, Minuet from the Arlesienne Suite No. 1 by Bizet, Grandfather's Wooden Leg by Dopey-Hazelman, and Cossack Revels by Tschakov.

TAR HEELS WILL OPEN FOUR-GAME TOUR TOMORROW

Carolina Baseball Team Will Open Series in Virginia With Contest Against V. P. I.

The Carolina baseball team will meet V. P. I. tomorrow afternoon to open a four-game tour of Southern conference opponents in Virginia.

Following the game with V. P. I., the Tar Heels will leave for Lexington to meet V. M. I. Saturday. Monday they meet Washington and Lee, and the tour will be concluded at Charlottesville, when the Tar Heels meet Virginia in the first game of the annual series with that school.

Joe Griffith, Nate Andrews, and Fred Couch are the leading pitchers, and one of these is certain to get the call for the game against V. P. I. The rest of the starting line-up will likely be: Norman McCaskill, catcher; Bill Dixon, first; Vergil Weathers, second; Johnny Phipps, short; Captain Willie Powell, third; Bill Croom, left field; Johnny Peacock, center field; and Lefty Hornaday, right field.

The Tar Heels won their only conference game so far from Washington and Lee by 5-1. The team itself is hitting .376 for the year, but hasn't been bunching its hits well, dropping 6-5 and 5-3 games to Michigan State and a 1-0 contest to Elon.

CARR BEATS NEW DORMS IN SINGLE GAME YESTERDAY

Campus Elections Play Havoc With Intramural Baseball Schedule Yesterday.

Yesterday's campus elections served to disrupt almost completely the afternoon's intramural baseball schedule. Of the six games on the list only that between New Dorms and Carr was actually contested, with the lawyers emerging on the long end of a 19-3 score.

The victory was Carr's third in as many contests, and marked New Dorms' second setback in three attempts. The winners tallied in every inning, while Anglin, Carr moundsman, turned in his third victory of the season. In the three games he has worked so far the opposition has scored only four runs off his slants.

Gillespie, Carr right fielder, proved the most frequent scorer of the afternoon, crossing the plate four times. Anglin, Markham, and Sternberger added three runs each to the victors' total.

Barron, at second base, played best for the New Dorm nine.

Score by innings:

New Dorms 002 100 0— 3
Carr 731 233 x—19

FROSH SCHEDULED TO MEET MOUNT PLEASANT TODAY

Tar Baby Baseball Team Will Meet Strong Opposition at 4:00 O'clock on Emerson Field.

Carolina's freshman baseball team plays its third game of the season this afternoon, meeting Mount Pleasant at 4:00 o'clock on Emerson field.

Mount Pleasant is coached by Jim Magner, former Carolina star, and usually brings a strong prep school diamond team to face the yearlings. The freshmen were beaten by Roanoke Rapids high school and A. M. A. in their first two starts and will be out to get their first win in today's battle.

Probable Line-Up

Coach Cerney will probably start about the same team that opened the past two games. Orr will be at first, Tatum at second, Irwin at short, and Austin at third in the infield. Shapiro, Bullock, and Mahaffey will play in the outer gardens. If King, who has been sick, is in condition he will catch, otherwise Ogburn will do the backstopping.

Hutchinson, a southpaw, will make his first appearance on the mound. The lefthander has a fair amount of stuff and lots of control, but has had trouble for the past two weeks getting into shape.

VARSITY DEFEATS WAKE FOREST IN NET OPENER, 9-0

Tar Heel Team Starts 1933 Campaign With Forty-Ninth Straight Victory.

The Carolina varsity tennis team opened its season with an overwhelming victory over the Wake Forest net combination yesterday 9 to 0. This win marked the forty-ninth consecutive win for the claimants of the national championship. Carolina won the six singles and the three doubles matches.

Wilmer Hines, first man of the Carolina squad, chalked up his first win of the season over Vernon in straight sets, 6-3, 6-2. Hines played stellar ball throughout his match and was never pressed by his opponent.

Lenoir Wright showed a return to his usual form in drubbing Hanson, 7-5, 6-1. Wright made a poor start but finished his man in short order. Ricky Willis scored for Carolina in downing Fletcher in straight sets, 6-0, 6-1. Willis played a careful game and led his opponent by a large margin at all times.

Dave Morgan tallied for the Tar Heels over Hutchins in a well-played match. The scores

You see knives flash from the magician's hand and plunge into the board, framing the girl so closely that she cannot move.

EXPLANATION:

Here is one way the blindfold knife throw is done: The knife thrower lets the knife go over his shoulder into the wings. The knife that you see quivering beside the girl is another knife. The girl standing against the board presses at the right place and a knife is sprung from behind the board into position.

— NO TRICKS
.. JUST COSTLIER
TOBACCOS

IN A MATCHLESS BLEND

It's fun to be fooled —
...it's more fun to KNOW

A clever trick employed in cigarette advertising is the illusion that manufacturing processes account for mildness in a cigarette.

EXPLANATION: All popular cigarettes are made in much the same way. Cigarettes vary greatly in mildness because they vary greatly in the quality of tobaccos used. Mildness, as well as character and good taste, depends upon the quality of tobaccos used.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

This is the most important statement ever made in a cigarette advertisement. Weigh its words. Consider what it means. Smoke Camels critically and learn to appreciate what costlier tobaccos can mean to you in mildness, in throat-ease... in added pleasure! Other cigarettes, we believe, will taste flat and insipid to you forever after.

MONOGRAM ROOKIE GAME SCHEDULED TO END PRACTICE

Annual Football Contest Between Two Squads Set for Saturday in Stadium.

The annual Monogram-Rookie game, showing Carolina's 1932 football stars in action for the last time and giving the best line on prospects for the 1933 team, will be played in Kenan Stadium Saturday at 3:30 o'clock as the closing feature of winter football practice.

Another first-rate event on the athletic program will be the Carolina-Georgetown exhibition track meet at 1:30 o'clock. This being a practice meet, no admission will be charged. The reorganized Carolina Monogram Club is sponsoring the football game at depression prices of two-bits a throw.

Among the Tar Heel stars who will don their football togs for the last time Saturday are several former All-Staters, including Stuart Chandler and Harry Hodges, both of whom are now out for track, and Erwin Walker, brilliant end.

Monogram Team Strong
The Monogram team will draw its other strength from a veteran outfit which includes such fine performers as Barclay, Kahn, Philpott and Newcombe, guards; Collins and Tatum tackles; Frankel, end; Woollen, quarterback; Burnett, Phipps, Thompson and Daniel, halfbacks, and Hanes Lassiter, fullback. Burnett, who was the quarterback and punting find of last fall, ran wild when shifted to halfback recently, leaving the quarterback job to Charlie Woollen, who has also been going great.

The Rookies have only won one game in the six years this interesting contest has been held, but their hopes are running high this year. The youngsters' line fairly bristles with tough forwards, including a crop of tackles which is the heaviest Carolina has had in years. Their ball carriers look equally good, the reserves, Martin, Shaffer and Jackson, and the sophomores, Montgomery and Snyder, having been playing on a par with the veterans during the winter work.

Carolina Meets Vermont In No-Decision Debate

Vermont University debated the Carolina debating team in a no-decision contest Tuesday night at the joint meeting of the Di Senate and the Phi Assembly. Vermont upheld the negative of the question: "Resolved: That the war debts be cancelled." Coleburn and McCuin debated for Vermont. Edwin Lanier and A. S. Kaplan took the affirmative side of the question for Carolina.

Before the debate, the debate council entertained the Vermont team at dinner at the Carolina Inn and took them to the political meetings after the debate.

Dr. L. R. Wilson Returns

Members of the library staff will entertain at a tea in the library staff room from 4:00 to 5:00 o'clock this afternoon in honor of Dr. L. R. Wilson, former University librarian, who is arriving today for the library conference here tomorrow and Saturday.

World News Bulletins

Franco British to Visit U. S.

Leading statesmen of France and Great Britain will come to Washington soon and sit down with President Roosevelt to talk over the economic ills of the world, it was announced yesterday, unless arrangements now being made in Europe by Norman H. Davis, special ambassador at large, fall through.

Seek Secret of Air Tragedy
The troubled waters off the Jersey coast yesterday held most of the evidence which might lead to determining the cause of the airship Akron's crash at sea with the loss of seventy-one men. But official forces moved swiftly to use what little evidence and direct testimony was still available toward solution of the secret of history's greatest tragedy of the air.

Spanish Ship on Rocks
The coast guard cutter Unalga was dispatched yesterday from Fort Lauderdale to the assistance of the Spanish liner Marquis De Camillas, aground off Carysfort Reef south of Miami with about 100 passengers aboard.

Jobless to Encamp Soon
The first 25,000 men who will form part of the conservation corps, will be sent to military camps for conditioning beginning today. President Roosevelt by executive order yesterday made available $10,000,000 to finance the beginning of the work.

HEEL, the lead changed hands four times, with Carr ahead, 555 to 514.

Another close race, with the change of leads twice was that between Pete Ivey and Karl Sprinkle for the editorship of the Buccaneer; Sprinkle was ahead at 2:40 o'clock, 539 to 522.

Alex Andrews throughout the night kept a slight lead over Morrie Long for the editorship of the Yackety Yack. The count on the tenth ballot was Andrews, 546, Long 507.

A neck and neck race was in progress between Benton Bray and Lee Greer for the vice-presidency of the student body with Greer having the edge 536 to 529. The lead for this position changed three times during the first ten ballots.

In contrast to the close races, Dave McCachren was being swept into the presidency of the athletic association over Floyd Higby. The vote at the tenth ballot was: McCachren, 762; Higby, 300.

Likewise, Norment Quarles was apparently having little difficulty in maintaining his lead over Norman McCaskill with the vote standing at 579 to 484.

Ed Lanier was piling up one of the largest leads of the day in his race for the debate council with Don Seawell and Phillips Russell trailing by 200 votes. Standings at the tenth ballot were: Lanier 666; Seawell, 466; Russell, 442; and L. H. Fountain, 390.

For the Publications Union board, three candidates showed steady gains during the counting. Bill Eddleman was leading Vergil Lee, 576 to 443; Bob Drane was leaving A. T. Dill behind, 552 to 475; and Phil Hammer was ahead of Robert Ruark, 570 to 448.

According to figures released by the council yesterday, 1994 persons cast ballots, some three hundred more than have ever been cast in campus election before.

presidency and the student council representative of the rising junior class but took the vice-president, treasurer, and secretary posts as 358 ballots were cast.

The results: for president, "Snooks" Aitken, 272, over Harry Williamson, 180; for vice-president, Simmons Patterson, 246, over Leo Manley, 196; for secretary, J. D. Winslow, 272, over Dick Somers, 170; for treasurer, Jack Poole, 275, over Ezra Griffin, 171; for student councilman, Ed Martin, 232, over Harold Bennett, 215.

Sophomore Class
Russell Mickle, All-Campus party, ran ahead of other candidates in the rising sophomore class election to win the presidency but was the only man in his party to win a second year office. Jack Clare was defeated by Mickle, 214 to 288.

Morty Ellisburg became vice-president of the group, winning over Billy Yandell, 257 to 245. For secretary of the class Vance Young received 270 votes to David McIlhenny's 223. Jake Austin emerged ahead of Billy Binder for treasurer, 243 to 253 in the closest class vote. Carl DuPree won the position of student councilman by a 272 to 228 ballot over Billy Coan.

Voting in all of these offices, as was true in the remainder, was the heaviest recorded in the history of the University.

were 6-3, 6-1. John Dillard took his match from Bryan, 6-1, 7-5. The Wake Forest player tried harder the second set but not enough to trouble Dillard.

Walter Levitan won honors for Carolina by defeating Buxton, 6-2, 6-1. Levitan played well and had his shots in working order. The Deacons also suffered defeats in the doubles matches. Hines and Wright teamed to defeat Bryan and Vernon, 6-2, 6-1.

Dillard and Willis showed well in taking Manson and Fletcher in straight sets, 6-3, 6-1. McGlinn and Morgan scored over Hutchins and Buxton after three hard fought sets, 6-2, 7-9, 6-0. The doubles combinations looked well in action.

The team will be aiming at its fiftieth straight victory when it meets the Duke varsity in Durham this Saturday. The Duke team has been boasting of its squad, but the Carolina boys are ready to play to the end.

Pharmacy Dance Will Be Staged Tomorrow

The annual pharmacy school dance which will be conducted tomorrow night in Bynum gymnasium under the music of Jelly Leftwich's band, will be led by officers of the school and their guests.

The leaders are Clayton Curry, president of the pharmacy student body, with Miss Marian Sneed of Durham; M. L. Cline, president of the third year class with Miss Edna Crawford of Graham; Nyal Womble, president of the second year class, with Miss Ann Bynum of Pittsboro; Harry Murrell, president of the first year class, with Miss Blanche Morgan of Durham.

The chaperons will consist of members of the faculty and their wives. They are: Dean and Mrs. J. C. Beard, Dr. and Mrs. H. M. Burlage, Professor and Mrs. I. W. Rose, and Professor and Mrs. M. L. Jacobs.

Juniors to Meet Dean Carroll

The junior class of the commerce school will meet with Dean D. D. Carroll this morning at 10:30 in 103 Bingham hall and tomorrow at the same time the sophomores of the same school will meet Dean Carroll.

Her costumes are copied from paintings of the nobility of that day by Holbein. The London Daily Mail said: "Her acting of the little sketches was delicate, sensitive, and subtle, while her beauty in her Holbein costumes evoked cheers."

The performance is coming to Chapel Hill after an extraordinary engagement of eight consecutive weeks in the Avon theatre in New York.

Radio Amateurs Will Have Meeting Tonight

There will be a meeting of radio amateurs tonight at 7:30 o'clock in 206 Phillips hall, to which all persons interested in the subject of radio are invited. This is one of a series of meetings conducted each Thursday to discuss technical topics of interest to amateurs.

George Koch will speak on "Demonstration of Vacuum Tube Detectors." The discussion will include explanations to enable anyone who is interested in the subject to understand the topic.

Following the principal talk, there will be a general discussion of the subject.

TODAY'S PLAYERS IN NEW CARNIVAL ARE ANNOUNCED

Sponsors of Huge Match With Duke Would Appreciate Services of Cars Going to Durham.

The schedule for the fourth day of play in the Carolina-Duke mammoth tennis meet which begins this afternoon has been completed. Half of the players chosen to compete this afternoon will travel to Duke, while the second half will play here.

It will be necessary for everyone to have a new ball before beginning his match. Players going to Duke will be carried over in student automobiles. Since cars are needed at present, sponsors of the carnival would appreciate it if those playing at Duke would use their cars or if anyone interested in watching the meet in Durham would offer the service of his car.

Players in Chapel Hill

Those to play in Chapel Hill are Rouiller, V. Guion, F. Wilmer, S. Aitken, A. Cope, R. Barnett, W. C. Thompson, M. S. Clark, J. E. Moore, J. M. Littel, M. B. Seawell, C. Stimson, Egan, W. McKee, Werhuz, D. Miller, Rhawn, L. Barnes, L. Lawlor, S. High, Baskewell, and G. Rogers. These men should be dressed and ready to play at the tennis courts at 3:15 this afternoon.

Those men to represent this school in Durham are: C. Freeman, F. Dossenback, C. Woollen, J. H. Patterson, E. Bagwell, Thorpe, N. H. Parwell, Sim Patterson, Breazeale, J. Wall, Stadium, J. Farr, Entwistle, B. J. Pettus, N. Miner, D. W. Mosier, Harley, M. Marne, Lynch, M. Bell, and F. Rogers. These players should be dressed and ready to play in front of Emerson field at 3:00 o'clock this afternoon.

Mangum Contest Applications Should Be Made to McKie

Seniors who desire to compete in the Mangum Medal oratory contest, which is conducted each year during commencement week, should make application immediately to Professor George McKie of the English department.

The award was instituted in memory of Willie Person Mangum, and is given each year to the senior who delivers the finest oration at commencement. At present only one senior has made application to compete.

WALKER ELECTED MANAGING EDITOR FOR DAILY PAPER

Publications Union Board Selects Marcus Feinstein As Business Manager.

Thomas H. Walker was yesterday picked as managing editor of the DAILY TAR HEEL for the coming year as the Publications Union board made annual selections on managementships of University publications.

He will assume duties tomorrow, succeeding George W. Wilson, Jr. At the same time Claiborn Carr, newly elected editor of the paper, will go into office, succeeding Charles G. Rose, Jr. Walker has served on the staff of the publication for over two years as sports writer and city editor and was this year senior representative on the Publications Union board.

Walker and Bob Woerner, his opponent for the position, resigned their positions as senior and junior representatives on the Publications Union board during the consideration of candidates for managing editorship. They were replaced by Bill Eddleman and Bob Drane, newly elected representatives.

Feinstein Selected
In the Publications Union balloting yesterday Marcus Feinstein, business manager of the Yackety Yack, was given the same office with the DAILY TAR HEEL for next year.

Pendleton Gray was put in charge of the business end of the Buccaneer for next year and John Barrow became business manager of the Yackety Yack.

All of these men will go into office at the beginning of next year.

Lack of time kept the board from choosing a next year's circulation manager of the DAILY TAR HEEL. The selection will be made at 2:30 o'clock next Tuesday afternoon.

PROUTY OFFERS SUMMER CAMPS

Head of Department Plans Field Work for Holiday Months.

Two summer camps, where field work in geology may be obtained during the first summer school, are being planned by the geology department under the direction of Dr. W. F. Prouty.

The first camp, which will last for the first three weeks of summer school, is located in the area of the highly folded Appalachian sedimentary rocks along the Virginia-West Virginia border. This area is probably the best that could be chosen for the study of structural geology and is also noted for its beautiful scenery and delightful climate.

The second camp, for the remaining two weeks, is to be in the center of production of non-metallic minerals near Spruce Pine. This locality is, in turn, of great interest to the student of igneous and metamorphic geology and to the mineralogist and economic geologist.

These camps are being planned to take care of students who have not yet completed their required field courses in geology and for students of other Universities desiring summer field work. Those interested in the courses should see Dr. W. F. Prouty immediately.

Spann Says Jewish Persecution Result Of Germany's Suffering

Staff Members Guests
Of Carolina Theatre

Through the courtesy of E. Carrington Smith, manager of the Carolina theatre, members of the DAILY TAR HEEL staff were guests at a pre-showing of "King Kong" at 11:00 o'clock last night.

About seventy-five members of the staff were present to see the great ape, that for millions of years had dwelt alone at the top of a solitary mountain making his tirades upon man-made civilization.

LIBRARY GROUPS HAVE MEETING OPENING TODAY

More Than One Hundred Southern Leaders in Many Fields
Expected to Attend.

Sponsored jointly by the American Library Association and the Southeastern Library Association, a conference of southern leaders, which is to consider primarily the status of libraries, books and reading in the south, is to open a two-day session here this morning.

The advance registration indicates that more than one hundred southern leaders in religion, education, culture, and social welfare will attend. It is the announced purpose of the meeting to consider the relationship of all these agencies in a well-rounded community program.

The advance announcement stresses the view that "the library is an agency that is conspicuously underdeveloped in the southern region and at the same time is one increasingly needed if there is to be a complete program for community life." Attention is directed to a recent survey of libraries in the south which shows two-thirds of the people are without access to local library service.

Headquarters at Inn
The Carolina Inn will be headquarters for the conference. The public is invited. Registration will get under way at 9:00 o'clock this morning and the first formal session will begin at 11:00 o'clock.

Among those expected to attend are five college heads: President Cox of Emory, Morgan of Tennessee, Graham of North Carolina, Smith of Louisiana State, and Lingle of Davidson; and two state commissioners of education: Hall of Virginia and Cocking of Tennessee.

Listed on the program for morning and afternoon sessions today are Howard P. Jones, editor, National Municipal Review; President Graham of North Carolina, Carl H. Milan, secretary of the American Library Association, Superintendent Hall of Virginia, President

Confined in Infirmary
Those confined to the infirmary yesterday were: R. L. Connelly, E. A. Gaskill, Jr., J. C. Parker, J. D. Winslow, Thomas Hood, Alex. Mark, P. C. Idol, John Innes, William Logan, R. H. Proctor, James Gilliam, H. S. Rubin, G. J. Hellinger, Vida Miller, Jo Orendorff, John Withers, and George A. Moore.

Belief Stated That Movement In Reich Is Result Of Blame
For World War.

German post-war suffering and German frankness of character underlie the present serious anti-Semitic disturbances in the Reich. Such was the opinion of Dr. Meno Spann of the German department, while the professor and the feature writer paced the track on Emerson Field.

Dr. Spann threw himself into a discussion of the ills that have afflicted Germany since 1914. He finds the German post-war suffering to be of two types: the first, economic maladjustment growing out of the loss of colonies and valuable territory as a result of the World War, and the second, the disgrace of the Versailles Treaty war guilt thesis, in which the entire blame of the catastrophe of 1914 is placed on Germany.

Now, after nearly twenty years of suffering, the German people have looked for a scapegoat and have fallen upon the Jews. Several times comparing the treatment of Germany to the torturing of a man, Dr. Spann burst out, "You cannot half kill a man and then torture him; he will turn around!"

The political disturbances are attributed by Spann to the fact that Germans become fanatically religious instead of thinking merely in terms of parties, as do Americans.

German Character Blunt
That Germans are by instinct less hypocritical than Americans, English, and French, is, in Dr. Spann's opinion, an important factor.

Try-outs Monday For Next Production

Try-outs for the Playmakers Forest theatre production, Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream, will be conducted in the Playmakers theatre at 4:00 and 7:30 o'clock Monday.

The Forest theatre production, to be directed by Professor F. H. Koch, will climax the Playmakers program for the year. Futures of the presentation will be dances directed by Phoebe Barr, music written for the play by Mendelssohn to be played by Thor Johnson's orchestra, in addition to new costumes and special lighting effects.

Midsummer Night's Dream, the first Forest theatre production in three years, is to be presented May 19 and 20.

Mid-Term Reports

Mid-term reports of academic deficiencies will be posted on the bulletin board in the office of the registrar next Friday, April 14.

PLAYMAKERS TO OFFER GERMAN PLAY TONIGHT

Program Is Arranged So That Plot May Easily Be Understood.

The American premiere of the German, French, English play of the World War, Der Flieger, will be presented tonight at 8:30 o'clock in the Playmakers theatre. The play is an extra feature produced by the Playmakers in conjunction with the German department, and is not included in the season-ticket program.

Though the play includes lines in German and French, the plot may be easily understood from the English dialogue. A synopsis of the scenes will also be included on the printed program for the benefit of those who do not understand German.

The story of the play concerns a German war pilot, who must combat a more experienced English ace. The German is torn between patriotic duty and fear of death, finally conquering his fear and meeting the Englishman. In the climax the German triumphs but loses his life.

Authentic military costumes for the German officers in the production have been secured in Philadelphia by Dr. Meno Spann, who directed the play and appears in the leading role.

Flying outfits are used in the play through courtesy of aviators at the local airport. The cast contains Playmakers and members of the German and French faculties.

Tickets for the performance tonight and tomorrow night are on sale at Alfred-Williams.

Women Leaders Go To Lynchburg

Mary Frances Parker and Janie Jolly, president and president-elect of the University Woman's Association, are attending a conference of the Southern Intercollegiate Association of student government officials in Lynchburg, to consider the possibility that the Woman's Association will become a member of the organization.

The conference is meeting at the Randolph-Macon Woman's College from April 5 to 8. The officers of the Woman's Association left yesterday for the conference, following the election of the next president.

Botany Head Returns
From Uncle's Funeral

Dr. W. C. Coker, head of the botany department has just returned from Hartsville, South Carolina, where he attended the funeral of his uncle, Edward Coker, who died last Monday.

Dr. Coker and B. E. Smith, teaching fellow who accompanied him, also gathered an interesting collection of trees and shrubs from the many varieties offered by the grounds near Hartsville.

HONOR SOCIETY TO INDUCT MEN MONDAY NIGHT

Announcement of New Phi Beta Kappa Members to Be Made
Tuesday Morning.

A meeting of the active members of the Alpha chapter of Phi Beta Kappa will take place in 214 Graham Memorial, Monday night at 7:30 o'clock. The annual spring initiation of new members and the installation of the student officers for 1933-34 will be in order.

Dr. J. P. Harland will deliver a paper of interest, and light refreshments will be served. The names of the newly-inducted members will be made Tuesday morning.

Membership in Phi Beta Kappa is one of the highest honors that a student can receive. To be eligible, the student must maintain the scholastic average of 92.5. Students transferred from other colleges as upperclassmen must average 94 in their studies.

Established in 1776

Phi Beta Kappa was organized at William and Mary College by five students in 1776. The aim of the group was the furtherance of literature, science, philosophy, and "friendly intercourse among scholars." It did not develop into a national organization until 1881. Today there are 125 chapters in the United States and the society is recognized as the outstanding organization of its kind in the country. The Alpha chapter of North Carolina was an outgrowth of the local Alpha Theta Phi, an honorary fraternal organization started here in 1894. Ten years after its beginning, the Alpha Theta Phi was granted a charter by Phi Beta Kappa.

Fred H. Koch, Jr., and Thomas Russell Taylor, Jr., by reason of their leading scholastic standings, are president and vice-president, respectively. John Allan McLean is serving as secretary and Dr. T. J. Wilson, Jr., holds the office of corresponding secretary-treasurer. R. B. House, C. P. Spruill, and F. M. Green are faculty members of the executive committee.

PHARMACY SCHOOL NOMINATES OFFICERS

The pharmacy school nominated the following men yesterday for office. For president of the pharmacy student body: R. S. Whiteley, W. H. Houser, and N. H. McCallum. For student council representative: R. Langton, R. R. Wells, and L. M. Womble. The elections will take place next Wednesday, April 12, at the pharmacy building.

BARNES TO OPPOSE CATE
Mary Frances Parker and E. C. Daniel to Run for Editorship
Of School Publication.

After a brief respite yesterday in the form of a one-day's rest, students of the University will today take up where they left off and at polls in Graham Memorial complete the selection of campus-wide officers for next year.

The voting in the races for the presidency of the student body and for the editorship of the Carolina Magazine resulted in no decision, as none of the three candidates in either race was able to gain a majority of the votes cast.

Rules Require New Election

The rules of University balloting require that a candidate receive a majority of all the votes cast in his race to be elected, and thus the run-off today was necessitated.

The run-off for the student body presidency will take place between Harper Barnes and Arlindo Cate, who came out highest in Wednesday's voting. Barnes received 933 votes to 738 for Cate and 270 for Ben Proctor, third candidate.

Parker Opposes Daniel

In the Magazine race today, Mary Frances Parker will oppose E. C. Daniel, who gained 915 votes to 875 for Miss Parker and 149 for C. K. Carmichael, third candidate in the field.

Wednesday's voting was the heaviest ever polled in a University election. A total of 1996 ballots were cast, as against a total of approximately 1600 in last year's election.

The races for many of the positions will be held tomorrow.

ARTISTS PRESENT CONCERT MONDAY

Stringfield, McCall, and Weatherford Play for Festival Benefit.

The Dogwood Festival committee will present Lamar Stringfield, flutist-composer, assisted by Adeline McCall, pianist, and Ralph Weatherford, cellist, in a program of solo and trio selections in Hill Music hall Monday evening, April 10, at 8:30 o'clock. Proceeds from the concert will be used in staging the festival here April 25.

Stringfield appeared as soloist here last quarter with the little symphony of the North Carolina symphony society. This is the first solo recital in which he has appeared this year, however. The trio which will play part of the program recently played in concerts in Charlotte and Statesville.

The program Monday will include Sonata No. 4 in C major by J. S. Bach, Nocturne by Barriere, Syrinx by Debussy, and Tityre by Roussel as flute solos. The trio will play La Livi, La Timide, Menuet, and Tambourin by Rameau and Morning and In a Log Cabin from the Mountain Sketches by Stringfield.

Declaring a Professors' Holiday

Some few members of the faculty have been somewhat liberal with their criticism thrown against those members of the campus political factions who neglected their academic work all during the day Wednesday merely to take part in the politicking which took place at the polls. Most of these professors have taken the viewpoint that the act of many students' cutting classes on that day was entirely unjustifiable and evident of their lack of interest in a true search for wisdom (to be gotten, supposedly, from the dull, monotonous lectures in the classrooms). Nor is it entirely without foundations that the professors make these strong accusations of the campus politicians and the extremes to which they allow themselves to be carried in their enthusiasm for their party's victory.

The fact is undeniably true that were these students actively interested in student politics to make a habit of cutting classes regularly during the year, or even during the course of one quarter, the condemnations should be severe. But when it is considered that it is only once in a year's time that the student body holds elections, that the mistakes of these elections must remain in office for a whole year, and that the student body itself must suffer in the event these officers are "weighed and found wanting," the act of cutting class in order to see that the "qualified candidates" are elected is not altogether so condemnable as one might first think.

Nor is the fact to be denied that there are always matters of personal opinion to be considered in the case of the election of the various candidates. Yet the strength of conviction which one might hold as to his candidate's worth can be determined in a large measure by the work he is willing to exert in seeing that he is placed in his office.

The professors who make these accusations of the students who took such an interest in their political activity as to push aside their academic work for a day seem to overlook the fact that after all in a small degree the experience gained and interest aroused through taking part in the campus elections is actually a part of the student's education. When he leaves school he will be expected to take part in the elections of the officials which must govern the state and nation.

Actually if there were no students of firm enough convictions and interest sufficient to get them not only to vote but also to work for their candidates, it would mean that there would be no contest. There would be no heated discussions of qualifications. There would be no consideration to any large measure of the officers the men might make once elected. In short, if such conditions existed, any small group of students could get together, nominate their friends, and get them elected, purely and simply because there were no others interested enough to go to such extents. It is the heat of political battles that brings out the gold from the ore, so to speak, and assures the voters a democratic and, in the majority of cases, the wisest choice of the various candidates.

One settlement of the matter would be simply to discontinue classes on the day of elections. At least the professors would have another day to play golf anyway.

The wolf has been at our door so long she has had a litter of pups.—Blue Stocking.

It's a Big World

From time to time editorials in the TAR HEEL are criticised as extraneous and remote from the interest of the student body. There are evidently some who really feel that the editorials should confine themselves to observations on campus and state topics and that the great happenings and problems of the world should be elsewhere discussed.

Among college men and women such a point of view is most unfortunate. To be sure we should love our University and be deeply concerned in immediate conditions and events. Nevertheless there are topics of infinite number which must be of great interest to the intelligent college student, questions of war and peace, of political policy and honesty, of race conflict, of class struggle as well as the arts and sciences. These are forces which will shape and mould our lives and which we in turn can shape and mould if we have the interest and the desire. These are questions of far greater concern than walking on the grass, the number of trips the wrestling team should take, or beer in Chapel Hill.

To write editorials the student must have strong convictions on the topic he is discussing. Occasionally there occur incidents of college life which excite such convictions but in the main they are of minor import and not productive of much controversy or difference of opinion. It is the national and world forces that are of vital consequence and which merit the attention and thought of college writers.

It may be argued that the editorial pages of our great papers provide ample discussion of these outside issues but how many of the student body take the pains to read them? Furthermore the voice of youth preparing to control the world's destinies is of an importance impossible to exaggerate.

A real and loyal attention should be paid by the college editorial page to the happenings that effect and concern the University. But this attention must not be permitted to close our eyes or still our voices to the multitude of things outside that we should want to approve or condemn, to preserve or change. We are here for education and education in a deeper sense is a broadened outlook and interest in things about us—the ability to stretch the imagination beyond the campus or the state into the world beyond where there is so much more to be seen and done.—J.F.A.

Another Beer Editorial

Legalized beer in North Carolina by May! The idea that such a thing was possible a month ago would have been scorned by every North Carolinian who was considered a prophet (and there are many of these). The only state outside of Kansas to record a dry majority in the Literary Digest's prohibition poll of last year—one of the first states to enact a state prohibition law—the home of some of the leaders of the dry cause, to whom the mere mention of the word beer would have been sufficient to evoke psittacotic fits—this state has over-night gone wet. In the opinion of most competent political observers the attitude of the electorate on the question even as late as last October had experienced but little change, and yet in the face of these things, the legislature votes overwhelmingly for the legalization of 3.2 beer and wine.

What freakish genie was responsible for this sudden change in the attitude of our legislators? The shift in opinion seemed almost miraculous—yet was it so strange? Additional revenue was sorely needed and a tax on beer would undoubtedly ease the financial duress to a considerable extent. During the presidential campaign of last fall, Mr. Roosevelt reiterated with much emphasis his favorable position in regard to the beer question. Despite his wetness, his popularity in the south was undeniable. The voting of dyes for Roosevelt by the million may have had a peculiar psychological effect.

There is the well-known phenomena termed in psychological language "transfer" which may well be applicable to this mass shift of a social attitude. A confirmed dry, voting for Roosevelt, over-emphasizing the candidate's other qualities in order to justify his support, may have effected a transfer of the favorable attitude towards Roosevelt in particular to a favorable attitude towards the man Roosevelt in general, thus evoking an involuntary and totally unconscious lessening of the previously strong dry sentiment. Combined with the popular reaction against Hooverism, one may see the gradually accumulation of wet support, the first crumbling of dry bulwarks and the swiftly multiplying strength of the wet tide—almost mobile in its type of social reaction—until the doom of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act was assured.—V.J.L.

Freshman rules and customs have been abolished for one year at Franklin and Marshall College because there seemed to be no way of enforcing them. It is thought in campus circles that the action taken will arouse the college next year to the realization of a need for frosh customs.—Student Weekly (N.S.F.A.)

Our Times

By Don Shoemaker

An intense follower of political machinations, this department drafted its political observer yesterday and requested some inside information on the election. After hanging some crepe over our door, he submitted several little items for our reader, a gentleman of incorrigible vanity, who will read them for the second time this morning.

Digging into the library files he (the investigator) informed us that a candidate for president of the student body checked out a copy of Diary of an ex-President, the famous Wintergreen-Throttlebottom epic, several days before the election. A Candidate for the presidency of the 'Y' was reported as having taken out over the week-end, Conrad's Victory. But he must not have read it attentively.

We were particularly concerned about the workmen in front of Graham Memorial who plowed away at the red earth while the domos of the ballot box fumed and swore. Unaware that the fate of a campus, than whom there is no mightier, was at stake, they plowed away digging up the dirt, while their brothers in the lobby of Graham Memorial took their hints from that operation.

The front lawn of Graham Memorial, we think, is an excellent place now for a profitable venture on the part of the University. This department humbly suggests that, since beer is inevitable in North Carolina, the buildings department sow a first rate crop of wheat, oats, barley, or whatever it is the boys use to make their beer. We could use the coffee tricks in the Grail to brew the stuff, thus exempting us from taxation in the purchase of beer at the inevitable local establishments.

Possible the best quip of the week is the remark made by an intrepid freshman, "What's-his-name lost the 'Y' election by an Acee."

Feeling very much like Mr. Hoover driving to the Pennsylvania station on March 4th, we beg your leave, reminding you that there is no truth in the rumor that we intend to run in 1936.

Spann Says Jewish Persecution Result Of Germany's Suffering

ant aspect of the treatment of Jews in Germany that should be emphasized. He finds that before the War there was no more anti-Semitic feeling in Germany than elsewhere, but that now, when the German bluntness of character combines with the suffering of the nation, it has burst forth. In comparing the natures of Germans with those of other races, Spann finds a frank openness in the Teuton and a "behind-the-back diplomacy," so to speak, in others. Thus, he pointed to so-called American democracy—a democracy for the white man, that excludes Negroes.

It would leave an erroneous impression upon the reader to have him feel that Spann was merely voicing the old Teutonic nationalism. Naturally prejudiced to some degree in favor of the Reich, Spann nevertheless spoke with the tone of one who has made certain observations and then expressed them openly and with strong feeling.

Confronted with the report that Dr. Beard has said it was probably a good thing that America had entered the War in 1917 and turned the tide against Germany, because the old regime was hard to get along with, Dr. Spann confessed to some truth in Beard's belief.

Phase of Revolution

The rise of Hitler in Germany is described by Dr. Spann as just one phase—a reactionary phase—in the revolution that has been in progress since the World War. He pointed out that after the French Revolution there was a return of the Bourbon dynasty for a time, and that after the upheavals in England there was a return of the Stuarts. Even if the Hohenzollern family returned to Germany, he would attach little importance to it.

Asked what kind of a speaker Hitler was, Dr. Spann replied sarcastically that he was forceful, but that many people can make a lot of hot air.

Traces Jewish History

Spann traced some of the phases of Jewish history to furnish a background against which the present events in Germany might be judged. He recalled that for centuries Jews have lived apart and have not been assimilated by the countries in which they lived, thus making them to be looked upon as aliens.

He also noted that in the middle ages usury was the only field of endeavor open to Jews. This, combined with the fact that natural selection growing out of protracted oppression, has produced a keen race, has made present-day Jews financially prosperous. Others grow envious, Spann believes, and at the same time consider them aliens growing rich while "the fair-haired youth" does not. All this, Spann thinks, underlies anti-Semitic feeling.

Before the war there was no more of this feeling in Germany than elsewhere; Spann pointed out that at that time Germany showed less discrimination than American institutions do now. But as a result of the country's post-war distress, Germans have looked for a scapegoat. Even if it does no good, the professor declared, there is an emotional relief in saying, "That man and that man are the cause of all the trouble," and then in giving them a kick.

sitions developed into much closer contests than it was generally predicted before the balloting, and there were many upsets entirely unlooked for by the student body.

THE standing that sportswear has gained in fashion acceptance sanctions individual originality. The reversing of the dark coat and light trousers to the light coat and dark trousers was one of the ideas which caught on last season. Varsity And Reserve Men Meet In Kenan Tomorrow

Game Is Variation From Annual Monogram-Rookie Affair Usually Staged.

VARSITY SQUAD PICKED

Carolina's football varsity and reserve squads for next fall, picked on the basis of showings in practice to date, will do battle in Kenan stadium tomorrow at 3:30 o'clock, giving an excellent line on what the 1933 Tar Heels are going to show, both in the way of stars and matter of attack.

Tomorrow's game will be a variation of the Monogram-Rookie game which has heretofore closed winter practice. The coaches figured that a game along the new lines would be more beneficial to the squad, more enlightening to themselves, and more enjoyable to spectators. It was announced at the time that no admission would be charged and everybody invited to the big pre-view of next fall's football prospects.

Coach Collins has accordingly picked Carolina's first and second teams as of this date and will give them the chance to show their form and power against the present third and fourth strings.

The rookies will make their stand with Orr and Beale starting at end; Moser and Hobgood at tackle; Caldwell and Landis at guard; Yoder at center; Jones at quarter; McDonald and Thompson at half; and Leonard at full.

The "varsity" has plenty of potential strength for this is much the same squad that won last Saturday's game 40-0, beating the opposition to smithereens and scoring 27 points in the fourth quarter.

Frankel, Barclay, Kahn, Woollen, Burnett and Daniel are lettermen. The other members of the flying squadron are freshmen and reserves, mainly freshmen, and they are a big and fighting lot. The new freshman backs, Snyder and Montgomery, and two reserves, Shaffer and Jackson, will be watched particularly. This quartet has been looking especially good in the winter practice, along with Henry Burnett, who ran wild when shifted from quarter to half last Saturday.

Children Protest Unpaid Salaries

As a protest against the failure of the state of Illinois to pay back salaries due teachers, 13,000 pupils from several Chicago high schools declared a strike Wednesday that threw the state's school officials into an uproar.

The pupils, defying parental threats, edicts of principals, and displays of police force, demanded that substantial part of the $52,000,000 due school teachers and other employees be paid before they returned to their textbooks.

Following a hastily called conference of school authorities it was announced that teachers would receive, $1,700,000 in cash within the next few days for the remainder of the June salaries of last year.

ZETA PSI DEFEATS S. A. E. IN CLOSE UPHILL STRUGGLE

Kappa Alpha and Zeta Psi Rally In Last Innings to Take Ball Games.

Two last-inning rallies won intramural baseball games for Kappa Alpha and Zeta Psi yesterday. Each team took its game to the tune of 8-7, the Zeta Psi's at the expense of Sigma Alpha Epsilon and the K. A.'s over Phi Delta Theta.

After both teams had gone scoreless for two innings, Zeta Psi got a run in the third. No more scoring occurred until the fifth when S. A. E. scored four times and Zeta Psi added three tallies to its total, bringing the score to 4-4. S. A. E. got three more in the sixth, and the game appeared to be in the bag.

In the last half of the seventh, however, with the score 7-4 against them, the Zeta Psi's went to work and drove in four runs to win the game with only one out. After Harrison and Hanft had scored and Sasser had been retired, Tolson batted for Blackwell with the bases loaded. He drove a clean single to center which scored Lewis and Clark with the runs which won the game.

Scott, pitching for S. A. E., did well until the last frame when he went up before the crushing attack of the Zeta Psi batsmen. Clark, winning pitcher, also turned in a nice game.

Score by innings:
S. A. E. 000 043 0-7
Zeta Psi 001 030 4-8

Phi Deltis Bow

Both Phi Delta Theta and Kappa Alpha got off to fast starts in their game, each team scoring four times in the first frame. One run was added to each nine's total in the third, and the Phi Deltis got another in each of the last two frames. Going into the last of the seventh two runs down, Kappa Alpha drove across three runs and took the game, 8-7.

Everette, McGill, Morrison, Schriver, and Skinner figured prominently in the rally which won the game. For Phi Delta Theta Burnett and Mosier led the attack, and Mosier pitched well until the fatal seventh.

Score by innings:
Phi Delta Theta 401 001 1-7
Kappa Alpha 401 000 3-8

Lewis Whitewashes Mangum
Kleitman pitched masterly ball for Lewis and Mangum went scoreless as it lost, 2-0. Spencer, losing moundman, was also effective, except in the fourth when Lewis got to him for both its runs. Stoll and Kleitman himself crossed the plate with the winning tallies.

Furche and Hartzell stood out for the losers, while Pepper, Lewis shortstop, came up with several sparkling plays afield.

Score by innings:
Mangum 000 000 0-0
Lewis 000 200 x-2

Dekes Lose

Chi Psi won its second game in a row and Delta Epsilon dropped its second out of four as Chi Psi took a 11-4 decision in their game yesterday. Gayle Rogers, Chi Psi pitcher, hurled masterly ball, and was in difficulty only once, in the fourth, when the Dekes got four runs. Rogers was instrumental in winning his own game, scoring three runs and driving in several more. The pitcher drove a home run on the first ball pitched in the game to start things off right for his team.

TRACKMEN OPEN SPRING SEASON WITH GEORGETOWN

Washington School Club Has Important Stars on Year's Squad.

Coaches Fetzner and Ranson will parade their track proteges before Carolina track fans for the first time this year when the Tar Heels meet the Georgetown University aggregation, Saturday afternoon.

The visiting club will have a galaxy of fine track stars to build their machine around; the most prominent is Al Kelly, winner of the I.C.A.A.A. national indoor sprint. Some of the other Georgetown entries are Dunn, Larkin and Smith, a trio of dash men; Bradley will carry the Catholic school's colors in the hurdles; DiPasquale in the 440; Quirk, the 880; while Mussante and Russo will bear the brunt of activity in the shot put.

Bradley was a prominent gridiron performer on the Georgetown eleven last fall while Mussante was formerly the interscholastic hammer throw champion and record holder in Massachusetts. Some of the most likely looking freshmen of the Washington school will meet the Tar Baby aggregation.

CARNIVAL GOES ON TOMORROW WITH NET PLAY

Games Yesterday Postponed; Will Be Played Saturday, The Last Day.

Players scheduled to compete in the fourth day of play in the first annual Carolina-Duke mammoth tennis carnival yesterday will play this afternoon. The matches scheduled for yesterday were postponed because of wet courts.

Since it was not possible to carry on the competition yesterday, play will continue through Saturday. Those men who have not as yet played in the meet, and who can on Saturday morning are requested to see Dick Weesner, manager of the varsity tennis team.

It will be necessary for everyone to have a new ball before beginning his match. Players going to Duke will be carried over in student automobiles. Since cars are needed at present, sponsors of the carnival would appreciate it if those playing in the meet at Duke would use their cars or if anyone interested in watching the meet in Durham would offer the service of his car.

Those to play in Chapel Hill will be Rouiller, V. Guion, F. Wilmer, S. Aitken, A. Cope, Wil-

Freshman Netmen Meet Washington

The Carolina freshman tennis team is scheduled for a match here this afternoon with the strong Devitt Prep team from Washington, D. C., which boasts two outstanding players in La-toma and Shore.

The Tar Babies' present rankings and probable line-up include Bernard Friedman, Hunter Lott, Marcus Lynch, Sid Sobol and Jimmy Johnston.

The locals showed expected strength in shutting out Durham high in their opening match, but several of those matches were close, and the meet with Devitt will be a more important test of their power.

Those men to represent Carolina in Durham are: C. Freeman, W. N. Treverton, F. Dossenback, C. Woollen, Zeihn, J. H. Patterson, H. A. Moffitt, Thorpe, Parwell, Sim Patterson, Breazeale, J. Wall, Stadium, J. Farr, Entwistle, B. J. Pettus, D. W. Mosier, Harlee MacHorne, M. Bell, and F. Rogers.

FROSH NINE WINS OVER OPPONENTS FOR FIRST WIN

Hutchison Pitches a One-Hit Ball Game Against Mount Pleasant.

With Bill Hutchison pitching one-hit ball, Carolina's freshman baseball team broke into the win column for the first time this year, downing Mount Pleasant Collegiates, 3 to 1 yesterday afternoon on Emerson field.

Hutchison, a big left-hander, pitched beautiful ball throughout, retiring ten of the prep school batters by the strick-out route. The lone hit which kept the southpaw from getting the greatest desire of any hurler came in the sixth inning. Holt, left fielder, got a grounder which went through the infield, hitting the track and going for two bases. The only run against Hutchison also came in the sixth

THREE DANCES TO BE OFFERED THIS WEEK-END

Pharmacy School and Graduate Club Dances Will Be Staged Tonight.

Three dances are included on Chapel Hill's social program for the week-end, with two of the events leading the way tonight.

As a relaxation after tiring work on the preparation of the Shirley Graves Graduate club sponsors a dance for graduates in the lounge room of the graduate club building tonight between the hours of 10:00 and 1:00 o'clock. Bill Allsbrook's Virginia Beach orchestra will furnish the music. A small admission charge will be made.

Pharmacy Dance

The pharmacy school also gives a dance tonight. The affair takes place in Bynum gymnasium between the hours of 9:00 and 1:00 o'clock with music furnished by "Jelly" Leftwich and his orchestra. The leaders are Clayton Curry, president of the pharmacy student body, with Miss Marion Sneed of Durham; M. L. Cline, president of the third year class, with Miss Edna Crawford of Graham; Nyal Womble, president of the second year class, with Miss Ann Bynum of Pittsboro; and Harry Murrell, president of the first year class, with Miss Blanche Morgan of Durham.

The last dance of the week is the second dance of the quarter conducted by the Order of the Grail, which takes place in Bynum gymnasium tomorrow night between the hours of 9:00 and 12:00 o'clock. Freshmen are admitted. Music will be furnished by "Jelly" Leftwich and his orchestra.

MANY STUDENTS TO ARRIVE HERE NEXT WEDNESDAY

High School Week to Have 350 Entrants to Be Entertained Here.

Approximately 350 entrants in the various competitions to take place during the annual high school week will arrive in Chapel Hill beginning Wednesday, April 12. E. R. Rankin, director of the high school division of the University extension department, has turned the matter of finding lodging for these entrants over to the freshman friendship council.

Beginning this morning, a list of the schools and contestants entered from these schools will be posted in the lobby of the Y. M. C. A. There will also be a registration desk at which any student who is willing to share his room with one or more of the entrants may sign his name and address. Students may pick any contestant they prefer to room with them during the high school week. The student body is requested to help furnish lodging only since the entrants will provide their own meals.

Not later than Monday night members of the freshman friendship council will visit the occupants of both the dormitory and fraternity rooms in order to give everyone an opportunity to indicate whether or not they are willing to help lodge the entrants.

Events of the annual high school week include the interscholastic tennis tournament, the interscholastic track meet, and the debate finals for the Aycock Memorial cup. Teams from Chapel Hill, Hickory, Plymouth, Raleigh, Wake Forest, Washington, Winston-Salem, High Point, and Henderson are entered in the tennis tournament. These boys will arrive at 4:00 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. In the interscholastic track meet Charlotte, Ayden, High Point, Old Town, Wake Forest, Westfield, and Winston-Salem have entered teams. Fifty-four high schools in the state have reached the finals of the debating contest and each will send a team of four students, composed of both boys and girls.

Every student who can possibly find room to lodge one or more of these entrants is urged to sign up at the registration desk in the 'Y' and to indicate his choice.

Placement Tests Raise Average Of Grades In Romance Languages

Before Institution of Test Sixty Per Cent of Students Who Entered Into French 3 Flunked Out Either in That or in French 4; Tests Place Students According to Ability.

From the experience of both faculty and students over a period of three years, the Romance language department recognizes the use of placement tests for freshmen as the most efficient and fairest method of dealing with the knotty problem of properly locating the entrant according to his ability.

Before the tests became an institution, every student who came to the University who had credit for two years of high school French or Spanish was put immediately into third quarter work. Because the preparation of students was not universally good or bad, and because the students themselves varied considerably in interest and ability, this policy had somewhat deplorable results.

A good French student was held back by his classmates who were either insufferably stupid, poorly prepared, or not at all interested in the subject.

Sixty Percent Flunked Out

The average student, without wholly adequate preparation for the first of the college French or Spanish courses found the work extremely difficult, and developed a distaste for the language that grew as time went on, and his grasp of the subject became more and more feeble. Nearly sixty percent of the freshmen who were placed in French 3 under the old system flunked either French 3 or French 4. This worked a hardship on the professors in the department at both extremes.

Students whose training was fair, but not up to what the department considered a reasonable standard, were pushed on into French 4, merely because they were superior to the majority of their fellows. In French 4 or 5 (now 21) they flunked, almost in sight of the end of the required courses in a modern language.

Under the present system, the placement tests show that fifty-five percent of the freshmen who take these tests are not adequately prepared for college courses in the language. These students are placed in two non-credit courses, French 1 and 2, and receive adequate preparation from instructors who know what to expect, and are not handicapped by having an ill-assorted class to teach.

The others go into French 3, and as a rule find the work commensurate with their training and ability. This speeds up the work of the department, and makes life easier for the freshmen, who develop inferiority complexes with regard to their training in French or their intelligence.

Little Objection to System

There does not seem to be any general opposition to the non-credit courses among members of the freshman class. A certain number, it is true, are irritated, and cause trouble in the departmental office, but that number is balanced almost exactly every year by those freshmen who, having made French 3 on the basis of the examination, ask to get the necessary ground-work by taking the non-credit courses.

The Romance language department does not attempt to assure every freshman who enters French 3 on the basis of the examination that he will have no difficulty with the courses, or that he will not flunk it. The purpose of the department is to weed out the "impossibles" and thus leave the best students unhampered and to give those whose preparation has been inadequate an opportunity to enter the first credit course in college French or Spanish.

Irwin and Mehaffey Star
Tommy Irwin and Red Mahaffey, shortstop and rightfielder respectively, played air-tight ball behind the winning hurler and saved the day a few times on some hard hits. Tommy made three neat pickups and throws on the run while Red made three nice running catches of fly balls. For the losers Holt made the best play of the defense, robbing Bullock of a sure triple in the sixth frame.

The freshmen played better ball than in the first two games and scored all their runs on heads-up ball. Except for the sixth frame they also turned in heady, air-tight ball in the field.

Carolina opened the run-making in the second inning with one run. Irwin walked and went to second on Shapiro's drag bunt which went for a safe hit. King then laid down another bunt, both runners advancing. Irwin came home with the talley on Orr's long fly to center field.

The visitors tied things up with their only run in the sixth inning. With one down, H. Hopkins drew a walk. Holt, next up, got the only hit for Mount Pleasant, Hopkins stopping on third. McCarns then laid down a bunt but Hutchison came in fast and threw home. King, however, dropped the ball, Hopkins scoring. Hutchison then bore down, fanning F.

English Writers To Speak In Greensboro

Two well known English writers, Harold Nicolson and his wife V. Sackville-West, will bring patrons of the lecture course of the Woman's College the last numbers of the season April 10 and 11. Both lectures are to be given at Aycock auditorium in Greensboro.

Nicolson, known for his British diplomatic services as well as his books, will speak at 8:30 o'clock in the evening, April 10, on the subject "The Future of Democracy."

Miss Sackville-West will talk at the same hour April 11 on "Changes in English Social Life." She is the author of a number of volumes including The Edwardians, All Passion Spent, Twelve Days, and others.

Hopkins and forcing Hahn to pop up, to stop all other scoring threats.

Big Frame
Carolina put the contest on ice in the last of the same frame after two were down. After Bullock and Tatum had been retired Irwin got a single. Shapiro got on when hit by a pitched ball, Irwin going to second. King then got a hit, scoring Irwin and Shapiro, stopping on second. Shapiro scored when the second baseman missed a throw, the ball rolling to center field.

For the Tar Babies Shapiro was the only one to get more than one hit, getting a single and a double out of three official was the only one to get more single out of two times up, walking the other two times he faced the pitcher.

Extras

The business staff of the Daily Tar Heel has on hand a number of copies of the election extra published yesterday containing final tabulations and stories on campus and class elections Wednesday. Copies of this edition may be obtained at the business office in Graham Memorial at special rates.

Carolina's Stars

The Saturday track circus will not be lacking in Carolina star performers; however, the Tar Heels have eleven lettermen to bolster their roster of stars and of this number three are University record holders. Higby in the broad jump, Mullis in the shot put and LeGore, the javelin throw.

Carolina should be stronger than usual in the field events as is evidenced by such a formidable array of talent, but the Tar Heels will suffer in the quarter mile; since as yet no likely candidate has been discovered by the Tar Heel coaching staff. A host of sophomore material will

UPPERCLASSMEN MEET AT DUKE

North Carolina Section of Electrical Engineers Convenes In Durham.

The junior and senior classes of the electrical engineering department leave today to attend the annual spring meeting of the North Carolina section of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers which will take place at Duke University.

The opening session will be conducted at 2:00 o'clock with Dr. William P. Few, president of Duke University, delivering an address of welcome. Dr. J. Lester Woodbridge, chief engineer of the Electrical Storage Battery company, will then give a talk, illustrated with lantern slides, on "Operation of Storage Batteries." Following this, C. M. Schoonover, chief load dispatcher of the Duke Power company, will discuss "The Load Dispatching System of the Duke Power Company."

The evening program will feature an address by W. S. Lee, president of the American Engineering Council, on "The Engineer's Relation to the Public."

Appropriations Prospects For University Brighter

House Adopts Conference Report Carrying $832,240 Grant for Three Units.

REVENUE COMMITTEE ADVOCATES SALES TAX

Eight Months School Term Provided for; to Appropriate $16,000,000 for Support.

With the House adopting the report of conferees ironing out Senate and House differences in appropriations Thursday, and the joint revenue committee approving yesterday a three per cent sales tax to supply the means, prospects of state aid for the University stand more favorably today than any time since appropriations measures have been before the general assembly.

After a week of work, the conference committee received Thursday the House's approval of its decisions on the biennial appropriations bill for 1933-34. The measure provides for an eight-months school, a $16,000,000 provision for it, an approximate $4,000,000 increase for budget supply figures set in the house and a $1,000,000 cut from the Senate's figures.

Appropriations for the Great-er University remained at the Senate's allotment of $832,240 annually, which would give the University here $426,000.

The strength of the Bowie-Cherry anti-sales tax, anti-administration forces seemed broken when, in speaking against the measure, members of the bloc virtually admitted

ESSAYS WRITTEN FOR HIGH SCHOOL SCIENCE CONTEST

Twenty-Six Enter Competition; Winner to Be Announced at Davidson May 5.

Forty-six essays representing the work of students in twenty-six high schools throughout the state have been submitted to the judges in the North Carolina Academy of Science essay contest which closed April 1. The winner of the contest will be announced at the annual meeting of the Academy at Davidson College May 5 and 6.

The prize, a silver loving cup, for the year 1933 is offered for the best paper submitted to the Academy by a bona fide white high school student upon a subject selected by himself in the field of biology, botany, zoology, or geography. The essays were limited to 2,500 words and each school was allowed the privilege of submitting three papers.

The following high schools entered the contest: Ansonville, Bessemer City, Black Mountain, Wallace, Hot Springs, Dunn, Durham, Ellerbe, Enfield, Farmville, Fuquay Springs, Greensboro, Guilford, Kitty Hawk, Misenheimer, Newton, Virgilina, Lawndale, Shelby, Prospect Hill, R. J. Reynolds high school of Winston-Salem, Pilham, Denver, St. Genevieve of Asheville, Silver, and the Union high school of Monroe.

SCIENTIFIC SOCIETY CHANGES MEETING HOUR

The Elisha Mitchell scientific society will conduct its regular meeting on Tuesday, April 11, in Phillips hall at 7:00 o'clock. Due to the Skinner performance at 8:30 o'clock, the society is having its meeting at 7:00 o'clock instead of the usual hour of 7:30 o'clock.

The speakers for the meeting will be Dr. T. F. Hickerson and B. L. Johnson.

STAFF MEMBERS ENJOY KING KONG

Seventy-Five Tar Heelers See Special Preview of Show Thursday Night.

Members of the editorial and business staffs of THE DAILY TAR HEEL were liberal with their praise of "King Kong" yesterday, which they had seen at a special pre-view given in their honor through the courtesy of E. Carrington Smith. Some seventy-five or more staff members attended the show.

After a successful run yesterday, "King Kong" is offered again today at the Carolina theatre. Besides the fifty-foot tall King Kong and prehistoric reptiles, the show features Fay Wray, Robert Armstrong, and Bruce Cabot.

In the story a moving picture company lands on a strange island to find the natives worshipping a gigantic ape, which they call Kong. The heroine is captured by natives and offered to the monster as a living sacrifice. Plenty of thrills are furnished when Kong carries off the white girl and is pursued by sailors with rifles and dynamite bombs. Among other things the audience is entertained with fights between Kong and reptilian monsters.

The heroine is rescued and the great ape is captured and taken alive to New York. In the midst of an exhibition in a theatre, Kong again sees the girl and breaks from his chains. After breaking through the side of the theatre and wrecking a train, he climbs to the top of the Empire State building with Fay Wray in one paw. There he is finally killed by airplanes, after snatching several from the air.

Seventeen Confined

Seventeen students were confined to the infirmary yesterday. They were: N. L. Simmons, W. S. Roberts, Frank Causey, E. C. Willis, Craig Wall, F. T. Bender, William Leibowitz, Jo Orendorf, Vida Miller, William Logan, H. S. Rubin, R. H. Proctor, Jr., J. C. Parker, Mary Alice Ferguson, David Bennett, Alex Mark, and G. H. Holmes.

"Jelly" to Play Tonight

A dance is being conducted by the Order of the Grail in Bynum gymnasium tonight between the hours of 9:00 and 12:00 o'clock. Freshmen will be admitted. Music will be furnished by "Jelly" Leftwich and his orchestra.

CONFERENCE OF LIBRARY HEADS CONVENES HERE

Leaders in Several Speeches Outline Major Problems and Proposed Remedies.

Aroused by a recent survey which showed that two-thirds of the people of the south are without access to local public library service, southern leaders in religion, education, culture, and social welfare, opening a two-day conference today at the University of North Carolina under the auspices of the American and Southeastern Library Associations, discussed plans for providing improved library facilities.

Although chief attention was devoted to public library service, topics in several related fields, such as religion, adult education, illiteracy, and county government, occupied a considerable portion of the discussion.

The meeting is considering all these agencies in a well-rounded community program.

More than 100 leaders in the fields represented were in attendance. They came from ten southern states.

At this time when the whole economic, political, and social fabric is being tested, the library is an agency for making the means of intelligence easily available to all the people, the conference was told.

France Prefers Hohenzollerns To Hitlerism, Frazer Believes

Head of Government Department Finds Manchuria, Russia, Hitlerism, Disarmament, and Depression All Intertwined in Complex Field of International Affairs.

Interwoven with the political developments of Germany, according to K. C. Frazer of the department of government, is the Sino-Japanese situation; and cutting across the whole field of international diplomacy and pulling in the opposite direction is the world-wide depression.

Speculating on the trend of future events, Frazer said that under present conditions he did not think France would bring the pressure of arms to bear on Hitler's regime. He reported, however, that last summer an official in the French foreign office told him that France would rather see even the old Hohenzollerns return than see Hitler in power. The attitude of the French, as Frazer sees it, is one of aversion for irresponsible Hitlerism, and a preference for stable government, even if it be the old regime.

English and Russian Attitude Because of the influence of Jews in both the English and Russian governments, Dr. Frazer expects an attitude of disapproval towards Hitler's anti-Semitic moves from these countries. Frazer pointed out that in England the Jews are influential in both the conservative and the liberal factions, but not in the labor party.

Aside from the Jewish aspect of Hitler's rule, Frazer thinks Russia would be friendly. England, he thinks, is likely to ob-

KOCH RETURNS FROM MEETING OF DRAMATISTS

Foundation for Negro Theatre Is Being Laid, Koch Declares.

Returning from the Negro Intercollegiate Dramatic Association tournament at Virginia Union University in Richmond, Professor F. H. Koch stated his conviction that foundations are being laid for a native American negro theatre. Professor Koch attended the tournament as critic judge of productions presented by the four negro colleges of the association.

Three Carolina folk-plays were included in the spring program of the Dramatic Association for this year: Fixin's by Emma and Paul Green, The Man Who Died at Twelve O'clock by Paul Green, and Magnolia's Man by Gertrude Wilson Coffin. The second production was played by the Carolina Playmakers several years ago at Hampton Institute, one of the members of the Dramatic Association. This performance is credited with arousing much of the interest in dramatic activity now revealed at the Institute.

Howard University, Hampton Institute, Virginia State College, and Virginia Union University are the present members of the Negro Intercollegiate Dramatic Institute, which was organized three years ago.

Barnes Gets 1046 Votes to 793 For Arlindo Cate in Yesterday's Balloting.

1839 VOTES ARE POLLED

Voting Marks Close of One of Hottest Political Battles in Campus History.

A steady stream of student voters flowed into Graham Memorial yesterday and cast a total of 1839 ballots to elect Harper Barnes president of the student body and E. C. Daniel editor of the Carolina Magazine for next year.

Running against Barnes for the honor was Arlindo Cate of Greensboro who received 793 votes to Barnes' 1046. Daniel polled 972 votes to Miss Mary Frances Parker's 862.

Surprising to all was the fact that the total of votes yesterday approached anywhere near the record ballot in the regular spring elections Wednesday when 1996 were cast. From appearances it seemed that only about fourteen or fifteen hundred were being polled but the voting was considered more gradual than in the previous election, students going to the poll in a steadier stream.

Both the winning candidates picked about sixty vote margins over the leads they had in the general election when they failed to receive enough votes over their opponents to be elected.

Barnes had a 253 margin over Cate yesterday while his plurality Wednesday was 933 to 738

RAILROAD HEAD STATES TRUCKS DAMAGE ROADS

Vaughan Declares Trucking Concerns Are Escaping Their Just Proportion of Tax.

"Trucks undoubtedly will continue to haul freight over our highways and they should be permitted to do so, but at present they are getting away with murder when it comes to paying taxes and escaping a just proportion of the cost of maintaining highways, to which they are daily doing irreparable damage," W. R. Vaughan, of Henderson, president of the Railroad Employers and Taxpayers Association, declared in an address before the Chapel Hill Rotary club at its regular weekly meeting.

"For years the railroads have been contributing largely to the cost of government, and there is no reason why the trucks should not be regulated so as to contribute their proportionate share of this cost," Vaughan asserted. "At present they are being allowed to give the railroads unfair competition, for the carriers spend big sums yearly for building and maintaining their roadbeds while the trucks have their roadbeds maintained for them by the state with practically no cost."

Damage to Highways

Vaughan said it was ridiculous to believe the testimony of "so-called experts" to the effect that the trucks are doing

Born Twelve Months

Too Soon

Having used to considerable advantage a plank in his platform last year that the engineering school be given a special representative on the student council, the retiring president of the student body Thursday night made his first strong attempt to carry out this promise by bringing the question up for discussion in the Student Activities Committee meeting. That the idea was prompted to a large measure by a desire to secure every possible group of extra votes in the close election of 1932 can not be denied. But even though it might have been instigated by such an insincere motive, had it had any merit of its own, its proponent should long ago have brought it from its hiding place to be put into use on the campus.

Such was impossible, it is claimed. The student government was taken up too much with more important matters—such as sponsoring a revision of the honor system, which revision was shut from the sun-light while it was still young by strong adverse student sentiment. This was during the fall quarter, however. But nothing has been done since then.

To some this may sound as a severe condemnation of student government on the campus during the past year; as such it is certainly not meant. It is merely trying to point out the lack of memory officials seem to have of their campaign promises after they get into office. Nor is this true only of student government officers. Publication editors as well as guilty of this neglect. Before going into office there is always a spirit of idealism present in the minds of the candidates. When they get into office they will accomplish great things. They will turn the world upside down. They will make an entirely new organization.

After the election, though, and after the glamour of the honor has faded, the practical side of the campaign issues come to light. What had appeared to be an easy path has turned out to be one strewn with stones. The newly-elected find themselves fighting between two elements. They feel that they must carry out their promises, yet they find that to do such would require much more energy and perseverance than they had anticipated. They lose courage. Their pre-election ambitions soon vanish, and it is not long before they are just another set of officers.

The same situation will undoubtedly face the men who will soon go into office. They have but one solution. If they have made promises that they think worthy of carrying out, let them leave not a stone unturned to accomplish their goal. If they will take their new responsibilities at first with a conservative attitude, developing later into radicalism, if such is their inclination, they will find their task much easier. There is always a new-born enthusiasm which follows the inauguration of new officers. But if this enthusiasm is burned up too rapidly in the early period of the regime, the rest of the term will be quite dead. On the other hand, if this enthusiasm is conserved until the newly-elect become more acquainted with their offices, the success will be far more outstanding.

But by all means don't wait until the last few days before retirement to carry out campaign promises made twelve months before.

The recent elections at St. Lawrence University were invalidated because, although only 465 ballots were handed out, 485 votes were cast. —Hill News (N.S.F.A.)

Spring House-Cleaning Begins

With the several preferences of the student body emphatically proclaimed at the polls, the University turns in a few short spring days to twenty-seven New Deals, Square Deals, and Fair Deals in the annual quest for student government. The new incumbents take office in the face of one of the most severe political shake-ups in campus history. They become part of an era long to be remembered as the epitome of fiery politics, an era that perhaps may culminate in many respects an old institution on this campus.

Those who leave office depart with a vigorous round of spring cleaning for the new incumbents. Numerous loose ends remain to be spliced together in what should be a wholesale effort to build for a greater University.

In student government the new president of the student body and his student council must search for an adequate solution to the honor system. The new council must endeavor to equalize the representation on the council in the professional schools.

In the classes an effort must be made to shorten the ballot and abolish needless offices, minimize the size of the executive committees to a compact, efficient group. A definite drive must be launched to reduce class fees until the present period of economic stress fades from the social picture.

In publications there is necessity for the closer cooperation of the four campus literary organs. The Yackety Yack must be provided with more adequate quarters, THE DAILY TAR HEEL must strive to conserve space and time in a more thorough coverage of campus news, facing at the same time the obvious necessity of adopting a smaller type font in conformation with a standard daily newspaper. The Carolina Magazine must strive to attain a better measure of popular appeal and the representation of every literary faction on the campus. Publication fees and their expenditure should be investigated by the student council, and the immediate entrance of the Publications Union into the audit board must be contracted. The board itself needs immediate revision and a policy of closer perusal of contracts and appointment qualifications. It should be expanded, adding the editors and business managers of publications for consultation over contracts.

These and many other problems too numerous to mention demand the immediate attention of the several new regimes. Toward the immediate perpetration of these endeavors, the student body must join hands with its officers, realizing that a spirit of wholesale cooperation is means to the end.—D.C.S.

Youth Takes Its Stand

The tendency of youth to do things instead of sitting by talking about it as their elders do has been manifested again. This time it is the high school and grammar school pupils and not the college students who have come to the front. In Chicago 13,000 pupils went on strike because their teachers had not been paid for over a year while the city meanwhile had spent over sixty million dollars for the unemployed, although still owing its teachers approximately fifty-two million dollars.

The day before the strike the teachers received notes saying that the pupils were sick of the existent situation, in fact were so sick that they would be unable to attend school the following day, and that they hoped the teachers were as sick of it as they were. School authorities, when approached about the matter, expressed the belief that the notes were of communistic origin. This would seem to be almost utter nonsense on the part of these officials. It is much more likely that the students, realizing that the city was unlikely to pay those employees to which it owed money, took matters into their own hands by calling the strike as the only remedy for a desperate situation.

Whenever youth takes the initiative in a cause, no matter how just and efficient its methods, there is an immediate outcry by the older generation opposed to any thought or action upon the part of the younger generation that communism is back of the movement. Using the word communism as a stigma to be applied to anything slightly radical entered into by youth, these old fogies attempt to stifle any use of brains in hopes that they may soon coerce youth into adopting the trepidation and hesitancy of action that is characteristic of old age.

If the fact that the school children of Chicago recognized the need for justice to their teachers and acted in a manner both rational and efficient while their parents sat idly by and permitted one of the cities leading the institutions to collapse be communism, then it would indeed be wise for the whole of the United States to adopt such a system.—F.P.G.

There is a marked tendency for American colleges and universities to get away from the honor system in examinations, according to Dr. John R. Effinger, dean of the literary college of the University of Michigan.—Duke Chronicle (N.S.F.A.)

that libraries are now having an unprecedented demand for books dealing with present economic conditions and possible ways out. Libraries, it was also said, are supplying to thousands the books that will enable them to fit themselves for new vocations, and are helping to sustain the morale of other thousands by giving them an escape from the strain of life through books to read during enforced leisure. But unfortunately, it was pointed out, most of the people in the south, especially in the small towns and rural areas, are without access to libraries.

There were morning, afternoon, and night sessions yesterday. The concluding session will be conducted this morning when Dean Louis R. Wilson of the graduate school of the University of Chicago, who until a year ago was head of the University library here; Dr. Clarence Poe, editor of the Progressive Farmer, and President Frank Graham of the University will be among the speakers.

Need for Economy

The opening session, yesterday morning was presided over by Howard P. Jones, editor of the National Municipal Review, who maintained that while the times demand greater economy in government "it should be constructive and not destructive economy."

Extending the University's welcome in the absence of President Graham, Executive Secretary R. B. House asserted that "too long have we subscribed to the doctrine: get wealth first and then get culture. Too long have cultural and spiritual agencies played second fiddle to business. We know now that schools, colleges, churches, libraries cannot afford to wait to pensioners on business that must first make itself secure. Business, like the King of France in the Mother Goose rhyme, marches up the hill only to march right down again. It never stays on the crest long enough to pull these agencies up with it."

President H. A. Morgan of the University of Tennessee, another speaker at the morning session, stressed the point that adult education is now "one of the chief functions of a state system" and that the library is a big factor in promoting adult learning.

Trend Toward More Reading

"Educational programs for adults are especially timely in the critical period through which we are passing," he said. "Unemployment is leading additional thousands to turn to public schools and colleges for further training. They are seizing the opportunity to better prepare themselves for the time when the doors of industry and business will again be open to them."

"One of the greatest advantages of education for older men and women is that the commonwealth is in a position to reap immediate and direct results from their training. In the case of youth, it is a matter of dealing with hopes for the future."

Sidney B. Hall, superintendent of public instruction in Virginia, was detained at home but his paper was presented by C. W. Dickinson, supervisor of textbooks and of public school libraries in Virginia. Mr. Hall's paper revealed records showing that collegians coming from schools with inadequate library facilities are much poorer prepared than the boys who had access to good libraries.

Too Much Reading Bad

That students must not be permitted to over-indulge in reading along one line was another point emphasized.

Carl H. Milam, secretary of the American Library Association, stressed the view that the social development of the world depends on the libraries and schools.

Other speakers at the morning session were Walker Cocking, commissioner of education of Tennessee, who thought that too many things not sought by them are being crowded in the school's curriculum; W. R. Weatherford, dean of the Y. M. C. A. Graduate School at Nashville, who maintained that character building should be emphasized as the basis for education; and Rev. W. A. Stanbury, pastor of the Duke Memorial church of Durham, who felt that the church should, through stimulation of moral courage, serve as a source of inspiration for community effort rather than attempt to direct community-wide programs such as relief projects.

Presiding over the afternoon session was Wilson Gee, director of the Institute for Research in Social Science, University of Virginia.

Government Affects Libraries

Trends of government as they affect libraries in common with other public agencies were discussed by Dean W. C. Jackson of the University School of Public Administration, Dr. Paul W. Wager of the University department of rural-social economics; Dr. Howard Odum, director of the Southern Regional Study, Social Science Research council; J. O. Modisette of the American library extension board; Miss Mary Rothrock, celebrated county librarian of Tennessee; Es-sae M. Culver, secretary of the Louisiana Library Commission, Mr. Milam, and others.

Dean Jackson discussed the results of the states taking over many of the responsibilities formerly devolving on local governments and predicted that trend would continue.

Dr. Wager deplored that while there had been a shift in control the agitation for consolidation of county governments had produced little effect in the south so far. Such consolidation, he said, would result in considerable economy.

Asserting that the south is capable of providing adequate cultural institutions, Dr. Odum cited facts based on a two-year program he is directing for the Southern Regional Study group. He said the studies show the south excels in natural resources and population, but lags in wealth and social and cultural resources.

Mrs. Lillian B. Griggs, librarian of the woman's college of Duke University, presided at the banquet last night, and Mr. Modisette was toastmaster. Speakers were Dr. Edgar W. Knight of the University of North Carolina school of education, Miss Tommie Dora Barker, regional field agent for the south for the American Library Association, and Miss Essae M. Culver, secretary of the Louisiana Library Commission.

Miss Barker showed how counties in which the Rosenwald foundation has established libraries in the south had become "library conscious" and had provided a pattern for others.

"The habit and desire to read can be instilled in students only through great and inspiring teachers," Dr. Knight said.

"Books and libraries and a general diffusion of knowledge will come in the southeastern states when we have more teachers who encourage learning to emerge from the cloister, who stimulate the minds of others, whose scholarship is broad and whose learning is generous, who create among children and adults a thirst for knowledge no more damage to highways than do automobiles.

"Such testimony is usually bought and paid for and is without foundation as to the facts in the case," he said. "It is just like a lawyer paying an alienist to swear that his client is sane, regardless of how insane the client may appear. Only casual observation is necessary to show what great damage the trucks have already done to highways."

"We have spent 180 millions on our highways, and we know it is going to be practically impossible to get others built when these are worn out. All the railroads are asking is a fair break. Let the trucks use the highways, but in all fairness to everybody concerned, let them pay to help maintain their roads and then the railroads will be able to meet their competitive rates. At present the trucks are getting away with murder."

defeat. Three weeks ago they seemed to have the upper hand in the House in proposing a bill granting the biennial appropriations at $73,000,000 and an annual allotment of $644,800 to the Greater University.

Previously a recommendation for $832,240 to go to the consolidated institution failed to pass in the House and the bill sent along to the Senate contained appropriations of approximately $760,000. The Senate quickly raised this figure to $832,240, where it is expected to remain.

Following adoption of the conference report by the House Thursday, the Senate had the bill up for consideration yesterday but results on action taken by the body could not be obtained last night.

The finance committee yesterday made its report into the House and recommended a three per cent sales tax to balance the $83,000,000 biennial budget. The measure was put on the calendar for consideration Monday.

With action on the revenue and appropriations measures well under way, prospects for adjournment of the legislature soon are much brighter, as these two problems are the major items of business for consideration.

Carolina Will Clash With Duke In First Varsity Tennis Match

Leviton Defeats Dillard to Climb
To No. 5 Position in Team Rankings.

HINES WILL MEET WELSCH
Competition Reported to Be Keen as Carolina Seeks to Stretch Wins.

Carolina's varsity tennis team clashes with the Duke Blue Devils this afternoon at Duke with the local players seeking to keep their string of victories unbroken and to increase it to fifty wins. A general shake-up will be noted in the line-up, which is very indefinite.

Walter Levitan who has been playing a good brand of tennis in the past few days jumped to number six position on the ladder when he defeated John Dillard, who is now seven, in straight sets, 6-3, 6-4. Harvey Harris who has not been playing his usual game is gradually climbing from his position on the ladder. He is now No. 5.

Wilmer Hines will definitely play the first match against Welsch of Duke. Lenoir Wright will be ready to meet the number two man. Ricky Willis may play number three, while either Dave Morgan or Harvey Harris will be switched in the fourth and fifth matches. Walter Levitan may play six.

The doubles teams will be Hines and Wright in the first doubles, Harvey Harris and Walter Levitan in the second doubles, and Shuford and Morgan in the third fray. There is a possibility that John Dillard will not see action.

TODAY WILL BE BIG SPORTS DAY FOR ALL TEAMS

Track, Tennis, and Football Are On Bill; Varsity Baseball Team Plays Cadets.

Carolina's freshman and varsity teams are ready for a big day today in their spring schedules. Track, tennis, and football are all three on tap.

The varsity and freshman track teams are to have an exhibition meet with Georgetown University which begins at 1:30 o'clock on Emerson field. Later at 3:30 o'clock, Coach Chuck Collins will close winter football practice with a Varsity-Reserve game in Kenan stadium.

The Tar Baby tennis team, led by Bernie Friedman and Hunter Lott, meet the racquet-players from Darlington Prep on the University courts this afternoon.

Coach Kenfield's varsity tennis team opens its conference competition in Durham against the reputedly strong Blue Devil aggregation. This match which is the second this season for Carolina's national champions, should draw a large crowd of spectators. It is the first athletic contest between the two institutions this year in which Carolina has enjoyed a decided edge in the betting. Only the Tar Heel wrestlers have taken the measure of their Duke rivals.

The varsity baseball team, off on a four game trip, engages the V. M. I. Cadets today.

LOTT LOST FOR OPENING MATCH

Marcus Lynch to Take No. 2 Position Today; Sobol to Substitute in Doubles.

Due to illness, Hunter Lott will not be able to compete in the opening freshman tennis meet this afternoon with the Darlington school squad.

Bernard Friedman of Philadelphia will play in the number one position. Marcus Lynch, due to the absence of Lott, will move up to second position. James Johnston will play three. Sid Sobol will play four, and Baukney will show in the fifth position.

The doubles combination of Friedman and Lott will be broken up, and Sobol will probably be called as substitute. The second doubles squad will be composed of Johnston and Lynch.

The match with Devitt school, which was scheduled for yesterday, was postponed by the visiting team, and will be played later in the season.

TAR HEELS WHIP GOBBLERS 9-1 IN CONFERENCE TILT

Snow Flurry Hinders Play;
Croom Leads Heel Batters
With Two Doubles.

Carolina's baseball team got rid of its habit of wasting hits yesterday and turned a dozen safeties into nine runs to defeat Virginia Poly behind the five-hit pitching of Joe Griffith. The Gobblers got but a single run out of their five scattered bingles.

The game was played in the midst of an untimely snow storm, which swept across the Blacksburg field.

Bill Croom, with a pair of two-base blows, led the extra-base clouting for the Tar Heels. Vergil Weathers, Carolina, and Casey, of V. P. I. football fame, also garnered two-base blows.

Croom, with two doubles in three trips to the plate, took batting honors for the game. Johnny Peacock had two singles in four attempts, and McCaskill and Phipps both had two singles in five tries.

Weede, with two for three, and Casey, with a double and single in five trips, led the Gobbler attack. Captain Sutton's play at first was the highlight of the V. P. I. fielding performances.

The Virginians used two pitchers in an effort to silence the Tar Heel bats. Porter lasted eight innings, giving up six hits, while Mitchell was lambasted for six blows in his one inning on the mound.

The Tar Heels journey to Lexington today where they meet the V. M. I. Cadets in the second game of their four-day trip.

Wake Forest Wins
Wake Forest's diamond warriors clashed Thursday with Delaware, and when the score got to look more like a track meet by the eighth inning, both sides called off hostilities with the count at 23-7, favor the Deacs.

GEORGETOWN TO MEET TAR HEELS THIS AFTERNOON

Track Meet Starts at 1:50 With Smith Performing in Pole Vault.

Carolina's varsity track team will make its seasonal debut in an important exhibition meet with Georgetown University on Emerson field this afternoon, beginning with the pole vault at 1:30 o'clock and the 100-yard dash which will open the track events at 1:50 o'clock.

The Catholic invaders from the capital city are reputed to have a strong aggregation built around several brilliant performers, including Al Kelly, one of the nation's flashiest sprinters. Besides Kelly, the Georgetown tracksters boast of a fine trio of dash men in Dunn, Larkin, and Smith. In the hurdles, Bradley, brilliant football luminary at Georgetown, will uphold the school's colors. DiPasquale in the 440, Quirk in the 880, and Mussante and Russo in the shot put will round out a galaxy of stars.

This season opener will prove a thorough test of Carolina's strength, old and new, and should produce better than usual performances for such an early meet. Carolina's Tar Heels are conceded to be strong in the field events, but it will remain for the Georgetown opposition to tell whether or not the Carolina youngster prospects can fill the gaps left by last year's graduations, and thus round out a powerful team.

Georgetown Has Edge in Track
Georgetown will have the advantage of a veteran club in the running events. In the dashes, where the Tar Heels will be using untried strength, the visitors will present four fine runners. The 440, which is still an open field for any individual man to capture the inside on the honors for Carolina, will find the Washington club with DiPasquale. In the 880, Williamson, likely looking Carolina sophomore, will give Quirk, Georgetown runner, a fine race.

In the mile Ed McRae should have no difficulty in winning laurels for the Tar Heels after running such a brilliant three-quarter in the time trials last Saturday. McRae was clocked at 3:15 minutes. The services of Clarence Jensen will be missed in the mile, since it was announced yesterday that the fine miler has a bad cold which will keep him out of the competition today.

The javelin should easily go to the Carolina spear tossers. Ralston LeGore, ranked fourth on the national track honor roll, should take off the premier laurels. LeGore threw the javelin 208 feet and 7 inches in the Navy dual meet last year. Chandler and Armfield, two other Carolina javelin entries, should place in the meet; because both men have consistently thrown the javelin over 180 feet.

The hurdles will be a complicated affair for the Tar Heels will present three good men while Georgetown has Bradley to carry its colors. Carolina has Abernathy, Hawthorne and Glenn, all fine hurdlers, to represent the Carolinians. Aber-

Chi Psi Gets Forfeit To Keep Record Clean; Dealt Tau Delta Sinks Phi Kappa Sigma.

With only one forfeit to mar the afternoon's schedule, the intramural baseball program came to the end of its third week of the season with yesterday's games. Chi Psi and Sigma Nu remained among the undefeated leaders as a result of the afternoon's activity.

Participating in its first league contest to date, Sigma Nu won handily from Theta Chi, 10-1. The winners got seven runs in the first three innings, and topped these off with three more in the final frame. Stone scored Theta Chi's lone tally in the fifth inning.

Sandy Dameron, with a home run, and Morrie Long stood out for the winning nine, as did Byerly. All these men scored two runs and performed well at bat and afield.

Score by innings:
Sigma Nu313 000 3-10
Theta Chi000 010 0-1

A. T. O. Loses
Phi Sigma Kappa rallied in the last frame to break a 6-6 tie and win a game from Alpha Tau Omega, 7-6. Mitchell scored the winning run, as well as two others during the game.

After finishing the fifth inning trailing, 3-1, A. T. O. got five runs in the first half of the sixth. Phi Sigma Kappa came back with three to knot the count and won the game when Mitchell crossed the plate in the seventh.

Score by innings:
A. T. O.001 005 0-6
Phi Sigma Kappa 201 003 1-7

Grimes Wins
Climaxing their attack with six runs in the sixth inning, Grimes had no difficulty winning its second game out of three starts from Swain Hall, 11-3. The score was tied at 2-all until the last of the fourth when Grimes started to pull away and was never in danger thereafter.

Roberts and Kennerly played best for the Swain Hall nine, which was losing its third out of four, while Morrison and Schiffer led the winners. Watson, winning pitcher, hurled well and was never in trouble.

Score by innings:
Swain Hall200 010 0-3
Grimes200 216 x-11

Ruffin Scores
Bunching all its runs into the second, third, and fourth innings, Ruffin won from Everett, 9-5. It was the winners' first victory of the season out of four attempts. Everett braced at the close and got four runs in the last two innings, but to no avail.

P. Stein, in center field, played the best all-around game for Everett, while Snyder and Parker excelled for Ruffin. Joe Barbano pitched nice ball for the winners throughout the contest.

Score by innings:
Ruffin031 500 0-9

Dowd of Capital City Outfit Features
Play in Defeating Hamilton
By 7-5, 6-4.

The Chapel Hill high school net team annexed yesterday afternoon its first victory of the season in three starts on the University courts over Raleigh high school's representatives. The final score was 4 to 2. John Dowd of Raleigh was the outstanding performer of the day, defeating Horace Hamilton, 7-5, 6-4.

Bill Poe of Raleigh scored over Leon Russell after three sets. The scores were 7-9, 6-2, 6-1. Bill Hudson tallied for Chapel Hill over John Metz in straight sets, 6-1, 6-3. Mac Simmons of Chapel Hill added another victory over Murray Pool, 6-1, 6-3.

Dowd and Pool lost the doubles match to Hamilton and Simmons by default. Russell and Hudson teamed to down Metz and Poe after three hard sets of careful tennis, 8-6, 3-6, 6-4.

FINALS FOR DUKE MEET SET TODAY

New Entrants May Make Applications for Positions in Matches Today.

Anyone interested in playing in the first annual Duke-Carolina mammoth tennis meet which will be finished this afternoon is invited to play. Has Amassed 102 Points
To 68 for Duke.

PLAY WILL BE CONTINUED
Sponsors Hope to Increase Margin of Victory in Further Matches.

The Carolina tennis players, entered in the first annual mammoth net carnival between Carolina and Duke, amassed a sufficient number of wins yesterday afternoon to take the meet by a two-point margin. The score now stands Carolina 102, Duke 68, since the Tar Heels annexed twenty-five victories yesterday.

Play will continue this afternoon. Anyone who is registered in either the graduate or undergraduate schools of the University is eligible to play. Although the meet is already won, the sponsors of the meet hope to increase the margin of victory by many more matches.

Competition Keen Yesterday
In the play yesterday Carolina won thirteen matches in Chapel Hill and twelve at Duke. The brand of tennis was not on the par of any of the preceding days, but competition was keen.

Treverton of Carolina lost to Truesdale, 6-1, 6-3. Wall defeated Kelbean of Duke, 4-6, 6-3, 6-3. Stadium scored for Carolina over Prower 6-3, 6-2. Entwistle won his match over Wonsidler, 6-2, 2-6, 6-1. Stuart Aitken tallied off Duke's player, Cotton, 6-2, 10-8.

J. Morrison scored over Migdal of Duke, 7-5, 6-2. Powell defeated Mulne 6-1, 1-6, 6-4. J. Moore won over Grascion of Duke, 6-0, 6-0. O'Bryan of Carolina tallied over Kramer 6-2, 6-0. Werhunz won for Carolina over Campbell, 6-0, 6-1. Landon also won for the Tar Heels over Silver, 6-1, 6-2. Collyer of Duke tallied in straight sets over Cobb, 6-0, 6-0. W. L. Abernethy lost to Woolf of Duke 6-2, 6-3. Skinner lost his match to Eckles of Duke in two sets, 6-3, 6-3. Miller lost to Koenig, 6-3, 4-6, 7-5.

Chamberlain of Carolina lost his tilt to Getson of Duke 7-5, 6-4. M. Bell scored over Young of Duke, 9-7, 6-2. Paulsen of Duke tallied over Smith of Caro-

EUBANKS CHOSEN NEW POSTMASTER

Democratic Party Leader Receives Appointment Tuesday From Administration.

Robert A. Eubanks, local business man, assumed charge of the Chapel Hill postoffice yesterday, succeeding R. D. Herndon as postmaster.

Announcement was made of Eubanks' appointment Tuesday evening. Since that time he has been in the office familiarizing himself with his new duties.

Eubanks has long been a leader in Democratic party affairs here and was a member of the board of county commissioners at the time of his appointment. He has resigned his position on the board.

The local postoffice has a first class rating and is not under civil service regulations. The change of postmasters was not expected by local persons to be as sudden as this though it was known that the new administration would make a new appointment.

Correction

In order to re-state and re-word statements attributed to him in a recent interview concerning the Jewish persecutions in Germany, Dr. Meno Spann gives his further opinions on the subject in the following points:

1. The persecution of Jews is a shame, and unpardonable; however, psychological explanations must be found.

2. Individuals and nations in distress always have looked and always will look for a scapegoat for emotional relief.

3. The fact that the Jews are the scapegoat of the Germans must be understood historically. The orthodox and superstitious middle ages hated Jews for their religion; consequently they were not allowed to mingle with Christians or to follow a trade or craft. Only money-lending and usury was left to them, and this following made them more hateful to the Europeans. Therefore a tradition of hatred was established and continued through the centuries.

4. In the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, more and more Jews were found in the rank of liberal and progressive-thinking people. One of their racial characteristics — keen intelligence — made them spiritual leaders in most all liberal movements.

5. Present-day Germany is in the hands of reactionary, conservative forces, to whom liberal ideas are hateful. This makes it easier for them to kindle long-standing feelings of scorn, contempt, and hatred for Jews. Persecution of Jews gives to the despairing German public the same cheap satisfaction that Nero gave to homeless Romans in the persecution of Christians.

6. Dr. Spann did not intend to state that America or any other nation uses underhand methods, while he believes that there is an essential difference in the way Germans and other nations handle their national and public affairs. Whether it is to be called stupid bluntness or brave frankness, the Germans have always confessed their innermost feelings no matter how hateful they may be to people of other opinions. Either through hypocrisy or tact, other nations are careful not to reveal in print their innermost ideas. Many things look worse in Germany than they really are because of the over-eagerness with which opinions are expressed and publicized.

7. Considering it all, the Jewish persecution remains a stain

Beer in Nineteen States

The trump of bung-starters on countless kegs drummed a long-lost beverage back to the American scene yesterday. Lawful 3.2 per cent beer gushed in territory populated by about 70,000,000 Americans as nineteen states and the District of Columbia lifted a ban more than thirteen years old.

Sales Tax Approved

Completing its long and arduous labors on the 1933-35 revenue bill, the House finance committee yesterday morning voted to report to the House today a money-raising measure carrying a three per cent general sales tax and providing for increases in franchise tax rates on corporations. The bill also was amended to allow salary increases to state employees, in the discretion of the director of the budget, and not to exceed twenty per cent, should revenue yields prove to be more than anticipated.

Ehringhaus Is Assailed

A charge that Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus had used "hired lobbyists" to "coerce" the House into allotting $16,000,000 for an eight months school term that in reality won't guarantee a six months term, was made yesterday on the floor of the House by Representative Scarborough, of Richmond county.

TOWN OFFICIALS TO BE ELECTED TUESDAY, MAY 2

Candidates Must File Their Name in Town Hall to Get Name on Ballot.

The town of Chapel Hill will conduct its municipal election on Tuesday, May 2. The offices to be filled are the mayor, the judge of recorder's court, and three aldermen. Candidates for these positions are to file their names in the town hall in order to get their name on the ballot. If a candidate wishes to run and fails to file his name before the five day limit, he must provide his own ballot.

The retiring officers are Zeb Council, mayor; C. P. Hinshaw, judge of recorder's court, and M. E. Hogan, Clyde Eubanks, and J. T. Dobbins, aldermen. Thus far the only announcement of candidacy is L. J. Phipps for judge. He will not be opposed by Judge Hinshaw who has announced that he will not stand for re-election.

BOOK BY DABNEY RECEIVES PRAISE OF N. Y. CRITIC

Soskin Believes Press Release Should Be Considered for Pulitzer Prize.

Liberalism in the South, a volume by Virginus Dabney of the staff of the Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch, which the University of North Carolina Press recently brought out, should receive serious consideration by the Pulitzer prize committee when it decides on its award for the best historical work of the year, according to William Soskin, book critic of the New York Evening Post.

Mr. Soskin singles out the author "for his original and pioneering historical research and his artistry in composing the volume, a work that traces southern social movements, in terms of specific persons, organizations, episodes, and causes, back to the American revolution."

W. T. Couch, head of the University Press, says that since the Dabney volume was issued last October it has been reviewed by more than 100 newspaper and magazine critics and that about ninety-nine per cent of the reviews have been most favorable.

Although in some cases, he thinks, economic independence may be possible, he believes that social intercourse is inevitable. While the size of the earth remains constant, he pointed out, the means of communication are always improving, the natural result being that people are going to have more and more intercourse with one another.

ENGINEER'S FAIR BEGINS AT STATE

Invitations to Attend Extended to All North Carolina Schools.

Invitations have been received by the various engineering schools of the state to attend the annual State College Engineer's Fair, which is taking place in Raleigh this week-end.

The fair was inaugurated yesterday at 10:30 o'clock with the arrival of ten Army Bombers from Langley Field, Virginia. These giant bombers provided entertainment for the occasion with a program of aerial maneuvers over the city yesterday. Last night the engineers began a night street parade led by Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus, Dr. E. C. Brooks, president of State College, Dr. Frank Graham, and Dr. W. C. Riddick, dean of the school of engineering at State College.

Today, one of the bombers will be christened "The City of Raleigh." Mrs. George A. Isley of Raleigh will sponsor the christening.

Elaborate plans have been made for the fair and by all indications a number of the engineers of the state will be present.

"KING KONG"

To an amazed civilization is exhibited a cowed brute whose origin can only be guessed at and whose story has even the news reporters thrilled. Ann, golden and glittering in a beautiful Paris gown, reluctantly agrees to Denham's wish that she appear on the stage. Even though he is tightly chained, she is afraid to go near "King Kong."

Yes, "King Kong" knows fear, but it is for Ann. When photographers shove Ann about for pictures the Beast thinks his Beauty is in danger. Thunder rumbles from his throat. Chrome steel chains snap. Bars give away. Bedlam reigns in a great auditorium!

Driscoll rushes Ann into the hotel just across the street and into a room on an upper floor. "King Kong" gets out of the theatre by breaking out a wall. He saw Ann disappear into the hotel and now he climbs up its wall as easily as a fly. He snatches one girl from her bed. Finding she is not Ann he drops her, shrieking, to the crowded street.

Ann now knows that nowhere will she be safe so long as "King Kong" lives. He has found her. He carries her to the roof of the building, but when Denham and Driscoll pursue him there, he returns to the street. What is to be Ann's fate?

ANNUAL LECTURE SERIES DELIVERED BY DR. STOCKARD

Cornell Professor Addressing Sigma Xi Tells of Variation in Physical Constitution.

"One's constitution varies from time to time because chemical make-up changes. But a type underlies every constitution and is constant," Dr. Charles Stockard of Cornell University medical school stated here Friday night in concluding his discourse on genetics. Stockard delivered the annual Sigma Xi spring lectures here.

One may best understand the underlying type, Dr. Stockard said, by studying the extremes of its manifestation.

With this preface Dr. Stockard presented a series of lantern slides to exemplify his discussion of the experimental analysis of peculiar growth types thought to be associated with modifications in the glands of internal secretion, giving special consideration to the causes and development of dwarfs and giants, and other peculiar forms, as elucidated by genetic study of the various breeds of domestic dogs.

Thyroid Affects Physique

The thyroid gland, a large ductless gland below the pharynx, according to Dr. Stockard's revelations from practical experiments, determines the physical make-up of an animal in size, in weight, and in proportion. This is true of men as well as dogs—the two in genetic possibilities are extremely similar animals. The knowledge of the effect of the thyroid upon development has enabled the medical world to do much in correct-

MUSIC CONCERT TO BE OFFERED HERE TOMORROW

Proceeds From Program Will Be Used in Presentation of Dogwood Festival Here.

Lamar Stringfield, Mrs. Adeline McCall, and Ralph Weatherford will appear tomorrow evening at 8:30 o'clock in Hill music hall in a musical program sponsored by the Dogwood Festival committee. Proceeds from the concert will be used in presenting the first festival of the blooming of the dogwood here April 29.

Part of the program will consist of a group of flute solos by Stringfield, accompanied by Mrs. McCall. Stringfield is a holder of the artist's diploma from the Institute of musical arts of the Julliard foundation in New York where he studied under Georges Barrere, flutist conductor. He has appeared as guest conductor and soloist with several major symphony orchestras in the east. His first solo appearance with an orchestra in this state was made with the little symphony of the North Carolina Symphony society here in January. He also presented a solo recital of his own compositions here last year. He was for several years the conductor of the Asheville symphony orchestra.

The program tomorrow will include Sonata No. 4 in C major by J. S. Bach, Nocturn by Barriere, Syrinx by Debussy, Tityre by Roussel, and Poem by Griffes as flute solos. The trio will play Four Concert Pieces by Rameau and Mountain Sketches by Stringfield.

New Editor

Claiborn Carr, who will assume duties tomorrow as editor-in-chief of The Daily Tar Heel.

STAFF MEETING CALLED TONIGHT BY NEW EDITOR

All Members of Editorial Department to Gather at 7:00; Try-outs to Be Conducted.

All members of the editorial department of the DAILY TAR HEEL will gather at Graham Memorial tonight at 7:00 o'clock.

Claiborn Carr, newly elected editor of the paper, will preside over tonight's gathering, which will be conducted as a reorganization meeting.

The new administration will take charge of the publication Monday. At that time, Carr and Tom Walker, managing editor for next year, will come into office.

Staff members are especially urged to be present at the meeting tonight, as new policies will be explained by the incoming officials.

Any students desiring to become members of the staff are asked to attend, and try-outs for positions will be conducted. Previous experience is not necessary.

All reporters are asked to bring their style-books to the meeting tonight and turn them in to the managing editor at that time.

Phi Beta Kappa Will Initiate Tomorrow

Recognition will be accorded men who have during the past three years achieved scholastic averages of distinction tomorrow night when the Alpha of North Carolina chapter of Phi Beta Kappa conducts its annual spring initiation.

The meeting is set for 7:30 o'clock in Graham Memorial. Professor J. P. Harland of the classics department will be the principal speaker. New officers are to be installed.

In a session of the executive committee recently, new members were elected. The men chosen have been notified, but their names will not be made public until after the initiation.

Carroll to See Sophs

Dean Carroll wishes to see all sophomores in the Commerce school Tuesday morning at 10:30 o'clock in 103 Bingham hall.

Law School to Be Feted

The annual Law school banquet will take place Wednesday night at 7:30 o'clock in the Carolina Inn.

Students And Faculty Dissatisfied With Schedule Of Mid-Term Tests

Many Students Who Oppose Present Arrangement of Mid-Term Examinations Claim That Tests Are Often Assigned For Same Day, Preventing Sufficient Study.

Students and faculty alike seem to be dissatisfied with the present arrangement under which the mid-term examinations are given at the University. The trouble arises when a student gets three mid-terms on the same day. So worried is he about one exam that he finds no time to study for any of the others and does himself an injustice on two out of three. On the other hand he may attempt to cover the work for all three subjects in a twenty-four hour period. Then he gets a smattering in all of his subjects, and is terribly confused on the whole.

From the faculty angle, the mid-terms are not accurate because the student, unable to put forth his best effort on three subjects in a morning does himself and his subjects an injustice, and makes the system of "X's" and "W's" an inaccurate check on his work.

The Romance language department has a system of giving all mid-terms on one day, and professors, usually willing to be reasonable, place their tests on another day which will not conflict with the French or Spanish exams, and the system works out in much more satisfactory fashion for all concerned.

Want Fixed Dates

There does not seem to be any general desire for a mid-term examination schedule such as is used in respect to the finals, but students are of the general opinion that if every department fixed a definite day for such examinations, to be held throughout the department generally, and if two department days did not conflict with the majority of the students, the present system would be greatly improved.

Faculty members are also opposed to an examination schedule for mid-terms, since very few of them believe the examinations to be important enough to merit losing the amount of class time that would be inevitably wasted.

Freshmen Suffer

Particularly among freshmen who are carrying four subjects, in most cases two full credit and two half, complications arise. The period is seldom long enough to allow the student to finish the examination to his satisfaction and when his class-

Golden Fleece Has Tapped Many Who Have Become Distinguished

Highest Honorary Order on Campus Will Tap New Men April 27; President Frank Graham, Dean F. F. Bradshaw, Francis Winslow, Thomas Wolfe Were Fleece Men.

Stalking through Memorial hall on April 27, where the thirty-first enactment of a drama of high hopes and striving desires will be staged, two black-robed figures, emissaries of the Order of the Golden Fleece, will select a representative few for membership in the highest order on the campus. Founded in 1903 for the purpose of welding the University into a homogenous body where efficiency, fair play, altruism, and loyalty are the cornerstones, the Order of the Golden Fleece has inducted 267 men into ranks since that time.

Rising seniors, and sometimes, graduate students, who have shown marked degrees of leadership and integrity are selected. The number chosen varies between seven and twelve, last year eleven being chosen. The tappings have been singularly indicative of the fact that much care was taken in weighing the qualities of campus leaders, for a large number of those chosen have justified their selection by becoming prominent later in life for service to their communities, state, and the nation. Not once has a man been chosen of whom the University nor the Fleece could not feel justly proud.

A roll call of the 267 members would bring to the fore famous names in many fields. Among the charter honorary members were Professor Horace Williams, the late President E. K. Graham, well-known educator, and the late Eben Alexander, professor of Greek at the University, who at one time was ambassador to the land of the original Jasons.

Those tapped from the class of 1909 include names familiar to all. President Frank P. Graham, Kemp D. Battle, Francis E. Winslow, and Charles W. Tillett were chosen. The fields in which those tapped have later distinguished themselves in life are varied. Thomas Wolfe is now known as one of the best of modern American authors, Kay Kyser, an orchestra leader of some renown, Edwin E. Rives, a jurist, Francis D. Bradshaw, an educator.

The speaker for the occasion, who is usually a well-known figure in literature, politics, business, or religion delivers an address, the main point of which is character. After the selection of the new members the Jason reads the list. Following these ceremonies a banquet will be tendered to the neophytes.

The symbolism of the Greek myth is taken as the basis for the organization, as the names evidence. The president is Jason, vice-president, vice-Jason. The active members are Argonauts and the secretary is Gromodius. The treasurer is termed Christopher. Two representatives of each year's group of Argonauts are held over as active members of the succeeding body. Until recently all meetings except the tapping were held secretly, but now the order feels that it can be more effective and influential by working openly on occasions which justify a formal public statement.

Last year Henry Stevens, commander of the American Legion, was the principal speaker. Those chosen were: Archie Davis, Haywood Weeks, Stuart Chandler, Wilmer Hines, Charles G. Rose, Lenoir Wright, D. C. McClure, Tom Watkins, Billy McKee, Holmes Davis, and Tom Alexander.

Porter Will Address Student Forum Today

Paul Porter, field secretary of the League for Industrial Democracy, will speak at the student forum at the Presbyterian church this evening at 7:30 o'clock on the topic "The Social Consequences of the Depression." He will present the true story of the plight of the unemployed and farmers, and he will suggest means of relief for the situation.

Porter has made extensive investigation of the problem of unemployment, having visited numerous steel mills, factories, and shops in Pennsylvania and New Jersey. He also has made investigations during the textile disorders in North Carolina as the southern representative of the Emergency Committee for Striker's Relief.

NEW OFFICERS TO TAKE OVER REINS AFTER HOLIDAYS

Harper Barnes, President-Elect, To Succeed Haywood Weeks In Office April 26.

Harper Barnes, president-elect of the student body, will not take office to succeed Haywood Weeks until Wednesday, April 26, it was announced yesterday. The ruling of the student government is that officers be inducted into office two weeks after election, but the rule has been temporarily revoked to allow for the Easter holidays. The regular date for the installation would have been April 19. Lee Greer will succeed E. C. Daniel as vice-president of the student body on the same date.

Charles G. Rose will be relieved of the editorship of the DAILY TAR HEEL tomorrow by Claiborn Carr. Editorship of the Carolina Buccaneer will not be relinquished by Bobbie Mason to Pete Ivey until after the next edition of the comic magazine. E. C. Daniel will succeed Robert Barnett as editor of the Magazine with the first edition after the holidays. Class officers will be installed at the same time as the president and vice-president of the student body. The new president of the athletic association, Dave McCachren, will take office to succeed Harry Hodges probably on the same date.

Debate Try-outs Set For Tomorrow Night

Try-outs for the debate with Agnes Scott College of Atlanta, Georgia, will take place at a meeting of the debate council tomorrow night at 9:00 o'clock. The subject is "Resolved: That the socialism of Norman Thomas is preferable to the present system." Carolina will take the negative side. The debate is scheduled for April 24.

Next Thursday, April 13, Bill Eddleman and Phillip Russell will debate Georgia Tech on the affirmative of the question "Resolved: That Japan's foreign policy be condemned." The debate will take place at Gerrard hall at 4:00 o'clock.

Boston University will debate here on the subject of war debts April 14 at 11:00 o'clock. Alvin Kaplan and Edwin Lanier will try out against Don Seawell and Red Rankin before the debate council Monday night to determine who will uphold the Carolina side.

LIBRARY LEADERS CLOSE SOUTHERN CONVENTION HERE

Religious and Educational Leaders of Country End Two-Day Session Yesterday.

A two-day conference of southern leaders in education, religion, culture and social welfare, held under the auspices of the Southeastern and American Library Associations, closed here yesterday. More than 100 southern educationalists attended.

President Frank Porter Graham delivered one of the principal addresses yesterday, and Dr. L. R. Wilson, who for thirty years headed the library here and who is regarded as one of the leading librarians in America, spoke.

Makes Recommendations

Reorganization of local government to eliminate waste and to effect economy through reduction of operating expenses was the key-note of "conclusions and recommendations" adopted yesterday. Severely criticizing the present spoils system of government, and charging that "in many communities—there exists a complete waste of approximately fifteen per cent due to archaic and outmoded forms of local government," the resolution asserted that "the demands upon the social and cultural services of the government have increased rather than lessened." Howard J. Jones, who presented the resolution, stated that "this is particularly true of the libraries."

UNIVERSITY SENDS MEN TO TALK AT GREENSBORO HIGH

Saunders and Albright Interview Prospective Students on Program Friday.

J. Maryon Saunders, secretary of the alumni association and Mayne Albright, manager of Graham Memorial, were the University's representatives at a college day program presented at Greensboro high school Friday.

More than twelve institutions were represented on the program. Representatives from each spoke to the student body in assembly and then interviewed prospective college students during the remainder of the morning. The local representatives distributed literature about the University and reported favorable interviews.

Colleges sending delegates appearing on the program included Duke, Meredith, State, Hollins, Randolph Macon, Sweet Briar, Guilford, Elon, Greensboro College, Woman's College, and High Point College.

NOTED EDITOR TO TALK IN ASSEMBLY TOMORROW

Dr. Julian S. Miller, associate editor and columnist of the Charlotte Observer, will deliver his twice postponed assembly talk tomorrow morning.

Dr. Miller, who is an alumnus of the University, is known to be well versed in the affairs of North Carolina. Formerly director of public relations for the state last year, he headed the Governor's office of relief. Miller was for fifteen years editor of the Charlotte News.

Turning Over The Reins

With this issue of the DAILY TAR HEEL the present management turns over the reins of office to the newly-elected editors, with what little national and local reputation and respect that it might have built up during its regime. As was the case when the present out-going editors came into office, there is a responsibility which rests upon the shoulders of the newly-elected to advance the standing of the paper beyond the mark reached by the previous management. Nor can this be accomplished by the work of any individual. To do this there must be a combined cooperative effort on the part of every member of the staff. There must be a feeling of perfect harmony existing, without which there can not possibly be any development.

The DAILY TAR HEEL since becoming a daily paper has developed rapidly into one of the first ranking college dailies in the country. It has a well-earned reputation which has been built up from year to year. In the minds of college editors throughout the United States the DAILY TAR HEEL stands out for its liberal and uncensored expression through its editorial columns. It is one of the few college journals in the country that can boast of no faculty supervision whatsoever. Nor does it have to its discredit any breach of this right of free expression, which has brought unfavorable publicity to so many of the more important universities and colleges in America.

By means of its weekly news service it has kept in direct contact with all of the college dailies, and is not infrequently quoted for its editorial opinion. By special attention, its mechanical make-up has become as good if not better than the majority of its rival papers. And its conservative sports policy has received numerous favorable comments.

It is this reputation which was passed down last year that this regime hands on to the newly-elect. It is one which can not be claimed by every college paper. Yet it is one which many seek.

After having worked on the paper for four years, one is inclined to look upon it, not as just a campus activity, but rather as a means of campus service and campus development. It becomes a part of one's college life. The interest and enthusiasm that the present management has for the paper's future development can not well be confined to expressions in type and ink. There is an undying affection that only those who have worked on the paper can possibly experience. To see the paper's good name defamed would be hard to bear. Its present status must be upheld.

It is therefore with this sentiment predominant that the present management retires from office, wishing the newly-elect every success possible and eager to see the reputation of the paper carried on to even greater heights.

The Veneer Is Scratched Off

It is sometimes a distressing thing to realize that human nature changes little with the passing of the centuries. Culture, the progress of learning, the gradual evolution of civilization have done little towards changing that most constant and the inconstant fixtures of man, the thing we so glibly call "human nature." Religion and culture through their foster child, ethics, have given it a veneering of new paint making an illusion of newness, but when the paint is scratched off it glares forth like oak through mahogany varnish. It reverts a thousand years in a day.

In the quiet of a University classroom a week or so ago a professor told a class of the horrors of the Christian persecution under Nero, Emperor of Rome, tales of torture and suffering so unbelievable that it left his students cold; across the hall at the other end of the same building another professor recalled the terrors of the Spanish inquisition and the persecutions of England's "Bloody Mary." But man is a climbing animal, we say; he has dragged himself up out of the mud of primitivism and built up a social order which we call civilization. We have found a God, not a pagan god of Terror and Hate, but a Christian God of Love. Through religion, philosophy, and learning we have built our tower of Babel, trying to climb to a higher order.

Just when it is beginning to look almost as though man has indeed pulled himself up by his boot straps, as though he has learned to live in peace and harmony with his neighbors near and far, we see China and Japan, instigated by greed, hurled into another war, laughing at the empty pleas of our courts of peace. We see Italy and Germany writhing in the throes of men driven on by a lust for power, and racial feeling fanned to a heat by persecution.

The veneer is off. The war to end war was futile sacrifice, our international courts and leagues mere farces. Like a woman whose beauty lies in her paint, when the paint is washed away the beauty is gone. Culture, the progress of learning, the gradual evolution of civilization have made an illusion of newness, but the old still remains.—V.C.R.

State College Engineers Put on Informative Show

The Engineers' Fair at State College carried exhibits calculated to interest the public in the way of entertainment, to introduce the visitors to novel features, some of them spectacular in character.

There was, for instance, an ingenious device hinting, though not promising, the age-long dream of "perpetual motion." There was startling expositions of electric waves and sparks under low voltage plus high amperage. An electric eye and photo-electric cell. Amateur radio equipment of world-wide reach. Architectural models in ultra-modern style. These things were designed, naturally, to make an exposition of widely conceived engineering work the fair designed to catch the interest and excite the imagination of people remote from engineering experience of any sort.

In this the Fair succeeded admirably and its promoters are to be congratulated on their showmanship. But more to the point of the central purpose was the disclosure of the extent and variety of a work which has been built up quietly in the State to provide experts for engineering needs of all kinds in the State itself.

These needs include mechanical, chemical, civil, electrical, and ceramic engineering, but the scope of the activities shown under these heads is a revelation. College students, for instance, showed model sewage and water plants. They illustrated the development of native non-metallic minerals in our wide variety of clays and shales. They presented plans for airports and an infinite number of the undertakings featuring an inclusive engineering school.

Here is a great educative work that will inform and better the future. It is science, first, and its application second. Its student-like application as shown in the exhibits shows education hitched to life and ready to furnish the power the moment life, in our recent sense of what it means, gets to going once more.—Raleigh Times.

Cultural Shipwrecks Due to Depression

A sign of what the times have come to is the filing of a petition for involuntary bankruptcy against Brentano's in New York.

Brentano's was known throughout the world as the place in America where one could buy any book published and still extant. If the book was out of print, a rare edition, something that had to be uncovered, Brentano's would make the essay. It had a staff of experts in this and other countries. It was a species of international bank for literature. It knew all sources. It could deliver the goods.

Such a failure adds a cultural loss to the depression. It shows in sharp relief the effect upon masses of people who were addicts, people who made no noise but were following world-wide thought as it developed and was put on the printed page, who wished to scrutinize the thought of the ages.

For several years the mortality among this large class of book-worms must have been tremendous. A wanted book is possibly the easiest of all things to get along without. It is a species of gratification that is in one way the greatest of luxuries, but in a deeper way the most necessary food for desire.

Brentano's as the caterer to such a clientele has run on shipwreck. There is no telling how many casualties its failure reflects, or what in the last analysis the damage may be.—Raleigh Times.

THOSE NEW BOOKS

Hardy Perennial has usurped the place of Ann Vickers as the book most in demand from the Rental Library of The Bull's Head book shop. This novel by Helen Hull, author of last summer's Heat Lightning, is the story of a woman in her efforts to maintain a balance between her husband and her children, both in their relationship to her, and to each other.

Unfinished Symphony by Sylvia Thompson poses an interesting problem. An English playwright, tired of his shallow success goes Byronic. He flees civilization for "The Isles of Greece" taking with him his young daughter, Helena. Shut off from the world he is able to bring her up according to his classical formula. The father dies before the upbringing is quite complete. Unsympathetic relatives recall the girl to an artificial society. Of course the plot thus far is only a clever frame work on which to fabricate the rest of the story, which gains in interest and amusing situations with every page.

Some day when a sober minded graduate writes a thesis on "The Re-Entrance of 'The Noble Savage' into the field of Literature 1930-19—" Unfinished Symphony you may be sure will come in for more than foot-noted attention.

Bunga-Bunga is a bit of delightful nonsense heartily recommended for these days of spring fever. The English foreign office sends forth its most trusted servant. Sir Montagu (Codfish) Trumpeter, to clean up a condition alleged to exist on a certain island. But instead of suppressing the gaities of the place Sir Codfish, influenced by his new aide, takes part in them with great relish. Need we tell you that complications ensue.

Since "Cartography" is becoming a minor profession of ours, the Comic-Relief Map reproduced on the back jacket naturally claimed our rapt attention. The "Scale from here to there" is strangely edifying. Query: What relation has Van Loon's Geography to the publication of Stephen King-Hall's Bunga-Bunga?

But if the dog-wood has got you and you simply can't laugh it off, may we suggest a glance at our poetry shelf. There are the Mosher Books, which in makeup seek to rival the high simplicity of their content. In our collection you will also find several good anthologies which are now included among the dollar reprint editions.

And now if you still insist on being serious, The Years of The Locust will give you plenty to ponder over. Gilbert Seldes has dealt with the years of the depression (1929-1932) in the quick but penetrating perspective method of Allen in Only Yesterday (1919-1929) and Sullivan in Our Times.

And there is the college boy who thinks that should a man marry a pretty girl and a good cook he would be arrested for bigamy.—Brackety-Aack.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

To the Editor,

DAILY TAR HEEL:

It is with regret that the president of the student body is forced to resort to the open forum columns of the TAR HEEL to correct an erroneous report made by the editor of that paper through its editorial columns.

In criticising the present administration for not carrying out a particular campaign promise in regard to giving the engineering school a representative on the student council, the editor has intimated that the motive back of the promise was insincere and that the administration has made a last-minute gesture to fulfill its promise. The editor further stated that it had been claimed that it was impossible to bring up this matter before due to the fact that "student government was taken up too much with more important matters."

These criticisms are not only unfounded and unfair but are in direct violation of gentlemanly conduct in giving publicity to matters discussed in a definitely expressed executive session.

The editor was clearly informed that the student council has had the question of the engineering councilman under definite consideration since the beginning of its term of office. Both the student council and the dean of the engineering school can attest to that. The editor was further clearly informed that it was not the pressure of more important student government matters which has caused the unfulfillment of the promise.

It was explained that there were technical obstacles in the way of giving the engineering school a representative on the council, and the question could only be decided after the student council's honor system proposals of the last two years were disposed of. This was accomplished in due time at a Student Activity Committee meeting which was held in the middle of last quarter.

Until recently it has been a practical impossibility to get a definite expression of opinion on the subject, and now that the administration has been halted in its efforts to give the engineering school a representative on the Student Council, it feels that it has fully acquitted itself in doing all that it could do within its limited powers.

HAYWOOD WEEKS.

Students, Faculty Dissatisfied With Midterm Schedule

rooms are scattered it works a decided hardship on the student.

In some of the advanced sections the mid-terms are considered a nuisance and a waste of time by both students and faculty. The students do not expect to flunk advanced courses, nor do the professors feel that they are instructing people whose efforts need be watched and checked at every turn. With both it is not a question of passing or flunking, but of what passing mark will be received.

Cause Overwork

This quarter the combination of mid-terms, elections, and fraternity initiations has been a particularly vicious one. Working frantically, soliciting votes from seven to ten in the evening, studying from ten to twelve, and then rising at six in the morning to plant trees, shine shoes, and such is a short cut to a nervous breakdown. Many students, especially freshmen, have been driven at a pace equal to this for the last two weeks.

presided over yesterday's session. Among the speakers were William L. Polk, trustee of the Warren county library, Glenn Holloway, trustee of the Concordia Parish library of Louisiana, Miss Tommie Dora Barger, region field agent for South American Library Association who organized the conference, Carl N. Milan, secretary of the American Library Association, Dr. Wilson, and President Graham.

Graham, speaking before the conference yesterday, stressed the point that many of the great movements of history were inspired by books. "When the great potentialities in a boy or the great potentialities in a book get together the book becomes a living thing," he said. Graham stated that his observations had shown that University students from towns where there are library facilities usually make better progress in studies than boys who have been denied these facilities.

Dean Wilson advocated a wide survey of the library situation and publicity of the results. He also called for a training agency for librarians in each state, more attention by the best minds to library legislation, and further development of the citizens library movement.

"The public library is a symbol of the new South just as the private library was a symbol of the old South," William L. Polk stated. Taking the development of the library in his own county as an example, he showed how a citizen's library movement can overcome apparently insurmountable obstacles.

Tar Heels Cluck Way To 14-0 Victory Over Cadets

Fred Crouch Hurls Six-Hit Ball And Connects for Homer In Shut-out Victory.

VICK, PHIPPS STAR AT BAT

Peacock Also Gets Homer as Tar Heels Garner Fourteen Hits Off Two Hurlers.

With Fred Crouch pitching and batting in superb form, Carolina's baseball team won its second game of the swing into Virginia from V. M. I. yesterday by the one-sided score of 14-0.

After their twelve hit performance against V. P. I. Friday, the Tar Heel batters went on another spree in Lexington and blasted two Cadet flippers for fourteen bingles. Nine of these blasts were for extra bases. Coach Bunn Hearn's crew seem to have found a neat way of capitalizing on their power. Turning every hit into a run is an almost perfect policy.

Fred Crouch, pitching his second varsity battle, allowed only six scattered hits, came through himself with a home run, and turned in the first Tar Heel shut-out victory of the year. Johnny Peacock, colorful Carolina outfielder, also connected for four bases.

Vergil Weathers continued his heavy clouting, enrolling a triple and a double during yesterday's swinging. Johnny Phipps had two doubles, and Jim Dixon, Willie Powell, and Lamy McCaskill each clucked one for two bases to end Carolina's extra base smashing.

Thurman Vick and Johnny Phipps were the leading Tar Heel hitters, each getting three safeties in six trips. Vick came through with three stinging singles. Buford, with a pair of doubles was the only Cadet to

NET TEAM ADDS FIFTIETH WIN IN DEFEATING DUKE

Wilmer Hines Comes From Behind to Down Welsh in Feature Match.

Wilmer Hines featured in the fiftieth consecutive victory of the Carolina varsity tennis team yesterday as it won over Duke by a score of 8 to 1. Hines won in the number one position over Barney Welsh, 5-7, 6-3, 10-8.

Wilmer played good ball throughout the match, but the Duke player had slight edge until the last few games. When the score was one set-all and 5-3 in game and Welsh had match point in his favor he shot a soft ball into the net. From then Hines stepped into the lead and took the set, 10-8.

Lenoir Wright lost the only match of the day to John Higgins, 6-0; 5-7, 7-5. Ricky Willis won over J. Peake in three long sets, 6-1, 5-7, 6-3. Harvey Harris played well in trimming Morefield, 6-1, 6-2. Dave Morgan scored for Carolina over Butler, 6-4, 2-6, 6-3. Walter Levitan made short work of Nixon in straight sets, 7-5, 6-0.

Carolina won all three doubles matches with Hines and Wright teamed together to drub Higgins and Welsh, 6-3, 6-3. Harris and Levitan were paired in defeating Butler and Peake, 7-5, 7-5. Morgan and Harley Shuford downed Morefield and McNeil.

FOUR DORMS AND FIVE FRATS LEAD WITHOUT DEFEAT

Betas and Chi Psi's Lead Frat League; Carr and Best House Ahead in Dorm Loop.

Twenty intramural ball games were played last week as the current race for the campus championship ended its third week. When the last man was retired Friday afternoon, five fraternities and four dormitories were still undefeated in league competition.

In the fraternity circuit, Beta Theta Pi and Chi Psi, with three wins each, were showing the way, while Kappa Alpha and Sigma Chi followed with two victories apiece. Sigma Nu was the fifth member of this select group, with a lone victory to its credit.

Best House and Carr Lead
Best House and Carr were leading the dormitory loop, each of these nine having won all three of its games to date. Close behind in the race for leadership were the Laundry Club and Lewis with two victories each in as many starts.

In the fraternity chase several teams had met defeat only once, and were still within striking distance of the league lead if the leaders should falter. Phi Alpha, Phi Sigma Kappa, and Zeta Psi had dropped only one decision out of four starts, and Phi Gamma Delta and Sigma Alpha Epsilon had won two out of their three starts to date.

Aycock and Grimes were similarly situated, with two out of three records, in the dormitory league.

Last Week's Results
Last week Beta Theta Pi gained its victory by a forfeit over Pi Kappa Phi and Chi Psi advanced into a tie for the league with a clear-cut 11-4 win over Delta Kappa Epsilon and a forfeit over Lambda Chi Alpha.

Kappa Alpha staged a last-inning rally to nose out Phi Delta Theta, 8-7, and Sigma Chi won from Theta Kappa Nu, 7-2. Sigma Nu downed Theta Chi, 10-1, in its first start of the season.

Best House took the fastest game of all season from Swain Hall, 2-1. Both teams got all their runs in the first inning, and the playing time of the contest was only twenty-eight minutes. Later in the week Manly lost to the Best House nine on a forfeit. Carr crushed New Dorms in the only election day game, 19-3. Anglin, lawyer pitcher, gained his third win in a row, and kept his splendid record, by holding the New Dorms nine to three runs. Only four have been scored off him in the three games he has worked.

Lewis defeated Mangum, 2-0, in the second whitewash of the season, and the Laundry Club saw no action last week.

Tennis Program Resumed
The tennis program will be resumed this week after being stopped all of last week while the Carolina-Duke carnival was in progress. Ten matches will feature the first three days of the week when varsity courts will be used. This will be possible because the leading varsity and freshman players will be competing in the tournament at Pinehurst.

Grimes and Beta Theta Pi, leaders respectively of the dormitory and fraternity leagues, will both see action. Grimes, which has already won three matches, will meet New Dorms Wednesday and Aycock Thursday. The Beta netmen will oppose Sigma Nu Tuesday.

CAROLINA MAKES FURTHER GAIN IN DUKE NET MATCH

Nineteen Matches Forfeited as Tar Heels Take Twenty-Seven Matches.

In the final day of play in the first annual Carolina-Duke mammoth net carnival, the local players annexed twenty-seven matches of the forty scheduled. The final score of the meet now stands, 129 to 71. Duke defaulted in seventeen of the matches to be played in Chapel Hill.

At Duke, Carolina defaulted in but two matches, and won nine of the eighteen played. In those played here Harold Pruner (D.) defeated Collett, 6-1, 6-1; Young (C.) defeated Malley, 6-3, 6-3; and Oswald (D.) defeated Farr, 7-5, 6-1.

Those men who won for Carolina by forfeit from Duke are: Briggs, Carne, Rowe, Rhawn, Martinson, Gardner, Miner, Barber, Alexander, Goldfaden, MacLean, Branch, Mann, Miller, McCall, Patterson, Adams, and Bundy.

Matches in Durham

The results of the matches played in Durham: Lynch (C.) defeated Strand, 6-0, 6-3; McKee (C.) defeated Lee, 6-1, 6-3; Barnes (D.) defeated Olds, 6-1, 6-0; Henson (C.) defeated Tatum, 4-6, 8-6, 6-3; Eustler (C.) defeated Chalk, 6-4, 6-3; O'Connor (D.) defeated Grant, 6-1, 6-3; Busich (C.) defeated Mossbourg, 6-2, 6-3; Black (C.) defeated Houston, 6-0, 6-3; Humphreys defeated Nussbaum (D.), 6-0, 6-0;

Walker (D.) defeated Collier, 6-2, 7-5; Potter (D.) defeated Browning, 6-3, 7-5; Sullivan (C.) defeated Vann, 6-0, 6-1; Andrews defeated Steinhauer, (C.), 6-1, 6-1; Mason (D.) defeated Peed, 6-2, 6-0; Hasel defeated Weiner, (C.), 6-4, 6-1; Mallonee defeated Puryear, (D.), 9-7, 6-1; Mosenow, (D.), defeated Ressler, 6-4, 6-2; and Ellis and McCrary of Duke won by default.

FRESHMEN DEFEAT DARLINGTON PREP

Bernie Friedman Leads Freshman Net Team to Victory of 5-1 Over Georgia School.

The freshman tennis squad, led by Bernie Friedman, opened its season yesterday afternoon with a 5-1 victory over the Darlington school representatives. Friedman won his singles match from Ramsey Potts in straight sets, 6-2, 6-2. Potts was the southern boys' champion two years ago.

Mark Lynch, Carolina, was the victim of Joe Grier, present Mid-Atlantic junior champion, 6-2, 2-6, 6-2. Lynch played well but was unable to stop the Darlington player. Sidney Sobol scored over Bob Ellison after a long first set, 8-6, 6-1. Jimmy Johnston tallied over Bob Wyatt, 6-4, 4-6, 6-0.

In the doubles Friedman carried most of the responsibility in being paired with Sobol to win over Potts and Grier in straight sets, 7-5, 6-3. Lynch and Johnston were teamed to down Ellison and Wyatt, 2-6, 6-1, 6-3.

Hunter Lott, number two man did not compete due to illness.

Best House and the Laundry Club will play two games. Best House meets Manly Tuesday and Lewis Thursday, while the Laundry outfit will cross bats with Swain Hall Monday afternoon and with Mangum Wednesday.

Carr will oppose Ruffin Wednesday.

BIG ORANGE CLUB TAKES FINALE OF WINTER FOOTBALL

Shaffer, Snyder, McCachren, and Burnett Lead Their Team To 14-0 Victory.

A big orange team counted in the first and fourth periods to down a blue team 14 to 0 in the last game of Carolina's annual winter football practice held yesterday on Kenan field. About three hundred spectators attended the contest which was unusually fast and hard-fought in spite of the high temperature.

The winning team was made up of the most likely starters for next fall now out for the practice and in good shape. Woolen, Burnett, Shaffer, and Snyder made up the first backfield, while McDonald, McCachren, Daniel, and Montgomery also saw action in the Orange backfield. The blue backs were Martin, Jackson, Thompson, and Leonard at the start of the contest, while Jones, Kenan, and Kaveny also played.

Shaffer Is Big Shot

Shaffer was the big gun for the winning team. He scored both touchdowns, and made several spectacular runs, among which was the longest and prettiest of the afternoon. Just before the first half ended, he took the ball on his own fifteen-yard marker, cutting back around right end on a reverse, sidestepped several opponents, and dashed down the field fifty yards to the blue forty-yard line where Martin stopped him.

Snyder and McCachren, fullbacks, Burnett, half, and Woolen and Montgomery, quarterbacks, also showed up well in the winning backfield.

The orange men counted their first score about the middle of the first quarter on a pass. With Burnett, Shaffer, and Snyder taking turns carrying the ball the orange drove to the five-yard line where a fumble gave the blue possession. Martin punted out to the thirty-four. Snyder then made seven. On the

NETMEN ENTERED IN TOURNAMENT PLAY

Wright and Hines Will Engage Hall and Shields in Game This Afternoon.

Lenoir Wright and Wilmer Hines, number one doubles team of the Carolina varsity tennis combine, have accepted the invitation to play in an exhibition at Pinehurst at 3:00 o'clock this afternoon with Gilbert Hall and Frank Shields, national ranked players. This is a pre-exhibition match to the annual North-South tennis tournament staged in Pinehurst.

Eleven men of the varsity squad have been entered and will compete. They are: Hines, Wright, Richard Willis, Harvey Harris, Dave Morgan, Walter Levitan, John Dillard, Bill Minor, Harley Shuford, Lawrence Jones, and John McGlinn.

Those freshmen who will represent the school at the matches are Friedman, Lott, Johnston, Lynch, Sobol, Baukney, Linker, and Taylor. Howard Hoyt and Bernie Williams will also compete in the tournament.

Bryant Grant, number one player on the varsity last year passed through Chapel Hill yesterday afternoon on his way to the games. He will also compete. Among those men to play will be Gregory Mangin, Frank Shields, and Gilbert Hall.

Carolina Tracksters Swamp Georgetown In Informal Meet

CAROLINA TEAMS FACE HEAVY CARD IN COMING WEEK

Track, Frosh and Varsity Baseball, and Tennis Squads Scheduled to Play.

Carolina sports teams face a heavy card this week, with the track team, the varsity and freshman baseball teams, and the tennis team meeting opposition. In addition high school track teams will compete for the State championship here Friday.

Of prime importance is the annual North-South tennis tournament at Pinehurst, which begins Monday and continues through Saturday. The Pinehurst contest draws a large number of leading players from all over the country, and Coach Kenfield plans to take ten or fifteen players to the tourney. The Carolina representation will be selected from both the varsity and freshman squads.

Meet W. And L. Monday

The Tar Heel varsity baseball team will conclude its Virginia trip by meeting Washington and Lee Monday and Virginia Tuesday. They return home to meet V. P. I. Friday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock. The team journeys to Winston-Salem Saturday to meet Davidson.

Tracksters To Meet Navy

The freshman baseballers have two games scheduled for the week. They meet Durham high school here Tuesday and Oak Ridge here Thursday.

The varsity track team meets opposition in its first regularly scheduled meet with the Naval Academy at Annapolis Saturday. Navy is the leader among the eastern track teams.

Other events on the weeks program include the state high school tennis tournament here Thursday and Friday and the state high school track meet Friday. The first entries for this affair are from last year's winners—High Point, Charlotte, Westfield, and Winston Salem highs. High Point has entered twenty-four men and Charlotte, winner for three years previous to 1932, has entered twenty-eight men. Another duel between these two seems indicated.

Annual Easter Classic Scheduled For Concord

Carolina will meet Davidson's baseball outfit April 17 in the State's annual baseball classic—the Easter Monday Carolina-Davidson clash. The two outfits will meet on Webb field at Concord. All augury points to one of the best games of the collegiate season. Skinny Pearce, ace Davidson hurler, and Joe Griffith, Carolina's mound luminary, are slated to hook up in an old time chunker's duel. Tickets are being sold by the Junior Charity League of Concord.

SHEPARD CALL TEN TO SPRING PRACTICE

Spring basketball practice will begin at 3:30 tomorrow afternoon, Coach "Bo" Shepard announced yesterday. Shepard has called only ten men to the court, however. They are: McCachren, D.; McCachren, J.; Nelson, M.; Blood, E.; Thompson, H.; Beale, E.; Jones, C.; Long, M.; Aitken, S.; Glace, J. Practice will take place tomorrow, Wednesday and Thursday before the holidays. The schedule for after the holidays has not yet been arranged.

Track Team Inaugurates Season With Overwhelming Victory Over Catholic School

WIN ALL BUT ONE FIRST
Al Kelly, Giant Sprinter for Georgetown, Runs Century At Ten Seconds Flat.

Coach R. A. Fetzter's Carolina track proteges inaugurated their current season with an overwhelming victory over Georgetown University in an informal practice meet yesterday afternoon. More than 1,500 fans saw the dual which was staged on Emerson field.

The Tar Heels copped all but one of the possible fifteen firsts. This lone premier went to Al Kelly, giant sprint flash, who breezed through the century, hindered by a bad leg, in 10 seconds flat. Kelly was entered in several other dash events and the broad jump, but was withdrawn due to his ailing leg.

Small Georgetown Squad

The Catholic invaders brought only a small squad down for the meet. They did not enter all the events which a full team could easily have accommodated. The original intention of the visiting coach was to spend some time training in Dixie, but this plan had to be dropped.

The Tar Heels won all of eight events, taking first, second, and third in the mile, 220, 120 high hurdles, 44, two-mile, javelin throw, 220 low hurdles, and the 880-yard run. This is just a semblance of the fine form that the Carolina tracksters are showing for such an early time in the season.

In the javelin throw, Coach Fetzter has found a new hope who may be able to take the place of LeGore after LeGore's graduation and, in case of injuries, might replace either Chandra

COACHES OPPOSE BEER DRINKING BY ATHLETIC TEAMS

Majority of Mentors Are Opposed to "3.2"; Claim It Would Be Beery Bad.

College athletes look on with envy as a hungry nation slakes thirteen long years of thirst.

According to a recent survey conducted by a leading press group, authorities at the nation's representative universities and colleges declare in unanimity that coaches would continue to forbid their athletes to imbibe of "3.2" save under special conditions. Training rules will be just as rigorous as ever, and only in one or two institutions will beer be served in the college dining halls.

Here are some of the better known names who indicated strong opposition to any beer drinking by their charges: Lawson Robertson, head coach of America's winning Olympic track and field outfits for the past three years; William J. Bingham, Harvard athletic director; Jimmy Crowley, one-time member of Notre Dame's famed Four Horsemen of 1924 and now Fordham's new grid mentor; Harvey Harmon, Pennsylvania coach; "Pop" Warner, Temple mentor; Chick Meehan, Manhattan College athletic director; and Lou Little, Columbia.

The latter two, however, reserved some qualifications. Meehan affirmed he would not hesitate to prescribe "a bottle or two of ale for an athlete who is overtrained or stale." Lou Little says: "A glass or two of beer, occasionally, is all right for athletes, if they are accustomed to it."

CAST NAMED FOR JUVENILE PLAY TO BE OFFERED HERE

Junior Playmakers Will Present "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves" April 28-29.

The final cast for the Junior Playmaker production Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves, which will be presented in three performances April 28 and 29, has been announced.

The juvenile characters are as follows: Kimball Dyer, Ali Baba; Cameron Murchison, Abou Cassim, Ali's brother; Julia Booker, Zulieka, Ali's wife; Jean Breckenridge, Fatimah, Cassim's wife; Sonny Jordan, Kaja Hasson, the robber captain; Jane Knight, Morgiana; Julia Peebles, Ayesha; Huntington Hobbs, Abdallah; Harry Brooks, Ishak, Ali's son; robbers, Lauren McKinney, Sonny Kenfield, Henry Whitfield, George Hogan, John Van Hecke; handmaids to Morgiana, Carolina House, Edith Crockford, Jewel Hogan, Eleanor Carroll; dancing girls, Phyllis Bradshaw, Jean Hogan, Lila Marie Wright; slaves, Sandy McClamrock, Billy Koch, and Richard Bradshaw.

Two Performances

Ali Baba will be presented Friday night, April 28, Saturday afternoon and night. The Saturday afternoon performance is especially for the benefit of the children. The play will be presented during the Dogwood Festival for the benefit of those attending the festival who may be interested in seeing the production.

The Junior Playmakers have received a request to give an additional performance of the play at Raleigh, under auspices of the Raleigh Associated Charities organization. It is not yet decided whether this performance will be given however.

The play, which was adapted from the Arabian Nights story and directed by Harry Davis, will be produced with elaborate costumes and scenic effects. Oriental dances by the slave girls are being directed by Phoebe Barr. Mrs. Oramae Davis is in charge of costuming the cast.

Phipps, Croom, and McCaskill were the fielding stars for the Tar Heels, while Edmunds and Gerrara starred for V. M. I. Coach Hearn and the team are to hang around Lexington until Monday when they meet Washington and Lee in a return engagement for the third game of the trip. The Tar Heels whipped the Generals down here earlier this season. Andrews will probably hurl, Griffith being saved for Virginia the next day.

"Y" TO SEND OFFICERS TO TWO CONVENTIONS

The Y. M. C. A. will send a number of delegates to two state-wide "Y" conferences immediately following the spring holidays, according to an announcement yesterday by Harry F. Comer, "Y" secretary.

The annual joint conference of the women's and men's associations from all the colleges of the state will meet at Duke University April 28-30. All of the retiring officers of the "Y" cabinet together with the newly elected men will attend the meeting. A large delegation will also represent the local "Y" at the student's division meeting of the North Carolina conference of social service in Greensboro April 23-25.

next play Burnett shot a ten-yard pass to Shaffer who crossed the last line after a beautiful run. Kanner kicked the extra point.

Score in Fourth

The last marker came in the first of the final period. After some exchange of punts the orange took the ball on their own forty. Snyder hit the middle of the line for ten and Shaffer went twenty more off-tackle to the blue thirty-yard line. McCachren went in for Snyder and made twelve yards. A pass from McDonald to McCachren put the ball on the five-yard line from where Shaffer drove it over.

Kanner got set to kick but seeing it about to be blocked, picked up the ball and galloped around right end to the zero line and an extra point.

In the orange forward wall the work of Kanner, center, Barclay, guard, and Evins, tackle, was outstanding. Landis and Stevens, guards, and Ellisberg, end, looked best in the blue line.

Legal Fraternity Will Meet

The members of the Phi Delta Phi, legal fraternity, will gather Monday night at 6:30 o'clock in Graham Memorial for a supper.

FROSH "Y" MEN NAME OFFICERS TOMORROW

Officers of the sophomore cabinet for next year will be elected by the freshman friendship council at the weekly meeting of the Y. M. C. A. cabinets tomorrow night at 7:15 o'clock in the "Y" building.

Those nominated for office at last week's meeting were: president, Butler French, Jesse Greer, and Phil Hammer; vice-president, Marcus Lynch and B. S. Smith; secretary, Russell Mickle and Ralph Bergin; treasurer, Paul McKee, Billy Yandle, and Billy Anderson.

ler or LeGore in the line-up. Walter Armfield, diminutive sophomore, trailed LeGore by a scant seven feet and bested Chandler's throw. If he continues to keep up this fast pace Armfield will certainly make history as a spear tosser. The javelin throwers had to combat an eight-mile wind which blew into their faces, but LeGore heaved the spear 190 feet 5 inches.

Relay Event Provides Thrills

The varsity 880 relay was probably the most thrilling and hotly contested event of the afternoon. The Carolina combination of Higby, Trubnick, Gunter, and Alexander bested the Georgetown combine by some ten yards, and was clocked at 1:32.2.

In the freshman events, the Georgetown yearlings and the Carolina Tar Babies fought a closer meet. The visiting first year men gained a first in the 100 yard dash and seconds in the 220 and 440. The Carolina frosh ran their mile relay without competition.

New Beer May Be Legally Sold In Chapel Hill

City Official Believes Francis Act Abrogates Previous Legislation on Subject.

As the situation now stands, beer may be sold in Chapel Hill May 1 when the state law goes into effect, according to the opinion of a city official yesterday.

When the Francis act was passed to give the 3.2 percent drink to North Carolina, it did away with all special acts and clauses otherwise prohibiting the sale of beer. Chapel Hill once had such a provision, passed over sixty years ago, forbidding sale of intoxicating liquors within four miles of the University. Now that provision, so far as 3.2 drinks go, is out of effect.

Yet it is the opinion of students and faculty members that the beverage will not be sold in Chapel Hill. Legislators are at present working on an act saying when, how, and to whom beer may be sold, and one of the measures is expected to regulate consumption near colleges.

In fact, several colleges have already applied to the legislature for such regulation. One college wants the sale kept three miles from it. Indications are that such an act will pass.

In the meanwhile local merchants are biding their time, ready to place orders if legal beer is allowed in Chapel Hill.

Twenty-One in Infirmary

Twenty-one students were confined to the infirmary yesterday. They were: Frank Causey, Catherine Williams, E. C. Willis, W. E. Armstrong, Vida Miller, Jo Orendorff, N. L. Simmons, W. Hunter Lott, W. S. Roberts, F. T. Bender, Dan Kelly, Craig Wall, W. S. Rubin, R. W. Proctor, Jr., J. C. Parker, Mary Alice Ferguson, G. H. Holmes, David Bennett, L. H. Burke, William Liebowitz and Walter Gordy.

Salon Ensemble Will Lead Church Program

A musical program will be presented at the Methodist church at 8:00 o'clock tonight under the direction of Thor Johnson. The choir will be assisted by the Carolina Salon ensemble.

The program will include the Sanctus of Gounod by the choir and ensemble with Charles Templeton as soloist, and an excerpt from The Holy City by Gaul. Mrs. M. W. Durham will sing the solo part. Raymond Brietz, baritone, will sing Open the Gates of Heaven by Knappb. and David Bennett, flutist, will play Offertoire by Donjon. The choir will offer the Gloria from Mozart's Twelfth Mass.

Phi Mu Alpha to Meet

Phi Mu Alpha musical fraternity will meet in Hill Music hall tonight at 9:00 o'clock. The meeting will be in the form of a musical entertainment for members and pledges.

DR. MILLER SETS EDUCATION ABOVE PUBLIC SERVICES

Journalist Says North Carolina
Does Not Spend All Entrusted Funds Wisely.

Dr. Julian S. Miller, associate editor and columnist for the Charlotte Observer, yesterday delivered his twice postponed assembly talk. He was introduced by President Graham.

Dr. Miller emphasized the fact that everyone has all the means of success at his disposal, but he lacks a driver for these means. "My generation has failed and has proven itself prostitute. We are now ready to turn the reins over to the new generation. You must face the task of rebuilding and picking up fragments from the social structure and economic body." In that manner Dr. Miller bade the freshmen to prepare themselves for the great task that is before them.

Defends Education

In continuing, Dr. Miller said, "We face the task of bringing about a violent revision in government and citizenship. Democracy in this state has not functioned for the greatest good of the greatest number. North Carolina has not spent wisely all of the money the public has entrusted to it. I am not speaking of education—I defend it." So, Dr. Miller came to the problem that most interested his audience. He defended education by stating that it was unwise to spend 39 cents of every dollar for highways, and 30 cents for education. He expressed a belief that it was unfair to spend only as much for reduction as was spent on roads. Dr. Miller

SENATE TO WORK ON STATE GRANTS

Report of Conference Committee Set as Special Order for Consideration Today.

The conference committee report smoothing out difficulties between the House and Senate on the matter of appropriations for the next biennium will come up before the upper body this morning as a special order.

The report tendered by the committee carries an appropriation for the three units of the Greater University. Of this amount, $426,000 will come to the branch here.

The report was adopted last Thursday by the House, and as the figures included in the compromise are approximately the same as those recommended by the Senate, little trouble for the measure is expected.

House Considers Revenue

Meanwhile the House is busy working on the revenue bill, which contains provision for a general sales levy of three percent. Following adoption by the House of the conference report, this rate was made necessary for a balanced budget.

The anti-sales tax forces, led by Tam Bowie of Ashe county, are confident that they will be able to muster enough support to prohibit the adoption of such a levy. Bowie predicts that the assembly is heading toward another tie-up similar to the deadlock of 1931, when the assembly adjourned only after a session of 141 days.

BIDS FOR JUNIOR SENIOR DANCE GO ON SALE MAY 10

Bids for the annual Junior-Senior dances, which will take place during the week-end of May 12 and 13, will be on sale during senior week at one dollar to members of the two classes. Contracts for decorating and for the orchestra have been given, and junior class dance leaders have been chosen. Senior dance leaders are not yet known.

It was decided to charge one dollar for the bids in addition to class dues, only after it was considered necessary to continue the practice of holding joint dances for both classes. The two classes are contributing $300 each, with the remaining expenses to be raised by sale of bids.

Music for the set of three dances will be furnished by Bert Lown and his Hotel Biltmore orchestra.

For Fairness And Accuracy

—AN EDITORIAL—

To the Students:

With this issue of the DAILY TAR HEEL the new administration takes over the reins of the student publication for the coming year. Some changes in the general policy of the paper are necessary if it is to be made truly reflective of student sentiment, but these changes must come slowly and only after the wisdom of new policies has been demonstrated.

The new editor feels strongly that to be a good editor, he must be: Fair, Accurate, and On the Job. If he can live up to these three requirements, the TAR HEEL will show a vast improvement from the start in regard to both editorial writing and general news reporting.

As a first step towards attaining Fairness the new administration announces a system of competition for the various executive positions on the staff. In the past these positions have been handed out carelessly for one of two purposes; either for the nourishment of some favored reporter who has been picked by the administration for better things, or for the consolation of some member of the staff who has been gently placed upon the shelf, so to speak.

Starting with this issue, and for the next three weeks, there will be no executive positions on the staff. At the annual banquet Thursday night, two nominations will be made for chairman of each of the various boards. After the holidays, and for three weeks, these men will work for their respective positions. At the end of the period of competition, the staff will meet again, and the chairmen of the boards will be elected. Every staff member will have a vote.

Fairness must also be attained in regard to editorial comment. In that connection, the administration is working now on a plan whereby students representing different group opinions on the campus may compete for permanent positions on the editorial board. A board made up of representative students would assure a fair presentation of both sides of any student issue.

When controversies arise, communications will not be excluded from "Speaking the Campus Mind" simply because they are in disagreement with the editor.

Being Accurate and On the Job, the other two qualifications of a good editor, go hand in hand. A sincere effort will be made every day to get the news correctly and see that it is handled promptly. A co-operative staff, with all members well acquainted with one another and interested in the betterment of the paper, will be organized on the basis of the above axioms. Any individual not wishing to co-operate to the fullest degree will be dismissed. What is wanted is a closely knit unit, and we intend to have it.

Group Pictures Of Staffs To Be Taken

In order to fill out its page of publication groups the Yackety Yack requests that the editors of last year's Y. M. C. A. Handbook and Ex Hi-Y Paper as well as the editor of the Carolina Engineer inform the members of their staffs that group pictures will be taken tomorrow afternoon beginning at 2:30 o'clock.

Don Shoemaker is requested to be present with his Handbook staff promptly at the above mentioned time. Eben Alexander and the Ex Hi-Y staff are requested to be on hand to have their picture taken next. And lastly George Gorham and the Carolina Engineer staff will have their picture taken.

Applications for Handbook

The "Y" office announced yesterday that all applications for the editorship of the freshman handbook are due Wednesday night. The applications must be made in writing and given to either John Acee or Bill McKee. A list of the applicant's literary experience should be included in the application.

House Makes Announcement On Holidays

Misinterpretation of President Frank Graham's holiday announcement on March 25 caused the issuance of a statement yesterday by R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, to the effect that official holidays for the University do not begin until noon Saturday and that all Saturday classes prior to that time must take place on regular schedule. Classes will be resumed after the holiday at 8:30 o'clock, Monday morning, April 24.

House's statement came as a result of the rearrangement of schedules by several instructors for the convenience of home-going students. He also stated that no 12:00 o'clock or afternoon classes will be in order.

Spring holidays were originally planned to begin Saturday, March 11, but were postponed by President Graham in view of the complications which threatened to arise from the national and state-wide banking holiday.

Di Senate To Discuss Inflation Of Currency

The Dialectic senate at its regular meeting tonight at 7:00 o'clock in New East building will discuss the following questions: Resolved: That the Dialectic senate go on record as favoring the inflation of currency; and Resolved: That the Bowie-Cherry bill represents a short-sighted policy on the part of some of the state's legislators, and should be defeated even if this necessitates the enactment of a sales tax.

The treasurer announces that all members are expected to make payment of dues at this meeting.

University Plans Entertainment
For High School Debaters
And Athletes.

Debaters and athletes from sixty state high schools will meet in Chapel Hill Thursday and Friday in the annual high school week sponsored by the University. A complete program of debates and athletic events was announced yesterday by E. R. Rankin of the extension division.

The week's activities will begin Thursday morning with the preliminary matches in tennis. At 2:00 o'clock in the afternoon a general meeting of all debaters and teachers will take place in Memorial hall with Dean N. W. Walker presiding. Drawings for pairs and sections in the elimination debates for the Aycock cup will be in order.

STUDENTS ASKED TO ACCOMMODATE SCHOOL VISITORS

Following a long-standing custom, the student body is to act as hosts to the high school boys and their coaches during the annual high school week Thursday and Friday.

The freshman friendship council, in charge of providing lodging for the various teams, has announced that beds are needed for 220 boys and thirty-five coaches. Residents of dormitories and fraternities are urged to double-up with their roommates and invite one or more of these guests to occupy their bed. Where it is absolutely necessary, the buildings department will supply an extra bed for the room.

The names and home addresses of these boys and coaches are now posted in the lobby of the Y. M. C. A. and a student may sign up at the registration desk to entertain any boy he prefers.

The freshman friendship council canvassed both dormitory and fraternity rooms last night in order to give all the students an opportunity to express their desire to entertain guests.

The visiting boys and coaches will provide their own meals.

John T. O'Neil Elected President
With 97.5 Average; Engstrom
Also Has "A" Average.

Twenty-nine juniors and three seniors were initiated last night into Phi Beta Kappa, national scholastic honorary society, as Alpha of North Carolina chapter gathered in Graham Memorial for annual spring elections.

John T. O'Neil of Henderson, with a three-year scholastic average of 97.5, automatically became president, and Alex B. Andrews, II, of Raleigh was named vice-president. A. G. Engstrom of Belvidere, Illinois, had the same average as that of O'Neil, but as he is a senior this year, the position went to O'Neil, a rising senior.

The main speaker of the evening was Dr. J. P. Harland, who spoke on old Greece. He declared that moderns have a lot to learn from the early Grecians and touched on major problems of the day.

The juniors initiated were Fred Jackson Allred, Alex Boyd Andrews, II, Maurice Victor Barnhill, Jr., Thomas Winfield Blackwell, Jr., William Fisher Blount, Melvin John Brown, Whitfield Cobb, Jr., Ansley Cope, Alfred Garvin Engstrom, Sydney Franklin, Frank Ginsberg, William Clyde Griffin, C. SALON ENSEMBLE TO PLAY ON TOUR

Orchestra Directed by Thor
Johnson Will Play Concert Series at Winston.

The Carolina Salon ensemble will play a series of concerts in Winston-Salem and vicinity April 20-23, according to an announcement by Thor Johnson, conductor of the group.

Members of the ensemble will meet in Winston-Salem Friday, April 21, for rehearsal and will present an afternoon concert at Clements high school. Friday evening the group will offer the major concert of the series in Memorial hall at Salem College. A radio program is scheduled for Saturday afternoon and a concert at the Arcadia high school Saturday night. The series of concerts will be concluded with an appearance at one of the churches of the city Sunday, April 23.

Complimented by Critics

The Salon ensemble appeared in Winston-Salem last April and received very complimentary notices from critics. A number of civic organizations applied to Raymond Brietz, business manager of the ensemble, during the fall quarter for sponsorship of this year's program by the group. A compromise was finally effected by which a number of these organizations will jointly sponsor the Salem College appearance.

Assisting the ensemble as soloists will be Harry Lee Knox, (Continued on page two)

The End of a Spoils System

It was announced at the first meeting of the TAR HEEL staff under the new regime that appointments to executive offices are to be a thing of the past. It has been customary in former years for the editor to assert his authority upon entering office by appointing various members of the staff, for various reasons, to executive positions. But with the coming in of the new administration, executive officers are to be chosen, as nearly as possible upon the basis of merit.

Competition is not only the life of trade, but the very life-blood of a daily newspaper, and it is up to this standard which the future leaders of staff divisions will have to measure. Every member of the TAR HEEL will start, so to speak, from "scratch." This does not mean, however, that the capabilities and the past work of a staff member are to be ignored, for they will obviously assert themselves all the more under the pressure of competition.

But there will be more than merely competition among members of the staff. With this alone the editing of the paper would be well-nigh an impossibility. There must be linked with competition the co-operation that is necessary to any form of group effort, and most of all necessary to giving the student body a paper whose judgment it shall respect and whose opinions it shall mirror.

With this step, which the staff believes is decidedly a forward one, the DAILY TAR HEEL goes to press. With the constructive criticism of the student body and its unstinted support throughout the coming year, the publication should push forward into the topmost ranks of the nation's foremost college dailies.—A.T.D.

Mid-Term Quizzes By Schedule

In a front page story Sunday the DAILY TAR HEEL presented student and faculty sentiment on the present method of scheduling mid-term quizzes, a predominance of which in both groups seemed to be in opposition to the existing system. The fact that the method now in vogue has proven unsatisfactory from both points of view is as scathing a condemnation as could be made, and so simple is the solution if it receives the support of all the departments that the continuance of the present method is entirely unwarranted.

It is not infrequent for students to have two and even three mid-terms on the same day, and nearly always the whole group of tests come within a period of two or three days. In the instance where the student has more than one quiz on the same day his attention is so divided that unless he be an exceptional scholar he fails to do justice to any. If he concentrates on one, the others suffer completely; and if he endeavors to cover them all, he acquits himself favorably on none.

From the viewpoint of the faculty the situation is equally as bad. The purpose of the mid-terms, as we understand it, is to enable the faculty to obtain an idea of the trend of work being done by the students. Under the present system where the student is unable to put forth his best effort his mid-term quizzes do not present an accurate picture of his work, and on the other hand frequently give the professor unfavorable opinion of his ability.

Two solutions to the difficulty present themselves immediately, and upon further investigation more may be forthcoming. The first is an arrangement based upon departments, where each department would be assigned a certain day in which to give all of their mid-terms. There is, however, one salient objection to this plan in that many students are taking more than one subject in a department. The second solution, and one that takes care of this difficulty, is a schedule by class hours arranged similarly to the regular examination program.

Some change of a surety should be made for a better cooperation between students and faculty, and the latter plan seems most peculiarly suited to the situation.—V.C.R.

The Old Gives Way To the New

Emerging from the hottest political battle that this campus has ever seen, the student body is primed and loaded with 'I-told-you-so.'

The large minority faction, with the sting of defeat still smarting, is apt to do the human thing, ridicule the victorious at the first opportunity. This might get the venom out of our system, but does it get us anywhere? Maybe the campus election was a mistake—so what? The least we can do is to make the most of it. If we mock and ridicule the elected, we not only bring their efforts naught, but we defeat our chance to enjoy efficient student government. If we have criticism to offer, we should realize that men like Barnes, Daniel, Ivey and Carr are open minded enough to accept them to their faces rather than have them circulated behind their backs.

A football team that doesn't cooperate doesn't win games, and a student body that doesn't cooperate cannot attain efficient government. If you were a member of the All-Campus Party, the University Party, or the Proctor Party, forget it, you are now members of the student body; your job is to put the University across to the state of North Carolina, to learn how to make a living. Over the holidays let us forget the harsh words of the campaign and come back with a spirit of cooperation that equals the one shown when the University faced a recent crisis. After all student government is our fight too.—B.C.P.

Senior Privileges

When is a senior not a senior? When is a student at the University entitled to have his bills paid by the treasurer of the senior class although he contributes nothing to the wealth of that class? This perplexing controversy has again reared its head upon the campus and it behooves us to reflect that it is high time something of a definite nature was done about it else it may go on forever, bobbing up each spring to annoy senior class presidents and to furrow the brow of the senior class treasurers.

The situation is brought about by the custom of students entering professional schools transferring at the end of their third year. This means that every year in the schools of law, pharmacy, and medicine, there are students who are completing their fourth year at the University and who are by some indistinct ties connected with the senior class as well as the respective class in the professional school. They evidently consider it their privilege to enjoy all social activities of the class although they contribute nothing toward bearing the expense.

Each senior normally pays a class fee calculated to cover the cost of individual space in the annual and photographer's charges, as well as the cost of senior social activities. Although students who transfer at the end of their third year to a professional school do not pay this class fee, they consider themselves seniors and consequently they see no reason why the class should not pay for their pictures as well as for the space in the Yackety Yack.

More than fifty students in this category have had pictures made this year by Wootten-Moulton and have charged the cost to the senior class. Such a state of affairs obviously cannot be maintained. The question should be looked into and the annoying disturbance settled. As it is, the same trouble arises every spring, causes a lot of confusion and then subsides. If the disturbance means that certain persons are deliberately attempting to "chisel" the senior class and the Yackety Yack, then the student council should investigate. If the whole affair is merely a complicated tangle in which innocent persons are involved, then it should still be investigated so that the senior class may not suffer financially. But whatever the case may be, it is disgraceful to allow the condition to remain as it is.—R.H.B.

With Contemporaries

$1500 for a Band

The Junior Prom committee has just completed unsuccessful negotiations to obtain Cab Calloway of New York and his orchestra for the dance. The committee agreed to pay a minimum of $1500.

We are surprised at such small thinking on the part of the Junior Prom committee. Has no one on this campus any ambition?

Why be cheap skates and pikers? While we're at it, let's be broadminded. Why not get Stowkowski and the Philadelphia symphony orchestra? It would cost a mere few thousand more. Why not send to Russia and get the Moscow theater musicians?

For that matter, why not transport the entire prom to the Coconut Grove in Los Angeles or Sloppy Joe's in Havana and throw a real celebration? Money isn't everything, you know.

But seriously, even though the banks are open and Roosevelt's unemployment program is well under way, we can see no good reason why the Junior Prom committee should even offer to pay so large a sum to obtain an orchestra from New York for a dance in Baton Rouge.

A committee which paid a band $400 last year met with more than a little criticism; now another group blandly proposes to pay $1500.

A charge of two dollars a ticket would be too high, but even this would necessitate the sale of 750 admissions to pay the band alone, not considering other expenses. But, then, the committee might say, many people would come merely to see Cab Calloway, and besides, the contract is to be underwritten by downtown business men. That's the spirit! If you can't soak the students, soak the visitors and the underwriters!

Senator Long may not be right in saying that a better orchestra can be gathered on the university campus, but he is undoubtedly correct in implying that the Junior Prom committee can come much nearer home and spend much less money and obtain music that will at least satisfy everything except an overgrown desire for publicity.—L. S. U. Reveille.

ine Parr will be characterized in order. Since Miss Skinner's first performance of her interpretations she has received world-wide applause. After an initial presentation in London, one critic asserted that "to come under her magic spell is worth living and waiting for." She has recently completed a successful eight-weeks engagement in the Avon Theatre, New York.

Not only is Miss Skinner a talented actress and playwright, but she has gained honors from her poetry and articles appearing in many national magazines. Her stage debut was made in a small role in Blood and Sand, and since then she has appeared in numerous outstanding successes, including Tweedles, In The Next Room, and The Wild Westcotts.

Otis Skinner, her father, who has been called dean of the American theatre, was the featured actor in Miss Skinner's well known Captain Fury.

"We must revise some of the functions of this state government so that it will do some good. No nation," continued Dr. Miller, "has the right to expect to survive, when three per cent of its citizens control all its wealth. I have often been called a Socialist, but I am not that. I believe in a democracy that is moralized. The greatest blow has been dealt in the realm of faith. This 'accounts for the spirit of defeatism and complex that we have today.'"

Dr. Miller concluded his talk with special emphasis on the lack of a government with a soul and on the need for one.

Preliminary debates begin at 7:00 o'clock Thursday night, with matches taking place in fourteen auditoriums on the campus. Four debates will be waged in each hall, and the fourteen winning affirmative and negative teams will be chosen. Friday morning the winning affirmative teams will speak in the Phi hall and the negative in the Di hall. One team from each group will be chosen to compete in the finals Friday night for the Aycock cup.

The eighteenth annual inter-scholastic tennis tournament will be run off Thursday and Friday on the University courts, and the twenty-first track meet will take place all day Friday.

Presentation of medals and cups to the athletic winners and the Aycock cup to the debating champions will take place Friday night after the debating finals in Memorial hall. At 9:30 o'clock a reception will be tendered to the visitors by the student union in Graham Memorial.

'Y' Group Returns From Eastern Trip

Six University students representing the Y. M. C. A. returned Sunday night from a three-day deputation trip to New Bern. Jack Pool, president of last year's freshman council, led the group.

A series of public appearances and educational talks comprised the team's program, including special performances at New Bern high school, four grammar schools, the Craven county home, and the Negro high school. A banquet and dance were given in honor of the deputation team by the Hi-Y Club of the city.

The speakers of the team were Phil Hammer and James Craighill. A musical trio was composed of Charles Edwards, Roy Rosser, and Tom Hicks. All except Pool, the leader, were freshmen.

'KID FROM SPAIN' SHOWS FOR LAST TIMES TODAY

Eddie Cantor's new starring picture, "The Kid from Spain," is being shown for the last times today at the Carolina theatre. Cantor is supported in the feminine lead in this fast-moving comedy by Lyda Roberti, new Paramount comedienne who is the leading exponent of the hot-cha-cha style of singing that Americans call their own. Curiously enough her electric, quivering and quaking rhythm is not at all like Eddie's nervous, jerky cantations.

Circulation Manager Of Daily To Be Named

The Publications Union board will convene this afternoon at the office of Professor J. M. Lear at 109 Bingham hall to select next year's circulation manager for the DAILY TAR HEEL.

How To Avoid BONERS

A GOITER IS A MUSICAL INSTRUMENT

THERE ought to be a law against people like Bill Boner! He even thinks an escapee is a staircase outside a house.

Still—he might be cured, if somebody would convert him to pipe smoking. For a good pipe with the right tobacco is man's first aid to clear thinking and wisdom. As for the "right tobacco," that's easy. A recent investigation showed Edgeworth Smoking Tobacco to be the favorite at 42 out of 54 leading colleges.

Carolina Wins 2-1 Victory From W. and L. Generals

Andrews Pitches Six-Hit Game; Croom Leads Tar Heel Hitters With Two Singles.

Playing errorless ball behind the six-hit pitching of Nathan Andrews, rookie hurler, Carolina's baseball team rode home with a close 2-1 victory yesterday over the Washington and Lee Generals. Johnny Peacock clucked his second home run of the current trip and scored Thurman Vick ahead of him for the margin of the win.

The win yesterday in Lexington was the third straight triumph for the Tar Heels in as many contests against Old Dominion competition. It was also their second win over the Generals, Carolina having beaten them here earlier in the season, 5-1. The Heels' conference record now stands at four wins and no losses.

Double Play Ends Game
The game with the Generals yesterday was close throughout. Sauerbrun, General twirler, was stingy with his base knocks and all the Tar Heels could slip off with were five widely scattered ones. Carolina held a one run margin coming into the closing stanza, but the Generals put on a belated rally which came very near taking victory away from the Tar Heels. The tying run was on first with one out, when Virgil Weathers scooped up a stinging blow, tossed it to Johnny Phipps and on to Jim Dixon at first for a double play and the

GRANT TRIUMPHS OVER MANGIN IN TWO SET MATCH

Hines Gives Frank Shields Excellent Fight But Loses Match, 4-6, 6-2, 6-3.

Bitsy Grant chalked up his first win of this season for the University Sunday afternoon in an exhibition doubles match at Pinehurst. Since Wright, Hines, Morgan, and Shuford were on hand, a five man team match was played.

Hines and Wright had been scheduled to play an exhibition match with Shields and Hall. Bitsy Grant, number one player on the varsity last year, won the only match for the Carolina representatives. The score of the team match was 6-1.

Grant Wins from Mangin
Grant scored over Gregory Mangin of Newark, N. J., recent winner of the national men's indoor championship, in straight sets, 6-4, 6-4. Wilmer Hines showed very well in extending Frank Shields to three sets. Hines played excellent tennis in the first set to win 6-4, but Shields came back strong and took the next two, 6-2, 6-3.

Lenoir Wright did well in his singles match with Gilbert Hall, although he lost in straight sets. Wright dropped the first set 6-4, but he had Hall worried in the second tilt which he lost 10-8. Harley Shuford was matched with Berkely Bell from whom he took six games. The scores were 6-4, 6-2. Dave Morgan lost to Rainville 6-2, 8-6.

In the doubles the Carolina boys were entirely outclassed though they staged a good battle. Hines and Wright were teamed against Mangin and Bell, one of the best doubles combinations in the country. The Carolina boys lost 6-3, 6-3. Harley Shuford and Dave Morgan were defeated by Shields and Hall.

Johnny Peacock, Carolina outfielder, who yesterday got his second home run of the northern trip to score Vick and give the Tar Heels their second win over the Washington and Lee Generals.

LEVITAN DEFEATS WRIGHT TO TAKE SECOND POSITION

Wilmer Hines and Walter Levitan Advance to Quarter Finals at Pinehurst.

Walter Levitan's unexpected win over Lenoir Wright yesterday afternoon in the first day's play of the annual North and South tennis tourney at Pinehurst not only advanced him to the quarter-finals but also made him number two player on the varsity. Wilmer Hines also advanced to the quarter finals.

Levitan in Top Form
Levitan was playing about his best tennis of the season, but Wright was entirely off his game. Lenoir was missing soft shots and making many errors on his overhead shots. Frank Shields eliminated two Carolina freshmen, Johnston and Primrose, allowing but one game in the four sets.

Results of the first round: Ricky Willis (C.) defeated Sobol (C.), 6-3, 6-2; John Dillard (C.) won by default from Brice; Johnston (C.) defeated Taylor (C.), 6-2, 6-1; Primrose (C.) won from Vaukney by default; Howard Hoyt (C.) won from George Doe by default.

Results of the second round: Linker (C.) defeated Power, 7-5, 6-3; Gilbert Hall defeated Harvey Harris (C.), 6-2, 6-3; Levitan (C.) defeated M. Lynch (C.), 6-0, 6-2; Shuford (C.) defeated McKay, 6-2, 6-1; Shields defeated Johnston (C.), 6-0, 6-0; Primrose (C.) defeated Hoyt (C.), 7-5, 6-4; Bryant Grant defeated Vail, 6-2, 6-2; Baukney (C.) defeated Hawk, 6-2, 6-1; Wright (C.) won from Bryan by default;

Jones Pushes Rainville
Hines (C.) won from DeFina by default; Willis (C.) defeated Bruneau, 6-1, 6-1; Stockton defeated B. Williams (C.), 6-3, 6-1; Rainville defeated Jones (C.), 6-3, 4-6, 6-1; Friedman (C.) defeated McGlinn (C.), 6-2, 6-1; John Higgins, Duke, defeated J. Dillard (C.), 7-5, 4-6, 6-2.

Results of the third round: Wilmer Hines (C.) defeated Clark, 6-0, 6-1; Walter Levitan (C.) defeated Lenoir Wright (C.), 3-6, 6-4, 6-2; Shields defeated Primrose (C.), 6-0, 6-0; Gilbert Hall defeated Shuford (C.), 6-1, 6-4.

Beta Theta Pi, 1932 Tennis Champions, Loses Match To Sigma Nu.

Only one forfeit marred the afternoon's schedule as the intramural baseball program entered its fourth week yesterday. The Laundry club, Sigma Chi, and Sigma Nu were the only leaders to see action and all won handily.

The Laundry club took over Swain Hall, 9-1, as Don Jackson hurled good ball throughout the game. The Swain Hall outfit tallied only in the sixth inning when Myers crossed the plate.

Sigma Nu 141 128 x-17

Delta Tau Delta Loses
Adkins, Sigma Chi pitcher, applied the whitewash brush to Delta Tau Delta, setting them down 9-0 as his teammates pounded out their third win of the season in as many starts.

Score by innings:
Delta Tau Delta 000 000 0-0
Sigma Chi 011 052 x-9

Phi Deltis Bow
Phi Sigma Kappa got five runs in the fourth to defeat Phi Delta Theta, 8-4, in a well-played contest. The victory was the fourth out of five for the winners and marked the third defeat in four starts for Phi Delta Theta. Scott, of Phi Sigma Kappa, drove a homerun as did Wolslagel, of Phi Delta Theta.

Score by innings:
Phi Sigma Kappa 200 510 0-8
Phi Delta Theta 103 000 0-4

T. E. P.'s Score
Phi Kappa Sigma dropped a 4-1 decision to Tau Epsilon Phi in a game which terminated with the fifth inning by agreement. Murray Kanner, T. E. P. pitcher, fanned nine in his five innings and allowed only one hit.

Score by innings:
Phi Kappa Sigma 000 10-1
Tau Epsilon Phi 211 0x-4
Phi Gamma Delta gained its third forfeit victory of the season, this time at the expense of Sigma Phi Sigma.

TENNIS RESULTS
Beta Theta Pi, 1932 campus champion in tennis, lost its first match of the current season to Sigma Nu, 2-1. Reid, a veteran, gained the Betas' lone point when he won from Old, 5-2, 5-3. Trainer dropped his singles to Ken Byerly, 5-2, 5-2. Byerly and Old then paired to down Reid and Trainer, 4-5, 5-2, 5-2. Kappa Alpha lost to Phi Kappa Sigma, 3-0. Odum defeated Schriver, 5-1, 5-1, and Carson beat Cossett, 5-3, 5-3, in singles. The doubles went to Phi Kappa Sigma by default.

Chi Psi took Phi Alpha, 3-0, as Atwood beat Levitt, 5-1, 5-4, and Loughlin downed Schulman, 4-5, 5-3, 5-1, in singles, and Phi Alpha forfeited the doubles match.

Jones, of Aycock, beat Singer, of Manly, 5-3, 5-3, and Manly forfeited the other singles match and the doubles match to give Aycock a 3-0 win. Sigma Phi Epsilon won from Theta Chi, Kappa Sigma from Theta Kappa Nu, Atlantics from Mangum, Pi Kappa Alpha from Zeta Beta Tau, and Alpha Tau Omega from Delta Tau Delta by forfeits. Senators and Athletics To Open Major League Baseball Season Game to Take Place in Washington With Roosevelt Pitching First Ball.

Major league baseball is scheduled to get under way this afternoon with Washington, as usual, opening the season a day earlier than the rest of the major teams. The Senators will be opposed by the Philadelphia Athletics in the only contest for the two leagues today.

The rest of the big league clubs will get under way tomorrow. In the American league Boston will play New York at New York, Cleveland meets Detroit at Detroit, Chicago will take on St. Louis at St. Louis, and Washington and Philadelphia will meet in a second contest at the capital city. New York plays Boston at Boston, Brooklyn meets Philadelphia at Philadelphia, Pittsburgh takes on Cincinnati at Cincinnati, and St. Louis plays Chicago at the windy city in the opening National league games.

F.D.R. to Throw First Ball

For the first time in four years a new man will throw out the opening ball of the season. President Franklin D. Roosevelt has promised to attend the first game and take care of the usual first pitch.

In the American league the New York Yankees are top-heavy favorites to take the title. The Yankees will pin their hopes on almost the same club, man for man, that swept everything before it in the flag race and then won four straight in the world series. There is a chance that Bill Werber, former Duke University star, will break into the champions' starting line-up

SHEPARD DIRECTS SPRING PRACTICE

Five Lettermen Included on Squad Out for Basketball; Glace Fails to Report.

Coach Bo Shepard sent his nine selected basketballers through his first spring practice session yesterday afternoon in the Tin Can confining the work to shooting only.

Included among the cage performers were five lettermen, Captain Dave McCachren, Snooks Aitken, Morrie Long, Earl Beale, and Dan Jones. Snoodle Jones did not make his letter this year, but was a member of Shepard's Southern conference finalists in 1932. Jim McCachren, Nelson, Thompson, and Blood rounded out the contingent.

Three other basketball lettermen missed the initial practice. Virgil Weathers and George Brandt were not present because of baseball while Jack Glace, the lanky center who came through so nicely in the latter part of the season, has dropped out of school because of illness, and will not return until next year.

ma Delta match was indefinitely postponed.

Today's Games

TRACK TEAM TO ENGAGE MIDDIES NEXT SATURDAY

Twenty-Five Men to Make Trip For Meet at Annapolis; William and Mary Carded.

Carolina fans know what may be expected from the Tar Heel track aggregation when it meets the U. S. Naval Academy tracksters Saturday; but the status of the Navy track team is still an unknown quantity since the middies have not as yet had a dual meet.

But a comparison of the two teams may be ascertained from track notes on the Navy club based on a recent time and field trials which appeared in the latest issue of the Navy Log.

Hutchinson, a youngster in the middle distances, will prove a keen competitor for Ed McRae, Carolina hope. Coach Earl Thomson, the service school track mentor, sent his charge through a fast mile, clocked at 4:29 minutes—some three seconds better than McRae's time in the Georgetown meet. Early in the season, in one of the Tar Heel time trials, McRae ran a 3:15 three-quarter mile while in the recent Navy time events, Hutchinson again bettered the Carolina runner's mark by only three seconds. Ward Hardman, Hutchinson's team mate, has also been looking good and should be in the money when the events are run off Saturday.

Tar Heels Better in Javelin
In the javelin, Carolina's three stars should show marked superiority, the best Navy spear tosser only bested 155 feet in the field trials. But the shot should be different. Mullis' put in the meet with Georgetown was 43 feet while the best Navy weight man gained 45 feet.

Carolina will find the Navy club with two fine milers, Hardman and Hutchinson, both of whom will give the Tar Heels a real race. No definite dope can be given on the dash men, hurdles, high jump, or the pole vault. Since the middies' coach did not put all men through regulation events, some of the dash men ran 300 yards as their part in the timing.

Twenty-Five Make Trip
Although the official Carolina team has not been made up yet, the Tar Heels' coaching staff has signified its intention of taking some twenty-five boys on the trip. Already the regulars are being pressed hard by the younger and less experienced men who are driving hard in order to make the trip.

The Carolina team will stop over Monday on its way back from the Navy meet at Williamsburg, Virginia, where the Tar Heels will work out two days in preparation for a practice dual meet with the William and Mary Indians. The meet is set for Wednesday afternoon.

game.
Bill Croom continued his timely hitting, slipping in two more singles yesterday in four trips. Lefty Fitzgerald, hefty General first sacker, stole the batting honors for the day however, with a double and two singles in four sallies.

Andrews Right on the Mound
Andrews pitched his second game for Carolina and turned in an excellent job. Beside limiting the Generals to six hits, the former Presbyterian Junior College ace whiffed no less than thirteen opponents. Lamy McCaskill did the receiving for Carolina. Sauerbrun, the General hurler, fanned eight Tar Heels and also stole a two base hit from Andrews' bag of tricks.

The Tar Heels close their first northern trip this afternoon in Charlottesville against the Virginia Cavaliers. Joe Griffith, who whipped V. P. I. last Friday, is ready for service and will probably get the call this afternoon against the Cavaliers.

Beer In Chapel Hill To Be Topic For Phi

The Phi Assembly will conduct its last regular meeting before the spring holidays tonight in New East at 7:15 o'clock. The following resolutions will be discussed: Resolved: That the Phi Assembly go on record as favoring the legal sale of light wines and beer within the city limits of Chapel Hill. Resolved: That the policy advocated by Hitler in Germany be condemned and that Germany remain a republic. Resolved: That the Phi go on record as favoring the manufacture of beer in the state of North Carolina.

MEASURE WILL ATTEMPT TO KEEP BEER OFF HILL

A new beer bill of considerable interest to University students was introduced in the House at Raleigh yesterday.

A clause in the measure, which is to be known as the Martin bill, states that "No beer, wine, or similar beverages shall be sold within two miles of the city limits of Chapel Hill." The bill was referred to the finance committee.

Senators To Play First Major Baseball Game

in the place of Crosetti. A few rookie pitchers may also see action. However, Allen, Gomez, Ruffing, and Pennock are still the big four on the Yankee staff. The only possible weakness for the champions is that some of the old stars such as Coombs, Ruth, Sewell, and Lazzeri may give out before the season closes. However, there are plenty of star youngsters to fill any of these possible gaps.

Washington is hoped to give New York the toughest fight for the pennant. The capital city club, with the addition of Goose Goslin and several good pitchers through trades, are much stronger than at this time last year. Philadelphia, Cleveland, and Chicago may also offer the Yanks stiff competition.

Athletic Team Young

Philadelphia has the same great pitching staff led by Lefty Grove of past seasons, but will depend on a young fast team to back these pitchers up. With the exception of Mickey Cochran, catcher, and Jimmy Foxx, it is possible that every position will be filled by a rookie or a man of only a few years' major league experience. Cleveland will have its same balanced team of past years with the addition of some good youngsters. Chicago is probably the most strengthened team in the junior league. Besides some very promising rookies, Chicago got hold of Simmons, Haas, and Dykes, former Athletics, during winter transactions. All three were stars of Connie Mack's champions of 1930-31-32.

The National league is hoped to be much hotter than the American, with Pittsburgh holding a slight edge over Chicago for first and St. Louis, Brooklyn, and New York following in order. Pittsburgh will have the same fast infield of last year and will have probably the greatest outfield in baseball. Along with the two poisons, Paul and Lloyd Waner, the Pirates have added Freddy Lindstrum, a star with the Giants in past years, to round out an outfield with everything both on defense and offense.

Chicago is about the same as their title team of last year. Although Kiki Cuyler will be in bed for several weeks yet, Babe Herman has been added to the Cub outfield to bring it about up to its old strength. Both the Cubs and Pirates will have to watch out for the sensational pitching staff of St. Louis.

Brooklyn has gotten rid of their boneheads of past seasons and will offer a well-rounded club to fight for the flag. The New York Giants are the big dark horse of both leagues and may pull some surprises. Manager Terry claims that with one more

J. C. Greer To Head Sophomore Cabinet

J. C. Greer of Charlotte was elected president of the rising sophomore cabinet last night at a meeting of the freshman friendship council in Gerrard hall. Greer defeated three other nominees for the office: Jesse Parker, president of the freshman group, Phil Hammer, and Butler French.

In the race for vice president, B. S. Smith won over Marcus Lynch, who held the same office this year. Russell Mickle, recently elected president of the rising sophomore class, beat Ralph Burgin for the position of secretary and Billy Yandell was elected treasurer in a contest against Paul McKee and Billy Anderson.

Scientific Society to Meet

The Elisha Mitchell scientific society will conduct its regular meeting tonight at 7:00 o'clock in Phillips Hall. Due to the Skinner performance at 8:30 o'clock, the society is holding its meeting at 7:00 o'clock instead of the usual time of 7:30 o'clock.

Speakers for the evening will be Dr. T. F. Hickerson and B. L. Johnson.

winning pitcher he has a first place team. The Philadelphia power-house batting line-up may also cause trouble for the rest of the National loop teams.

Shoemaker Elected Amphoterothen Head

At a meeting of the Amphoterothen club Sunday night, Donald C. Shoemaker was unanimously elected president for next year. The Amphoterothen club is a discussion group composed of students who have made good scholastic records and are outstanding men of the campus. Meetings are held twice a month and consist of a supper and an impromptu speaker on questions pertaining to the campus, state, national, and international affairs.

Bob Woerner is the outgoing president who will be succeeded by Shoemaker. It was through an idea presented by Woerner that the club assumed its present policy of having bi-monthly suppers at the Carolina Inn instead of the former weekly meetings with soft drinks and sandwiches as refreshments.

"Y" Run-off Elections Today

The run-off elections for secretary of the "Y" will be placed open to the vote of those members of the "Y" who have attended at least six meetings. The two men running for the post are J. D. Winslow and Simmons B. Patterson. The polls will be open today from 10:30 a. m. to 11:00 a. m. and then from 1:00 p. m. to 5:00 p. m. and will be located in the "Y" building.

SAWING A WOMAN IN HALF

ILLUSION:

A large packing case is exhibited on a raised platform. A young woman climbs into the box. Head, hands and feet protrude, and are held by spectators while the magician takes a crosscut saw and, with the help of an assistant, saws through the center of the box and apparently through the woman.

EXPLANATION:

There are many explanations for this illusion. One method of performing this illusion requires the presence of two girls in the box. One girl curls up in the left half of the box with her head and hands protruding, giving the effect you see illustrated above. The other girl is doubled up in the right half of the box, with only her feet showing. Nobody is sawed in half.

It's fun to be fooled —
...it's more fun to KNOW

Cigarette advertising, too, has its tricks. Consider the illusion that "Flavor" can be achieved by some kind of magical hocus-pocus in manufacturing.

EXPLANATION: Just three factors control the flavor of a cigarette. The addition of artificial flavoring. The blending of various tobaccos. And the quality of the tobaccos themselves.

Quality is by far the most important. Domestic cigarette tobaccos vary in price from 5¢ a pound up to 40¢ a pound. Imported tobaccos vary from 50¢ a pound to $1.15.

No wonder, then, that cigarettes differ in taste—since distinctive, pleasing flavor depends so largely upon the blending of the costlier tobaccos.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

Try Camels. Give your taste a chance to sense the subtle difference that lies in costlier tobaccos... a difference that means all the world in smoking pleasure... in pure, unalloyed satisfaction.

TENTATIVE CAST CHOSEN FOR NEW OUTDOOR DRAMA

"Midsummer Night's Dream" to Be Staged in Forest Theatre May 19 and 20.

Tentative cast for the Playmakers Forest theatre production, Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream, to be directed by Professor F. H. Koch, has been selected, it was announced yesterday. Midsummer Night's Dream will be presented May 19 and 20 as the last Playmaker offering for the year.

Members of the present cast will meet in the Forest theatre at 3:00 o'clock tomorrow for rehearsal. In case of unfavorable weather the meeting will take place in 113 Murphey.

Probable Cast

The tentative cast is listed as follows: Harry Davis, Theseus; Martha Hatton, Hippolyta; Foster Fitz-Simons, Lysander; Max
Block, Demetrius; Eugenia
Rawls, Hermia; Marian Tatum,
Helena; Dan Wiener, Egeus;
Frank McIntosh or Bob Proctor,
Quince; Urban T. Holmes, Bottom; John Walker, Flute; Frank McIntosh or Ed Martin, Snout;
Dave McIlhenny or Ed Martin,
Snug; Elmer Oettinger, Starvel-ling; F. H. Rankin, Philostrate;

yet been definitely decided.
Fairies in the train of Oberon and Titania and Attendants upon Theseus and Hippolyta will take part in dances in the production, and these are being chosen by Phoebe Barr.

Scenery for the production, specially designed to be used in the Forest theatre, is being constructed under the supervision of Samuel Selden. Direction of costuming the cast is in charge of Mrs. Oramae Davis. The complete cast will include about thirty-five characters.

ALLOTMENT BILL FINALLY PASSED

Appropriations for Local Branch Of Greater University Is Set at $426,000.

The question of allotments to state departments and institutions for 1933-35 was settled yesterday morning when the Senate, by a vote of 34 to 9, adopted the appropriations measure reported by the conference committee last week.

The report, which was given the approval of the House
Thursday, carried a grant of $832,240 for the branches of the Greater University. Approximately $426,000 of this allotment will come to the unit at Chapel Hill.

An eight-months term for state-supported public schools, with an appropriation of $16,- 000,000, is provided for in the measure. This represents an increase of approximately $4,000,- 000 over the figure set by the House and $1,000,000 less than the amount passed by the Senate.

The appointment of the conference committee was made necessary when the Senate rejected the appropriation figures agreed upon by the House. The report emerged from the committee after a week's consideration.

Zoologist Seeks Pre-Natal Sex Determination In Caged Insects

AUTHOR GREET'S NOTED SUBJECT

George Bernard Shaw Met by Dr.
Henderson in New York.

Dr. Archibald Henderson, head of the mathematics department, journeyed to New York Monday where he met George Bernard Shaw.

Dr. Henderson, who received a cable from Shaw inviting him to meet him in New York, will accompany newspaper men to the dock and will be present at the celebration of his arrival.
He has been invited to sit on the stage when the noted Irish wit speaks in the Metropolitan opera house.

Dr. Henderson said that he had hoped to persuade Mr. and Mrs. Shaw to visit Chapel Hill, but that Shaw had declined the invitation on the ground that his
New York trip was limited to twenty-four hours.

N.C. HIGH SCHOOL COMPETITION TO OPEN TOMORROW

High School Week Will Get Under Way With Tennis Matches Tomorrow.

Activities of the annual high school week will get underway here tomorrow with preliminary tennis matches tomorrow morning and first debates at 7:00

Barnett Appears In Concert Friday

W. G. Barnett, baritone, has been selected to sing the solo part in Dubois' oratorio, The Seven Last Words of Christ, which will be presented Friday evening at Elon College by the Elon music department and the Burlington choral club. Professor Dwight Steer, head of music at Elon, will direct the presentation.

Barnett recently appeared as soloist with the University glee club in its concert in Southern Pines, where he received favorable comment upon his performance. He was also baritone soloist in the presentation of Gaul's The Holy City by the Fayetteville choral club in March. He will again appear in a repetition of this oratorio
May 7.

J. P. Reynolds, of Zoology Department Here, Continues Study of Tiny Flies.

Sex determination in man and flies breeding in a glass tube would not seem to have much in common. But from a two-year study of a peculiar strain of flies, J. P. Reynolds of the zoology department hopes to find evidence bearing on that force in nature which determines what sex a new-born individual is to be.

Reynolds explains that this force seems to be approximately the same in all animals. Thus, the study of a tiny gnat-like fly hardened with the name of Sciara coprophila may provide information that will have a practical application in man.
Dr. Charles Stockard, eminent Cornell anatomist who lectured here recently before Sigma Xi scientific society, is working in a field of genetics somewhat different from that in which Reynolds utilizes flies.

In most animals sex is determined by the sperm cell, but in the peculiar fly Reynolds has observed sex seems to be determined by the female. The fact that one female has either all sons or daughters points to this conclusion.

Variation From Rule

Five years ago at Johns Hopkins University Dr. C. W. Metz discovered a mutation, a variation from that rule, in some of these flies. The same females were producing both sons and daughters. Dr. Metz assigned this peculiar strain for study by Reynolds, who has been experimenting in Davie hall. The flies have to be watched constantly due to the fact that they mate within five minutes after hatching. Since, for the purposes of the scientific study, only certain ones may be allowed to mate, the sexes have to be seg-

STAFFS TO MEET THIS AFTERNOON

Editorial Writers, Reporters,
And Desk Men Will Gather
At Office of Paper.

Members of three divisions of the staff of the DAILY TAR HEEL will convene this afternoon at the office of the publication in Graham Memorial.

At 2:30 o'clock, all old and new members of the reportorial staff will meet with the editor and managing editor. New beats will be announced.

The editorial board will gather at 3:15 o'clock for a conference with the editor, and city editors and desk men will meet at 4:00 o'clock.

At these meetings, announcements concerning the staff banquet, which is to take place
Thursday night, will be made.

Students wishing to try-out for positions on the staff are asked to attend the meeting of the division on which they intend to work, and the time of trials for places will be set.

Council Meets Tonight

At a meeting of the Intrafraternity council tonight at 8:00 o'clock in Graham Memorial, the new representatives will elect officers for the coming year. It has also been announced that a picture will be made of the old members of the group.

DANCER EXTENDS PRAISE TO WORK OF PHOEBE BARR

Ted Shawn Pays Visit to Former Pupil and Commends Her Work in Dancing.

Ted Shawn, considered America's greatest male dancer, visited Chapel Hill Monday, underhanded by the customary publicity and press notices. His purpose was to visit Phoebe Barr, formerly a member of his well-known company, who is now director of dancing on the Carolina Playmaker staff and conductor of dancing classes here.

Shawn, with his pianist, Mary Campbell, and a member of his company, Barton Mumaw, visited Mrs. Barr's classes in a rehearsal of Vachel Lindsay's
"The Congo," which will be presented soon in the Playmaker theatre.

As one of the pioneer proponents of dance education as well as the dance are, Shawn has for 18 years looked forward to the time when dancing would become a part of the curriculum of every school and university, as essential training for any person desiring freedom of self-expression and also for those who desire poise in any of the more prosaic pursuits.

During the past years Shawn has especially endeavored to spread the conviction that the dance must have the full scope of masculine expression as well as feminine. He has taught large classes composed only of men, and containing many of the outstanding athletes at the school, at Springfield College in Massachusetts.

Shawn expressed himself as delighted to see that Phoebe Barr is undertaking this same work in the University, and enthusiastically complimented the interpretation of "The Congo" by Mrs. Barr's classes.

HARTLEY TO TALK BEFORE STUDENTS

Ex-Captain of the Leviathan
Will Speak Here Again
April 28.

Commodore Herbert Hartley, former captain of the Leviathan, will speak at auditorium period
Friday, April 28. The Commodore has had thirty-five years' experience on the high seas during which he has made over 850 voyages across the ocean. He was the captain of the Leviathan, formerly the Vaterland, which was at one time the largest ocean liner in the world.

Commodore Hartley addressed the assembly here last October and was well received by the students. He told of his trips in the Leviathan and gave an account of a typical voyage.

The commander has entertained many world notables, including Will Rogers, Queen
Maria of Roumania, "Bud"
Fisher, and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, with stories of his interesting and humorous experiences.

Smoker Tomorrow

Residents of Mangum dormitory will meet for their twice-postponed smoker tomorrow night at 8:00 o'clock in the banquet room of Graham Memorial.
Following the regular program, the men will be the guests of the Carolina theatre.

ANNUAL BANQUET WILL TAKE PLACE AT CAROLINA INN

Murphy and Battle Will Be Principal Speakers at Affair Tonight.

The annual law school banquet will take place this evening at 7:30 o'clock in the banquet room of the Carolina Inn. The Honorable Walter Murphy, member of the house of representatives of the state, will be one of the principal speakers of the evening. The other principal speaker will be Kemp D.
Battle, president of the North Carolina Bar Association.

The announcement of the names of the winners of the awards and prizes offered each year will also be made. Archie Cannon is in charge of a program of skits in which members of the law school will participate. The J. D. degree will be conferred on the deserving candidates. The editor of the Law Review for next year will also be named.

An attendance of 160, including several members of the state supreme court, is expected at the banquet. This banquet will close the social year for the law school. The committee which has charge of all arrangements for the banquet is as follows:
Archie Cannon, chairman, Henry Anderson, Bill Adams, Frank Spruill, and Bill Anglin.

announced pledging U. S. Puckett, F. B. Ham, and W. L. Hickman. Membership in the organization is considered one of the highest honors accorded pharmacy students.

Eligibility for membership in the society is based upon high attainment in scholarship, character, personality, and leadership. All candidates for membership must have completed seventy-five credit hours of college work.

The local chapter was established here in 1929. Charters of the organization are granted only to accredited groups in pharmacy schools in good standing with the American Association of Colleges of Pharmacy.

Appointee Has Been in Service
Of University for Thirty-Three Years.

STARTED WORK IN 1901

Capable Business Executive Has Been Teammate of Three University Presidents.

Charles T. Woollen, who has been in the service of the University for 33 years, was selected yesterday afternoon by the executive committee of the board of trustees as comptroller of the Greater University.

There are countless University trustees and alumni of this and other generations who have often expressed the opinion that Woollen is the most capable college business executive in the south and one of the best in the entire country.

Began Work in 1901

Woollen was appointed registrar in 1901, his first year in college, during the Venable administration. The next year he took on the additional duties of secretary, and the following year, while still an undergraduate, he was appointed purchasing agent.

He was college proctor from 1908 through 1913, was appointed treasurer of the University Athletic Association in 1910, and was made business manager in 1913. He has been in full charge of the business management of the University since 1914.

A tireless worker, Woollen always keeps a close watch on the University pocketbook, sizing up carefully every expenditure and making sure that heads of departments do not exceed their allotments. When Governor Mc-Lean, during his administration, announced a budgeting program for the state, he found that the University, due largely to Wool-len's foresight, had been budgeting its accounts for years.

COUNCIL DISPOSES OF HEAVY DOCKET

versity for Fraudulent Conduct at Polls Last Week.

In a four-hour session Monday night the student council handled one of the heaviest dockets of the year, including six cases of serious offenses and involving about 25 students.

Two cases of alleged fraudulent conduct at the polls of campus elections were investigated.
In one case a sophomore was suspended through the spring quarter, while the other case was dismissed with complete exoneration. Also a freshman was placed on strict conduct probation during the spring quarter of the next school term for tampering with elections.

In two cases of intoxication which were investigated, a sophomore was suspended from the University through the spring quarter for drunkenness and disorderly conduct, and the second case was dismissed because of mistake in identity.

In an investigation of misconduct and dormitory disturbance, a student was placed under suspended sentence pending further evidence. A case of misconduct resulting in physical injuries was investigated, and dismissed with admonition for future conduct.

Declaring vs. Debating

The Di and Phi societies organized the High School Debating Union among high schools in North Carolina back in 1912 in an effort to encourage debating in a systematic fashion on the part of the high school students of the state. The idea was to have triangular debates out in the state with the winners coming to Chapel Hill each spring for further debating in the finals.

From the start the triangular feature was dropped in the competition held in Chapel Hill, and it was replaced by a system of mere declaiming by the speakers, and a physical endurance contest for judges, University student assistants, debaters, and Chapel Hill hostesses.

As the competition is now handled here each spring, the debaters are divided into groups of eight, for example, four negative teams and four affirmative teams. These eight teams gather in the various auditoriums on the campus Thursday night at 7:00 o'clock. The first affirmative team and the first negative team speak, and on down the line in alternate fashion. No decision is given by the judges until all eight teams have spoken. Then these patient judges, after listening to something over four hours of steady declaiming and no debating, name the best affirmative and the best negative teams that appeared before them.

Then Friday morning at 9:00 o'clock the surviving affirmative teams hold forth in one hall before only the judges, while the negative survivors speak in another hall. This lasts well on past 3:00 o'clock in the afternoon before one affirmative and one negative team are named to compete Friday night in the finals. It is then too late to call to Asheville or New Bern to tell the folks to come up for the finals.

The only real debating is done Friday night between the best speaking affirmative team and the best speaking negative team in the state. All the preliminary competition in Chapel Hill has been nothing but a lot of declaiming which has fatigued the contestants and killed what interest there might have been on the campus here for attending any of the high school debates.

There may be some who feel that the old order should continue, but the DAILY TAR HEEL suggests that in view of the numerous dissenters to this theory, the High School Week Committee call a meeting of the various coaches before the ceremonies are over this week to ascertain their feelings on the matter. We also suggest that the system of triangular debates might be carried on here in the finals Thursday night so actual debaters instead of declaimers will be uncovered.

After the Battle Is Over

Now that the heat and fluster of the campus elections are over, one may take stock, so to speak, of the general results in terms of the elements which characterized the campaign.

The first important manifestation of the elections was the tremendous amount of interest elicited from the student body. Practically every position was hotly contested in view of the fact that both tickets contained excellent men for almost every office. The evenly balanced strength of the two parties made it practically impossible to foretell individual results and in the few cases which admitted of prediction, there were upsets recorded. One fact which should have caught the attention of most careful observers was the election of manifestly weaker men for some offices. This situation impresses one forcibly of the great dangers of a system whereby two strong political parties may contest the elections. Under this condition the possibilities of weaker, poorer qualified candidates being elected through the popularity and strength of a few major office-seekers are maximized.

Another striking situation appears in the case of the elections of the editors of the several publications. It is with a certain amount of mixed feelings that one takes cognizance of the fact that three of the four successful candidates were not the choices of their respective staffs. Only the editor-elect of the Yackety Yack received this double commendation. This state of affairs has never before been witnessed here at the University and will in all probability result in a vigorous renewal of the fight to have the various publication staffs elect their own editors.

The third and last characteristic which impressed this writer concerning the recent elections was the generally sportsman-like attitude of the defeated candidates. In the face of a hard three-year struggle for the top, then expectations of a victory as recompense—and then loss—it is extremely hard to take one's defeat philosophically; but most of them did, and in so doing reflected the true spirit of the University of North Carolina. Truly, these men "were great in victory, but greater in defeat."—V.J.L.

Without Honor In Its Own Country

The University has long been recognized as one of the foremost institutions of its kind in the country. As a seat of education, of culture and tradition, there are few places elsewhere that can surpass our record. Yet a great majority of the student body fails to take advantage of one of its most worthwhile activities, debating.

As a means of securing an unbiased, lucid outlook upon some of the major problems of the day there is no better way than attendance at, or participation in debates. By hearing both sides of a question expressed intelligibly without the same pressure upon one certain side of a question as is usually found in a class where a professor's arguments must be accepted for the most part.

It is the aim of the debate council to sponsor debates in which there is no attempt to coerce anyone in attendance to adopt a particular viewpoint, and for this reason almost all the debates in which the University is represented are no-decision debates where the audience is permitted to take either side on the basis of the arguments presented.

Every student on the campus pays a fee of fifty cents a year to be used in debating, but the maximum audience at any debate here in quite a while has been between thirty-five or forty, a number of which are townspeople who have no part in the financial support of debating. Not only are audiences of any number lacking, but there is practically no desire upon the part of the students to participate in this activity.

The University of North Carolina has such a widespread reputation for its ability in debating that we are asked to debate with practically all the leading educational institutions in the United States. When debate teams come to America from England, the University always schedules a debate with them. At Western Reserve and the University of Pittsburgh, the two best known debating universities, the University is given the leading debate every year. It is indeed strange that an activity of the University which is known in so many other places for its excellence is not known at all on its own campus. It is time that the students recognize the existence of debating here and seek to obtain the good from it that would be so easily forthcoming.—F.P.G.

To Be or What to Be

With the present year fast drawing to a close a thought or two might well be given to next year's problem of fraternity rushing. The present system undoubtedly functions as well as any that permits pledging within the first few weeks of the year. Many freshmen come to college with a certain fraternity so deeply impressed on their minds that they will not even consider any other. The general excitement of the first few weeks coupled with the intensive and extensive rushing, leaves them so befuddled that it is next to impossible to make an intelligent choice.

Deferred rushing would be equally beneficial to fraternity and freshman. Although most new men are previously recommended to some lodge or lodges, there is the question of their fitting in. If any group is to function co-ordinately they must have more in common than the ordinary goal of all students. Every group on the campus, like every individual, has more or less definite characteristics and in order for any pledge to be perfectly satisfied with his choice he must find that group with which he can work and live to the best advantage of all. To do that in the short period now provided is a very difficult undertaking.

By providing an additional month or two the number of disillusioned pledges and organizations would be greatly diminished, for it would be impossible for either faction to keep its rushing personality to the fore throughout that long a period. Each group would be able to observe the other as they actually are instead of as they appear to be. It would give the quieter chap a chance to become better acquainted and better known and would at the same time reveal the real character of the "shining first nighters."

The system has been tried at many colleges and has met with success in almost every instance, the main objection being primarily the lack of much needed financial support at the early part of the year after the previous year's loss by graduation. However, if a few dollars are more important than a careful selection of men, the real purpose of the fraternity seems to be waning.—L.M.J.

THE THEATRE

The German war-play, Der Flieger (Aviators), by Herman Rossmann, Saturday evening, the Playmakers theatre.

Reviewed by W. T. Couch

The play has been an unusual success on the German stage. The theme is old and of universal interest—the dramatic conflict between the desire to live and the necessity of performing duties which mean death. The only obstacle to full appreciation on the part of an English-speaking audience was that the performance of Der Flieger Saturday night was given mostly in German. Two other languages, French and English, occurred only now and then.

Language Is Obstacle

In spite of the formidable obstacle of a foreign language, the play caught and held the interest of the audience, with very few lapses, from beginning to end. The first act was somewhat slow, especially in the part where the volunteer Mueller confesses his inability to bring himself to the point of making his parachute jump. Mueller's fright impressed the audience as being more that of the stage than of a soldier mortally afraid to do his duty. Mueller had dreams that his parachute would fail to open, that he would be dashed to death. This part of the play is important since it forebodes the fate of Mueller and the corresponding fate of Lieutenant Frank, the hero and the chief of the flying squadron. Mueller is tortured with dreams of his fate. Frank also dreams that he will meet death at the hands of the flying English Colonel who has brought down his former commanders. But Frank has to order Mueller to make his parachute jump, and he has to go ahead and fight the Colonel even though he feels certain death will ensue. He orders his subordinates to avoid combat with the Colonel because he knows the Colonel is a superior fighter. It is his duty and his alone to reckon with this most skillful of the opposing pilots.

Although this part of the play was somewhat slurred by the failure of Mueller adequately to carry his part, the finished performance of Bolle, (G. Helinger), Frank, (Dr. Spann), Hensch, (B. Thurman), and Aimee, (E. Stewart) insured the success of the first act. The love-making scene with Aimee was a thorough test of ability to act. It was evidence of unusual competence on the part of Dr. Spann and Miss Stewart who played the roles of Frank and Aimee.

Acting Inconsistent

There were a number of breaks in the quality of the acting, but fortunately none of these breaks occurred in any of the parts involving the more important characters.

The great moment in the play came when the English Colonel challenged Frank to a duel in the air and Frank broke his appointment with the seductive Aimee and went to meet him. Beverly Thurman as Hensch, ably seconded by Foster Fitz-Simons as the English prisoner Leeds, carried the final scene in superb style.

Play Well Written

This scene was filled with opportunities for ineffectiveness and maulin failure. It called for military stiffness, many salutes, and blind devotion to ideals which today are generally regarded as unworthy. But the playwright handled his difficult materials so that attention was focused on the greatness of Frank's character rather than the smallness of the cause for which he had to die. And of course, measured by any realistic standard, the author is right. Men often do have to die for causes that appear to be senseless. This aspect of the problem was handled with extreme skill. The whole performance must have been in entire conformity with the author's intention.

The play is going to be presented again on the Playmaker stage during the latter part of May.

Autopsy

By Robert Berryman

GRAND SLAM

A few days ago in Aycock dormitory a small group of students sat, playing poker. The room, an unoccupied one, they had entered through the window.

A dispute arose over the division of a pot, and one of the gentlemen smacked another in the snout. From the injured member ran blood . . . and more blood. Onto the cards, onto the table, onto the floor it ran.

The injured player left the hubbub to seek repairs for his injured member; the others, fearing that the noise might have drawn unwelcome visitors, were gathering themselves together to depart—when who should stick his head through the door but Ellis Fysal! It is his job to report gambling, drunkenness, and bad conduct among the students.

"What's going on here?" he demanded, noting the blood, the cards, and the overturned chairs. "What's happened?"

"Nothing," spoke up the man who had just popped the other guy in the nose. "Nothing's happened.—We were playing bridge and when my partner re-doubled my three no-trump bid, I hit him!"

Qualified

The smoke of political battling having cleared away, it may now be appropriate to note as qualifications for the various offices what some candidates offered:

One man offered, as an inducement to have you vote for him for the Vice-President of the Student Body, the fact that he had been on the varsity wrestling squad.

Another thought that because he had been the Junior Dance Leader, you would be inclined to prefer that he edit the campus literary organ.

The editor of the annual picture book, someone felt sure, you would want to have been a member of the freshman tennis squad.

—But the prize-winner of them all was the ambitious young chap who expected you to support him for the office of Treasurer of the Senior Class because he was a self-help student!!!

Shirtbreaker

It was down at the dear ole Pika house, and a goodly crowd was there. One poor lad, in the heat of campaigning, had had several of his shirts torn off. He walked gingerly; his last was upon his back. Soon, alas!, that too was reduced to a mass of shreds.

Undaunted, he was again seen, radiant in new finery. Don Shoemaker, a brother, approached him with a malevolent gleam in his usually innocent eyes. Sneaking up behind his prey, he grasped the collar of the recently-donned shirt—and r-r-rip!

Standing there triumphant, with his prize proudly held in his clenched hand, he happened to look at it more closely. His face changed color as he noted the laundry mark: "D.C.S."!

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

Down With The Tyrants

The DAILY TAR HEEL states that the "Bids for the Junior-Senior dances will go on sale May 10." Perhaps it would be wise for the class officials directly responsible for the class fees, that have been entrusted to their care, to give some itemized account of what has become of the money paid to cover the necessary expenses of the class. To those of us who have paid $8.50 in class fees, it seems an outrage that we should be forced to buy the dance bids that we have already paid for. In case we are so unfortunate as not to possess one dollar extra to pay for the bids on May 12-13, what is to become of the funds already paid in? Shall that money already paid by us be confiscated for the use of those who are blind enough to be sucked into paying the dollar and attending the dance?

Furthermore, why pay such an enormous price for an orchestra for the dance when others, such as Jelly Leftwich, can be obtained at a much more reasonable price. Such actions seem to be carried too far in an insane desire to seek publicity at the expense of those who are unfortunate enough to be subjected to the rule of the executive committees of the junior and senior classes.

FRATERNITY BUYERS WILL MEET TONIGHT

Members of the Fraternity Buyers' association will meet tonight at 7:15 o'clock at the Service Insurance agency company for the purpose of electing officers to serve next year. All new house managers and fraternity treasurers are requested to attend with the old representatives.

The association was organized last spring for the purpose of promoting co-operation between fraternities in buying equipment, to reduce the expense borne by each fraternity.

STUDENTS TO ORGANIZE ARCHERY CLUB TONIGHT

Students, members of the faculty, and others interested will attend a meeting tonight at 7:30 o'clock in room 209 of Graham Memorial for the purpose of organizing an archery club. Experience is not essential for membership.

Rain Halts Carolina's Advance On Virginia Cavaliers Yesterday

Downpour Causes Cancellations
Of First of Three Game Series With Cavaliers.

TAR HEELS HIT STRIDE
Team Returns Today With Three Wins; Meet Gobblers Friday; Griffith to Hurl.

Rain prevented the playing of the first game of Carolina's annual three-game series with Virginia in Charlottesville yesterday, and last night the Tar Heels were on their way home with a record of three wins and no losses on their first excursion into the state of Cavaliers and traditions.

Carolina will go into action again here Friday against V. P. I. and Joe Griffith, who pitched the Blue and White to a 9-1 win over the same club last Friday, will be Coach Hearn's logical choice for the mound assignment.

The Virginia trip showed the Tar Heels at their best, for they presented a brand of pitching in the work done by Griffith, Crouch, and Andrews that far surpassed anything that had been hoped of them in pre-season ratings, and, further, showed an ability to bunch hits that was wholly lacking in the early games played at home.

Johnny Peacock and Bill Croom found the trip an appropriate time to improve their batting averages by considerable margins while Vergil Weathers and Johnny Phipps saw fit to continue the heavy stickwork that has placed them at the top of Carolina's offensive figures.

UNIVERSITY NET PLAYERS BEATEN IN TOURNAMENT

Ricky Willis, Bernie Friedman, and Z. V. Linker Eliminated
From Play.

All three Carolina representatives in the annual north and south tennis tourney at Pinehurst were eliminated yesterday afternoon. Ricky Willis, Bernie Friedman and Z. V. Linker were defeated.

Friedman played well with Gregory Mangin, national indoor champion, at the outset of the match. Bernie won the first two games and had the third forty-love. Mangin discovered the weakness of Friedman's forehand, and ran the Carolina player ragged from then on. The scores were 6-2, 6-1.

John Higgins, No. 2 man on the Duke team, ran through Ricky Willis in straight sets, 6-4, 6-2. Z. V. Linker was trounced by Rainville, No. 1 player in Canada, 6-4, 6-2.

The greatest upset of the afternoon was C. Harris' win over Berkley Bell in three hard fought sets. The scores were 3-6, 9-7, 6-4. Harris is a freshman at Duke University. Bryant Grant defeated Clifford Sutter in an exhibition match, after Sutter had won two rounds of tournament play.

Play will be resumed this afternoon with Wilmer Hines pitted against Lester Stoeffen. Another match will feature Walter Levitan and George M. Lott of Chicago.

Among the doubles teams entered for Carolina are: Lenoir Wright and Wilmer Hines, Walter Levitan and Harvey Harris, Harley Shuford and David Morgan, Ricky Willis and John Dillard, Bernie Friedman and Hunter Lott, and James Johnston and Mark Lynch. The outstanding team entered in this field of competition is Mangin and Bell. Mixed doubles will also be played.

New York Reviewer Praises Groves' Book

High praise is given Professor Ernest R. Groves' Marriage by Lorine Pruette, reviewer for the New York Herald-Tribune, in a recent article.

Miss Pruette says: "Groves' discussion of happiness in marriage, and of the variety of satisfaction and dissatisfactions which marriage affords, is particularly desirable for American adolescents who, despite all that they must observe of marriage among their elders, come to the altar in the confident conviction that love is all that is necessary to make the ending true 'they lived happily ever after'."

She regrets that young women are denied such preparation as a course like this affords, since it is offered only to senior men in the University.

TAR HEELS WILL MEET ANNAPOLIS TEAM SATURDAY

Tracksters to Defend Win From Navy Last Year Against Strong Opposition.

When the Tar Heels invade the Navy stronghold Saturday afternoon, the Navy Goat will be seeking revenge for the licking the Carolina club gave the middies last year. The Carolinians took the service school track aggregation 65-61.

The meet last year was not only one of the closest dual meets listed in the annals of either track team but one of the most thrilling. Records were smashed throughout with breath taking times and distances. But this year the Navy will be out for revenge and will be seeking victory at any cost.

The Navy team will offer several prominent stars with fine school records to defend. In the dashes, Captain W. H. Newton, first classman, will lead his club. He also runs in the low hurdles.

Waybright to Run

Probably one of the finest sprinters that the Naval Academy has ever had is J. J. Waybright, second classman, who ran a fine race against Charlie Farmer, former Carolina speed agent, in the dual meet last year. The Navy man won by inches, being clocked at 9.6 seconds. R. H. McRae, who will get his commission in June, is another fine runner in the century.

In the 220, Captain Newton, Waybright and E. J. Scott, who is a fine looking youngster, will do the honors. The school record in this event is 21.3 seconds.

The 440-yard run has a brace of likely-looking candidates who

BEST HOUSE WINS FROM MANLY TO TAKE LOOP LEAD

S. A. E. Loses to A. T. O. and Zeta Psi Bows to Sigma Nu
In Tennis Contests.

With only half of the afternoon's scheduled contests coming off, the intramural baseball campaign experienced a slight letdown yesterday. The games which were played, however, were of interest.

Best House marched into undisputed possession of the lead in the dormitory league by virtue of a clean-cut 7-1 victory over Manly. Led by Shipman and Snyder, the battery, Best House had little difficulty in overcoming the Manly opposition.

Getting off to a slow start, the winners got a run in the third, and added their other six tallies in the last three frames. Manly scored its lone tally in the fifth inning when Singer crossed the plate.

The victory was Best House's fourth in a row, and marked the third setback for Manly in five games.

Score by innings:
Best House 001 031 2-7
Manly 000 010 0-1

Kappa Sigs Bow

After scoring eight runs in the first two innings, Kappa Sigma relaxed its attack and lost a free-scoring contest to Sigma Alpha Epsilon, 14-10. The S. A. E. nine, which had been able to tally only three runs during the first two frames, went on a scoring spree of its own in the third, fourth and fifth and got eleven runs in those three innings.

Carson led the attack of the winners, crossing the plate three times, while Smith, Dillard, Bell and Harris got two runs each. The latter worked the game on the mound and, after being in a bad spot in the early innings, pitched superb ball until the last frame when the Kappa Sigmas fell upon him for two more. These, however, came too late to be of any service to the losing nine.

Philpott, Kappa Sig catcher, was the outstanding member of the vanquished nine, leading his team both at bat and in the field. Eagles, at first, also played a nice game.

Score by innings:
Kappa Sigma 620 000 2-10
S. A. E. 305 240 x-14

Zeta Psi Wins

Zeta Psi turned in its fourth win out of five starts as it downed Pi Kappa Alpha, 9-2. Clark, Zeta Psi pitcher, received a four-run lead from his mates in the initial frame and was never in much difficulty thereafter. Pi Kappa Alpha got both its runs in the fourth.

Lewis, winning third baseman, led his team at bat with two homers. Barber and Tabb also played well for the winners, while Woerner and Shoemaker stood out for the losers.

Score by innings:
Pi Kappa Alpha 000 200 0-2
Zeta Psi 402 120 x-9

Theta Chi and Grimes won forfeits from Delta Psi and Old West respectively. Neither Old East nor Steele showed up for their scheduled contest and both were credited with a defeat.

TENNIS RESULTS

Two hitherto undefeated outfits were eliminated from the ranks of the leaders as a result of yesterday's intramural tennis match. S. A. E., which had won its only contest previously, lost to A. T. O., and Zeta Psi bowed to Sigma Nu.

YEARLINGS DOWN DURHAM HIGH BY SCORE OF 16 TO 6

Total of Twenty-Nine Hits Registered as Tar Babies Chalk Up First Win of Season.

Carolina's freshman baseball team went on a hitting spree yesterday afternoon to down Durham high 16 to 6. Durham stayed right with the yearlings in collecting hits, however, Carolina getting 15 to the visitors' 14. The contest dragged through two hours and fifteen minutes.

McKeithan started the game for the freshmen but was wild and had to groove too many balls. Durham counted five runs on six hits and three walks in the first two frames. McKeithan gave up two more hits in the third and then was taken out in the fourth when he walked his fourth man. Glasgow hurled from the fourth to the end scattering six hits over the last five frames and allowing only one run to cross the plate.

The only score off Glasgow was counted in the last inning when Ferrell, Durham centerfielder, lifted a high fly far into centerfield which was good for the round trip. McKeithan also smacked out a homer in his only time up.

Yearlings Go Ahead

The Tar Babies went ahead in the fifth, when they counted twice on a single, double, a walk and an error to get a 7-5 margin. Carolina put the contest on ice in the following frame, when ten men went to bat and six of them crossed the plate. In this big frame Irwin and Montgomery collected doubles and Moore, Bullock and Womble all came through with one-base

Why is the Stem removed from the tobaccos used in Chesterfield?

That's a very simple question to answer. The stem in a tobacco leaf, like the stem in most other plants, is "woody". It hasn't any of the flavor or the aroma that you want when you smoke. And it doesn't burn right.

So after tobacco has been properly aged, one of the first things to do is to remove the stems.

But what has this to do with your enjoyment of Chesterfield cigarettes? Just this. It means that we start right when we make Chesterfield—the right kind of leaf with the stem removed, the right manufacture—everything that science knows that can make CHESTERFIELD a milder cigarette, a cigarette that tastes better.

That's why people say "They Satisfy."

Tobacco used to be stemmed by hand—Now this machine stems 14,300 leaves every hour.

OLD DOCUMENTS DISPLAYED HERE

J. G. deR. Hamilton Places Collection of Papers of Old South in Library Lobby.

An exhibit made up of old documents and papers selected from the southern historical collection which Dr. J. G. deR. Hamilton has been gathering for the past four years has been placed on display in the first floor lobby of the library.

One of the items being shown is a record of the Hopeton plantation in Georgia, which was judged the best managed farm in the south in 1855. In this document there appears a recipe for ginger beer.

On a commission issued to de Rousett is inscribed the signature of King Louis XIV. Another display is a treatise which declares that the institution of slavery is neither a moral, political, or social evil.

Yankees are denounced emphatically in prayer for their damnation. One sentence reads: "My honest conviction is every man, woman, and child who has given aid to the abolitionists is a fit subject for hell!"

Another part of the display is one of the two known copies of a pamphlet issued by the Ku Klux Klan when the organization was first started.

The Tar Babies finished their run-making in the seventh with three more. Shapiro and Yeager collected singles, Irwin walked, and Womble drove in all three with a long double to centerfield. The Tar Babies were red hot on the paths all afternoon and stole eight bases, Shapiro getting three of them.

New Infield Good

Carolina's new infield, although a little shaky, as they were working together for only the second time, looked plenty good and only had one error marked against them. The key-stone combination turned in one double play, Irwin to Montgomery to Womble, and missed a second by a close decision. Irwin was again the outstanding man on the defense, turning in several beautiful plays on balls hit to the right of him.

At bat for the Tar Babies, besides McKeithan's four-base blow, Montgomery and Womble did the best work, each getting two singles and a double. Irwin, Yeager, and Shapiro each got two safe knocks for the Tar Babies. Besides Ferrell's home run Cheek was the best Durham batter. Cheek collected a triple and two singles, while Wheeler, Wiggins, and Hunter each got two singles at bat for the visitors.

ENGLISH ACTRESS TO APPEAR AT CAROLINA

The picture showing at the Carolina theatre today is "Man Must Fight," featuring Diana Wynard. An English actress, Miss Wynard is well established abroad and is rapidly heading for stardom in Hollywood.

"Men Must Fight" is her second picture made in America. She appeared in the screen production of Noel Coward's "Cavalcade." Included in cast of today's picture are Phillips Holmes and Lewis Stone.

regated immediately after hatching.

The colonies are kept in small glass tubes at a constant temperature of approximately 75 degrees (24 degrees Centigrade). The period from one generation to another is three weeks; that is, it takes three weeks before a new-born fly has offspring.

The fly is harmless and in nature feeds on fungi, such as mould. Apparently, it has no particular function in nature. It is often found around plants, such as in a greenhouse, looks like a gnat, and is slightly less than a quarter of an inch in length.

Pasty Menu for Flies

Strange indeed to humans is the food on which these insects thrive! Reynolds feeds his colonies on agar-agar, yeast and mushroom powder, and sterilized horse manure. Most of their life is spent in the larva stage, in which they eat this food.

The mating of the flies and the supervision of their offspring to discover minute variations from the rule requires the use of a microscope. Variations appear in shape of the wing and in wing tissue, such as the production of a "blistered wing."

The generally accepted theory on how all small animals pass on to their offspring hereditary characteristics is that which includes chromosomes and genes. The chromosomes can be seen in the nucleus of the cell with the aid of a microscope. Genes have never been seen, but there is much evidence to support their hypothetical existence. According to the theory of heredity, there are a number of genes within each chromosome. Reynolds reports the hypothesis that these genes are nothing more than chemical compounds. When these compounds are changed in any way, they give rise to mutations in the individual.

PHARMACY SCHOOL WILL PICK OFFICERS TODAY

Pharmacy school elections will take place today between the hours of 9:00 and 1:00 o'clock in Dean J. G. Beard's office in the pharmacy building.

The men nominated for office by the pharmacy school are R. S. Whiteley, W. H. Houser, and N. H. McCallum for president of the student body, and R. Langdon, R. R. Wells, and L. M. Womble for student council representative.

Buc Staff to Meet

The editorial staff of the Buc-caneer will meet tonight at 7:00 o'clock at the offices in Graham Memorial. All old members of the staff and any candidates for editorial positions are expected to be present. According to Pete Ivey, new editor of the comic monthly, efforts are being made to secure staff members representing all fraternities and professional groups on the campus. Ivey will preside at the meeting.

should give the best of runners a nice race. J. B. Cline, youngster, and J. B. Nicol, second classman, who ran in the Carolina meet, will wear the Navy colors in this event.

In the 880 and mile, Hardman and Hutchison who have looked well in the early season time trials will afford Carolina entries keen competition. Hardman is a first classman, slated to get his Ensignship in June, and Hutchison is a fine youngster candidate. Griffith and Hommel will run the 2-mile. The best school time for this is 10:10 minutes.

Hurdles Are Strong

Newton, captain of the Navy team, will lead his mates in the low hurdles with the fine support of F. M. Whitaker, a second classman, and Hommel. The time for this event is 25 seconds. In the high hurdles, C. Pilcher, another second classman, and Whitaker, have been clocked at 15.5 seconds.

Carolina should show their best ability in the field events, since it is in these events that the Tar Heels will have their best prospects of placing well to the fore. Carolina's trio of javelin throwers have all bettered the school mark at Navy with some twenty feet to spare. The present record is now 165 feet. J. C. Martin looks best among the Navy spear tossers.

In the shot, Besson, a youngster, has gained 45 feet, but Oscar Mullis, Carolina weight man, should give him a hard fight. Kastein and Bingham will defend the Navy record in the high jump, 6 feet 5-8 inches, against the inroads of Stafford, Hamlet and Reid. Smith, Carolina, should easily best the Navy 11-foot 6-inch record in the pole vault. The middies have two fine men in the broad jump, McRae and Cline. Both men have jumped around 22 feet throughout the early practice drills.

Yesterday afternoon several of the Carolina track men went through their final time trials for the Naval Academy meet. Coach Ranson announced last night that he would not leave with the squad for Annapolis and that there was a strong possibility that he would not be on hand for the meet, leaving Coach R. A. Fetzner in complete charge of the Tar Heels.

Hickerson Addresses Science Association

The Elisha Mitchell scientific society conducted their regular meeting last night at 7:00 o'clock in Phillips hall. The meeting took place at 7:00 o'clock because of the Skinner performance at 8:30 o'clock.

The speakers for the evening were Dr. T. F. Hickerson and B. L. Johnson. Dr. Hickerson spoke on "Continuous Beams with Variable Sections," and Johnson addressed the society on "A Study of the Aging of Rubber."

Rooms Needed

All students, fraternity and non-fraternity, who are willing to share their rooms with high school delegates here for the annual high school week are urged to get in touch with Y. M. C. A. officers immediately. A list of delegates is posted in the "Y" building. Extra beds will be furnished by the buildings department.

Grades Posted Tomorrow

Grades for mid-term examinations will be posted in the registrar's office tomorrow morning.

J. D. WINSLOW CHOSEN AS SECRETARY OF 'Y'

J. D. Winslow was elected secretary of the Y. M. C. A. for next year in a light run-off vote yesterday, winning over Simmons B. Patterson.

Voting was open to any member of the "Y" who had attended at least six meetings. The officers for 1933-34 elected in the first vote are John Acee, president; Ike Minor, vice-president; and Jack Poole, treasurer.

Nineteen Confined

Nineteen persons were under the University physician's care at the infirmary yesterday. They were: L. A. Taff, J. C. Parker, Vida Miller, David Bennett, Edna Stroude, S. J. Spiegel, F. H. Kenan, Henry Baggett, R. H. Proctor, Jr., Catherine Williams, Edgar Thomas, L. C. Bruce, R. T. Broyhill, P. A. Burchette, W. E. Armstrong, H. S. Rubin, C. L. Freeman, William L. Daniel, and G. H. Holmes.

Graduate Tea

A tea for graduate members of the English department will be given in Smith building from 4:30 until 6:00 o'clock this afternoon.

Engineering Society Taps Men Tomorrow

A joint meeting of the four engineering societies will take place tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock. New members of the Tau Beta Pi honorary engineering fraternity will be tapped. A motion picture, "Blasting a Dam into Position," will be shown.

The speakers for the evening will be J. D. Watson and J. R. Marbin. Watson will choose as his topic "General Features of the Plant," and Marbin will address the society on "Hydraulic Experiments Leading to the Design of the Dam."

Those tapped will come from the upper eighth of the junior class. Requisites for membership are qualities of leadership, integrity, breadth of interest, unselfish activity, character, and social qualities.

Tau Beta Pi is a national honorary engineering fraternity. The purpose of the organization is to foster a liberal spirit of culture in the Engineering schools of America.

National Pharmacy Leader Visits Here

Dr. C. H. Stocking, president of the American Association of Colleges of Pharmacy, accompanied by Mrs. Stocking and C. H. Stocking, Jr., were visitors at the pharmacy school here Sunday and Monday. Dr. Stocking, who is also a professor at the University of Michigan, came as an official visitor of the A. A. C. P. in making a triennial inspection of the University pharmacy school.

The visitors were entertained at a dinner tendered at the Carolina Inn last night by the members of the pharmacy school. Guests were President and Mrs. Frank P. Graham, Dean and Mrs. J. M. Bell, Dean and Mrs. D. D. Carroll, Dr. and Mrs. H. R. Totten, Dr. and Mrs. W. B. MacNider, Dean and Mrs. J. C. Beard, Dr. and Mrs. H. M. Burlage, Professor and Mrs. I. W. Rose, and Professor and Mrs. M. L. Jacobs.

Dr. Stocking is conducting a general survey of schools in the south.

Co-ed Tea Today

The regular weekly co-ed tea will be given this afternoon from 4:30 until 6:00 o'clock in Spencer hall.

DR. DASHIELL TO SPEAK AT YALE ON PSYCHOLOGY

Local Professor Will Attend Meetings of Two Psychological Groups This Week.

Professor J. F. Dashiell of the University psychology department is attending conferences of two national psychological societies in the north this week, following which he will lecture at Yale.

Today and tomorrow of this week Professor Dashiell will participate in the annual conference of the Society of Experimental Psychologists at the University of Pennsylvania, and he will attend the annual gathering of the Southern Society for Philosophy and Psychology Friday and Saturday in Washington.

Professor Dashiell is to lecture at Yale University on "Recent Trends in Experimental Psychology and Their Effects on Theory" next Tuesday. He also plans to visit the McGraw-Hill book company of New York Monday. He is editing a series of books on the subject of psychology for the firm.

GENERAL MEETING TO BEGIN DEBATE ACTIVITIES TODAY

Contestants to Draw for Sections and Pairs in Aycock Competition.

A general meeting of all competing debaters and teachers this afternoon at 2:00 o'clock will begin the activities of the twenty-first annual high school week. Acting Dean N. W. Walker of the school of education will preside.

Drawings for sections and pairs for the first preliminaries in the debating contest will be in order. Fourteen such matches between fifty-five high school entries will take place tonight at 7:00 o'clock in the auditoriums of Bingham, Caldwell, New East and New West, Saunders, Phillips, Peabody, Davis, and Manning halls, as well as in the halls of the Di and Phi societies. University students will act as presidents and secretaries at the meetings.

Semi-Finals

Winning affirmative teams one from each group of four competing tonight, will meet tomorrow morning in the Phi Assembly hall. Negative team winners will be matched in the Di hall. One team will be chosen from each side to compete in the final match tomorrow night for the Aycock Memorial cup.

The eighteenth annual high school tennis tournament will get under way tomorrow morning and continue throughout the day, with match play beginning at 10:00 o'clock. At 10:45 o'clock the state interscholastic track and field championships will be run off, and will also last through the afternoon.

CAROLINA SQUAD DEBATES GEORGIA TECH HERE TODAY

Eddleman and Russell to Take Affirmative, Condemning Japanese Policy in China.

The Georgia Tech debating group will meet the Carolina team this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock in Gerrard hall. The query as suggested by Georgia Tech is stated: Resolved: That Japan's foreign policy be condemned. Carolina, represented by Bill Eddleman and Phillips Russell, will take the affirmative, condemning the Japanese policy.

Eddleman has participated in intercollegiate debating for two years, and Russell, although a freshman, is entering his third debate.

Boston University will debate here Friday morning on the question of war debts. Red Rankin and Don Seawell will speak for Carolina.

Over the holidays Carolina and Georgia Tech will renew forensic relations in Atlanta. The topic will be the adoption of the British radio system in the United States.

John Wilkinson and Don Seawell were chosen to debate for Carolina at the debate try-outs Monday night for the coming debate against Agnes Scott College of Atlanta. The University team will take the negative of the question, Resolved: That the system of Norman Thomas is preferable to the present system.

TAU BETA PI TO TAP MEN TONIGHT

Ceremony to Be Staged at Meeting of Engineering Societies.

At a joint meeting of the four engineering societies tonight at 7:30 o'clock in Phillips hall, Tau Beta Pi will tap new men. The tapping will conclude a program presented by the societies jointly.

A motion picture, "Blasting a Dam into Position" will be shown, and there will be two talks. J. D. Watson will speak on "General Features of the Plant," and J. R. Martin will address the society on "Hydraulic Experiments Leading to the Development of the Dam."

Those tapped will come from the upper eighth scholastically of the junior class, and must show qualities of leadership, integrity, and character.

Tau Beta Pi is a national honorary engineering fraternity. The purpose of the organization is to foster a liberal spirit of culture in the engineering schools of America.

SERMON STARTS COMMENCEMENT SUNDAY, JUNE 4

Graham and Ehringhaus to Speak Informally at Graduation Exercises.

The Baccalaureate sermon will be delivered Sunday morning, June 4, in Memorial hall, to begin the commencement exercises for the class of 1933. No speaker for the occasion has been selected as yet, but according to J. Maryon Saunders, alumni secretary, a definite announcement will be forthcoming shortly.

The Chapel Hill Oratorio society will also feature the first commencement day with an oratorio in Memorial hall Sunday evening. Last year the feature was well received.

Alumni Day, Monday, June 5, will follow the usual program. The "Judge Winston" meeting in Gerrard hall at 10:30 o'clock will begin the day's schedule and will include the customary reminiscence session with special emphasis given to the re-uniting classes. At 1:00 o'clock there will be the annual Alumni luncheon in Swain hall, and in the late afternoon a band concert is scheduled to take place under the Davie poplar. During supper for re-uniting classes at 7:00 o'clock, a performance by the Carolina Playmakers will be given for those whose classes do not unite and for parents of seniors. The alumni reception and ball will take place in the Tin

Cornelia Otis Skinner Claims No Credit For "Wives Of Henry VIII"

Famous Actress Says That Idea For Her Performance Here Was Suggested by Friend; Believes That Theatre Should Give People Something to Think About.

(By Joseph Sugarman)
"It wasn't my idea. Not at all. I don't claim the slightest credit for it. A friend of mine suggested The Wives of Henry VIII to me." Miss Cornelia Otis Skinner, famed actress who played to an appreciative Chapel Hill audience Tuesday night, fairly blew these words at the interviewer off her powder puff which was deftly scurrying over her lovely features.

A sure line of mascara on the eye-lid brought forth the modest confession, "I tell you, I did feel rather daring, an American attempting to do English history. And then I know so little about any history anyway. However I studied the period for a year and then went to England to test the production. I felt even then as though I were 'butting' in."

First Performance

Miss Skinner gave her first performance of Henry's harem at Knoll castle, the seat of the Sackville-Nicolson family, which is rich in Tudor tradition. A striking success at this private gathering, she later played it with equal distinction in London and New York. Upon her return to this country she called up her Philadelphia friend to thank her once again for the idea. To her astonishment, the friend replied, "It really wasn't all my idea. You see a friend of mine spent some time at Knoll

SIGMA DELTA HAS HIGHEST AVERAGE OF FRATERNITIES

Pi Beta Phi, Chi Phi, and Beta Theta Pi Are Other Leaders in Academic Standings.

Sigma Delta ranked first in the academic standings of the thirty-one fraternity chapters of the University for the winter quarter with an average of 1.81, the highest average ever obtained by a fraternity of the University, according to a report released from the registrar's office yesterday.

Following Sigma Delta in the order of their standing in the upper group were: Pi Beta Phi, 2.56; Chi Phi, 2.60; Beta Theta Pi, 2.61; Chi Omega, 2.62; Zeta Tau, 2.65; Tau Epsilon Phi, 2.65; and Sigma Alpha Epsilon, 2.66.

Scoring System

The "Standard Score" by which the fraternities are ranked is determined by dividing the difference between the academic average (3.15) and the highest possible grade (1.00) into ten equal parts. "Score" below that of the academic average is determined by dividing the difference between 3.15 and the lowest possible grade (6.00) into ten equal parts.

By this method Sigma Delta was credited with plus seven. The other fraternities in the upper group received a score of plus three.

The entire fraternity average advanced from 3.14 for the fall quarter to 2.97 for the winter quarter, while the academic average moved up from 3.30 for the fall quarter to 3.15 for the winter session.

MCCORKLE WILL PRESENT RECITAL

Music Instructor to Play at Flora MacDonald College.

Professor T. Smith McCorkle of the department of music will give a solo violin recital at Flora MacDonald College in Red Springs Monday night. He will be assisted at the piano by Mrs. McCorkle.

Professor McCorkle recently appeared in Hill Music hall in his annual campus recital. He has also appeared as soloist with the University symphony and was guest artist last month with the orchestra of the Virginia Teachers' College. A recital has also been scheduled in Washington during May.

Professor McCorkle's program Monday will include Mendelssohn's Concerto in E minor (opus 64), Dvorak's Sonata in G major (opus 100), three sketches: Ghosts, Gophers, and The Meadow Lark by Cecil Burleigh, Barcarole by MacMillen, Wee Bit o' Heart by Shilkret, and the American Concerto by Gusikoff.

EIGHT PLAYS TO BE PRODUCED BY STUDENTS TODAY

Program Will Be Offered by Students in Professor Koch's Playwriting Course.

Eight one-act plays, written, cast, and directed by students in Professor F. H. Koch's playwriting courses, will be experimentally produced at 4:00 and 8:00 o'clock today in the Playmaker theatre. The performances will be given before an invited audience of Playmakers and authors.

First to be produced this afternoon is Discontent, a play of industrial strife by J. M. Ledbetter. The play is directed by Ann Robertson. Blow Me Down, a comedy of sailor folk, written and directed by W. A. L. Bon-yun, and The Poet Laughed, a modern comedy written and directed by Burdette Kindig, will follow. Etowah Plantation, a legend of the south in two acts, completes the afternoon program. The drama is written and directed by Eugenia Rawls, and will be accompanied by Thor Johnson and his Salon Orchestra.

Martha Hatton's dream play, Tintagil, directed by Philip Mil-hous and the author, will begin the evening program at 8:00 o'clock. Following are a modern American comedy written and directed by James McCon-

WELLS ELECTED STUDENT COUNCIL REPRESENTATIVE

Students of the pharmacy school yesterday elected R. H. Wells student council representative from the pharmacy school division in a run-off for president of the student body of the school. W. H. Houser and N. H. McCollum are the remaining candidates, since R. S. Whiteley has dropped from the race. Voting will take place in the office of the dean from 9:00 to 1:00 o'clock.

Senior Dance Leaders

Lindy Cate, president of the senior class announced yesterday that the election of junior-senior dance leaders will be conducted tonight at 9:00 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

DROP SHOWN IN WARNINGS FROM LAST MID-TERM

Greatest Number of Deficiencies Shown in English Despite Slight Decrease.

Six hundred and eighty-five University students received mid-term warnings on one or more courses for this quarter, according to reports posted in the registrar's office yesterday morning.

This figure represents a decrease of 53 from the number on the deficiency list for last quarter, when the names of 738 students were posted at mid-quarter.

English Leads

As in the past quarter, the greatest number of deficiencies were shown in the English department, although there was a decrease of 11 in the number of warnings issued on English courses. There were 178 poor grades reported yesterday as against 189 for last quarter.

French replaced mathematics as the second hardest course. The list carried 107 deficiencies in French and 106 in mathematics. Figures for the winter were: mathematics, 146; French 130.

Chemistry stood fourth from the top in the number of warnings. There were 99 warnings given on these courses. Spanish, with 88 deficiencies, and engineering, with 64, followed chemistry.

The number of warnings in history, which dropped from 160 in the fall to 52 last quarter, decreased still further yesterday. The report showed that there were only 40 deficiencies posted on history courses.

DAILY TAR HEEL STAFF BANQUET SET FOR TONIGHT

Affair Is Scheduled at 6:30 in Graham Memorial; Members Of Past Regimes Invited.

The annual TAR HEEL Grid-iron banquet, patterned after the National Press Club banquet, will be given in the banquet room of Graham Memorial tonight at 6:30 o'clock. Among the invited guests are the editors, managing editors, and business managers of the past two regimes.

Jack Dungan, Ed French, and John Manning, who headed the editorial and business departments of the DAILY TAR HEEL in 1931-32, and the past year's staff heads, Charlie Rose, George Wilson, and R. D. MacMillan will be in attendance.

W. A. Olsen and Phillips Russell of the English department, and 'Spike' Saunders, secretary of the Alumni Association, will be the principal speakers this evening. R. W. Madry, head of the University News Bureau, has also been extended an invitation.

A program which will include the official presentation of the badges of office and other activities, which will be of an ironical nature, has been planned.

Members of both the business and reportorial staffs who have made no arrangements for attendance must see either Tom Walker or Carl Thompson this afternoon as early as possible.

The Daily Tar Heel

The official newspaper of the Publications Union Board of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill where it is printed daily except Mondays, and the Thanksgiving, Christmas, and Spring Holidays. Welcome, High School Representatives

The University prepares to assume the role of host to the state's younger set as delegates assemble here from every direction to compete for honors in the state-wide contests which are about to get under way.

It is no light occasion which brings together such a host of young men and women here on this campus for a two-day meet, but one that gives the University a chance to further its own cause in the sight of the state's leaders of tomorrow and also an opportunity to make this visit to Chapel Hill a memorable one in the mind of each participant.

It is but rare that such a group of outstanding young people meet in one place together, and every student and organization on the campus should go the limit to make the convocation a happy one. Every section of the state has contributed the very best young talent within its borders to represent it in these meetings, and the impressions which they carry back concerning the University will play unusual parts in shaping the attitudes which their respective communities will take towards this institution in the future. If these delegates are favorably impressed by the work that it is doing, then they, as tomorrow's leaders, are apt too to exert their influence in favor of the University. A great deal depends on the way in which we receive them this week.

Furthermore, a great many of these notable youths will likely go to college and if, by courtesy and consideration, we may lead some of them into these portals, then any effort which it may have cost will have been amply repaid. —W.A.S.

Tools, or the Real Offenders?

As an aftermath of the election comes the distressing news that the student council has been forced to suspend a member of the student body for making a fraudulent vote, an act which is less of a disgrace to the boy himself than to the traditions and spirit of the University. If there be one thing which above all others the University has stood for like a shining beacon it is for honesty and integrity. In the past the name Carolina has meant fair-play not only on the athletic field but in every social relationship of the campus. Being called a Carolina student has been synonymous with being called a gentleman.

Whatever may be said to the contrary, traditions and ideals of culture, honor and decency stand for something; it is they and not the classrooms which have made the University and Chapel Hill what they are. This recent case of dishonest voting unfortunately does not represent a mere lapse on the part of one student, for if it did it could be ignored. But it is what was obviously behind that act that casts reflection upon the campus. Someone in one of the parties must have deliberately planned the act or the unfortunate student would not have known under what false name to vote.

This editorial is not meant to be an indictment of any party, but an indictment of the campus for its lack of sentiment against such underhanded political methods. The student council took the only step open to them in suspending the guilty student, yet it should go further and conduct an investigation to discover, if possible, those men "higher up" who instigated the affair and then walked out leaving this poor chap holding the bag. If this student was urged to vote falsely (as he states, though he refuses to give any names) it is logical to assume that some others were likewise pushed through the polls and were fortunate enough not to be caught.

The punishment as meted out by the council was suitable for the crime, but it could hardly be called justice when the real offenders remain. —V.C.R.

Liberty and The Scottsboro Case

Despite the rebuke administered to Alabama justice by the Supreme Court of the United States that state seems intent on re-enacting the same sort of justice upon the eight Negroes condemned to die in Scottsboro two years ago. These boys were accused of rape by two white women who, disguised as men, were bumming rides on a freight train. Without being permitted adequate or decent opportunities for counsel the eight were summarily tried and sentenced to death. Alabama believed that this nation would not excite itself to protest the semi-legal murder of eight young and helpless Negroes.

Alabama was mistaken. The protest of thousands showed that there are limits to which such treatment of the Negro may go. A united effort to save the condemned youths brought to light a wealth of shocking facts of the so-called trial. Without a chance for defense, confronted by an intensely hostile jury, and extremely ignorant, there was no question as to the fate of the eight. To save the state's face the Alabama Supreme Court upheld the decision.

Not so the nation's, which decided with only two dissenting votes that the Negroes had not received a fair trial and ordered a new one. This reversal sent the case back to Alabama for a repetition of the travesty. A change of venue was asked by the defense which hoped to bring the case to trial before an educated, urban jury. The change was made to Decatur, a town of Scottsboro's calibre of intelligence and justice.

More important is the fact that, while all the defendants are black and there are several well educated Negroes eligible for jury duty in the district of the trial, not one has been allowed to sit on the jury nor does one Negro name appear on the roll call. This is too obviously a gross violation of the principles of right and justice upon which depend the life and liberty of our citizens.

No southerner, no matter how liberal, wants to see the Negro on equal footing with the white. There is a yawning gap separating the two races which demands different treatment for the good of each. It is a differentiation that no intelligent white or Negro wishes to alter or disturb.

There is one place, however, where there can be no excuse whatsoever for any discrimination. That place is before the Law. Isolate the Negro in sections of cities, in schools, street cars, and even in churches. But in a nation or state which pretends to civilization, the forces that hold sway over life and liberty must apply equitably and impartially to rich and poor, strong and weak, majority and minority, white and black. —J.F.A.

Mussolini, Hitler and Executive Committees

It is the day of dictators. Italy has her Mussolini; Germany has her Hitler; America has Roosevelt; and the two upper classes of this University have their executive committees.

It is part of the duty of these committees to plan and finance the annual Junior-Senior dances. The money for the financing end is secured by the payment of class dues by the members of the two classes.

Last fall the committees, desirous of making the dance the biggest and best in history, made a contract with a very famous and expensive orchestra. This spring as the time for the dance approached the committees found that the money was lacking. Instead of attempting to cut down the budget for the dance expenses, the committees have assumed dictatorial powers. A fee of one dollar is to be charged to all members of either class if they are to attend. It is, in essence, an act of raising the class fee without reference to the class.

The injustice of this assumption of power lies not in the assumption itself, but rather in its effect upon the members of the classes. The members of the classes have paid dues for two quarters this year. If by any chance they do not choose to pay the extra dollar (which the committees have labeled as optional), the money already paid is lost. It is used by the class, but the member derives no benefit since he can't attend the dance unless he contributes the extra dollar.

The committee has the power to conduct the business of the class. It would be foolish even to think of submitting the many details of administration to a class vote. However, it is the duty of the committee to submit all financial matters to the class for ratification.

The dictators have overstepped their boundaries. This tax is unwarranted and unjust. The committees should take some steps to correct their error. —N.A.T.

Ice Tea.

Why Not Beer?

Should Chapel Hill have beer? The Martin act introduced into the North Carolina General Assembly two days ago would restrict the sale of beer to an area two miles outside the limits of the village. University officials have not expressed an opinion on the subject, but it is safe to assume that they will, at least, raise no objection to the provisions of the Martin measure.

Would it be better to have beer sold openly in Chapel Hill under the supervision of the police, the faculty and the student council or would it be better to restrict its sale to the highways and byways? As it is now, "needled" beer is freely sold in the vicinity of Chapel Hill. One of the men who now sells the spiked product is planning to legalize his business after May 1. Apparently, then, if beer is kept out of Chapel Hill, there will be no change in the conditions under which it is sold.

A dozen or more students when asked their opinion on the question emphatically declared themselves in favor of beer in Chapel Hill. Their contention is that, if beer is legal and relatively non-intoxicating, it should be freely sold to students. It is not fair, they say, to allow beer only to those students who have the money to ride out of town to get it. If it were openly sold in Chapel Hill it would be orderly and, after the novelty was gone, student conduct would not be materially affected by beer-drinking. We are going to have beer anyway, they say, so why not have its sale open and orderly. On the whole, the psychological effect of selling it in Chapel Hill, rather than out of town, would be better.

Those who would restrict beer to the outlying districts sincerely wish to avoid placing a temptation before the younger students and those who do not already drink. Ironical as it is, there is some doubt about whether or not 3.2 per cent beer is intoxicating. Those who fear that it may be intoxicating are afraid of allowing its free sale. If students want beer and can afford the price of it, let them go out of town to get it, they say.

Unless there are radical developments, the Martin bill—or at least that provision relating to the University—will pass the Assembly. But it does seem ridiculous to place such a restriction on the sale of a beverage that is, theoretically, as harmless as ice tea. —E.C.D.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

To the Editor,
DAILY TAR HEEL:

It seems to me that in view of the splendid spirit of co-operation shown by the undergraduates when called upon to relinquish their long-awaited Spring Recess and begin a new Quarter's work without a respite, and of the enthusiasm with which they lent their efforts to defeat a certain benighted bill in the Legislature (even before President Graham requested their aid)—in view of their excellent spirit, I say, it would appear that these students in turn deserve courteous and considerate treatment from the administration, and should not be arbitrarily dealt with.

I am a firm believer in the maintenance of order and discipline, but when rules work financial hardship in times like these, I believe a way should be found to make them flexible.

A conspicuous instance in which this has not been done is the recent announcement of the over-conscientious executive secretary of the University, Mr. R. B. House, to the effect that "all classes prior to noon Saturday must take place on regular schedule." To cite a random example, one instructor had been considerate enough to re-arrange schedules so as to enable a large class to go home on Friday. One of these undergraduates (whose case I am sure is typical of many) had made all necessary preparations for riding to another State with a group of friends whose classes were over on Friday. Now he finds himself faced with the alternative of giving up the trip home or else spending at least ten extra dollars which he can ill spare. Why, I repeat, must these rules be enforced in so relentless a manner? Why, if the instructor be willing and the class be willing, may the students not be allowed an extra day of well-earned and much-needed rest? Why hurt students in the region of the pocketbook, where blows are now felt most keenly?

Let it be surmised that I am biased in this matter, please note that it is the undergraduate for whom I am pleading, since it is they who are penalized for absences preceding holidays.

A Sympathetic
Graduate Student.

To the Editor,
DAILY TAR HEEL:

As Treasurer of the Senior Class I feel it my duty to respond to the query relative to the publication of class accounts propounded in the columns of the DAILY TAR HEEL (issue of April 12, 1933). I am constrained to believe that if the author of the article entitled "Down With The Tyrants" had conducted an investigation of the accounting methods employed here, he would have refrained from the criticism which exhibits so gross a misconception of the administration of student affairs. Since the organization of the Student Audit Board last year, the accounts of all organizations collecting blanket fees are published during the latter part of the school year under the direction of the Student Activities Auditor who is a Certified Public Accountant. Itemized accounts of the above-mentioned organizations, therefore, including class accounts, will be published at a later date, but I shall be very happy to accommodate anyone desiring to examine the record of receipts and expenditures of the Class of 1933, before that time.

FRANCIS I. ANDERSON,
Class Treasurer.

Heels Set For V. P. I. After Successful Northern Invasion

Washington and Lee, V. M. I., And V. P. I. Beaten on Recent Trip North.

TEAM LEADS CONFERENCE
Griffith Ready to Hurl Homecoming Game With Gobblers Here Tomorrow.

Fresh from their most successful invasion into Virginia in recent years, Carolina's baseball team returned yesterday morning to resume preparations for tomorrow's return contest with V. P. I., which will be played at Emerson field at 4:00 o'clock.

The Tar Heels are leading the Southern Conference with a clean slate of conference victories. On a recent trip north, Coach Hearn's squad met V. P. I., V. M. I., and Washington and Lee, routing the first two by top-heavy scores and besting the Gobblers, 2-1, in a pitcher's duel between Nathan Andrews and Sauerbrun. The fourth game, that with Virginia, was rained out.

Pitching Shows Improvement
Carolina, always a hitting team, found that happy medium of combining good pitching and bunting hits with the result that the Tar Heels were unbeatable. Against the Gobblers, the game was close until the ninth when Carolina shelled two hurlers from the mound to score six runs and bring the final score to 9-1. V. M. I.'s Cadets offered the Hearnmen little opposition, Crouch hurling another six-hit game to win 14-0, while Johnny Peacock was the hero of the General-Carolina game, blasting his second homer in two days with Andrews aboard to eke out a 2-1 victory.

Joe Griffith is slated to face the Gobblers again tomorrow. Although he lost a heart-breaking 1-0 contest to Elon in which he limited the Christians to three bingles, two of which were of the doubtful variety, Joe has shown great form this season. He has allowed an average of five hits a game, which should be enough to win any ball game.

FIRST YEAR NINE WILL PLAY FIFTH BALL GAME TODAY

Tar Babies Will Meet Oak Ridge On Freshman Field at 4:00 O'clock.

Carolina's freshman baseball team is scheduled to play their fifth game of the season this afternoon, meeting Oak Ridge on Freshman field at 4:00 o'clock.

This is the last contest for the Tar Babies until after the holidays, and they will be trying to leave with a win. To date the yearlings are running fifty-fifty having lost their first two and won the last two. Oak Ridge as usual will give the freshmen plenty of opposition, having almost the same line-up of last year.

New Additions

Tuesday, in the contest with Durham high, the yearlings cut loose, scoring sixteen markers. Coach Cerney flashed a new infield with three men who had been out for only a day. Yesterday Coach Cerney gave this infield a long session of work and they have steadied down into a fast looking bunch. Womble will be at first, Montgomery at second, Irwin at short, and Moore at third.

Beta, Sigma Chi, Carr, and Laundry Clubs Take Baseball Victories.

A number of first-class engagements developed in yesterday's intramural baseball program as Beta Theta Pi, Sigma Chi, Carr, and the Laundry Club retained their places among the select group of undefeated clubs.

Beta's victory was its fourth in a row and was at the expense of Sigma Phi Epsilon, 15-8. The winners jumped off to a five-run lead by virtue of getting seven runs in the first inning and were never close to being matched thereafter.

Beta Theta Pi 705 111 x—15

Sigma Chi Scores

Sigma Chi nosed out Tau Epsilon Phi, 7-6, in a hotly contested setto, after getting off to a five-run advantage in the opening two frames. By the first half of the sixth, however, T. E. P. had closed this margin and the score stood 6-6. Sigma Chi pushed over one more tally this frame, however, and held the Teps scoreless in the seventh to decide the contest.

COACH TO ISSUE WRESTLING CALL AFTER VACATION

Excellent Material Available for Varsity Team of Next Year.

Coach P. H. Quinlan will issue the first call for spring wrestling Monday, April 24. All freshman and varsity wrestlers will be expected to report.

The varsity team for next year should have fine prospects. There will be a letter man or experienced wrestler in every weight except the unlimited which will be vacated by the loss of Captain Percy Idol. Besides these six lettermen at least three fine freshmen will come up from the yearling mat squad. Captain Shipman, Miller, and Ranson should all make fine varsity calibre.

The work-outs for the spring wrestlers will not consist so much with the ordinary mat work in the Tin Can, but work on the outside, designated to build up muscles. The Carolina wrestling mentor proposes to have his proteges take lots of road work and exercises on the ropes.

Carolina Team to Meet William And Mary Indians in Exhibition Meet.

Carolina's varsity track squad will leave this afternoon at 6:00 o'clock for Annapolis, Md., where they will meet the Navy track team in a dual meet Saturday afternoon. The Tar Heels will stop over tonight at Ashland, Va., where they will break their trip by stopping over at Randolph-Macon College.

The Carolina team will arrive at the Naval academy tomorrow at noon. The Tar Heels will then rest up from their long trip, preparing themselves for their hard meet Saturday. Already the middies have boasted that they would go through an undefeated track season.

Coach R. A. Fetzer yesterday afternoon announced the names of the Tar Heels making the Navy trip. They are as follows: F. P. Abernethy, J. F. Alexander, W. F. Armfield, S. M. Chandler, W. O. Childers, T. L. Cordle, T. H. Curlee, D. B. Fox, M. W. Glenn, J. W. Gunter, T. J. Hawthorne, F. D. Higby, H. M. Hodges, C. S. Hubbard, R. B. Hubbard, Don Jackson, C. A. Jensen, D. S. Kimery, F. R. Ever smoke
"whittle"
tobacco?

Well... here it is... already whittled FOR you. Granger Rough Cut is tobacco whittled right... that's one reason why it burns so slow and cool.

WHEN we started to make Granger
Rough Cut we knew that fine tobacco burnt hot because it burnt so fast. It kept your pipe hot. You could hardly hold your pipe in your hand, it got so hot at times.

Then we remembered that some folks back yonder used to "whittle" their tobacco.
So we made GRANGER just like "whittle" tobacco — "Rough Cut." It smokes cooler and lasts a lot longer. And also, you'll find it never gums the pipe.

So far, so good. Now we wanted to sell this tobacco for 10c. Good tobacco—right process—cut right. It was a question of how to do it for the price.

So we put GRANGER in a sensible soft foil pouch instead of an expensive package, knowing that a man can't smoke a package.
We gave smokers this good GRANGER tobacco in a common-sense pouch for 10c.

GRANGER has not been on sale very long, but it has grown to be a popular smoke. And there is this much about it —we have yet to know of a man who started to smoke it, who didn't keep on.
Folks seem to like it.

Crook Stafford, who has been on the injured list since the Southern conference indoor track carnival, will make the trip and should be able to participate in the high jump.

Following the meet at the service school, the Tar Heels will journey down to Williamsburg, Va., where they will train with the William and Mary Indians for Monday and Tuesday. On Wednesday, the Carolina aggregation will engage the Indians in a practice dual meet. This meet should give the Carolina tracksters just the right finish for the Virginia meet, carded for April 24, on Emerson field.

Assembly Favors Beer Sale Locally

The Phi assembly voted unanimously in favor of the sale of beer in Chapel Hill at the meeting Tuesday night. The bill, Resolved: That light wines and beer be sold within the city limits of Chapel Hill, which was introduced by Representative Dave Mosier, created a great deal of interest.

Two other bills were also discussed: Resolved: That the policy advocated by Hitler in Germany be condemned and that Germany remain a republic, and Resolved: That beer be manufactured in the state of North Carolina.

Miss Skinner Claims No Credit for 'Wives'

by granting the audience some use of its imagination. The obvious, to her, is neither last nor artistic.

"How did I happen to begin this type of work?", she queried while applying tiny spots of red paint to the corners of her eyes. "Well, I was out of a job and used to entertain my friends with monologues. One night Charles Hanson Towne, New York's New Yorker, suggested that I give public performances, something which had never occurred to me.

"I took his advice and found it profitable. It is only of late, however, that I have veered off to such historical subjects as the Wives and the Empress Eugenie."

Miss Skinner does not feel that her special art would well adapt itself to the screen. She confessed that she had had some tests made which she described as "acid." At present she has no desire to do movies, but if Hollywood ever does get her, it will be as the member of a regulation company. Her present style, which she considers the best medium for the display of sheer acting ability, would be at a tremendous disadvantage where there existed no contact between performer and audience.

The daughter of the dean of American actors, Otis Skinner, grimaced when asked about her technique. "My method? People are always asking about it and then telling me more than I know myself. After a speaker at a Chicago luncheon finished describing my style I began to look for things in it that I never knew were there." Acting to Miss Skinner is practically all a matter of personality. The less conscious an actor is of his art the better. In this connection, the monologist is decidedly opposed to acting schools and all methods of teaching acting by theory. She sees eye-to-eye with most of her colleagues when she observes, "There's just one place to learn acting—and that's on the stage! Schools may help a little toward voice culture and the like, but the boards themselves are the best professors."

The future holds no terrors for her. Happy in her work, she intends to continue it as long as the public demands. "But I don't want to become any quick-cut to history," she insisted whipping off the make-up towel and surveying the finished product in the powdery mirror.

"Since the Wives everybody has come running with ideas. Why only the other day someone suggested that I play Cleopatra. And you know that would be impossible," she smiled.

Can later in the evening.

The third day of commencement will feature the contest for the Mangum medal. Class Day exercises, President Frank Graham's reception for the seniors and parents and relatives, and the final graduation exercises in Kenan stadium at sunset will comprise the final day's program.

An innovation of University commencement programs which was first begun last year will be again continued for this year's exercises. No principal commencement speaker will be on the program, but Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus and Dr. Graham will address the graduates informally. The decision of the continuation of this innovation was reached when the commencement committee requested President Graham to follow the new plan due to its popularity of last year.

New Campus Walks Now Opened For Use

Two of the walks which have been under construction across the campus in front of Graham Memorial were yesterday given coats of fresh red gravel and pronounced open for traffic.

The walks ready form parts of the paths leading from Graham Memorial to New Dorms and from Franklin street by the music building. Haywood Weeks, president of the student body, announced yesterday that the campaign to prevent students cutting across the campus will be renewed.

COUNCIL NAMES BOYLE AS HEAD FOR NEXT YEAR

New Members of Interfraternity Group Assume Duties and Elect Officers.

Irvin Boyle was re-elected president of the Interfraternity council at the elections Wednesday night. Robert R. Reynolds, Jr., was elected secretary-treasurer of the organization. Reynolds will succeed Alec Webb. It was also announced at the same time that the new council had gone into office and the old one had retired.

The retiring council has received acclaim from both fraternity and non-fraternity men for its work during its term. Among the services rendered to non-fraternity men is the provision for a scholarship that is to go to a deserving self-help and non-fraternity student in order to promote better feeling between fraternity and non-fraternity men. The scholarship provides for an annual stipend of approximately $100.

Among the other provisions made by the retiring council is one for the establishment of a scholarship cup to be given each year to the fraternity having the highest scholastic average. The fraternity that wins the cup three years in succession will be its permanent possessor.

The retiring council has taken an active interest in the financial affairs of fraternities. It worked in close cooperation with the fraternity buyers association throughout the year. The amount of dues that the fraternities pay has been cut.

Among other features of the work of the council during the past year was the inauguration of the custom of having members of the faculty come up to the meetings to speak to the council on questions pertinent to their work. The same council also revised the old rushing rules and put into effect the ones now being used.

CRAIG WALL, SELECTED CIRCULATION MANAGER

Craig Wall of Lilesville was selected yesterday morning by the Publications Union board as circulation manager of the DAILY TAR HEEL for next year. For several years Wall has been in charge of local circulation of several state papers, and was formerly a member of the business staff of the DAILY TAR HEEL. The new manager, who will take office next fall, succeeds Thomas C. Worth of Raleigh.

TAR HEEL STAFF ENTERTAINED AT ANNUAL BANQUET

W. A. Olsen and J. Maryon Saunders Are Speakers; E. C. Daniel Presides.

Forty members of the combined staffs of the DAILY TAR HEEL and ten invited guests were present at the annual TAR HEEL Gridiron banquet last night in Graham Memorial.

E. C. Daniel, toastmaster for the occasion, presented the speakers and guests. Before the dessert was served two newsboys entered with special burlesqued editions of a paper which was fashioned after the DAILY TAR HEEL.

W. A. Olsen made an amusing speech which was followed by a talk by J. Maryon Saunders, also was well received. As the banquet was fashioned after that of the National Press club, there is to be no publicity given to any of the speeches.

Jack Dungan, Ed French, and John Manning were introduced and made short talks. Also the retiring editor, managing editor, and business managers were presented.

Badges of office which were satirically supposed to symbolize the characteristics of the retiring officers were passed on to those newly inducted.

After the banquet, E. C. Smith, manager of the Carolina theatre, entertained the staff with a free show.

RANKIN AND SEAWELL DEBATE BOSTON TODAY

Red Rankin and Don Seawell will represent the University in the Boston University debate this morning at 11:00 o'clock in Gerrard hall. The subject is the war debt.

Carolina will take the affirmative of the question, Resolved: That the war debts be cancelled. When Rankin and Seawell went on the northern debating tour, plans were for a debate at Boston on this question, but arrangements could not be made.

NATIONAL Y.M.C.A. HEAD TO ADDRESS DUKE CONVENTION

David R. Porter, National Student Secretary, Announced As Principal Speaker.

A tentative program for the annual North Carolina Y. M. C. A.-Y. W. C. A. student conference at Duke University April 28-30 has been planned with David R. Porter, national student executive secretary of the Y. M. C. A., as the main speaker.

The conference is an annual training period for the incoming and outgoing officers and cabinet members of approximately twenty organizations in the state. The theme of the conference this year will be "The Spiritual in Our Lives Today and Its Application to the Work of the Association."

Registration Friday
Registration will take place Friday afternoon, April 28, from 3:00 to 5:00 o'clock in the Union building on the woman's campus. From 4:00 to 5:00 o'clock in the banquet hall of the same building a tea will be given for the purpose of getting the delegates acquainted with each other. Meditation and prayer will be led by Miss Lucy Cherry Crisp in the East Duke building on the woman's campus at 7:30 o'clock. Porter will then deliver the opening address, "Spiritual Adjustment and Growth in the Individual."

SCHOOL VISITORS ARE GREETED BY HAYWOOD WEEKS

Reception in Honor of High School Competitors Will Take Place at 9:30 Tonight.

Members of high school debating and athletic teams who arrived yesterday to participate in the annual high school week activities were welcomed in Memorial hall yesterday afternoon by Haywood Weeks, who spoke on behalf of the University student body.

Weeks expressed pleasure in receiving the delegates for the high school competition, which is conducted here annually through the University extension division.

Reception at Union
Mayne Albright, manager of Graham Memorial, outlined a program prepared for the visiting students and announced a reception to be given in their honor tonight.

The reception will take place in the main lounge of Graham Memorial from 9:30 until 11:00 o'clock. Refreshments will be served by co-eds and entertainment will be provided by the Y. M. C. A. musical trio composed of Wofford Humphreys, Claude Freeman, and Bill Allbrook. Members of the two Y. M. C. A. cabinets and student government officers will be hosts. Members of the student body are invited.

The winning affirmative teams in the 14 debates last night were, in order by sections: Altamaha-Ossipee, Curry, Belmont, Sanford, Ayden, Salisbury, Raleigh, Grace, Rockingham, Cove Creek, Thomasville, Knightdale, Gibson, and Weeksville. The negative winners were: Raleigh, Thomasville, Scotts, Henrietta-Caroleen, Bragtown, Conetoe, Franklinton, Salisbury, Edenton, Curry (Greensboro), Belmont, Garland, Gastonia, and Rockingham.

The fourteen winning affirmative teams will meet in the Phi

Sherrill Outlines Conditions Of Junior-Senior Class Accounts

(Editor's Note:—For the past three days students on the campus have been questioning the condition of the treasury of the two upper classes of the University. In an effort to allow every student a chance to see the facts as they are, the DAILY TAR HEEL presents below the true situation, accompanied by a certified audit of the two classes.)

MR. FRANCIS ANDERSON,
Treasurer, the Senior Class:

Dear Sir:

At your request I have prepared statements showing the financial condition of the senior class as of April 13, 1933 and income and expenses from April 30, 1932 through April 13, 1933. Due to the short notice it was impossible to fully verify all outstanding obligations. However, I believe these statements to be approximately correct. Detailed, certified statements will be presented immediately after April 30, the end of the class fiscal year.

Comments

STUDENT FEES: The total of $3,159.05 represents the amount actually collected by the University during the period covered, and does not include $325.75 charged to seniors and uncollected at this date. It includes junior fees collected from April 30 through the remainder of the last school year.

SMOKERS: This includes $60.00 cost of the fall 1932 smoker, plus $6.00 for the spring 1932 smoker paid this fall.

DANCES: This total of $844.58 is the share of the class of 1933 of the cost of last year's junior-senior dance, including orchestra, decorations, attendants, etc.

YACKETY YACK SPACE: With the exception of the $135.00 charge for six pages for officers, dance leaders, etc., this item is still in process of adjustment. A detailed check is being made of seniors in professional schools, who, paying no class fees, have had their pictures and space charged to the senior class. The amount shown represents the best possible estimate at this time, and in my opinion, is approximately correct. Corrected figures will be published after April 30.

FINANCIAL CONDITION: The class on April 13, 1932 had total assets of $2,577.24, consisting of cash $1,883.57, advanced to Student Loan Fund (to be repaid when needed) $532.47; an advance payment made to the

Anyone desiring to get into the Bull's Head bookshop during vacation may do so by calling at the Book Exchange and getting the key which will be left there, it was announced yesterday by Mary Dirnberger.

Students Urged To Interest Prospects

"Students may be of real service to the University during the spring holidays by contacting high school and preparatory school students who may be prospective University students next fall," declared J. Maryon Saunders, alumni secretary, yesterday afternoon. As secretary of the Alumni Association, Saunders is engaged in a program of interesting prospective students in attending the University.

A meeting was conducted in Graham Memorial a week ago before the usual time for spring vacation, when about 75 students pledged President Haywood Weeks their best efforts in contacting outstanding students and activity men among preparatory and high school seniors. Saunders urged that this student movement could have a beneficial result in attracting highly qualified students here next fall.

"The University Alumni Association is making a special project this spring and summer of interesting well qualified prospective students in coming here," said Saunders. "University students in their own project can join hands with the alumni in bringing to Chapel Hill next fall new students who will continue to maintain the high standards of this University."

The Alumni office, located on the second floor of South building, has lists of high school seniors and lists of seniors in numerous preparatory schools from which Carolina attracts students. Saunders expressed eagerness to have students call by the office and get or give information about desirable prospects.

Professor Lear Explains Policy For Conduct Of Yackety Yack

(Editor's Note:—Due to the fact that there has been some talk on the campus lately as to the fairness of the method used by the editor and business manager of the Yackety Yack in charging photographer's fees and for individual space, the DAILY TAR HEEL sets below a frank explanation of the existing situation.)

(By Robert Bolton)

"The policy of the Publications Union board is to conduct all publications so that revenues and expenses are balanced," Professor J. M. Lear, treasurer of the Publications Union board, stated yesterday. At the same time the attempt is made to keep within the limits of income of that publication. With this end in view the rate of charges for space in the Yackety Yack is computed.

The annual is printed by Edwards and Broughton company, of Raleigh. All engraving work is done by Charlotte Engraving company, and Wootten-Moulton handles all photographic work. Contracts are awarded to these business firms on the basis of competitive bids submitted. The business manager of the Yackety Yack receives a salary of $175 yearly and the editor receives a salary of $100 with the possibility of a bonus which last year amounted to $60. Small items of a clerical nature also contribute to the total cost which last year amounted to around $8,000.

Sources of revenue are divided into three classes: student publications fees, advertising, and organization fees. Every student in the University pays six dollars a year for publications. Of this amount one dollar goes to the Yackety Yack. Income from this source last year amounted to $2,525. Advertising last year netted $350. Every organization represented in the annual pays for space at a fixed rate. The rate is determined so that it pays not only for space used by organizations, which includes fraternities, clubs and classes, but for "dead-head" space, which consists of those pages which pertain to the University in general and consequently for which no one can be directly charged. The revenue from organization fees amounted last year to $6,948. Of this amount, the senior class paid $1,155, consisting of a fee

New Facts On Beer

By grapevine telegraph, the welcome news comes from Raleigh that Representative Martin will probably withdraw the proviso in his beer measure which places a two-mile zone around Chapel Hill, a zone within the limits of which it would be illegal to sell legal beer.

When the beer-legalizing Francis bill was introduced and passed the General Assembly it contained no provision for regulation as beer bills in other states had done. Here was one man in the legislature who saw the dangers with which such a bill was fraught. Although he had fought against the Francis measure before it was passed, he did not take an attitude of "they asked for it now let them take the consequences." Rather, he immediately drafted a bill providing for the regulation of the sale of beer.

That man was Representative Martin. He saw that the uncontrolled sale of beer would be taken over by men who had hitherto been in illicit liquor traffic, that conditions surrounding the sale of legal beer would be no better than those under which the illegal product was sold. He foresaw unscrupulous exploiters in a business that is at best not a noble profession. It was not his intention to see public enemies—bootleggers, rum runners, and racketeers—take over a business that is, in some measure, intended to wipe out the blind tiger trade in alcohol.

It was not Representative Martin's intention, according to information received since an editorial was written yesterday on this same subject, to prohibit to the University students any pleasure that the rest of the state would be enjoying. He gives the University and its student body full credit for sane manhood and the ability to handle its own drinking problems. But, he did not want to see Chapel Hill and the University desecrated by the activities of a mob of hoodlums who would exploit students in the sale of beer.

Representative Martin says that a zone is better than no regulation at all. As one official of the administration expressed it, "We want to have respectable people selling beer in Chapel Hill under suitable regulations. But if we can't have respectable people selling it, we want a zone that will keep the disreputable ones out."

So, what Mr. Martin proposes to do, it is reported, is to take the Chapel Hill zone clause out of his bill and substitute for it a provision for local control, either by licensing or zoning of the sale of beer in university and college towns. In other words, if Mr. Martin's bill passes as he intends, Chapel Hill can have beer if its local officials want it. And the officials are willing to have beer if respectable people alone are allowed to sell in an orderly manner.

Representative Martin has shown his faith once more in the University. He thinks that we are capable of taking care of our own beer problems; he would leave the regulation of its sale in our hands. It is up to us to show him that we can drink our beer and hold it like gentlemen.—E.C.D.

Attention! President Roosevelt

It is much too early to begin criticizing President Roosevelt for so-called "sins of omission" (it is perhaps impertinent of a college student to criticize the President anyway), but it may be useful to keep in our minds some of the deeper social problems which a strong, willful, and conscientious executive would attempt to solve. President Roosevelt, by his activities to date, has exhibited practically all of the necessary qualities which should characterize a good national leader; however there exist in our nation such deep-seated and elemental evils that even Lincoln might term them unconquerable. But they exist, and shall continue in their being and flourish unless a persistent campaign of extermination and correction is instituted.

The first and most pressing concern of the administration should be, and is, the economic well-being of the citizenry. You may say that this function is so basic that it is almost amusing to mention it; but the idea can well endure repetition. After all, it is a concept which has just found favor in the eyes of men during this present century. Preceding our generation the laissez faire attitude prevailed.

Today, when we are told that there are over a million children under the age of fifteen who are employed in gainful occupations—that two and a quarter wage earners are constantly incapacitated because of illness—that 500,000 workers die each year in the face of facts presented by experts that at least fifty per cent of these deaths could have been easily prevented—that there is an almost mathematical relationship between illness and poverty—that America shows the highest maternity death rate of any civilized country on earth—that about twenty per cent of the children of the country are suffering from malnutrition—that there are over twelve million unemployed in America and no national system of employment bureaus to coordinate worker and job—that in the prosperous year 1927 the minimum health and decency budget (per family) was $2300 and the average wage in manufacturing industries was $1300 a year, thus forcing mothers and children into the labor market—that in New York City (the richest city in the world and the culminating pinnacle of our civilization) there are 500,000 families living in tenements forbidden by the building laws of thirty years ago,—when we are told these things some consciousness of social responsibility must be forthcoming.

Perhaps it is well to look at "the bright side of things," but there is little honor in trying to avoid the challenge these facts contain.—V.J.L.

Why Be Late?

The ancient philosophers instead of debating the question about which comes first, the chicken or the egg, should have come to the University of North Carolina to determine which comes later, the audience or the performer. At every public performance of any sort there is always a group of people who persist in coming late because they think it fashionable or because they care so little for the feelings of others that they cause inconvenience merely because of their own ill manners.

This regrettable habit is absolutely useless and unexcusable because it is so obviously unnecessary. Being on time at a performance requires no more effort than being tardy, but lateness has consequences which disturb everyone interested in what is about to take place on the stage.

It not only bothers those who have been considerate enough to come early by causing unnecessary commotion, but it causes a postponement of the performance until an opportune time when noise has abated to some extent, or the program is disrupted so that the audience is unable to hear many lines and some of the best effects are entirely lost.

If those who plan to attend would be considerate enough to dress only a few minutes earlier, then the performance could start sooner thus permitting an early finish to afford time for those who have other things to do, and there would be fewer interruptions to mar the beauty of the program.—F.P.G.

Thrift From Grammar School to College

Due to Senator Capus Waynick's efforts, the chances that North Carolina's public schools may have a system of thrift education have definitely increased. Wednesday Senator Waynick, an alumnus of the University, introduced into the senate two bills whose passage will mean a step forward in the history of North Carolina education. They provide for "instruction in thrift and savings" among the 800,000 school children of the state and the creation of a North Carolina State Thrift Society, which is to be incorporated by special charter granted by the legislature.

The purpose of the Society is not only to teach thrift in grammar and high schools but to afford a secure investment for school children who plan to go to college. From this latter viewpoint, it may be considered a state-wide student loan fund. It is an undoubted fact, and one which is re-affirmed by the success of the Student Loan Fund of this University, that there is no more valid investment than a loan to a student for educational purposes. And the Society estimates that it would be able to give interest as high as 4 per cent on deposits of six years' duration. So every indication seems to be that it would afford a secure and profitable investment.

Senator Waynick is lending his full support to securing the passage of the two bills introduced by him and now pending consideration before a senate committee. The University can be proud of him not only as an alumnus but as one who is vitally interested in furthering the cause of North Carolina education.—A.T.D.

Despite popular allegations, there are a few persons in the world believing college students worry. A study by a psychology class at Purdue University conducted over a period of years revealed that 56 per cent of the students were worried about their studies. Furthermore, 40 per cent of them are reported worried about money. Family affairs have 21 per cent of the undergraduates perplexed; social affairs, 17 per cent, and religion, 5 per cent. The report shows only 12 per cent of the students are worried about affairs of the heart.—Allegheny College Campus (N.S.F.A.).

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

To the Editor, DAILY TAR HEEL:

As requested by you I wish to make this statement in explanation of some misunderstanding on the part of some of the students as to the bill which was rendered the senior class by the Yackety Yack for individual senior space.

For a number of years it has been the policy of the Yackety Yack staff not to insert in the book the picture of any club or organization unless the charges for the space had been paid for in advance. An exception is made to this rule in reference to the senior and junior classes. This is done because the collections for the spaces are made through the treasurers of the classes and since only a part of the class fees are due in the fall, the rest being paid in the winter term, it would be impossible for the class to settle in full at the time the pictures are made.

This is the method which has been used in the past and was used this year: A man goes down to have his picture made. He is asked to which class he belongs. If he says that he is a senior or a junior no collection is made from him at the time.

His class is charged both for the photographer's fee and the Yackety Yack space. Three hundred and seventy-six men handed in their names as seniors. A contract was accordingly made between the Yackety Yack and the senior class for this many.

Later a bill, accompanied by a list of these 376 men, was rendered the senior class. When this list was checked up by the treasurer of the class it was found that there were a number on this list who were not seniors; at least not "seniors" in the sense of being affiliated with the senior class and paying class dues into that organization. Of these there were 18 in the pharmacy school, 20 in the school of law and seven in the school of medicine, making 45 in all. The senior class, very properly, it seems to me, feels under no obligation to pay for space for any of these men. These will have to settle directly with the Yackety Yack. There were also 21 men on the list who were affiliated with the junior class in the fall term and paid junior dues. Later these men changed over to the senior class and handed in their names to the Yackety Yack as seniors. The senior class is responsible for a part only of the Yackety Yack charge against these 21. The original list of 376 has been revised and the senior class is now being billed for 310 men only.

J. M. LEAR, Treasurer, Publications Union Board.

To the Editor, DAILY TAR HEEL:

Although I enjoyed Miss Skinner's presentation Tuesday night, I figured that it had cost me three dollars. This was based on the fact that I found all the other Student Entertainment Series so dull that I only remained a short time. And I know several boys who used their pass books for the first time this year to see Miss Skinner.

I have talked with students in all parts of the campus, and they are of one accord in disapproving of the system of taxing everyone for the pleasure of a few. Why should a person who is borrowing money to stay in college be forced to pay for something he does not enjoy? Who would not rather spend two hours at a good movie? I am certain that if the question: "Should the liberal art, commerce, and education students be charged a fee of one dollar each quarter for the Student Entertainment Series?" were put to vote, as it should be, that the answer would be an overwhelming: "No."

of $5.25 for each of 312 seniors. In addition, the senior class paid $75 for space used by the class as an organization. The junior class last year paid $1,638. Total revenue amounted to $9,825. Around $1,800 was thus cleared on the publication for the year.

Any amount thus cleared goes into the general fund of the Publications Union board to balance any possible loss by any other publication. "No surplus from the year goes over to that publication the next year and no deficit is charged against that publication, but it is retained and added to the fund for all publications," said Lear.

For the last six years the annual has shown a surplus but publications as a whole showed a deficit of $4,320 in 1929-30, and the following year a deficit of $1,133. The other years showed a surplus. The Publications Union board attempts to thus balance the deficit of any one year against the surplus of any other year.

Nutt Parsley, editor of the Yackety Yack, expects the current number of the yearbook to cost around $9,000, which is $2,500 less than any annual published here during the last six years, with the one exception of 1931-32 when the yearbook cost $8,000.

Previous to last year, each senior paid a fee of $6.50, and for each senior whose picture appeared in the Yackety Yack, a separate cut was made. Last year, however, the fee was cut to $5.25 per senior and pictures were made up with two on a panel. This system of paneling is less expensive than the previously used system. Pictures in the current Yackety Yack will be paneled.

The semi-finals in the tennis tournament will get underway at 10:00 o'clock this morning on the University courts, finals being in order for the afternoon. The track meet will also begin in the morning, with field events and heats in the track events scheduled to start at 10:45 o'clock. Finals in the latter matches will take place this afternoon.

Preceding the debate finals tonight the University Symphony orchestra will give a concert beginning at 7:30 o'clock. Immediately following the declarations, awards for athletic and debating winners will be made, with C. E. McIntosh presenting the Aycock cup, and R. B. House, executive secretary, giving the tennis and track awards. President Frank Graham will present the Thomas Hume cup to representatives from the state high school having achieved excellence in journalistic production for the year.

Another feature of the visitors' program is the inter-collegiate debate this morning in Gerrard hall at 11:00 o'clock between Carolina and Boston University.

NATIONAL Y.M.C.A. HEAD TO ADDRESS DUKE CONVENTION

Saturday morning at 9:00 o'clock the conference will enter into a program which will include two addresses by Porter, various discussion groups led by students, a business session and a picnic supper.

Dr. Frank S. Hickman, professor of psychology of religion at Duke, will close the conference at 11:00 o'clock Sunday morning with a special sermon in the Duke University chapel.

Library to Keep Open

R. B. Downs, University librarian, announced yesterday that the library will be open every day during the holidays except Sundays from 9:00 to 5:00 o'clock. The library will be closed all day Sunday. Books due during the holidays must be returned by the date set or the usual fine will be charged. Books on the reserve list may be taken out over the week-end.

TAR BABIES TAKE STIFF TILT FROM OAK RIDGE TEAM

Carolina Freshman Nine Wins Third Straight Game as It Beats Cadets, 8-6

Carolina's freshman baseball team came from behind in the seventh inning to down Oak Ridge 8 to 6 in a fast nip and tuck battle. It was the Tar Babies' third straight win.

The yearlings came to bat in the seventh frame trailing the visitors one run. Hutchison, Marcom, and Yeager all got singles, Hutchison counting the tying run on Yeager's blow. With two down Tommy Irwin connected for a triple down the third base line counting Marcom and Yeager with the winning margin.

Lefty Hutchison hurled the entire game for the winners although being touched for eleven hits. It was the second win in two starts for the big southpaw. Jordon and Beard, both left-handers, pitched for the Cadets.

Score in Second

The freshmen opened the run-making in the second when Montgomery singled, stole second and third and counted on Moore's fly. Hayworth tied the count for the Cadets in the fourth scoring on Wharton's safe blow. Carolina got a slight lead in the same frame when Irwin singled, stole second and third and counted on Montgomery's one-timer.

Oak Ridge took a long lead in the fifth with four runs on a single, a walk, doubles by King and Hayworth. Carolina tied again in the same frame with singles by Yeager, Womble and Bullock and a double by Tommy Irwin.

TAR HEELS OPEN SEASON AGAINST NAVY TOMORROW

Fetzer States Unofficial Expectations of Win With Present Team of Youngsters.

Thirty-three varsity track men left last night for the U.S. Naval Academy where the Tar Heels will open their current track season in a dual meet with the middies. The Tar Heels last year nosed out a close win from the Navy club 65-61.

In an unofficial statement, Coach R. A. Fetzer said that the meet should be close and that young blood would figure prominently in a Carolina win. He said in part: "This meet will be close; the strength of our prospects for the coming season will meet their real acid test. Potentially, I think, the Tar Heels will be strong, but we will depend on the young blood for a win over the middies. From the way the youngsters look we will be able to figure on the outcome of the William and Mary and Virginia and even Duke meets. Whatever the outcome, we will not have any alibis."

The Tar Heels will stop over at Williamsburg, Va., where they will spend Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday training with the Indians. A practice meet has been slated for Wednesday afternoon. After this short sojourn in Virginia, the Carolina club will return to Chapel Hill. There will be only five days to finish up conditioning for the Virginia dual meet, slated for Monday, April 24.

THREE BASEBALL TEAMS DROP OFF UNDEFEATED LIST

Kappa Alpha, Sigma Nu, and Lewis Are Handed First Losses of Intramural Season.

Five hitherto undefeated intramural baseball teams were involved in three of yesterday's games, and three of them had lost their unbeaten standings. Kappa Alpha, Sigma Nu, and Lewis were the teams which dropped their first decisions, while Chi Psi and Best House continued merrily on their ways to the league play-offs.

In one of the fastest and best played games of the season, Chi Psi won its fourth consecutive game, 3-0, over Kappa Alpha, which had won both its previous starts. Gayle Rogers, Chi Psi hurler, was in rare form, and limited the K.A. nine to one lone hit, a single by Schriver in the fourth when two were out.

Heber, lead-off man, brought home Chi Psi's first run in the third when, after getting to first on an error, Reynolds walked and Atwood drove Heber in with a clean single. Meyers walked to fill the bases again this inning, but Chi Psi could not score again.

Sigma Nu Bows

Ken Byerly suffered his first mound setback of the season as Sigma Nu, after winning both its previous contests handily, dropped an 8-2 decision to Delta Kappa Epsilon. The Dekes brought their record to three wins and two losses by virtue of this victory.

Best House Scores

Best House and Lewis met in a battle to decide which was to remain unbeaten in the dormitory loop, and the Best House outfit finally won out, 8-7, by virtue of a run in the seventh.

Kappa Sigs Win

Led by White and Finch, Kappa Sigma took a 14-6 win from Theta Kappa Nu. The winners scored almost at will, while the losers' only good inning was the last when they drove over three runs.

Aycock won from New Dorms by forfeit.

TENNIS RESULTS

Aycock beat Grimes, 3-0. Jones won from Onasch, 5-4, 5-3, and Frazier beat Morrison by the same scores. The Aycock pair took the doubles, 5-4, 1-5, 5-3.

Ruffin downed Lewis, 2-1. Stoll got the losers' point, beating Bell, 5-3, 5-4. Mallonee won from Miner, 5-2, 5-1, and the Ruffin team won the doubles, 5-2, 5-1.

Forfeits went to Atlantics over Manly, Phi Delta Theta over Lambda Chi Alpha, Theta Chi over Delta Psi, and Old West over Old East.

Play in High School Meet Reaches Semi-Final Round in Doubles and Singles.

Play in the annual state high school tennis tournament reached the semi-final round yesterday afternoon on the University courts, and will continue this morning.

In the singles, Hutchins of Winston-Salem defeated Crane of Hickory, 6-2, 6-1, in the first round. Armfield of High Point drew a bye; Croom of Wilmington won over Cahoon, Plymouth, 6-1, 6-2; Bardour of Goldsboro, lost to Goodman, Salisbury, 6-1, 6-0.

Dowd of Raleigh bowed to Goodes of Burlington, 4-6, 6-4, 6-4; Hamilton of Chapel Hill drew a bye; Ruth of Charlotte defeated Beard of Durham, 6-3, 6-2; Harrington of Washington defeated Mills of Henderson, 5-7, 6-1, 6-2.

Results of the quarter final round: Hutchins defeated Armfield, 6-2, 6-1; Croom won over Goodman, 6-2, 6-2; Goodes won from Hamilton, 6-1, 6-2; Ruth scored over Harrington 6-1, 6-4.

In the first round of the doubles, Davis and Respass, Washington, defeated Graham and Campbell, Plymouth, 6-3, 6-1; Charlotte high school drew

HIGH POINT RATED TO WIN CONTESTS

Defending Track Champions Are Favorites to Keep Title by Narrow Margin.

High Point's defending champions are being rated slight favorites to hang up another title at the twenty-first annual state high school track championships here today.

Intense competition is expected, however, from Charlotte, and several other teams, including Winston-Salem, Wilmington and Durham, with every indication for a fine meet and several new records. Charlotte won the title for three years preceding the 1932 meet.

Hendricks and Sams of High Point are the two winners from last year who will lead the assault on the record again this year. Hendricks won the vault of 10 feet 8, and Sams tied for first in the high jump at 5 feet 8 inches.

The other events are open for the crowning of new champions, and from the marks which the high school boys have been turning in during early season dual meets, there will be a scramble for firsts.

Eleven schools in all will send their fastest runners and best performers in the field events. The complete entry shows High

MARYLAND WILL MEET CAROLINA HERE APRIL 18

Old Liners Open Their Season Today at College Park With Penn State Game.

Maryland is scheduled to open its 1933 baseball season this afternoon at College Park, playing Penn State.

Weather conditions have held up many of the practices, but the team should be in pretty fair condition for their opener. Coach Burton Shipley announced the following line-up which will start today: Wolf, second base; Buscher, centerfield; Davidson or Love, rightfield or pitcher; Gorman, first base; Maxwell, leftfield; Chase, shortstop; McAboy, third base; Jones or McGuire, catcher. McIlwee and Ruble are the other pitchers available. Davidson and McIlwee are southpaws, while Love and Ruble are righthanders.

A southern trip will be made by the squad next week. Duke will be met in a double-header on April 17 and on the following day the Old Liners take on Carolina at Emerson field. Virginia, Richmond University, and William and Mary will also be played during the trip.

Point, Charlotte, Winston-Salem, Durham, Wilmington, Raleigh, Rockingham, Salisbury, Westfield, Goldsboro and Ayden.

TAR HEELS FACE STIFF SCHEDULE DURING HOLIDAYS

Baseball Team Will Play Five Games Here and Away During Holiday Period.

In spite of the fact that the next week or ten days is to be a holiday for the large majority of the student body, Carolina's athletes face a stiff schedule.

The baseball team has the hardest opposition to face, since five games are to be played over the holiday period. After the hard Virginia invasion just completed, the team goes to Winston-Salem tomorrow for the first game of the annual Easter series with Davidson. Carolina will meet Davidson in the second game at Concord Monday.

The Tar Heels return Tuesday for a contest here with Maryland. Friday V. M. I., defeated on the Virginia trip, furnishes the opposition in a return game with the Carolina nine.

The team ends its week's activities Saturday when the boys engage the Wilmington club of the Piedmont league at Wilmington.

Although the tennis team does not play any matches over the holiday period, many of the boys are staying at the Hill for practice.

TWO MEN TAPPED BY TAU BETA PI

Sidney Franklin and L. L. Ridenhour Named Members of Honorary Society.

Tau Beta Pi, national honorary engineering fraternity, last night tapped Sidney Franklin and L. L. Ridenhour for membership. Both are juniors.

The tapping took place at a joint meeting of the four engineering societies here. The program for the night was an explanation of the method of placing a dam by dynamite. A motion picture of the actual dynamiting was shown and two talks were given about the dam. J. D. Watson spoke on the "General Features of the Dam," and J. R. Marvin gave the "Hydraulic Experiments Leading to the Development of the Dam." According to explanations and lectures, a dam was built upright on the side of a bank and then the lower foundation was blasted out causing it to fall into position. After the experimental dam had fallen it missed its position only about two inches.

The men tapped were taken from the upper eighth of the junior class. Selection was on a basis of scholarship, breadth of interest, unselfishness, activity, integrity, leadership and character.

Tau Beta Pi is a national honorary engineering fraternity which tends to foster a more liberal spirit of culture in the engineering schools of America.

PARKER APPOINTS ALUMNI MARSHAL

William C. Woodard, 1908, Will Lead Commencement Marshals at Graduation.

William C. Woodard, 1908, of Rocky Mount, has been appointed by Judge John J. Parker, president of the General Alumni Association, as chief alumni marshal for the June commencement program. Woodard's appointment continues the tradition of having the chief marshal selected from the 25-year class.

Woodard, who is president of his class, is in the insurance business in Rocky Mount. He is a native of that city, but attended a private school in Tarboro to prepare for college. He entered the University in the fall of 1904. He was graduated in 1908 with an A.B. degree, but returned to the University in 1911 to study law for two years.

The newly appointed marshal represented Nash county in the General Assembly in 1927, 1929, and 1931. He has also taken an active interest in the various civic affairs of his city. In 1915, he was married to Miss Katherine Bunn of Rocky Mount. Woodard has five children, three boys and two girls. His oldest son, William C. Jr., aged 17, will enter the University next fall.

Seventeen in Infirmary

Seventeen students were confined to the infirmary yesterday. They were: H. D. Merrell, L. H. Curlee, B. H. Finch, Jr., L. R. Taff, Leon J. Brandt, G. H. Holmes, William L. Daniel, C. L. Freeman, Vida Miller, David Bennett, Edna Strowde, J. C. Parker, S. J. Spiegel, R. H. Proctor, Jr., Henry Baggett, F. H. Kenan, and H. S. Rubin.

Houser Heads Pharmacists

W. H. Houser was elected president of the pharmacy school student body yesterday in a run-off following the first election which took place Wednesday. N. H. McCollum was Houser's opponent. R. R. Wells was elected student council representative in the first election.

Conditions Of Class Accounts Is Outlined

orchestra for the 1933 junior-senior dance $100.00 to be deducted from the contract price, and $61.50 due from other than members of the class for pictures taken. From this must be deducted an estimated amount of $1,627.50, now due the Yackety Yack for space, leaving $950.04 available for expenditures. The class on April 30, 1932, had $965.37 so available; since that date has had expenses of $15.33 more than income, leaving the present available balance of $950.04. It should be emphasized that the accuracy of this amount is dependent on final settlement with the Yackety Yack. Also from this amount is to be deducted one-half the cost of the 1933 dance, which will be approximately $800.00. Contracts have been let for the orchestra, $1,100.00, and decorations $350.00, printing tickets, bids, etc., will be $53.50, other expenses will bring the cost to $1,600.00.

There has been some criticism of the advance to the Student Loan Fund. However, it was definitely agreed that this was to be repaid the class when needed, so that the entire cost has been about $2.00 lost in interest. In general, it is interesting to note that the $8.50 class fee is practically all accounted for as follows:

|---|-------------|
| Pictures |$1.50 |
| Members space |5.25 |
| Proportional charges, officers, etc., space |38 |
| Student government |20 |
| Total |$7.33 |

This leaves only $1.17 to meet the cost of smokers, the dance, and all other expense. In addition, this year an average of .90 per member is as yet uncollected. Were it not for the fact that the rising senior class began this school year with a surplus of $532.47, the class would now be in serious financial difficulties.

The question of having such an expensive dance at this time is a matter of personal opinion. Otherwise, I feel that the finances of the class have been very conservatively handled.

I will be glad to furnish you, or any member of the class, with any additional information desirable.

ROBERT H. SHERRILL,
Student Activities Auditor.

MR. JOHN O'NEIL,
Treasurer, the Junior Class:

Dear Sir:
At your request I have prepared statements showing the financial condition of the junior class on April 13, 1933, and income and expenses from April 30, 1932 through April 13, 1933. Due to the short notice it has been impossible to fully verify outstanding obligations. However, I believe these statements to be approximately correct. Detailed certified statements will be presented immediately after April 30, the end of the class fiscal year.

Comments

STUDENTS FEES: The total of $3,339.23 represents the amount actually collected by the University from April 30, 1932 through April 13, 1933, and does not include $389.09 charged to juniors and uncollected on that date. It includes fees collected from April 30 through the remainder of the last school year.

SMOKERS: This amount of $107.50 is the cost of the one smoker given during the period covered.

YACKETY YACK SPACE: With the exception of the $67.50 charge for three pages for officers, dance leaders, etc., this item is in process of adjustment. As in the case of the senior class,

DYER TO ADDRESS VIRGINIA MEETING

Head of Music Department Will Attend Convention of State Federation at Farmville.

Professor Harold S. Dyer, head of the music department, will appear at a convention of the Virginia music teachers' association and the Virginia state federation of music clubs Wednesday, April 19, at Farmville, Va. He will speak on the subject of the growth of choral music in the United States.

Dyer will appear before a combined meeting of the two organizations Wednesday. He will speak before the teachers' association Thursday on the amateur in music. In these addresses he will outline the work which is being carried on under his supervision as national chairman of choral festivals for the federation of music clubs.

Friday, April 21, Dyer will judge the annual state choral contest for college students under the direction of the convention. Saturday he will attend the annual banquet of the Guilford College choir in Greensboro.

a bye; Dowd and Poe, Raleigh won over Hudson and Russell, Chapel Hill, 6-2, 6-1.

Henderson high drew a bye; Ashby and Collins, Durham won from Copeland and Foister, High Point, 6-1, 6-1; Goldsboro drew a bye; Winston-Salem's team of Hutchins and Cranford won from Burlington, 6-2, 6-1. Croom and Puckett of Wilmington won over Miller and Goodman of Salisbury, 11-9, 6-1.

In the semi-final round, Graham and Campbell, won over Charlotte high, 6-3, 6-3; Raleigh and Henderson will play off today; Durham defeated Goldsboro, 6-2, 6-2; and Wilmington defeated Winston-Salem, 6-4, 6-3.

Debating Team Picture

All men who have been connected with the University debating team this year are asked to meet at Gerrard hall this morning at 7:30 o'clock for a Yackety Yack picture. This includes men who have taken part in debates or tried out for the teams.

though to a less extent, it has been the custom of juniors in professional schools who have paid no class fee to charge both space and pictures to the junior class. This is now being checked in detail. In my opinion, the amount shown on the statements is approximately correct. Corrected figures will be published after April 30.

FINANCIAL CONDITION: The class has $1,301.94 in cash, and is still due the Yackety Yack $420.00 for space, leaving an expendable balance of $881.94. At April 30, 1932 this balance was only $5.11, with excess of income over expense since that date of $876.83, making the present total of $881.94. The accuracy of this amount is dependent on the final settlement with the Yackety Yack. There is still to be deducted one-half the cost of the 1933 junior-senior dance, amounting to an estimated $800.00.

With the possible exception of the cost of the 1933 dance, it is my opinion that the finances of the class have been conservatively managed.

I will be glad to furnish you, or any member of the class, with any additional information desired.

ROBERT H. SHERRILL,
Student Activities Auditor.

High School Debate Change Is Proposed

The Di Senate and Phi Society passed unanimously Tuesday night the following joint resolution: (1) That the High School week committee made up of representatives from the Di Senate, Phi Assembly, the University Extension Division, and the University faculty, consider at once the advisability of having triangular debates in Chapel Hill on Thursday night of High School week in place of the present "group contests" which do not give opportunity for real debating and which result in physical endurance contests for the judges and the local hostesses; such change to become effective in 1934. (2) That the High School week committee also consider at once the advisability of calling a meeting of all high school debate coaches and high school principals at some time during the coming High School week, April 13-14, to discuss further this proposed change and other related problems.

Vina Delmar Story Billed At Carolina

Vina Delmar's story, "Pick Up," filmed by Marion Gering for Paramount, is the attraction at the Carolina theatre today. Sylvia Sidney and George Raft take the leading roles.

In the story Sylvia Sidney, released from prison after serving a term for a crime "framed" by her husband, finds herself destitute in the city. Her husband is still in prison. Broke and soaking wet on a rainy night, she seeks shelter in an empty cab. The driver, George Raft, moved by her condition, offers her food and lodging.

They become deeply in love, and Sylvia has her previous marriage annulled. On the very day she is freed, however, her husband appears after breaking jail, seeking revenge upon his wife and Raft.

STATE TENNIS TOURNAMENT TO BEGIN THIS MONDAY

The state tennis tournament for the college varsity as well as freshman squads will begin at Duke this Monday. All of Carolina's varsity will be entered. The freshmen, with the exception of Hunter Lott and Bernard Friedman, will be entered in the meet.

Among those to compete will be Wilmer Hines, runner-up to Bryant Grant, formerly of Carolina; Lenoir Wright, Walter Levitan, David Morgan, Harvey Harris, John Dillard, Ike Minor, Larry Jones, and Harley Shuford.

Speech Will Be Broadcast From Holy City Tuesday

The address of Field Marshal Edmund Lord Allenby on the occasion of the dedication of the new home of the Jerusalem Y. M. C. A. will be broadcast from the Holy City Tuesday, April 18. The National Broadcasting Company has made available its network (WJZ and associated stations) from 12:30 to 1:00 p. m. Eastern Standard time for this first international broadcast from Jerusalem.

Bradshaw Will Deliver Easter Morning Services

Dean Francis Bradshaw will deliver the Easter sunrise address in the United church at 7:30 o'clock Easter Sunday morning.

The sunrise service is an annual religious event here, and many members of other churches attend.

FRESHMAN PAPER RELEASED TODAY

"Theme" for March-April Contains Articles Written by Seven Freshmen.

The March-April number of Themes, publication of the freshman English department, was issued yesterday. The publication will be distributed to all freshmen today.

This issue of Themes contains seven articles, all written by students in the first-year English classes. "On People Who Go To Bed Early," by J. G. Briggs; "On People Who Go To Bed Late," by J. S. Chapman; "The Bald Eagle," by David Scott; "Romance of Chemistry," by Donald Becker; "The Music Lover," by W. C. Idol, Jr.; "A Recollection of Fear," by William Watson; and "Reminiscences of School Days," by Benjamin Kalb make up the number.

Since the establishment of the plan to publish each month several representative themes, there has been a marked increase in interest shown by the students in theme-writing, according to members of the English department. Dr. A. P. Hudson, chairman of freshman English, introduced the magazine on this campus. A similar publication at the University of Mississippi met with considerable success under his guidance.

TWENTY SCHOLARSHIPS MAY BE DISCONTINUED

Appointments to twenty University scholarships will probably be postponed indefinitely, according to Dean W. W. Pierson of the graduate school. Financial disability by the sliced University budget was given for the cause.

No statement could be obtained from C. T. Woollen, controller of the Greater University, yesterday. It is expected, however, that an effort will be made to maintain the scholarships.

Duke Administration Bans Beer on Campus

In spite of the new law legalizing 3.2 per cent beer, the long-absent beer suds will not return to the campus of Duke University, according to Dean W. H. Wannamaker.

Dean Wannamaker revealed that not only would shops on the campus be prohibited from selling the beverage, but students will be forbidden to bring it upon the campus.

Anticipating such a ruling, places of business just off the Duke campus are preparing to meet the student demand when the ban is lifted May 1, according to a recent check-up.

Official Biographer Calls Shaw 'Gad-Fly'

George Bernard Shaw is described by Dr. Archibald Henderson as a "gad-fly," who tries to sting the world into action.

According to Dr. Henderson, Shaw inflames this country and other countries with his sarcasm and rudeness for their own good, to bring them up to his ideals of "decency, efficiency, honesty in business and in government, a clean race, a square and equal deal for everybody, which he calls not Democracy but Communism."

When asked if Shaw really believes the uncomplimentary things he says about the United States, Dr. Henderson replied, "What difference does that make? Shaw wants to get reactions. When he criticizes our country, our government, our people, he is really criticizing all modern civilizations."

Boy Scouts, Professional Artists, and Junior Playmakers To Take Part in Festival.

Among the features of the Dogwood Festival here Friday and Saturday will be a number of arts and crafts exhibits with prizes for each, and a camporee to be participated in by Boy Scout patrols of North and South Carolina.

The third annual exhibition of the North Carolina Professional Artists' club will open Saturday in the central lobby of the Hill Music hall. The art exhibits will last two weeks and will be free to the public. On Thursday the crafts exhibit will begin in Graham Memorial. Children of the community will be admitted free Friday if accompanied by teachers or parents. A small charge will be made Saturday.

Scouts to Present Program

Scout patrols will meet here Friday afternoon to begin the three-day camporee. Camps are to be set up in the wooded area near Kenan stadium where the competing patrols will be judged until Sunday morning. There will be general inspections Friday afternoon and Sunday morning, when the patrols will be graded on outdoor cooking and camping.

Scouts will be guests of the University at the Carolina-Duke track meet and at the various Festival exhibits Saturday afternoon. Friday night there will be a general camp fire program, with each patrol presenting a stunt. Contests between patrols will be conducted Saturday.

FRATERNITY FIRM REPORTS SAVINGS

Fraternity Buyers Association Saves Nine Per Cent on Total Purchases.

A net savings to the member lodges of nine per cent on total purchases of household supplies was reported for the year 1932-33 yesterday by the Fraternity Buyers Association, Inc.

C. Dudley Miller, business manager of the fraternity supervision service, also stated that plans for the coming year included further savings to the twelve member fraternities by the establishment of a fraternity pressing club and a branch distributing center for canned goods, staples, and household supplies.

The savings for the past year were figured on the total goods purchased by the twelve fraternities and on the basis of the regular retail prices.

'ALI BABA' WILL PLAY TWO DAYS

Will Be Produced by Junior Playmakers in Connection With Dogwood Festival.

In connection with the Dogwood Festival this week-end, the Junior Playmakers present their adaption of the fantastic Arabian Nights story, Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves. There will be three performances in the Playmakers theatre, at 8:30 o'clock Friday and Saturday nights and at 3:00 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

Ali Baba, adapted and directed by Harry Davis, is produced by a cast of children from the village. Three elaborate scenes, designed for the production by Foster Fitz-Simons, include a treasure-cave glittering with diamonds and the resplendent Oriental palace of Cassim. Oriental dances are performed by the young slave girls, directed by Phoebe Barr.

To Be Played in Raleigh

The production is not designed for children alone, but for adults as well. The performance of Cinderella by the Junior Playmakers last year called forth numerous requests for repeat performances, and several special productions of Ali Baba have been requested. In compliance with one of these, the drama will be produced in Raleigh at the Memorial auditorium May 6 under the auspices of the Raleigh associated charities.

FACULTY VISITORS IN LAW SELECTED

Ralph Fuchs, A. C. Jacobs, W. E. McCurdy, and R. T. Steffen To Teach in Summer.

The visiting professors in the faculty of the summer law school at the University, according to announcements just put in the mails, will include Ralph Fuchs, of Washington University, St. Louis; Albert C. Jacobs, of Columbia University, New York City; William E. McCurdy, of Harvard University, Cambridge; and Roscoe Turner Steffen, of Yale University, New Haven. Professors Fuchs and Jacobs will teach administrative law and landlord and tenant, respectively, during the first term, which runs from June 12 to July 19. Professors McCurdy and Steffen will teach sales and banking, respectively, during the second term, from July 20 to August 26. Each of these visitors will use his own casebook.

Both Professors McCurdy and Steffen have taught at Chapel Hill in the summer law school before. Professor McCurdy gave domestic relations in the summer of 1930, and Professor Steffen the course in banking the summer of 1931. His name then was Roscoe B. Turner. For family reasons, a year ago he changed his surname to Steffen. As Professor Turner, that summer he spoke on banking

SUPERLATIVES OF SENIOR STUDENTS CHOSEN BY CLASS

Sara Walser Named as Most Beautiful and Hanes Lassiter as Best-Looking.

Sara Walser of Lexington was picked as the most beautiful co-ed in the senior class at a meeting of the class before the holidays to accord the honors of senior superlatives. Miss Walser formerly attended Queens-Chicora College in Charlotte, this being her first year at the University.

Lenoir Wright of Charlotte was selected the best all-around student. Wright has been a varsity tennis player for three years, is president of the German club, and a member of Gimghoul, Phi Beta Kappa, the Order of the Grail, and Golden Fleece. The class chose Milton Barber as the most influential. Barber is from Raleigh, is chief commencement marshal, and a member of Gimghoul and the Minotaurs.

Idol is Sweetest

Percy Idol, three-year varsity wrestler and captain of the grapplers in the past campaign, was chosen the sweetest member of the class. Idol, who is from High Point, won a varsity letter this year for outstanding athletic performance. He is the Southern conference heavyweight wrestling champion.

Stuart Chandler of Durham was accorded the honor of being the best athlete by the seniors. In addition to his exceptional service on the football, baseball, and track teams, Chandler is a member of the Order of Golden Fleece.

McCORKLE WILL PLAY AT CAPITAL

Professor Will Be Accompanied on Piano by His Wife in Washington Recital.

Professor T. Smith McCorkle, instructor in the music department, leaves today for Washington, D. C., where he will appear in a solo violin recital tomorrow evening. He will be assisted by Mrs. McCorkle at the piano.

McCorkle has recently appeared in a series of recitals in this state including several concerts on the campus as soloist with the University symphony. His recital tomorrow is sponsored by Ralph D. Shure, organist-composer and president of the composers' club of Washington.

The program will include Sonata in C minor by Grieg, Concerto in E minor by Mendelssohn, Barcarole by MacMillen, Gophers and The Meadow Lark by Burleigh, and Scherzo by Goens.

Probation In Effect

Students who were absent immediately before or immediately after the Easter holiday period are reminded that a penalty involving strict class probation for the remainder of the quarter is now in effect. Any information about probation can be secured at the several deans' offices or at the registrar's office.

STAFFS OF DAILY TO MEET TODAY

Reporters Gather at 2:30, Editorial Board at 3:30, City Editors at 4:00 O'clock.

Meetings of three departments of the DAILY TAR HEEL staff will be conducted at Graham Memorial this afternoon beginning at 3:00 o'clock.

At that time, members of the reportorial staff will meet with the editor and managing editor. Editorial writers will gather at 3:30, and city editors and desk men at 4:00 o'clock.

Attendance Required

The editor has announced that attendance at these meetings is required, and that members who do not attend will be dropped from the staff.

Competition for two executive positions on the staff is now going on. Nominations for places are as follows: chairmanship of the editorial board, Vergil Lee, Vermont Royster, and Lonnie Dill; assistant sports editor, Bill Anderson and Jimmie Morris. Joe Sugarman was unanimously chosen at the staff banquet to serve as chairman of the feature board.

Milton Kalb, Judah Shohan, and Bob Barnett have been nominated for the position of dramatic critic, and the following men are competing for places on the city desk: Phil Hammer, Bob Page, Jack Lowe, and Irving Suss.

During the holidays, improvements were made in the office of the publication. The editor's desk has been set off by a partition of glass and veneer, and a new desk for the managing editor has been installed.

CLASS PRESIDENT REVEALS EVASIONS OF CLASS DUES

Thirty-Two Members of Class Have Failed to Meet Obligations; Action Planned.

President C. E. Boyles of the junior class announced last night that in checking over the members of the class owing dues and those who had their pictures taken for the Yackety Yack and charged to the junior class, he found that $160 was due the class treasury.

Tabulating the junior registrations of the fall and winter quarters and checking the registration number of each member of the class, President Boyles found that there were eight pharmacy students who have had their pictures taken as bona fide juniors for the Yackety Yack. These eight pharmacy students represent a loss of $40.00.

There were fourteen people who had their pictures taken as juniors but who were registered as sophomores in the fall quarter and paid no junior class fees. The class fee for the fall quarter was $5.00 and these 14 people represent a loss of $70.00.

A group of eight people were found who had registered as sophomores in the fall and winter quarters and have also had their pictures taken as juniors. These eight represent a loss of $40.00.

One special student was found that paid no fall quarter fees and one person who has not been registered during the whole year. These two represent a $10.00 loss.

Haywood Weeks, president of the student body, stated that notices were being sent to these students calling their attention to their errors and that they would be expected to account for their actions before President Boyles and make arrangements to pay the money owed. President Weeks also stated that student council cases will be made of all those failing to make proper arrangements immediately.

SALON ENSEMBLE PLAYS SATURDAY

Presentation in Forest Theatre To Be in Connection with Annual Festival.

The Carolina Salon ensemble, directed by Thor M. Johnson, will play in the program of the Dogwood festival in the Forest theatre at 4:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon, April 29. The group will accompany several dances and will play a group of compositions based on native folk tunes.

The ensemble opened its spring series of concerts in Winston-Salem Friday, April 21, with a group of three concerts, ending with an appearance and radio broadcast at Salem College. This series of appearances was the second made by the ensemble in Winston-Salem. The group received favorable reviews of its program from the press critics.

The program of the ensemble Saturday will include Danse Moronique by Herbert Hazelman, After Midnight, Mountain Song and Cripple Creek by Lamar Stringfield.

The Staff Has The Answer

At the annual banquet of the TAR HEEL staff the names of those picked to compete for the various positions on the staff were put in nomination. These men will work in their specialty during the next month at the end of which time the members of the staff will elect one man for each of the following positions: chairman of the editorial board, dramatic critic, assistant sports editor, and positions on the desk. The chairman of the feature board was named unanimously.

The competition for dramatic critic will be run somewhat differently as each of the three competitors will review the Forest theatre production in May and all three articles will appear in the TAR HEEL. After any outside comment has been made on the merits or faults of any of the presentations, the staff will name its official critic.

In instituting this system of competition the new administration feels that a forward step has been made toward setting the stage for a staff election of the editor. It is hoped that this competition will bind members of the staff closer together so that even the lowest reporter will be acquainted with those competing for the chairmanships and so this reporter will be able to pick the best man, having observed the work and personality of all the competitors. If the staff can prove to the student body that it is best qualified to choose the editor by picking capable men for the responsible positions on the board now, then there is no reason why the staff, working as a unit and competing all the time for positions, shouldn't be allowed to name its own editor.

The administration realizes that there is ample opportunity for politics to enter into the staff elections. However, if the slightest sign of politics figuring in the staff elections is detected, the whole plan will be dropped and the editor will assume appointive powers as in the past.

The Forgotten Man Who "Hasn't"

Perhaps along with the classic phrases, "forgotten man," "new deal," and the like, we should list the retort of Senator Pittman of Nevada, one of the framers of the controlled inflation plan. Senator Pittman declared in a debate with one of his senatorial opponents that, in considering controlled inflation, "We are thinking of the man who hasn't." Thinking of the man who hasn't and thinking of the man who has, obviously represent two entirely divergent views and sum up the arguments for and against controlled inflation.

President Roosevelt has encountered some stiff opposition to the controlled inflation measures which practically give him the powers of a financial dictator, and most of them, as is to be expected, are emanating from representatives of those that "have" and are doing their best to hang on to it.

Most of us unfortunately cannot raise this objection to controlled inflation measures, since we are among those whom the depression has left with little or nothing to boast of "having." But the man who will really benefit from controlled inflation is the man with the minus quantity—the debtor. And most of us may also be classified under this head.

So it appears that from the interests of the majority we should welcome controlled inflation, along with 3.2 beer, as the panacea to revive prosperity. Whether or not this desirable end is attained, we can thank Senator Pittman for his very subtly sympathetic phrase in calling us the ones who "haven't."—A.T.D.

Our Grandstand Team Needs Practice

Carolina is in great need of more and better cheering at her athletic contests. When visiting teams play at Chapel Hill, they judge the spirit of our University not only by her buildings, her atmosphere, her team on the field, but also by her "team" off the field, and her "team" that sits in the stands. Just as we can have no sympathy with a team that does not try its hardest to win, so we should have no patience with students who choose the football stadium and the baseball field and the Tin Can as places to display a misplaced indifference and apathy.

The past athletic season with its scantiness of major victories has reflected, not on the athletes, who have the satisfaction of knowing that they did their best, but on the Carolina supporters who have been "fair weather" birds of the most pronounced sort. It is a matter of no great credit to climb on a victorious band-wagon and to acclaim a victory already gained; it requires loyalty and spirit to support a team, win or lose, because it is OUR team. The latter, however, is the kernel from which the true amateur tradition has grown.

A grandstand "team" of disgruntled, dissatisfied supporters cannot but make its impression on both contesting units on the field. The effect which on our own side cannot but be discouraging, may to the visiting side seem unsportsmanlike. Our games do not require a frenzied mob of "collegiate" partisans in either victory or defeat. On the other hand we do need a dignified expression of our pride in Chapel Hill and what Chapel Hill produces. There is a natural tendency to give vent to our feelings of loyalty. If we are to support Carolina as she should be supported, then we will not give a 50 per cent recognition of her efforts on the athletic field. We will not wait to see what happens and then cheer if we are ahead. We will not limit our support to praise of technical skill, as if our athletes were so many professional entertainers. It is up to Carolina and her "team" off the field to give visiting contestants a more just impression of what our University stands for. It is only by 100 per cent cooperation and the realization of our strength as participants in a common cause that we can put across the spirit which has made us proud to attend the University of North Carolina.—B.B.P.

Mathematics, Why Not Government?

Although there has long been considerable sentiment against it, the students coming to the University are made to take courses in several subjects including mathematics, science, history, English, and a foreign language. The requirements differ in the various schools but almost no student is free from a certain amount of work that must be taken whether he so desires or not. The merits and faults of this practice have been argued back and forth with the result that required courses seem likely to remain.

While the University demands that the student shall acquire some proficiency in these various subjects it seems odd that one is overlooked which is far more pertinent than even these most important subjects—the study of government. Although the school boasts an excellent department in this field, courses are entirely optional and while many avail themselves of them, hundreds fail to gain any familiarity whatsoever with this branch of learning.

Government is a subject that vitally concerns all of us since we live in close daily contact with it. Soon we shall pay large sums of money to support our government. Soon we shall have to select the men who are to administer our laws and to formulate new ones, to plan our cities, care for our unfortunates, maintain our roads, guarantee our safety, give us education and perform innumerable other important functions. Soon we shall have the task of creating a good government for ourselves and our posterity, yet many leave school and college in total ignorance of the elemental principles and practices on which depend our lives and liberties.

An elementary course in American government with minor changes to stress civics would be the most valuable course that the University could require. Such a course would equip the student with a knowledge and appreciation of his rights and enable him to take part in building up a better state and nation. While calculus and European history have their important places, as long as the University intends to require courses why not require one at least in the government of our country which is a far more vital thing than Horner's method or the reforms of Frederick the Great?—J.F.A.

Lest We Forget—

Recent reports of more internal difficulties in Cuba indicate that wide-spread and deep-seated opposition to the Machado regime is renewing its former potency. We read with astonishment that many students of the universities are in hiding, fearing death by the government. This is of particular interest when we compare this state of affairs with student activities in America. In this country it has become the fashion to look upon politics and questions of state as things to be derided, to be laughed at. Such is not the case with Cuba. Students there manifest a tremendous interest in politics, in social conditions, in economic theory.

The modest "reign of terror" which is keeping scores of college men and women in hiding is due to several fundamental features of the Cuban situation. First, of course, is the economic crisis in which the country has been since the passage of the Hawley-Smoot tariff act. This measure has been largely instrumental in the near-collapse of the Cuban sugar industry, purporting, as it did, to develop the beet sugar regions of the United States. A second cause of this unrest is the virtual dictatorship of President Machado. This dictatorship in turn has been made possible by the workings of economic forces. Had not the Chase National Bank loaned the Cuban government $50,000,000 in 1930 Machado would never have been able to maintain and equip the efficient army which has made revolution impossible.

That there is wide-spread popular agitation against this regime is common knowledge to those acquainted with Cuban affairs. Meanwhile, the United States is lingering in a difficult position. President Roosevelt is undoubtedly acquainted with the wholesale political murders, violations of "guaranteed" civil liberties, and general unrest. Under article III of the Platt Amendment the statement appears: "the United States may exercise the right to intervene for the preservation of Cuban independence, the maintenance of a government adequate for the protection of life, property and individual liberty..."

Will we transgress our solemn promise to the Cuban people by permitting such lamentable crimes, or will we take the vigorous action the situation demands?—V.J.L.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

(Editor's Note:—Due to the fact that no official stand has been taken as yet by the editorial board of the DAILY TAR HEEL, the following expression on the Junior-Senior dance situation by a member of the board is set down in the open forum column.)

To the Editor,
DAILY TAR HEEL:

Man has the perverted idea that the universe, all its inhabitants and God, are all here for man's convenience. It is perhaps proper that college students should feel likewise about the state, tax-payers and parents, but it is still a perverted idea. When the state of North Carolina is being crushed beneath an almost unbearable and certainly unjust tax load, when parents are enduring hardships to keep their brats in college, and when the University itself barely escaped slaughter, it certainly is inconsistent for sons of the state to throw a sixteen hundred dollar Junior-Senior Prom.

It is not a reflection on the dance committee that the decision was made. It is the negligence of the two classes as a whole rather than the committee. The committee, has a precedent to follow and also has funds available to give a dance at that figure. The apathy of the two upper classes is responsible for no pressure being brought to lower class fees and class expenditures.

The Senior class has posted one hundred dollars on a contract for an orchestra which will cost eleven hundred dollars. A contract for decoration at three hundred fifty has been made. Bids will cost fifty-three dollars. The rest of sixteen hundred dollars is for incidentals (ninety-seven dollars).

It is still not too late for the class to act if they are really interested in saving money. A broken contract with the orchestra would cost one hundred dollars. If a four hundred dollar orchestra cost would then be five hundred dollars. This would be a saving of a mere six hundred. Fifty-three dollars is reasonable for bids. By the side of some decorating bills that aren't so ancient three hundred fifty dollars is mild. It is still possible, however for the classes to do their own decorating, particularly if they can do it cheaper than contractors.

A petition circulated by members of either class or both classes to call a class meeting to reconsider, or a petition signed by over half of the two classes to

Heel Trackmen Defeat Virginia Cavaliers, 76-49

Captain Higby, Ralston LeGore, And Abernethy Lay Down High Marks.

MANY EXCITING EVENTS

Childers, Gunter, and Hubbard Sweep Field in the Century Dash.

Coach Bob Fetzter's Carolina tracksters yesterday afternoon repulsed the Virginia Cavaliers 76 1-3 to 49 2-3 in the Tar Heels' first Southern conference dual meet of the season. More than 1600 fans saw the meet which was staged on Emerson field.

The meet was packed with thrills as two Southern conference records were bettered and as many new University marks were set.

Ralston LeGore, Carolina, throwing with a bad arm, bested the Dixie record in the javelin throw which he set last year in the conference meet. LeGore's mark for the Cavalier meet was 200 feet 4 inches. Coles, Virginia weight man, put the shot 48 feet, bettering the mark set last year by Swart, V. P. I., by some five inches. Frank Abernethy topped the University hurdle mark which has stood for eight years, being set by Holt Moore in 1925. Abernethy was clocked in the 120 high hurdles for 15.1 seconds. Captain Floyd Higby beat his own University broad jump record when he jumped 22 feet 9 3-4 inches.

Eight First Places

Carolina won eight first places while making a clean sweep of a brace of events. The Tar Heels won firsts in the 100, 220, 2-mile run, 120 high hurdles, pole vault, high jump, broad jump, and the javelin. The Carolinians won the first three places in the century and in the pole vault, Smith, Carolina, took first, while Jackson and McDonald, both Tar Heels, tied up for second honors.

In the pole vault Smith had already clinched honors for the meet, but was essaying a try at the University record when his vaulting pole cracked. The Carolina officials would not permit.

Makeshift Line-up Loses No Engagements in Battle Yesterday.

The Carolina varsity tennis team scored its fifty-second consecutive win yesterday in defeating the Appalachian State Teachers' College squad, 6 to 0 on the University courts. Hines and Wright did not compete.

Harley Shuford scored over William Norris, 6-0, 6-2 in the first singles match. Morgan played number two man and won in straight sets, 6-0, 6-4. Harvey Harris did not allow his opponent, Ed Dula, one game during the match.

Walter Levitan downed Hight Dotson in an easy manner, 6-0, 6-2. Bill Minor took Ed McConnell in straight love sets. Norris and McConnell fell before McGlinn and Minor, 6-0, 6-3. Bill Harrison and Dan Suttentfield scored over Sawyer and Dula, 6-4, 8-6.

Wrestlers Will Meet

Coach P. H. Quinlan, varsity wrestling coach, has called a special meeting of both the varsity and freshman wrestling clubs at 4:00 o'clock this afternoon. The meeting will be held at Emerson Field. The meeting is very important and all men on either team are urged to be present.

Looks Hot Again

Ralston LeGore yesterday bettered his own Southern Conference javelin mark with a heave of 200 feet and four inches.

TAR HEEL TEAMS SCORE VICTORIES DURING VACATION

Tennis, Golf, Track, and Baseball Teams Have Successful Engagements.

Two tennis titles, one golf trophy, a baseball game, a track meet, and a golf and a tennis match were added to Carolina's list of spring victories during the past week when all was quiet here at the Hill.

Only the facts that Duke took the state team golf title, Davidson's sophomore ball club embarrassed our conference wonders twice, and Harley Shuford and Dave Morgan allowed such players as Frank Shields and Gregory Mangin to win the Mason-Dixie championships at White Sulphur Springs mar our victory record.

Hearmen Lose to Davidson
A nasty drizzle at Winston-Salem the first day of vacation bothered both teams and caused all of the sixty some odd spectators to huddle up on two benches in the stands. Big Joe Griffith did the hurling against cocky little Charlie Pearce of Davidson. The score was 4-3 against Carolina and none of the Wildcats' runs were earned. It might also be said that Carolina earned only one of its tallies.

ROWE ANNOUNCES SPRING TOURNEY

Intramural Points Will Be Given Winners in Engagements Wednesday Week.

Coach Crayton Rowe announced that the annual spring boxing tourney is scheduled to begin Wednesday, a week from tomorrow in the Tin Can.

Intramural points will be given to both the men entered and the teams that they enter for. Every man entered will get points while the champions and all men that win fights will receive more points. Each team entered will get points with the winning team and those following in order scoring according to their rank.

Anyone in school will be eligible to fight except those men who have been on the freshman or varsity boxing team. However, each man is required to take five work-outs sometime between now and the opening fight.

Practices are taking place every afternoon in the Tin Can under the direction of Coaches Rowe and Allen. These coaches will give each man special attention and will train them for the fights regardless of past experience. Varsity boxers will also help with the training of the candidates.

Best House has held the championship for the past three meets, downing Lewis last fall 185 to 135. Most of the individ-

Carolina Tennis Team Seeks Fifty-Third Consecutive Win In Blue Devil Match.

Seeking its fifty-third consecutive victory, the Carolina tennis team will meet the outfit from Duke here this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The Tar Heels defeated the Blue Devils 8-1 earlier in the season.

The feature match of the afternoon will be played between Wilmer Hines, newly crowned state singles champion, and Barney Welsh, whom Hines defeated in their first meeting this year.

In other matches there will be: Lenoir Wright and Higgins; Harley Shuford and John Peake, and Harvey Harris and R. Morefield. Walter Levitan will play in No. 5 position, and Dave Morgan in No. 6.

Hines and Wright, new state doubles champions, will meet Welsh and Higgins in the No. 1 doubles. Harris and Levitan will make up the No. 2 team, and Shuford and Morgan will be teamed in the third match.

ual titles will be wide open as only three of the eight winners last fall are eligible to battle. Kalb, 135 pounds; Pratt, 155 pounds; and Edwards, 165 pounds, are the only champions eligible to fight as the other winners all fought on the freshman team last winter.

After having games with Virginia Military Institute and the Wilmington Pirates of the Piedmont league rained out, the Tar Heel baseball club will resume its quest for the Big Five crown this afternoon meeting Davidson at 4:00 o'clock.

Coach Hearn's squad, although leading the Southern conference circuit with six victories and no losses, shares the cellar with State in Big Five competition. Carolina has dropped two decisions to Red Laird's Wildcats, both by a 4-3 score, while State was swamped, 12-2, by Wake Forest and last Saturday was unable to get more than three bingles off Bobby Coombs of Duke.

In Graham Memorial Mrs. Bayard Wooten will have a special exhibit of photographs of North Carolina beauty spots, dogwoods, and Chapel Hill gardens.

The American home department of the Chapel Hill Community club will offer a display of local antiques. Among the prizes to be awarded are several for the most artistic pictures of dogwood in its native setting, for handwrought articles, and for the best poem in which dogwood is the theme.

Musical Program Included
During the Saturday morning program, fiddlers, banjoists, and guitarists will play melodies from the mountains and from the eastern section of the state. Ballads will be sung and Thor Johnson's orchestra will follow them with compositions based on folk themes.

In the afternoon there will be English country dances in the Forest theatre. Old fashioned square dances with residents of Chapel Hill and neighboring towns participating will be directed by Miss Josephine Sharkey. The music, adapted by Lamar Stringfield, is to be played by Thor Johnson's orchestra.

Numbers will be sung by the University glee club and a quartet from the local Negro Methodist church.

Writing Contest Extended
A contest for undergraduate writers conducted by Hound and Horn, magazine published in New York City, has been extended to June 1, as up to April 1, the closing date originally set, only two contributions worthy of consideration had been received by the editors. A prize of $100 is offered for the best short story and $50 for the best poem written by an undergraduate in any American college or university.

One speaker at a senior declamation contest a hundred years ago drank wine in order to orate with animation and, not being able to judge his capacity, embarrassed himself and the audience when he strove to speak.

"Four Miles Out" Beer

When the law was passed prohibiting the sale of liquor in Chapel Hill, road houses were set up on every road leading here. Four miles out on the road leading from Carrboro was a government-owned still where, up to 1908 when the entire state went dry, students purchased much of their stock.

The most popular rendezvous of students of the last half of the nineteenth century was Gooch's Tavern, located four miles out on the Durham road. Here the thirsty quenched their thirst. Seldom did any one, passing the two-story frame building, ever fail to stop and to lay in a supply. Usually the student drank his hard liquor there and brought a modest number of bottles of beer back to the Hill for his own and his friends' use.

Beer Goes Big Business

Those who delighted in entertainment on a large scale ordered their beer in kegs, which were shipped down from Norfolk and Richmond, disguised, no doubt, as more innocent freight. The barrels were carried by their owners to the ice-house, which was near the present one on Columbia street, owned by the Durham Public Service, and allowed to cool for some days before they were broached. But the law of 1908, when all liquor was prohibited from the state, put an end to all this, and beer and corn no longer were legally native to the Hill.

BUCCANEER STAFF TO HAVE MEETING TODAY

The art and editorial staffs of the Buccaneer will meet tonight in the Buccaneer office in Graham Memorial. The meeting is called for 8:00 o'clock. All persons wishing to try out for the various positions on the staff will attend. New men are especially urged to come. Work on the last issue this year will begin at once.

Navy flash, who pulled a tendon at the start of the 100, romped on the Middies 77-49. Bob Hubbard and Louis Sullivan bettered the conference two mile record as they skipped across the line hand in hand in 9:47.1. Oscar Mullis astonished the government students also by bettering their discus record with a heave of 140 feet 9 1/2 inches. The funny part of it all is that now Oscar is a husband and all he will weave is sighs.

Harley Shuford and Dave Morgan went up to the Mason-Dixon tourney in Virginia. Morgan lost to Rainville, Canadian Davis cup player in the first round, while Shuford went to the third round where Sidney Wood, Wimbledon champion, whipped him 6-4, 7-5. Two old fogies put them out in the doubles.

Wilmer Hines was off his game last Monday when the Tar Heels met Davidson and was extended to 24 games before defeating Halverstadt in the first set. Wilmer improved though and took the match. Carolina won 6-0.

A large crowd gathered at the Concord ball park to see the second game of the Davidson series. Carolina started off like a house afire with Peacock's home run and two hits by Phipps and Weathers, to score two runs in the first inning, but Davidson came back to take the game, 4-3.

Maryland's Old Liners found Joe Griffith right Tuesday and could do nothing with his slants. Ruble, Liner hurler, got one of the five hits off Griff one handed through Dixon. Score, 8-0.

Wilmer Hines blazed on through the state tennis players and met Halverstadt in the finals where he mutilated him, just as he himself was trimmed last year by Grant. It was Hines' first state title after having been a finalist for three years. He then teamed with Lenoir Wright to take the doubles title.

Michaels Hits Long One
Friday, the Carolina golfers swam around the Hope Valley course in the state meet and came up with the individual championship and second in the team scoring. Alan Smith trimmed his arch enemy, Roger Peacock of Duke, by five strokes and jumped one under Storm, Duke sophomore flash, to take individual honors. His score was 149 for the tourney play. The longest drive of the meet was registered by Ed Michaels, Carolina; when he stood flat-footed and whipped absolutely nothing but the air. He showed promise, however.

The next day the Carolina team met Davidson and set them down 17 1-2 to 1-2. Jack Wagner whipped twice that day and lost four bits to Smith on the last hole.

mit him to carry on. Captain Billy Lauck, star distance man for the Virginia aggregation, clipped off a fast mile beating Ed McRae, Carolina star miler, by several yards and came back strong to pull an "iron man act" by also running a nice 880. In both events, Lauck lingered behind until the final quarter mile post and then spurred ahead with amazing speed and stamina.

The 100-yard dash was another thrilling race. Odell Childers copped Carolina first honors while Gunter, another Tar Heel, hardly a step ahead of Hubbard, came in second. The time for the century was 10 seconds. In the 220 straightaways this same Tar Heel duo finished one, two in the record time 21.8 seconds. Sackett, Virginia took third honors.

The hurdles events provided the fans with more than their share of thrills. In the 120 high hurdles, the entrants were clearing the timber in bunched groups, but Frank Abernethy pulled a spectacular finish in breaking away from his rivals to breast the tape first. Abernethy set a new University record of 15.1 seconds in this event. The lows also had their pyrotechnical display and thrills galore. Everett, Virginia hurdler, gained an advantage in the last few yards and won first, but McDonald, Virginia youth, and Abernethy, Carolina entry, fought for second honors even to the finish line where the Cavalier hurdler stumbled and gained third as Abernethy won second honors.

Dorothy Jordan Stars In Attraction at Show

The problem of inexperienced youth in search of complete happiness will be revealed here in "Bondage," new Fox drama billed at the Carolina theatre today. Leading roles are taken by Dorothy Jordan, considered one of the most beautiful younger film stars, and Alexander Kirkland, star of a number of successes.

The story deals with modern youngsters each seeking to take loneliness from his life and to gain romance.

Merle Tottenham, Nydia Westman, Jane Darwell, Edward Woods, Isabel Jewell, Dorothy Libaire and Rafaela Ottino are in the cast supporting Miss Jordan and Kirkman.

Alfred Santell directed the screen play which was written by Arthur Kober and Doris Malloy.

PHI MEETS TO DISCUSS THREE BILLS TONIGHT

The Phi assembly will meet tonight at 7:15 o'clock in New East to discuss the following bills: Resolved: That the spring vacation come during Easter week every year instead of after the winter quarter; Resolved: That Roosevelt's industrial program be commended; and Resolved: That the Louisiana citizens' petition to the United States Senate to oust Senator Huey P. Long be favored.

to the Wildcats were heartbreakers, and with decent breaks could easily have been reversed. On both occasions the victors were outthit, but Carolina couldn't connect solidly when hits meant runs.

On the mound for Davidson will probably be Lefty Pearce, who defeated Griffith in the opening game of the series. Pearce's forte is a slow breaking curve which has batters either popping up or else driving out feeble grounders. Opposing Pearce will be either Nate Andrews or Joe Griffith, with the latter likely to get the nod.

Lee Greer Announces Devotional Program

The voluntary Y. M. C. A. devotionals given previous to the holidays on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays in Memorial hall will be resumed today, according to Lee Greer, head of the Y. M. C. A. devotional committee. Tom Nisbet will lead the program this morning at 10:30 o'clock.

Other leaders for the week are Charlie Bond, Wednesday, and Edgar Thomas, Thursday. Leaders for next week will be Jesse Grier, Jesse Parker, and Butler French. The program will be similar to that of last quarter. Walter Patterson, University organist, will play some meditative selection previous to scripture reading and prayer.

HONORARY ORDER TO TAP NEW MEN TOMORROW NIGHT

Governor Ehringhaus to Make Address at Annual Golden Fleece Induction.

The annual public tapping of University students by the Order of the Golden Fleece, leading campus honor organization, will take place tomorrow night at 8:30 o'clock in Memorial hall. Hon. J. C. B. Ehringhaus, governor of North Carolina, will deliver the annual address in connection with the occasion.

Membership in the order carries with it perhaps the most distinguished honor that can be bestowed on a University student during his college days. The selections are made with the careful approval of campus leaders and traditions of the order.

Williams to Preside
Dr. Horace Williams, generally regarded as the founder of the organization, will introduce the governor. Bill McKee of Chapel Hill, Jason of the order, will preside.

Following the traditional ceremony, the tapping committee of the Fleece, composed of two robed members, will seek out the chosen men from the audience. Ten or a dozen worthy selections are customarily made each year.

The Order of the Golden Fleece was established in 1903 by three prominent University alumni, Dr. Horace Williams, Robert Herring, and R. S. Stewart. It has become the leading honorary organization on the campus and the most coveted honor that a student may reach. Eight men, including the late Edward Kidder Graham and E.

DENTAL SOCIETY TO GATHER HERE

President Graham Slated to Make Speech Welcoming Visitors to University.

The tentative program for the annual convention of the North Carolina Dental society, which will take place here Tuesday, June 6, through Thursday, June 8, was announced yesterday by Dr. F. O. Alford, of Charlotte, chairman of the publicity committee of the organization.

Three University men are listed as speakers. President Frank P. Graham will welcome the members of the society, and speeches will be delivered by Dean I. H. Manning and Dr. William DeB. MacNider of the University school of medicine.

Dr. O. L. Presnell of Asheville will respond to Dr. Graham's welcome, and the annual president's address will be given by Dr. Wilbert Jackson of Clinton.

Other features of the opening session will include an illustrated lecture by Dr. U. Garfield Rickert of the University of Michigan on "Diagnosis"; discussions led by Dr. W. F. Bell of Asheville and Dr. H. K. Thompson of Wilmington; and the report of the necrology committee by Dr. J. C. Watkins, the chairman, of Winston-Salem.

Dr. MacNider will speak at the Tuesday evening session, and Dr. Manning will address the delegates at the Thursday morning meeting. The convention will be brought to a close with a session at noon Thursday.

PROFESSOR BACK FROM BUSY TRIP

Dr. J. F. Dashiell, head of the University psychology department recently returned from a short visit north. Among the meetings and consultations attended by Dr. Dashiell are included the annual meeting of the Society of Experimental Psychologists at the University of Pennsylvania, and the annual meeting of the Southern Society for Philosophy and Psychology at Washington, D. C.

Among the obligations fulfilled by Dr. Dashiell on his northern trip were a consultation with McGraw-Hill book company in New York City, for whom he is editing a series of books on psychology, and a lecture at Yale University on recent trends in psychology.

KAY KYSER WILL PLAY AT FROLICS

Famous Orchestra Leader Will Bring Band Back to Chapel
Hill for May Frolics.

Kay Kyser and his nationally known orchestra, which originated at the University, will furnish music for this year's May Frolics, to be given here Thursday and Friday of this week, it has been announced. This annual series of dances given by a group of fraternities on the campus is generally regarded as one of the highlights of the year's social affairs.

Kyser is a native of North Carolina and a graduate of this University, as are many of the other members of his orchestra and the orchestra was originally organized here. Eight of the members of the original band are still with it, and the occasion will be something in the nature of a homecoming for them.

Since leaving the University four years ago, the orchestra has filled a great many important engagements all over the country. Included among the places at which they have played are the following: New Yorker Hotel; Gibson Hotel, Cincinnati; St. Paul Hotel, St. Paul; Baker Hotel, Dallas; RKO theatres (26 weeks); College Inn, Cleveland. The group has frequently broadcast over the Columbia and NBC radio chains.

This will be the first time that Kyser's orchestra has played here since the time of Kay's graduation. He will be remembered very favorably here as the organizer of the famed "Cheerios." In coming here to furnish the music for the dance set he follows Don Bestor, who played here last year.

Cobb, Local Student, Awarded Fellowship

Miss Martha Hurst, candidate for the Bachelor of Arts degree in Somerville College of Oxford University, and Whitfield Cobb, candidate for the Bachelor of Arts degree in the University, have been appointed as Graham Kenan Fellows in Philosophy for next year.

Declares There Is No Need for Alarm in Case Government
Resorts to Inflation.

By C. T. Murchison
Going off the gold standard means that our currency and bank deposits are no longer redeemable in gold. It also means that foreign payments cannot be made in gold except through special government license. The gold which we have, therefore, amounting to more than four billion dollars, will be kept securely locked up in the vaults of the federal treasury and the federal reserve banks.

The banks are, of course, freed from the requirement of maintaining a specified gold reserve. In the issuance of currency, therefore, and in the creation of new deposits gold will not now be a factor.

Way Clear for Inflation

Ordinarily we think of the value of the dollar as representing the value of so many grains of gold. From now on the value of the dollar is divorced from the value of gold and in consequence will respond to a different master. This means that the way is clear for inflation, provided the government so chooses. It is not yet certain, however, that the government will resort to inflation, although the sharp rise in the prices of cotton, wheat, common stocks, and foreign currencies would seem to indicate that public opinion at home and abroad expects some degree of inflation.

In this outlook there is no need for alarm. The federal administration is well aware of the dangers of inflation, and if that device is resorted to it will be done with definite limitations in mind. If inflation goes no further than the restoration of prices to the 1926 level, it will prove to be a great blessing. Once more the farmers will be able to sell their products at a

Business Leaders Of State Back Steps To Solve Financial Mix-Up

Mercantile and financial leaders of the state squarely support President Roosevelt's recent twin steps toward solving the international financial tangle and the dangerous problem of national currency. From their replies to questions sent them by the editor of the DAILY TAR HEEL on the advisability of inflation and the abandonment of the gold standard, outstanding figures in state finance and industry, such as A. J. Maxwell, Kemp P. Lewis, and Henry Burke, favor these measures and expect successful results. The scope of the messages well indicates that the state is in accord with the Roosevelt policies.

Interspersed with general praise and hope were subtle warnings to the effect that inflation might prove nothing more than an ephemeral remedy, the after effects of which might well be more disastrous than the present depression. The many European countries which have unsuccessfully tried inflation were cited. However, although many men showed concern over the possibility of controlling inflation, virtually all comments completely endorsed the administration's action on the gold standard.

STATE WORKERS GET NEW SLASH OF 25 PER CENT

Governor Scraps Burke Memorandum Calling for 50 Per Cent Reduction.

Governor Ehringhaus yesterday directed that the 50 per cent salary cut for members of the staffs of state departments and institutions as carried in the March memorandum of Henry Burke, assistant director of the budget, be changed to a reduction of 25 per cent, it was announced at Raleigh.

Burke's memorandum, issued last month, called for a salary cut of 50 per cent for April, May and June, under the scale in effect in March.

The governor, in issuing the memorandum modifying for this month the reductions directed by Burke, expressed the hope that the May and June payrolls may be liquidated on the same basis.

The chief executive's statement yesterday said in part:

"It was expected that it would be impossible under the allotments to liquidate payrolls for April, May, and June for more than one-half of normal. This would mean a reduction of 50 per cent. There was a promise though to raise the one-half to two-thirds or to three-fourths for May and for June if it were found possible.

"The situation has been reviewed and while conditions are still uncertain and do not fully warrant the action, it is decided to raise the allotments to some extent for the fourth quarter and to liquidate the April payrolls on a basis of three-fourths of normal or at a reduction of 25 per cent."

Governor Ehringhaus applied the new 25 per cent cut to his own salary, which he reduced by 15 per cent from the allotted $10,000 yearly when he assumed office in January.

VISITING ARTISTS TO GIVE RECITAL

Hugh Williamson, dean of music at Flora MacDonald College, will present a joint recital with Lillian Robeson, Evelyn Williamson, and Lida Chapman in Hill Music hall Sunday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock.

This recital is presented in exchange for an appearance made by Professor T. Smith McCorkle at Flora MacDonald College last week. These performers are recognized artists in their fields and are all members of the Flora MacDonald faculty. Williamson is a graduate of the Oberlin conservatory of music and has been accompanist for a number of concert artists. He has served as dean of music in Red Springs for several years.

SOCIAL SERVICE MEETING CLOSES

Dr. Frank P. Graham and Guy
B. Johnson Address Twenty-
First Annual Conference.

The twenty-first annual convention of the North Carolina Conference for Social Service, which took place at Greensboro, came to a close yesterday.

County-wide libraries were considered at a breakfast program at the King Cotton hotel. Miss Ann Pierce, chairman of the Countywide Libraries committee, presided over the meeting. Addresses were delivered by Dr. Julian Miller, associate editor of the Charlotte Observer, and M. H. Willis, member of the board of trustees of the Winston-Salem library.

General Session

The effect of depression on education, public and private, was discussed at a general session which met in the West Market street Methodist Episcopal church at 9:00 o'clock in the morning. The speakers were Guy B. Phillips of Greensboro, on "Public Schools," Dr. Frank P. Graham on "Public Higher Education," Dr. W. C. Davison of Duke University, on "Health," Dr. Howard W. Odum of the University on "Impressionistic Picture of the Depression," and Guy B. Johnson, of the University "The Negro."

At a luncheon meeting, presided over by Dr. Graham, a report on the Federated Council of Social, Civic, and Religious Organizations was made by A. W. McAllister, chairman of the council. An address on "The Depression and Law Observation" by Judge Johnson J. Hayes followed the report. The election of officers at the business session in the afternoon concluded the convention.

Dr. Harrer To Head Classical Association

At the meeting of the Classical Association of the Middle-west and South taking place at William and Mary last week, Dr. Harrer of the University Latin department was elected president for the next year.

Those who attended the conference from the University were Professors S. G. Sanders, G. M. Gwynn, J. P. Harland, and M. E. Hogan. Professor Harland and Hogan presented papers.

Daniel to Preside at Student
Mass Meeting Where New Heads Will Take Office.

Student campus officers for the year 1933-34 will be inducted this morning at a mass meeting in Memorial hall at 10:30 o'clock. E. C. Daniel, outgoing vice-president of the student body, will preside.

Daniel will introduce Haywood Weeks, retiring president, who in turn will present Harper Barnes, newly-elected campus leader. The new president will speak for the entire incoming administration and will introduce individually the new officers elected by the student body April 6.

New Councilmen

The new members of the student council to take office with Barnes are Lee Greer, vice-president of the student body; John O'Neil, senior delegate; "Pepper" Martin, junior representative; Carl Dupree, sophomore representative; Julie Michael, from the law school; Dick Fleming, from the medical school; and R. R. Wells, from the pharmacy school.

Claiborn Carr will be formally inducted as the new editor of the DAILY TAR HEEL to succeed Charles G. Rose, Jr. Carr has actually held the reins of editorship since April 10.

Dave McCachren will be inducted as president of the athletic association and Normant

APRIL NUMBER OF MAGAZINE ISSUED

Journal Published by School of Education Contains Interesting Features.

The April issue of the High School Journal, which contains several articles of interest to students of education in North Carolina, has just been released, according to an announcement made yesterday.

The lead article in this issue of the magazine was written by W. O. Hampton, principal of the New Hanover high school at Wilmington, who discusses the question of "The Influence of the Economic Depression on the High School."

Efficiency Lowered

The writer states that due to the excessive amount of work thrown on the high school teacher, the efficiency of these instructors has been greatly reduced.

Another feature article in the publication is "What Shall We Do About Failures in Our High Schools?", which was written by C. O. Arndt of the community high school in Morrisville, Illinois.

The Journal also carries columns on English, Science, and Latin, directed by P. C. Farrar, C. E. Preston, and J. Minor Gwynn of the staff of the school of education. Book notes and reviews complete the issue.

The magazine is published eight times a year by the school of education. The editorial board is composed of professors in this department.

Why Not Keep Score?

"And may God help you," Haywood Weeks will say today, jokingly, as he turns over the presidency of the student council to Harper Barnes. It was with these same words that the job had been given over to Weeks by Mayne Albright a year ago.

It is only with the help and counsel of the Divine that a president of the student body can perform all the duties and functions that devolve upon him. For nine months he must cease to be a student and become an executive, devoting almost all his time to official activities. Few have been the presidents of the student body who have had time to study.

That position is an exaggerated example of many more. There is a small group of men on the campus who must forego everything—including their scholastic work and their recreation—to attend to extra-curricular activities. As a result, they develop an exaggerated idea of the importance of these activities and neglect the purpose which originally brought them here: the business of getting an academic education. There are of course that few among the group who can win Phi Beta Kappa keys while becoming extra-curricular leaders.

When a student receives one important office, smaller jobs seem to gravitate to him as to a magnet. As a result, one man is overburdened and many others are excluded from their normal participation in campus affairs. Few of the campus leaders are really capable of doing the variety and number of jobs which fall to them. Executive geniuses of that nature are rare indeed.

To remedy this situation a point-system of rating student officials is suggested. The plan is widely used with good, bad, and indifferent success. The system is to value each student body office with a certain number of points according to the importance of that office. No student is then allowed to carry more than a fixed number of points for one year. For example, the presidency of the student body would rate 10 points and the presidency of the freshman class 2 points. Perhaps 10 points might be fixed as a limit to the number which one man could legally hold.

Such a system if inaugurated on this campus would distribute the administrative burden in student affairs; it would remove certain inequalities that now exist; it would give greater opportunity for a larger number of students to lead in extra-curricular activities; it would make possible a higher degree of specialization. The rating system could also be used to good effect by such honorary organizations as the Grail and Golden Fleece.

Disadvantages there are—a few. The advantages are evidently many.—E.C.D.

An Ill Wind . . .

On learning that eight pharmacy students, twenty-two sophomores, and one special student have had their Yackety Yack pictures taken as juniors and thereby evaded their own class dues, we are inclined to call the affair just another campus racket having its origin in the thoroughly human desire to get something for nothing.

But in this case, something for nothing has turned out to be a costly proposition—not especially for those who attempted it and will eventually have to pay, but for the junior class treasury, which is now $160 short.

We can certainly blame those students who evaded their class fees, but we can also blame the circumstances which allowed the unfortunate affair to happen. This year there was almost no system used in checking off the names of those students who had paid their fees and were entitled to pictures in the Yackety Yack.

The costly occurrence which was the result of this has at least brought the assurance that it will not be duplicated next year. Junior class executives declare that each student will be required in the future to pay his dues on registering in the fall quarter. And when he has his picture made, his name will be checked off, not by the haphazard method used this year, but by the system of an alphabetically arranged card index.—A.T.D.

Northwestern University freshman prodigies, aged 13 to 15 years, have developed mustache growing as an extra curricular activity.—Daily Nebraskan.

A Little Statement Now and Then

The vigilance that class officials have shown recently over class expenditures has really been gratifying. If such vigilance were constant there would be no small saving of student funds.

If class officials know that expenditures will be made public periodically they will take the trouble to keep class expenditures at a minimum, for it will be nothing to their credit to have an extravagant record attached to their names. Should the student opinion be strong enough in favor of public itemized accounts, THE DAILY TAR HEEL could at set intervals print statements of expenditures.

THE DAILY TAR HEEL is a student publication; its first duty is to serve the student body as a gatherer of facts pertaining to student life, and class expenditures regardless of attitudes in the past are facts pertinent to student life. It is not the duty of the paper, however, to force any action upon the student body. It is rather the duty of the student body to force action or recommend action to the student paper.

Some student comment or action on the question should be made if any desire for efficient student government is present. If there is no such desire, class officials would certainly appreciate the cessation of hundreds of annoying inquiries concerning expenditures.—B.C.P.

With Contemporaries

So What?

Several days ago we were asked to define the typical Columbia undergraduate. We thought. A picture of a fraternity man flashed into our mind; then the picture of a young radical. We saw the studious inmate of the College Study. The sophisticate, the cynic—and we surrendered. To synthesize so many human elements into a composite picture is a really impossible task.

Were Columbia undergraduates sincerely interested in anything? Yes, but as impersonally as possible. Against war? Apathetically they were against war. But throw themselves heartily into a "cause"? It just wasn't being done.

Wasn't it true that the Columbia undergraduate had begun to adopt a "saner" attitude towards football? Yes. There were no more snake dances, bonfires. He pardon-me's his way through a Baker Field for an enjoyable afternoon. If the Varsity loses . . . too bad. Is he interested in national problems or international affairs? Enough to know who Herriot, Litvinoff and Simon are.

He asks himself questions—religion, sex, morals, athletics, depression, money, politics, future. His answers? Superficial, because of the ubiquitous presents of the unanswerable—"So what?" Should one believe in God? A stifled yawn at three in the morning and, perhaps, yes—one should believe in God. But anyway, he's tired now and what the hell's the difference.

Back-slapped by idealists, politicians, tugged at by the new deal philosophies, sought after for adhesion to clashing political creeds, he has tried to keep himself in his little cocoon and wait. Many of his confreres have failed—artificial conservative, lukewarm liberal, inflammable radical.

So we have the tab collars, the frayed collars, the shiny trousers, the well-tailored suit—precise snobbery. Differing from his class-mates now, he will be lost when he passes through the little green door some June afternoon. Then part of the great American tradition—marriage, babies, illicit amours, reunions, and a thumbs-down little hole in the ground.—The Columbia Spectator.

The Library Artist

Once again as the self-appointed guardian of student health, welfare, and general morals, especially the latter—does this column punch on the keys of a battered typewriter. Our feeble voice is raised once more in protest, this time because our first official post-vacation contact with the University came through the medium of the library.

It was to this center of educational lore that we first repaired after a return from what was, at the most, only a mediocre vacation. With a wild look in our eyes we begged the bored attendant on duty at the desk for a necessary text. The cryptic, "Sorry, but evidently it has been stolen," was almost the last straw. Perhaps after all some people are right in their contention, and education does not pay.

The chronic book-stealer is an evil that seems destined to be a permanent part of the University world. Motivated by sheer thoughtlessness and selfishness, he is something that must be endured. But it does seem rather incongruous that one who has reached the supposed level of intelligence essential to matriculation at the University should be lacking in the fundamental, simple human virtue known as honesty.

In all probability this person will some day stride up for his sheepskin and be ceremoniously labeled an individual of some attainments. All of which means that hypocrisy sometimes bears profitable dividends.—The Daily Kansan.

actual inflation in this country, price advances being confined largely to staples of international commerce. Further parting from gold base and inflation by new currency issue will benefit debtor and entrepreneur leaving large mass population no better off. It may, however, relieve unemployment and farm distress to some extent and may lead to a mild boom, in long run, though, only to again taste the sour fruits of failure."

John Gray, distinguished banking expert who recommended the use of a capital levy instead of inflation when he spoke here last winter under the auspices of the Open Forum discussion, stated, "Nobody knows what the immediate or the long run effects of the proposed methods of inflation or any other methods will be. Every one that knows anything knows that drastic action is now necessary. Any well meant action is better than no action. In the absence of a more promising scheme, support this one."

Lewis Visions Recovery

From Kemp P. Lewis, former president of the Alumni Association and president of Erwin Cotton Mills of Durham, came the following message, "In my opinion the action of President Roosevelt in placing an embargo on gold was badly needed. Foreign nations, because of their depreciated currencies were greatly increasing their exports to this country to the harm of our industries. This country cannot afford to stand alone in upholding the gold standard. I believe a controlled currency and the controlled inflation that is on the way will raise prices and prove very beneficial in hastening business recovery. I hope under leadership of England and the United States an international understanding can be arrived at in the world conference which will hurry world rehabilitation."

Equally optimistic is A. H. Carr, president of the Durham Hosiery Mills, who wired, "In regard to your inquiry concerning the inflation plans of the Roosevelt administration, we are one hundred per cent in accord with the ideas of inflation at this time and the abandonment of the gold standard by this country. If controlled inflation can be carried through, commodity prices of all sorts will advance. This will be a great help to all classes of people."

"By going off the gold standard the dollar will be allowed to seek its own level in relation to currencies of other countries and the export business of this country would thereby be greatly benefited. On account of the past depressed currencies of other countries it has been almost impossible for this country to compete with them in foreign trade. It is our hope that inflation of either currency or credit will be controlled to the extent that we will see about a twenty-five per cent increase in prices of commodities."

From North Carolina banking circles comes the statement of H. M. Victor, president of the Union National Bank of Charlotte: "The theory and processes are over my head, but I feel sure that the action taken by the administration is obliged to be beneficial under present conditions. Certainly this is so in comparison with what might happen to the United States in world trade if we should have continued as we were."

"With the right and ability and intelligence of our national leaders to change back to previous standard when the purpose for which this program was designed is accomplished, we should feel confident and move forward with renewed courage."

Agnew H. Bahnson, president of the Washington Textile Mills at Winston-Salem, asserted his opinions in the following telegram: "The voluntary abandonment of the gold standard at a time when the gold resources of the United States are plentiful and sound should place us in a position to make a fair settlement of the international debt problem and may lead to early stabilization of international finance. The general inflation which is expected to follow is based on the abandonment of gold and on the hope of inflating commodity and general prices by the proposed farm relief and labor legislation known as the thirty-hour law."

"This may be a good way to pay off campaign promises but it may be a very costly experiment for all the people because the pages of history are full of the tragic failures of governmental efforts to raise and stabilize commodity prices and socialize industry. I favor the plan that will work out ultimately for the benefit of the great majority of the people."

The insurance business in North Carolina is represented by the following message from Julian Price, president of the Jefferson Standard Insurance company of Greensboro: "Abandonment of gold standard will give some relief, but any lasting stability or cure of this country's terrible debt situation will depend largely on legislation to be passed. We need inflation, and in my opinion through a largely increased currency circulation, never losing sight of the fact that the old law of supply and demand must be considered."

price which will enable them to meet expenses and to make mortgage payments. They will also be able to purchase the products of the factories and so stimulate the volume of industrial production. Insurance companies and banks will be able once more to collect interest on loans and investments.

The prospect of higher prices will also raise real estate values and encourage a greater number of construction projects, thus creating additional demand for raw materials of every type. The decline in the value of the American dollar will occasion a proportionate rise in the value of foreign money. This will serve to stimulate the American export trade, a development of special importance from the standpoint of the cotton farmer. Rising security prices will mean stronger financial organization for banks and borrowers as well as for corporations who have their investments in the form of securities. Inflation, therefore, will strengthen the commodity markets and the financial structure as well as enlarging the volume of production and factory payrolls.

This does not mean that inflation should not be held within strict limits. If carried too far, it will result in unrestrained speculation and the destruction of all fixed investment values. It is to be presumed that the government, therefore, will be ready to put on the brakes when the opportune moment arrives.

HONORARY ORDER TO TAP NEW MEN TOMORROW NIGHT

A. Alexander, were first inducted.

Several qualities are considered as essential for membership. The men must be of sterling character, must be powerful and influential on the campus, and must have been conspicuous for services rendered the University.

Of the eleven students tapped last year, the following are in school this session: Haywood Weeks, outgoing president of the student body, Stuart Chandler, three-letter athlete, Wilmer Hines, basketball and tennis captain, Charles Rose, formerly editor of the DAILY TAR HEEL, Lenoir Wright, voted the best all-around senior, and Bill McKee, president of the Y. M. C. A.

Tar Heels Lose Third Big Five Tilt To Davidson, 8-7

Carolina Plays Loosely Afield, Committing Six Errors; Fails to Hit in Pinches.

McCASKILL IS HEELS' STAR

Clouts Homer in Sixth to Tie Score; Morrison Brothers Lead Wildcat Team.

In a wierd, loosely played contest featured by both good and bad baseball, Davidson won her third one-point victory over Carolina this season, eking out an 8 to 7 margin in a lengthy yet exciting battle yesterday on Emerson field before 2000 fans.

Both contingents garnered 14 hits, but Coach Hearn's mound performers were victims of six costly misplays which eventually gave Davidson its victory. Despite the heavy bludgeon work of Dixon and McCaskill who clouted four base wallops, the Tar Heels were not able to score in the pinches. McCaskill was by far the outstanding star for the Tar Heels.

Basking in the limelight of the Southern Conference first place yet shivering in the cellar of the Big Five race is the peculiar position the Carolina club now enjoys.

Peacock opened the scoring in the first when he walked, took third on Phipps' infield hit, and came home on Pearce's wild toss. "Elmer the Great" Dixon increased the Carolina count in the second when he caught one of Pearce's southpaw slants for a beautiful home run in left. Powell who walked crossed the platter ahead of Dixon.

Cats Rap Griffith
Combining two errors with five bunched singles, Davidson shoved four runs across the plate to lead 4 to 3. Andrews replaced Griffith in the fourth. In the sixth canto McCaskill deadlocked the score once more when he clouted Charlie Pearce's successor, Julian West, for a home run.

Two more miscues in the seventh led to two Davidson markers. Singles by J. G. Morrison, Morgan, and J. E. Morrison interspersed with two errors by Andrews and Dixon resulted in a pair of runs for the Wildcats.

Carolina tied the count again in the seventh by virtue of Weathers' fly which was muffed, Whimpy landing on third, and with a little loose fielding on Davidson's part McCaskill barged across the plate.

In the eighth Davidson opened with West getting a free ticket

GRAPPLERS PICK MATHEWSON FOR CAPTAIN OF TEAM

Clarke Mathewson, junior, and Raleigh boy, was yesterday elected to head the 1933 Carolina wrestling team. Mathewson was named leader of the varsity grapplers at a special meeting of the lettermen.

Mathewson is known throughout the southeast as a hard fighting 125-pounder. He had a successful season last year, winning more than half his matches and going far in the Southern conference tournament. The new captain, who will succeed Percy Idol, Southern conference heavyweight champion, did not wrestle in high school nor his freshman year. He was discovered as a likely sophomore through the medium of the intramural mat tourney.

After the varsity election, Coach P. H. Quinlan outlined plans to the varsity and fresh-

GOLFERS DEFEAT W. AND L. TEAM

Laxton Stars for Tar Heels in Turning in Low Score of 74; Smith Ties In No. 1.

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)
Lexington, Va., April 25.—Carolina's golf team opened its northern invasion with a 12½ to 5½ win over Washington and Lee at Lexington today.

Laxton, sophomore sensation, was the star for the Tar Heels, scoring 5½ points and turning in the low score of the match, which was 74. The weather was perfect and the course was in tip-top condition.

Smith, playing No. 1 position for Carolina, broke even with Coan, each getting 1½ points. Laxton, No. 2 man, downed McDavid and got 2½ points to the Washington and Lee's player's one-half. Smith and Laxton, playing together against Coan and McDavid, got a perfect 3 to 0 margin. In the number 3 match, Cramer of Carolina won over Alexander 2 to 1 while in the number 4 match Coffin of the Tar Heels lost a 2 to 1 round to Brown. Cramer and Coffin together downed Alexander and Brown 2½ to ½ in the second doubles match.

Carolina continues play this afternoon, meeting the Georgetown University team at Washington.

TAR HEEL TRACK SQUADS PREPARE FOR DUKE MEET

Varsity and Freshman Teams Both in Dual Meets With Methodists Saturday.

Coaches Fetzer and Ranson yesterday put their varsity track proteges through light work-outs. Heavier work is slated for this afternoon as the Tar Heels' mentors start the grind for the Duke dual meet which is scheduled for Saturday afternoon at Emerson field.

The Carolina coaching staff was well pleased with the Tar Heels' showing against the Virginia Cavaliers. The coaches found several youngsters hitting their stride and expect them to be in top form for the meet Saturday.

The Carolina quarter mile stock jumped several points to the good as the 440 candidates showed fine form against the Cavalier runners. Crook Stafford, who has been on the injured list with an ailing ligament, came through nicely by copping a first in the high jump. Indications are now that he will not hurdle this year.

Frosh Meet Duke Saturday

Carolina's Tar Babies will meet the Duke yearling track men Saturday afternoon. The meet will be run off along with the varsity meet. According to the previous showings of the Blue Imps, Carolina's first year men will have a hard time turning back the invaders.

Carolina's most promising freshman to date, according to Coach Ranson, are: Napier, sprints; Rankin and Montgomery, hurdles; Yandell, 880; Bear, pole vault; and Evins and Barwick in the weights.

Track Squad Enjoys Pleasant And Successful Northern Trip

By John Alexander

Thursday, April 13, a busload of trackmen under the leadership of Coach Bob and Coach Quinlan set out for the north to engage the United States Naval Academy and William and Mary at their respective homes. Leaving at 6:00 o'clock in the evening, the team proceeded to Randolph-Macon at Ashland, Virginia, where the first night was spent. The first stage of the trip was uneventful, serving merely to give evidence of the great number of potential Cab Calloways wasting their time at the University. We climbed into bed at the Randolph-Macon field house at 11:00 o'clock and after several hours of delightful conversation the boys fell asleep.

Routed up early by Quinnie we ate breakfast and after the usual wait for the Sullivans, boarded the bus for Washington and then to Navy. Annapolis was reached on a cold damp afternoon and we were taken to our quarters in Bancroft hall and made to feel very much at home. A light work-out removed the kinks and was followed by a good meal in the big dining hall. Movies and early bed completed the day.

Brother Joe

Awakened early the next morning by marching midshipmen, bugles, and Manager Joe Zaglin, we enjoyed breakfast and after inspecting the grounds returned to our rooms where cards and similar diversions occupied the time before the meet.

Encouraged by the timely arrival of Coach Ranson, the team ate a light meal and shortly afterwards went down to the track to refute the Navy's boast of 48 points in the running events by allowing them but one more in the entire meet.

The weather, though by no means ideal, was an improvement over that of the previous day and did not seem to handicap seriously the athletes. The meet opened with a tough break for the Naval Academy as Johnny Waybright, their crack sprinter, pulled a muscle near the beginning of the century run, and was thereby lost to them for the meet and probably for the remainder of the year.

Childers and Hubbard finished in that order, with Scott of Navy third to give Carolina a good start. The mile saw the Navy's star distance man, Hardman, lead our McRae to the tape with a Navy boy third to balance things up. In the furlong Childers repeated with the Navy captain second and Gunter third to restore our lead. The Mid-dies tasted triumph in the 440, sweeping that event from a field of hard fighting but inexperienced Tar Heels. The two-mile proved to be the outstanding running event resulting in a tie for first between Bob Hubbard and Louis Sullivan, with Blouin of Navy third in the exceptionally fast time of 9:47.1. The 880 found Williamson off to a slow start which he partially made up for in taking second to Navy's Hardman with Kimrey taking third for the University. In the hurdles Abernethy and Hawthorne finished one, two in the highs with the former trailing Captain Newton in the lows and a midshipman taking third.

Although Carolina did better than was expected on the track, even allowing for Waybright's injury, she was most impressive

TAR HEELS TAKE SECOND VICTORY FROM DUKE, 7-2

Hines and Wright Win as Carolina Team Gets Fifty-Third Consecutive Match.

Carolina scored its fifty-third consecutive team victory and its second of the season over Duke University's tennis team yesterday on the University courts, 7-2. The team is slated to meet the Wake Forest combine here this afternoon.

Wilmer Hines, state singles champion, won from Barney Welsh of Duke, 6-1, 6-3. Lenoir Wright played excellent tennis, and undoubtedly his best this season, in drubbing John Higgins, 6-3, 6-3.

Harley Shuford lost a close match to John Peake, 4-6, 6-1, 11-9. Harvey Harris scored over R. Morefield in straight sets, 6-3, 6-0. Walter Levitan conquered Butler, 6-1, 7-5. Dave Morgan trounced Nixon, 6-4, 6-1.

In the doubles the state doubles champions, Hines and Wright were defeated by Welsh and Higgins, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4. In the third and final set, Duke was leading 4-love. Carolina tied the score at 4-all with Hines serving, but in the next game Hines lost his service and the set ended 6-4.

Harvey Harris and Walter Levitan were a long time in getting started against Peake and Butler. They lost the first set, 6-8 after having a one-game advantage up to a 5-all score. The Carolina sophomores won the next two sets in easy fashion.

Morgan and Shuford were paired to tally over Nixon and Morefield. The scores were 6-1, 6-3.

TURKISH TOBACCO

comes to this country in bales. The leaves are small and tightly packed. Each bale contains about 40,000 leaves.

DOMESTIC TOBACCO

is stored in huge wooden hogsheads. Each hogshead contains about 1000 pounds of tobacco.

A flavor that neither possesses alone

Early in the 17th century, tobacco seed from America was taken to Turkey. Different soil, different climate, different temperatures night and day, and different farming methods produced an entirely new tobacco—small in size, but very rich and aromatic.

Four certain spots are famous for the quality of their Turkish tobacco — Xanthi and Cavalla in Greece; Samsoun and Smyrna in Turkey. And it is principally from these places that our buyers get the Turkish for Chesterfield.

These Turkish tobaccos are blended, in just the right amount, with Domestic tobaccos. It is this blending and cross-blending of just the right amount of Turkish and Domestic tobaccos which gives Chesterfield a flavor that neither possesses alone.

KOCH APPEARS IN BENEFIT READING

University Professor Lends Aid To Enable Penlan Weavers To Exhibit in Chicago.

Professor F. H. Koch presented a dramatic reading of the forthcoming Forest theatre production, Midsummer Night's Dream, at Spruce Pine in western North Carolina last week for the benefit of the Penlan Weavers and Potters. The organization, which fosters native North Carolina crafts, is to offer exhibits in the Dogwood festival here this week-end.

The purpose of Professor Koch's reading was to enable the Penlan Weavers to enter exhibits of native craftsmanship in the Chicago World's Fair exposition. The exhibit will include a native log cabin filled with weavings and pottery.

Natives to Come Here

While visiting Miss Lucy Morgan, the founder of the Penlan Weavers, Professor Koch met two native mountaineers who are to exhibit their work at the Dogwood Festival, Daniel Boone V, who will offer objects in wrought iron, and Roby Buchanan, who cuts and polishes native semi-precious stones.

Professor Koch was also present at a performance by the Penlan Playmakers of the two Carolina folk-plays—Lighted Candles by Margaret Gland and Magnolia's Man by Gertrude Wilson Coffin.

COMPETITION FOR FRESHMAN GOLF TO START TODAY

Freshmen to Report to Managers at Hope Valley Course Between Today and Saturday.

Coach Kenfield announced yesterday that all freshmen wishing to try out for the University yearling golf team report to Hope Valley course between now and Saturday for a qualifying round.

The candidates are to report to one of the golf managers at the Hope Valley club house in order to receive instruction. Each freshman will play eighteen holes and the four lowest score men will represent Carolina against Winston-Salem high school Saturday.

As a result of the limited number of memberships allowed at Hope Valley, the first year men have had little chance to practice. However, since the varsity team is away on a trip, there is enough space for freshmen.

As yet, a definite schedule has not been announced, but Coach Kenfield is at present making arrangements for several matches.

Comprehensive Exams

Comprehensive examinations for the spring quarter will begin May 6, according to an announcement by Dean A. W. Hobbs. Seniors who are to take these examinations should immediately see heads of their major departments, since these are the last comprehensives during the school year.

Work on Walks Finished

Work on the four new walks on the campus in front of Graham Memorial was completed during the holidays. Workmen are busy now in grading the plots on the side of the paths, and will soon plant grass on the ground which was scraped in the grading process.

Co-ed Tea Today

The weekly co-ed tea will take place at Spencer hall this afternoon between the hours of 4:30 and 6:00 o'clock.

in the field. Wick Smith and Don Jackson took first and second in the pole vault. Higby and Charlie Hubbard followed suit in the broad jump as did LeGore and Armfield in the javelin. "Red" Hamlet tied Bingham of Navy for first in the high jump and Reid gathered a third for Carolina. Navy won the shot with Mullis and Hodges taking the next two places. The discuss was won by Mullis ("Shallabarger") who set a new school record with a fine heave of 140 feet 9 1/2 inches while Schmuckler captured a third for us. Final score of the meet: Carolina 77, Navy 49.

To Church

Following the victory we celebrated at the movies and turned in rather late. The next morning a few of us attended the impressive Easter services at the Academy chapel while others slept. After lunch we set out for Washington where we were given the rest of the day to ourselves and despite the rain all had a good time at the theatres and restaurants. That night was spent at College Park as guests of the University of Maryland, and the following day we left for the old town of Williamsburg where the college of William and Mary was to be our host for several days.

Although inclement weather prevented a large part of the scheduled practice meet from being run off, we enjoyed working out with the William and Mary boys and spent several delightful evenings with the numerous beauties that infest the town and provide a serious menace to visiting athletes. Among the outstanding times at William and Mary was Lou Cordle's time with a little blonde, whose touching farewell to our Lou was to delay our departure for home. Higby was off to a slow start, and despite his cheery "Howdy, gals," failed to do much at this phase of the trip. The several days here passed quickly; Williamsburg is a charming little town and every one treated us most hospitably. A visit to Jamestown provided a little diversion from dates and movies.

Thursday morning one week from our departure we headed for Chapel Hill and after a drive of seven hours in the rain were all very glad to see the Hill, deserted and in the clutch of an icy rain. Topping off the trip with a light work-out the party split up with eyes to the future and hopes high. For memories of a very pleasant and enjoyable trip we were indebted to the University, the consideration of our coaches, the hospitality of Randolph-Macon, the Naval Academy, Maryland, and William and Mary as well as the good spirit shown by the boys themselves over the long period.

Lombardo Declares That Day Of Tuneless Post-War Jazz Is Over

Famous Leader of Royal Canadians Believes That American Popular Music Has Taken Definite Trend Toward Semi-Classical and That Movement Will Continue.

By V. C. Royster

The day of jazz is over. Such, at least, was the decided opinion expressed by Guy Lombardo, creator of a style and rhythm which has made jazz cease to be jazz and made his name famous over the whole continent, in an interview in the lobby of a Raleigh hotel Monday.

"Yes, the day of jazz is over," he said. "But do not mistake me," he added, noticing the expression of surprise on the face of the interviewer at such a statement from the director of the famous Royal Canadians, "by jazz I mean the barbaric, tuneless jazz which swept over America immediately following the war. It was a result of the spirit of the times and the spirit is dead."

The famous orchestra leader had been caught in a few moments of leisure preceding his appearance in the Raleigh Memorial auditorium where he played for the Queen's Ball. He gave his answers with a decisiveness which precluded any controversy, occasionally giving emphasis to his remarks by a wave of his arm.

"American popular music," he continued, "has taken a definite trend towards the semi-classical, and it seems improbable that this trend will not continue."

New Campus Officers Go Into Office Today

Quarles as vice-president. Pete Ivey will assume his office of editor of the Buccaneer, E. C. Daniel will be inaugurated as editor of the Carolina Magazine, and Alex Andrews will take over the position of editor of next year's Yachety Yack.

Senior Officials

The new senior class officers to be inaugurated tomorrow are Vergil Weathers, president; George Brandt, vice-president; "Red" Rankin, secretary; and Dan Jones, treasurer.

The following are the incoming junior class officers: "Snooks" Aitken, president; Simmons Patterson, vice-president; J. D. Winslow, secretary; and Jack Poole, treasurer.

Sophomore class officers to go into office are Russell Mickle, president; Morty Ellisburg, vice-president; Vance Young, secretary; and Jake Austin, treasurer.

The debate council delegates are Edwin Lanier and Don Seawell. The new publications union board men are Bill Eddleman, senior; Bob Drane, junior; and Phil Hammer, representative-at-large.

In addition to his contributions as an outstanding president of the student body, Weeks has had a successful career on the campus in various other activities. He has held the positions of president of the Grail and the Interfraternity council, secretary of the student council, president of the North Carolina Federation of Students, representative to the National Interfraternity conference in 1931, and chairman of the Union Forum. He also has served as chairman of the Southeastern District of the National Student Federation of America, and has been a member of the Di Senate, Athletic council, Epsilon Phi Delta, and numerous committees. He was a member of the freshman basketball team and served as manager of track. In the Y. M. C. A. he held the position of manager of deputization work, and was initiated into the Phi Delta Phi legal frater. Post-war jazz is dead." This last with a shake of his head.

Those in the know, he said, had seen the pendulum swinging for some time, and he admitted that without this change of feeling his own success would hardly have been possible. He expressed the thought that Whiteman had used his head better than any one else in the game, for, as he pointed out, it is seldom that an orchestra leader stays at the top more than a few years. "Most of them come and go," he said with his first smile, "but Whiteman keeps right on coming."

When questioned by the reporter as to whether he would do as Whiteman has done and change his style to suit the public taste, he hesitated a moment, then shook his head, though somewhat hesitantly. He thought his fame had been built on "Lombardo rhythm" and that to change would not be fair to his public, intimating a Lombardo tradition, perhaps.

As a parting shot, he said that he hoped the present reactionary trend would continue, but reminded the interviewer that it took jazz to make the people music conscious, a thing which was good for the people and especially for the Lombardos.

to first. A sacrifice hit and J. G. Morrison's two base knock scored West. A timely single by Mackorell registered Morrison's run to conclude the scoring for the Presbyterian club.

Vick, pinch hitting for Croom, gave Carolina fans new life in the ninth when he singled. McCaskill forced him at second. Powell singled. Dixon then sent a singleton into center which scored McCaskill. With the tying run on third, pinch-hitter Matheson grounded out to Peabody at first.

'Kiss Before the Mirror' Plays at Carolina Today

"Kiss Before the Mirror" will be the featured attraction shown at the Carolina theatre today. Nancy Carroll will take the lead role in the production.

Senior Regalia

Seniors are warned that tomorrow will be the last day on which Randolph-McDonald's will take orders for regalia to be worn during senior week. A deposit of one dollar is required.

Feature Board Meeting

All members of and candidates for the feature board of THE DAILY TAR HEEL will meet with the chairman and the editor in the offices of the publication this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Harper Barnes has also been extremely active in student affairs. He was elected permanent president of the senior class of 1932 and was president of the Dormitory Store association. He has been a member of the Epsilon Phi Delta, Student Forum, Amphoterothern, the editorial staff of the DAILY TAR HEEL, the freshman friendship council, and the Phi assembly. He has been a representative on the student council for two years. In addition, Barnes was elected the best student in his senior class and maintained an average of 93 per cent for the regular four-year work.

FROSH WIN FROM DEACON NETMEN

Bernie Friedman Wins Easily Over Dickinson in No. 1 Singles Engagement.

The freshman tennis team scored its second victory of the season over the Wake Forest squad here yesterday by the score of 9 to 0. The Carolina squad will be pitted against the Duke freshmen this afternoon on the University courts.

Bernard Friedman, who is slated to meet Charles Harris of Duke tomorrow, recent winner over Berkley Bell of Pinehurst, won his match easily from Dickinson, 6-0, 6-2. Friedman encountered little difficulty in making his ground shots count.

In the second singles matches Hunter Lott won over Josey, 6-1, 6-1. Lott is rounding into form after two weeks of illness.

Mark Lynch allowed Sandlin five games in two sets, 6-1, 6-4. Sobol tallied over Bradbury, 6-0, 6-1. Jimmy Johnston blanked Potat, 6-0, 6-0. Baukney lost but one game to Cox, 6-1, 6-0.

In the doubles, Lynch and Sobol defeated Sandlin and Dickinson, 6-1, 6-2. Primrose and Johnston scored over Josey and Bradbury, 7-5, 6-1. Williams and Baukney won from Potat and Cox, 6-0, 6-1.

Crane to Speak

Dr. Harry W. Crane of the University Sociology department will speak before the Tri-State conference of orphanage workers which meets today in Raleigh. His topic will be "Intelligence Quotients—How They Are Determined and Their Significance."

Nine Confined

Nine students were under the care of the University physician at the infirmary yesterday. They were Charles Brady, T. B. Spencer, B. C. Kindig, W. H. Ray, Carl Hoche, G. H. Holmes, T. B. Stroupe, W. W. Pietz, and David Bennett.

SEVEN ENTRANTS DROP FROM PLAY

Step Taken to Remove Deadwood From Intramural Tennis and Baseball Races.

Drastic steps have been taken by intramural authorities to clear the baseball and tennis leagues of deadwood, and several teams guilty of excessive forfeiting have been dropped from the leagues.

In baseball, two fraternities, Sigma Phi Sigma and Delta Psi, and three dormitories, Old West, Steele, and Old East, have lost their privilege of competing further this season. In the tennis race Steele and Manly have been dropped.

Thirty-One Officers Installed In New Student Administration

Induction of Campus Leaders for 1933-34 Conducted Yesterday in Memorial Hall.

BARNES MAKES ADDRESS

New President Asks for Student Cooperation in Administrative Affairs Next Year.

New campus officers took over the reins of office yesterday morning at an induction in Memorial hall. Thirty-one officials for 1933-34 were formally installed.

Harper Barnes of Lillington, new president of the student body, introduced the incoming administrative leaders in turn after a speech of acceptance of office which followed outgoing president Haywood Weeks' farewell address. E. C. Daniel, outgoing vice-president of the student body and new editor of the Carolina Magazine, presided.

Asks for Support

Barnes asked for the support of the entire student body in his inaugural address, stating that the present state of affairs demands the closest co-operation between campus officers and students. He stated that the heavy voting in the recent election proved that the student body was vitally interested in its government and that a whole-hearted co-operation would be the most obvious manifestation in its future success.

The new president congratulated the outgoing administration under Weeks for the high standard of efficiency with which the campus affairs were handled. Speaking for himself and the entire new governing group he pledged a regime of honest effort to uphold those

THOMPSON NAMED HANDBOOK EDITOR

Minor Will Be Business Manager for 1933-34 Y. M. C. A. Freshman Handbook.

Carl G. Thompson, Jr., was selected yesterday as the incoming editor of the 1933-34 Y. M. C. A. Handbook, and W. T. Minor was chosen for the new business manager. The new men will begin work on the next issue immediately.

The selection of the other members of the staff has not been completed yet, however the new editor has announced plans for a meeting of the staff in the near future.

Thompson has worked on the DAILY TAR HEEL staff as a reporter, chairman of the foreign news board, desk man, and city editor. He has also been connected with the Carolina Magazine and Student Journal.

The new editor has announced that the next Handbook will be made slightly smaller so that it will fit into the coat pocket of the freshman and that full instructions as to the activities open to the freshmen and new students will be given in detail.

The Handbook is published by the University Y. M. C. A. and is sent to the new students at the beginning of the school year. It contains information useful to new men on the campus.

FINAL PROGRAM ANNOUNCED FOR DOGWOOD EVENT

Full Program Is Scheduled for Annual Festival Here Saturday.

The complete schedule of events during the Dogwood Festival this week-end, which is conducted here annually to give expression to the folk-activities native in the state, has been released by Russell M. Grumman, director of the University extension division. Two festival programs of folk-songs and dances in the Forest theatre at 10:30 and 4:00 o'clock Saturday will be featured.

The morning program in the Forest theatre will include native melodies by fiddlers, banjo and guitar players, and ballad singers. Numbers by combined instrument bands and poetry readings will also be presented.

Old English country dances by students from the Hugh Morson high school at Raleigh are to continue the program at 4:00 o'clock. The dances are directed by Mrs. Dorothy Nash Hutch-

STUDENTS WILL ATTEND MEETING

Annual North Carolina Y. M. C. A. Conference to Take Place at Duke.

Several University students will attend the annual North Carolina Y. M. C. A. student conference which will take place at Duke University for three days beginning tomorrow. The conference, which was conducted here last year, is an annual affair and is attended by delegates from the various colleges in North Carolina.

The theme this year will be "The Spiritual in Our Lives and Its Application to the Work of the Association." The main speaker of the meeting will be David R. Porter. He will address the group on three occasions, discussing "The Spiritual Adjustment and Growth in the Individual," "Spiritual Adjustment and Growth of the Group," and "The Wider Spiritual Implications of our Association Objectives." There will be several discussion groups led by students and members of the Duke faculty.

Those who will attend from the University are John Acee, Bill McKee, Russell Mickle, Jesse Greer, J. D. Winslow, Simmons Patterson, and B. S. Smith.

Other members of the local Y. M. C. A. who wish to attend the conference are urged to get in touch with either Bill McKee or John Acee immediately.

Engineer Staff Meets

Announcement has been made that there will be an important meeting of the entire staff of the Carolina Engineer in the mechanical engineer room of Phillips hall at 7:00 o'clock tonight. All members are urged to attend.

FREE TUITION AT UNIVERSITY WILL BE DISCONTINUED

Over 297 Students at University Will Be Affected by Recently Passed Measure.

The passage of a bill in the state legislature to abolish free tuition in all state supported institutions leaves the University only approximately 125 endowed scholarships for next year, according to R. B. House, executive secretary.

The number of students receiving free tuition in a half dozen state-supported educational institutions has been given by Senator Hayden Clement, one of the supporters of the bill as 4,156 of which 297 are students at Carolina. Those receiving free tuition are candidates for ministry, sons of ministers residing in the state, residents of the state under bodily infirmity, teachers in North Carolina schools, and education students.

It is estimated that the abolition of free tuition will bring in $200,000 a year additional revenue to state colleges. The objection that the measure would deprive poor but worthy students of a chance at higher education was met by a provision giving governing authorities the power to accept student obligations for tuition at their discretion. Sponsors of the abolition bill declared that the present system of free tuition has been frequently abused.

The scholarships and fellowships remaining are largely supplied annually by the incomes from endowments made to the University.

Noted Carolinians Have Spoken For Tappings Of Golden Fleece

CAPTAIN HARTLEY HAS INTERESTING SEA BACKGROUND

Assembly Speaker Tomorrow Also Was Received Well Here Last Fall.

Commodore Herbert Hartley, who will speak at chapel period tomorrow, is former captain of the Leviathan, with thirty-five years' experience of seaman-ship during which time he has made more than 850 voyages across the Atlantic Ocean. He was captain of the Leviathan, formerly the German ship Vaterland, which was at one time the largest ocean liner afloat.

When addressing the assembly here last October, Commodore Hartley told of several of his trips and gave an account of a typical voyage.

The commander has entertained many world notables, including Will Rogers, Queen Maria of Roumania, "Bud" Fisher, and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, with stories of his interesting experiences.

THIRD-YEAR LAW CLASS SELECTS ITS OFFICERS

In the election of class officers held Tuesday by members of the third-year law class, Benjamin G. Gentry of Reidsville was elected president and Carl Downing, vice-president. William A. Starbuck and Joseph K. Ray were elected secretary and treasurer respectively.

Henry Anderson and Joseph Ray were nominated respectively for vice-president and secretary but both withdrew, leaving these offices uncontested.

Daily Tar Heel Abandons Policy of Listing Fleece Possibilities.

In addition to the spectacular, mysterious tapping of campus leaders, the annual Golden Fleece ceremonies have provided the student body with an excellent series of speakers. The gentleman who makes the chief address of the evening has generally been tapped as an honorary member of the order, which is the highest honor bestowed upon a Carolina student. Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus will make the principal speech at the program tonight in Memorial hall.

Long before the legislature in Raleigh was entertained with the Bowie-Cherry bill, Judge John J. Parker was pleading for the cause of higher education. In his speech at the 1931 tapping of the Golden Fleece society, he said, "Education is necessary for the physical welfare of the state, and the state should support education for the doctrine of self-defense." Calling for leadership in North Carolina, Judge Parker two years ago emphasized the great importance of education.

When Parker spoke in 1931, seven men were tapped by the Golden Fleece. Parker himself was already a member of the honorary organization.

Tar Heel Used to Nominate
In the past the DAILY TAR HEEL used to make its own nominations for the Golden Fleece, naming those persons whom the paper thought worthy of being honored. However, this

EHRINGHAUS WILL BE SPEAKER FOR ANNUAL TAPPING

Men Selected Tonight Will Be Entertained at Banquet in Graham Memorial.

The Order of the Golden Fleece, membership in which is considered the highest honor that may be attained by a University student, will conduct its annual tapping tonight in Memorial hall at 8:30 o'clock.

The Hon. J. C. B. Ehringhaus, governor of North Carolina, has accepted an invitation to appear as principal speaker for the occasion.

The governor will be introduced by Dr. Horace H. Williams, and Bill McKee, Jason of the Order, will preside.

Committee to Tap

The traditional ceremony, in which the tapping committee of two hooded and robed members of the organization seek out chosen men from the audience, will be carried out tonight. A group of about ten or a dozen worthy students is customarily selected each year.

Immediately after the tapping in Memorial hall, the neophytes will be entertained at a banquet in Graham Memorial, at which Governor Ehringhaus and President Frank P. Graham will be present.

Last year the following eleven students were tapped: Bill McKee, Archie Davis, Haywood Weeks, Stuart Chandler, Wilmer Hines, Charles Rose, Lenoir Wright, D. C. McClure, Tom Watkins, Holmes Davis, and Tom Alexander.

Henry L. Stevens, ex-commander of the American Legion, who spoke at last year's ceremonies, was made an honorary member of the group.

PUBLICATION FOR STUDENTS MAILED

Tar Heel Topics Will Be Mailed To Prospective University Students.

The Alumni office is mailing out this week the April issue of Tar Heel Topics, a publication designed to give information about the University to prospective students, to high school and preparatory school seniors.

The April issue of the publication is much larger than the usual size, and has the appearance of a five-column newspaper. There are articles on admission requirements, expenses, aid for needy students, student government, and other pertinent subjects of interest to prospective students. The center spread of the new publication is a pictorial second, containing views of campus buildings, athletic squads, and student leaders.

University students are urged by J. Maryon Saunders, Alumni secretary, who is editor of Tar Heel Topics, to suggest names of prospective students who might be interested in attending the University next year. These having such information may file it with the Alumni office on the second floor of South building. Copies of the publication will be mailed to all prospective students to whose names are given the Alumni office.

A New Leaf!

Yesterday the reins of the student government were handed over to the succeeding regime with the good wishes for success in the coming year and expressed confidence in the ability of the incoming president and his council. President Weeks and his council left their duties and in their departure left a standard of efficiency and competency toward which the new administration must strive continually if they are to carry on the good work.

Under the tireless and energetic leadership of Weeks the University has gained further recognition for its leadership in the field of student government both in the state and the nation. The audit board, conceived by the Albright administration, has been set up and is now supervising the bookkeeping and accounting of twenty-three student organizations. Definite steps were taken to educate students regarding the Honor System with the result that the weaknesses of the present system are more evident now than ever before and immediate action is necessary. The work of the Student Council in its judicial capacity has been beyond reproach. Its actions have been upheld by students and faculty and by committees of appeal.

These are a few of the achievements of the outgoing administration, there are others, but in every case the advances have been the result of enthusiastic cooperation on the part of the student body. For instance, the concentrated work of the students in the fight with the legislature. President Barnes begins his duties today and his responsibilities are great. He has not only to live up to the excellent record left by Weeks but he will have new situations to face and must be prepared to meet these conditions with a calm and determined spirit.

What he needs more than anything else is the full cooperation of the student body, and especially the newly elected officers of the Student Council. It is a time for everyone to forget petty jealousies and join President Barnes in a whole-hearted effort to further our position as a leading institution of higher learning.

The Fleece Picks Its Own Men

As the time for the annual tapping of the Golden Fleece arrives, the TAR HEEL announces an abandonment of its customary policy of mentioning possible candidates for the Order.

Although the paper has had in the past no intention of predicting the results of the annual tapping and has mentioned qualified candidates only with the purposes of putting their names before the campus, such a policy may give rise to a misconception of the means by which future members of the Golden Fleece are chosen.

The Golden Fleece is an independent order, free in the selection of its members from any sort of obligation. It chooses its members solely on their merits as leaders and men of character who have influenced constructively the University and its ideals. By no means are the dubious qualifications of office-holding a pre-requisite to membership. For these reasons, it affords to each student the inspiration of its ideals and a goal which is the highest honor that can come as the culmination of a campus career.

The DAILY TAR HEEL feels that to continue this policy of mentioning possible candidates would be to jeopardize, for the sake of a news story, the respect which the student body has for the Golden Fleece. To augment rather than endanger this respect is the intention of the paper.—A.T.D.

Not Paths Altogether, But Debris

That the campus of the University of North Carolina is one of the most beautiful in the country is often heard along with the statement that it would delight the eye even more were it not for the fact that the students spend too much time walking across the grass instead of using the paths provided for their convenience. The student is not entirely at fault as the cause for the existence of unsightly spots, for one of the most unnecessary places of this sort is back of the Y. M. C. A. and is due to the negligence of the grounds committee.

Far worse than the numerous paths is the collection of old brick, telephone poles, twisted pipe, rusty iron roofing material, steel rails, knotted cable, and tops of stately Ionian columns now covered with moss, across from Saunders Hall. This melange of discarded building materials, only slightly hidden by an unkempt hedge, mars the beauty of the magnificent view obtained from the steps of South building, while the paths made by careless students are scarcely noticeable.

If the buildings department would cooperate with the movement to improve the looks of the campus by working one or two days to remove this eyesore, which detracts so greatly from the scenic beauty of the campus, they could do far more toward restoring the grounds to their former grandeur than does a ceaseless haranguing of the students by the faculty. Then students, realizing that efforts were being made by others to ameliorate the shoddy unsightliness of the campus, would perhaps be more willing to cooperate upon their part.—F.P.G.

Long Live Carolina!

In the midst of this era of stress, both financial and otherwise, when the University is faced by a new year in which they must labor under reduced appropriations and its attendant hardships, there is, more than ever before, need for an increased enrollment. The legislature has cut off the right hand of the University, and therefore everything must be done to strengthen its left.

The alumni office has gone earnestly to work to bring students to Carolina. As in the past it is mailing to prospective students a bulletin known as Tar Heel Topics which is designed to give information about the University, but the April issue of the publication sent out this week is much larger than the usual size. Where the old numbers had only four columns, the new edition presents a five-column, newspaper front. It contains articles on admission requirements, expenses, student government, and other pertinent subjects of interest to prospective students. The center spread is pictorial, containing views of campus buildings, athletic squads and student leaders.

This extra effort on the part of the alumni office can accomplish good only if it is possible that the Topics be given proper distribution. It is in this part of the program that the students can do their share. Some time ago the TAR HEEL urged that the students suggest names of possible prospects for next year to J. Maryon Saunders and in turn to interest them in Carolina. "University students," Saunders said, "can join hands with the alumni in bringing to Chapel Hill next fall new students who will continue to maintain the high standards of the University."

The University belongs to the students, and they should feel a real interest in bringing to Chapel Hill those who will help to carry on its traditions. It is a responsibility which they should not shirk.—V.C.R.

Maybe It Was Vacation And Not Indifference

The poor spirit and lack of enthusiasm shown by Carolina students at major athletic events is by no means confined to this field. To be satisfied of the truth of this statement, one has only to note the indifference with which delegates to the various state-wide contests held here immediately preceding the holidays were received.

These delegates were our guests, and as such, we owed them a cordial reception, and should have spared no effort to make their visit to this campus a pleasant one. The officials responsible for these contests duly advertised the coming of the representatives, and the various organizations of the campus left no stone unturned in the effort to provide proper reception and entertainment. Students were asked to make small sacrifices to insure accommodations. Yet the response was very far from satisfactory. At the last moment, hasty efforts were necessary, on the part of the placement committee, to secure ample housing space for those who came. Had it not been for the kindness of families living in town, the situation might have been quite embarrassing for those in charge.

After the delegates had been provided for, the student body as a whole took no pains to extend the welcome demanded by such an occasion. This was not a very pleasing manifestation. The old Carolina spirit is ebbing; something must be done to restore it. It is to be hoped that the proximity of the spring holidays, and not natural indifference, caused this lack of consideration.—W.A.S.

The University of Chicago has announced another revolutionary idea. The purpose of the plan is to remove the overlapping courses in the last two years of high school and the first two of college. In order to carry out this plan, the dean of the college will oversee the work done in the junior and senior years in high school and the freshman and sophomore years of college. Thus the college would become a two-year unit, from which the scholarly-minded students would go on to university work.—Oberlin Review (N.S.F.A.)

At the University of West Virginia prior to 1911 a bell was rung every night at 9:00 o'clock, warning students that they must go to their rooms. At 6:00 a. m. a cannon was fired at the armory to get them out of bed.—(N.S.F.A.)

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

To the Editor,

THE DAILY TAR HEEL:

The grass grows high here on the campus and the University continues to receive notices of reductions in funds of 10, 15, and 25 per cent. Why? Because the "folks back home" cannot pay their taxes. Yet, however, a few members of the two upper classes have the so-called "right," "power," etc., to say that we shall have the annual Junior-Senior dances in the near future that will cost $1,600. Bert Low and his orchestra will receive only $1,100.

There have been times when "one, two, or three more dollars" would not "hurt," but now those times are only pleasant memories. Daily more and more students ask for some type of work to help defray their expenses. It might be well to remember that some of the expenses are the results of high priced dances, for instance, the $1,600 dances that we are now about to have. We will have them too unless those who are on the "outside" find in the archives of the University some "rights" to halt it.

There are two or three orchestras within this state that would no doubt conduct the music for $500.00; a majority of the dancers on the campus have enjoyed trampling others' toes to the strains of these orchestras. Why is it they can not be used to conduct the music for these dances—yes, why? Perhaps there are more than myself who would like to know.

The wisdom of such an enormous expenditure at this time is very questionable. Would it be to the University's interest for the proposed expenditures for the dances, to say nothing about the sums lavished on during 1931 and 1932, to be published in the state papers? And do the class executives have the right (I did not say the "power") to prevent the publication of such figures in the state papers?

Frankly, the proposed sum to spend on the dances is too much. Is it not better to forfeit the $100 already posted for the orchestra and obtain a cheaper one, thereby effecting a much needed reduction? It is not too late to take immediate action and such action is absolutely essential.

Brasel Lanier.

Thirty-One Students Installed In Offices

Weeks in his final speech paid tribute to his colleagues for their work in the student government during his leadership, and mentioned a few of the outstanding achievements. He congratulated the new officers for their election and the student body for its choice.

The new members of the student council are Barnes, Lee Greer, John O'Neil, "Pepper" Martin, Carl Dupree, Jules McMichael, Dick Fleming, and R. R. Wells.

Other campus officers formally installed into office are Claiborn Carr, editor of the DAILY TAR HEEL, Alex Andrews, editor of the Yackety Yack, Pete Ivey, editor of the Buccaneer, E. C. Daniel, editor of the Carolina Magazine, Dave McCachren, president of the athletic association, Norment Quarles, vice-president of the athletic association; Bill Eddleman, Bob Drane, Phil Hammer, members of the publications union board; and Edwin Lanier and Don Seawell, debate council members.

The various class officers were also inaugurated.

FINAL PROGRAM ANNOUNCED FOR DOGWOOD EVENT

ison, and accompanied by Thor Johnson's orchestra. The orchestra will present three numbers, including After Midnight by Lamar Stringfield.

Following numbers by the University glee club, and by a quartet from the local Negro Methodist church, the Carolina Salon Ensemble will render Mountain Song and Cripple Creek by Lamar Stringfield with the folk-songs upon which they were based.

The musical entertainment has been arranged by Lamar Stringfield, while the folk-dances are in charge of Miss Josephine Sharkey. Admittance to the two programs is secured by festival tickets.

Other Attractions
Other attractions during the day and evening include the Junior Playmakers production, at 3:00 and 8:30 o'clock on Emerson field, and Boy Scout camporee contests during the afternoon on the freshman athletic field.

Mrs. Julius Cone of Greensboro will speak on "The Arrangement of Flowers" at 2:30 o'clock in Graham Memorial lounge, under auspices of the Chapel Hill Garden club. A collection of iris from the collection of William Hunt will be displayed in Graham Memorial, and gardens of the village will be open to visitors.

Exhibits of arts and crafts will be given in Graham Memorial all day Saturday, and the North Carolina professional artists' club showing will take place in the Hill Music hall for two weeks beginning Saturday.

The annual meeting of the North Carolina Symphony Society will convene in the Carolina Inn at 2:00 o'clock.

Members of the executive committee for the Dogwood Festival are Russel M. Grumman, chairman; Joseph Hyde Pratt, vice-chairman; Felix Grisette, secretary-treasurer; Herman G. Baity, and Phillips Russell, who is also chairman of the program committee.

Noted Tar Heels Have Spoken For Tappings

practice is being discontinued this year. The original purpose of the society was to tap only rising seniors, but this has since been modified by custom to include outgoing seniors and law students. In 1931 a TAR HEEL story remarked that "mostly rising seniors" were tapped.

Men were measured against several standards when the tapplings were made. These criteria consisted of character, the person's influence in school and the manner in which he used it, and his contributions to the University.

1928 Tapping
Among the eleven men tapped in 1928 was Shepherd Strudwick, who has since gained considerable renown in the acting company of the New York City Theatre Guild. Dr. F. P. Gaines, President of Wake Forest, spoke at that time on "academic heresies," naming them as:

(1) The idea that conspicuous achievement in scholarship is incompatible with the largest development of personality; (2) the idea that the chief end of college is to achieve and maintain moral rectitude and earnestness; (3) the idea that the college years are a period for enjoyment of a fast fleeing youth; (4) the absence of intellectual ambition from the list of compelling motives and emphasis of student life.

1932 Tapping
Eleven men were again tapped in 1932, when Henry L. Stevens, Commander of the American Legion, delivered the main address. "Character" was the keynote of Stevens' speech. He declared, "Be yourself" answers well the first test of a high character."

In 1930 President Harry Woodburn Chase made the leading speech. Other prominent men who have spoken at tapplings of the Golden Fleece in the past are H. L. Smith, former president of Washington and Lee, and former Governor Cameron Morrison.

Barrymores Feature Russian Empire Film

"Rasputin and the Empress," with John, Ethel and Lionel Barrymore together on the screen for the first time, will come to the Carolina theatre today for a two day's run.

This drama dealing with the fall of the Romanoffs has received a full share of acclaim since it left the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios.

Based on happenings within the present generation, the picture's episodes present a replica of a colorful royal court.

Ethel Barrymore plays the Empress, John is cast as Prince Chogodoff, and Lionel takes the role of the "Holy Devil" in the dramatization of the downfall of the Empire and the rise of the Bolshevik regime. The supporting cast includes Ralph Morgan, Diana Wynyard, and Ted Alexander.

Scouts to Gather

There will be a joint meeting of the members of Alpha Phi Omega, scouting fraternity, and of the Eagle Scout club at 8:00 o'clock tonight in 209 Graham Memorial.

TAR HEELS WORK FOR GAME WITH STATE LEADERS

Barnes and Griffith Slated to Hook Up in Mound Duel at Wake Forest Friday.

Tied with State for the cellar in the Big Five race and with an important game with Wake Forest, race leader, set for Friday in Wake Forest, the Tar Heels worked out yesterday in a practice intrasquad game.

Carolina is one of the leaders of the conference race with a clean slate but Davidson's three one run wins over Coach Hearn's men leave the Tar Heels at the bottom of the state heap. State has lost a game to both Wake Forest and Duke.

Joe Griffith, who seemed to have an off day Tuesday against the Wildcats, will probably get the call to do mound work against the Deacons. Junie Barnes, left-handed pitching ace for Wake Forest, will oppose him. Barnes has been a nemesis for all state teams for the past three years and Tuesday he teased the Blue Devils with his left-handed twisters, allowing them only one hit.

Pee Wee Earp is one of the heavy hitters on the Deacon team and he may embarrass Griffith Friday if Big Joe eases up the least bit on him. Earp clouted a triple against Lefty Flohr at Duke Tuesday.

Coach Hearn is working his men hard in an effort to get them out of the erroring habit. The Tar Heels also need some prodding on the subject of hitting in the pinches. Against Davidson, Carolina had twelve men left on base.

TAR BABIES WILL MEET WOLFLETS THIS AFTERNOON

First Big Five Game for Freshman Team Will Begin at 4:00 O'clock.

After two weeks lay-off due to the holidays, Carolina's freshman baseball team gets in action today, playing State's yearlings on Emerson field at 4:00 o'clock.

This will be the first Big Five encounter for the Tar Babies and they will be out to open with a win. The present combination which includes football players at four positions will also be trying to keep their slate clean as the new combination has won both contests that they have started.

Probably the same combination that started the last two games will work today. Womble, first; Montgomery, second; Irwin, short, and Moore, third; will start in the infield while Denti, first, and Austin, third, may also see some action. Groom, Shapiro, and Bullock will round out the outfield.

Yeager is a sure starter behind the plate. King, reserve receiver, split a finger in practice Tuesday and will be unable to play for about a week. Spiers, right-hander who pitches underhanded, will likely get the call to start on the mound. Spiers has had trouble rounding into shape so far this season. McKeithan, another right-hander, will be held in reserve.

Cheerleaders to Meet

Chief Cheerleader Ernest Hunt announced yesterday that an important meeting of those interested in cheerleading was set for this afternoon at 3:15 o'clock in the offices of the DAILY TAR HEEL in Graham Memorial. Old men and any new men interested in trying out are urged to attend promptly.

FRESHMEN LOSE MATCH TO DUKE

Imps Hand Tar Babies Their First Tennis Defeat in Five Years.

The Duke freshman tennis team broke through five years of Carolina history in trouncing the local team here yesterday, 6-3. This loss was the first for a Tar Baby net squad in five years. Six years ago the freshmen lost but one match and that was to the Blue Devils.

Bernie Friedman was sorely outsteaded by Charles Harris of Duke. Bernie was trounced in straight sets, 6-4, 6-1. Friedman led at the outset of the match 4-1, but Harris won the next five consecutive games.

Hunter Lott came through in downing Parsons, 8-6, 6-1. Lott's service was terrific and his net game proved a great asset. Mark Lynch dropped his match to Taylor, 6-1, 6-3.

Hamilton fell before Sid Sobol of Carolina, 6-1, 6-3. Jimmy Johnston lost to Kunkle in straight sets, 6-2, 6-4. Baukney of Carolina was defeated by Catton, 4-6, 6-4, 6-4.

In the doubles Friedman and Lott were teamed to beat Harris and Taylor, 6-2, 6-2. Lott's overhead was in fine working order and one of the outstanding factors in the Tar Heel victory. The Duke team is slated to meet Sobol and Lynch in the finals of the state freshman college doubles championship at

CAROLINA TEAM BLANKS DEACONS

Match Marks Fifty-Fourth Consecutive Win by Carolina Tennis Squads.

The Tar Heel tennis outfit scored its sixth consecutive victory of the season in blanking the Wake Forest representatives here yesterday, 9 to 0. Carolina is listed to encounter the State College combination this afternoon in Chapel Hill.

Wilmer Hines trimmed Vernon in straight sets, 6-3, 6-2. Hines was working with an excellent overhead shot and showed improvement in his service. Lenoir Wright continued to play well in his win over Hanson, 6-2, 6-1.

Harvey Harris allowed Bryan but one game in his match, 6-0, 6-1. Harris has been playing a good brand of tennis recently and showed himself to be in top-notch form for the northern trip. Harley Shuford played in the fourth position and won over Hutchins, 6-2, 6-1.

Walter Levitan tallied over Glenn in an easy manner. The scores were 6-2, 6-1. With Dave Morgan playing about his best tennis of the season, Carolina won another from Buxton, 6-3, 8-6.

In the doubles matches Shuford and Morgan won from Bryan and Vernon, 3-6, 6-1, 6-1. McGinn and Minor won over Hanson and Hutchins in straight sets, 6-3, 2-6, 6-1.

PHI KAPPA SIGMA TIES WITH S. P. E. IN LENGTHY TILT

Tau Epsilon Phi Downs Chi Phi; Lambda Chi Alpha Drops Game to Sigma Nu.

As the intramural campaigns in baseball and tennis came into the home stretch yesterday three of the twelve baseball units listed to see action and two of the scheduled tennis outfits lost on forfeits. In the three ball games which were played, however, plenty of action developed.

In what proved to be the longest game of the season to date, Phi Kappa Sigma and Sigma Phi Epsilon battled ten innings to a 3-3 deadlock when darkness put a stop to the hostilities.

Phi Kappa Sigma, with no wins in three starts, seemed destined to turn in its initial triumph as it stepped into a one-run lead in the first frame and added another run to this total in the third. Sigma Phi Epsilon, with the same unimpressive record, got its first run in the fifth, and, in the seventh, managed to drive over another to tie the score at 2-2.

Both Score in Ninth
The deadlock continued until the ninth, when each team got a run, and, when neither had been able to score in the tenth, Umpire Harry Hodges called a halt to the proceedings. In all likelihood the game will be

THREE SETTINGS MADE FOR PLAY

Foster Fitz-Simons Designs
Scenery for Use in Production of "Ali Baba."

Three colorful settings of scenery, designed by Foster Fitz-Simons, have been prepared for the forthcoming Junior Playmakers production, Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves, which will be presented in the Playmakers theatre, Friday and Saturday at 8:30 o'clock with a special children's matinee Saturday at 3:00 o'clock.

Fitz-Simons' designs for the production are formalized, rather than realistic, with the keynote being brilliant color and simple line. The first setting, the home of Ali Baba, sets the style of the whole production with a yellow, green, and red background. The second act, showing Sesame cave, involves an intricate two-stage arrangement, showing on one side the interior of the magic cave and on the other the bright hillside in front of it. The last act is an elaborate and colorful representation of Ali's wealthy home.

For the twenty-seven actors in the play Mrs. Harry Davis has designed glamorous Oriental costumes, ranging from the scanty trunks and turban of the slave-boys to the elaborate robes of Kojia Hassan, the robber chief. Phoebe Barr has designed and directed several dances for the play.

Reserve seat tickets for the production, on sale at Alfred Williams, are fifty cents for adults and twenty-five cents for students and children.

Dr. Paul Wager At Washington Meeting

Dr. Paul Wager, assistant professor of rural social economics, has gone to Washington to participate in a conference called by the Social Science Research Council to discuss the reorganization of the units of local government, with particular attention to the units of highway administration and support.

North Carolina's experience with state administration of all roads has awakened national interest, and the council has also called to the conference from this state Professor Clarence Heer, who is temporarily in Chicago. L. R. Ames, chief engineer of the state highway commission, and Charles M. Johnson, state treasurer and director of local government.

DEBATING GROUP WILL GATHER FOR PICTURE

This morning at assembly period in front of Gerrard hall the debate group will meet to have a picture taken for the Yackety Yack.

The following men are particularly requested to be present at that time in addition to any others who have tried out for any debate: Edwin Lanier, John Wilkinson, McBride Fleming-Jones, Don Seawell, Phillips Russell, A. S. Kaplan, A. A. Lawrence, J. R. Jenkins, Bill Eddleman, B. C. Proctor, V. C. Royster, F. A. Rankin, Dan Lacy, James Baxley, Dave Morgan, Ike Minor, and J. W. Kirkpatrick.

GLEE CLUB PRACTICES FOR WINSTON CONCERT

Dr. Harold S. Dyer announced yesterday that glee club practices will be resumed this afternoon at 5:00 o'clock in Hill Music hall. The glee club will start preparing for the Winston concert which is the next event scheduled. The group will also elect officers for next year at this afternoon's meeting.

Senior Sweaters

Members of the senior class are reminded that orders for their sweaters must be placed with Randolph-MacDonald before tonight. The cost of the sweaters is set at one dollar and every member is urged to obtain one to be worn during the senior week festivities.

STUDENTS MEET HERE NEXT WEEK

Representatives From State Colleges to Assemble for Fourth Annual Congress May 5-6.

Delegates from every major college and university and from practically all junior colleges in the state will attend the fourth annual congress of the North Carolina Federation of Students which is to meet in Graham Memorial here May 5 and 6.

The state federation, the first of its kind in the United States, has grown steadily since John Lang, then a University graduate student, called a group of Carolina and Duke students together in the spring of 1930 and suggested uniting the various student bodies of the state in a federation in an effort to promote closer relation between them.

Speakers Selected

The program for the coming meeting includes discussions of student problems and talks by Carl Goerch, editor of the Washington Progress, President Frank P. Graham, Dr. Francis F. Bradshaw, dean of students, and Professor Albert Coates, director of the institute of government.

The sessions of the congress will be presided over by President Haywood Weeks, who is also southeastern representative in the National Student Federation. Other officers are William Smith, Catawba, vice-president; Eloise Cobb, Womans College of the Greater University, secretary; Mary Siewers, Salem College, treasurer; and Mark Wilson, State College, Jerome Clark, Davidson, Wendell Horne, Duke, and Sarah Stephens, Asheville Normal, members of the executive committee.

CELEBRATION TO BE BROADCAST TONIGHT

A nation-wide celebration of the 142nd birthday of Samuel Morse, inventor of the telegraph, will be featured by a portrayal of Morse's life in a series of dramatic episodes at 8:15 o'clock tonight over station WBT and the Columbia broadcasting system.

Climaxing the radio production will be the receipt of a message from Paris signed by Mrs. Leila Morse Rummel, 82, only surviving child of Morse. A Western Union transatlantic cable has been extended into the studio and the sound will be broadcast of the arrival of Mrs. Rummel's cablegram, which will be read by Miss Leila Livingston Morse, granddaughter of the inventor.

Association to Meet

A meeting of the Fraternity Buyers Association, Inc., will take place tonight at 7:30 o'clock at the offices of the Service Insurance Agency in the Johnson-Prevost building. Fraternity delegates are urged to attend. Non-member lodges are invited to send a delegate to tonight's meeting if they are interested in joining.

To Lead Devotional

Edgar Thomas will lead the Y. M. C. A. devotional exercises at assembly period today. Walter Patterson will render several organ-selections.

LOCAL SOCIALIST CLUB TO GATHER

Members to Discuss Convention, May Day Celebration, and Selection of Delegates.

A review of the results of the state convention at Greensboro last Saturday, plans for a May day celebration, and selection of delegates to the Continental Congress for Economic Reconstruction in Washington May 6 and 7 will be the chief matters for discussion at a meeting of the local Socialist club at 7:30 o'clock tonight in 211 Graham Memorial.

At the convention in Greensboro, Dr. E. E. Ericson, a member of the local group, had charge of the drafting of a declaration of principles for state Socialists. The club here was represented also by Alton A. Lawrence, who was re-elected state secretary and by Arnold Williams, who as chairman of the convention, delivered the keynote address, in which he attacked the policies of state Democrats as reactionary.

Copies of the new constitution and declaration of principles, as well as a complete report of the work of the convention, will be furnished campus Socialists.

It is expected that the club will co-operate with party locals over the country in staging a celebration May day, plans for which are to be drafted at tonight's meeting.

Local Socialists plan to send two delegates to the Continental Congress at Washington, which meets to effect a mobilization of labor and farm organizations behind a plan of economic reconstruction.

BERLIN PROFESSOR IS VISITING UNIVERSITY

Dr. Ludwig Diels, professor of botany in the University of Berlin and director of the botanical garden and museum, is visiting the University. He came to this state particularly to see the Venus fly-trap which is considered by botanists the most interesting plant in the world. The German botanist is making a collection of flora throughout the United States and is especially interested in insectivorous plants. On a trip to the eastern part of the state with Dr. J. N. Couch, associate professor of botany in the University, collections of the fly-trap and other plants were made during the holidays.

ASSEMBLY FAVORS INFLATION PROGRAM

Meeting in Phi hall Tuesday night, the Philanthropic Assembly voted in favor of President Roosevelt's inflation program. Representatives John Wilkinson, F. A. Rankin, and K. W. Young opposed inflation, while Representatives Ezra Griffin, Emmett Willis, and Ralto Farlow upheld the bill.

Beard Attends Conference

Dean J. G. Beard of the pharmacy school left yesterday as a delegate of the American Association of Colleges of Pharmacy to the National Drug Trade Conference in Washington. Dean Beard will return tomorrow.

Committee Meeting

There will be a joint meeting of the executive committees of the junior and senior classes tonight at 10:00 o'clock in Graham Memorial.

Graduate Receives Award

S. G. Winstead of Roxboro, graduate of Carolina, has just been awarded a $1500 scholarship at Columbia University for the year 1933-34.

Geologists Conduct Survey Of Carolinas

During the holidays, members of the faculty and students in the geology department made surveys in Maryland, and North and South Carolina.

Dr. Collier Cobb and I. L. Martin conducted reconnaissance survey of the southeastern portion of this state in regard to the effect of underground waters and wind on the topography of that area, while Dr. W. F. Prouty, Dr. G. R. McCarthy, and J. A. Alexander made a magnetometer reconnaissance survey of the northeastern coastal plain area of South Carolina. Dr. J. G. Douglas, E. N. Kjellesvig, and C. G. Peebles made a structural and paleontological survey of the middle paleozoic rocks of western Maryland.

played off later in the season.

Marsden, Rhawn, and Reid scored the runs for the Phi Kappa outfit, while Fawcette, and Frazier, with two, accounted for the S. P. E. total. The game was one of the best of the season despite the fact that both nines are cellar occupants.

T. E. P. Wins

By virtue of a six-run flurry in the first inning, Tau Epsilon Phi downed Chi Phi, 9-2. The teams were fairly evenly matched after the first frame, and both Kanner, winning pitcher, and Hudson, who twirled for the losers, were in good control of the situation.

Eisner, Peres, Eisenberg, and Sovitsky led the T. E. P. nine on the attack and afield, while Brown and Upshaw stood out for Chi Phi.

Sigma Nu Scores

Lambda Chi Alpha was no match for the slants of Ken Byerly or for the sluggers in Sigma Nu's line-up and the result was Byerly's third win of the season in four starts. The score was 13-0.

The Sigma Nu outfit got nine runs in the first two frames, and was content to drift thereafter, except for a four-run cluster in the fourth. Allen, Long, and Glace led the winners at the plate, while Blood and Griffin stood out for the losers.

Manly won from Mangum, Sigma Chi from Pi Kappa Phi, and S. A. E. from A. T. O. on forfeits.

TENNIS RESULTS

All of the contested tennis matches, with the exception of the Sigma Chi-Zeta Psi encounter, were 2-1 decisions. The Sigma Chi netmen took a 3-0 win from Zeta Psi as Lacy and Harlee won from Harrison and Stokes, respectively, in the singles and gained the doubles engagement by forfeit.

Ruffin handed Best House its initial setback of the season, Bell and Mallonee winning the singles from Hunt and Morris. The doubles went to Best House.

Carr advanced with Ruffin to the first place in the league, each team having won all five of its encounters to date. The lawyers disposed of Aycock, 2-1, by virtue of a 10-8, 6-3 victory in the doubles match when Bailey and Markham downed Jones and Cartland. Bailey beat Jones in singles, but Cartland downed Markham, thus leaving the decision to the result of the doubles match.

Sigma Phi Sigma won its fourth in a row, beating Beta Theta Pi. Reid beat Lovill in singles, but Froneberger beat Trainer and Lovill and Froneberger downed Reid and Trainer in doubles after three hard sets.

Phi Gamma Delta and Pi Kappa Phi beat Phi Sigma Kappa

DEBATING TEAM COMPLETES TOUR

Eddleman, Kaplan, and Russell Engage Schools Throughout Southern States.

The Carolina debating team returned Tuesday night after an important trip in the south. Bill Eddleman, A. S. Kaplan, and Phillip Russell represented the University on the trip.

The first debate was with Emory College of Atlanta on the question of war debts. Kaplan and Eddleman took the negative of the question: Resolved: That the war debts be cancelled.

The debating team next debated the University of Georgia at Athens on the topic: Resolved: That the United States adopt the British radio system. Eddleman and Russell took the negative side.

Georgia Debates

A return debate with Georgia Tech took place at Atlanta on the question of radio control. Carolina took the same side as in the debate with Georgia.

From Georgia the team journeyed to New Orleans where it debated Tulane on the question: Resolved: That American individualism is a menace to Western civilization. Eddleman and Russell took the negative. The debate was given before an audience of three hundred college students.

A special debate was scheduled with Sophie Newcomb School, a branch of Tulane, on Socialism vs. Capitalism. All of the University team debated on this question.

The last debate was Monday night with Winthrop College in Rock Hill, South Carolina, on the question: Resolved: That the United States immediately recognize Russia.

HOLMES OFFERS READING SUNDAY

Rostand Work to Be Given by French Professor in Playmakers Theatre.

Dr. Urban T. Holmes, assisted by Mrs. Holmes, will present a dramatic reading of Edmond Rostand's celebrated play, Cyrano de Bergerac, in the Playmaker theatre at 8:30 o'clock Sunday night as the regular monthly reading of the Playmakers.

Cyrano de Bergerac marked the height of Rostand's talent, being written especially for Coquelin the Elder, who at the age of fifty-six was still recognized as the greatest of modern French actors. The play was designed to afford opportunities for Coquelin's wide range of histrionic talent, and though first produced in 1897 it is still immensely popular. The drama was first played in the Port Saint Martin theatre in Paris, a great success from the beginning.

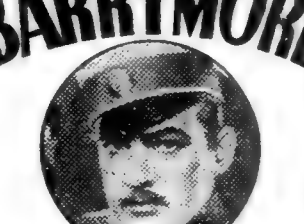

In the reading Dr. Holmes will take the role of the dashing Cyrano, and Mrs. Holmes the part of his beloved Roxane. In former presentations on the Playmaker program, both Dr. and Mrs. Holmes have been greatly enjoyed.

Barbecue Dinner Monday

A barbecue dinner will be given at the Methodist church from 12:00 to 2:00 o'clock Monday, May 1. The dinner will be prepared by Foy Baker. A 35 cent charge will be made for the plate, and everyone is invited to attend.

EXHIBIT OF STATE HANDICRAFT WORK WILL OPEN TODAY

Display of North Carolina Work Arranged in Connection With Dogwood Festival.

In connection with the Dogwood Festival, which opens here tomorrow, an exhibit of North Carolina handicraft products and a Boy Scout camporee are being conducted today.

The handicraft display, which is arranged on the second floor of Graham Memorial is open today for the benefit of children, who are to be admitted if accompanied by their parents or teachers. The exhibit will be open to the general public at the beginning of the Festival tomorrow.

The exhibit includes such articles of North Carolina handicraft as pottery, weaving, hand-made and antique furniture, wrought iron, pewter and silver, woodcarving and leather tooling, block printing, hooked rugs, quilts and baskets.

The chairmen of the various contributing committees for the exhibit are: Mrs. D. A. McPherson, Mrs. H. C. Baity, Mrs. J. E. Lear, Mrs. J. F. Kenfield, Mrs. John Lasley, Mrs. M. T. Van Hecke, Mrs. Clarence Heer, Mrs. F. W. Hanft, Mrs. F. H. Edmister, Mrs. M. A. Hill, Mrs. J. A. Warren, Mrs. W. E. Caldwell, Mrs. Phillips Russell, Colonel J. H. Pratt, and Mrs. Collier Cobb, Jr.

Boy Scout patrols from North and South Carolina will arrive here today for a three-day camporee, which is conducting for the advancement of scouting. The program will include inter-patrol contests.

FAMOUS SEAMAN TO SPEAK TODAY

Former Captain of Leviathan to Make Second Address Here At Chapel Period.

Commodore Herbert Hartley, former captain of the Leviathan, will speak at Chapel period here today. Hartley was enthusiastically received when he addressed an assembly here in October. The speaker has had thirty-five years' experience on the seas and has made some 850 trips across the Atlantic.

In speaking here last fall, Commodore Hartley recounted several of his early experiences and incidents which occurred while he was captain of the Leviathan. Among these were the occasion of the crossing of Queen Marie of Roumania and an account concerning Mrs. Martin Johnson.

Great Responsibility

The captain gave an idea of the enormous amount of responsibility attached to managing the ship by stating that his position was like a housewife operating a house three city blocks long and watching out for the needs of guests.

While commander of the Leviathan, which as the Vaterland was once the largest ship in the world, Hartley entertained a number of the world celebrities.

Sponsors For Annual Dance Set

Pictured above are the seven young ladies who, with their escorts, will lead the annual May Frolics dance set, which begins this afternoon with a tea dance at the Carolina Inn. They are: Miss Nell Adams, with Fred Laxton; Miss Hilton Roller, with Robert R. Reynolds, Jr.; Miss Marjorie Ris, with Robert Carmichael; Miss Anne Jones, with Alex Webb; Miss Cotton Skinner, with Pig Skinner; Miss Louie Brown Michaels, with Arlindo Cate; and Miss Margaret Williams, with Pete Tyree.

DEBATE GROUP TO BE PHOTOGRAPHED TODAY

The debate group will meet this morning at chapel period in front of Gerrard hall to have a picture taken for the Yackety Yack. The picture, scheduled to be taken yesterday, was postponed until this morning.

The following are particularly requested to be present: Edwin Lanier, John Wilkinson, McBride Fleming-Jones, Don Seawell, Phillip Russell, A. S. Kaplan, A. A. Lawrence, J. R. Jenkins, Bill Eddleman, B. C. Proctor, V. C. Royster, F. A. Rankin, Dan Lacy, James Baxley, Dave Morgan, Ike Minor and J. W. Kirkpatrick. Any other men who have tried for debates are also asked to attend.

Famous Oratorio Will Be Presented Here

The chorus to appear in the presentation of Mendelssohn's oratorio, The Elijah here on Baccalaureate Sunday, June 4, began rehearsals this week under the direction of Professor Harold S. Dyer. Mrs. A. S. Wheeler is accompanist for the group.

The performance of The Elijah this year will be its second annual presentation. This composition is considered Mendelssohn's greatest work and is generally conceded to be the finest oratorio of any composer. The chorus will consist of about one hundred students, faculty members and residents of Chapel Hill.

JUVENILES OFFER ALI BABA TONIGHT

Junior Playmakers to Present Arabian Night's Story at Three Performances.

The Junior Playmakers production, Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves, will be presented at three performances today and tomorrow in the Playmaker theatre. Tonight's performance will begin at 8:30 o'clock. The play, adapted from the Arabian Night's story, was directed by Harry Davis.

Davis has written several successful dramatizations of popular stories, all in three-act form, and has had considerable experience in juvenile productions. Among his former plays was Cinderella, which was tremendously successful last year as the original presentation of the Junior Playmakers. The organization was organized here last year by Davis to further the work begun by the Playmakers.

Other Productions

Other juvenile plays by Davis have been Robin Hood, Beauty and the Beast, and The Sleeping Beauty.

Before coming to the Carolina Playmakers two years ago, Davis was director at the Town theatre of Columbia, South Carolina, where he organized a well-known junior acting group, The Scalwags. These players produced two to four full-length plays each season on a regular program.

MAGAZINE STAFF TO MEET SUNDAY NIGHT

The last meeting of the year for the entire staff of the Carolina Magazine has been set for Sunday night at 7:00 o'clock in Graham Memorial. Robert W. Barnett, retiring editor, will turn over his position to E. C. Daniel, incoming editor.

Every person who has contributed to the Magazine in the past, and those who intend to contribute during the coming year, are asked to be present. The new editor will outline his program and policy and name his staff. All students who wish to demonstrate their abilities to write for the publication will be given an opportunity to do so during the next month, Daniel has announced.

CLASS LEADERS NAMED IN PHARMACY SCHOOL

Rising second and third-year classes in the pharmacy school have elected class officers.

C. P. Suttlemyre has been made president of the third-year class; C. L. Neal, vice-president and L. H. Crumpler, secretary-treasurer.

Of the rising second year group, J. A. Mitchener has been elected president; A. E. Millis, vice-president; W. C. Lewis, secretary and C. W. McLean, treasurer.

Playmakers to Meet

All Playmakers are requested to meet with "Red" Rankin in front of the Playmakers theatre this morning at 10:30 o'clock.

ANNUAL FROLICS BEGIN WITH BALL IN CAROLINA INN

Kay Kyser and Former Carolinians Play as May Frolics Start This Afternoon.

With dancing to the music of Kay Kyser and his former University of North Carolina orchestra, the May Frolics for 1933 will begin this afternoon at 5:00 o'clock at the Carolina Inn. The annual affair consists of a series of six dances which make up the set.

The Thirteen Club will open the series this afternoon with a tea dance to which all the members of the May Frolics are invited. A dinner dance in the main dining room of the Inn will follow at 7:30 o'clock. The Minotaur will attend a banquet in the ball room of the Inn at the same time. The evening's entertainments will be closed by a formal evening dance in the Tin Can from 9:00 to 1:00 o'clock.

Continues Tomorrow

The series will continue with a luncheon dance to take place from 12:30 to 2:30 o'clock Saturday in the Washington Duke Hotel in Durham. A tea dance will be featured from 4:30 to 6:30 o'clock in the Tin Can. The set will be concluded tomorrow night by another formal evening dance in the Tin Can lasting from 9:00 to 12:00 o'clock. The Order of Sheiks will hold a banquet in the Carolina Inn tomorrow evening at 7:30 o'clock.

This annual series of dances given by a group of fraternities on the campus is considered one of the highlights of the year's social season. A host of attractive young ladies are expected to be present.

Dance Leaders

The girls who will lead the series and their escorts are: Nell Adams, High Point, with Fred Laxton of Charlotte, Zeta Psi, president of the May Frolics; Hilton Roller, Fort Defiance, Va., with Robert R. Reynolds, Jr., of Asheville, Beta Theta Pi, vice-president; Marjorie Ris of New York, with Robert H. Carmichael, Delta Kappa Epsilon, secretary-treasurer; Ann Jones of Little Rock, Ark., with Alex Webb of Raleigh, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, who will be dance leader; Cotton Skinner of Greenville, with Pig Skinner of Greenville, Sigma Nu, assistant dance leader; Louie Brown Michaels of Greensboro, with Arlindo Cates of Greensboro, Sigma Chi, second assistant dance leader; and Margaret Williams of Winston-Salem, with Pete Tyree of Winston-Salem, Kappa Sigma, assistant secretary-treasurer of the Frolics.

This will be the first occasion that Kay Kyser and his orchestra, eight of the members of which were former students of the University and members of the original band as organized here, have played at the University since the time of Kay's graduation four years ago. They are expected to appear in concert in Memorial hall for the benefit of the student loan fund (Continued on last page)

THIRTY-FIRST CEREMONY

Governor States That Laws of Work, Ideas, and Ideals Are Fundamental for Success.

The Order of the Golden Fleece, highest campus honorary organization, accorded the honor of membership to ten campus leaders last night at the 31st annual tapping ceremony. Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus was made an honorary member.

The chosen students were Vergil Weathers of Shelby, Donald C. Shoemaker of Middletown, Ohio, E. P. Dameron of Clinton, Harper Barnes of Lillington, John O'Neil of Henderson, Nutt Parsley of Wilmington, Robert Barnett of Shanghai, China, George Brandt of Washington, D. C., E. C. Daniel, Jr., of Zebulon, and Claiborn M. Carr of Long Island, New York.

Governor Speaks

Preceding the impressive tapping ceremonies, Governor Ehringhaus delivered an inspiring address to the throng assembled to watch the induction. He was introduced by Horace Williams of the department of philosophy, one of the founders of the Order. Bill McKee, Jason, presided.

Ehringhaus, an alumnus of the University, included in his address the three fundamental laws for the success and the development of the human character, namely: the law of work, the law of ideas, and the law of ideals. All are equally and basically essential in the struggle of life, asserted the governor.

HANDBOOK STAFF NAMED BY EDITOR

Royster Is Appointed Associate Editor of Annual Publication of Y. M. C. A.

The complete staff of the 1933-34 freshman Handbook has been announced by Carl Thompson, new editor. As associate editor, Vermont C. Royster has been selected. Phil Hammer has accepted the position of assistant editor, Charles Bond will edit the Y. M. C. A. material and Billy Anderson will handle the sports copy for the pamphlet.

Contrary to a former statement, there will be no change in the size of the Handbook. Its present dimensions are six by nine inches, which is considered the most preferable size as pictures of campus buildings, campus officers, and faculty members can be included. Renewing a practice which has been dormant for several years, the new Handbook will carry a sketch map of the campus and town.

Following a custom which formerly followed and which was used last year, the cover of the book will be decorated with the colors of the class of 1937. Attempts will be made to make the material in the book of more interest to the freshmen than it has formerly been.

Not Too Late—

With the University's appropriations being constantly diminished, teachers forced to exist on mere pittance and the entire state in the throes of a great want it is the grossest sort of bad taste and wanton extravagance for the two upper classes to give a dance that calls for the enormous expenditure of $1,600. Spending over a thousand dollars for an orchestra when there are several others available almost as good and willing to play for less than half that price is inexcusable. The possibility that members of the two classes who have already paid their assessments will be taxed further means that many will be unable to attend and that the dues they have already paid are lost to them entirely.

It is not the wish of the upper two classes that their dance be conducted in this way. Too many feel the pinch of the times and have too keen a sympathy for families and the state which are straining every effort to give them an education at untold sacrifice. There are many who rightly feel that such an outlay in the face of the student body's late attempt to prevent the legislature from further cutting us would put the University in a very bad light. Others would be glad to see a state orchestra patronized when there is such a need to keep our money within the state.

But the hundreds in the senior and junior classes are apparently helpless. Once the executive committees swing into the saddle they set about to gain for themselves the empty distinction of having thrown the "biggest and best" dance the school ever saw even though the worst of conditions stand in the way. For months the committees have been busy contacting for expensive orchestras and decorations with few being allowed to know until too late what they had done. Only when the possibility arose that the juniors and seniors were to be charged admission to their own dances did campus opinion become aroused, and probably action will result. The class executives have gone too far for even apathetic student opinion and it is not too late for the classes to take a real voice in the management of their own dances.

There is still time to procure a far more reasonable orchestra within the state and save some half a thousand dollars. There is still time to reduce the outlay for decorations and avoid the chance of additional expense to members of the two classes. There is still time to free the University from the apparent hypocrisy of crying for alms and expending huge and prodigious sums on unneeded luxuries. There is still time to show the executive committees that there are limits to which their abuse of power and trust may go. Immediate action is demanded on the part of the upperclassmen and in this time of necessity and emergency they will not be found wanting.—J.F.A.

The Milk of Human Kindness—

A system strongly reminiscent of the old English debtor prisons of the eighteenth century is in use now at the business office. The arrangement is as follows: if a student who has signed a note for his tuition, etc., does not pay his bill by May 1, a five dollar fine will be imposed upon him. In other words, because he is unable to pay, a student will have to pay five dollars more—a sort of practical application of "easing the forgotten man's burden," perhaps.

Thus the University continues its policy, glibly quoted in a bulletin sent to parents last year, of not allowing a single student to leave the University because of lack of funds.

No doubt the imposition of this fine has its good points. After all, if a student cannot meet his obligations precisely on time he should be punished, bank failures notwithstanding. But why only a five dollar fine and suspension? No sympathy should be shown these miscreants—line them up against a wall and shoot them if they can't pay their bills on time. This suggestion is tendered with all due deference and respect to our estimable business office.

In case this idea is not accepted, we suggest an alternative. Any student who declares himself unable to pay his bill by May 1 should be allowed an extension of time until no later than the final examination period. The first suggestion may solve the problem of temporarily insolvent students more completely, but the second despite, its good points, may be a trifle too simple and humane for intelligent consideration.—M.K.K.

Cheerleaders and Cheerers—Why Not Cheers?

In the midst of the great show of interest and enthusiasm over the past elections, one man was elected unanimously. This was a rather strange event in an election which saw majorities as close as eleven votes. Either the new cheerleader was a man of such extraordinary ability as to discourage any competition, or the student body took such little interest in cheering that it offered no other candidate.

It takes but very little research to determine which of these is the truth. Fortunately the new cheerleader is a very able and conscientious one, but the real reason for the unanimity of his election was a lack of interest on the part of the students. Not one of more than two thousands students had enough interest to get out and oppose Hunt.

This is not the only incident which has portrayed the calm and serene attitude of the student body toward cheering. One has only to attend a football or basketball game to see other indications. The only real cheering that this writer has heard here recently was during the V. M. I. basketball game last January. A small group of V. M. I. students supported the Cadets so well that the students of this University were shamed into giving their team some very boisterous and noisy encouragement.

This nonchalant attitude is not entirely the fault of the students. The cheerleaders of recent years have done little but follow the old hum-drum methods of high school days. It is essential that the cheerleader devise novel and attractive ways of cheering. The greatest part of his work lies in making the students want to cheer. Originality and energy are a primary necessity.

It is up to the new set of cheerleaders to unlimber their heavy artillery and set to work on the problem. The students should and will give their support if a new and efficient program is offered. We have the students; we have the cheerleaders. There is no reason why the quality and quantity of Carolina cheering should not return to the standard of the days of Norman Boren, Scrubby Rives, and Kay Kyser. All that is necessary is a little cooperation.—N.A.T.

A Little Wheat With the Chaff

If any one were asked to describe briefly the conditions through which the world has passed, it is doubtful if a truer picture could be given than the three paragraphs quoted below:

"It is a gloomy moment in history. Not in many years—certainly not in a lifetime of most men who read this paper—has there been so much grave and deep apprehension. In our country there is a universal commercial prostration, and thousands of our fellow citizens have been turned out against the approaching year without employment.

"In France the political caldron seethes and bubbles with uncertainty. Russia hangs like a cloud dark and silent upon the horizon of Europe, while all the energies, resources and influences of the British Empire are sorely tried, and are yet to be tried more severely, in coping with the deadly Indian situation, and with the disturbed relations in China.

"Of our own troubles no man can see the end. If we are to lose money only, and thus by painful poverty to be taught wisdom, no man among us need seriously despair. Yet the very haste to be rich, which is the occasion of widespread calamity, has also tended to destroy the moral forces with which we are to resist and subdue calamity."

The remarkable thing about these paragraphs is that they were written seventy-five years ago! They appeared in Harper's Weekly for October 10, 1857.

Out of the bitter experiences of the last few years will and have come to those who deserve, a finer and richer life than they ever dreamed was possible. The only thing that most of us haven't as much of as ever is money, or its equivalent. In calculating our depleted resources we are prone to forget the many precious things we love and possess that money cannot buy. Too much money like too much liquor create a false sense of well-being, a deceptive feeling of security and ability. It makes us feel independent and inconsiderate of the rights of others.

Thanks to the depression Mr. Average Citizen has learned more about true neighborliness and the vital necessity of mutual happiness than he did when prosperity was at high tide. "I can take care of myself—let the other fellow take care of himself," has proven to be a treacherous dictum. He has learned the painful lesson that unless his neighbors prosper he can not long prosper.—L.M.J.

Membership in Phi Beta Kappa has been awarded to Harold M. Finley, who will graduate from the University of Chicago in June at the age of 17. Young Finley's work prompted President Walter D. Scott to experiment with students under average college age by the foundation of a class of prodigies this year.—Temple University News (N.S.F.A.).

STUDENTS LEAVE FOR CONFERENCE

Seven Delegates From University to Attend Annual Y. M. - Y. W. C. A. Congress.

Seven delegates from the University will leave this morning for the Y.M.-Y.W.C.A. students conference at Duke University today, Saturday and Sunday. Those who will attend are John Acee, Bill McKee, Russell Mickle, Jesse Greer, J. D. Winslow, Simmons Patterson, and B. S. Smith.

The theme for this year's conference will be "The Spiritual in Our Lives and its Application to the Work of the Association." The main speaker of the meeting is David R. Porter, executive secretary of the students division of the national council Y. M. C. A., who will address the group on three occasions, discussing "The Spiritual Adjustment and Growth in the Individual," "Spiritual Adjustment and Growth of the Group," and "The Wider Spiritual Implications of the Association Objectives."

One of the important subjects to be brought up at the business session will be the formation of a state Y.W.-Y.M.C. A. cabinet. Officers will be elected and all colleges represented will decide on the other colleges to be invited.

The officers of this year's conference are Bill McKee, president, Fannie House Scoggin, vice-president, Rosanella Cash, secretary, and Sam Wiley, treasurer. The other members of the executive committee are A. V. Poe, Curtis Spence, Lucy Cherry Crisp, Mrs. Hazen Smith, E. S. King and Harry F. Comer.

Barrymores Battle In New Movie Drama

The most famous brothers on the screen staged one of the most spirited fight scenes ever filmed—and neither had so much as a scratch as a result of the encounter.

John and Lionel Barrymore, who appear with their sister Ethel in M-G-M's "Rasputin and the Empress," which is featured today at the Carolina theatre, figured in a knock-down and drag-out in a cellar, and even went through glass windows in this latest drama. The sequence is that leading up to the death of Rasputin in the dramatic picture of the fall of the Romanoffs in Russia.

John and Lionel, as Prince Chegodief and Rasputin, both give superb characterizations.

Another aid to business ...a Teletypewriter "Central"

Working out new ways to serve the communication needs of the public is an objective always in the minds of Bell System men. The new Teletypewriter Exchange Service—typing by wire—is an example.

For some years Private Wire Teletypewriter Service has speeded communication between separated units of many large organizations. Telephone men—eager to make this service more widely useful—have now established Teletypewriter central offices, through which any subscriber to the service may be connected directly with any other subscriber. Both can type back and forth—their messages being reproduced simultaneously at each point.

This new service provides fast, dependable communication and does for the written word what telephone service does for the spoken word. It is one more Bell System contribution to business efficiency.

Carolina Meets Championship Team At Wake Forest Today

Game Will Be Duel Between Barnes, Sensational Deacon Hurler, and Griffith.

DEACS BOOKED TO WIN
Baptists Have Played Almost Errorless Ball Throughout Present Season.

Still seeking its first Big Five triumph of the year, Carolina travels to Wake Forest this afternoon to meet the Deacons, last year's state champions.

Junie Barnes, sensational left hander who pitched Wake Forest to the Big Five title a year ago and turned Duke back with but a single hit Tuesday, is slated to handle the mound duties for the home team.

Griffith to Pitch

He will be opposed by Joe Griffith, who, with the exception of the Davidson game last Tuesday, has pitched creditably all season. If Joe is "right" this afternoon, Barnes should face a tough assignment in downing the Tar Heels, for Carolina has proved conclusively in previous games that it packs plenty of batting punch.

On the other hand, the Tar Heels have never found Barnes easy. He pitched effectively against the freshman team of three years ago and last year handed Carolina a pair of neat trimmings.

Deacons Strong in Field

Barnes will probably have the advantage over Griffith in the matter of support for his mates have played almost errorless ball this year and have fielded particularly well when most was at stake, while the Carolina defensive has showed a tendency to fizzle at critical moments.

ners got a run in the first, and two more in the fifth, adding their final tally in the sixth.

Nelson, Harris, and Lowe led the winners, while Cox stood out for Aycock.

Grimes beat Ruffin and Kappa Sigma scored over Pi Kappa Alpha by the forfeit routes.

TENNIS SCORES

Old West gained its fourth successive tennis win at the expense of New Dorms, 2-1. Thompson garnered the loser's lone point when he downed McNair in the opening singles set, 5-3, 5-3. O'Brien beat Page, 5-0, 5-0, and O'Brien and McNair paired to beat Thompson and Page, 5-3, 5-3, in the deciding doubles encounter.

S. A. E. beat D. K. E., 3-0, as Connor downed Patterson, 5-4, 5-4, and Cope beat Gardner, 5-2, 5-3, in the singles. The doubles went to S. A. E. by forfeit.

Phi Kappa Sigma Wins

Phi Kappa Sigma beat A. T. O., 3-0. Odum trounced Stimpson, 5-1, 5-3, and Powell beat Blanton, 5-3, 5-3, in singles, and the doubles went to Phi Kappa Sigma on default.

Phi Alpha beat Lambda Chi Alpha by forfeit.

FRESHMEN DOWN STATE WOLFLETS IN FAST BATTLE

McKeithan, Pitcher, and Irwin, Shortstop, Are Outstanding As Tar Babies Win 6-4.

Carolina's freshman baseball team opened its Big Five race yesterday afternoon with a 6 to 4 win over State's yearlings in a fast nip and tuck contest.

Spiers started for Carolina but was hit for two runs in the first frame. State opened the second with a hit and McKeithan went to the mound for the Tar Babies. McKeithan, in his best form, limited the Wolflets to four hits during the last eight innings.

Flythe, who held Wake Forest's first-year team to one hit last week, hurled the first seven innings for the losers, allowing the Tar Babies eleven hits. State got two markers in the first frame on one hit. After one was down Creel got life on an error. Williams singled and Creel scored, Williams going to third, when the pitcher missed a throw from the outfield. Williams counted on an infield out.

Tar Babies Score

The Tar Babies tied the score in the second and third frames. Yeager doubled and scored on Womble's single in the second. In the third, after two were down, Shapiro went to second on an error by Layton, State's third sacker. Irwin brought him in with his first hit of the afternoon.

State went ahead in the first of the fifth, scoring one time on a walk and Williams' double. Moore of the Tar Babies tied things up in the same frame, walking, going to third on Sha-

CHI PSI WINS IN BASEBALL TILTS

Ken Byerly, Pitching for Sigma Nu, Gets Second Win in Past Two Days.

Chi Psi was the only leading intramural baseball team slated to see action yesterday, and it won its game by forfeit over Theta Kappa Nu.

Ken Byerly won his second game in two days, setting the Kappa Alpha team with three runs while his Sigma Nu teammates, putting on a powerful offensive in the last two frames, broke a 3-3 tie which had lasted since the third inning and took the game, 11-3.

Morrison Cracks

Morrison, K. A. hurler who gave the Chi Psi's so much trouble earlier in the season, pitched good ball for five innings, but went to pieces in the sixth when the Sigma Nu's fell on him for five runs. Three more in the seventh assured the victory.

Person, who scored four runs, one of them on a home run, was the outstanding batter in the game, while Long and Byerly also performed well at the plate. Everett and Skinner played well for the losers.

Theta Chi Wins

Theta Chi gained its third win in five starts and handed Phi Gamma Delta its second setback in the same number of games, 19-2. Temple, Theta Chi hurler, pitched masterly ball, allowing only one hit until the seventh inning, when the opposition got both its runs.

Bruce and Barclay were outstanding for the losers, while Kelly, Ross, and Weeks led the winners at bat and afield.

Lewis Wins

Kleitman applied the white-wash brush to Aycock as Lewis won their game, 4-0. The win-

Doesn't that really surprise you?

YES, everybody that sees it is interested in this remarkable machine that wraps Chesterfields in Du Pont No. 300 cellophane—the best made.

But they are all surprised when we tell them that cellophane is just one of the four wrappings that keep Chesterfields just as fresh as if you bought them at the factory door.

If you examined carefully each of these four wrappings, you'd find that, first, there is a wrapping of paper called the foil lining, then the foil itself; next would come the wrapper, and then the outside wrapper of cellophane. Adding the totals of all four wrappers together, there are 96-7/10 square inches of protection in every Chesterfield package.

They are so carefully wrapped that wherever you buy them, Chesterfields are always "milder and taste better."

Ask for "they satisfy" cigarettes next time.

the seventh when Moore walked and McKeithan, Shapiro, Irwin, and Yeager all got singles. State threatened in the ninth, scoring once on a walk, an error, and two infield outs.

Irwin Hits Hard
Besides the pitching of McKeithan, Irwin was again the big star for the Tar Babies. The speedy shortstop connected for two singles and a triple out of four times at bat and drove in three of the six Carolina runs. Yeager, catcher, got a single and a double out of three trips to the plate and Shapiro, outfielder, got two singles out of four, to lead the rest of the Carolina hitters.

ARTISTS' EXHIBIT BEGINS TODAY IN HILL MUSIC HALL

Event in Connection With Dogwood Festival Marks Professionals' Third Showing.

The third annual exhibit of the North Carolina professional artists' club will be opened in Hill Music hall this morning in connection with the Dogwood Festival.

In the exhibition there will be portraits, landscapes, and decorations done in various mediums.

The display is free to the public and will remain open for two weeks. Visiting hours are 10:00 a. m. to 1:00 p. m. and 2:00 p. m. to 5:00 p. m. during the day, and at night from 7:00 p. m. to 9:00 p. m. on week days. Sundays the exhibit will be displayed only in the afternoon from 2:00 to 5:00 o'clock.

Although the work of a few great artists will be included, the exhibit will consist principally of pictures done by members of the club, which was formed four years ago and is composed of those who work for a living by brush or pencil. Club members must either have been born in North Carolina or have worked here five years.

Members of Group

Those belonging to the club are: Charles Baskerville of New York, Isabelle Bowen of Raleigh, Gene Irwin of Durham, Mary deB. Graves of Chapel Hill, Mabel Pugh of New York, Ruth Moore of Raleigh, Donald Mattison of Winston-Salem, James McLean of Raleigh, Frances Speight of Philadelphia, William Steene of New York, Clement Strudwick of Durham, Mary Tillery of Raleigh, Mary Tannahil of New York, Louis Vorhees of High Point, and William Pfohl of Winston-Salem.

Mrs. Katherine Pendleton Arrington, president of the state art society, will come here for a private view and reception of the club, given by the art department of the Community club.

EXTRA CHARGE IS PLACED ON BIDS

Committees of Junior and Senior Classes at Joint Meeting Agree on 50-Cent Levy.

At a joint meeting of the executive committees of the junior and senior classes Thursday night, it was decided that since the fourth-year class has only $375 for its share of the expenses of the Junior-Senior dance set, an extra charge of fifty cents will be levied on the members of the classes.

President C. E. Boyles of the junior class reported that although it is not necessary for the charge to be placed on juniors, it will be collected from them so as to prevent speculation on bids between members of the two upper classes.

There is approximately $1,000 in the junior class treasury, Boyles said, and of this amount, only $725 has been pledged for dance expenses, leaving a cash surplus of over $250 at the end of the year, plus $398 in uncollected fees, for the use of the class next year.

The committees of the two classes agreed to co-operate on the fifty-cent charge as a compromise measure.

MUSIC TEACHERS TO APPEAR HERE

The music faculty of Flora McDonald College, of Red Springs, will present a program in Hill Music hall tomorrow afternoon at 4:00 o'clock. Hugh Williamson, dean of the school of music, will appear as pianist; Mrs. Williamson, voice instructor, will sing; and Mrs. Lillian Farquhar Robeson, violin instructor, will play. Mrs. Robeson will be accompanied by Lida Law Chapman.

Mr. and Mrs. Williamson are graduates of Oberlin College of Music, and Mrs. Robeson, a native of Canada, received her musical training at the Toronto conservatory. All three artists have had European study. Sunday's concert will mark their first appearance here.

ANNUAL FROLICS CONTINUE TODAY

Yesterday Marked Fourth Annual Opening of Dance Series By Group of Fraternities.

Having been opened here yesterday afternoon with a tea dance in the Carolina Inn, the May Frolics continue today with the annual series of dances. Three dances this afternoon and tonight, with music by Kay Kyser and his orchestra, will complete the set.

Yesterday the series was opened at a tea dance by the Thirteen Club, host to the members of the fraternities sponsoring the May Frolics. A formal evening dance followed later in the evening. The Minotaurs and the Thirteen Club also held their annual banquets last night in the Inn.

Frolics End Tonight

The Frolics will continue today with a luncheon dance from 12:30 to 2:30 o'clock in the Washington Duke Hotel in Durham. A tea dance will take place from 4:30 to 6:30 o'clock in the Tin Can and the set will be concluded tonight by another formal evening dance in the Tin Can. Also, the Order of Sheikhs will have a banquet in the Carolina Inn tonight at 7:30 o'clock.

This is the fourth year in which the May Frolics have given by a group of fraternities on the campus. A great many very attractive young ladies are in Chapel Hill for the occasion. Kay Kyser and his former University of North Carolina orchestra, who have achieved national recognition since leaving the University, are furnishing the music for the entire series.

The seven fraternities who are giving the dance set are: Delta Kappa Epsilon, Kappa Sigma, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Zeta Psi, Beta Theta Pi, Sigma Nu and Sigma Chi.

Co-ed Dance Next Friday

The spring dance of the Woman's Association will take place in Bynum gymnasium next Friday night, it was announced yesterday. As yet no orchestra has been obtained for the affair, but further announcements concerning the dance will be made later.

Mrs. Cone to Address Club

Mrs. Julius Cone of Greensboro will address an open meeting of the Garden club in the lounge of Graham Memorial at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon on "Flower Arrangement."

Juniors And Seniors Disapprove Of Proposed Dance Expenditures

Many Members of Both Classes Feel That Less Expensive Orchestra Should Be Secured; Think Saving Could Be Made Even After Paying Forfeit.

(Editor's Note: Because there has been a lot of comment concerning the coming Junior-Senior dances in regard to the amount of money being expended on said dances in times of financial stress such as these, the DAILY TAR HEEL has endeavored to ascertain the opinion of casual members of the classes on the subject.)

At their first opportunity to express themselves since the development of the financial difficulties of the junior and senior classes over the Junior-Senior Dances, members of the two upper classes, by and large, are opposed to the $1600 expenditure proposed by the executive committees.

Over a score of juniors and seniors, interviewed by members of the DAILY TAR HEEL feature board, characterized the action of the committees as "spending at pre-depression rates in depression days." Only four men were in favor of continuing with the original arrangements.

Would Keep Contract

The objectors to cancelling the contract with Bert Lown and his orchestra, an act which would entail the loss of $100, were largely fraternity men who are the frequenters of dances on the campus. On the other hand, many men, to whom the Junior-Senior is the main social event of the season, went on record for downward revision.

All comments contained the hope that engaging a less well-known orchestra would be a policy for this year alone, rather than a permanent practice.

Statements of various junior and seniors questioned on the advisability of breaking the Lown contract and engaging a cheaper orchestra at great saving are as follows:

Conrad Saylor, senior, Pfohl-

town: I am unalterably opposed to spending such a large amount even for a social event as important as is the Junior-Senior. I feel that at the present time a large expenditure is unwarranted. Just as good an orchestra can be secured for much less money. I think, after all, that the milling crowd is oblivious to the music provided.

"Pat" McCoy, junior, Charlotte: Although I feel that a dance orchestra is a wonderful thing in its place—the remotest regions of Siberia being a good location, I suppose—I cannot, however, understand how we poor saps can afford to spend 1100 hard-earned dollars just for some silver-voiced orchestra leader with gold-grabbing inclinations.

Lenoir Wright, senior, Charlotte, chairman University dance committee: I am opposed to having an expensive orchestra for the junior-senior, since it is looked upon as the official University dance. It would appear that the University was spending too much money for dances. However, I think we should go ahead now and get Bert Lown, rather than forfeit the $100.

Thor Martin Johnson, junior, Winston-Salem: Under the existing financial circumstances, I deem it most unwise to foster such extravagance.

James Overton, Coinjock, junior: I agree with Mr. Johnson.

Virgil Weathers, Shelby, senior: I'm in favor of cancelling the contract with Bert Lown in spite of the $100 forfeit, which would be necessitated. The late

Students Take Advantage Of Hot Sun To Secure Fashionable Tan

Emerson Field and Quadrangles Are Covered With Sun Bathers Seeking Glorious Tans In Spite Of Dangers Of Blistering and Sun Burning.

Night and day long, heavy trucks are pulling into Chapel Hill—bearing hogheads of olive oil; soon, trucks equally as big and long will be roaring into town—bearing millions of bottles of skin-cooling lotion. The sun-bathing season has started, and wary merchants are preparing for the exigencies of the period.

With determination in his eyes—eyes which will soon glow like coals from darkened features—the devotee of the "back to nature movement" has betaken himself these past few days to the sun-scorched layers of concrete of Emerson field, where he has assumed the passive attitude requisite for ideal enjoyment. Well supplied with the bottles of olive oil purchased in town, he douses his face and arms and lies down, preparing for the worst.

Ladies Will Intrude

Like flies these swarms of white, glistening bodies appear on the upper reaches of Emerson. The more lazy of the tribe merely walk out to the grassy wastes between Everett and Graham dormitories for their worship of the heliotropic rays. Whether or not the practice will be kept up of using this space for sun-bathing when girl school visitors are put up in Graham is not known.

The equipment necessary for membership in the cult consists merely of white shorts and sun glasses—the latter article being soon laid aside for fear of losing all possible benefits. The more effete bring out blankets, but as blankets are invitations on which to wrestle one's neighbor when over-bubbling with energy, the wise ones soon leave these vestiges of civilization indoors.

Oh! The Pain of It

Books are usually brought along, but are seldom read. A soporific influence is exerted by the sun and quiet reigns. About five in the afternoon, when the sun's rays become gentler, the nudists troop indoors, glorying in their martyrdom. A few applications of this treatment and the sun-worshipper feels fit to amaze the folks at home with stories of vacations on the shores of Hawaii—or whatever his imagination is capable of creating. It has been discovered, however, that strength is sapped by sleeping in the sun, making for adherence to the old axiom of "early to bed." And often through the night the former worshipper must have recourse to the stock of sun-burn lotion wise merchants have had the foresight to buy.

DELEGATES GO TO DUKE CONFERENCE

Eight University students left here yesterday to attend the annual North Carolina Y. W. Y. M. C. A. students' conference which is being conducted at Duke University. The members of the local Y. M. C. A. attending the meeting are: John Acee, Bill McKee, Jesse Grier, J. D. Winslow, Simmons Patterson, B. S. Smith, and W. T. Minor.

At 9:00 o'clock today David R. Porter will address the delegates on "Spiritual Adjustment and Growth of the Group." This will be the second address by Porter, who is main speaker for the conference.

One of the important questions to be brought before the delegates is the formation of a state Y. W. Y. M. C. A. cabinet.

'ALI BABA' TO BE PRESENTED AGAIN

Junior Playmakers to Offer Arabian Nights Story at 3:00 And at 8:00 O'clock.

Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves, a three-act dramatization of the Arabian Nights story, will be continued today with two performances by the Junior Playmakers at 3:00 and 8:30 o'clock in the Playmakers theatre. The play was adapted and directed by Harry Davis and enacted by a juvenile cast from the community.

Ali Baba is the second major production of the Junior Playmakers, who were organized here by Davis last year to supplement the work of the Carolina Playmakers. Cinderella, presented last year as the original offering of the group, was unusually well received by adult audiences as well as juvenile.

Play at Raleigh Also

Just as for the former production, many requests have been received for special performances of Ali Baba. In compliance with one of these the drama will be presented in the Memorial auditorium at Raleigh May 6, under auspices of the Raleigh associated charities.

Among the features of the production are dances directed by Mrs. Barr. Miss Jane Knight, who appears as a slave dancing-girl in the play, was tumultuously received as Cinderella in the production of that name.

Other attractions are elaborate sets of scenery designed by Foster Fitz-Simons, and costumes by Mrs. Oramae Davis.

Scholarship Applications Are Due by Next Tuesday

All applications for the A. I. Ch. E. scholarship should be given to Dr. A. M. White of the chemistry department before next Tuesday.

Members of the student chapter of the A. I. Ch. E. are eligible for this scholarship, which was inaugurated here last year. It is awarded annually on the basis of scholastic standing and needs of applicants.

Magazine Staff Meeting

A meeting of the entire staff of the Carolina Magazine, old members and new, has been announced jointly by retiring editor Robert W. Barnett and the new editor, E. C. Daniel. Plans and policies for the coming year will be announced at the meeting in Graham Memorial tomorrow night at 7:00 o'clock.

MUSIC PROGRAM OPENS DOGWOOD FESTIVAL TODAY

Music, Dances, Games, and Exhibitions Feature Beginning Of First State Event.

Music, dances, games, and exhibitions will feature the first state Dogwood Festival, which opens here today for the purpose of giving expression to the life of the native people of North Carolina. It is hoped that the festival may become an annual spring celebration, when native arts, games, and handicraft may be combined in a program comprising traditional creative activities of the state.

Various exhibits will be open all day, but the two major events are scheduled for 10:30 and 4:00 o'clock in the Forest theatre.

Musicians to Play

The morning event features fiddlers, banjo-pickers, ballad singers, and instrumental bands in a program of native music. The program will be continued in the afternoon with old English country dances, in which residents of Chapel Hill and neighboring towns will participate.

There will follow a concert featuring vocal and instrumental music based on native folk lore to be presented by the Carolina Salon Ensemble, which is to render numbers by Lamar Stringfield, Herbert Hazelman, and others with Thor Johnson conducting. Songs will be offered by the University glee club under the direction of Dr. Harold S. Dyer and by a quartet from the local Negro Methodist church.

Square Dances

The afternoon program in the Forest theatre will be concluded with old-fashioned square dances directed by Miss Josephine Sharkey. A charge of twenty-five cents will be made for the morning and afternoon programs together.

KYSER WILL GIVE BENEFIT CONCERT

Proceeds From Performance to Be Used to Augment Student Loan Fund.

Kay Kyser, leader of one of the most popular modern orchestras, and an alumnus of the University, who is now playing the May Frolics engagement here, will present a special Student Loan Fund concert Sunday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock in Memorial hall.

Kyser has agreed to present several feature numbers which have received acclaim wherever he has played them. Included in this group are a concert arrangement of "Rhapsody in Blue" which will be given in contrast with his own number "Rhapsody in Beer." The Kay Kyser Glee club, composed of several members of the band, will render among other selections, "Night and Day," and "Swing Low."

The band is composed largely of former Carolina students. Featured men are Sully Mason, Frank Fleming, and Benny Cash. Receipts from the concert will be used to help the Student Loan Fund. The admission charge will be 25 cents.

You Can't Get Blood Out of a Turnip

The recent criticism which has been hurled against the University for what has been termed "useless extravagance" has been directed not only at the administration but at the campus at large. During the recent discussion in the state legislature of the educational appropriations bill, heavy condemnation was heaped upon the University for its inability to live within its means, and especially upon the students for their reckless expenditure on dances and other entertainments. The answer which the campus has made to these statements is that the money does not come from the state but from the pockets of the students giving the dances and that if they choose to spend their own money it does not behoove Representative Tam Bowie or Senator Larry Moore to say to them no. Such a reply is indeed a valid one; and in the cases of the May Frolics and the German club dances, where the dances are given by students who can afford them and desire them, no reasonable objection could be made.

The junior-senior set, however, present a different front. Here the dances are not given by an isolated group of wealthy students but by the entire classes, the wealthiest and the poorest. They want their dances, therefore they should have them; but there are many who cannot afford exorbitant fees and it is unfair to them that they should be excluded. The members of the classes have already paid $8.50 for class dues out of which the money for the dances is supposed to come. Having made plans for a set costing around $1600, the executive committees of the two classes, finding that they were short of funds and, without consulting the classes, attempted to levy an extra dollar, without the payment of which no member of either class would be admitted.

Such rank dictatorial powers was obviously outside the rights of the executive committees, and in addition the move was grossly unfair. Many students would have been unable to pay the additional fee and hence not only unable to attend the dances but would also have lost the benefit of the part of their $8.50 which went to pay for the other students' pleasure.

Such a furor was raised by the members of the classes that the executive committees beat a hasty retreat and removed the levy subservient to future actions of the classes as units. Now the committees propose a fifty-cent levy. But the action came too late. In the audit of April 13 it was revealed that, while the junior class had a surplus of $876, the senior class had a deficit of $15.33. Yet in the face of this they planned to spend $800 as their share of the dance expenses.

Just what attitude is shown by such a condition is doubtful, but at the least it displays poor judgment on the part of class leaders.—V.C.R.

The Gold From The Dross

After sitting through a tapping ceremony conducted by the Order of the Golden Fleece one can not fail to be impressed with the lofty ideals which dominate the purpose of that imminent fraternity, nor fail to recognize the high honor which inception into it bestows upon the initiate. Yet, to the student who is acquainted with the new members, there can be no conjecture as to the source from which membership in this order derives its honor. It is derived from the ultra-selective process by which new members are chosen, by the limited number who are selected for membership and by the qualifications which they must possess.

It is not enough that a student have an enviable record as a scholar, though that is one requisite; it is not all-important that he have a long list of campus positions to his credit, nor that one be a general favorite on the campus. All these things blended, together with "ideas, ideals, and the capacity for work," as Governor Ehringhaus put it, are necessary for membership in the Order of the Golden Fleece. The men who were inducted Thursday night do not fall short of any of these requirements; not one of them can be classed as ordinary men.

When the roll of this venerable society is called those who respond will be recognized as the ones who have labored to make the affairs of this campus, this state, and the nation run smoothly—and have succeeded; and the ones who will be at the helm of the civilization of tomorrow.—W.A.S.

Too Much Jetsam

"You can't limit a man's participation in activities." That was the answer given to an editorial, appearing Wednesday, which advocated a point system for rating campus offices and limiting the number of points which an individual student might hold.

But the fact that a small group of students monopolize—and, incidentally, are themselves monopolized—by extra-curricular activities is not the only evil of the campus system. There are too many organizations. Too many useless organizations. Too many organizations that duplicate each other. The names of these organizations cannot be mentioned without making their members angry, but if some of the most avid joiners on the campus will take stock of their membership cards, they will see readily how little the whole batch of them is worth.

Let the student council, or some specially created body, be given the power to investigate existing organizations on the campus. To those which appear unnecessary or superfluous let an ultimatum to do or die be issued. And when any new organization is proposed let the governing body investigate its purpose and its proposals. Then, if it is thought to be a worthwhile venture, let a charter to be issued to it. No club or society—fraternities excepted—should, then, exist on the campus unless it is chartered by the organization-governing body and unless it fulfills the provisions of the charter under which it came into existence.—E.C.D.

Steady, Parents and Grandparents

Several weeks ago a letter appeared in the Raleigh News and Observer from a woman in Rocky Mount. She mourned the return to the Old North State of that contaminating fire, that omnipotent, satanic fluid, that originator of all evil, beer. One part of her letter read as follows. "Instead of singing, 'Carolina, blessed by Heaven,' students of the future will be singing, 'Nobody knows how drunk I am.' We must do all that lies within our powers to quell this evil flood of spirituous beverage before it is too late. We must fight, fight, fight to save the lives and reputations of our brothers, our husbands, our sons."

She wrote on, much more, concerning the terrible consequences of beer not only upon the state and the world, but especially upon the students at Chapel Hill. This obviously sincere, but sadly deluded woman forgets in her fanaticism that before 1908, we not only had beer in North Carolina, but every other form of liquor as well, and yet Carolina continued to turn out some of the finest men and women that this country is capable of producing. Human nature has not changed to such a great degree as to make something that was allowed twenty-five years ago, a deadly sin today.

She forgets that for thousands of years the younger generation was bound for places inconducive to human happiness, and that for thousands of years, it had extricated itself from the mire to lead on to greater and nobler heights. She forgets that in nearly every University town in the country, beer is allowed the thirsty college student; and before prohibition, was quaffed in large quantities, but that that didn't prevent these universities from turning out men who rose above all others that had lived in many years.

This crusader forgets that not only beer, but corn, and applejack, and many other liquors are procurable in and about Chapel Hill in sufficient quantities to drink the whole state of North Carolina into a state of supreme intoxication. If then, with all this liquor readily to be had, since we are not on a continuous drunken spree, since one may walk the streets of Chapel Hill on almost any evening, and see hundreds of perfectly sane, sober students, is it likely that 3.2 beer will lead to a gradual but complete degeneration of the world in general? (I may be wrong, but my humble opinion is that such an idea is not only far-fetched, but to say the least, foolish and unworthy of a mind beyond the stage where it takes statements for granted without serious contemplation of the matter to be considered.)

By the time a man is old enough to go to college, he is ready to realize that the course to be pursued by him is not one of continuous revelry, but of sane and sober consideration of the paths that lie before him. So we say to those who worry over our fate: Have confidence in us as your fathers had confidence in you a generation past.—W.H.W.

Already a device has been patented by an Ohio State University professor, which automatically corrects certain types of examinations and calculates their scores. This is the last straw. If we're to be graded by a machine-monster, let's demand a mechanical instructor, too.—Oklahoma Daily (N.S.F.A.).

This year's annual at the University of Kentucky will contain pictures of the ten most popular professors instead of the ten most popular ladies, as has been the custom heretofore.—Ring-Tum Phi (N.S.F.A.).

Speaking The Campus Mind

To the Editor,
The DAILY TAR HEEL:

Can't we hear the despairing voices of Mr. and Mrs. Taxpayer as they listen to tales of how some merry band of revelers came to Chapel Hill, and, to the insipid tune of $1600, danced us off our feet?

Possibly we may not have taken very kindly in the past toward letting forces outside of Chapel Hill govern our actions concerning money and play. Possibly not. But then, our professors' salaries had not become a mockery, our libraries had not become almost static, and our labs and research department had not landed on the rock of cold despair, owing to inadequate funds. Then, too, this state did not have thousands of people suffering from unemployment, frozen assets, depleted incomes, and increased taxes. No, people talked, they soon forgot as they opened their mail-order catalogues to search for something they too could buy and enjoy.

Conditions now, however, have reached a stage where even the slightest semblance of wealth is looked upon enviously and with mixed emotions. If these classes are so naive as to shower money upon sheer vanity, there must be truth to the stories that our institution has no sense of the value of things about us. Will a feeling arise that appropriations are still too high? Do we wish to be a target for further reductions? Our fellow citizens will see the obvious only. They will read about how we shall dance in ecstasy beneath soft lights, and in an atmosphere of incense and high priced decorations.

We've been the object of adverse criticism too long. It's time we united upon a fundamental understanding with our fellow citizens. Let's show Mr. and Mrs. Taxpayer that we are conscious of his burdens, and that we wish to help him by means of the education and training we receive at Chapel Hill. Let's not flout such a childish display as a "toy" band worth $1100 at him with the remark that "we'll do as we please." Let's keep together to fight this depression, and refrain from exciting the envy of the entire state.

F. G., Class of '34.

To the Editor,

The DAILY TAR HEEL:

Much more valuable and appreciative material could be used in the TAR HEEL than the articles which have been appearing in regards to the junior-senior dances. However, the situation has been brought before the members of the junior and senior classes, and it is not only a situation that concerns the members of the two classes but deeply concerns the University. It was not long ago that the students aided the University, but now the executive committees of the two upper classes have waned and will injure the University in the eyes of the State Legislature by staging a series of junior-senior dances that are to cost $1,600.

It has been asked of the committees to show cause why it is necessary to have the dances at such a cost, and from where did they get their power to make such arrangements and keep it concealed for so long a period—their plans accidentally "leaked out." They have not made public any statement in regards to the questions. However, one official of the junior class stated to a fellow-member this: "The junior and senior classes are the strongest organizations on this campus, and if they can't give a dance that will surpass those which the fraternities give then we should bury our faces in the ground." Is such a just cause? This same official also stated: "If we do not carry out our plans you will lose the money anyway."

It seems to me that such reasons are not justifiable when the University is already being fed on its last straw and that it is not sure of getting all of the last straw.

As has been pointed out, the cost of the dances can easily be cut in half. If we have a surplus of money it is not necessary to give it to Mr. Lown who is several hundred miles from this campus—just look out of any window on the University campus and many things can be seen that the money could be used for and would be appreciated.

Will not the gentlemen yield and uphold the University and the morale of the student body?
J.P.T., '34.

To the Editor,

The DAILY TAR HEEL:

From articles which have appeared in the later issues of the TAR HEEL and from talks of the members of the junior and senior classes it appears as an established fact that the junior-senior dances are to cost $1,600.

We know that our parents are only too glad to do anything in their power to aid us in remaining in the University; we also know that they are depriving themselves of some necessities—not mentioning anything that one could call a luxury—in order that they may be able to send us funds to pay board and tuition with. A savings of one or two dollars would contribute much to their cause. We perhaps receive that one or two dollars to pay into class fees that are used for such gala occasions as the oncoming junior-senior dances. We have this amount to contribute because the executive committees say so. We must pay all class fees!

Where do the executive committees get the power to dictate to their fellow-members what they shall do? It comes from authoritative sources in the University that the executive committees have acquired these dictatorial powers by their own venturing and assumption and not by the vote of the members of the classes or from any other authority.

The board of trustees of the University would call down the President of the University if he went beyond the boundary of his authority. The executive committees of the two upper classes have now gone beyond their boundary; therefore, it is now time for the members of the two classes to call trumps down.

T.H., '34.

To the Editor,
The DAILY TAR HEEL:

Why did the student body, including the members of the junior and senior classes, gather for a mass meeting in Memorial hall and listen favorably while their spring holidays were being postponed for an indefinite period? Why did the same group gather a few days later and agree to write home in appeal for the folks at home to make a plea to our legislators in Raleigh for the very existence of the University? Why are faculty members and other employees of the University having to take a twenty-five per cent cut in salaries this week? Why are we working for part of our expenses and borrowing from the student loan fund to pay the remainder? We are doing so because, throughout this state and nation the financial conditions are such that the people are having to fight for a bare existence, and we likewise are having to fight for the very existence of the University and for us to be able to remain here in school.

We have carried on and tried to make the best of a bad situation, but aren't we somewhat inconsistent if we allow a dance sponsored by the junior and senior classes of the University, to cost $1,600 as a maximum figure? The orchestra alone is costing $1,100. Is there any reason why it should cost so much, since things are as they are, when we could secure orchestra known both in the nation and state for $500?

It might be breaking down a so-called Carolina tradition to get a cheaper orchestra, but other Carolina traditions may be broken down if the state legislature learns of what is about to take place here on the campus; therefore, in the face of the conditions at home and throughout the nation in general, it seems that it would be wise to seek less expensive dances, for this year at least, and the remaining money in the treasury of the two classes could be used as the members of the classes see fit. At least it is something worth thinking over and the classes as a whole should express their opinion, either through a petition or a mass meeting. Furthermore, SENIORS, according to the last meeting of the executive committee it is either do this or pay an additional dollar. Which shall it be?

How To Avoid BONERS

MONOTONY IS THE CUSTOM OF HAVING ONLY ONE WIFE

HEAVEN have pity on the poor lad! He also thinks a parrot is a tropical bird.

But where there's life there's hope. If somebody will introduce Bill Boner to a good pipe and good tobacco, perhaps he'll improve. You see, a pipe helps a man concentrate, think right. And be sure you fill his pipe with Edgeworth Smoking Tobacco. As you know, Edgeworth has proved to be the favorite smoke at 42 out of 54 leading colleges.

Ah! There's a smoke for you! Notice how that blend of fine old burleys helps you think out a difficult problem. See how cobwebs fly from a tired brain on its fragrant wisps of curling blue smoke!

Carolina Halts Wake Forest March 4-2

Griffith Bats And Hurls Way To Impressive Win

Big Pitcher Sets Deacons Down With Six Measly Bingles; Gets Two Hits.

Trouble Arises Over Play at Second; Players and Spectators Have Fight.

A late inquiry last night concerning the extent of the injury sustained by Vergil Weathers in the riot at Wake Forest yesterday revealed that he was suffering from a slight headache as the result of the blow he received in the mix-up at second base in the ninth inning. Weathers was resting quietly and it was not evident as to what extent his eye injury would develop.

Slapping the supposedly invincible Junie Barnes for eleven safeties and four tallies, Carolina handed Wake Forest's reigning Big Five champions a 4-2 trimming in a game climaxed with a ninth inning riot at Wake Forest yesterday.

Big Joe Griffith pitched superbly except for the fourth inning when a spell of wildness followed by a single over second by Clark brought the Deacons their only runs. Griffith allowed but a half dozen hits and kept the situation under control from that point on.

The riot started with one out in Wake Forest's half of the ninth. Griffith opened the inning by fanning Barnes.

Trouble Over Play at Second

Earp singled to left field and tried to stretch the blow into a double only to be caught several feet off the base by Zaiser's perfect throw to Weathers. Instead of sliding, Earp crashed into the Tar Heel with such force as to knock him unconscious yet Weathers held the ball. In the mix-up, Earp took the ball out of Weathers' hand and rolled it toward the umpire who called the runner out.

Then the fireworks started for fair. Earp took a swing at Weathers, Zaiser ran in from left field, players swarmed all over the infield and Johnny Phipps took more than his share of punishment in trying to quell the disturbance.

Several were punched around considerably before the uprising was put down. When it was all over the umpire decided to allow Earp to remain on second. That helped the Deacons little, however, for Bunting hit to Phipps who threw Earp out at third, and White ended the inning by flying out to Powell.

The Tar Heels marked up a pair of tallies in the first by means of a hit batsman, a sacrifice, a triple by Brandt, and a single by Zaiser.

Griffith, who shared batting honors for the day with Zaiser and Brandt, opened the eighth with a double, went to third on Peacock's sacrifice and scored on a single by Phipps.

Carolina's final run came in the ninth on a double by Zaiser, a sacrifice by McCaskill, and a single by Powell.

Both teams fielded perfectly and Griffith received sensational support from his mates on a number of occasions.

The game marked the first Big Five victory for Carolina and the first defeat of the year for Wake Forest.

Watch This Boy

Ralston LeGore will be watched with interest today as a result of his conference bettering javelin heave against Virginia last Monday. LeGore should hurl the spear further today on Emerson field than anyone competing in the Penn Relays at Philadelphia at the same time.

FORMER STAR OF UNIVERSITY NINE TRADED TO CARDS

Whitehead, Carolina Shortstop Of Yesteryear, Makes First Trip to Big Time.

Burgess Whitehead, formerly a star at Carolina, has at last been given his chance in the major leagues.

Whitehead, who has been playing second base for Columbus of the American Association so far this season, was traded to St. Louis of the National league last Thursday. St. Louis sent Art (Whitman) Shires and four others to Columbus in exchange for the second sacker.

Whitehead will act as an understudy to Rogers Hornsby, veteran of many seasons. Whitehead will probably get his chance in the Cardinal line-up in a very short time as the Rajah is getting old and may be forced out of play at any time.

Burgess played shortstop on Carolina's nine in 1930. He was elected captain for the following year but was ineligible to play, as he had signed a professional league contract.

Last year and the year before, Whitehead played with Columbus, and was shifted to second base. Last year the former Carolina star was the main cog in the Columbus defense and hit .125 at bat. He is a whirlwind on the bases and got credit for forty-four steals for the season.

ROGERS PITCHES CHI PSI TEAM TO 33 TO 1 VICTORY

Swain Hall and New Dorms Win; Old West Still Undeclared in Tennis.

An abbreviated program of intramural baseball found three out of the four scheduled contests being played. Chi Psi stepped into the lead of the fraternity loop with a 33-1 win over Lambda Chi Alpha in a game that ended in the fourth inning on account of the one-sided score.

Chi Psi started off in the first frame and drove over thirteen runs before being retired. Gayle Rogers, the winners' moundsmen, was in his usual rare form and set the losers down scoreless. Chi Psi added three more in the second, eleven in the third, and finished off with six in the fourth, to hold a 33-0 lead when Lambda Chi Alpha came up in the fourth. Willey crossed the plate in this inning to rob Rogers of a shut-out, and the umpires called off the slaughter before Chi Psi could do any more damage.

The starters for the winners were Rogers on the mound, Dudley at second, and Yewens in right field. Atwood led the scorers with five runs. Blood and Conrad played best for the losers.

Swain Hall Wins

Lathan, the catcher, led Swain Hall to an 8-7 win over Mangum, in spite of a rally which netted the losers a run in each of the last three frames.

Swain Hall scored twice in each of the second, third, fourth, and sixth innings, while Mangum took a two-run lead by virtue of two in each of the first two frames. The losers failed to score again, however, until their final flare-up, which was not successful.

Everett Loses Slugfest

Everett dropped a free scoring contest to New Dorms, 16-14. New Dorms had two big innings, getting five in the third and six in the fifth. Everett got five in the sixth, but the rally was too late.

BOXING TOURNEY TO START MAY 3

Carolina's annual intramural boxing tourney is scheduled to start next Wednesday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock and continue through Thursday.

As an added attraction, the Smoke Shop is giving a silver loving cup to the boxer in the tourney that shows the most promise for next year's varsity boxing team. M. A. Ham, owner of the Smoke Shop will present the cup at the end of the tournament.

Practices for the tourney are taking place every afternoon in the Tin Can, starting at 4:00 o'clock. Coaches Rowe and Allen are in charge of the workouts and will give each boxer special instructions. No boxer that has been on the varsity or freshman boxing teams is eligible to compete and the only requirement is five work-outs.

There will be eight weights as last fall and each person will be allowed four pounds overweight. The weights are 115, 125, 135, 145, 155, 165, 175, and unlimited. Five of the winning boxers of last fall will be ineligible as they fought on the freshman team, leaving only three champions who will compete for their title.

Duke And Carolina Meet Today On Track In Important Contest

Discus Star

Oscar Mullis is back in the Carolina line-up and should continue his good work in the discus and shot competition. Mullis bettered the Navy school mark in the discus with a spin of some 140 feet. He should help today in Carolina's attack on the vaunted Duke tracksters.

I ONLY HEARD

By MORRIS LONG

If there ever was a track "natural," there's one today on Emerson field . . . Carolina meets Duke . . . and the Blue Devils hope to break the Tar Heels' eleven years of successive southern dual meets . . . besides register another win over a Carolina major team . . . let 'em try . . .

Records are bound to be shattered . . . Brownlee of Duke and Childers of Carolina in the century sprint will never cover more ground than the blue network . . . and in faster time . . . Fulmer of Duke and Higby of the Tar Heels will hook up into a pretty broad-jump battle . . . as will McRae against Lewis, Duke's star miler . . . Oscar "Papa" Mullis greatly strengthens the field events for Carolina . . . while LeGore hopes to toss the javelin out of the stadium . . . he's due for a 210 heave any day now . . .

Another of Carolina's brilliant tennis teams left last night for the east . . . in hopes of adding to the already greatest tennis record of any college club in the country . . . the elite of the east will be met in successive days . . . Navy will be number one . . . and Captain Hines has a little revenge to take out on Navy's all-American basketball player, Loughlin . . . Maryland, New York University, Army, Yale, Harvard, and Brown will be played in order . . . with N.Y.U., Yale and Harvard as the toughest . . . a fight for seventh place on the team between Dillard and Willis was won by Willis five sets to two.

LOCAL THEATRE FEATURE STARS WARREN WILLIAM

Chandra the Great, fortune teller par excellence, will appear in Chapel Hill today.

That is the role taken by Warren William, star of "The Dark Horse," "Match King," and "Employee's Entrance" when he appears in "Mind Reader," feature attraction shown at the Carolina theatre today.

Constance Cummings, Allen Jenkins, Donald Dillaway, Matalie Moorhead, Clara Blandick, Harry Beresford, Robert Greig, and Earle Fox are in the supporting cast.

Both Teams Strong Contenders For Southern Conference Outdoor Laurels.

EMERSON FIELD, 2 O'CLOCK

Stars From Two Undeclared Clubs This Season Are All Out to Win.

Carolina's tracksters will meet the Duke track invaders this afternoon at 2:00 o'clock on Emerson field. This will be another renewal of hostilities between the two schools with Carolina striving to uphold its undefeated dual meet record. This honor has stood throughout the Fetzer regime of some twelve seasons.

The Blue Devils, cast in the role of the visiting aggregation, hold the Dixie indoor title, but the Tar Heels are the Methodists' strongest rivals for Southern conference outdoor laurels by virtue of the drubbing Carolina handed both Navy and Virginia track teams.

Both Have Clean Slate

Both clubs are undefeated for the current season and will present a galaxy of stars who will endeavor to stave off defeat by their efforts. With today's meeting there should be many thrilling individual performances and some record-breaking.

Headlining the Duke troupe of track and field stars will be John Brownlee, sprint and hurdles; Henry Fulmer, broad jump and quarter mile; Charles Bradsher, half; Red Lewis, Jerry Bray, and Bob Byrd, distances; Ripley, pole vault; and Stephens, in the weights.

The stars of the Tar Heels' contingent include Ralston LeGore, Dixie record holder in the javelin throw; Oscar Mullis, University holder of marks in the shot and discus; Floyd Higby, broad jump record holder of school mark; Frank Abernethy, high hurdles record holder; Louis Sullivan and Bob Hubbard, both of whom have bested the conference two mile record.

It will remain for this afternoon to prove the winner of the meet although the stars of each team should win their individual events with firsts. But it will still remain for the men whose praises are still unsung to bring victory to either school.

FRESHMEN BEAT CAMEL CITY HIGH SCHOOL NETMEN

Carolina Yearlings Will Meet Oak Ridge Tennis Aggregation in Match Here Today.

The Tar Baby tennis squad downed the Winston-Salem high school team in Chapel Hill yesterday, 8 to 1. The freshmen will encounter the Oak Ridge combination here today.

In the first singles match Hunter Lott tallied over Hutchins, 6-2, 6-4. Lott's service and overhead were in fine working order, but his ground strokes were not up to standard. Mark Lynch won from Knead, 6-1, 6-6.

Sobol scored over Crawford, 6-1, 8-6. Jimmy Johnston was victorious over Coper, allowing him six games in straight sets, 6-3, 6-3. Baukney tallied over Walters, 6-0, 6-0. Linker trampled Coleman after three sets, 6-1, 1-6, 6-2.

Lott and Johnston won from Hutchins and Crawford, 6-0, 7-5. Taylor and Williams lost to Snead and Coper, 5-7, 6-2, 8-8. Trainer and Jones of Carolina won from Walters and Coleman, 3-6, 7-5, 6-2.

TAR BABIES WILL ENGAGE DEACS IN TILT HERE TODAY

Yearling Nine to Contain Practically Same Hard Hitting Men of Last Contest.

Carolina's freshman baseball team continues its Big Five play this afternoon, meeting the first year team from Wake Forest on Freshman field at 3:00 o'clock.

The Tar Babies opened their Big Five season with a win over State's yearlings last Thursday. Thursday's victory was also the fourth straight for Carolina's freshmen and third win out of three starts for the present combination.

So far the Baby Deacons have lost two and won none against Big Five teams. They were held to one hit last week against State and lost a 7-6 decision to Duke last Thursday.

The Tar Babies will probably use the same hard-hitting line-up that downed State Thursday. Womble, first; Irwin, short; Montgomery, second; and Moore, third will round out the infield with Shapiro, Bullock, and Croom starting in the outfield.

Either Glasgow, a right-hander, or Hutchison, a southpaw, will start on the mound for the Tar Babies. Glasgow has twirled two games and pitched well both times, although being credited with a defeat in the first one. Hutchison held Mt. Pleasant to one hit in his first game and won his only other start against Oak Ridge. Yeager, one of the hardest hitting men on the team, will be behind the plate.

CAST REHEARSES FOR FINAL PLAY

Playmaker Production of "Midsummer Night's Dream" to Be in Forest Theatre.

Rehearsals for the Playmaker Forest theatre production, Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream, are being conducted daily by Professor F. H. Koch in preparation of the outdoor presentation, May 19 and 20, which will conclude the Playmaker program for the year.

The Forest theatre production will be the most elaborate performance of this season, and it is expected to surpass the immensely successful Romeo and Juliet outdoor presentation of three years ago.

Special Dances

The court dances and fairy dances for the production, which with special music are attractions of the drama, are being directed by Phoebe Barr. The presentation will be accompanied by the music which Mendelssohn composed for the play, rendered by Thor Johnson and his orchestra.

Scenery has been designed especially for use in the Forest theatre by Mary Dirnberger and is being constructed under direction of Samuel Selden. Costumes are being designed by Mrs. Oramae Davis.

(Continued from page three) got his team's best total for the game, crossing the plate four times, while McKinney and Barron played best for the winners.

Phi Kappa Sigma won a forfeit from Theta Kappa Nu.

TENNIS RESULTS

Only two of the six listed tennis matches developed into actual contests. Old West remained undefeated as it beat the Atlantics outfit, 2-1. Tiore beat O'Bryan, 5-4, 1-5, 5-4, for the losers, but McNair won his singles from Watson, 5-3, 5-0, and paired with O'Bryan to win the doubles, 5-3, 5-4, thus clinching the match.

Zeta Beta Tau beat Theta Chi, 3-0. Brown beat Kelly, 5-2, 5-0, and Sinkowitz beat Temple, 5-3, 5-2. The doubles went to Zeta Beta Tau by forfeit.

The Delta Tau Delta-Sigma Nu and Phi Gamma Delta-Kappa Sigma matches were postponed, while Pi Kappa Alpha and Sigma Chi beat Phi Sigma Kappa and Sigma Phi Epsilon, respectively, by forfeits.

NEW COLLEGE TO CHANGE LOCATION

School Will Be Moved to Mountains of Western North Carolina.

According to a report in the Columbia Spectator 70 students of New College will desert the land of jazz and gin next June when this institution opens its "community" at Springdale in the mountains of western North Carolina.

The primary purpose of the "community" is field work in biology and geology, although the students will find it necessary to do field work in the potato patch, since an endeavor will be made by the group to grow its own vegetables in a money saving move.

New College community will not run everything, but the group will run its own public school, its own theatre, and will make an effort to educate the inhabitants of the district. Expenses are quoted at from $210.00 for board, lodging and tuition for a period of two months to $260.00 for the entire period of sixteen weeks. A transportation charge of $10.00 will be made.

Governor Gives Dope On Origin Of Heel Annual

J. C. B. Ehringhaus Tells Story Of How He and Another Student Named Yearbook.

The search that newsmen of recent college generation have long been conducting to discover the origin of the name Yackety Yack for the University annual was concluded Thursday night when Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus, speaker at the Golden Fleece tapping, told Haywood Weeks that he gave the yearbook its name.

"I was business manager of the Hellenian, as the annual then published by the fraternities was called. When the book failed to pay out," Governor Ehringhaus explained, "I took upon myself the obligation of fulfilling the contract, although I was a minor at the time. That $76 was paid out of my first earnings after I left school."

"The next year when the yearbook was expanded to take in the activities of the whole campus—including both the fraternities and the societies," Governor Ehringhaus continued, "a contest to select a new name for it was held. Another fellow and I submitted the name Yackety Yack, taken from the only original yell that the University had at that time. We drew lots for the prize and I have forgotten who won it."

According to the Governor, then, the name of the annual came from the yell, which point has also been debated. The next piece of research that must be to discover the author of the yell.

Another campus institution for which the Governor was responsible was the college hymn, Hark the Sound. A quartet of which he and Comptroller Charles T. Woollen were members was the first organization to sing the song. "Yes," said the Governor, "Charlie was a great musician. He had us all blowing horns and singing songs."

COMMODORE HARTLEY MAKES CHAPEL TALK

Commodore Herbert Hartley, former captain of the Leviathan, kept a large audience entertained throughout the chapel period yesterday in Memorial hall.

In his thirty-five years of seamanship, Captain Hartley has crossed the Atlantic more than 850 times and has had a variety of experiences.

The Leviathan, formerly the German ship Vaterland, which he captained was once the largest ocean liner afloat. The Commodore has entertained many notables with stories of his travels upon the ocean.

This was Commodore Hartley's second appearance here, he having been enthusiastically received when he addressed an assembly here last October.

Juniors And Seniors Dislike Dance Plans

Bowie-Cherry bill should prove an incentive for the University's spending as little as possible for dances. In regard to the agreement between the junior and senior classes, I believe the junior class would be forced to lose money unless the senior class could provide some means, other than the present class treasury, to raise half the $1100.

J. W. Winstead, Rocky Mount, senior: I am strongly in favor of Bert Lown. I think that it would lower prestige to have a local orchestra (Leftwich). I think that the dollar extra assessment of seniors would add to the dance. No one should object to the extra cost of Bert Lown as long as the individual senior is paying for it.

Wilbur Dorsett, Spencer, senior: Why not follow the Live at Home program and get a North Carolina orchestra?

W. W. Hartsell, Moccure, junior: Personally, I feel that the expenditure for the junior-senior dance should be consistent with the present assets of the classes.

Leonard Karesh, Charleston, S. C., senior: If the classes haven't the money, they have no business attempting to run so expensive a dance. It amounts to $2.50 difference to each senior, and I believe few of them would care to pay that much to have Bert Lown rather than a local orchestra. One can only spend according to the size of his purse.

Irvin Boyle, Charlotte, junior: I'm against breaking the contract which would be throwing away $100. If the committee put enough tickets on sale they would be able to make up the shortage and perhaps come out ahead. It would be wise, however, to prevent seniors selling their own bids in competition with the class sales to the campus at large.

Leland A. Dudley, Lake Landing, junior: I think $1100 is entirely too much to pay for an orchestra for the junior-senior dances. I think that the members of the classes who don't wish to attend the dance should be refunded their money.

Lewis Skinner, Greenville, senior: In order to keep agreement with junior class we should get Bert Lown. Also I believe that he would lend a higher prestige than Jelly Leftwich or some other cheaper orchestra.

W. W. Lucas, Speed, senior: The junior-senior ball is a very enjoyable feature of our social life at the University, and I enjoy it very much, but I believe that a more moderately priced orchestra might be hired.

P. P. Fox, New Hope, senior: I think that $1600 is entirely too much to spend during these times for the junior-senior dance.

Robert R. Reynolds, Asheville, junior: Although a less well-known orchestra playing for the junior-senior would result in fewer girls coming down, I believe that for the good of the student body, the classes involved, and the University, the contract should be broken and a less expensive orchestra hired.

Dave McCachren, Charlotte, junior: Whereas I am greatly interested in the success of the junior-senior prom and would like to dance to the best orchestra obtainable, I do not think that to pay $1100 for music for this dance is the best policy at this time. I feel that with the good crowd that is sure to attend, the dance could be staged with as good effect upon considerably less expenditure of money.

NEGRO PLAY WILL BE BROUGHT HERE

Y. M. C. A. Committee on Race Study and Interracial Cooperation Sponsors Feature.

The famous negro musical morality play, Pearly Gates, will be presented at Memorial hall Tuesday, May 9, at 8:30 o'clock. The production is being brought here by the Y. M. C. A. as the year's feature program under the committee on Race Study and Interracial Cooperation.

Pearly Gates is based on the negro psiritual and written and directed by Professor Frederick Hall of Clark University, Atlanta, Georgia. Professor Hall is widely known among negro musical teachers and is head of the departments of music in Clark University and Gammon Theological Seminary in Atlanta.

Large Negro Chorus

Professor Hall's trained cast for the play is made up of thirty students from these two institutions. One of the most interesting features is that in addition to this trained cast, he will use a chorus of from two hundred to two hundred and fifty negro voices from Chapel Hill and Durham. The total cast, therefore, will number more than two hundred and fifty negroes.

The play is an hour and fifty minutes in length, and the entire cast will be on the stage throughout, as spirituals are sung at frequent intervals from beginning to end. Approximately thirty spirituals will be used. A number of people who have seen Pearly Gates say that it is second only to Green Pastures.

De Wick Mentioned

During his last Sunday night broadcast over station WABC in the national hook-up, Andre Kostelanetz, representative of the Columbia Broadcasting Company's executive offices, gave a summary of the results of Henry N. De Wick's research investigation of the relative recall values of auditory and visual presentations of advertising copy. Mr. De Wick is a member of the University psychology department.

Commerce Meeting at Lexington

Dean Dudley D. Carroll and Dr. John B. Woosley of the University commerce department are attending meetings of the American Association of Collegiate Schools of Business and the Beta Gamma Sigma fraternity convention in Lexington, Ky., this week-end. They will return Monday.

sity dance committee: It seems quite foolish during this time of economic stagnation to make an expenditure of $1600 for a dance.

I feel that the University would incur the animosity of the state by making such an extravagant gesture at this time. The University is dependent upon the good-will of the people of the state. This should be considered seriously in the present difficulty.

Furthermore, if the student body feels that a dance is necessary to close the school year successfully, another orchestra may be secured much more reasonably than that of Bert Lown. Despite the forfeiture of $100, a good orchestra could be obtained at a minimum saving of $500.

The senior class seems to be unfavorably impressed with the suggestion of extra assessment. In view of this, I feel it the obligation of the committee to act in accordance with the wishes of the class.

opens in Graham Memorial at 10:00 o'clock this morning, including such specimens of North Carolina handicraft as pottery, weaving, handmade and antique furniture, wrought iron, pewter and silver, woodcarving and leather tooling, block printing, hooked rugs, quilts and baskets.

Other Events

Other events on the program of the day will include visits to Chapel Hill's gardens, for which guides are supplied by the local garden club; the annual exhibition of the North Carolina professional artists' club in the Hill music hall, which opens today and continues for two weeks; a lecture on "The Arrangement of Flowers" by Mrs. Julius Cone of Greensboro at 2:30 o'clock in Graham Memorial, and visits to the celebrated iris garden of William Hunt.

The Hunt garden consists of an acre of iris on North street, including more than 200 varieties. Hundreds of representatives of garden clubs from all sections of the state were present at the opening of the iris garden last spring, and as many visitors are expected during the festival.

Among other attractions during the festival will be two performances of the Junior Playmaker production, Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves, in the Playmaker theatre at 3:00 and 8:00 o'clock today. The play is adapted and directed by Harry Davis, assistant director of the Carolina Playmakers, and performed by a juvenile cast from the community.

Inter-patrol contests are to be staged by some 200 Boy Scouts from the state on the freshman athletic field from 11:00 until 2:00 o'clock today, in connection with a three-day camporee which began yesterday. Other contests will take place at the Scout camp near Kenan stadium.

Other important side attractions will include the May Frolic, an annual set of five dances sponsored by seven leading fraternities, and the Duke track meet at 2:00 o'clock on Emerson field.

Seniors Are Removed From Williams Paper

Williamston, Mass., April 28. (NSFA)—As a result of faculty action, all senior members of the board of the Williams Quarterly have been forced to resign because of an article by a member of the senior class which is alleged to have been handed in for publication by a person other than the author.

Although, according to the account in the Williams Record, the scene of the story is a New York speakeasy and the vocabulary used by the characters might be open to criticism, but the dean states his action was prompted by no "literary or philosophical reasoning, but entirely on the legal question involved."

In commenting on the situation editorially, the Record says: "The event serves to bring a ticklish question before the public in such a way that a definite idea of the functions of a college paper or magazine are clearly outlined. The decline and fall of the Quarterly editors is somewhat of a farce, for the article advertised an article that would have received little attention if no action had been taken. When college administrators commence to grow excited over the articles in collegiate publications, it might be well for them to remember the fact that undergraduates, especially editors, are prone to

BLUE RIDGE MEET ANNOUNCED HERE

University Students Will Represent Local Y. M. C. A. at Conference June 15.

The annual Southern Students Conference sponsored by the Southern Field Council, student division of the Young Men's Christian Associations of the south, will take place at Blue Ridge, N. C., June 15-24. The conference is attended by delegates from various colleges of the south. Its purpose is to create a knowledge of one's self, environment, and resources.

The conference will be conducted under the leadership of faculty members of the southern schools and universities. Dr. W. Aiken Smart of Emory University will have charge of the religious activities of the meeting and Kirby Page, noted author and editor of the World Tomorrow, will conduct the Bible study. Other conference leaders are Reverend J. Marvin Culbreth, ex-secretary of the Wesley Foundation and a minister in West Durham, Dr. Marcer G. Evans of Emory University, R. B. Eleazer, and Francis P. Miller of the faculty of Yale University.

The University holds the record of having sent more delegates to a Y. M. C. A. conference than any other school. This was accomplished in 1923 when Carolina was represented by 58 delegates.

Junior Class Meets Tomorrow To Express Views On Bid Levy

MATTER WILL BE PUT TO MEMBERS FOR SETTLEMENT

President Cate Announces That Seniors Will Await Action
Of Third-Year Class.

A meeting of the junior class for a discussion of class finances in connection with the junior-senior dances has been called for 7:00 o'clock tomorrow night in Gerrard hall, it was announced yesterday by President C. E. Boyles.

The gathering is called to enable the class to express its opinion on the proposed fifty-cent levy on bids for the dances, the recommendation agreed upon by class executives.

The committees of the two classes met Thursday night and agreed to cooperate on the extra charge of fifty cents to class members as a compromise measure, due to the fact that seniors will have to pay an additional levy on account of a shortage of finances for their share of the dance expenses.

The committees were of the opinion that if the charge were levied on members of both classes, there would be no incentive for speculation on bids between juniors and seniors.

Vote on Compromise

The juniors will vote tomorrow night either to accept or reject the compromise recommended by the executive groups.

Lindy Cate, president of the senior class, announced yesterday that the senior class will not be able to act on the question of an extra levy until the junior class reaches a decision, and that the class will meet later.

FOURTH FROLICS DANCE SET ENDS

Formal Affair in Tin Can With Kyser Playing Closes Week-End of Activity.

With Kay Kyser and his former University of North Carolina orchestra supplying an unusual brand of captivating rhythm, the fourth annual May Frolics came to a brilliant close last night after another day of dancing activity. Three dances were given yesterday.

The series continued yesterday with a luncheon dance in the Washington-Duke in Durham. A tea dance at the Tin Can followed and the set was concluded with a formal evening affair in the Tin Can. Numerous activities were also in order at the various fraternity houses.

Yesterday morning the order of Gimghoul tendered a breakfast in honor of Gorgon's Head, junior honorary order, at Gimghoul castle. The Order of Sheiks had a banquet last night in the Carolina Inn.

Seven fraternities on the campus sponsor the Frolics each May. A great number of charming visitors add spice to the occasion. Kay Kyser, an alumnus of the University, provided the outstanding musical arrangements and syncopations that have made him and his band one of the foremost of America's dance orchestras.

The fraternities that sponsored the affair are Kappa Sigma, Delta Kappa Epsilon, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Zeta Psi, Beta Theta Pi, Sigma Nu, and Sigma Chi.

New Co-ed Officers Take Reins Tomorrow

The new officers of the Woman's association, who were selected at the general campus elections April 5, will go into office tomorrow, according to an announcement by Mary Frances Parker, retiring president.

The officials who will assume duties tomorrow are: Jane Jolly, president; Jo Orendorff, vice-president; Elizabeth Johnson, secretary; and Betty Durham, treasurer.

Miss Parker also announced that two figures, in one of which the old members of the women's council will participate and in one of which the new members of the council will take part, will be staged at the co-ed dance.

ANNUAL CONGRESS WILL INAUGURATE TWO INNOVATIONS

Government Institute Meeting
Here June 1-3 to Launch Governmental Experiments.

By R. W. Madry
Public officers and private citizens of North Carolina are uniting, through the 1933 sessions of the Institute of Government, to take place in Chapel Hill June 1-3, in launching two governmental experiments without precedent in the history of North Carolina and unique among governmental movements throughout the country.

The first of the two programs inaugurates the practice of joint annual conferences between city aldermen, county commissioners, state legislators, and federal representatives who have for more than one hundred years legislated for the same people in overlapping governmental units without coming together in the practice of cooperative action.

The second innovation is the practice of interpreting the legislative action of each session of the General Assembly to all local governmental units and to all groups of city, county, and state officials affected thereby.

The significance of the June sessions of the Institute were pointed out in a letter to members of both houses of the General Assembly signed by Lieutenant-Governor A. H. Graham, president pro-tem of the Senate, and Speaker Reginald L. Harris of the House of Representatives, who are president and vice-president, respectively, of the legis-

MARY FRANCES ODUM WINS PIANO CONTEST

Mary Frances Odum of Chapel Hill, yesterday tied Rhuemba Beddingfield of Brevard and Marianne Mann of Albemarle for first place in the class B and C piano contest at the high school music contest which took place in Greensboro this week.

Miss Odum is the daughter of Dr. Howard W. Odum, director of the school of public welfare in the University. In the preliminaries at Durham last week in which contestants from several counties took part, Miss Odum won the chance to compete in the statewide contest.

The girls Class B glee club of Chapel Hill also won mention, tying seven other schools for second place.

REPORT REVEALS $274,328 IS OWED STUDENTS' FUND

Bradshaw Releases Statement Showing $100,000 Due and in Process of Collection.

A special report of Student Loan Fund activities issued yesterday by Dean F. F. Bradshaw revealed that a total of $274,328.41 held by 1648 individuals is outstanding. Of this amount, something over $100,000 is due at the present and in the process of collection.

Dean Bradshaw's statement showed that the business office was successful in collecting approximately $26,000 due for the past year. Collections have been made at approximately the same rate for several years.

Graham Led in Move

Of the $200,000 which Dean Bradshaw recommended as an addition to the fund in 1927, more than $127,000 has been added under the leadership of President Frank P. Graham and with the cooperation of students, faculty members, and members of the community.

At present no account is uncollected that was recorded prior to 1908, only four accounts are outstanding made prior to 1916, and only 154 balances due on accounts recorded prior to 1926. The latter figure represents slightly less than $8,000.

Increase in Loans

Since the fall of 1923 when the handling of loans was transferred from the office of President Graham to the office of the dean of students, loans have shown a decided increase with the increase of the student body. In the fall of that year, 67 students borrowed $3,000. In the fall of 1924, 132 students borrowed $9,000. In the fall of the present academic year of 1932-33, 430 loans for $25,389.28 were made, almost 50 loans more than were made during the entire year of 1928-29.

Dean Bradshaw stated yesterday that the work of the business office on the collection end was extremely progressive and effective. The granting of loans is made through Bradshaw's office in south building.

Johnson Comes Back

Guy B. Johnson of the department of sociology returned Friday night from the Hampton Institute where he was invited to attend the 65th anniversary of the institution.

Debate Council Meeting

The Debate council will meet Tuesday night in the Grail room of Graham Memorial at 9:00 o'clock instead of tomorrow. Hereafter, the meetings will take place Tuesday nights.

Bowie Opposes High Dance Expenditures

If the students of the University of North Carolina do not stop the reckless expenditure of money, and especially the money of the people of the state, the legislature will abolish the University and all other state colleges, according to a statement by Representative Tam Bowie of Ashe made Friday night to the DAILY TAR HEEL.

"Even the contemplation of paying $1,100 for an orchestra at the University when many state orchestras could be procured for a third of that is the

THROGS ATTEND INITIAL FESTIVAL AT CHAPEL HILL

Grumman Reports Indication That Dogwood Event Will Be Made Annual Affair.

With exhibits, games, dances, and folk-tunes the first Dogwood Festival, staged to give expression to the folk-life of the native people of North Carolina, came to a close here yesterday. The arts and crafts exhibit in Graham Memorial and the annual showing of the North Carolina professional artists' club in the Hill hall will remain open.

The arts and crafts exhibit will be open today from 10:00 to 5:30 o'clock, while the artists' club exhibition will continue for two weeks during the hours of 10:00 to 1:00, 2:00 to 5:00, and 7:00 to 9:00 on week days and from 2:00 to 5:00 Sunday afternoons.

May Be Annual Affair

The Dogwood Festival was staged with a view to establishing an annual spring celebration in Chapel Hill, when native arts, games, and handicraft may be combined in a program of the traditional creative activities of the state. According to Russell M. Grumman, chairman of the festival executive committee, the enthusiastic reception given the first festival seems to indicate that the celebration will become an annual affair.

In the arts and crafts exhibit were included such specimens of North Carolina handicraft as pottery, handmade and antique furniture, hammered pewter and silver ware, articles of wood-carving and leather tooling, block printing, quilts and baskets, wrought iron stands and candle sticks, and mica lampshades. Also unusual views of eastern and western sections of the state by Mrs. Bayard Wooten were displayed.

Portraits, landscapes, and decorations in various mediums feature the third professional artists' club showing in Hill music hall. While the work of a few visiting artists is included, the exhibition consists mainly of members of the club.

Hickerson's Mother Dead

Mrs. Annie Hickerson, mother of Professor T. F. Hickerson of the engineering department of the University, died Friday afternoon at her summer home in Ronda. Funeral services will be conducted there this afternoon at 2:00 o'clock.

Bishop Penick Here

Bishop Penick of North Carolina will conduct a confirmation service and sermon at the Chapel of the Cross this morning at 11:00 o'clock.

Track Teams Defeat Duke In Thrilling Dual Meets

Student Conference Ends At Duke Today

The annual North Carolina Y. W.-Y. M. C. A. Students' Conference, which has been conducted at Duke University since Friday, will be concluded today.

The program for this morning consists of "Meditation and Prayer" led by Lucy Cherry Crisp, and the election of officers for next year. Following the session the group will attend the morning services at the Duke chapel.

The students attending from the University are John Acee, Bill McKee, Russell Mickle, Jesse Grier, J. D. Winslow, Simmons Patterson, B. S. Smith, Ike Minor, and Harry F. Comer.

KYSER PRESENTS SPECIAL CONCERT AS LOAN BENEFIT

Former Carolinian's Orchestra
To Give Performance in Memorial Hall Today.

In the interest of the Student Loan Fund, Kay Kyser and his orchestra, who have been at the University this week-end to furnish music for the May Frolics, will present a special concert this afternoon from 4:00 to 5:00 o'clock in Memorial hall.

The orchestra, which was formed at the University and which left four years ago, has played a number of important engagements throughout the country. The group has appeared in New York, Cincinnati, St. Paul, Dallas, Cleveland, on the RKO circuit, and has frequently broadcast over the networks of the NBC and Columbia systems.

Kyser is a native North Carolinian and a graduate of the University, and is remembered as the organizer of the famous "Cheerios." Eight of the members of the original band are still with Kyser.

The concert today will include several feature numbers which have been popular wherever the band has presented them. There will also be several original numbers on the program. The Kay Kyser Glee club, made up of members of the orchestra, will appear in some of the feature numbers. Featured performers in the orchestra are Frank Fleming, Sully Mason, and Benny Cash.

The admission charge is set at 25 cents, and the proceeds will be turned over to the Loan Fund.

DR. SMITH OF DURHAM TO PREACH HERE TODAY

Dr. Harry C. Smith, presiding elder of the Durham district of the Methodist church, will preach at the University Methodist church this morning at 11:00 o'clock. Dr. Smith is one of the leaders of the North Carolina conference and for four years was pastor of the Duke Memorial church in Durham.

Dr. L. M. Brooks of the sociology department will speak this evening at 6:45 o'clock before the Wesley Student association. He has chosen as his topic, "After Revolt—What?"

At 8:00 o'clock Reverend Albee Godbold will discuss the book, Re-Thinking Missions.

Tar Heel Varsity Defends 12-
Year Record in Downing Blue
Devils at Home, 66-60.

ABERNETHY WINS HURDLE

Fresh Tracksters Defeat Duke
First-Year Outfit, 65-61, in Closely-Fought Meet.

Carolina's varsity and freshmen track teams prevailed over the visiting Duke aggregations yesterday afternoon, 66-60 and 65-61, respectively. The dual meet was run off on Emerson field before a colorful crowd of 2,700 spectators which packed the stands and milled around the edge of the track.

Once more the Tar Heel tracksters repulsed their ancient rival, Duke, who will yet have to conquer a Carolina track team in a dual meet, and successfully defended their twelve-year undefeated dual meet record which has withstood the ravages of all comers during the regime of Coach Bob Fetzer.

All Events Furnish Thrills

All the events were packed with thrills and as the summary will indicate were close. The 880 yard run, the final event of both meets, determined the outcome of the meets.

Probably the most colorful race of the afternoon took place in the 120 yard high hurdles when Frank Abernethy, Carolina star, bested John Brownlee, Duke hurdles ace. Abernethy was clocked at 15.2 seconds as he breasted the tape. But in the 220 yard lows Brownlee, the old maestro, showed rare form and bested Abernethy; Tom Haw-

MAGAZINE EDITOR INVITES WRITERS

Incoming Leader Issues Call for New Contributors to Periodical in Coming Year.

All persons interested in the Carolina Magazine will meet tonight in Graham Memorial at 7:00 o'clock for the last conference of the year. The retiring editor, Bob Barnett, has asked that all contributors to the Magazine be present: E. C. Daniel, the incoming editor, has issued a call for new writers for the Magazine during the coming year.

Plans and policies which the new editor intends to inaugurate will be announced to the staff tonight. Two issues of the Magazine will be published this spring by the new administration.

Wants Large Staff

"It is my intention," Daniel said yesterday, "to have as large a staff as possible, to give opportunity for publication to as many campus writers as possible. My editorial staff will be a representative group of students—both men and women—who have demonstrated their ability in work of this type. Every contribution will be given full consideration by this board.

"Any one who wants to write and can demonstrate ability to write will have his material published. Responsible positions will go to those who prove themselves reliable. Any and all students who are interested in writing as a profession or a pastime are urgently asked to help with the publication of the Magazine."

Backstage!

Up until three or four years ago the class dances were given primarily for the benefit of the members of the classes giving the dances. Only a few outsiders were given bids.

However, in the last few years, the classes have gone into competition with the German club, the May Frolic, and the Spring Festival, and have been putting on more extravagant dances in an attempt to keep up with these other organizations. Since many members of the two upper classes look upon this annual junior-senior function as their major social whirl at Carolina they would naturally be interested in putting on as nice an affair as possible. The money belongs to the classes and, under ordinary financial conditions, a big dance would be in order, provided the majority of the members of the class voted for such a festival.

In the present instance one of the classes involved hasn't the money, our financial condition is most uncertain, and $1,600 is being spent by the executive committees of the two classes without the ratification of their members.

Retrenchment rather than elaboration should be practiced now by the two upper classes so that a few hard-earned shekels may be left in the pockets of the members of the classes. When 500 students in the University are staying here by the grace of God and the Loan Funds, when approximately $75,000 has been loaned students this year to remain in school, when $50,000 is owed the University at present, represented by notes of students who have had to defer their tuition on account of lack of funds, when the state is in the economic chaos that it is today, it seems utterly foolish and criminally extravagant to allow any executive group authorize the payment of $1,100 for an orchestra, and $1,600 for three dances.

It is customary for the executive committees to refer any expenditure of class funds to the class as a whole, for its approval. If the class meets before the expenditure is decided upon, it authorizes or rejects it then. If the executive committees recommend an expenditure at another time the matter should be referred to the class for its ratification or rejection, before any contracts are entered into at all. By no means is the committee empowered to enter into contracts and make expenditures without the consent of the class.

This year the committees have assumed a "divine right" of making arrangements and signing contracts involving the class members' money without their consent. With the developments as they are, it seems that the committees have acted in a hasty and unwarranted manner. By all rights they, and not the classes, should be held personally responsible for any losses the classes may suffer through their unauthorized actions.

The least that can be done now is to hold a class meeting of both the junior and senior classes and thresh the matter out without delay. The juniors are meeting Monday night and every member should be there. If the class as a whole approves the expenditure, under present conditions and circumstances, then that is the business of the class.

Dictatorship—Buncombe

The far-famed democracy of the University of North Carolina seems to have gone into almost total eclipse due to the power of dictatorship assumed by the class executive committees. No longer is the student free to carry out his opinions; the class executive committees have usurped his rights and taken on the divine right of kings so prevalent in former eras.

Although the committees are supposed to be representatives of the class at large, in the face of seemingly general opinion that expenses should be lowered during the time of economic unrest, they have used money collected for dues as they see fit without consulting the other members of the class. Now, upon discovering that their efforts have resulted in a lack of funds, they propose to levy an extra tax upon each member of the class expecting to attend the junior-senior dances.

At last, although realizing that they are wrong, they are seeking to bolster their crumbling structure of dictatorship through the use of deceit. It had been advocated that they secure a cheaper orchestra from within the state to play for the dances. The orchestra leader, Jelly Leftwich, informed the TAR HEEL that, although he already had engagements for the two days of the dances, he felt almost certain that he could break these engagements to play for the three junior-senior dances for approximately $375.00.

Thursday night at a joint executive committee meeting of the junior and senior classes, those in attendance were told that a telegram had been received from Leftwich, stating that he could not break his previous engagements. This carried no grain of truth, for Friday the TAR HEEL in a telephone conversation with Jelly Leftwich was told that he knew nothing whatsoever about any telegram purported to come from him and that his original statement still held true.

If the executive committees can not be trusted to handle the funds of a class properly and to play fair with the men who place these funds in their keeping, they should be forced as a drastic step to submit all plans calling for large expenditures to the members of the class itself at a mass meeting.—F.P.G.

Juniors!—Monday Night

The cry for a show of student opinion with regard to the junior-senior dance situation has at last been answered. Monday night the members of the junior class are to be given the opportunity to express themselves on the matter, and, at the same time, the class will be given the chance to ratify or reject the plan proposed by the dance committee.

It is to the interest of the class to have a large representation present. The greater this representation, the less the chance that there will be any political or other type of manipulation by any group. This protection is essential to the success of the meeting. Now that the referendum has been offered, it should be made representative.

This meeting is a challenge to each and every individual in the junior class. It is the duty of each member to attend. This is a duty which he not only owes to the class, but one which he owes to the University and to himself. Not only is the welfare and prestige of the class at stake, but also the welfare and prestige of the University is under fire. Besides the obligation which each man owes himself he owes something to his class and his school. In order to look after his own interests, the interests of the class, and the interests of the University each student should feel that he has a compulsory obligation to fulfill by attending the meeting.

The challenge has been thrown out. The junior class should and will accept. Each member of the class will take up the challenge and consider it to be his individual duty to answer it. This answer will come Monday night when every member buckles on his sword and attends the class meeting.—N.A.T.

A Warning To Be Heeded

"The eyes of the legislature are on Chapel Hill," stated Representative Tam Bowie Friday. A simple statement, yet one which carries with it a world of meaning. During the past few months the ranting gentleman from Ashe has been considered one of the leading enemies of the University and the cause of education, but in this remark he sounded a warning which for the student body to pass by unheeding would be to make it the greatest enemy of itself.

In the light of subsequent national and international events including the abandonment of the gold standard by America since the passage of the biennial appropriations bill, the situation here has assumed an unforeseen seriousness. The state legislature, with the graciousness of the penniless, has granted the Greater University $832,000, but the deliverance of this into the hands of Comptroller Woollen is still a matter of speculation. Although this amount has been levied by the legislature it is still within the power of the Budget Commission to reduce this amount when the necessary revenue is not forthcoming.

The University, therefore, is not yet safely beyond the power of those who control the purse strings. We are, as it were, in the position of a child whose mother has promised him a quarter if he will keep his clothes clean. The student body heretofore has not realized to what an extent the eyes of the legislature and the people are focused upon the University. During the past hectic session in the House the University was accused of all manner of wanton extravagance, not alone on the part of the administration but of the students as well. It was this charge against student extravagance which brought about the abandonment of 297 free tuitions a short while ago.

The University cannot afford at present to attract any more unfavorable attention to itself. "The eyes of the legislature are on Chapel Hill and the students and it behooves them to watch their step."—V.C.R.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

To the Editor,
The DAILY TAR HEEL:

Since the inimitable Horace, the peculiar foibles and colossal inconsistencies of frail men have evoked, by their asinine display and insistent parade, that species of criticism known as invective. Some sage has observed that asses are polite save at meal time—men only when dining—which may account for a part of man's disregard for the welfare and opinions of their fellow associates. Evidently those members of the junior and senior classes insisting on an unprecedented high expenditure for the Junior-Senior dances conceived the idea when fasting. Their concern for musty traditions and their pretended public spirit are potentially inconsistent in these days of an ubiquitous depression. Marvelous to say, they invoke the god of pomp and plenty in this, the leanest of the seven lean, leaner years. In so doing, if their prayer is heard and their plan accomplished, they will call down upon their heads and the fair escutcheon of their Alma Mater a never-ending and well-deserved criticism of the belabored taxpayers, to say nothing of that disgruntled body—the enemy of higher learning. But men go on, forever bent on displaying ridiculous manners, inconsistent purposes, and often, at inestimable expense in the future, filch Peter to pay Paul.

Silence and Wisdom, Character and Chastity, labor and love, "Light and Liberty"—are unquestionably always commendable, but pomp and poverty—never.—H.L.W.

To the Editor,
The DAILY TAR HEEL:

"Say, young fellow, I thought you people at Chapel Hill were preaching economy this year? How do you reconcile that idea with an elaborate dance that I noticed is to be put on down there?" is one of the expressions I heard while at home during the holidays. I believe that thought typifies the idea in the minds of most of the tax payers in North Carolina who have heard or will hear of the proposed Junior-Senior dances.

When student opinion is opposed to such an expensive affair (?) and when the idea that the administration of the University is surely behind the acts of its two upper classes is certain to permeate the minds of those who even now are grudging in their support of our school, should we, the members of the junior and senior classes, stand by and see a couple of executive committees make us pay for something which we do not want? Should we deprive ourselves or our parents of hard earned money so that a relatively few people can bring their girls to a really gala affair? I think it is high time for the student body to throw off its cloak of inertia and raise its arms in action against a $1600 dance.—E.W., Jr.

To the Editor,
The DAILY TAR HEEL:

I noticed in your Saturday's issue of the TAR HEEL that the executive committees of the junior and senior classes have compromised and are to give out the bids for junior-senior senior dances to those entitled to them only when they pay an extra fifty cents.

This seems very unfair to the members of the junior class to have to help pay for the inefficiency of the officials of the senior class in handling their funds. It appears that they have dispensed with their funds to the extent that they are now confronted with a deficit; they knew this before they made plans for the $1,600 dances. Now they have pictured the situation beautiful to the junior class officials so as to get their support in the financing of the dances. Unfortunately, they have been able to do so.

The members of the two classes who have paid all of their fees are entitled to the dances without any further charges, and if such further charges are made it is grossly unfair and is no less than open robbery.

It has already been stated that the executive committees do not have the rights to impose an extra charge and determine what we shall have without our consent, then are we to sit idly by and let the assumed dictators brandish before our empty pocket books a $1,600 dance and an extra fifty cent levy to pay for same? The classes should have an immediate vote to determine what shall be done in regard to the present dance situation.

It has been suggested that the dance committee arrange to sell some 125 or more bids publicly. If such plans are being formulated why not return all dance fees to the members of the classes and have a public dance, for to sell bids publicly will break the significance of the dance anyway?—J.P.

THOSE NEW BOOKS

Vacation Notes

All Fifth Avenue book shops were carrying Shaw displays in their windows. In Dutton's we saw a very clever caricature done in wire, against a blue ground. Shaw's books (some first editions) and all the books about him including Dr. Henderson's biography, were much in evidence.

First editions of Galsworthy and Wells are the best items for collectors among the Moderns.

Ann Vickers is mentioned more frequently than any other novel.

Many beautifully bound books dating back to the eighteenth century are to be seen amid the antiques and bric-a-brac clogging the windows of the now sluggish Interior Decoration establishments along Madison.

We are finding a great deal of pleasure in reading Vincent McHugh's Sing Before Breakfast. This is the second novel by an author who has been contributing to The American Caravan, The Bookman, and The Forum.

The conservation is handled in a delightful and thoroughly convincing manner. Occasionally the characters lapse into Hemingway, but they do so in slight derision, and with tongue in cheek.

"We only do Hemingway for compound satire. No damned grace under pressure. Explosion under pressure. All that gang's too proud of being able to take it. To hell with taking it. Dish it out. Fight. If it's no use, fight anyway."

Sabatini has a new novel, The Stalking Horse. The scene is England of the seventeenth century, with William of Orange on the throne. King James, deposed, sits plotting across the Channel in a palace at St. Germain. Such a situation leads to intrigue and to a Sabatini novel.

The Herald-Tribune proclaims Not To Eat, Not For Love as "the first adult novel of college life." Harvard is the place. Many of the characters will be recognizable to those acquainted there. This book will be added to the rental library of the Bull's Head during the course of the week.

THE THEATRE

By Robert Barnett

The Junior Playmakers presented Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves written and directed by Harry Davis, Friday night, and Saturday afternoon and night. This production marks the second annual presentation of the Playmakers' younger actors and actresses.

Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves combined at once the subtle magic of the marionette show and the more describable fascinations of the legitimate stage. Davis' direction of the play was superb, seeming to draw out of each of his little actors and actresses their own spontaneity and yet managing to hold them closely related to the play itself. The vigour, the enthusiasm, the pride, excitement, suspense, jealousy, cunning, and humor of each speech was usually as convincing as Davis himself could have spoken and felt them. And still the audience was aware of each separate personality. The Junior Playmakers may claim a charm and magic quite their own, a charm arising out of imparting to unreality an authenticity which only children can deeply feel.

A word about the play—Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves, taken from A Thousand and One Arabian Nights, does not lend itself easily to dramatic adaptation. The story shifts scenes and action so rapidly that a playwright would have to compress and distort it in order to make its production practicable. In 1849 at the Boston Museum an attempt was made to produce Ali Baba as a play, and in order to lighten a rather flimsily constructed play the use of duets, choruses, extraneous, and fantastic scenes, all touched with a proper "moral tone," were employed. One cannot help contrasting Davis' treatment of the same story. The play is notable for its simple adherence to the tale, its judicious use of humor to enrich the characterizations, and the achievement of an unexpected suspense in the progress of the performance. If any criticism could be made of the play itself it would be that some, or even, most, of the humor is anachronistic. A flapperish reference to "traveling men" in an El Zandu harem is a bit of a jolt.

Foster Fitz-Simons' designs for the sets were colorful and exotic. The scene for the second act was particularly effective. It divides the stage in two; one half bright blue and yellow with the brilliance of the Arabian sky and desert, the other rich and deep and mysterious with thick heavy masses that have the atmosphere of great treasure. The rock door intervening opened for the magic words with a reluctant whine. The bright, globular patterns of the scenes for acts one and three added inestimably to the effect of the play.

Most of the young actors and actresses acted naturally. Mr. Nathan has said that good acting is acting naturally, but if you act naturally you aren't acting; ergo, there ain't no good acting. This syllogism can be applied to the Junior Playmakers. Save for an occasional effort to project their voices the young performers were at ease and acted with a grace and unconcern that lifted it above acting. Kimball Dyer made a very

Heel Netmen Defeat Navy For 56th Consecutive Win

National Champions Open Tour Of North With 7-2 Victory Over Undeclared Middies.

HINES DOWNS LOUGHLIN

Ranking Tar Heel Star Beats Navy No. 1 Player in Straight Sets, 8-6, 6-2.

Special to THE DAILY TAR HEEL. Annapolis, Md., April 29.—Captain Wilmer Hines led the way with a blazing straight set victory over Elliott Loughlin, Navy tennis ace, as Carolina's tennis troupe, twice national champions, sank the Navy team 7-2 for the fifty-sixth consecutive win for the Tar Heel racquet.

A large crowd, attracted by the Hines-Loughlin grudge match and the fact that both teams were undefeated so far this season, watched the meet which was full of exciting tennis. The courts were in excellent shape and a clear, hot day made tennis conditions ideal.

Hines, Lenoir Wright, Harley Shuford, and Ricky Willis won their matches in straight set style. Harvey Harris, playing number three, was extended to three sets before winning as was Dave Morgan. The Middies took the number one and number three doubles matches as Hines and Wright and Harris and Levitan went down.

The Hines-Loughlin match was a thriller all the way through. Hines won the first set 8-6 after a steady fight in which both men made some beautiful shots. The second set went to the Tar Heel by the score of 6-2. The play was exciting throughout and every point was taken only after some excellent tennis was put up by both men.

Wright beat McClung 6-1, 6-1 in a one-sided match. Harris was extended to take a 5-7, 6-0, 6-4 victory over Mann, and Shuford blasted McAfee off the courts with a 6-0, 6-1 triumph. Kimmel pushed Morgan to three sets before dropping 2-6, 6-4, 6-4. Willis murdered Rainey 6-1, 6-0 to end the singles play. Hines and Wright lost to Loughlin and Mann in straight sets, 6-4, 6-4. Morgan and Shuford teamed together and took a three set win from Kimmel and Jay, 6-1, 2-6, 6-2. Harris then teamed with Walter Levitan and lost a close and hard-fought match to Pinney and McClung, 7-5, 3-6, 7-5.

The Tar Heels stay around Washington today and take on the Old Liners from Maryland in College Park tomorrow, heading for N. Y. U. Tuesday.

SIX TEAMS LEFT AMONG UNBEATEN IN INTRAMURALS

Carr Leads Dormitories While Chi Psi and Sigma Chi Head Fraternities.

Not much narrowing down occurred during the first post-holiday week of intramural baseball and, as a result, three teams remain undefeated in each league as the season nears the home stretch.

Chi Psi and Sigma Chi, with six wins each, and Beta Theta Pi with four victories, are the teams which constitute the unbeaten class in the fraternity league, while in the dormitory loop Carr, with seven wins, is setting the pace, followed by the Laundry Club with six and Best House with five. Carr is booked to meet the Laundry Club in the wind-up of the season for each team and a stellar battle is expected to develop.

Teams In Running
Teams which have dropped only one contest and are, thus, technically in the running, are Phi Sigma Kappa, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Sigma Nu, and Zeta Psi among the fraternities and Everett, Grimes, and Lewis among the dorms. Grimes meets the Laundry Club this week and an upset may be in the cards.

In the tennis campaign, which is running a week behind the baseball race, three dormitories, Carr, Old West, and Ruffin, are undefeated with five matches behind each of them, while in the fraternity loop six teams have yet to meet defeat. Chi Psi, Sigma Chi, and Sigma Phi Sigma have four wins each to their credits and Phi Delta Theta, Pi Kappa Alpha, and Sigma Nu with three victories a piece.

Outfits Dropped
Two more teams have been thrown out of the fraternity baseball race and two from the fraternity tennis campaign for excessive forfeiture. Pi Kappa Alpha and Pi Kappa Phi have been dropped from the baseball race, while Theta Kappa Nu and Lambda Chi Alpha have been disqualified from further net competition.

Leaders To Clash
Ruffin and Old West, two leaders, will clash in tennis Thursday afternoon in the feature net engagement of the week.

Only three days of play will be held this week because of varsity baseball games Tuesday and Friday.

Tomorrow's Schedule
Baseball: 3:45—(1) Phi Alpha vs. Tau Epsilon Phi, (2) Best House vs. Ruffin, (3) Phi Gamma Delta vs. Theta Kappa Nu; 4:45—(1) Sigma Nu vs. Delta Tau Delta, (2) New Dorms vs. Manly, (3) Phi Delta Theta vs. Sigma Alpha Epsilon.
Tennis: 3:30—(1) Phi Gamma Delta vs. Kappa Sigma, (2) Delta Tau Delta vs. Sigma Nu, (3) Mangum vs. Aycock; 4:30—(1) Pi Kappa Phi vs. Sigma Phi Sigma, (2) Best House vs. Everett, (3) Chi Psi vs. Zeta Beta Tau.

TAR HEEL TEAMS TOP BLUE DEVILS IN TRACK MEETS

thorne, another Carolina sophomore, trailed his teammate to the tape, finishing third.

Both of the middle distance events, 880-yard and mile run, provided hair-raising races. The 880 climaxed the Tar Heels' triumph. With only one point necessary for a Carolina win, Harry Williamson came through nicely with a second place, giving the Tar Heels a three point boost in the score. In the mile, Ed McRae, blonde-haired miler for Carolina, ran a great race against Red Lewis, ace miler for Duke. The sorrel-topped Methodist let McRae set the pace for the run until the last quarter when Lewis spurred forth to cop a first.

Higby Ill With Flu
Henry Fulmer, fine Duke broad jumper, beat Childers and Charlie Hubbard, Carolina, jumping 23 feet 1-8 inches. Floyd Higby, star Carolina jumper, was taken suddenly ill with an attack of influenza on the eve of the meet and did not participate.

In the shot and discus, Oscar Mullis beat out his Duke opposition and copped firsts. Mullis put the shot 43 feet 7 inches while throwing the discus 137 feet 11 inches.

Due to some misunderstanding on the part of the officials concerning the measurements, Ralston LeGore, Carolina star javelin tosser, did not essay the javelin throw but once. With this one chance, LeGore threw the spear 194 feet 9 inches. Walter Armfield, sophomore Tar Heel sensation, placed second. Rippley, Duke, beat Chandler, with little less than a foot's margin for third honors.

Frosh Cop Eight Firsts
Carolina's yearling tracksters captured eight firsts in their dual meet with the Blue Imps. The Tar Babies were lead to victory with firsts by Napier, Keeney, Neel, Bear, Rankin, Tucker, and Evins. Tom Evins, gigantic weight man for the Tar Babies, beat Mullis' varsity shot mark by some three inches to feature the frosh win.

Varsity Summary
100-yard dash: Brownlee (D), Tarrall (D), Childers (C). 9.9 seconds.

CAROLINA TEAMS WILL SEE ACTION IN TWENTY TILTS

Week's Schedule Includes Only Five Contests to Take Place In Chapel Hill.

Carolina sport teams will see action in a big way this week with twenty events scheduled. Only five of the contests will take place at Carolina, all of these being baseball games.

Both the varsity and freshman tennis teams go on a northern trip next week and each team sees action all six days. The varsity and freshman baseball teams have their schedules well arranged. Each will play three games, none of the games falling on the same day.

The Carolina golf team concludes their northern trip Monday meeting Richmond University there. This is the only golf match on the schedule. Also on Monday the two tennis teams start their week's work, the varsity playing Maryland there and the yearlings being matched with Oak Ridge. The freshman baseball team plays the only home contest, opposed by Danville High on Freshman Field at 4:00 o'clock.

Tuesday the varsity nine continues their Big Five card, playing State for the first time this season. The game is scheduled for 4:00 o'clock on Emerson Field. The varsity and freshman tennis teams meet New York University and Virginia yearlings respectively, both away from home.

The two tennis teams play their third matches of the week Wednesday opposed by Army at West Point and Woodberry Forest at the latter two schools. On the same day the yearling nine plays its second game of the week at home, with Carthage High their opponent.

The frosh baseball team continues their play Thursday, facing the first year team from Davidson on Emerson Field. The varsity and freshman net teams, still away from home, are matched with Yale and Episcopal High respectively.

Friday the Tar Heel nine meets Virginia here in the second of a three game series. The tennis teams are opposed by Harvard and Devitt High at the latter two schools.

Four events are on the card for Saturday, one of them to be at the University. The track team journeys to Penn State for their lone meet of the week. The last of the three game series between Carolina and Virginia baseball teams is scheduled for Greensboro. Brown and St. Albans will be the opponents for the varsity and freshman tennis team.

Undergraduate landscape architecture students at Iowa State College have won more prizes since entering national collegiate competition than any other two schools combined.

Hooks, Deacon centerfielder, turned in the best catch of the afternoon when he came in fast to take Irwin's hard line drive just before it hit the ground. Montgomery played the best game on defense for Carolina.

CAROLINA BILLS 'CAVALCADE' FOR TWO DAYS' RUN

Frank Lloyd Directs Screen Version of Noel Coward's Play Showing at Theatre.

Besides being acclaimed as one of the most sensational of recent movie successes, "Cavalcade," beginning a two days' run at the Carolina theatre tomorrow, required a director of varied experience and talent. Such a man was Frank Lloyd who served in directorial capacity for Fox's version of Noel Coward's internationally famous play.

Lloyd began planning his work on the production six months before the actual shooting, and then his troubles had just commenced. He had to direct 25,000 extras as well as having charge of art direction, dialogue, sound recording, settings, and trick photography.

In spite of all his difficulties, critics have acclaimed his work and that of the cast, which goes far to put the screen version on a par with "Cavalcade" as a stage success.

Diana Wynyard and Clive Brook head the cast in the production.

Other Attractions

Other presentations at the Carolina this week include: "Ex-Lady," starring Bette Davis, Wednesday; "Zoo in Budapest," Thursday; "Sweepings," with Lionel Barrymore in the lead role, Friday; and "Blondie Johnson" with Joan Blondell as the featured player, Saturday.

DUKE BOTANIST SPEAKS TO GRADUATE STUDENTS

Dr. H. L. Bloomquist, head of the botany department at Duke University, gave a lecture to the graduate botany students here Friday afternoon.

Dr. Bloomquist's main topic was devoted to the mosses of North Carolina, particular attention being given to rare forms of mosses. The latter part of the lecture was devoted to a discussion of their structure.

Five of the Duke graduates accompanied Dr. Bloomquist here.

World Affairs

By Vergil J. Lee, Jr.

Roosevelt and MacDonald
One of the most important events of the last few months was signaled this week in the joint statement issued by Premier MacDonald and President Roosevelt. The significance of the following statements cannot be minimized: (1) "The necessity for an increase in the general level of commodity prices was recognized as primary and fundamental," (2) "We must, when circumstances permit, re-establish an international monetary standard . . .," (3) the question of silver was discussed and proposals were tentatively suggested for the improvement of its status."

Japs and Chinks

The operations of the Japanese in North China this week which had begun to reach a monotonous level of "bombings by Japanese planes" and "retreats on the part of their opponents," manifested a surprising reversal of policy. Competent press reports state that the Japanese forces are in hasty retreat. The reasons given are several, the most credible being that a strained feeling is being created between Japan and Russia because of the seizure of much of the rolling stock of the Chinese Eastern Railway by the former power. This railway, which is the main trunk line of Manchukuo—connecting Harbin and important points in western Chosen (Korea) with the Trans-Siberian route—has been definitely under Russian control for the past two years. Another reason offered by observers is that the approaching conference on world problems to be held by President Roosevelt soon and to which Japan will send delegates was the cause of this general withdrawal of troops from Chinese territory.

Another Hearst

That Alfred Hugenburg, the German Hearst, is to be expelled from his post of Minister of Economics and Agriculture in the Nazi cabinet seems increasingly likely. Owner of a vast chain of dailies, weeklies, and other periodicals—leader of the German Nationalist party—representative of the "Junkers," business interests and East Prussian landed gentry—Hugenburg has never been in sympathy with Hitler's labor program. The National Socialist party, originally a pure workman's nationalistic organization, has been forced to seek the aid of German business men for financial support, and in so doing has had to sacrifice—at least temporarily—its original radical party planks. However, now that Hitler is strongly seated "in the saddle," it appears that a return to the earlier ideals will be the objective in view. Hugenburg will only be the first to go.

Trade Stagnation

The Russo-British trade war seems to be proceeding at a lively rate, or the situation better stated would be that activity along trade lines between the two countries has almost entirely ceased. Embargoes which halt a goods-traffic amounting to a hundred million dollars a year are now in effect. It will be interesting to see, in the face of pressing trade needs of both countries, just how long this condition will last. Britain will undoubtedly suffer most from this "war," since a considerable fraction of her exports usually are directed to Russia. This situation offers an almost amusing contrast when one places it beside the usual procedure. More often the forcible imprisonment of subjects of one country by another would lative division of the Institute of Government.

The letter emphasized the view that "the national government has been coming continually closer home to North Carolinians in recent years. Developments within the last few months indicate an even closer relationship between city, county, state, and federal legislators."

"North Carolina this year has the distinction of inaugurating the practice of joint annual conferences between the legislative representatives of city, county, state, and federal governmental units on governmental problems in which they are jointly interested."

Pointing out that in the past legislatures in this state and throughout the country have confined their efforts to getting laws on the books, the Graham-Harris statement says that "this year the legislators' division of the Institute of Government will inaugurate the practice of interpreting the enactments of each session of the General Assembly to all governmental units, to all groups of city, county, and state officials, and to the principal groups of private citizens affected thereby."

With this in view, a complete and detailed analysis of legislation passed by the present legislature is now being made by the legislators' division of the Institute in preparation for the June meeting.

It is felt that this practice should go a long way toward promoting accuracy, understanding, and efficiency in the administration of the laws.

"We respectfully invite and urge all groups of city, county, and state officials to attend and participate in the launching of these significant and constructive governmental ventures," the Graham-Harris letter concludes.

Albert Coates, director of the Institute of Government, has announced that the June sessions will open Thursday evening, June 1, and continue through Friday and Saturday, June 2 and 3.

VISITING FACULTY PRESENTS MUSIC PROGRAM TODAY

Hugh Williamson, Mrs. Hugh Williamson, and Miss Lillian Robeson, members of the music faculty at Flora McDonald College, will present a concert at the Hill music hall this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock in exchange for one given some time ago by Professor T. Smith McCorkle of the University music faculty.

The program will begin with a violin solo by Miss Robeson. Mrs. Williamson will then sing a series of selection including, Maria Wiagenlied, Er Ist's, My Lady Lo Fu, and Addio Di Mi-mi. The next part of the program will be solo renditions on the piano by Mr. Williamson. The following numbers will be included in his program: Pre-lude in G. Sharp Minor, Nocturne Op. 15 No. 1, Sonata in B Minor, Op. 58, and Rhapsody Op. 79 No. 1 by Brahms.

The final part of the concert will be four violin solos by Miss Robeson. She will render Ballet, The Bee, Cortege and Scherzo-Tarentelle, Op. 16. Miss Lida Law Chapman will be the accompanist for Miss Robeson.

businesslike and attractive All Baba. Cameron Murchison made Cassim, the greedy, jealous brother that the original tale had him. Kaja Hassan, acted by Melville Jordon, was vigorously interpreted. Except for a slight halting and an occasional repetition of phrasing, his delivery of his lines was good. Julia Book made Zulieka a beautiful young Arabian social climber. This was the characterization that Davis had read into the original Zulieka of the story, and although of all the characters this was the only one that really rang false, it was no fault of the young actresses. Jane Knight as the captivating and clever Morgiana acquitted herself very nicely.

The audience was, perhaps, most delighted by the dances designed and directed by Mrs. Barr and performed by Misses Bradshaw, Wright, and Hogan. The applause brought the little dancers back for a second time. Jane Knight's sword dance was charmingly graceful.

HOLMES TO READ FAMOUS PLAY OF EDMOND ROSTAND

Faculty Member, Assisted by Wife, Will Present "Cyrano de Bergerac" at 8:30 Tonight.

Dr. Urban T. Holmes, assisted by Mrs. Holmes, will present a dramatic reading of Edmond Rostand's Cyrano de Bergerac in the Playmaker theatre at 8:30 o'clock tonight as the regular monthly reading of the Playmakers.

The play is the most celebrated of Edmond Rostand's works, being written especially for probably the greatest French actor of modern times, Coquelin the Elder. Since its original production at the Port Saint Martin theatre of Paris, in 1897, Cyrano de Bergerac has been consistently popular.

In the reading Dr. Holmes will take the role of Cyrano, and Mrs. Holmes the part of Roxane. Both Dr. and Mrs. Holmes have been enthusiastically received in former readings on the Playmaker program.

TWENTY SCOUT GROUPS GUESTS OF UNIVERSITY

Twenty Boy Scout patrols from various parts of the state were guests of the University yesterday and Friday at a camporee in conjunction with the Dogwood Festival.

This camporee, sponsored by the Eagle Scout Club and the local chapter of the Alpha Phi Omega scout fraternity, was effected "to help troops develop safe and consistent outdoor programs that will make the troop a permanent factor in community character-training and citizenship building."

Each troop was graded upon its scout craft: the efficiency of its members in knot tying, signaling, camp-making, map-making, and other arts. However, this was not a championship contest. Each patrol making 800 out of a possible 1,000 points was rated a "standard scouting patrol."

Troops from the following cities and towns attended the camporee: High Point, Salisbury, Fort Bragg, Sanford, East Spencer, Durham, Broadway, Carrboro, Raleigh, Henderson, Greensboro, Oxford, Reidsville, Wake Forest, and Chapel Hill.

STUDENT MEETING TO BE CONDUCTED HERE THIS WEEK

Complete Program for Fourth Annual Congress of Student Federation Announced.

The complete program for the fourth annual congress of the North Carolina Federation of Students, which is to convene at the University Friday and Saturday of this week, was announced here yesterday.

Activities of the session will begin Friday morning with the registration of delegates in the lobby of Graham Memorial at 10:00 o'clock, and will be continued with a meeting of the executive committee 11:00 o'clock in the student government office on the second floor of the building.

Formal Opening

The formal opening of the congress will take place at a luncheon in the banquet hall of the union building, when President Frank P. Graham delivers the welcoming address.

Features of the plenary session to be conducted in room 211 at 2:00 o'clock Friday afternoon include a talk by Haywood Weeks, president of the group, on the history of the federation; the report of the treasurer, Mary Catherine Siewers; and circulation of a questionnaire.

The presentation of the Institute of Government at 3:00 o'clock by Professor Albert Coates will follow, and the delegates will be entertained at the Carolina-Virginia baseball game at 4:00 o'clock on Emerson field.

Friday evening's program begins with a dinner in Graham

POLLS OPEN FOR CITY ELECTIONS

Votes for Municipal Officials to Be Cast in High School Tin Can Today.

Polls for municipal elections in Chapel Hill will be open today at the high school Tin Can between the hours of 8:00 and 6:53 o'clock, and there local voters will go to elect officials for the next term—mayor, judge of recorder's court, and three aldermen.

The mayoralty candidates who have already signified intention to run are: Zeb Council, incumbent; John Foushee, former city manager; and B. J. Howard.

Two men have entered the race for the judgeship of the local court, Odell Sapp and L. J. Phipps. C. P. Hinshaw, present recorder, has declared that he will not be in the contest today.

Aldermen Unopposed

No opposition has been forthcoming to the re-election of the three aldermen who are serving on the city council at present. The present officeholders are M. E. Hogan, Clyde Eubanks, and J. T. Dobbins.

Last week the board of aldermen reduced the mayor's salary from $270 to $100 yearly, passing the ordinance before the election, so that the candidates might decide whether the reward was enough to warrant contesting for the position. In making the salary reduction, the board took the position that the duties of mayor have largely been taken over by the city manager, judge of recorder's court, and city accountant.

Kay Kyser Believes Cheerleaders Should Be Given Added Rewards

JESSE GRIER TO START DEVOTIONS

Continuing optional devotions given at 10:30 o'clock Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays in Memorial hall, Jesse Grier, president-elect of the sophomore cabinet, will lead this morning. Walter Patterson, University organist, will play.

Butler French will lead the program Wednesday and Jesse Parker, Thursday. For next week the leaders will be Pardon James, Charles Bond, and Sherwood Barefoot. For the following week John Acee, Bill Minor, and Jack Poole.

Some added progress in the devotion effort by the Y. M. C. A. was shown in the programs last week, according to leaders in the movement. Promising indications, according to the leaders, is the fact that those attending have been varying in attendance, the movement touching many students despite small daily numbers.

The programs continue to consume only ten minutes at the beginning of assembly period.

Louise Bernhardt Sings Here May 10

Louise Bernhardt, nationally known contralto, will sing here May 10 in Memorial hall, presented on the student entertainment program for the spring quarter.

Miss Bernhardt, originally of Connecticut, was winner last year of the Federation of Music Clubs' national contest at San Francisco, and has since appeared in concert tours. She was for three seasons connected with the Chicago Civic Opera company.

Declares Lack of Higher Reward For Cheerleading Keeps Best Men From Going Out.

"I don't think the compensation for cheerleading is great enough to get the right caliber of man for the job," says Kay Kyser, remembered as the greatest cheerleader Carolina has had in recent years. Kay, with the band which he organized here, played here last week-end for the May Frolic and presented a concert for the benefit of the student loan fund Sunday afternoon.

"The problem of getting increased interest in cheering is one that I don't know exactly how to solve," Kay said Saturday. "The same situation exists in every school that I have visited. The day of the 'good old school spirit' is past. The success of cheering depends upon the personality of the cheerleader. He must be able to demand the respect of the students and be capable of putting on an exhibition that they will enjoy and not ridicule, even they do not participate enthusiastically."

"The type of man who could make a success as a cheerleader won't go out because the reward is not as great as he would get in some other activity. Take my case. The job was thrust on me. I ran for president of the senior class and was beaten. Then they made me cheerleader," Kyser continued.

Would Increase Rewards

Since the average student body's attitude towards cheering has a slight touch of ridicule, Kay's suggestion for the improvement of cheering at the University is to increase the rewards for cheering. If cheerleaders are given a varsity monogram and properly recognized, a higher type of campus leader

Three Point Two Arrives At Hill Students Keep Dispensers Busy

Beer came to Chapel Hill early yesterday morning. Promptly at the stroke of midnight, bells tolled forth, marking the end of exactly a quarter century of prohibition in the state. At 12:01 Chapel Hill was initiated in drinking its first glass of legal beer in more than a century.

In expectation of the much-ballyhooed event, crowds had congregated on Franklin street before those places displaying the notice "3.2 sold here." Good-naturedly the would-be tipplers discussed such abstract topics as the quality of the foaming liquid, the possibilities of the installing of free lunch counters, and the inebriating qualities of "4 percent by volume."

Vendors Busy

The ringing of the bells was the signal for rushes, rushes reminiscent of One-eyed Connells at football games. In no time at all Gooch's biergarten, the Smoke Shop bar, and Harry's hofbrau were filled to overflowing. Strong arms at the door were required to hold the latecomers from over-crowding these places. Whenever one person left, another was let in.

Tables formerly accommodating four were made to hold six. The supplies of pretzels, given free with every drink, soon were

REPORT RELEASED ON FROSH SURVEY

Statistics Show Time, Collier's, Buccaneer, Tar Heel and Dailies Read Regularly.

Harry F. Comer, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A., yesterday spoke to the freshmen at assembly period on "What the Freshman Reads." Into his talk he incorporated the statistics taken each year by a committee composed of three freshmen and three faculty members, which lists the reading matter of three types of freshmen.

Comer stated that Time, Collier's, and the Buccaneer are the only three magazines that freshmen of all types of readers read regularly. The American magazine and Judge are read regularly by the highest and average freshman readers, but not by the lowest type. Magazines read only by the highest type reader, according to the survey are: the Literary Digest, Atlantic, Harper's, Scribner's, Forum, Vanity Fair, and College Humor.

All Read Daily Papers

Among newspapers, according to the survey, the DAILY TAR HEEL tops the list of regularly read newspapers by all classes of readers. A daily paper is also read by all classes, but there is no one set paper. The New York Times is read regularly by only the two highest types of readers.

Only the highest type of readers, states the survey, reads any type of novel regularly, and among them modern novels, biography, and books on social and economic problems are read most often. The Bible is listed as occasional reading for all classes of readers. Sex literature and mystery stories are supposedly not read at all by any type of reader. This survey was made on the members of the class of 1935, the present sophomore class.

The members of the band will meet in the auditorium of Hill Music hall tonight at 7:00 o'clock to have a picture of the group taken for the Yackety Yack. It is absolutely imperative that all members of the organization attend and that they come attired in tuxedos.

This is a last minute picture and unless it is taken tonight it will be impossible for the staff of the publication to run the picture in this year's annual. Editor Nutt Parsley is particularly anxious that the group have its picture in the book this year and it will be impossible unless the picture is taken tonight.

Other dates have been set for the picture to be taken, but a representative group has not turned out and it has been necessary to set this last deadline for the picture. Claude Sawyer requests that every member of the band be present in order to assure a representative picture of the group.

FIVE GROUPS TO SPONSOR DANCES

Phi Kappa Sigma, Kappa Alpha, Tau Epsilon Phi, Co-eds, and Grail Schedule Affairs.

Continuing the full social schedule of the spring quarter where the May Frolics left off, five campus organizations will give dances Friday and Saturday of this week. Seven dances in all will take place on the campus during the week-end.

Phi Kappa Sigma and Kappa Alpha fraternities will entertain jointly with two dances in connection with house parties which they are planning. The co-eds' quarterly dance will come Friday night, and the Grail dance honoring new members Saturday, preceded by the annual dances of the Di and Phi. Tau Epsilon Phi fraternity will also give two dances.

The dances given jointly by Phi Kappa Sigma and Kappa Alpha will take place in the Carolina Inn Friday night and Saturday afternoon. Jelly Leftwich and his orchestra will play for these dances. These fraternities will also give house parties during the week-end to which a great many attractive young ladies have been invited.

Phi Discusses Dance Preparations Tonight

The Phi Assembly will meet tonight at 7:15 in New East to discuss the following bills: Resolved: That the junior-senior dance committee's action in providing for expensive entertainments be condemned; Resolved: That Louisiana citizens' petition to oust Senator Huey Long be condemned; and Resolved: That optional subscription to the Buccaneer or its abolishment be favored.

Announcement of plans for the joint Phi and Di dance will be made by J. P. Temple, treasurer of the society.

Action Comes as Result of Proposal by Committees for Extra Levy on Dance Bids.

DECLARE CHARGE UNFAIR

Boyles Appoints Committee to Investigate Legality of Action of Class on Matter.

One hundred juniors in loud and angry protest at a class meeting last night in Gerrard hall voted almost unanimously to break the contract between the junior and senior classes and Bert Lown, dance orchestra leader, in connection with Lown's furnishing the music for the annual Junior-Senior dance set May 12 and 13.

The action of the third-year class came as a result of an additional levy of 50 cents which was proposed to be placed on all dance bids last week by the executive committees of the two classes. The juniors resented the charge as being unfair in that it was proposed not because of a financial deficiency of their own, but of the senior class.

Action Unexpected

The meeting was called by President Clyde Boyles of the juniors last Saturday to hear the class opinion on the levy matter. The breaking of the Lown contract was unexpected, though thoroughly convincing.

The class also voted that it will not pay more than $300 as their share in any orchestral negotiations and unanimously passed another motion to the effect that no contract can be made with any bands without the official sanction of the class.

STAFF DIVISIONS CONVENE TODAY

Candidates for Reportorial Positions to Meet With Editor At 2:30 O'clock.

The weekly meetings of the various departments of the staff of the DAILY TAR HEEL will be conducted this afternoon at the office of the publication in Graham Memorial.

Reporters will meet with the editor and managing editor at 2:30 o'clock. At that time, new beats, which are effective today, will be announced. During the past week, several vacancies have developed on the reportorial staff, and candidates for positions are asked to attend today's meeting.

The feature board will meet with the chairman at 2:30 also. All candidates as well as members are requested to be present at the gathering.

At 3:00 o'clock, all city editors and desk men will meet. Announcements concerning desk work and progress in the competition for places on the city desk will be made at that time.

Members of the editorial board will gather for a conference with the editor at 3:30 o'clock.

Crane to Speak

Dr. Harry W. Crane of the University psychology department is holding a clinic sponsored by the Junior Women's Club in Winston-Salem today and tomorrow. Tomorrow he will speak before the four child's study groups on "Factors Influencing Personality Development."

Expense And Distance—

As college education of modern times has had to take care of more students, larger classes, and more complex problems in the business of distributing learning, there has been a necessary sacrifice of the more genial social intercourse and personal contact once possible amidst a smaller group. The gradual loss of the former compactness of the college class and the college student body has brought about an inevitable looseness in organization and diversity of interest in undergraduate life. Consequently we find the present day importance of cliques and factions within the student class and the resulting emphasis on politics. Be this development beneficial or deplorable, it nevertheless explains the ever-widening gap between student officers and administrators and the majority of the unpolitical men on the campus for whom they are administering. This majority is in partial or total ignorance most of the time as to what is being done, why, and how much.

It is to this last item and ignorance of it, that we must turn our attention. We may regard with playful leniency the futile manipulations of student executives and committees insofar as they are harmless. But the instant that their manipulating involves a hard yank at the undergraduate purse-string, it is time for all men good and true to rally to the cause. The class executive committees have found certain innocent amusement in casting about for a flashy orchestra, whose sole recommendation, it would seem, is to be its great expense and the number of hundreds of miles that separates it from Chapel Hill. Granted that there is a certain exotic pleasure in spending somebody else's money lavishly and that, too, there is a romance to be extracted from the vagaries of distance, it is time the game was stopped here and now.

With a reluctant but still firm hand, we must wake the dreamers from their delightful haze. They must be informed that the millennium is still far away. They must be told the startling news of the world's economic plight. They must be shown hundreds of students' pockets that would put old Mother Hubbard to shame. They must be informed with feeling that the financial climate is not fair and warmer, that many have been the college depression dances conducted with no loss of prestige; and finally that there is a difference between hiring a five hundred dollar orchestra which we can afford and a thousand dollar orchestra that is beyond all reason and sense of proportion. It is up to the majority of the students who are concerned to emphasize how they are concerned.—B.B.P.

What Price Learning?

Time continues to print accounts of political atrocities in Cuba with an awful realism, but without doubt the reports pale beside actual conditions existing in Havana. The apathy of the general public and the National Government remains unexplainable when one considers that the same public once stirred itself to wrath and with righteous indignation liberated a suppressed people from a foreign despot only to permit a Machado, who is no slouch at tyranny, to insinuate himself into the confidence of that people, and, gaining a position of authority, to keep his balance on his self-created pedestal by murdering children and trampling over the people with a superb despotism.

Whether or not Cubans are incapable of democratic government, or whether economic conditions and sugar markets are responsible for prevailing conditions or not is only a subject for debate. Machado may be the least impossible choice from a host of possibilities, all incompetent to deal with a difficult internal situation, and any great ruler of necessity must preserve his administration by crushing opposition to his rule. But when that ruler adopts measures which check the progress of his country and block its contribution to world culture; then he becomes a tyrant and the enemy of civilization. Gerardo Machado became such a tyrant when he forbade the oldest autonomous student body in America to gather in the halls of the University of Havana.

Civilization has maintained its position and has advanced to higher levels in spite of wars and tyrants, but only by the aid of scholarship. Two years ago Machado attempted to abolish that aid in Cuba, and we should extend a bond of sympathy to Cuban students and experience a reaction of antipathy toward the individual who is attempting to thwart in one corner of the world the purpose toward which every student the world over is striving.

Students of the University of Havana have always opposed both in thought and action any force operating to curtail political liberty or freedom of thought, nor have they in times past failed to offer their blood as a memorial to freedom. Although the dust is piling high around the shattered lamp may that spark of scholarship never be extinguished but guarded by its tenderers, may it wax great into a consuming flame for the destruction of one who would smother it in a blanket of suppression.—R.H.B.

Too Bad for The White Collars

The march on Washington of unemployed college graduates, which began yesterday and will continue until delegates called by the Association of Unemployed College Alumni have gathered from all parts of the country, shows clearly the unfortunate status of the present-day holder of the sheepskin.

For if statistics concerning unemployed alumni are accurate, college training has become during the depression a liability rather than an asset. With unemployment as widespread as it is, the boy who contents himself with a modest job after completing a high school education has a definite advantage—from a financial standpoint—over the boy who goes to college in the expectation of increasing his earning capacity. The former has at least a regular income, though it is not to be denied that he runs the risk of losing his job in lean years, while the latter has incurred the expense of a college education usually without even having the choice of risking a job, since he seldom is able to get one.

Furthermore, college graduates are now on an unequal footing with organized labor. Before the depression, carpenters, brick masons, and other skilled laborers received high wages because they were able by concerted action to maintain a high level of wages. But the lack of organization of college graduates has caught them totally unprepared to meet the exigencies of a depression.

The Association of Unemployed College Alumni, which is calling the "cap and gown" march on Washington, is at least a step toward organization. We hope that its efforts toward securing relief legislation will be successful.—A.T.D.

CONTEMPORARY THOUGHT

(Editor's Note: Printed below is a copy of the statement sent the DAILY TAR HEEL by Norman Thomas, Socialist leader, in answer to a query concerning the abandonment of the gold standard by the country and the proposed policies of inflation. Thomas was indisposed at the time of the request and responded at his earliest convenience.)

It is difficult to be certain whether the President wants omnibus powers to inflate in every conceivable way in order to inflate or to keep Congress from inflating. It is likely that the latter is his principal motive. Nevertheless both the international trade situation and the extraordinary lengths to which deflation has gone at home make almost inevitable some degree of inflation. The experience of England suggests that merely to go off the gold standard by prohibiting the export of gold to support the dollar in foreign markets, whatever the importance of that act in international affairs, will not bring about a significant degree of inflation at home. More will be necessary for political if not for pure economic reasons.

I predicted inflation and defended the desirability of controlled inflation when Messrs. Roosevelt and Hoover were both talking about "sound money." The need for some inflation was greatly increased by the terrible deflation consequent upon the closing of banks with from four to six billion deposits following the bank holiday. The government's failure to nationalize the banks or to work out any consistent plan for making the money in them more generally and equitably available left to it no practical alternation than inflation of the currency. For the failure to nationalize the banking system we shall pay a dear price in more ways than one.

Concerning the President's plan two general comments are in order:

1. On principle it is a dangerous precedent to give the President blanket power to inflate by almost any method and at will. It is a bad situation when senators disagree whether six or twenty billion dollars of additional currency can be had under the proposed measure. The President should have recommended specific measures of inflation which should have been acted upon by Congress. To give one man such power and to subject him to the enormous forces which will struggle for its use is not, in the long run, the way of safety or of wisdom.

2. While the President emphasizes controlled inflation there are no evidences of adequate control, except his own good judgment, written into the bill. If inflation is not to become the final disaster to wage and salary workers and the holders of savings bank accounts and insurance policies it must be clearly stated at the beginning, that it will be stopped when the commodity level rises above the level of, let us say, 1926-27. That is when inflation ceases to be inflation. Moreover inflation should be not only controlled in amount but directed in distribution. Not silver mine owners or security holders but the unemployed should be its principal beneficiaries. The best outlet for additional currency or spending power is through the hands of unemployed workers, first by means of a maintenance allowance, and then by a program of public works. The administration's program both of relief and of public works is wholly inadequate. Finally, it must be emphasized that to resort to inflation after wages have been pushed down to sweat-shop levels may well be the final goad to make workers revolt. President Green of the A. F. of L. is right. No policy, even of controlled and directed inflation, will be tolerable to the workers without an immense campaign for raising wages. Inflation will double the need for a steadily rising minimum wage. Legislation may help, but there will be no guarantee of effective legislation or its enforcement without organization of the workers both politically and industrially.

The real moral of the whole story is that what we need more than more money, is proper distribution of wealth. That will require not regulation of banks and industries but social ownership and planned production for use and not profit.

NORMAN THOMAS.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

To the Editor,
The DAILY TAR HEEL:

While there are probably some on the campus to whom the Buccaneer's rating of many of the co-eds may appeal as funny, there is a larger group who justly consider it not only devoid of every vestige of humor but in rank bad taste. If the wit of this worthy organ has run dry and it is unable to amuse its avid readers with pure cleverness as it has so long done, let it discontinue its efforts until new strength is found and its humorous abilities restored. Let it not, however, turn the ungallant and the vulgar in a desperate effort to suit tastes that it erroneously ascribes to the majority of the student body.

The days of the famous southern chivalry are no doubt long over but let us hope that every last particle of it has not fled nor that all that was worthy of that day is forgotten. A respect for woman has long been a southern boast and this collection of insulting remarks about our girl students hardly becomes the magazine of Carolina gentlemen.

Many will say that the young woman of today is well able to take care of herself and needs no protection but it is obvious that these co-eds have no comeback or defense against printed remarks that are grossly insulting. It is the duty of the incoming staff to break away from this sort of thing which will, if repeated, reflect only discredit upon itself and the school as well as being unfair and humiliating to many of our co-eds.

In many ways it is a privilege, and it is certainly a pleasure to have these young ladies here and they should be extended every opportunity of enjoying Chapel Hill. This they can do best without the cheap attention of campus wits writing without fear of retaliation. Perhaps a few of the young ladies enjoy this sort of dubious popularity but it is safe to assume that the majority do not.

It is to be hoped that the new Buccaneer will confine itself to bigger and better jokes, cartoons, and columns, and not discredit itself further with efforts not only uncalled for, but unbecoming gentlemen. —J.R.A.

College Clippings

By George Rhoades

Society

The nucleus of Harvard's new Society of Fellows has been selected by university officials and comprises a graduate of Oberlin College, a Hamilton College alumnus, and three summa cum laude graduates of Harvard. These three-year appointments entitle each fellow to free room and board, free use of the facilities of Harvard University, and a yearly stipend of $1,250.

Exhalation

To prove that the effect of the new beer is not intoxicating, a Stanford student consumed a gallon of 3.2 recently, and then successfully passed the Palo Alto police department sobriety tests. The student registered no temperature change nor dilation of the eye pupils, but remarked that he did feel a certain exhalation.

Vocabulary

Bing Crosby and Richard Arlen, in preparation for their work in the movie "College Humor," made a list of idioms and expressions frequently heard on college campuses. Although many are the well worn phrases every college man knows, we present below some which might find excellent use at Chapel Hill:

Apple-polisher: one who curries favor or grades from an instructor by ingratiating himself in the latter's good graces.

Capitalist: one who wears good clothes to classes.

Davenport technique: parlor tricks.

Don't be a ditzel: don't be silly.

Gravy train: any sort of successful graft, usually a managership of some student activity.

Heap: automobile.

Hung a pin: become engaged.

Laplander: girl who likes to cuddle.

Struggle: a dance.

Took a powder: disappeared from a difficult situation.

Hubub

The Tulane campus was agog last week when student elections were declared invalid by a faculty committee, following the protest of a candidate who stated that his opponent's one vote victory was due to the ballot of a student enrolled in two schools and who had voted twice. Meanwhile another faculty committee, of the college of arts and sciences, delivered a report of its investigation of the honor system at Tulane. They declared,

"The present operation of this college seems unsatisfactory not only to the faculty but to a majority of the students."

Disappearance

Rivalling the mysterious manner in which it was stolen last fall, the valuable Guy Manner manuscript of Sir Walter Scott, worth $15,000, was unexpectedly returned last week to the Columbus University library after police officials had expressed grave doubts as to the possibility of ever recovering it. Though a reward for its return was offered, no payment has been made by library officials, who are bound to secrecy and cannot make any statements on the return of the manuscript.

Academia

Columbia University has announced the addition of a course on football strategy to its summer school curriculum—Students who must commute to classes every day at Massachusetts Institute of Technology have organized a Commuters club—An insurance company is now offering University of Missouri students a policy, which, if the student flunks a course, will pay his tuition for the same course in summer school—Meanwhile University of Washington students who flunk courses are barred to use the library.

DEBATE COUNCIL WILL HAVE MEETING TONIGHT

The debate council will meet tonight at 9:00 o'clock in the Grail room of Graham Memorial. The meetings will take place Tuesday nights instead of Monday nights after this meeting.

Reports will be made on the debating tour to Atlanta and New Orleans by A. S. Kaplan, Phillip Russell, and Bill Eddleman.

HOW TO AVOID BONERS

THE UNITED STATES IS LOCATED IN THE TEMPERANCE ZONE

POOR BILL BONER—he just can't think straight. He thinks a person is safe from contagious disease if he is intoxicated!

But no college man ever pulls boners with a good pipe between his teeth. There's something about a pipe and tobacco that soothes a man, helps him think straight. That is, of course, if he uses the right tobacco. A recent investigation showed Edgeworth to be the favorite tobacco at 12 out of 54 leading colleges.

If you're not already an Edgeworth smoker, there's new smoking satisfaction waiting for you. Edgeworth's blend of fine old burleys is distinctive, different. You'll know—after the first puff.

EDGEWORTH SMOKING TOBACCO

You can buy Edgeworth tobacco anywhere in two forms—Edgeworth Ready-Rubbed and Edgeworth Plug Slice. All sizes—15¢ pocket package to pound humidifier tin. Or, if you would like to try before you buy, write for a free sample packet. Address Larus & Bro. Company, 120 S. 22d St., Richmond, Va.

Carolina And State To Play In Big Five Game This Afternoon

Joe Griffith, Winner Over Wake Forest, to Twirl Game for Tar Heel Team.

CROOM OUT FOR SEASON

Carolina Undeclared in Conference Games While State Has Lost Once.

Carolina's baseball team is scheduled to hook-up for the first time this year with State this afternoon. The game will be called at 4:00 o'clock on Emerson field.

Joe Griffith, Tar Heel star right-hander who handed Wake Forest its first defeat of the year last Friday, will probably be on the mound for Carolina. Morris will likely be the Wolf-pack choice to hurl opposite Griffith.

In the state race neither team has much to boast about, however both stand high in the race for conference honors. Carolina got its only Big Five win against the champions last week, while it had previously lost three starts against Davidson. State's only Big Five win was opposite Duke last Saturday, while the Wolves had previously been defeated by Wake Forest and Duke. In the conference the Tar Heels have a perfect record and State has only been beaten once.

Croom Out of School

Bill Croom dropped out of school last week and as a result will be out of the line-up for the rest of the season. Zaiser, subbing for Croom in left field against Wake Forest, looked plenty good and will likely start. The speedy outfielder hit Lefty Barnes to the tune of a double and a single and drove in one of the Tar Heel runs. However, Vick may get the call if a south-paw pitches for State.

The rest of Carolina's line-up will probably be the same as that of the Deacon game, with Peacock, centerfield; Phipps, shortstop; Weathers, second base; Brandt, right field; Zaiser or Vick, left field; McCaskill, catcher; Powell, third base; Dixon, first base; and Griffith, pitcher.

DANVILLE CALLS OFF FROSH TILT

The freshman baseball game scheduled yesterday with Danville high school yesterday was canceled by the latter team. The freshmen, however, went through a fast inter-squad game.

In the practice contest pitching was the main issue. Spiers hurling for the first team, and McKeithan on the mound for the second squad both had plenty of stuff on the ball. The batters on both teams had trouble hitting and as a result the score was low.

The Tar Babies have two more games scheduled for this week. The first is with Carthage high tomorrow and the last one comes with the first year team from Davidson Thursday. Both battles are to be played at Chapel Hill.

DATES ANNOUNCED FOR HIGH SCHOOL RACE COMPLETION

Championship Baseball Games to Be Played on Emerson Field May 12 and May 20.

The standings in the state high school baseball race and the dates for the final championship games were announced yesterday by E. R. Rankin, secretary of the state high school athletic association.

The Class B championship game will be played here May 12 and the Class A game May 20, Mr. Rankin said last night.

Rocky Mount is leading the eastern conference with five wins and one loss. Durham is pushing close behind with three victories and one defeat. Raleigh has won two and lost two, while Goldsboro and Wilmington have each won one and lost four.

In the west, Gastonia has won the first of a three-game series with Charlotte, the winner of which will meet the winner of the Greensboro-High Point-Winston-Salem group for the western title. In the latter group Greensboro leads with three wins and one loss, High Point and Winston-Salem both having dropped two games while winning one.

In the Class B race, Mount Airy, Granite Quarry, and Paw Creek have already won their district championships in the west, and Roanoke Rapids, Snow Hill, and Roseboro have hung up three of the four district titles in the east, with the other to be settled between Wakelton and Angier.

Alleys To Sponsor Bowling Tournament

The management of the bowling alleys in Graham Memorial has prepared to sponsor an individual tournament scheduled to begin next Monday. Those eligible to bowl in the tournament will be the bowlers turning in the highest individual scores on the alleys this week.

All scores made yesterday and those made throughout the week up to and including Saturday will be eligible for ranking. The forty highest scores will be eligible to bowl in the tournament. The entrance fee has not yet been decided upon, but will be as small as possible.

Juniors Vote To Break Bert Lown's Contract

A committee was appointed by President Boyles, consisting of Claiborn Carr, Winfield Blackwell, Vergil Weathers, Robert Woerner, and Tom Johnson to investigate the legality of the class' action and to take further steps in the matter of adjustment.

Robert Sherrill, auditor of the two classes, presented a figurative picture at the first part of the meeting showing the respective financial conditions of both classes. Sherrill revealed that the juniors have a surplus on hand of $1,348.69, of which $1,272.44 is cash. The senior class showed a surplus of $1,151.16, of which only $255.07 is cash. A sum of $532.47, which was advanced the Student Loan Fund early in the year, can be recalled by the fourth-year group.

CAROLINA TEAMS ARE DEADLOCKED

Local Nine Faces State College And Virginia in Campaign For This Week.

With less than a month left to play North and South Carolina University baseball teams are tied for first place in the Southern Conference. Neither of the Carolina teams has met with a defeat in the conference.

Duke had four wins for a perfect record up until Saturday, but lost to State at that time 5-3. State had been defeated earlier in the season by the Blue Devils.

Virginia jumped into fifth place last week, winning three contests out of three starts. In the only other games last week V. P. I. managed to get their first conference game of the season at the expense of V. M. I. but lost later in the week to Washington and Lee.

North Carolina will have its hands full this week keeping its slate clean. The Tar Heels meet State this afternoon and then take on Virginia in a two game series Friday and Saturday. Other games on the schedule for this week are V. M. I. at Virginia, today; and Duke at Maryland and V. M. I. at V. P. I., Saturday.

Kay Kyser Believes Cheerleaders Should Get Added Rewards

will try out for the position. Such a man would, at least, command the respect of the students, even if he did not start them cheering enthusiastically.

"If cheering strengthens the morale of the team and puts fight into the players," Kay believes, "it is the cheerleader who is responsible. He does as much to win the game as any player or coach and should be rewarded for it. The Monogram club should recognize that fact."

Explaining that he could not completely put through these suggested changes in the status of cheering while he was on the campus because it would have looked as if he was putting himself forward too boldly, Kay expressed a desire to help with the solution of the problem now that he can act from an impartial position.

His first contribution to the revival of cheering will be a new battle song which he will write for the University. "I want to give the boys something with pep and zip, something they will really like to sing, whether they think cheering is 'Joe College or not,'" Kay said of the proposed song.

While on the campus, Kyser was a member of the Grail and the Golden Fleece. He is generally thought to represent best Entrants To Weigh in This Afternoon From 2:00 to 4:00 O'clock in Bynum Gym.

The annual spring intramural boxing tournament is scheduled to begin tomorrow afternoon at 4:00 o'clock in the Tin Can. The entrants should weigh in this afternoon between the hours of 2:00 and 4:00 o'clock in the Gymnasium. There will be the regular eight weight classes with a four pound allowance either way.

The proprietor of the Carolina Smoke Shop has donated a silver cup to be given to the boxer in the tournament who shows the most all-around ability and the most promise toward being of aid to the varsity squad next year. The first round of matches will commence at 4:00 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The semi-finals will be held at 4:00 o'clock Thursday afternoon and the finals at 8:00 o'clock the same night.

The matches provide thrills for the large crowds that usually come to see them as the boys are all well conditioned, one of the requirements for entrance being five workouts previous to the fights. Most of the champions of the fall tournament are ineligible to compete due to competition on the freshman boxing team. However, Kalb, 145 lb. champion, Pratt, 135 lb. champion, and Edwards, 165 lb. champion are eligible for this tourney.

music. An unusual feature of this dance will be the two figures: one lead by the outgoing officers and the other by the new officers.

Tau Epsilon Phi will entertain with a house party over the week-end and will give two dances in connection with it. The first dance will come Friday night at their house and the second Saturday night at the Carolina Inn. Archie Davis' orchestra will play for the dance Saturday night.

Saturday night from 6:30 to 9:00 o'clock the Di senate and the Phi assembly will entertain jointly at a dance in Bynum gymnasium with Archie Davis' orchestra playing. Immediately following this the Order of the Grail will give a dance honoring its new members, also in the gym. Jelly Leftwich and his orchestra will furnish the music for this last Grail dance of the quarter.

SIGMA NU HOLDS TENNIS LEAD BY TROUNCING D.T.D.

Sigma Phi Sigma, Chi Psi, and Everett Score Wins; Phi Gamma Delta And Mangum Win by Forfeit.

In the field of intramural tennis, four out of the six scheduled games were played, the other two being won on forfeits. Sigma Nu continued its winning streak by defeating Delta Tau Delta 3-0. Byerly defeated Jackson, 5-0, 5-1, and Old, Rouiller, 5-2, 5-2, in the singles for Sigma Nu and the doubles went to the victors on a forfeit. This leaves Sigma Nu leading in intramural tennis.

Sigma Phi Sigma won over Pi Kappa Phi by a score of 2-1. In these matches Lovill of the winners defeated Brezeale, 5-0, 5-1, while Froneberger, his team mate, lost to Poole, 5-2, 5-2. The doubles were won by Lovill and Froneberger over Poole and Brezeale.

Atwood and Laughlin of the Chi Psi's won over Brown and Simkowitz respectively of Zeta Beta Tau in the singles of that match. The doubles went to Chi Psi on a forfeit to give them the victory, 3-0.

Best House won from Everett, 2-1, in the closest match of the afternoon. Kasen of Everett defeated Morris of the victors, 5-1, 4-5, 5-1, while Kalb lost to Alexander of Best House 3-5, 5-2, 5-1. Alexander and Morris paired in the doubles to defeat Kasen and Kalb, 5-4, 5-3.

Phi Gamma Delta and Mangum won by forfeits over Kappa Sigma and Aycock respectively.

FRESHMEN BEAT CADETS IN TENNIS

Tar Babies Make Clean Sweep In Matches With Oak Ridge Team; Friedman Wins.

It was announced last night that the freshman tennis team was called back from the current trip, and that three players, Sobol, Baukney, and Williams, have been declared ineligible on scholastic grounds. Z. V. Linker, David Taylor, and Hugh Primrose will take the places of the three ineligible players on the trip to Charlottesville this morning.

Special to THE DAILY TAR HEEL
Greensboro, May 1.—The Tar Baby tennis squad, defeated only by Duke in five years, resumed its winnings ways at Oak Ridge by defeating the Cadet squad by a shutout score, 8 to 0.

In the No. 1 match, Bernie Friedman, who has been defeated this season only by Harris of Duke, beat Whitaker, Oak Ridge star in two straight sets, 6-0, 6-4. Friedman showed signs of the form that was lacking last week when he was defeated by the Blue Imp captain.

In the No. 2 match, Lynch of Carolina defeated Scales of Oak Ridge also in straight sets, 6-1, 7-5. Lynch took the first set easily enough, but Scales came back strong in the second set to extend the Tar Baby.

Sobol took the next match for Carolina also in straight sets, 6-1, 6-1. Baukney took another 6-1, 6-1 victory for the Tar Babies over Jenkins. Williams won over Beatty 6-3, 6-1. In the last singles match of the afternoon, Crampton Trainer defeated Gilliam 6-4, 6-2, to give Carolina a clean sweep in the singles matches.

The Tar Babies also whitewashed the Cadets in the doubles matches. Friedman and Sobol beat Jenkins and Scales 6-2, 6-0, and Lynch and Baukney defeated Beatty and Leven, 6-0, 8-6. No match in the entire afternoon went over two sets.

T. E. P. BEATS PHI ALPHA IN TWELVE INNING GAME, 9-8

Best House, S. A. E., Manly, Sigma Nu, and Phi Gamma Delta Also Take Tilts.

With only one forfeit to mar the afternoon's schedule, five hotly contested games, including the longest one of the season, were played on the intramural fields yesterday. Best House won its sixth consecutive game in order to retain its place among the list of undefeated teams. Plenty of action developed in all of the games played yesterday.

T. E. P. conquered Phi Alpha in what proved to be the longest and one of the hardest fought games of the season to date. The game went for twelve innings, each team getting a run in the eleventh, and finally ending with a score of 9-8.

Best House Victorious

Best House, in keeping its record clean, scored a victory over Ruffin, tallying four points to their opponents two. The victors scored three runs in the fifth and one in the sixth to out-point their rivals who made one run each in the second and seventh innings.

MacBell pitched his team to victory in the S. A. E.-Phi Delta Theta tilt, allowing the Phi Deltas only two runs. The final score of the game was S. A. E. 7, Phi Delta Theta 2. The losers made one of their runs in the fifth and one in the seventh. S. A. E. made two in the first and two in the seventh with the rest scattered in between.

Manly blanked New Dorms to mark up a score of 2-0. Manly's runs were made by Garrison and Gallagher in the second and third innings. For the winners Joyce and Oliverio played extra good games on first and in the pitcher's box respectively. Page was outstanding for the New Dorms.

Sigma Nu won a victory over Delta Tau Delta to the tune of 6-1. The winning team made two runs each in the first and sixth and one run each in the second and third, while their opponents scored in the fifth.

Phi Gamma Delta won on a forfeit over Theta Kappa Nu.

Late Bulletin

The Tar Heel netmen registered their 57th consecutive win in defeating Maryland yesterday by a score of 9-0. Hines and Wright won the the Nos. 1 and 2 matches respectively. They won the No. 1 doubles match also. Ricky Willis beat Gourbeau 8-6, 6-4, in the best match of the afternoon.

DOGWOOD PLANT CULTURE URGED BY W. C. COKER

University Botanist's Proposal Is Result of Success of First Festival at Chapel Hill.

Dogwood culture, a new kind of national beauty culture, has been proposed at the University as a result of the success of the first Dogwood Festival to be staged by the University community.

The dogwood season is now on. It starts in the far south in March and lasts until June, rolling northward in a white flash of color through the forests until virtually the entire United States has been blanketed up to the Canadian border.

Dr. W. C. Coker, Kenan professor of botany and head of the department at the University has found at Chapel Hill alone wild white dogwood with blossoms the size of saucers, about twice the usual size; others of a delicate flesh pink, and some of a darker reddish pink.

A good many years ago J. Van Lindley, well known nurseryman of Greensboro discovered in Orange county a remarkable double form of the dogwood which he brought into cultivation and distributed from his nursery. Two of these double dogwoods are now growing on the University campus in front of Memorial hall.

There are also in North Carolina dogwoods with yellow berries instead of the usual bright red ones. The red or pink form much used in this country was first found in Virginia about 200 years ago by the early English traveller in America, Mark Catesby.

These variations from the usual are called "mutants," and appear suddenly as seedlings from the ordinary types. The superior qualities of these mutants can be perpetuated with certainty only by a vegetative process, such as cuttings, layering, or grafting. Seedlings from them are apt to be quite different, reverting back to the grandparents.

Dr. Coker proposes that Americans notice these exceptionally handsome mutants, and, following the example of Lindley, begin to select and propagate them for decorative use in gardens, streets, and parks.

There is an inexhaustible opportunity, he says, to develop more beautiful types of American plants, not only of dogwood but also of other flowering and berry trees, such as plum, red-bud, and holly.

The older nations of Europe and Japan, he adds, "have through the centuries developed many forms of their attractive trees, whereas we have done almost nothing. The nurseries of England offer over 130 forms of their holly, while our nurseries offer only one of ours."

"America's conspicuous dogwood is made so by the large white leaves under the flower head. These are not petals but highly modified leaves. There is one other dogwood of this type found on the Pacific coast of America and a few such in the Orient."

"Most dogwoods are without these conspicuous leaf bracts and are therefore less valuable for flower display, though several are used for the bright colors, yellow and red, of their branches, and for their berries."

Yackety Yack Staff

Freshman members of the Yackety Yack business staff are requested to come to the office at 2:00 o'clock this afternoon.

World News Bulletins

No Vote on Bill

Democratic leaders yesterday failed to bring to a vote in the house the inflation amendment to the farm relief bill. The failure was caused by the dissenting voice of Representative Snell of New York, who demanded that two days of debate be granted to the bill. Through the efforts of Representative Byrns of Tennessee, Democratic leader in the house, a vote will be forced on the issue today.

Vote on Repeal

Anti-prohibition leaders in Rhode Island were a little hesitant about predicting a sweeping victory for the repealists at the polls yesterday where the Rhode Island voters cast their ballots to decide the fate of the eighteenth amendment in that state. The advocates of repeal feared that the intensive campaigning of the prohibition group would bear enough fruit to dispute the statement that "Rhode Island is the wettest state in the country."

Bombing in Chicago

Bombs yesterday rocked the loop district of Chicago, causing damage estimated at $50,000. Thousands of windows were shattered, and the greatest damage was done in the Illinois Bell Telephone company. None were killed or injured in the explosions, which occurred at 2:30 yesterday morning. Lieutenant Make Mills, investigator of radicalism for the police department, was of the opinion that the radicals were not responsible.

New Gandhi Fast

Mahatma Gandhi, aged leader of India's teeming millions, who has been confined to jail since January 4 for his passive resistance campaign, announced Sunday that he would begin a three-weeks fast May 8. All efforts to dissuade him were in vain. It is feared that the "unconditional, irrevocable fast" which Gandhi has declared, will have fatal results.

Relief Bill Passed

The $500,000,000 relief bill passed the senate yesterday after 45 minutes of debate. The bill provides for direct grants to aid the unemployed. A few amendments were attached to the bill, one of which included the Virgin Islands in the bill's benefits.

Sino-Jap Treaties

Chinese leaders have approached American and British ministries in Peiping in order to negotiate a Sino-Japanese treaty, according to information disclosed by the Japanese foreign office. It is desired that the Chinese and Japanese military leaders meet to decide on an armistice and on establishing a neutral zone south of the great wall of China. The Japanese have demanded a triangular strip between the Lwan river and the great wall which is now in north China proper.

Board Meets

The Student Administrative board met yesterday at a luncheon in Graham Memorial.

Fifty-five per cent of the women answering a recent questionnaire at Beloit indicated that academic influences have made them more optimistic. Twenty-three per cent of them asserted that their religious convictions are being weakened by their education, while forty-eight per cent of the men expressed the same opinion.—Round Table (N.S.F.A.)

Southern Schools Follow Practice Of University in Excluding Negroes

Daily Tar Heel Feature Writer Learns From Six Southern Universities That Negroes Have Been Banned From Entrance Since Civil War; Eight Schools for Negroes in South.

By Don Becker

No Southern colleges enroll Negroes together with whites. This is apparent from a survey by the DAILY TAR HEEL after Thomas R. Hocutt, Negro, had brought suit against the University for having been refused admission.

According to the United States Department of the Interior, Office of Education, none of the states with separate school systems admit members of the colored race to institutions for those of the white race. L. A. Kalbach, chief clerk of the bureau, says:

"The Office of Education does not know of any colleges for whites in the 17 States and the District of Columbia which operate separate schools for Negroes and whites, that admit Negro students. In the South there are at least 80 colleges which are conducted for colored students."

Kalbach's statement is borne out by the answers received by the DAILY TAR HEEL feature board from officials of six universities of Southern states to which it wrote directly. These universities are Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Florida, and Texas. They say: Virginia: We have your letter asking whether or not the University of Virginia has had at any time an application for admission from a member of the Negro race; and we have to advise you that we do not find that there is any record available indicating that there has been an application of this nature.

South Carolina: To my knowledge the University of South Carolina has never had any applications from Negroes. From 1873 to 1880 the University was under "radical rule" and Negroes attended the University of South Carolina during that period. Subsequent to that we have had no applications.

Georgia: . . . I beg to say that the University of Georgia has never to my knowledge had an application for admission by a Negro. A Negro would not be admitted should he apply.

Alabama: Alabama maintains separate tax-supported institutions for Negroes. . . Should we receive an application for admission from a Negro, we would refer him to the appropriate State-maintained institution.

Florida: The school laws of the State of Florida provide that white children and Negro children are not to be taught in the same school. In this connection, the word "school" applies to a college or a university. Because of this law, the University of Florida has not been troubled with applicants of the Negro race.

Texas: I have been Registrar of the University of Texas for about twenty years, and I have never known a Negro to apply for admission. . . Negroes and whites have entirely separate systems of schools.

In other sections of the country the color line is not so strictly drawn in the schools. The University of Iowa admits Negroes, and there are probably many Northern and Western schools that do so. In the North, whites and blacks attend the same elementary and high schools. New York University has had several prominent Negro athletes. However, the older and more socially conscious schools such as Harvard, Yale, Princeton and Amherst bar Negroes as strictly as Southern schools.

COWARD MOVIE TO SHOW TODAY

"Cavalcade" Is Only Drama Ever Written Through Cablegrams.

After presenting a successful showing yesterday, the Carolina theatre will again offer today "Cavalcade," Noel Coward's play which is one of the few dramatic works written in a cablegram.

Although Coward had the idea of the play in mind for some time, according to the story he tells about it, one day he cabled his London producer for an opinion on his idea and was asked for the story. He sat down and outlined in a cablegram the twenty-one scenes in the play.

With this as a start, Coward went to work on the play as soon as he arrived in London.

The Fox film company has produced the screen version and Diana Wynyard and Clive Brook head the cast.

OFFICIALS EXPECT MANY DELEGATES AT MEETING HERE

Barnes Sends Request Asking Student Body Presidents To Attend Congress.

Harper Barnes has sent out a personal request to the new presidents of the student bodies of the colleges in the state asking them to be present at the fourth Annual Congress of the North Carolina Federation of Students, which gathers here Friday and Saturday.

Plans for the congress are nearing completion. Haywood Weeks, president of the Federation has prepared the Agenda sheets for the discussion groups.

Many Expected

Letters have been received from many colleges in the state saying that they intend to have from one to five delegates present. Some of these delegates will be official, while some will come unofficially but for the purpose of gathering information from the discussion groups.

The University will have official delegates which were chosen and announced by President Barnes yesterday. Besides these delegates there will be many students who will be interested in the work of the congress and who may attend any of the meetings.

A nominal registration fee of four dollars will be charged each delegate. This sum will include lunch and dinner Friday and Saturday, and rooms for the two nights. Although this sum may not cover the entire expenses, it is hoped that by keeping the cost down, more schools will be able to send representatives.

JOINT Y CABINET FORMED AT DUKE

State Conference of Y. M.-Y. W. C. A. Forms First Combined Cabinet in the Country.

At a business session meeting of the Y. W.-Y. M. C. A. conference at Duke, April 29, a joint Y. W.-Y. M. C. A. state cabinet was formed. This is the first cabinet of its kind in the country, and will be composed of the presidents of the student Y associations in the state and two other representatives selected by the Y.

The cabinet will meet at least three times a year, and one of its major projects will be the sponsoring of a state Y. W.-Y. M. C. A. conference each year.

The president of the cabinet for next year will be Rosanella Cash of Duke; the vice-president, Duck Powell of Davidson; the secretary, Edith Marslander of Eastern Carolina Teacher's College; and the treasurer, Robert Kendall of Elon.

The cabinet will also be divided into a woman's group and a men's group. The chairman of the women will be Sarah Boger of the Woman's College of the University and the secretary, Marjorie King of Duke. The chairman of the men will be W. M. Thompson of Davidson and the secretary, Van Shuping of State.

Co-ed Tea Today

The co-eds will give their regular weekly tea at Spencer hall this afternoon from 4:30 to 6:00 o'clock.

Reminding Seniors Of Urgent Meeting

— AN EDITORIAL —

There is to be a meeting of the present senior class tonight at 8:30 o'clock in Gerrard hall for the purpose of considering the action of the junior class, taken at their meeting Monday. Every member of the class should make it his duty to attend the meeting in order to insure proper protection for his interests.

The juniors took a bold step forward as they passed, almost unanimously, the following three motions: that no contract could be entered into by the class without the sanction of the class; that the junior class break the Lown contract of $1,100, thereby defeating the suggestion that the class members be taxed further; that the junior class spend not more than $300 as its share in half the cost of another orchestra, to be obtained for the dances.

On receipt of the action of the juniors, some of the executives of the senior class argued that the third year men would have to stand by their half of the contract should the seniors decide to go through with it as it now stands. After an investigation yesterday it has been found that Lown has no legal case against either of the classes nor any individual member of either body. It has also been found that the junior class is not required in any way to uphold their part of the contract should the seniors decide to maintain it.

These same senior class executives are determined to get the senior class to uphold the contract tonight and to take on themselves any extra tax that would be necessary to bring the class the $800 needed to fulfill their share of half the expenses of the dance.

The situation is going to be presented in this manner tonight and in order to get the real sentiment of the class every member must attend. The individual interests of every member will be questioned and if every member is not present, action taken may offend those absent.

Jinxes And Omens Constitute Many Playmaker Superstitions

COUNCIL JUDGES BAD CHECK CASE

Suspended Sentence Imposed on University Student for Offense.

Only one case was brought up before the weekly meeting of the student council last Monday night and that one concerned the passing of a number of bad checks by a student of the University. Testimony and evidence was offered to the effect that the defendant had not only passed the bad checks but had also been negligent in the matter of taking them up and responding to warning notices. Since the defendant had been before the council during the fall quarter on a similar charge, the council imposed a suspended sentence. If the offender passes any more bad checks or if the existing bad checks are not made good before noon, Monday, May 8, he will be suspended from the University for the remainder of the spring quarter.

President Announces New Council Officers

Harper Barnes, president of the student body, announced yesterday the results of the student council elections Monday night. Benton Bray of Siler City, senior representative on the student council last year, was elected carry-over representative on the present council. This is in accordance with the custom of electing one member of the preceding council to serve on the new council.

John T. O'Neill of Henderson was elected secretary of the council. Before the elections, president Barnes gave a short talk, the main point of which was that the new secretary would have to carry out faithfully the duties assigned to him and not let them slide over as has been a custom in the past.

Bids on Sale

Bids for the co-ed dance Friday will be on sale this afternoon from 2:00 until 5:00 in the women's reception room in Graham Memorial. Bids will be 50 cents each.

Odd Characteristics of Carolina Troupe Include Well-Known Rabbit's Foot Omen.

Superstitious? You bet those Carolina Playmakers are superstitious! Why, when they presented Davy Crockett on a tour they all clasped hands just before each performance. And if you know what's good for you, you had better not whistle on that stage; Marion Tatum says they shy away from that.

Incidentally, Miss Tatum finds it necessary to wear someone else's clothes when she's acting. She claims that, in her own clothing, she feels too much like herself instead of like the character of a play. Further, she doesn't like to speak the first line of a production, nor does she like animals on the stage, especially cows. Not that she ever acted with a cow, but she just doesn't like bovines.

Director Sam Selden reports that superstitions are rather prevalent among the many small acting companies throughout the country, but not so much so in stable concerns like the larger theatres. Although he himself knew of practically none that were entertained by Playmakers themselves, it was discovered on investigation that some of the Tar Heel actors and actresses did have their own personal jinxes and good omens.

What! No Jinx?

Eugenia Rawls (from south Gahgiah) looks only for good omens; she confesses that she has a rabbit's foot.

Jo Orendorff has to be frightened to act well. Besides that, her make-up must be just so. And besides that, she must pin something in a secret place, be it either a remembrance from someone, or thirteen cents, so that she will have inspiration, something to act to.

Selden didn't say he believed all the weird stories he knew, but he did admit he was fired once from a group of actors, apparently because he had an old camel-back trunk, and camel-back trunks are jinxes that actors want to steer clear of.

BUREAU REPORTS MEN INTERVIEWED ABOUT VOCATIONS

Report of Bureau of Vocational Information Made by Acting Director Schnell.

The annual report of the Bureau of Vocational Information issued yesterday by Herman Schnell, present acting director, revealed that seventy-five University students have been interviewed and given information regarding the selection of vocations. No men have been placed in positions through the bureau as yet this year.

A similar report issued last year showed that 100 men had been interviewed for that period and that ten men had been placed. It is expected, however, that a number of placements will be made during the remainder of the present term.

The work of the bureau is carried on in the offices of Dean F. F. Bradshaw, who is the official director. Henry Johnson, Jr., formerly held Schnell's position.

The bureau aims to assist the student in making the necessary adjustment between education and work after graduation and to help his selection by supplying him with a broad knowledge of openings and their demands that will serve as a background for an intelligent choice. Each year representatives of various firms visit the acting director and endeavor to contact students with the most promising ability. This service of the bureau has been extremely successful.

Figures for past years show that during the year 1929-30 firms numbering sixteen sent representatives to the University (Continued on last page)

FOUSHEE CHOSEN VILLAGE LEADER

Defeats Council and Howard in Race of Chapel Hill Mayorship Yesterday.

John M. Foushee was elected mayor of Chapel Hill yesterday in a close three-cornered race with B. J. Howard and ex-mayor Z. P. Council. Foushee received 186 votes, Howard 168, and Council 134.

In the race for judge of the recorder's court, L. J. Phipps defeated Odell Sapp. Phipps garnered 361 to Sapp's 123.

The following three aldermen were chosen: Clyde L. Eubanks, J. T. Dobbins, and M. E. Hogan. Joseph Hyde Pratt was the fourth contestant.

Dr. Otto Vollbehr Speaks Here Today

Dr. Otto H. F. Vollbehr of Berlin, internationally recognized authority on early printed books, will speak here today at 4:30 o'clock in room 313 in the University library.

Dr. Vollbehr has made one of the most important collections of incunabula, fifteenth century books, ever gathered together by a single individual. The collection was sold to the Library of Congress in 1930 for $1,500,000. The outstanding single specimen in the collection was a copy of the Gutenberg Bible, for which Dr. Vollbehr paid $305,000 in 1926, the highest price ever recorded for a single book.

Senior Class To Gather For Discussion Of Dances

LIBRARIANS HEAR LITERARY CRITIC

Mrs. May Lamberton Becker to Speak in Greensboro; Dr. Graham on Program.

Mrs. May Lamberton Becker, well-known literary critic, will be featured at the biennial meeting of the North Carolina Library Association, which convenes at the Woman's College in Greensboro May 10 and 11.

Mrs. Becker, who is on the editorial staffs of the Saturday Review of Literature and the New York Herald Tribune weekly Books, will speak on "Books and Plays for a Changing World" at 7:00 o'clock, May 10 at a dinner meeting of the association.

Dr. Frank P. Graham will speak on "Citizens Library Movement in North Carolina" in an afternoon meeting at 2:00 o'clock, May 10. Miss Tommie Dora Barker will also speak at that time on general library conditions in the southeast.

The program for May 11 will begin at 9:30 o'clock with meetings of the college library and public library sections of the association, under R. B. Downs and Miss Lily Moore.

At 11:00 o'clock there will be meetings of the children's section with Louel Collins in charge, the school library section with Mrs. M. P. Douglas, the catalog section with Miss Elizabeth Sampson, and the trustees section with Mrs. H. A. White.

The American Library Association retirement plan will be discussed by E. T. Mulvey at a business meeting at 2:00 o'clock. Election of officers for next year and reports of officers and committees will take place at this meeting.

SINGERS SELECT MANN PRESIDENT

Glee Club Elects Officers at Final Business Meeting.

At its final business meeting of the year Monday afternoon the University glee club elected L. B. Mann of Charlotte president; Richard Somers of Raleigh, vice-president; and Simpson Parker of Charleston, S. C., secretary for next year. Retiring officers are Wofford Humphries of Asheville, president; Harry Lee Knox of Statesville, vice-president; and L. B. Mann, secretary.

The business staff of the glee club appointed by the director and executive committee includes Claude M. Sawyer of Winston-Salem, who was reappointed business manager, John G. Briggs of High Point, librarian, and L. O. Rowland of Varina, publicity manager.

The University glee club will conclude its series of spring quarter appearances with a concert in Winston-Salem Saturday evening and one in High Point May 20.

Teas Discontinued

The regular weekly teas sponsored by the English graduate students have been discontinued for the remainder of this school term, it was announced yesterday. No tea will take place this afternoon.

Will Decide Between Extra Assessment and Breaking Contract With Bert Lown.

CALL MEETING FOR 8:30

Under State Law Concerning Minors, Contract Thought Not to Be Binding.

In view of the action taken by the juniors Monday night, when the third-year class rejected the proposed extra charge for junior-senior dance bids and moved to break Bert Lown's contract, the senior class will meet tonight at 8:30 o'clock in Gerrard hall to decide whether an extra charge will be placed on senior class members to make up the dance expense deficit or whether the group will accept no further charge and break the agreement with Lown.

Arlindo Cate, president of the senior class, yesterday expressed confidence that the members of the group were interested enough in having the dances to levy upon themselves any extra charges necessary to make up their share of the expenses.

The question of an extra charge for dance bids came up because of a deficit in the senior class treasury, and the executive committees of the two classes, meeting in joint session Thursday night, agreed on an extra charge of 50 cents for the bids.

Juniors Object

The extra assessment was objected to by the juniors because it was to be levied on both classes, although there was a surplus in the treasury of the third-year group.

The committees recommended that the 50 cents be charged (Continued on last page)

SCIENCE SOCIETY CONVENES FRIDAY

North Carolina Academy of Science Meets With American Chemical Society Group.

The program for the 32nd annual meeting of the North Carolina Academy of Science and the spring meeting of the North Carolina section of the American Chemical Society, which are to take place at Davidson College Friday and Saturday, was announced here yesterday by Dr. H. R. Totten, secretary-treasurer of the academy, who said indications were for an attendance of around 250 delegates representing colleges, high schools, and state departments.

All meetings will be open to the public, he said, and all teachers of science in colleges or high schools, whether members of the academy or not, are especially invited to attend.

Papers to Be Presented

Some 70 scientific papers, not including those in the chemistry section, will be presented by faculty members from various colleges in the state, and others. The themes to be dealt with will include botany, zoology, geology, mathematics, physics, and chemistry.

The sessions will get under way Friday morning at 9:30 o'clock in the New Chambers building and continue through Saturday noon.

Davidson College will extend to the delegates a complimentary luncheon on Friday. That (Continued on last page)

Advance!

Nothing succeeds like success. It has been demonstrated in short order to the skeptics that not only has the junior class got a will, but that it also can carry out its will and make it effective. The class voted to break an extravagant dance orchestra contract; it went on record as refusing to expend more than $300 of the class funds as its share toward hiring an orchestra; and finally, it emphatically and unanimously stated its doctrine which may establish a valuable precedent: "no contract can be made with any bands without official sanction of the class."

It is not in keeping with the democratic spirit and traditions of Chapel Hill for a committee to take important steps in class affairs without at least implicit support of the majority element. If, at this late date (when the junior-senior dance arrangements should have been definitely completed), the president of the junior class finds it necessary to appoint a committee to determine the legality of the junior class action and to help adjust the error of another committee, it would appear that the present system of management of campus affairs leaves much to be desired. Would it not be a feasible plan for the dance committee to fulfill two functions, first, that of putting at the disposal of the class or classes at large the facts and data which it has collected concerning the costs of orchestra, decorations, and incidental expenses? and second, that of determining the sentiment of the class and what it will and will not sanction?

In this way, the class would not be kept in complete ignorance of the progress of affairs until just before the date of the dance. Nor would it lack opportunity to express its views on the advisability of any proposed action. Granted that matters of detail are strictly the business of the committee, it would seem that the committee would be facilitated in the solution of its problems by a knowledge of the class will. In this event, the committee would clearly be a representative one.—B.B.P.

Our Comeback

The meeting of the Student Federation this week-end offers an unusual opportunity for North Carolina students to adjust themselves to a new social order in the state and the nation. These past few months have been full of unrest, discontent, and protest that has resulted in revolution and change. Not since the World War has public opinion and governmental activity been aroused to the pitch of these months.

It is time for students to assert themselves, take a unified stand and to fight for the common cause of rebuilding the state out of the debacle of economic, social and political degeneracy. If changes—and, it is to be hoped, improvements—which have been begun within the twelve-month are to be continued and made worthwhile, the present generation of students must inform themselves of current trends, decide upon a united course of action and then press the charge on all fronts.

Albert Coates will bring to the Federation his plan for the education of North Carolinians in good citizenship through the agency of the Institute of Government. That is only one field in which the students of North Carolina can exercise their concerted influence. If and when they adopt the program proposed by the Institute of Government, they should turn their attention to a program for the education and participation of students in every phase of the problem of rebuilding out of a prostrated state a commonwealth—a commonwealth in reality as in name.—E.C.D.

What About "Me"?

There are some two dozen tennis courts (if they may be called by that name) on the lower terraces which look as if they have not received any attention since the day they were made. They are absolutely beyond utilization for any purposes of enjoyment so long as they remain in their present state. It seems a shame inasmuch as the courts themselves are potentially very good and with a little care they would be, at the very least, serviceable. At the present they are nothing but an eyesore.

In this connection one is almost sorry that the University has such an excellent tennis team. As it is, many thousands of dollars are spent yearly (trips, new balls, coach, and the superb care that the varsity courts get) on the seven or so men who comprise the team. It seems no more than fair that some of this money—only a little of it is needed—should be spent in a manner that would allow the great majority of players, of inferior calibre no doubt but equally deserving of adequate facilities, opportunity to get the exercise and pleasure that they desire.

A step forward was made by Coach Kenfield when the Duke-Carolina Tennis Carnival was inaugurated. But there is room for very much more progress in this direction—why isn't it carried further?—M.K.K.

Let We Forget—

We are a country young in thought, young in ideals, young in experience, but in the short time that we have lived as a nation we have experienced eight major depressions. Each time, there has been a boom period following, only to have that, too, fall before a calamitous crash larger than any before.

In the years immediately following the World War, there arose a class of people in this country, who endeavored to initiate a policy of continued and increased production of all manufactured articles, who inaugurated a vastly increased building program, who yearned for longer ships and taller buildings, for increased carloadings, for faster machines to do more work in less time. Wages rose to new high levels.

Everyone owned an automobile, everyone spent, and borrowed, and spent again beyond his wildest dreams of a decade before. Our roads burned with swift, never-ending loads forced upon them, and all this time, men worked long hours into the night making money. That was the sole aim of millions of wage earners. Men rushed to work in the morning, rushed through business, rushed home at night, rushed, rushed, so that they could get enough money together to rush off to a vacation in time to rush back to work before the week was over.

Then there came this last depression. There had, it seems, been overproduction. Men had rushed too much, and now they were of a necessity made to stop in their mad course for a while. Everyone, however, was optimistic. This was merely a short dip in the mad rush for greater heights. More men lost their jobs. Four years passed, and finally we began to realize what had happened to us. Still we have not learned our lesson. It is as unknown now, as it was in 1929, that we cannot continue our course after the inevitable re-adjustment.

Do we need taller skyscrapers every year? Do we need tremendous volumes of high pressure buying and selling? Do we need to cut our lives in half to provide bigger and better automobiles? You will say that we are a progressive country. We are, but there are limits even to such a praiseworthy thing as the desire for advancement. We, like Napoleon, can go just so far, before the weight of the tremendous machine that we have built will fall in upon us with crushing strength. This depression that we have had has been our warning. Will we follow the course upon which we have started, to its inevitable conclusion, or will we pause in our mad flight, to take stock of the world, and to solidify ourselves in the position to which we have attained? This generation shall be the one to decide. We are the ones who have experienced this latest calamity, and who will be the leaders of the world when our next catastrophe is due.

After all, this life is short, and happiness should be the goal set before us in the brief span that is ours to enjoy it. We shall not have happiness while we fly onward at an ever increasing rate. We are making the same mistake that Rome, that feudalistic society, that French Monarchy, that Napoleon, that Prussia made. They too had their warning signals. They too chose to disregard them. Are we to do the same?—W.H.W.

GENTLEMEN'S CONCLAVE

Now, some of you boys have just been working for the building department a short while, so I thought it would be a good idea for us all to—well, get together, and see if we can't give you new men a few pointers.

Jake here tells me that some of the men in his squad that was helping him to wax the floors down in Ruffin aren't up on their toes. Jake says that some of you are too darned careful with the junk that these students leave laying around. Now I hope I can show you how foolish it is to be so careful. If these students ain't got enough sense to put their breakable things away someplace when we're waxing the floors, it certainly ain't no lookout of ours. Next week, I hope Jake is able to tell me that you're working faster.

Pete tells me that his bunch which is inspecting springs is also working too slow. Now I am really surprised at that. To be perfectly frank about it, I feel shocked. All you men know that this spring-inspecting job is a cinch, because, for one thing, we inspect them every week almost, and besides that, those mugs which are getting their rooms free for going around with the pad and seeing if the rooms are okay are always reporting busted springs anyways. Pete tells me that two of the men in his squad were caught fixing the covers back like they was. Now, men, this is certainly a waste of time that the department can't tolerate. We are paying you to inspect springs, not to make up beds. You leave that bed-making to the janitors—they will be around the next day and put things straight. That is their job; let them do it. I certainly hope I don't hear no more about this foolishness of fixing things just like they was.

Boys, another matter has come to my attention that I want to comment on. It is about the use of the pass-keys. I have heard—I won't say who told me—but I have heard from a reliable source that at least two of you new fellows are actually knocking on the door before going in to a room. Now, I won't comment on how absolutely foolish that is, because I can see from the smiles all around me that you already know that it's a goofy thing to do. Why, I might even go so far as to say that it's sissy to knock on a door.

You must remember that the Department is paying you to do certain work, with no frills or foolishness. When you knock on a door you waste time, and then someone might get the idea that they got a right to keep you out, which of course they ain't. Now I want each one of you to use your pass-key like a man, like it should be used: just go up to a door, stick the key in, twist it, and walk in like you owned the place. Jake will show you how if you don't already know. I hope I won't have to say nothing more about this.

I guess maybe some of you have been wondering why Red Ferrell has got that big sling on his arm today. Now, I don't mean to reflect on Red, because he is one of our best men, having worked for the Department for over a year and knowing all the ropes. But just for an example of carelessness I want to go into Red's case, and I hope you will all learn a lesson from it.

Red went down to Manly the other morning with his ladder to fix one of the rainspouts just under the second floor windows. It was about 8:30, and all the

Speaking The Campus Mind

To the Editor,
The DAILY TAR HEEL:

The campus should know the facts about the meeting of the junior class at which the contract with Bert Lown for the Junior-Senior dances was broken.

Mr. Sherrill of the audit board submitted figures showing the class had money enough to meet its part of the contract and have a surplus of more than $500.00 left over for next year. The contract was submitted showing that the down payment of $100.00 would be forfeited and the class liable to suit if the arrangements already made were not carried through.

Less than two hundred members of the class attended, not a quorum. A small minority of the class consisting of less than one-fourth of its members were able to control the meeting. Those opposing the contract had made serious efforts to have a majority present. The writer was asked by no less than six persons to vote for breaking the contract and requested not to attend the meeting when he refused.

Mr. Carr arose and presented a case for breaking the contract which was based on pure prejudice: "dictatorial" powers of the executive committees. . . . "Where in the Hell is the contract?" These were his two main reasons for breaking the contract. He was given all the time he wanted. Another man spoke for breaking the contract. Only one man was permitted to speak for the contract. His speech was limited to three minutes. The floor was then shut off from discussion by the small minority. They muzzled the entire discussion, hooting opposing speakers and refusing to hear what they had to say. These men were those who can afford larger and more expensive German club dances; men who do not care for dances; Mr. Carr's henchmen; and a few who were rushed into the matter by the covering up of facts by the minority.

Thus the sanctity of contract was violated and arrangements for a New Deal dollar-bid dance orchestra put over on the class of 1934. It seems really a pity that men who are able to attend only this big dance during the year should be limited to a rotten orchestra by a self-satisfied political minority who refuse to consider views opposing theirs.

—B.H.

To the Editor,
The DAILY TAR HEEL:

Monday night there took place what some might call a junior class meeting. The purpose of this so called meeting was to determine whether or not we break Bert Lown's contract and to discuss plans for another orchestra if the contract be broken. To begin with there was no more than one hundred and fifty members of the class present. That, I believe, makes up about one third of the full membership of the class. How, then could this be a representative body to determine the wishes of a class of four hundred and fifty members? Furthermore, the way things were carried on was nothing less than ridiculous. A certain few were recognized by the presiding officer, others had simply to shout aloud to get any recognition whatever. The few who were recognized all favored one side of the question, that, to me, looks a bit questionable.

Then the voting. Some may call it voting but my definition of that term is radically different from what went on Monday night. A motion was made, carefully stated in such a manner that the affirmative would necessarily be the wishes of the few who seemed to be running things. Discussion was given to those favoring the motion; others were excluded except in a few rare cases. The question was called for. "All those in favor raise their right hands." A number of hands rose and without counting or even asking for a show of hands on the negative side the presiding officer called out: "Motion passed." A few shouts of protest were flung about the hall but were ignored by the presiding officer. Every single motion that went through that evening was carried on in this fashion. Now whether those running the thing were in the right or not makes no difference whatever. The fact remains that the whole thing was carried on unfairly and outrageously by an unrepresentative body. That is not the kind of thing which should be tolerated in a university which prides itself so on its liberty and open-mindedness.

Now I don't especially care if Mr. Lown plays or not. In fact I am against the idea for it is undoubtedly too expensive. But when a high handed, small group limits the class expenditure to three hundred dollars without a bit of fore thought or concern for their fellow class mates, then something ought to be done about it. To most of us this dance is the highlight of the year. Many do not have the means to attend the Frolics or the German Club dances. Why, then, should this majority be denied the privilege of having at least one big dance, one social highlight upon which he may look back with pleasure and pride? Anyone knows that no orchestra above mediocrity can be had for six hundred dollars. Why not add a bit more in order to get a better one. Not eleven hundred dollars, of course not, but give the committee a free hand to get something of which the class may be proud. Economize, yes, but economize with discretion and give the class a chance to express its true sentiments.

—W.L.B.

To the Editor,
The DAILY TAR HEEL:

There has been much criticism from all sides as to the manner in which the meeting of the junior class Monday night was conducted. Some complained the action taken at this meeting was not representative of the class since only about one hundred members were present. However, in view of the fact that the meeting was well advertised in advance through the channels of the TAR HEEL there should be no complaint by those who were either too lazy to attend or else disinterested.

It is true that the meeting was a bit boisterous but this was due to the intense emotionalism on the part of certain members present. I myself was present at this meeting and firmly believe, as do many other members that were present, that the action taken at this meeting

Carolina Nets Five Runs in Eighth-Inning Rally, But Fails to Hold Wolves.

3,000 WITNESS CONTEST

Carolina Drops First Conference Game and Goes Deeper Into Big Five Cellar.

After having thrilled a crowd of approximately 3,000 with a magnificent five run rally in the eighth inning which deadlocked the score at six all, the Tar Heels were nosed out in the final frame, and dropped their first conference game to State, 7-6, yesterday at Emerson field. The defeat pushed the local club deeper into the cellar in the Big Five race.

Joe Griffith, Bunn Hearn's senior pitcher, was on the mound for the Tar Heels and pitched good ball, and but for some fielding lapses by his team mates would have emerged the victor. Although Joe gave up ten hits to the Technicians, only three of the seven runs garnered were earned. Lynn, starting hurler for Chick Doak's club, yielded eight hits in his eight innings on the hill.

State Opens Fast

The Raleigh aggregation got off to a fast lead in the three opening frames, sandwiching in one tally between double markers in the first and third.

Roach, leading off for State, singled sharply over third. Morris hit to Griffith, whose throw to nail Roach on second pulled Weathers off the sack, leaving both runners safe. McQuage grounded weakly to the box as

GOLF TEAM ENDS SUCCESSFUL TRIP

Win Three Matches, Tie One, And Lose One on Northern Tour; Laxton Leads.

Carolina's varsity golf team returned yesterday from a most successful northern invasion. The Tar Heels won three matches and tied one out of a series of five. They beat Washington and Lee, George Washington, Richmond, tied William and Mary, and lost to Georgetown. Carolina took seven men on the trip: Alan Smith, Captain Billy O'Brien, Erwin Laxton, Carl Cramer, Ed Michaels, Henry Bridges, and Wilson Coffin.

In the first match Carolina beat W. & L. at Lexington by 12 to 6. In this match Erwin Laxton, sophomore star, was low medalist with a 74.

Lose to Georgetown

The Tar Heels lost their match to Georgetown at Washington by the close score of 4 to 2. Lynch of Georgetown was medalist with a 74. The Heels then proceeded to shut out George Washington 6 to 0. Laxton was again low scorer with a par 72. In these two matches a new scoring system was used.

Next the Tar Heels moved on to Williamsburg where they played William & Mary to a 9 to 9 tie. Alan Smith, Carolina No. 1 man, was low scorer for this match with a 74.

Then they invaded Richmond, where they smothered Richmond University 16 to 2. Richmond is to be remembered as the only team that has conquered Duke this year. Erwin Laxton was again low medalist with a scorching 71. In the feature match Alan Smith defeated Bobby Reigels, Richmond star, 3 to 0.

The Tar Heels plan to play Duke next Saturday at either Hope Valley or Sedgfield. Sunday they play N. C. State at Raleigh.

YEARLINGS LOSE TO BLUE DEVILS

Fresh Golfers Defeated Monday By Duke After Losing to Winston Saturday.

The freshman golf team lost a match to the Duke outfit Monday afternoon, 11½ to 6½, after engaging in a tough battle Saturday with Winston-Salem high school which ended in a 9-9 tie.

Carolina, represented by Harris, Fulenwider, Hudson, and Valk, played well in each match but found the Blue Devils too formidable and the Winston stickmen too game to overcome. Harris, number one man, extended Duke's yearling star before dropping a 2-1 decision, while Fulenwider defeated Budd of Duke, 3-2. Harris and Fulenwider broke even with Perry and Budd in the foursome each team amassing 1-2 points.

In the second foursome Carolina was swamped. Valk lost to Gray of Duke, 3 to 0, and Hudson was downed by Reavis, 2 to 1. Their opponents scored a 3 to 0 win in the foursome match.

In the Winston meet Fulenwider and Valk turned in singles wins and the number one foursome team took the honors.

The next match for the yearlings will be a return with the Winston-Salem fairway artists there May 6.

second; Irwin, short; and Moore, third; will round out the infield. The outfield is uncertain, as Coach Cerney is trying to find some heavy hitters to roam the outer gardens. Bullock is almost a certain starter in center, with the other two coming from Shapiro, Groom, Marcom, Orr, Denti, or Tatum.

TRACKMEN LEAVE FOR PENN STATE

Cinder Team, Fresh From Duke Victory, to Engage Nittany Lions This Week-end.

The Tar Heel track team, victors over Duke last Saturday, will leave Thursday for Penn State where another close tussle is in store for them. Last year the local outfit beat the nittany Lions by a score of 75 to 51. However, Carolina has lost several stars while a majority of the Penn stars remain.

The oil state boys had a meet with Army last week and came out on the short end of a 74-52 score. Dale of Penn State won the 220 yard run against Army. He will be remembered by Carolina supporters as the boy who pressed Farmer so close in the meet last year, in the 100 yard and 220 yard events. However, he was injured during the summer and was not able to run the 100 against Army.

Pitted against Dale, Carolina will show Odell Childers who has run the century in 10 flat this year and the 220 in 22 seconds. The races between Childers and Dale are expected to be the classic events of the meet.

Dunaway, Cadet half-miler, made the National Collegiate honor roll last year by virtue of his 1:55.8 minute run here. He took his event at Army also. Williamson has shown the best form for Carolina in this event thus far this season. Dunaway also runs the mile and McRae will probably be pitted against him.

In the other distance races King and Siesky have been turning in good times for the Cadets thus far this season with Hubbard and Louis Sullivan showing.

TAR HEELS MEET CAVALIER RIVALS

Feud to Be Renewed This Week-End as Baseball Teams Clash in Two Games.

Plenty of entertainment will be provided for those attending the annual Carolina-Virginia baseball contest to be played in World War Memorial Stadium at Greensboro this Saturday.

This annual game is considered the outstanding college tilt in this section of the country, due to the long rivalry which has existed between the two Universities. The first game of the scheduled three-game series at Charlottesville was postponed as a result of rain while the second contest is scheduled for Chapel Hill this Friday.

As an added attraction the official annual Carolina-Virginia dances will be staged during the week-end. Sometime ago Voiture number 506, forty and eight, American Legion, extended an invitation to the officials of the two teams to act as their hosts in giving the annual dances. The Virginia and Carolina teams accepted the invitation.

Two dances, Friday and Saturday nights, are to be given, both at the Winter Garden. The dancing will take place on one of the finest dance floors in the south with the music being furnished by Kay Kyser, former Carolinian who played for the May Frolics here last week. Both dances will be open to the public.

Hines Beats Hawley as Carolina Takes Its 58th Consecutive Victory.

Special to the DAILY TAR HEEL. New York, May 2.—The University of North Carolina tennis team, twice national champions, crushed the N. Y. U. outfit here this afternoon before a good crowd by the score of 9-0.

Captain Hines won the feature match from Hawley, N. Y. U. star, in three sets by the score of 4-6, 6-3, 6-4. Hines suffered with a bad wrist during the match but the injury is slight and may heal up today.

Ricky Willis, Carolina's number four man, put up a beautiful exhibition of tennis to down Swayze 8-6, 4-6, 6-1. Willis came back strong in the last set to smother Swayze's bid. Morgan, Shuford, and Wright won their matches in straight sets while Harris and Levitan were extended to three sets before trouncing Steifberg and Underwood, 6-1, 3-6, 6-2.

The scores of the other matches were as follows: Wright won from Seller 6-4, 8-6. Harris beat Underwood 6-3, 7-5. Shuford beat Steifberg 6-4, 6-2. Morgan beat Marcus 6-2, 9-7. Hines and Wright took Hawley and Swayze 8-6, 6-3, and Morgan and Shuford beat Seller and Keffur 6-1, 6-4.

not just saying something

A friend of CHESTERFIELD writes us of a salesman who had "something to say":

"I dropped into a little tobacco shop, and when I asked for a pack of Chesterfields the man smiled and told me I was the seventh customer without a break to ask for Chesterfields. 'Smoker after smoker,' he said, 'tells me that Chesterfields click... I sell five times as many Chesterfields as I did a while back.'"

Yes, there's something to say about Chesterfields and it takes just six words to say it—"They're mild and yet they satisfy."

city and that forty-six men were placed into positions through that and other channels. Two firms have been represented this year and two last year.

Under Schnell the bureau affords ample reading material on various subjects of vocations and supplies practical advice to interested students. Various forms or tests are given in different vocational subjects. All work is done without charge.

A complete record of all interviews are kept in the office and students are notified immediately if positions become available. A close cooperation with the self-help bureau of which Edwin Lanier is secretary avoids any conflict in this relation.

Since the bureau was organized in 1926-27, 926 students have been interviewed, 122 were placed in positions, and forty-eight firm representatives have contacted through the office.

Publicity has been purposely shunned due to the inadequacy of the bureau to handle more than a restricted number of interviews and cases. Additions in material have proven adequate, however, to take care of all students desiring the information.

Another important function of the bureau besides the office work is a program of extensive state traveling for the purpose of keeping in touch with business activities and openings throughout the state. Information is garnered on these trips from University alumni that proves valuable in student placements.

afternoon the officers for next year will be elected.

Dr. J. B. Bullitt of the University will deliver the presidential address at the evening meeting Friday. His topic will be: "Early Men, Some Comparisons, Not Odious." The address of welcome at this session will be delivered by Dr. J. M. McConnell, dean of the Davidson College faculty. Earl H. Hall, vice-president of the academy, will preside.

Meetings of the mathematics, physics, and chemistry sections of the academy will be conducted Saturday morning.

Dr. F. W. Sherwood, chairman, will preside over the meeting of the North Carolina section of the American Chemical Society Saturday, with Dr. H. D. Crockford as secretary. Dr. J. M. Thomas will preside over the mathematics section, with Miss Helen Barton as secretary, and Dr. H. E. Fulcher will preside over the physics section, with Dr. C. N. Warfield as secretary.

Archers Meet Tonight

Members of the archery club will meet tonight in Graham Memorial, room 209.

Special Meeting

There will be a special meeting of the editorial board of The Daily Tar Heel this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock for the purpose of reaching a staff decision in regard to the present junior-senior dance situation. All members must be present.

RAINFALL HALTS FROSH NET PLAY

The Carolina-Virginia freshman tennis match at Charlottesville was interrupted by rain yesterday with the Virginia yearlings leading by a 3-2 score. Since the match was uncompleted, it will not count.

Before the contest was halted, Friedman had beaten Wallace in straight sets, 6-0, 6-1; Lynch bested Tabb, 8-6, 6-0; Podesta defeated Linker, 9-7, 6-4; Broun conquered Primrose, 6-3, 3-6, 6-3; and Giles bested Trainer, 6-3, 6-3. Jones was unable to complete his match because of rain. No doubles were played.

other boys was busy on a painting job, so Red thought he'd try to do the repairing all by himself. Now there is where he made his mistake, and I hope none of you men ever make the same one again.

He started knocking and pounding away at the tin spout, never giving a thought that the boys in the second-floor room on the inside of the noise would wake up and get mad about it. —I don't guess any of us, hahah, would have thought of that either, but it just goes to show that you ought to remember all the things I told you at the beginning of the year.—Well, it also happened that this room was the same one in which Red had taken a little nap during his lunch hour the day before in his greasy overalls, and the boys there was a little bit sore at the Department anyways, so they got a wastebasket full of hot water and poured it all over Red.—Of course a bunch of the boys went up there the next day and waxed the floor, and I guess those fellows were sorry they had turned that water loose when they saw the room after we finished, but that didn't help Red none.—He lost his holt on the ladder and fell and sprained his wrist. Now he is laid off for a week—all on account of him trying to fix a job by himself. Do you think that if Red had of had Slink and Joe with him that those boys would have dared throw that water? You know darned good and well they wouldn't have.

I have told you time and time again never to go on any kind of job, no matter how simple it is, without at least three of you being together. It is the only way to really get protection, and I don't have to tell you that the way the students fell about the Department you certainly need all the protection you can get. Don't even go on a spring-inspection without at least three of you—that will give you one more man than rooms in one room. And don't cross the campus except in bunches—it is best to have at least five in a bunch because less than that number are not really safe—unless they happen to be doing carpentry work and have hammers or something else along with them.

Now, in conclusion I want to remind you that the Building Department's middle name is Service. We are here to see that all the students get service whether they like it or not.—And, remember! If there are enough of you together, you can use the same mirror with someone else, and don't have your shoes higher than your head, on a shelf, for example.

It's just too bad if anyone is discharged from the cast, because bad luck comes in three's, and that means that two others will lose their jobs soon after.

If someone whistles on the stage or in the dressing rooms, you can counteract the jinx by going out and turning around three times.

Thumping on the stage before the first opening of a play or a season is good luck; the Playmakers have an adaptation of that in ringing chimes at the beginning of each act. More good luck comes in the form of a bad last rehearsal; it means a good performance.

Dirty Trick!

To throw your hat on another's bed is considered a dirty trick; to open an umbrella indoors is bad, and it is a good idea to rehearse the last line of a play until the opening night.

Ellen Terry would never let the curtain go up on her. Birds are never put in scenery, peacocks being considered especially bad.

Dancers move the right arm and right foot first. Continental actors avoid green as an unlucky color. The Playmakers here try not to let a post separate a walking group, but if it should, they call out either "bread and butter" or "toast and marmalade."

was a distinct step forward in adjusting the expenditures for the Junior-Senior dances to the needs of the time. The class unanimously voted to break the $1,100 contract with Bert Lown.

The biggest step forward was made when the class voted that in the future no money of the class could be expended without the consent of the class. There is to be a meeting of the junior class this Thursday night to decide our reaction to the stand taken by the senior class tonight.

Let us hope that they will be as far-sighted as we were in reducing the cost of our dances. Certainly our big brothers should lead the way in economizing. In order that there will be no protesting afterwards it is urged that all members of the junior class make an honest effort to be present at this meeting in Gerrard hall Thursday night. Exact time to be published in the columns of the TAR HEEL. —E.A.

Many visitors, including alumni of both schools, college students, and baseball fans from all over this state and Virginia, are expected for the game and dances. There will be a receiving line at the Saturday night dance composed of prominent citizens of Greensboro and the members of the Carolina and Virginia baseball teams.

State Scores In Ninth To Nose Out Heels, 7-6

did Willie Duke, but in an attempt to catch Roach, who had broken for home, Captain Powell erred to allow both Roach and McQuage to tally.

In the second inning, an error, a sacrifice bunt, and another single by Roach brought the Wolf-pack another tally.

Wolves Score Twice

State scored two more runs in the third inning when Griffith momentarily lost control and walked McQuage and Duke. Griffith then settled down and fanned Avera and Lambeth, but a dinky single over short by Nelms tallied two runs for State, thereby giving them a 5-0 lead.

The Tar Heels, who had been limited to three hits in the first six innings, broke the ice in the seventh session. Weathers walked. McCaskill singled to center, sending Weathers to third. Brandt walked to fill the bases. However, Zaiser, who had tripped previously, grounded to force Weathers. Powell then grounded sharply to score Brandt.

Heels Get Five Runs

The victors still kept a five run lead in the eighth by virtue of Lambeth's home run to left center, but the Tar Heels evened things up in their half of this inning by scoring five runs and sending Lynn to the show-ers. Peacock, leading off, singled to center. Leonard and Weathers were safe on errors by Roach and Lambeth respectively. McCaskill then sent a short fly to right, but Peacock scored with a beautiful fade-away slide under Fuller, the State receiver. Brandt singled to score Leonard and Zaiser followed with a one-bagger which sent Weathers across the plate. Powell doubled to score Brandt and Zaiser with the tying runs. Morris fumbled Dixon's ground-er on which Willie made a desperate attempt to score but was nailed by a perfect throw.

State went into the final inning with prospects of the game going into extra innings. Morris grounded to Powell who made a nice peg to nail the State speedster. McQuage was given a lift on Weathers' poor throw to Dixon. And Duke and Avera followed with singles to score McQuage with what proved the winning run, for Seitz retired the Tar Heels without a bingle.

Roach and Morris with two for five lead the State batters, while Zaiser and McCaskill with two hits apiece lead the Tar Heel stickmen. The fielding gem came in the first half of the ninth when Johnny Peacock unleashed a perfect throw to nail Avera as he tried to score on Duke's single.

Bette Davis Plays At Carolina Today

Miss Davis claims to have received more "left hand compliments" during her first year in Hollywood than any other young feminine player in pictures. From the moment she came into prominence as leading lady opposite George Arliss in "The Man Who Played God," critics and reviews were constantly praising her with reservations. However, with each picture thereafter, reviews constantly got better and the compliments had fewer handles to them.

In "Ex-Lady," Miss Davis has the role of a highly sophisticated young lady who prefers love to marriage. Gene Raymond, Frank McHugh, Monroe Owsley, and Claire Dodd are included in the cast. Robert Florey directed the production.

Dropped From Staff

The following reporters have been dropped from the staff for failure to attend yesterday's meeting: Dave Mosier, Raleigh Allsbrook, D. M. Humphrey, and A. Stein. They are asked to report to the managing editor at 3:00 o'clock this afternoon.

NO FEE CHARGED FOR TOURNAMENT

No entrance fee will be charged for the individual ping pong tournament to take place in the game room of the Graham Memorial next Monday, it was announced yesterday. All persons desiring to participate must register at the game room desk not later than closing time Friday.

Any member of the student body is eligible to enter. Prompt registration is urged in order to give the officials time to make the schedule of matches.

Senior Class To Gather For Dance Discussion

members of both classes in order that no opportunity for speculation on bids between juniors and seniors may be left.

Dr. Francis F. Bradshaw, dean of students, called a representative meeting yesterday afternoon to determine who, if any one, would be held liable if the signed contract between Lown and the two classes were broken. The contract calls for $1100 to be paid Lown to furnish music for the junior-senior dance set May 12 and 13.

It is understood that in the state of North Carolina all contracts with minors are not binding and that a group such as the class is not a legal personality. As the signer for the junior class was a minor, no member of the class who is of age can be held as a part to the contract.

Robert Sherrill, student audit board accountant, stated yesterday that the board would authorize no expenditure without the sanction of the class concerned.

The motion passed at Monday night's meeting to break Lown's contract was unexpected, as the gathering was called in order that the opinion of the class on the matter of an extra levy might be ascertained. In addition, the class passed a motion to the effect that no contract with any band could be made in the future without the sanction of the class.

ing the way for the Tar Heels. In the hurdles Abernethy and Hawthorne have shown the best form to date and will probably be put against Van Keuren, star Penn State hurdler.

In the field events, Le Gore and Armfield in the javelin, and Mullis in the shot put and discus along with Smith, Jackson, and McDonald in the pole vault form a strong point winning combination. Smith won his event in the indoor meet and has easily won his five points in every dual meet thus far this season and shows promises of going through the season unbeaten.

In the high jump last year, there was a triple tie with Stafford the only Carolina man placing. O'Shea and Sayland, the men who placed for Penn State, are back this year and the event is expected to show a tight race.

Twelve in Infirmary

The following were confined in the infirmary yesterday: Robert J. Lovill, Hugh Dailey, James Keel, C. E. Hunter, J. R. Stan-nill, Gordon Wilson, Ben Brothers, David Bennett, F. D. Higby, S. G. Deans, William H. Anderson, and J. H. Pratt.

Grail Selects Four Juniors And Nine Sophomores For Honors

New Members Will Be Entertained at Banquet in Graham Memorial Tonight.

MEN CHOSEN YESTERDAY

Dean Bradshaw and Dr. W. S. Bernard Will Speak to Group at Banquet.

The Order of the Grail yesterday announced that thirteen men, nine sophomores and four juniors, have been elected to membership in the organization.

Juniors Selected

Students from the junior class are: John Phipps, Fries, Va.; George Brandt, Washington, D. C.; John Alexander, New York City; and Dennis Fox, Randleman.

The new members will be entertained at a banquet in Graham Memorial tonight at 6:30 o'clock, and at the last Grail dance of the year, which takes place Saturday night in Bynum gym.

Speakers at tonight's banquet will be Dr. Francis F. Bradshaw, dean of students, and Dr. W. S. Bernard of the classics department.

The Grail is an honor organization which attempts to promote better relations between fraternity and non-fraternity men.

BOOK COLLECTOR MAKES ADDRESS

Dr. Otto Vollbehr, Professional Incunabula Collector, Speaks At Library Yesterday.

Dr. Otto Vollbehr, eminent collector of rare books, spoke at the library yesterday afternoon, relating some of his experiences as a collector.

Dr. Vollbehr has been a collector for many years but did not engage in it as a profession until a few years ago when a serious accident forced him to give up his regular profession. His specialty in book collection has been early printed books, especially incunabula, books printed in the fifteenth century. His collection of books printed in the first fifty years after books were printed contains more than seven thousand volumes.

In 1930 congress voted a fund of $1,500,000 for rare books, which was to purchase this remarkable collection. The set included a copy of the Gutenberg Bible, the first book printed, costing Dr. Vollbehr $3,500.

Dr. Vollbehr gave high praise to the University's collection of fifteenth century books, saying that it is unique in the Southern states, and that few university libraries of the country had anything comparable in number or value. He plans to return to Chapel Hill in a short while for a more extensive study of this collection.

The speaker was introduced by Dr. Fred M. Hanes of Winston-Salem, one of the founders of the Hanes collection of rare volumes in the University library.

MED SOCIETY ELECTS YOUNG NEW LEADER

The University Medical society elected its new officers yesterday, naming Royster W. Young president. Young replaces Chalmers Carr.

William M. Benzing, Jr., succeeds Charles Powell as vice-president, R. E. McCall succeeds Paul Rhodes as secretary and treasurer, and Alfred T. Hamilton fills the place of Glenn Dixon as chairman of the program committee.

The new officers will be installed at a regular meeting in the near future.

FOREST PLAY HAS UNUSUAL SCENERY

Scenes for Midsummer Night's Dream, Here May 19, Offered Unusual Problems.

Unusual scenery will be one of the features of the Forest theatre production, Midsummer Night's Dream, which will be presented May 19 and 20 as the final Playmaker offering of the year. The scenery was designed by Mary Dirnberger and is being constructed under direction of Samuel Selden.

Designing the scenery for Midsummer Night's Dream offered a rare problem, according to Mary Dirnberger, because, although Shakespeare placed the scene of the play in Greece, he filled the lines with anachronisms and allusions to the contemporary Elizabethan age. Consequently the scenery could not be entirely either Grecian or Elizabethan. For the Playmaker production it has been designed as an original combination of the two types.

Elaborate Scenery

The scenery, constructed especially for use in the Forest theatre, shows in the background the palace of Theseus. The palace remains throughout the play, covered by a curtain during the forest scenes. One of the most striking sets is the bower of Titania, a fairy queen, which consists of an enormous toadstool surrounded by smaller puff-balls and ferns.

To overcome the handicap of being unable to change the entire sets for each scene, varied lights will be used to alter the surroundings.

As a result of her designs for Midsummer Night's Dream, Miss Dirnberger may receive a position as technical director of the Repertory Playhouse Associates company of New England.

Chapel Attendance Required Of Frosh

All freshmen are required to attend assembly once a week, according to an announcement from Dean F. F. Bradshaw's office yesterday. The announcement was made to abolish a misunderstanding among freshmen concerning chapel attendance.

The required assemblies are regularly scheduled for Monday, subject to postponement by announcement. It is also stated that freshmen may not have more than two unexcused absences during the quarter.

A quartet from the Negro spiritual drama Pearly Gates will sing at the next Monday chapel period.

FIVE UNIVERSITY DELEGATES WILL ATTEND MEETING

Leaders of Discussion Groups at Fourth Annual Student Congress Are Announced.

The official delegates from the University for the fourth annual congress of the North Carolina Federation of Students have been announced by Harper Barnes. The University is allowed five official representatives and those selected are Harper Barnes, Lee Greer, Janie Jolly, Vermont C. Royster and Jack Poole. Other men in the University have been given an invitation to attend as unofficial representatives. Anyone interested may attend the discussion groups. The congress convenes tomorrow and continues through Saturday.

Wendell Holmes, athlete and president of Duke student body, will lead the discussion on college athletics at the first of the group meetings. Jerome Clark, president of student body at Davidson College will preside over a group discussion on honor systems.

The group discussion on student discipline has been divided into two sections, one for women's colleges and one for men's schools. William Smith from Catawba will lead the men's discussion, while Mary Catherine Siewers from Salem College will preside over the women's gathering.

Rose Leads News Discussion

As the University has the only daily college newspaper in the state, Charles Rose, former editor of the DAILY TAR HEEL, will lead the discussion on college publications. Haywood Weeks, president of the Federation, will lead a discussion on administration of student government.

State Student Federation Will Function With Rich Experience

Organization Has Accomplished Much Since Founded by John Lang During Duke-Carolina "Peace Meeting" in 1929; Lang Was First President of Federation.

When representatives of the North Carolina colleges and universities gather here tomorrow for the fourth annual congress of the state student federation, they will have a background of much experience upon which to found their important endeavors.

At least one person outside the borders of the state will be watching the Federation's activities with interest. He will be John Lang, former Carolina student, known as the "Father of North Carolina Federation of Students." Inspired to the formation of such a group in 1929, Lang has steadily observed his idea develop to national importance.

Founded in 1929

In the fall of 1929 the two literary societies of Carolina, those of Duke, and the student councils of each school resolved to found a state organization of students. At the same time the ground work for better relation between Duke and the University was established.

With the two largest schools of the state taking the initiative, it was with little difficulty that a state convention with representatives from sixteen universities and colleges met at Chapel Hill, May 10, 1930. At its first meeting the federation had as speakers President Frank P. Graham, Dr. Arch Turner Allen, State Superintendent of Schools, and Dean Francis F. Bradshaw, of the University.

Junior Colleges Admitted

The Congress adopted a constitution, passed the necessary legislation for its activities, and discussed national student and public problems. The first law of the Federation was passed to admit student bodies of junior colleges with the same privileges and obligations of the senior colleges.

Lang, moving spirit of the new organization, was the logical choice for its initial president. W. D. Murray, of Duke, was elected vice-president, Mary Jane Wharton, N. C. C. W., secretary, and Mayne Albright, Carolina, treasurer.

Organization Progresses

Surveys of student government were made, and correspondence with several student and faculty leaders in the state was carried on. Negotiations were begun and carried out with considerable success to obtain a reciprocal athletic ticket exchange through the universities.

LOCAL DELEGATES TO READ PAPERS FOR CONVENTION

Students and Faculty Members To Give Readings at Chemical Meeting Tomorrow.

At the 32nd annual meeting of the North Carolina Academy of Science, in conjunction with the North Carolina section of the American Chemical society, which will take place at Davidson College tomorrow and Saturday, 17 papers will be presented by faculty members and students of the University.

Dr. J. B. Bullitt, professor of pathology in the University, is president, and Dr. H. R. Totten of the University botany department is secretary and treasurer of the academy, which was founded to "promote study and scientific research and to furnish, so far as practicable, a means of publication of such articles as may be deemed worthy."

Papers which will be presented by members of the faculty and students of the University, are: "The Carolina Lake District," by Dr. Collier Cobb; "Studies in the Sexuality of Dictyuchus," by Dr. J. N. Couch and Mary Linda Vardell; "Some Magnetometer Observations in the Coastal Plain Area of South Carolina," by Dr. Gerald R. McCarthy, Dr. W. F. Prouty, J. A. Alexander; "Some Geophysical Experiments," by J. A. Alexander; "Ancient Fossils on a Modern Beach," by W. F. Prouty and Gerald R. McCarthy;

ENGINEERS MEET FOR ELECTION OF OFFICERS

There will be a general meeting of all the students in the school of engineering this morning in 319 Phillips hall. At this meeting new officers for the Carolina Engineer, official publication of the engineering school will be elected. There will also be a general discussion on the advisability of having a student council member from the school of engineering. All persons enrolled in the school of engineering are especially urged to come.

SINGERS CHOSEN FOR NEGRO PLAY

Chorus From Chapel Hill and Durham Practice for Appearance in "Pearly Gates."

The chorus to sing in the play, Pearly Gates, has already been selected, and has been practicing here for the past few days. There are 250 Negroes in the chorus, all of whom were secured from Chapel Hill and Durham.

Friday, a special trainer from Atlanta will come here to coach the group and to apply the finishing touches to the songs.

Pearly Gates is based on the Negro spiritual and directed by Professor Fredrick Hall of Clark University, Atlanta, Georgia. Professor Hall is widely known among Negro musical teachers and is head of the department of music in Clark University and the Gammon Theological seminary in Atlanta.

The cast for the play is made up of 30 students selected from Clark University and the Gammon Theological seminary.

The play, which is being presented by the University Y. M. C. A. as the year's feature program under the committee on Race Study and Inter-racial Cooperation, will be presented in Memorial hall, Tuesday at 8:30 o'clock.

The members of the sophomore cabinet will act as ushers. Tickets are on sale at the Y. M. C. A. now.

Phi To Debate With Duke Literary Group

John Wilkinson, representing the Phi assembly, has received an invitation from the Columbian Literary Society of Duke University to stage a debate with them before the end of the present school year. The Phi has accepted the invitation, and Wilkinson has been appointed to make arrangements for the debate. Representatives Fountain, Rankin, Griffin and Wilkinson were chosen to be the debaters. This debate will be the first with Duke for many years.

The following bill was defeated: Resolved: That the junior-senior dance committee's action in providing for expensive entertainments be condemned. Representatives Rankin, Fountain and Wilkinson spoke on the bill.

Carroll to Speak

The speaker at the Chapel Hill Baptist church Sunday, May 7, will be Dean D. D. Carroll. His subject will be "Changing Conceptions of God."

Class Proposes to Charge Members 50 Cents and to Borrow On Uncollected Fees.

JUNIORS TO MEET TONIGHT

Stalemate Indicated, as Juniors Rejected Similar Plan at Meeting Monday Night.

The senior class last night voted almost unanimously to sustain the Bert Lown contract for the Junior-Senior dances and to assess each member of the class attending the dances 50 cents. The class adopted a plan proposed by Billy McKee to borrow $150 from the business office on uncollected accounts and to sell bids to underclassmen.

The junior class will convene tonight at 8:30 o'clock in Gerrard hall to act upon the proposition advanced by the seniors. An impasse is indicated, since the juniors three days ago rejected a plan similar to the one adopted last night by the seniors. The juniors resolved to break the Lown contract and to employ a cheaper orchestra.

Class Has $305.07

Bill McKee, chairman of the senior dance committee, last night made the following report to the class:

The share of each class for the dance, as originally planned, is $662.75. The senior class has cash on hand of $305.07. A loan of $150 on uncollected dues of $325 could be secured from the business office. There are sufficient funds in the junior class treasury to finance their part of the expenses of any plan with-

A Duty Done— A Duty to Be Done

Friday morning there will gather in Graham Memorial a group of students representing the student bodies of all the larger colleges in the state and most of the smaller ones. Upon this group will fall the responsibility of carrying on the work which has been done to cement the students of North Carolina into one unified federation. Not only to see that the federation maintains the level which it at present holds, but more than that, to carry on and build up to the goal which its founder, John Lang, had visions of when he brought together the first group of students and founded the federation.

No student organization in the state is filled with greater idealism than the Federation. It does not belong to one campus nor even to a few campuses, but to every campus in the state. Its founder had dreams of a great student commonwealth which was to be greater than any student body, which was to bring under one standard and one ideal all the students of the state. It was an immense undertaking and one that could not be completed in a day, a year, or even several years. The end of its fight is in the far future and each year, each regime, but a step on the way.

Saturday will mark the end of another year of the Federation, a year in which its destiny has been presided over by the University. Haywood Weeks, president of the Federation, has realized more than any of its presidents since Lang, the full possibilities of such a group and the need of bringing out its full power for doing good in the field of student government. He made a great contribution in the founding of the Student Journal, in making it a Federation in reality and not just in name.

Such is the true purpose of the Federation, and such is the task which the present administration has sought to accomplish. Carrying on is the responsibility which rests upon every delegate to the convention.—V.C.R.

Government And Business—

The senate banking committee has ordered a thorough investigation of private banking operations. That such a step should have been taken long ago is quite evident. The long list of shady dealings which have characterized this part of our financial structure makes one rather amazed at the ease with which these activities went on and the peculiarly disreputable acts attributed to so-called "public-spirited magnates."

It is characteristic of most American minds to consider the average business man a far superior being to the public office holder; he is considered more capable, more honest, and more patriotic. The alderman, the mayor, the representative, the senator—even to the highest official in the land—are in some respects inferior, a race set apart, as it were, from the rest of us. Such an idea represents a prejudiced and ignorant viewpoint. The tell-tale evidence of the past few years have brought to light an astounding array of faiths broken and power misused in high financial places.

The heart of the problems lies in the thirst for personal gain, whether it be by politician or by business man. The cry of business is "as much profit as possible, and the devil take the hindmost." This laissez faire philosophy—originated by Adam Smith and later used to justify the most flagrant dishonesty—is wholly inadequate to meet the needs of our rapidly integrating world. The maxim "keep politics out of business" would be more applicable to our present needs if it read "keep the business man's ideal out of politics." The affairs of the country are too important to be given over to a crowd of egocentric business men. However, we do urgently need men with a good working knowledge of economics and a desire to give themselves solely to the administration of a wise, far-seeing and honest governmental program—with its ideal "the greatest good to the greatest number."—V.J.L.

Steady, Legislators—

The members of the legislature in their effort to lower drastically the amount on which the state schools are allowed to run has been indirectly responsible for the death of several of the state's school children. Eleven days ago in Rowan county two school busses collided killing four children and injuring others. Subsequent investigation showed that the busses were in a dilapidated condition due to the inability of the state to make provisions for newer and stronger busses, that the bodies, as originally made, were too light and flimsy, that they were horribly overcrowded, and that the busses were being driven by boys not much older than many of the pupils being transported to school.

All over the state there are busses being driven by boys of high school age in which children are transported to the consolidated schools. These boys, too young to be given charge of a cargo of children younger than themselves, who have to place their trust in their drivers because there is no one else to whom they can look in their daily trips to classes. A majority of these busses are old, T model Fords, in which very few of the older generation would trust themselves in company with a mere child as a driver, who, even though competent, should not be trusted with the responsibility incurred in carrying pupils many miles to school over all types of roads and in all kinds of weather, yet these same people who would probably refuse to ride under the existing conditions permit their offspring to go on and never give them a thought.

The city school systems and the colleges of the state have been claiming too large a share of the argument in the legislature, and this accident should bring the rural schools to the attention of the lawmakers of the state as another point to be studied before further action is taken to reduce the funds of the school systems.

It is up to the members of the legislature to look into the conditions existing in the rural schools before they go so far in their reductions as to endanger the lives of those affected by this cut.—F.P.G.

Inflation—But Where Will It End?

Norman Thomas poses a big question and one which is lingering in the minds of most of us when he asked in his letter to the TAR HEEL Tuesday, just to what extent will controlled inflation be controlled? The powers which Congress is about to grant to the President make him literally a financial dictator, acting at his own discretion, and to what extent he will see fit to decrease the gold content of the dollar yet remains to be seen.

But now that the silver issue has been revived and brought into the farm relief bill as one of its numerous appendages, our past experience with "free and unlimited coinage of silver" looms up, like the shade of William Jennings Bryan, to complicate matters still further. For if free and unlimited coinage of this metal is to be the order of the day, there is a chance that the currency will "inflate" out of all proportion to the country's needs.

If our "sound currency," upon which so many platforms have been based, is inflated beyond control, the farm relief program, instead of a god-send, will have become a boomerang. For wages, with their usual habits of trailing prices, will be in the same position as the tortoise trying to catch the hare. Only the hare will not stop by the wayside and fall asleep.

With all due respect to our skepticism, however, it appears that the bill, meeting as many obstacles as it has, is receiving plenty of legislative consideration. And with the people's confidence in Mr. Roosevelt's administration, he can do no less than keep a "controlling" eye on controlled inflation.—A. T. D.

The Fate Of Beer

The legislature of this state has forgotten tradition and permitted an alcoholic beverage to be sold in Chapel Hill. Even before the days of the 18th amendment the sale of beer and whiskey was excluded from the area within four miles of the town. The present body of legislators, realizing the expediency of the automobile and the need for close supervision, have not renewed this old law.

The wet forces believe that the recent legalization of beer is but a step in the direction of the complete repeal of the amendment. The dries realize that they have but one chance of stemming the tide before the repeal is carried through. If the country runs wild and uses beer in an excessive and rowdy manner a point will be added to the weapon of the prohibitionist. The majority of the people now favor repeal, but the sentiments of the mob are not difficult to sway.

There are men in the state legislature and on the city council who are not wholeheartedly in favor of the sale of beer here. These men have been persuaded to put the students on trial. It would take very little to turn them into active opponents if the test should fail.

The authorities of the University could have pushed an exclusion measure through the legislature. However, the administration chose to follow its liberal policy and say nothing. It is a new experiment, the result of which is eagerly awaited.

The legislature, the town, and the University administration have exhibited marked confidence in the students. It is up to the students to justify this confidence by not abusing their privilege. Wanton and reckless consumption of beer will lead to its exclusion. It is to the interest of the students who like the beverage to protect it not only for their own taste but for the welfare and good name of the student body as a whole.—N.A.T.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

To the Editor,
DAILY TAR HEEL:

Mr. Editor, please allow me to speak to members of the Junior class through the columns of the DAILY TAR HEEL.

Monday night in old Gerrard hall, scene of many battles, not less than 150 members of the Junior class answered with their presence a call, then three days old, to assemble. They listened to an auditor's report for nearly an hour. Then for an hour they declared for their rights and for decent expenditures for dances. More than 125 fought like rebellious slaves. Faced with new orders from an executive committee, which had presumed to be vested with absolute and ultimate authority, the group had finally determined upon immediate liberation. The regret is that we had to become unbearably weary of being led by the ear and trampled under foot before we rebelled.

By decisive majorities the 150 juniors present voted: (1) that it would not ratify its executive committee's proposal that each member be assessed an additional 50 cents in order to help the senior class defray its half of the proposed $1,600 junior-senior dances; (2) that it would not approve the Bert Lown contract into which its executive committee had, without voted authorization, entered; (3) that it would not pay more than $300 for its share of the cost for a junior-senior orchestra; and (4) that its class president appoint a new committee—which he did—to negotiate along with the senior class for another orchestra.

Unaccustomed to restraint, the defeated have been whining out feeble alibis and rushing frantically about the campus in search of sympathizers and advisors. A drowning man grabs for even a straw. They have visioned the following straws: (1) The meeting and the motions passed are illegal, for the presiding officer has not been president of the class since the installation of campus officers, April 26. (That's novel. In fact, the new president asked if he was wanted to preside and was told, "No.") There was not a single objection to his presiding at the meeting. (2) Members of the minority were not recognized. Yes they were. They (he) were repeatedly recognized, and no discussable motion was put to a vote until discussion had been shut off by a call for the previous question; (3) In putting the motions the chairman did not call for the "nays." Why call for them, when 5-6 had already voted "yea?" Yes, it was a stormy session, Mr. B. H. you must have been looking for a 5:00 o'clock tea, with the "Executive Committee" gracing the bowls. (4) The junior class can't break its contract. In the first place, who said the junior class ever had a contract with Bert Lown? A proposed contract was offered by the class executive committee for the class' approval. In the second place, assume the document which the executive committee rushed out "thirty yards" to get was a contract. Still, the junior class or any member in it would not be liable for breaching it.

Members of the junior class, if another meeting of the class is called, come right on back to Gerrard hall. Smash again this "dance-marshal combine" and go on record more positively than ever that we are unalterably opposed to any financial expenditure for the Junior-Senior dances which would be an insult to decent social justice and provide new ammunition for those guns which are forever pointed at this University.—H.S.M.

To the Editor,
The DAILY TAR HEEL:

So far as the junior class is concerned they have voted what they want in regards to the oncoming junior-senior dances. The attack which is now being made, calling for another meeting of the class to vote again, is nothing more than a fight being staged against the juniors by the members of the senior class—not the entire membership of the senior class, but a minority in that class who have been beaten in the campus elections of some few weeks ago. They are not able to take it on the chin and are determined to go to any extremes to carry their point of view and stage a $1,600 dance here on the campus while the University pleads as a pauper for financial support.

They claim that the presiding officer of the junior meeting was not qualified to hold the meeting. For all the year he has been qualified. They claim that the new class officers have been installed. Then if this be true, Vergil Weathers is president of the senior class and Stuart Aitken president of the junior class. Then they claim that the voting was not fair since the minority could not win—the minority was so few that they did not care to raise a dissenting vote. They claim that the boys with the money did the voting—that's also pure bunk. Really, they argue so many things they kill their own arguments. Boil it down: They are trying desperately to continue the regime of dictation by the self-picked campus big shots.

The members of the junior class are treated by this one time all-powerful political machine—and I include some few members of the junior class too, because they have been promised political offices in the next elections and naturally they have to stand by—as idiots and fools for upholding their own rights in the government of their class. Well, they have a perfect right to call us morons, fools, and idiots and everything else that would reflect on our intelligence if we lapse into that state of indifference which has heretofore made possible their high-handed acts of despotism.

Juniors, tonight we have another chance to prove that we are done with yoke-bearing, and let's do it!

To the Editor,
DAILY TAR HEEL:

We were quite amused by a heading in the Tuesday, April 25th issue of the TAR HEEL. We let out a loud burst of laughter when we saw "Nine Confined"—we grew quite hysterical when upon continuing to read we found that all those confined were males. Reminds one of sea horses!

Wouldn't it be much simpler if the infirmity list were always under the same caption? If it were it would certainly be easier to find and would not put any tax on the imagination of the reporter.

Congratulations on your new office and may you continue to make the TAR HEEL the interesting and admirable paper it has always been.—A Friend.

(Editor's Note:—The DAILY TAR HEEL wishes to announce that the "sea horse" list will still be run under a different head every day, and that the "Friend" is invited to drop by the "new office" any day for tea.)

Carolina Defeats Army 6-3 In Victorious March

Tar Heels Mark Up Fifty-Ninth Consecutive Win as Army Falls Before Champs.

RAINFALL HINDERS MATCH

Hines Easily Defeats Reynolds; Harris, Wright, Levitan, Morgan, Shuford Win.

(Special to the DAILY TAR HEEL.)
West Point, N. Y., May 4.—In a contest which was marked by closely fought battles in every match, Carolina's terrible tenisters set the Army down 6-3 and marked up the 59th consecutive win for the Tar Heel tennis team.

The matches were played in rain which bothered the members of both teams but failed to detract anything from the superb exhibitions put up by members of both squads.

Army Close

The West Pointers won three close singles matches in three sets. Lenoir Wright lost to Captain Reynolds after taking a long first set. Reynolds rallied in the second and ran out another overtime set, and came back strong in the third to take the match. The scores were 7-9, 9-7, 6-3.

Harley Shuford, number four man, and Ricky Willis, number five, were the other two Tar Heel losers. Shuford took the first set from O'Connell, 8-6, but then the Army star rallied and took the two deciding ones 6-4, 6-4. O'Connell's play was one of the outstanding performances of the afternoon. Ricky Willis lost to Shull after taking the first set 6-4. Shull took the last two, 6-4, 8-6. Dave Morgan blasted Guiney off the courts with a straight set victory, 6-0, 6-4.

Hines Wins Easily

Captain Hines had little trouble in taking the number one match from Daly, 6-3, 6-3. Hines later teamed with Wright and their 6-4, 10-8 victory over Fellenz and O'Connell put the Tar Heels ahead 4-3.

Harvey Harris and Walter Levitan put the meet on ice when they romped on Captain Reynolds and Shull 6-3, 8-6. Morgan and Shuford then added insult to injury as they downed Daly and Cody, 6-4, 4-6.

Raymond and Young Co-Star At Theatre

Gene Raymond and Loretta Young are co-starred in "Zoo in Budapest," Fox production which plays at the Carolina theatre today. The film was produced by Jesse L. Lasky and is his first picture done for Fox.

In Lasky's opinion, there is as much adventure in business as there is in leading an expedition into hitherto unexplored wilds. "The successful producer," he says, "must be daring, just as much as the man who risks the dangers of unknown lands and unfriendly natives."

TRACKSTERS SET AS TRIP STARTS FOR PENN STATE University Squad Will Leave For North Today; Higby Still in Infirmary.

Coach Bob Fetzter sent his Carolina track proteges through their final hard workout prior to their departure this afternoon for Penn State College where they will embattle the Nittany Lions in a dual meet Saturday.

Carolina, last week's conqueror of Duke, 66-60, will be the slight favorite over the Penn State team, the week-end victim of the Army track aggregation, 74-52. The Tar Heels last year tamed the lions 75-51 in a meet staged on Emerson field.

Although the complete list of those making the trip north has not been completed by the Carolina coaching staff, it is definitely known that the traveling squad will be much smaller than that which made the trip to Navy.

In the sprints, Carolina will probably be represented by Childers, C. Hubbard, and Gunter; in the 440, by Fox and Pruden; in the 880 by Williamson and either Kimery or Marsden; in the mile, by McRae and one of either Cordle or Waldrop. In the two-mile, Bob Hubbard and Lewis Sullivan are the likely candidates to make the Penn State trip, while Hawthorne and Abernethy stand out among the hurdlers. The pole vault is uncertain with the selection coming from the trio, Smith, Jackson, and McDonald. The high jump has as its likely starters Stafford and Hamlet, while in the broad jump, C. Hubbard and Childers stand out. The weight men will present a problem. Mullis, LeGore, and Armfield should feel fairly sure of the trip, while the Carolina mentors must choose from Chandler, Hodges and Schmuckler.

CAROLINA MEETS STRONG CAVALIER TEAM TOMORROW

Virginians, Boasting Best Team In Years, Are Fresh From Row of Victories.

The Virginia team which Carolina will face here tomorrow at 4:00 o'clock and in Greensboro Memorial Stadium Saturday at 3:00 o'clock has just beaten Navy, V. M. I., Maryland and Washington and Lee in a row and is regarded as perhaps the best team the Cavaliers have boasted in years.

One of the strongest things about Virginia is its exceptional pitching staff. In two of their last starts Peck Luck, slowball artist, let Navy down with four hits, and Dutch Brewer did the same for V. M. I. And in Virginia's next game Olin Rogers, sophomore southpaw, held Maryland to two hits until he faltered and was relieved in the eighth by Lawler, another good hurler.

Five Veterans on Team

To go with this all-star mound staff Coach Gus Tebell has a fine-fielding, hard-hitting club, including five regulars from last year. The veterans, Drissell, Charles and Brewer, covered the outfield for Virginia at the Greensboro game last year, but Charles has shifted to second this season.

The other regulars who are

TAR BABIES WIN ELISE TILT WITH BARNES HURLING

Paul Dunlap, Former Carolina Star, Plays But Is Held Hitless by Diminutive Star.

With Lefty Barnes pitching beautiful ball for the first six frames and Spiers doing some nice relief work, Carolina's freshman baseball team downed a fast Elise high school team 4 to 2.

Paul Dunlap brought the team over and with Coach Cerney's permission played third base. The former Carolina first baseman had a colorful outfit with three fast talking Cubans playing infield positions. Dunlap himself was not up to his old Tar Heel standard and got nary a bit out of four chances.

Lefty Barnes started the game for the Tar Babies and put the visitors down with three hits and two runs in the first six innings. In the seventh frame with one down Elise got three runners on the paths as the result of one hit, a walk, and a hit batsman. At this stage Spiers went to the hill. Spiers retired the first batter on strikes and forced the next one to pop up. Spiers fanned four men in the two and two-thirds innings that he hurled.

Irwin Spectacular

The whole freshman team played inspired ball behind the little southpaw and turned in several nice plays. Irwin was up to his old tricks in the field and in one inning got all three putouts; one on a line drive, and the other two on pop-ups, going deep left field for one. Gonzales and Hernandez, Elise shortstop and first baseman, respectively, also looked plenty hot on defense.

Carolina opened the run-making in the third inning with one marker. Moore led off with a triple and counted on Groom's sacrifice fly to center field. The visitors scored both of their runs in the first half of the sixth frame and held a short lead. Perrez walked and came home a moment later in front of Gonzales, who smashed a four-base blow over the Tar Baby center fielder's head. It was the only extra base blow that Elise was able to get.

Carolina put the game on ice in the last of the same inning, counting three runs. The Tar Babies loaded the bases on Irwin's walk, Bullock's safe bunt when the pitcher dropped the ball, and Denti's bunt which went for a fluke hit down the first-base line. Irwin counted when the Elise catcher dropped the throw of Marcom's bunt. Moore was out at second on a ground ball but Bullock crossed the plate on the same play. Barnes drove the third run in with a hit.

On one occasion when the battle was hot and the Tar Babies were in the field, Lefty called time out. Lefty then sat down on the mound and started trying to tie a broken shoe string. Glasgow, another freshman pitcher, came to Lefty's rescue with one of his shoe strings. In the meantime Lefty had gained a nice rest.

Denti and Moore with a triple and a single each and Montgomery with two singles led the Tar Babies at bat. Gonzales was the only visitor to get two hits, one the long home run.

The Tar Babies meet their third Big Five opponent, the Davidson yearlings, this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock on Freshman field. McKeithan, big right-hander who has been showing fine form lately, will probably get the starting assignment with Glasgow and Hutchison, a southpaw, held in reserve.

scintillating another year are Buck Poss, catcher and football player, and Sam Lee, shortstop, whose triple with two down in the ninth won the first game of the 1932 series for Virginia 6-5. Rounding out the strong invading club are Purvis, first baseman, Bozarth, third baseman, and Rogers, right fielder.

Brewer Faces Andrews
Dutch Brewer is expected to be Coach Gus Tebell's choice to wage tomorrow's mound duel on Emerson field here at 4:00 o'clock with Nate Andrews, who is remembered for the 2-1 pitchers' duel he won from Sauerbraun of Washington and Lee.

Peck Luck and Big Joe Griffith, the Tar Heel ace and conqueror of Lefty Barnes of Wake Forest, are tentatively slated for mound duty in the Greensboro classic Saturday, giving prospects of one of the finest pitching battles the South will see this year.

TWO NINES KEEP PERFECT RECORD

In the other headliner of the afternoon, Chi Psi, also undefeated, gathered its seventh victory by defeating Phi Sigma Kappa, 8-4. Atwood and Yandell, of the winners and losers respectively, each made three hits and two runs, and Wilday and Rogers of Chi Psi each made two hits.

In the play-off the victorious S. P. E. outfit scored in the second, third, fourth, and sixth, while the Phi Kaps' runs came in the sixth. Bretsch, Merrill, and D. Seawell each made two runs for S. P. E. Wilson and Marsden made their team's runs.

A. T. O. Victorious
In the only other game of the afternoon A. T. O. scored a 14-15 victory over Lambda Tau Alpha. A. T. O. scored in every inning, while the losers scored in the first, fourth, fifth and seventh. Stimpson made three two-base hits for the winners and his teammate, Thompson, made two home runs. Ashcraft was outstanding for Lambda Tau Alpha.

Only two forfeits were recorded yesterday, Beta Theta Pi and T. E. P. being the winners in these cases over Delta Tau Delta and Phi Gamma Delta respectively.

The schedule for today's intramural tilts is as follows:

Baseball: 3:45—(1) Beta Pi vs. Theta Kappa Nu; (2) Sigma Nu vs. S. A. E.; (3) Best House vs. New Dorms.
4:45—(1) Everett vs. Lewis; (2) Kappa Alpha vs. Sigma Chi; (3) Kappa Sigma vs. S. P. E.
Tennis: 3:30—(1) Ruffin vs. Old West; (2) Phi Gamma Delta vs. Zeta Psi; (3) Pi Kappa Alpha vs. Delta Psi.
4:30—(1) Theta Chi vs. Beta Theta Pi; (2) Lewis vs. Atlantics; (3) Chi Pi vs. A. T. O.

Student Federation To Meet Tomorrow

and colleges of the state. A radio broadcast on student government was made by President Lang from Raleigh.

In December 1930, the North Carolina Federation of Students officially became a member of the National Student Federation at the national convention at Atlanta. Ray Farris' description of his trip to the 1929 National Congress was strongly influential in inspiring Lang to found the state order.

Second Meet at Duke

The second state congress of the federation took place at Duke University, May 16, 1931. Frank Gorham of State College was elected to succeed Lang as president. Charles G. Rose, former editor of the DAILY TAR HEEL, was chosen vice-president, while Martha Pierce, of Duke, and Jack McKinnon, of Davidson, were elected secretary and treasurer respectively.

Under the direction of President Gorham and Congress Chairman Pansy McConnell, the third annual Congress convened at Greensboro, with the Women's College there as hostess. Tyre Taylor, executive secretary to the governor of the state, was the principal speaker on the program. His subject was an exposition of his much-vaunted "North Carolina Plan."

The Congress considered affiliating with the Social Service Conference of the State and decided that in the event of such an affiliation, to hold its Fourth Annual Congress simultaneously at the place selected by the Social Service group.

Other Schools Invited

Since the last Congress, the work of the federation has been limited largely to correspondence with all non-member institutions in the state in view of the Federation and persuading them to become active members at the next congress.

At a joint meeting of the officers and the executive committee in Chapel Hill last November, an invitation to affiliate the Federation with the Institute of Government was accepted with the provision that a satisfactory meeting date be arranged.

Publication Founded

Outstanding events of the Federation year were the founding of its official publication, The Student Journal, edited by Claiborn Carr, editor of the DAILY TAR HEEL and the election of John Lang to the presidency of the National Student Federation.

PHI AND DI TO CONDUCT TEA DANCING SATURDAY

The Philanthropic Assembly and the Dialectic Senate will conduct a tea dance at Bynum gymnasium Saturday evening from 6:30 until 9:00 o'clock. Archie Davis and his orchestra will furnish the music.

All members of the Phi wishing bids should see Representative Temple. Members of the Di Senate should see Senator Gentry. An extra bid is given to each member of the two societies.

Annual Staff to Meet

All members of the business staff of the Yackety Yack will convene in the offices of the publication at 2:00 o'clock this afternoon. According to Marcus Feinstein, business manager, the meeting is important.

Old Interfraternity Council

There will be a meeting of the old members of the Interfraternity council tonight at 7:00 o'clock in Graham Memorial. A discussion will be held concerning the annual banquet.

Seniors Favor Motion To Sustain Contract

out an assessment, it was stated. To take care of the remaining deficit, McKee proposed a 50-cent levy on seniors attending the dances. The levy would bring in $125. The sale at $1 per set of 200 bids, which have been printed but are not needed for the members of the two classes, would bring in $100 to each class, making a total of $680.07 for the senior share of the expenses.

Explaining why the class dance and executive committees had changed plans for financing the dances McKee said that a check-up on Yackety Yack bills revealed an error of more than $200 in favor of the class treasury; that the cost of decorations had been split with the May Frolic; and that, by ruling of the faculty dance committee, bids may be legally sold to outsiders.

A motion to adopt McKee's proposal and to sustain the contract with Bert Lowm, offered by Cab Philpott, precipitated lively but orderly discussion. "Only 98 cents out of our class dues goes to the dance," Sparks Griffin explained. "So a 50-cent assessment is not unreasonable."

Lindy Cate explained the shortage in class funds by the fact that junior fees had been reduced from $10 to $7 during the past year.

Where the sentiment of the class lay could be seen a few minutes later when Ben Rodin spoke for the motion, emphasizing the dishonor involved in breaking a contract. Rodin moved the close of the discussion and the previous question. The vote was 54-37 in favor of Philpott's motion and McKee's plan. A cheer followed the announcement of the count. Only one person dissented on a motion to make the vote unanimous, made by Sparks Griffin and seconded by McKeithan, who had spoken for the opposition.

State Expenses Reduced
"Speaking of economy," McKee said after the motion was passed, "the dance two years ago cost $2,800, last year $1,750 and this year $1,424, not $1,600 as was first thought." Most of the speeches of the evening had centered on economy. "The depression is a real thing to me. I haven't got 50 cents," E. C. Willis declared. "Don't let 50 cents stand in the way of a big weekend," said another.

Debate Banquet Scheduled

Plans were made for the annual banquet of the debate squad at a weekly meeting Tuesday night. The banquet will take place Thursday, May 11, at 7:30 o'clock at the Carolina Inn. All members of the debate squad may attend. Anyone who has participated in debating at the University is invited.

Tau Kappa Alpha Meeting

The president of Tau Kappa Alpha, honorary debate society, has called a very urgent meeting for tonight at 10:30 o'clock in the Y. M. C. A. It is of the utmost importance that every member attend.

McIntosh to Speak

C. E. McIntosh, secretary of the school of education, will deliver an address before the Person county Education Conference, which meets at Roxboro this afternoon.

Students at a college in Georgia can no longer wear smoked glasses to class because a wily professor found out that the students used the glasses as a screen behind which they could sleep through lectures.

FIFTY PHOTOGRAPHS OF GREEK SCENES SHOWN

The exhibit of 50 enlarged photographs of scenes in Greece taken by Charles Harris Whitaker of Vienna, Va., has been placed on display in the glass cases in the foyer and in the reserve room of the University library, where it will remain until May 10.

The photographs were loaned the University for two weeks by the American Federation of Art. Mrs. Catherine Pendleton Arrington of Warrenton made the loan possible. Students in archeology and ancient history will be particularly interested in the exhibit.

is not even certain with all announcements leaving the office of Carolina coaches late last night tentative and subject to immediate change.

Penn State Strong

The Tar Heels know what they may expect from the Penn State club. Dale and Aldrich in the sprints; Rhodes, 440; Dunaway and Sieksy, mile and 880; King and Francis, two-mile; Hill and VanKueren, hurdles; Kerschuer, pole vault; O'Shea and Sayland, high jump; Sayland and Jackson, broad jump; Siegel, in the shot and discus; while Adams and Siegal, javelin throw, will all represent the defending track team.

WAGER RETURNS FROM NEW YORK

University Professor Attended Highway Round Table Conference.

Dr. Paul Wager, assistant professor of rural social economics at the University, returned this week from New York where he had attended a conference of highway administrators and local government authorities which gathered April 28 and 29.

As North Carolina was the pioneer state in taking over all roads, four of the delegates to the conference were from this state.

An attempt was made at the conference to appraise the different systems of highway administration in the United States and determine what constitutes the most efficient unit of administration.

The delegates from North Carolina were L. R. Ames, chief engineer of the state highway commission; C. M. Johnson, state treasurer and director of local government; and Professors Clarence Heer and Paul W. Wager of the University.

Dr. Heer is now working for the American Legislator's Association in Chicago and went direct to New York from there. Dr. Wager went to New Haven after the conference to visit former associates of the Forest Taxation of the United States Forest Service with which he was connected for two years.

Y. M. C. A. at Illinois

Urbana, Ill., May 3.—Plans to receive the University of Illinois class of '37 already have been instituted by the freshman fellowship committee of the University Y. M. C. A. A three-day camp program full of "orientation" material is one of the methods by which this organization seeks to assist freshmen in finding themselves on the campus early in their first semester.

Troop School to Meet

The 316th field artillery troop school will meet tonight at 7:30 o'clock in Davie hall. All reserve officers and interested civilians are urged to attend.

FROSH NET TEAM WINS IN VIRGINIA

Woodbury Forest Prep Beaten 6-3 in First Engagement Of Revamped Team.

(Special to the DAILY TAR HEEL.)

Woodbury Forest, Va., May 3.—The North Carolina freshman tennis team defeated the Woodbury Forest prep team here today by a score of 6 to 3. This was the first match for the Tar Heel team since they were called back from Greensboro, N. C., because of the ineligibility of three members. The matches with Virginia were rained out yesterday.

In the No. 1 match, Bernie Friedman defeated Phelps 6-0, 6-2. Friedman, showing superb form made every shot count and allowed the prepster few points. Lynch of Carolina beat Colt in the No. 2 engagement 7-5, 8-6. The boys were both well matched but Lynch played the cooler game of the two and came out on top.

The first prep win came as W. Jones beat Z. V. Linker, one of the boys who is taking the place of one of the ineligible players, by a score of 6-1, 6-1. Linker played a fair game with his much more experienced opponent. Powels, another prep man defeated Primrose 6-2, 5-7, 6-0. After playing two beautiful sets Primrose blew up and Powels easily took him into camp.

D. Jones beat Hardy in straight sets 6-2, 6-2. Estes of Woodbury Forest knocked off Trainer 6-1, 6-1. In the doubles, Friedman and Linker beat Phelps and W. Jones 6-2, 2-6, 6-2. It was an exciting match but Friedman carried the Tar Heel team through aided no little by some nice shots by Linker. Lynch and Primrose beat Powels and Colt 6-4, 7-5. In the last match D. Jones and Trainer defeated Hardy and Estes 6-3, 6-3, to close the day with the Tar Babies away out in front.

Local People Attend Liaison Flower Show

Several people of Chapel Hill Monday attended the flower show given by Miss Nancy Liaison at Flora McDonald College at Red Springs in connection with the annual May Day exercises.

Miss Liaison is professor of biology at Flora McDonald and a former student of the University, having taken her master and bachelor degrees here.

Those who went to the May Day event from Chapel Hill were Mrs. H. R. Totten, Mrs. Irene Lee, T. J. Harbison, Lacy Ransom, and Misses Mary Linda Vardell, Alma Holland, and Velma Matthews.

Confined in Infirmary

Thirteen were confined in the infirmary yesterday. They were: Ben Brothers, David Bennett, F. D. Higby, S. G. Deans, William H. Anderson, J. H. Pratt, J. R. Stannill, Elizabeth Barnett, George J. Fountain, Donald Douglas, J. Flaherty, Charles Rawls, and Edward Shapiro.

Juniors Agree To Cooperate With Seniors In Dance Affair

Vote Overwhelmingly To Rescind Former Stand And Uphold Lown Contract.

CATE'S PLAN ACCEPTED Decide To Let Seniors Sell Sufficient Extra Bids To Offset Deficit.

At a well-conducted meeting last night in Gerrard hall the junior class with Vergil Weathers presiding voted overwhelmingly to rescind the stand taken Monday night and to uphold their part in the annual junior-senior dance set next week-end.

The juniors agreed to cooperate wholeheartedly with the seniors in the affair and accepted a proposal set forth before them by President Lindy Cate of the seniors with several adjustments.

Seniors To Sell Bids
Cate's plan stipulated a sale of the remaining bids by both classes at $1.50 each, the proceeds to be divided equally between the two. At the suggestion of Ed Kahn, however, the juniors passed the motion to the following effect: that the seniors be allowed to sell sufficient extra bids at $1.50 to offset any deficit that class may accumulate. When this needed amount is raised through the sale, all bids still remaining are to be destroyed and the sale closed.

The juniors' action concluded a week of intense class confusion resulting from various mis-interpretations on the part of both. Thorough co-operation is now expected by dance officials.

FROSH WILL USE NEW MATH TEXT

Revised Edition of Introductory Mathematics Released a Few Weeks Ago.

Introductory Mathematics, the freshman mathematics text for the past few years, has been revised and published in a cloth-bound volume. The new book, written by Dr. E. T. Browne and Dr. J. W. Lasley of the University mathematics department, was released by Mc-Graw-Hill Book company a few weeks ago.

The authors state that the book is written in much simpler style than the former edition.
Parts of the book have been altered and certain problems changed or deleted. Professor J. B. Linker of the mathematics department proof-read the edition.

Not only is the binding an improvement over the former mimeographed edition, but the texture of the paper is better.
Logarithm tables are included, providing a new convenience.
The book will retail at $2.75.
Limestone College of Gaffney has adopted this book for use next term, and other schools are expected to use it within a short time.

May Festival Today

The annual May day festivities in honor of the high school
May queen will take place this afternoon on the lawn of Chapel Hill high school. Virginia Burch will be honored as Queen of May.
More than 250 school children will participate in the May fete.

DAVIS ELECTED EDITOR OF CAROLINA ENGINEER

W. E. Davis was elected editor of the Carolina Engineer, engineering publication, yesterday by students of the engineering school. H. F. Stewart was chosen business manager. Davis formerly served on the staff of the DAILY TAR HEEL.

C. M. Garrison was elected chairman of the University chapter of the A. I. E. E. at the Tuesday meeting of the organization.

WEEK-END EVENTS HEADED BY FULL DANCE SCHEDULE

Phi Kappa Sigma, Kappa Alpha, Tau Epsilon Phi, Grail and Co-eds Stage Dances.

A full social schedule is in store for the campus during this week-end, as six different organizations have made final plans for dances and house-parties. Seven dances, including the regular co-ed, Grail, and Di and Phi dances, will be given.

Phi Kappa Sigma and Kappa Alpha fraternities will entertain jointly with a set of dances in the Carolina Inn. Each of these fraternities will also be hosts at a house party to which a number of attractive young ladies have been invited. The dances by this group will take place tonight and tomorrow afternoon in the Inn, and Jelly Leftwich's orchestra will furnish the music.

T. E. P. Dance
Tau Epsilon Phi will give two dances in connection with a house party which they are planning. The first of these will come tomorrow at the house and the second tomorrow night at the Carolina Inn. Archie Davis' orchestra will play for the dance tomorrow.

The annual co-ed dances will take place tonight in Bynum gymnasium with Archie Davis' orchestra furnishing the music.
An unusual feature of this dance will be the two figures:
one led by the out-going officers and the other by the new officers.

The Order of the Grail will give a dance honoring its new members tomorrow night, 9:00 to 12:00 o'clock, in the gymnasium, Jelly Leftwich's orchestra playing. This will be the last Grail dance of the quarter.
New members will be honored at the affair.

The Di senate and the Phi assembly will give their annual entertainment in the form of a tea dance in the gym 6:30 to 9:00 o'clock. Archie Davis' orchestra will furnish the music.

Phi Kappa Sigma
Girls attending the Phi Kappa Sigma house party are:
Louise Critcher of Boone, Sally
Couch of Charlotte, Elizabeth
Boylan of Charlotte, Kate Spruill of Rocky Mount, Eugenia
Rawls of Macon, Ga., Mary
Gregory of Rocky Mount, Ann
Moore of Charlotte, Jean Stauff-

SOUTH ATLANTIC MUSIC CONTEST STARTS TONIGHT

Contests Are Scheduled for Voice, Violin, Piano, and Organ in Hill Music Hall.

The contest for student musicians sponsored by the South Atlantic district of the National federation of music clubs will open in Hill Music hall tonight
at 8:30 o'clock.

Contests are scheduled for voice, violin, piano, and organ.
Contestants between the ages of 14 and 28 will enter in the student musician and young artist classifications. The latter classification requires that the entrant be prepared to render an entire program of standard concert selections from memory. The list of contestants will consist mainly of the names of those who were winners in the state contests in Florida,
Georgia, South Carolina, and North Carolina.

Competitions for entrants in the student musician classification will continue tomorrow morning beginning at 9:00 o'clock. Mrs. C. C. Lucas, federation director of contests for the South Atlantic district, will be in charge.

Large Staff Used At Swain To Serve Voracious Students

Discounting Food Not Measurable in Pounds, as Eggs, Milk, or Flour, Patrons of University Commons Consume About 100 Tons, or 200,000 Pounds, Yearly.

Working on a yearly budget of $120,000, Swain Hall feeds each year between 500 and 750 men and employs between 60 and 80 students. It has been managed by Obie Harmon since January 2, 1920.

Of the kind of food that can be measured in pounds, which does not include many large items like eggs, milk, or flour, Swain Hall is using about 100 tons, or 200,000 pounds, per year.

Over a hundred thousand pounds of ice are used, about 200,000 napkins, 15,000 pounds of washing powder and other soaps, and around 4,000 pounds of salt.

Humpty-Dumpty and Family
Swain Hall will use this year approximately 230,000 eggs, that is, around 19,000 dozen.

Thirsty students this year will consume about 20,000 gallons of milk, (unless 3.2 throws the figures off too much) and about 1,200 gallons of ice cream and punch.

Flour will amount to 240 barrels. Chickens to 12,000 pounds, and turkeys to 9,000 pounds.

180 gallons of oysters will lose all chance of producing pearls by sliding down Carolina gul-lets. Nearly a ton of onions will "pull at the tear ducts" of Tar Heel men, and 240 bags of Irish potatoes will keep the weight up.

Eighty Gallons of Relish
Vegetable relish will be consumed to the extent of 80 gallons, and strawberries to the extent of thirteen and a half cases. Sugar runs up to over 400 bags, and syrup to around 400 gallons.

Drink hearty!—with 5,700 pounds of coffee, 425 pounds of tea, and 300 pounds of cocoa.
Just how much liquid that amounts to when milk and water is added is—well, enough for quite a few throats.

Those Sunday morning hot cakes require four cases of pancake flour. Over 120 cases of grapefruit, 30 cases of lemons, and over a hundred cases of oranges make up the necessary citrus fruits. And about 40 gallons of olives put the finishing touch to the diet.

Mayor Welcomes Students to Greensboro

To the Student Body
Of the University:

As Mayor of Greensboro it gives me great pleasure to extend to the students of the University a cordial invitation and welcome to attend the annual game between the University of North Carolina and the University of Virginia.
This game has long been a classic in southern athletics and Greensboro is very happy to play host to this battle which never fails to draw a large crowd and to attract great interest.

The people of Greensboro have always been most enthusiastic in their support of the University and being close to her have always maintained the most friendly and pleasant relations both with the University and Chapel Hill. Both culturally and athletically Greensboro has contributed much to the University and has never failed to take a lively interest in her welfare.

I sincerely hope that this fine contact will long continue and hope that Greensboro will have the pleasure of welcoming not only the two teams but a good crowd of Carolina supporters to help out the Carolina fans over here.

Very truly yours,
PAUL C. LINDLEY,
Mayor.

State School Delegates Attend Fourth Annual Student Congress

KENNEDY TO CONCLUDE VESPER ORGAN SERIES

Professor Nelson O. Kennedy, organ instructor in the music department, will present the concluding recital in his series of vesper concerts in Hill Music hall Sunday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock.

Professor Kennedy's program will consist entirely of works by foreign composers and will include transcriptions of instrumental works of Tchaikowsky and Wagner.

ORDER OF GRAIL ELECTS LEADERS AT ANNUAL FETE

McMillan, Nisbet, Groover, and Patterson Become Officers of Honor Organization.

At the annual banquet of the Order of the Grail last night in Graham Memorial R. D. Mc-Millan was elected president for the coming year, replacing Bobbie Mason, this year's president. Other officers elected were Tom Nisbet, secretary, and Simmons Patterson, assistant treasurer.

Walter Groover, assistant treasurer for the past year, au-tomatically replaced C. C. Hamlet as treasurer. Nisbet succeeds Claiborn Carr as secretary. All incoming officers were elected unanimously.

Speakers

Dean Francis F. Bradshaw and Dr. W. S. Bernard were speakers of the evening. Dean Bradshaw, an honorary member of the Grail stated that the Order had made great progress in accomplishing its initial aim of social unity on the campus.
Consequently, he declared, the organization might assume an added objective, which he would suggest to be a "restoration, reintensification, and revivification of the honor system." Dean Bradshaw qualified his statement, saying that he believed in the present honor system but considered that much could be done to strengthen it.

Dr. W. S. Bernard, an organizer of the Grail, pointed first to some matters that the Order might apply its strength in the betterment of the campus. Continuing, Dr. Bernard spoke on the main characteristic of the organization, unselfishness.

The new members were guests of honor at the banquet.

SEMINARY GROUP TO ADDRESS 'Y' MONDAY

The last regular meeting of three 'Y' cabinets will be conducted Monday, May 8. At this time the members of the delegation from the Virginia Theological Seminary will address the groups.

The delegation consists of Reverend A. C. Zabriskie, professor of history in the seminary, Henry Johnson, former assistant to Dean Bradshaw, and Doc Hines. They will also conduct an informal discussion at the Parish House Saturday night on "Vocation," and will discuss "Vital Religion" at the Student Forum Sunday night.
Reverend Zabriskie will deliver the sermon at the Chapel of the Cross at the regular services on Sunday.

More Than 50 Representatives Will Arrive Here This Morning for Conference.

LUNCH TO OPEN MEETING

President Graham Will Deliver
Opening Address; Goerch
To Speak at Dinner.

Over 50 delegates from colleges in North Carolina will arrive in Chapel Hill this morning for attendance at the fourth annual congress of the North Carolina Federation of Students.

Among the colleges sending representatives are some who do not yet belong to the federation but who wish to join the organization. Delegates from non-members of the federation will not be counted as official, but they will have a voice in the discussions and will be able to contribute their ideas to the discussion groups.

Send Delegates

Schools which have already announced that they will send one or more representatives to the congress are the University,
Duke University, Salem College at Winston-Salem; Presbyterian Junior College, Maxton; Asheville Normal School, Asheville; Catawba College, Salisbury; Davidson College, Davidson; East Carolina Teacher's College,

PAYMENTS DELAY ANNUAL PRINTING

Editor States Purpose Is to Pave Way for Better Issues in Future.

Being held up by the failure of students and organizations to pay for their space, the 1932-33 Yackety Yack will appear in the latter part of this month,
Editor Nutt Parsley announces.

Parsley states the primary aim of the forthcoming annual as being to prepare the way for better issues in the future. New systems have been innovated which will make possible more outstanding books in the future, but which must be developed over a period of time. The editors have been handicapped in preparing the present issue by lack of cooperation from a number of students and organizations and by efforts to reduce expenditures. Because of a Publication Union regulation, no picture may be printed in the yearbook until the required space has been bought.

The editor commends the staff for their work upon the book, especially the large number of freshmen who were staff members this year.

Girls to Visit Church

The girls' student organization of the Woman's College from College Place church at Greensboro will be guest of the Wesley Student Association of the local Methodist church Sunday evening at 6:45 o'clock and will present the evening's program. University students are invited to be present.

A Lesson

To Be Learned—

The Junior-Senior dance situation should serve as a lesson to the members of each class in the University.

The present muddle has been brought about not by the corrupt practices of any individual or any group of individuals, but simply due to the fact that none of the classes have a definite framework set up by which expenditures or any other class action is governed. Now everything is run according to custom.

Because no class in the past has referred any itemized list of proposed expenditures to the class as a whole for its ratification, because the executive committees of the classes have assumed dictatorial powers in the past, and because one man has been allowed to negotiate with, and make contracts with an orchestra on his own account, this year the same procedure is carried on and when the committees are questioned, they laugh and say that "last year's committee did this, why can't we?"

The executive committees are appointed for the most part as dictated by the frame-up chiefs as a cut of the political pie and do not represent the class opinion. What the committees decide, that is, these political committees, does not reflect the class' position as they are supposed to do. Granted that a class of some three hundred is too unwieldy an organization to be run properly without an executive committee, still it is essential to have some sort of class ratification. The present junior class realized this fact Monday night and voted that no contract could be entered into involving class money without the consent of the class.

Some definite framework of operation should be adopted and the following plan is offered for consideration. The presidents of the classes should appoint executive committees as usual with a general chairman and a financial chairman. This financial chairman should confer with the class president and R. H. Sherrill to draw up a budget of expenditures of the class for the year. The budget report should include an itemized account of fixed expenditures of the class (student government fee and Yackety Yack space for each member) and also an itemized account of the uncertain charges (smokers, printing, orchestra, decorations, etc.).

This report should be set up and gone over in executive meeting and then put before the class at the first smoker and properly explained by the financial chairman. The class should be allowed to discuss the budget, increasing or decreasing it as the members desire, before adopting it officially. After its adoption by the class, the committees working on expenditures can tell from the start how the class feels toward the debts to be incurred.

If, in the case of an orchestra or other needs, the committee finds that a little more money is needed than the appropriation calls for, it should advise the president to call another meeting to propose the more expensive items. If the class should vote to take them, then and then only would they be duly authorized.

Superb

Inconsistency—

To those students who believe that the expenditure of $1,100 for a dance orchestra would be extremely tactless in the face of the University's manifest financial need, the last meeting of the senior class was, to say the least, disappointing. Not only does it seem that the two classes—junior and senior—cannot reach any definite agreement as to how the dance will be financed or as to what orchestra will be engaged, but the adoption by the latter class of the plan of going in debt $150 on uncollected accounts indicates that the seniors not only wish to have an expensive orchestra, but wish to have one that costs more than they can pay.

The senior class has cash on hand to the amount of $305.07. Yet its share of the joint-class dance is over twice that amount. And to make up the deficit it has proposed that the class borrow $150 on uncollected accounts, levy fifty cents on each member, and sell two hundred bids to supply the remaining amount needed. What with borrowing, assessing, and converting the dance into a half script, half class affair, the seniors are about to pay a dear price for Bert Lown and his so-called Biltmore orchestra.

What is more startling is the absolute lack of agreement between the two classes. Whereas the juniors voted Monday night against the plan now adopted by the seniors and for a cheaper orchestra, the seniors have flown in the face of this sentiment and adopted the reverse procedure.

We hope for the sake of their dances that the two classes will be able to come to an agreement that is both sane and financially irreproachable. —A.T.D.

The Portrait

Of a Tragedy

No one who saw the moving picture "Cavalcade" could have escaped being impressed by the picture's powerful argument against war. There have been many pictures that have portrayed with far more detail the actual horrors, but none have so completely brought out the chief tragedy of war—its utter futility.

We see thousands of troops pouring year after year by a crucifix and the ruins of a cathedral, a symbolic but terrible challenge to the teachings mankind professes and violates so universally. We see women singing men into uniform and stirring them up to die so that other women, wives and mothers, can mourn them, irony of the bitterest sort. The pathetic efforts of blind men to learn basket weaving, their occupation for the remainder of their lives, demonstrates the reward of heroism and bravery so soon forgotten.

And we see the reactions to the four-year struggle, the degeneration of moral fibre, the desire for a good time and sensual pleasure, engendered by the terrible cheapening of life and ideals. The turning aside from God, the empty churches and the growth of every manner of "ism" and discontent are here for us to see, an accurate picture of the times from which we suffer yet.

But most thought-compelling of all are the scenes of the military cemeteries, the little stone crosses in unending rows that mark the graves of ten million dead. Germans, French, English, and Americans, cut off in the prime of their usefulness while over their mouldering corpses militarists proclaim the virtues of some new poisonous gas or the killing power of a new gun. And then we see the broken homes, parents without their sons, girls without their beaus, we see examples, but they are examples of millions upon millions, a wave of human misery that cannot be expressed in words.

The horror of war has been recited both long and vigorously but in the words of the Chinese proverb "a picture is worth a thousand words" and a picture such as "Cavalcade" surpasses in eloquence and convincingness the sum total of a thousand orations and a thousand essays—and reaches a thousand times as many people. —J.F.A.

Roosevelt's Initiative

To the question, "Has Congress abdicated?" Walter Lippmann replies negatively. Criticism has been directed at Congress for allowing President Roosevelt to rush through measures without sufficient debate and without fully defining the purposes for which the legislation is intended.

The only piece of legislation which Congress has passed without full knowledge of the problems and consequences involved was the banking bill, says Lippmann. Beer, unemployment and farm relief, and inflation are old topics for Congressional discussion. In a crisis like the present one, Lippmann continues, it is necessary that considerable discretionary powers be given to the administration to coordinate and fit legislation to an uncertain situation. Furthermore, definite bills would have required endless months to reach final enactment.

As Lippmann says, this criticism of Congress and the administration "arises from a sound democratic instinct, which is, and always should be, suspicious of centralized power." But, he rightly concludes, "in the use of temporary powers in an emergency there is nothing of a dictatorship."

Rather, for the first time since Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson the nation has a leader who can really lead: lead Congress, lead the nation as a whole. President Roosevelt knows, from the experience of the past, that if Congress is left to its own resources its members will procrastinate and squabble merrily among themselves while the nation goes to hell.

It is one of the faults of the American governmental system of checks and balances that the legislature is provided with no intelligently directed leadership and that the legislative and executive branches of the government fail to coordinate their functions properly. The nation has shown visible signs of encouragement because it has a leader with courage to rectify this fault with the mere strength of his own character as a leader. —E.C.D.

"Hard times are the hot houses in which progress grows," says Dr. George Barton Cutten, president of Colgate University. "This forced growth is not pleasant, but it is valuable. Mankind has always had to be kicked upstairs. He is naturally lazy. You cannot coax him, you must drive him." —(N.S.F.A.).

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

To the Editor,

DAILY TAR HEEL:

Recently, at N. C. C. W., the co-ed group which numbers less than 150 students organized a Y. M. C. A. which once a month meets jointly with the Y. W. C. A. This item, together with the fact that in the past interest in 'Y' work has been evidenced by a few co-eds on the campus, leads one to wonder if a Y. W. C. A. would be welcomed here or if such an organization is needed at the present time.

I believe an attempt was made to supply such a need, if indeed it existed, last year, only to fail. Perhaps a more practical idea might be worked out along the lines of the organization at Greensboro. Any interested co-ed or co-eds might meet with the Junior-Senior cabinet of the Y. M. C. A. If the Junior-Senior cabinet has ever extended such an invitation the fact has escaped my attention. Perhaps it has failed in this respect. If such an order of things found favor with all parties it might eventually lead to a regularly organized Y. W. C. A.

However, there is a vast amount of drift wood among the various extra-curricular organizations on the campus at present and any addition to the supply on hand, would be only so much more flotsom. If the Y. M. C. A. on this campus is failing in this respect let someone explain why an attempt has not been made to offer the women attending the University an opportunity for such an expression. On the other hand, I do not believe the campus should have a Y. W. C. A. whether the co-eds want it or not. If there are any women in this University who are not too busy sipping dopes at Pritchard-Lloyd to be interested in a Y. W. C. A. let them make themselves known. R. L. B.

Delegates will be received in the lobby of Graham Memorial all this morning and the congress will be officially opened with a luncheon at 1:00 o'clock, when President Graham will make the welcoming address to the delegates. In the afternoon, there will be a plenary session at which the history of the N. C. F. S. will be presented by Haywood Weeks. Albert Coates will present his institute of government at 3:00 o'clock and the group will attend the Carolina-Virginia baseball classic at 4:00 o'clock.

The dinner at 6:30 with Carl Goerch, newspaperman and radio columnist, speaking, will be followed by a discussion of college athletics.

Although only the official representatives will have a vote on any measures proposed, anyone interested in the discussions may attend them.

How to have a sunny personality

Isn't it a fact that your college friends who are happy and cheerful are those who enjoy good health?

Poor health is mirrored in your manner to other people. Too often, lack of personality can be traced to common constipation. It may sap your vitality and enthusiasm.

Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. This delicious cereal promotes regular elimination. ALL-BRAN supplies "bulk," vitamin B and iron. Ask that it be served at your fraternity house or campus restaurant.

The most popular ready-to-eat cereals served in the dining-rooms of American colleges, eating clubs and fraternities are made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. They include Kellogg's Corn Flakes, PEP Bran Flakes, Rice Krispies, Wheat Krunchies, and Kellogg's WHOLE WHEAT Biscuits. Also Kaffee Hag Coffee—real coffee that lets you sleep.

Carolina Meets Virginia Today In First Game Of Classic Series

Andrews to Hurl for Tar Heels;
Rogers, Port-sider, Probable
Starter for Cavaliers.

GAME CONSIDERED TOSS-UP

Two Teams Will Journey to Greensboro Tomorrow for Second Contest.

Carolina's Tar Heels hook up with the Cavaliers from Virginia this afternoon on Emerson field at 4:00 o'clock in the first of a two-game series. The second game will be played tomorrow in Greensboro in the Memorial stadium.

Coach Hearn announced yesterday that he intended to start Nate Andrews on the mound today. Virginia's young left-hander, Rogers, will probably step to the mound first for the Cavaliers, although Coach Tebell has five pitchers along with him on the trip.

Co-captain Buck Poss will take his position behind the bat of the Tar Heels, while McCaskill will probably catch Andrews' pitching.

Carolina's alternate winning and losing makes it hard to place a safe bet on either team, but this annual classic between the two old universities in the south is one of the big sport events of the year.

The two teams will journey to Greensboro tomorrow for the second game of the series, meeting in Memorial stadium.

SIGMA CHI LOSES TO KAPPA ALPHA FOR FIRST LOSS

Best House Wins From New Dorms; S. A. E. Defeats
Sigma Nu Outfit.

Two teams were dropped yesterday from the list of undefeated in intramural competition. The Sigma Chi nine, until yesterday unscathed, dropped a game to the K.A.'s by a one-sided score of 12-1, while in the tennis contests, Ruffin took a victory from the hitherto undefeated Old West team.

The victorious K.A. team made nine of their runs in one inning, the fourth, two in the first and one in the sixth. Sigma Chi's one run came in the second. For the winners, Shriver, Skinner, Gossett, and Morgan made three hits each, and Everett, their team-mate got four hits. Wood and Entwistle of the Sigma Chi team were outstanding.

Best House kept its record clean by defeating New Dorms 18-7. Bryan, Leonard and Connelly each scored three runs for the victors. Thompson and Barron starred for the New Dorms.

S.A.E. Wins

In the closest battle of the evening, S. A. E. downed Sigma Nu 4-3. The game was one of the most exciting of the series to date, being featured by three double plays by the S. A. E. team and good work by all the members of both teams. Connor, Harris, Pollock, and A. Cope each scored runs for the winners, Allen lead his team in hits.

Lewis Dormitory won over Everett by a score of 7-2. The victors scored one run in the first, four runs in the second, and two in the third, but from then on were held scoreless by the Everett team, which was able to score only once itself. Unger and Piffer were outstanding for the winners, while Stun and Kalb showed up well for the losers.

S. P. E. and Betas Win

In Shape to Meet Nittany Lions Tomorrow.

Coach Bob Fetzer announced last night the final list of the Carolina track team which left yesterday evening at 6:30 o'clock for Penn State College. The list includes about 23 men besides Coach Bob Fetzer and Trainer "Chuck" Quinlan.

The Tar Heels were packed into a bus which carried them to Durham where the squad left via rail for their northern goal.

The Nittany Lions were downed last Saturday in a dual meet with the West Point cadets, the embryo army officers besting the Pennsylvanians 74-52. On paper, which does not amount to much in a close dual meet, the Tar Heels may be conceded a slight edge over the Penn State club.

TAR BABIES BEAT DAVIDSON FROSH IN BIG FIVE TILT

Womble Scores Twice With Two Times at Bat; Irwin Makes Eight Put-outs.

Scoring all their runs in the first three innings, Carolina's freshman nine downed the first year team from Davidson 7 to 6. It was the second win in two days for the Tar Babies and their second win in three Big Five starts.

Glasgow started on the mound for the Tar Babies and was going good until the eighth inning when the Kittens got four runs. McKeithan twirled the last frame for Carolina and retired the only three men that faced him, two of them by strike-outs. Jenkins pitched the whole game for Davidson and held Carolina to two hits after the third inning. Davidson out-hit the Tar Babies, ten to eight.

The Tar Babies scored once in the first and three times in each of the second and third frames. Womble, first man up for Carolina tripled to deep right and came home on Montgomery's bunt. Three runs crossed the plate in the second inning, after two were down, on Marcom's walk and singles by Glasgow, and Montgomery. Womble also got a stolen base.

The final three Carolina runs in the third inning were made on two hits and two errors. Irwin got safe on an error, stole second, and come home on Moore's one base blow. Bullock then hit a fast single to right field which got by the fielder, both Moore and Bullock circling the bags for scores.

CAROLINA NETMEN DEFEAT YALE

Displaying their best form of the current Northern trip, the Tar Heel racquetters yesterday collected their 60th consecutive win in handing the strong Yale team its first defeat of the year, 6-2.

Captain Wilmer Hines easily disposed of Moorehead, 6-3, 6-3; Wright defeated Hastings, 6-2, 6-2; Harris beat Miles, 3-6, 9-7, 6-4; Shuford downed Bassford, 8-6, 7-9, 6-4; Willis lost to Munday, 6-1, 3-6, 6-3; and Levitan conquered Cobb, 3-6, 7-5, 6-3. Only two doubles matches were played, Hines and Levitan losing to Cobb and Hastings, 6-4, 6-3, while Morgan and Shuford defeated Munday and Hamilton, 6-3, 3-6, 6-3.

The courts were in excellent condition, but the players were bothered by a strong wind. A fair-sized crowd attended the match. The Bassford-Shuford match lasted more than two hours. Harris, in winning from Miles, played a sensational game and pulled out an excellent win. Coach J. F. Kenfield reported that the Yale team was the strongest met to date.

Bright Tobacco is another reason why Chesterfields are Milder
and Taste Better

MELLOWNESS is a quality you can't get overnight. It has to begin in the young tobacco plants. And that's one reason why we use just the right amount of "bright" tobacco from old Virginia, the Carolinas and Georgia. Because it's full of Southern sunshine . . . with a fine, light color that "smiles right back at you."

We age this leaf for two years, and then blend and cross-blend it with the other kinds of Domestic and Turkish tobaccos in Chesterfield so you get a cigarette that's milder and tastes better.

We believe you will thoroughly enjoy Chesterfields!

This is a typical leaf of prime "Bright" tobacco . . . the kind we use in the Chesterfield blend.

There are four absolutely different types of tobaccos in Chesterfield Cigarettes. One of them is Bright Tobacco.

PRESS RELEASES BOOK BY PRESTON

Reminiscences Of Famed South Carolinian Published In University Press Volume.

The University of North Carolina Press has just released a new book, The Reminiscences of William C. Preston, edited by Dr. Minnie Clare Yarborough, assistant professor of English in Hunter College of the city of New York.

"Though fragmentary," declares Dr. Yarborough, "Preston's Reminiscences are entertaining and informing. Historically they are of rare value, throwing interesting side-lights upon many phases of early nineteenth-century life and characterizing important political and literary figures of the period." Wealthy, well-born and educated, Preston was on intimate terms with many of his illustrious contemporaries at home and abroad. He studied in Edinburgh, visited Abbotsford as a guest of Scott, and upon returning to America, was admitted to the bar and experienced subsequent legal triumphs. Later he filled a life of political activity as an ardent Nullifier in South Carolina, his adopted state, serving in the United States senate and finally retiring from political office three years later to accept the presidency of his Alma Mater.

Preston had no intention of publishing his Reminiscences. They were written near the end of his life for his namesake, Preston Rion, and remained in the possession of the Rion family from 1860 until the beginning of the present century, when they were acquired by the University of South Carolina.

GREENSBORO TO REVIVE FAMOUS GAME WEEK-END

Gate City Plans Entertainment for Carolina Students Attending Contest Tomorrow.

(Special to the DAILY TAR HEEL.)
Greensboro, May 4—Greensboro this week-end will re-dedicate itself to the old "Carolina-Virginia week-end," and plans have been completed to furnish the finest entertainment ever afforded along with the annual baseball game here.

Tomorrow night the visitors' dance, welcoming visitors here, will be staged at the Wintergarden, new dance floor, with Kay Kyser and his orchestra furnishing music, and Saturday night, Kay will play for the annual Carolina-Virginia ball at the same place.

The dances are sponsored by the Forty and Eight of the American Legion of which George A. Younce, former Carolina baseball star, is chef de gare. Younce, or "JoJo," as he was known at the University, received his first baseball letter under Bunn Hearn and played at Carolina three years.

Juniors Agree To Cooperate In Dance

night's heated session of the junior class were found to be illegal as the meeting was conducted by Clyde Boyles, whose term of office expired several weeks ago. Therefore the motion passed at that time stating that the juniors would not pay more than $300 as their part in the orchestral agreement was not considered last night.

Cate in his explanation of the situation told the juniors that under no circumstances would the third-year group be burdened with any loss sustained by the seniors. The motion passed later, regarding the extra bid sales, however, further assured both classes that no such debt would occur.

Negro Morality Play Strives To Intensify Meaning of Spirituals

Students Taking Parts in Production Not Chosen Simply for Ability to Perform, But Because of Sincerity of Purpose; Attempt to Keep Alive Old Traditions.

The purpose of Pearly Gates, Negro morality play which comes to the University May 9, is to intensify the meaning of the Negro spiritual through song and pantomime and to outline more clearly the religious beliefs and simple philosophies of the people who originated the songs. The thirty or more songs used in the play are selected and arranged especially for this work, and have been chosen according to their types of variety.

The students who appear as characters and singers are chosen not simply according to their ability to perform, but rather because of the sincerity of their purpose. While they are seeking knowledge, and endeavoring to master the intricate problems of present-day education, they also are interested in keeping alive the finer things shown in the lives of their forefathers. In doing this the students realize that their religious beliefs and philosophies of life, simple though they might have been, serve as foundations upon which superstructures of music, art, and religion might be erected.

Songs Outburst of Fervor
The spiritual had its beginning in the heart of the Negro as he labored in the fields of the south. These songs are outbursts of religious fervor and, in many cases, are influenced by conditions which surround the people in whose minds they were born.

The Negro spirituals express words and music not found in a sympathy of feeling between many compositions of learned musicians. In many songs that we see today, the tune gives one idea and the words another. In the spiritual the words spoken convey a certain idea and the tune sung or played gives a similar feeling. For instance, the originators of these songs would never have taken words such as "Nobody Knows De Trouble I See" and placed them in a happy tune like "Every Time I Feel the Spirit." In every instance words and music harmonize and herein lies a thread of real artistry.

Different Interpretations
Some of these songs are sad and some are happy. This is true because of the difference in living conditions of the people who originated them. In different sections there are different interpretations, different words and slightly varying melodies of songs that were originally the same. This is true because at first the songs were not written down, but carried from place to place in the minds of the Negroes, and very frequently a new condition caused a slight change of the song.

These songs are deeply religious and should not be sung in such a way as to cause laughter or ridicule. They can be sung artistically and according to all modern rules of vocalization and choral expression without being robbed of their real simple meaning. They show the character of the people in whose hearts they were born, and express their firm belief in the God of all mankind.

STATE THEATRES USE NEW NAME

The name of the Publix-Kinney theatres operating in North Carolina was recently changed to North Carolina Theatres, Incorporated. This organization includes the Carolina theatre in Chapel Hill.

The change of name in no way affects the operation of the theatres which will continue along the same lines as before. The Carolina theatre here, a unit of the organization, was established and began operation in 1927. Since it first opened it has received favorable local comment on the manner it has served its public and its contribution to the college community.

Its service to the community is recognized as being of the highest type in any college town. Through a program of entertainment and donations to different University activities it has been felt as a particularly helpful agency in the community.

Another service often commented upon is the fact that current attractions are run here as soon as in any theatre in the state at a very reasonable price.

The visitors counted their first two in the second and the other four in the eighth. In the second Stewart doubled and stopped at third on Partridge's single. Partridge went to second on the pitch, and both runners scored when Glasgow threw to centerfield trying to nip the runner on second.

The eighth inning runs came as a result of Stewart's walk, singles by Partridge, Combie, and McFadyen, and an error by Denti, the Tar Baby first sacker.

Womble was the big star at bat for Carolina. Womble, still a little weak from a recent illness, played in only two innings but in that time he went to bat twice, hit a triple and a single, and scored twice. Bullock was the only other Tar Baby to collect two hits. Partridge got three out of five while Moore and Combie each got two hits to lead Davidson at bat.

Tommy Irwin was again the Carolina star in the field. The speedy shortstop came close to some kind of record in getting eight put-outs at short. Burns, first baseman, looked best on the kitten defense.

NATIONAL PRESS ACCLAIMS BOOK PUBLISHED HERE

Volume on Lynchings in South Receives Favorable Comment in Principal Papers.

Dr. Arthur F. Raper's book, The Tragedy of Lynching, recently published by the University press, is receiving nationwide attention. Dr. Raper is a former student of the University.

Reading from the Christian Advocate, "We have possible in this volume the most thorough case study of lynching and lynchings that has been published." The New Republic states that the book "comes from one who is qualified to speak plainly. It is of the highest significance that this is a report written by a Southerner, based on the work of Southern investigators, under the auspices of a Southern organization, and published by the press of a Southern university." The New York Herald-Tribune remarks: "The book is admirably titled. It is neither an attack nor a defence, but a careful scientific examination of a subject which at bottom is genuinely tragic, in the old Greek sense. Written by a Southerner and published in the South, it is a fine monument to the South's own determination to meet its problem; it is beyond challenge from Southerners on the score of Northern prejudice, and it is indispensable to Northerners who wish to understand, rather than only to condemn, the bitter forces which have been revealed in the Scottsboro case."

President Frank Graham Opens Congress Of Student Federation

Yesterday Marked Fourth Annual Meeting of North Carolina Campus Leaders.

OVER FIFTY DELEGATES

Albert Coates Presents Constructive Institute of Government at Plenary Session.

President Frank Porter Graham opened the fourth annual congress of the North Carolina Federation of Students yesterday with a welcoming speech following the luncheon at 1:00 o'clock.

Dr. Graham's talk was an interesting short summary of the growth of student government at Carolina. In his estimation student government has not only done much to advance education but will continue to have powerful influence on national affairs. He outlined four steps from which evolved the present student government system at Carolina. First, he said, was the dictatorial all-powerful faculty rule, which besides taking too much of the faculty's time, was objected to by the students.

Graham Traces Movement
Student movements led by the powerful literary societies of the late nineteenth century was the next step in the emancipation of students. Soon, however the classes took this power from the literary societies and there evolved from the government by the four classes the

GOERCH RELATES EXPERIENCES TO STUDENT GROUP

Newspaper Editor and Radio Columnist Amuses Delegates To Student Congress.

Mr. Carl Goerch, veteran newsman and radio columnist, speaking at the dinner which closed the first day's activities of the Fourth Congress of the N. C. F. S., amused the entire assemblage by a constant and interesting series of anecdotes which he had experienced during his days as a newspaper man.

Mr. Goerch broadcasts from Raleigh and finishing his broadcast last night at 6:30, immediately started for Chapel Hill to keep his engagement at 7:00 o'clock in the banquet room of Graham Memorial.

Launching immediately into some of his amusing experience, Goerch inserted between his stories, many interesting sidelights on the legislature in Raleigh.

Saying that Representative Tam Bowie was the "biggest scrapper I have ever seen in my life," he told of the time when Bowie was a freshman at Carolina. Hazing was then prevalent on the campus and when Bowie refused to admit a group of hazing sophomores into his room, they broke the door down. Seated in a chair holding a cocked pistol was Tam Bowie. After having a few shots fired at them the sophomores retired rather hastily and did not molest Bowie again; even when he paraded with a big sign stating that he would be at home any night if the sophomores wished to drop around to see him.

O'Neil, Brown, Singer Taken by Beta Gamma Sigma; O'Neil Is Chosen President.

Three members of the junior class were initiated last night into North Carolina Alpha chapter of Beta Gamma Sigma, national honorary commerce fraternity. They were: John O'Neil, Melvin J. Brown, and Bernard E. Singer.

By having the highest scholastic standing among members of the group, O'Neil automatically becomes president for next year.

The 36th chapter of Beta Gamma Sigma, Alpha of North Carolina was installed at the University February 20 of this year, at which time seventeen were taken into the group. Eight were members of the faculty, and nine were students.

The charter for the University chapter was granted following a petition by a small group of faculty members and students. The national organization has units in all but ten of the schools belonging to the American Association of Collegiate Schools of Business.

The first chapter of Beta Gamma Sigma was founded in May, 1907, at the University of Wisconsin, but national growth of the organization did not get well under way until 1913 when the Alpha of Illinois was installed.

WORKS GIVEN TO LOCAL LIBRARY

Legislature Makes Contribution Of Books Printed by State For Extension Library.

The Legislature has voted to furnish the University of North Carolina library with 25 copies of every publication issued by the state government.

These documents are to be used for exchange purposes with libraries and governmental agencies throughout the country, and especially of the other southern states. The University library has been designated by the Social Science Research Council and the American Library Association as the official center for the entire southeast for federal, state, and municipal documents. Its collection of federal and North Carolina government publications is extensive, and a large number of southern state documents has been built up in recent years.

The bill passed by the legislature will enable the library to greatly extend this work, adding the public documents of

GRUMMAN HEADS GROUP TO ASSIST STATE TEACHERS

Plan Advanced to Use Unemployed Teachers in War on Illiteracy in North Carolina.

Attending a meeting of the state commission on adult illiteracy in Raleigh Thursday, Russell M. Grumman of the extension division, secretary of the commission, was appointed chairman of a committee for the relief of unemployed teachers.

Through efforts of the commission, Grumman announces, arrangements have been completed with Dr. Fred Morrison, of the Governor's relief office, whereby federal relief funds will be used to enable unemployed teachers of the state to teach night schools for adult illiterates.

Forty-five such schools are being conducted and have reported an enrollment to date of 836 adult pupils. This number does not include some 2,020 night school pupils enrolled in schools which are promoted on a voluntary basis by woman's clubs and other civic organizations.

Grumman was appointed chairman of a committee to make plans to conduct institutes for teachers and other night school workers at summer schools of the state this summer. Directors of eight summer schools have already promised cooperation in conducting such institutes.

Man Of Steele Draws Long Bow In Heap Wicked Tecumseh Style

University Brave Fashions Implements of Ancient Warfare for Dear Shooters of Spencer and Other Reservations, and Rings Bull's Eye at Each Left-Handed Squint.

A heap big brave is practicing his esoteric art right here on the campus. Minus war paint, feathers, and blanket, Alfred Ellington, University junior from Madison, is slowly Indianizing Steele dorm where early and late he devotes himself to the extraordinary hobby of making bows and arrows.

No squaw-man is Ellington. He is an excellent shot, possessed of numerous medals won in archery tournaments. Down back of the unwarlike Spencer hall there is a target field on which he may be seen most any fine afternoon letting fly his darts and generally hitting the bull's-eye.

Just Like That!

Brave Ellington happened to become interested in archery in a most unromantic fashion—he read about the science—where he doesn't remember—and decided that the making of bows and arrows was his avocation. From that time on, everything connected with the string and reed occupation has become his major spare-time diversion.

In the summer he teaches archery to the pale-face squaws at camp near Asheville. All year long he fills many orders in his tepee for bows and arrows for other devotees of the sport.

It is probably not a matter of general information that the arrows are much harder to make than the bows. In an arrow, the important thing is flexibility. The arrow has a certain curve to iron out before it can travel in direct flight to the target, owing to the fact that it is fired around the bow, and must have enough flexibil-

MISS BERNHARDT TO GIVE PROGRAM HERE NEXT WEEK

Celebrated Contralto Will Appear in Next Student Entertainment Attraction May 10.

Louise Bernhardt, nationally celebrated contralto who will sing here May 10 in Memorial hall, has received consistently favorable press notices during three coast to coast tours, in which she appeared in some eighty concerts. Miss Bernhardt is presented as the next student entertainment attraction.

Miss Bernhardt, originally of Connecticut, was first prize winner of the National Federation of Music Clubs contest at San Francisco, in 1931. The previous year she was winner of the Walter W. Naumberg musical foundation prize, and for three seasons before, she had appeared with the American Opera company. Before presenting her concert tours of the last two years, Miss Bernhardt was a member of the Chicago Civic Opera company for a season.

Recitals by Miss Bernhardt have been enthusiastically praised by the New York Times and Herald Tribune, the Boston Evening Transcript, the Chicago American, Daily Tribune and Evening Post.

Tickets for the program here Wednesday night, other than student entertainment tickets, have been reduced from $1.00 to $.50.

Tar Heel Netmen Crash To Victory Over Harvard

BLAKE HAS LEG BROKEN WHEN RUN OVER BY CAR

Campus Policeman J. D. Blake was run over by an automobile about 10:30 last night and sustained a broken leg. He was taken to the University infirmary. At the time of going to press, it was impossible to learn if any other injuries were suffered, or to obtain details as to the identity of the driver of the car striking Mr. Blake.

ORGANISTS WILL GATHER MONDAY

Lawrence Apgar of Duke University to Play on Program; Group Meets in Hill Hall.

The North Carolina chapter of the American guild of organists will convene here Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock in Hill Music hall. Professor Nelson O. Kennedy, head of the department of organ at the University, will preside as dean of the chapter.

Organists from all over the state are expected to attend the meeting, which will feature Lawrence Clarke Apgar in recital at 8:30 o'clock that evening. A graduate of Yale University and the Curtis Institute of Music, Apgar is carillonneur and organist at Duke University.

Apgar has chosen for this recital a program of great breadth in the field of organ literature, the playing of which will well utilize and portray the flexibility and magnitude of the organ in Hill Music hall. The invitation extended Apgar by the guild to play the annual concert is in the form of a welcome to this state. He assumed duties at the Durham school in September, 1932.

The organ in Hill hall is one of the finest in the south and has been played upon by leading organists not only in the state but in the nation. The organ was dedicated in November, 1930.

SPANN TO SHOW WAR PLAY AGAIN

German Production Uses Three Languages in Portraying Adventures of War Ace.

The German department of the University has announced that it will give another presentation of Der Flieger, the famous German war play, which had its American premiere at the Playmakers theatre last month. The new performance will take place one night only, Monday, May 15 at 8:30 o'clock in the Playmakers theatre.

The play is unusual in that three languages, German, English and French, are used. The fact that one does not understand German offers no obstacle whatever in understanding the action of the play. Much English will be spoken throughout the production, and the entire play is explained on the program in English.

Spann Directs

Dr. Meno Spann of the German department is directing the play and has adapted it to the Playmaker stage. Dr. Spann also plays the leading role. He Sixty-First Consecutive Win Gives Carolina Potential National Title.

ONE REMAINING CONTEST

Carolina's tennis team romped to victory over Harvard yesterday by a score of 7-2. This practically clinches the national team championship for Coach Kenfield's boys, barring upsets in the few remaining matches this year. Yale University was undefeated until the match with the Tar Heels. Yale, N. Y. U., and Harvard were considered representative of the best teams in the country. This will be the third straight victory of the Tar Heel netmen in national competition in three years for the team titles.

Hines Wins No. 1 Match

In individual competition Hines was victorious over Davenport 8-6, 6-4; Wright over Englis 6-2, 6-4; Harris over Hartford 6-3, 12-10; Shuford over Arensburg 6-2, 6-2; Morgan over Jay 6-1, 6-4; Levitan lost to Jones 8-6, 3-6, 6-4; Hines and Wright over Davenport and Jay 6-4, 7-5; Morgan and Shuford beat Arensburg and Englis 6-2, 0-6, 6-4; Harris and Willis lost to Ingalls and Whitehead 6-2, 6-1.

The weather at the matches was excellent for the tennis players and courts were reported as perfect.

SPRING SCHEDULE CONTINUES TODAY IN DANCE SERIES

Four Events Will Conclude Week-end Social Program on University Campus.

Three dances here last night continued the spring social schedule at the University, the affairs being staged by Phi Kappa Sigma and Kappa Alpha, Tau Epsilon Phi, and the Woman's association.

Four more dances today will conclude the week-end program. The functions will be given by Phi Kappa Sigma and Kappa Alpha, Tau Epsilon Phi, the Di senate and the Philanthropic assembly, and the Order of the Grail.

Leftwich Plays at Inn

Phi Kappa Sigma and Kappa Alpha will entertain guests at their house parties at a tea dance at the Carolina Inn this afternoon, with Jelly Leftwich playing.

Girls at the Tau Epsilon Phi house party, being conducted in connection with the fraternity's dances, will attend a dance at the Carolina Inn tonight. Archie Davis and his orchestra will play at the affair.

Davis for Di and Phi

The Di senate and the Phi assembly will give their annual entertainment as a tea dance this afternoon in Bynum gym from 6:30 to 9:00 o'clock, with Archie Davis' orchestra furnishing music.

The Order of the Grail will stage its last dance of the year tonight between the hours of 9:00 and 12:00 o'clock in the gymnasium, at which the new members of the organization will be honored. Jelly Leftwich and his orchestra will play.

Off to the Dances

Those staunch opponents of the excessive expenditures involved in the coming Junior-Senior dances may have lost the battle Thursday night when the junior class voted to follow the seniors in upholding the proposed expenditures, but it is no less a tribute to them to say that they won the war.

The class unanimously adopted a plan suggested in an editorial in THE DAILY TAR HEEL yesterday calling for a budget committee and requiring that no contract could be entered into without the ratification of the class. The expenditures of the class for next year were thereby put under close observation and the rights of the individual members of the class were safeguarded.

If the other classes in the University would adopt the same formula in regard to class expenditures that the rising senior class has done, situations as the present one will never arise again. Besides this, each individual in the various classes can feel certain that his interests will have to be consulted before any step involving the class' money can be taken.

The existing conditions has been cleared up now and the dances are a certainty, even though they are Charity Balls and not Junior-Senior dances. Those that won their point can be happy, and those that lost can also rejoice because they were instrumental in accomplishing the most outstanding step forward that any class has taken here in the last four years.

Attention Delegates

We are host to the North Carolina Student Federation. The N. C. S. F. is here to discuss and exchange ideas on student problems and student government. As long as the Federation continues to have an aggressive attitude toward problems it will be of some value.

Discussion of such student problems as the honor system, student discipline, student publications, and college athletics has been arranged by the delegates. Doubtless there are a world of ideas to be exchanged and used on each of these questions. The convention can not help being interesting to anyone concerned with the administration of student government.

With every fifth family in the state dependent on federal aid, with the Negro showing his ability to take up the responsibility of citizenship and demanding the right to participate in democratic government, with increasing delinquency and crime in the state, with the absolute breakdown of our method of distribution of income and wealth, and with the inadequacy of our educational system, the Federation certainly has a clear call for leaders to fight on our new social frontier. Never has the call for leaders been louder, and never has the answer been weaker. The Federation has a challenge before it. Our hope is that the meeting will not turn out to be just another series of conventions that are charged to the various student bodies throughout the state.

The problems of the state should be paramount to the students. The Federation would be adding little to the social wealth of the state in limiting its convention to small talk and visiting. It is our hope that the N. C. S. F. will make a place for itself in the state by answering the call for leaders and social thinkers.—B.C.P.

Determination Wins Again

It is with almost a sigh of welcome that one sees that President Roosevelt has pledged the administration to an immediate program for raising the level of wages in the country. He has long recognized the fact that during the last few years wages have been much lower than the general price level justified. Now that a definite upswing in commodity quotations is under way, an even greater need for higher wages is evident. Wage-levels tend always to lag somewhat behind prices; and with the inflationist legislation going into effect shortly, an even greater lag will be exhibited unless something drastic is done.

In order to compensate for the rise in prices, the President has begun his activities in behalf of higher wages by a forceful speech before the United States Chamber of Commerce. In this speech he made the following statements: "It is essential, as a matter of national justice, that the wage scale should be brought back to meet the cost of living and that this process should begin now and not later"; also, "I, therefore, ask you (the members and representatives of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce) who represent in all probability the majority of the employers of the nation, to refrain from further reductions in the wages of your employes, and I ask you also to increase your wage scales in conformity with and simultaneous with the rise of the level of commodity prices in so far as this lies within your power."

Despite the straightforward and vigorous manner in which this speech was couched, it hardly seems probable that the members present were very much moved by the President's entreaties. And it seems likely that Mr. Roosevelt realizes this. Judging by the decisively purposeful manner in which the President has thrust aside opposition to date, and likewise the way in which he has stressed the extreme necessity of mitigating poverty and unemployment, it is highly possible that his words before the leaders of our country's business organizations was in the nature of a mild threat. If "business" does not function to serve the nation to its maximum capacity, it seems evident that Mr. Roosevelt will see to it that the job is done anyway.—V.J.L.

Another Depression Lesson

The question has been raised lately, and rightly so, as to whether or not there are too many people going to college. In this country, there are many, so called "colleges" handing out education in bushel baskets to anyone with sufficient money, or borrowing power, to pay a moderate sum for it. A few schools are still most difficult to enter, and the candidate for admission to these universities must possess a high school record of the highest calibre to entertain any hope of admission. But, sad to say, those which may be classed in this group are few, and decreasing in number every year. There are some schools which are admitting vast groups of students on the barest qualifications, and it is against these schools that most of the criticism is directed.

It has been a custom from time immemorial for the son of a wealthy family to attend a university, and to pursue his education as far as it was possible, or expedient. Too, worthy men, with a desire for learning and a great deal of stamina and intelligence, have gone through college on what they have made themselves. This is entirely different from the practice that became common during the boom years after the war, and is still continued today largely through the force of habit. Under the new idea, that the only way to happiness was through a college education, men sent their sons to college whether or not they were fitted for the work, and even though they showed no special aptitude for anything other than carpentry or bricklaying. The Joneses had a son at Dartmouth, so Willie had to go to Princeton. Even though his ruling passion was mechanics; he became a lawyer.

Perhaps the time will come again, when proud parents will realize that life is possible without a college education, and will give the university back to him who wants it, and deserves it, and furthermore, has the intelligence to appreciate it when it has been given to him. Our present depression has done much to teach that lesson, and to put those who are made to be the servants where it is appropriate for them to remain, instead of allowing them to adorn the campuses of our leading universities.—W.H.W.

Playing the Ponies O.K.—In McDowell

The senate's determination to pass the Neal bill has resulted in giving McDowell county the legal right to become a North Carolina Tia Juana. But although the measure legalizes betting on the races, it stipulates that such betting shall be conducted on the pari mutuel system, which means, for the benefit of those who are not race-track touts, that the placing of bets will be by machines rather than by checkered bookies.

At first sight, it would appear that the senate, in refusing to reconsider the measure in spite of protests from McDowell residents, has passed a law directly in opposition to the will of those whom it will affect. But if, as telegrams from its opponents indicate, over seventy-five per cent of the people in that county are against legalized gambling, there is no harm done since the bill cannot take effect unless a majority of the voters in the county wish it.

The furor aroused in the senate by the good people of McDowell fades into insignificance beside the legislative freak which the Neal bill illustrates. Few of us who are not native born McDowellians care to what extent they raise live-stock there, and this very deplorable indifference would probably have caused us not to give the bill a second thought if its title were indicative of its contents. But Representative Neal's well-meant legislation turned out to be quite a misnomer, for it bears the innocent caption of "an act creating an agricultural and breeder association for the county of Mc-Dowell. . . . "You can't judge a book by its cover," says the adage; no more does it seem that we can judge a bill by its title. And that makes us wonder whether the solons know what legislation they are passing.—A.T.D.

Tomorrow's Literature

Literature of the future must teach people how to live happily, Joseph Wood Krutch, drama critic and biographer, told Iowans at Des Moines last week.

"Science has been a disappointment as a mode of life, because instead of enriching, it impoverished life," he asserted. "It deprived man of a sense of dignity and showed many things did not exist in nature we believed were there."

"Literature in the last twenty years has gone hand in hand with the laboratory. Literature must create values to take the place of those that have been displaced."

He voiced a prophecy about the function of literature that is to come: that its primary business will be to find new ways of looking at things and life.

Always, probably, the great aim of literature has been truth. Groping for it, the writers of past ages have been pulled far afield by trends of their times, by romantic or religious or political influences that dominated their periods.

Most recently came industrialism and science and machines. Around these modern literature has been shaped, either consciously or involuntarily. Expressive, yes, of a generation whose very existence depends on the efficiency of its machines, its science.

But not completely expressive—for in that elusive thing Mr. Krutch calls the soul of man linger traces of the ages gone and of responses never quite captured by the spirit of any age.

To revert to the past, to romanticism or religion or puritanism or Victorianism, for the recovery of the lost values Critic Krutch laments would be as futile as today's scientific criterion is inadequate.

Probably a true perspective of values will never be attained in literature. Inevitably it must be colored by the tone of its era, whether that era means romanticism or religion or humanism or technocracy. Possibly will come a truer blending of these as sensitiveness to literary honesty increases.

In the words of Mr. Krutch: "Maybe it's a mistake for literature to perfect the world; I don't know. But I'm quite simply hoping. . . ."—Daily Iowan.

Training in Leisure

The common practice in most colleges and universities is for students to start specializing at the beginning of the third year, in some cases earlier. Dr. John Huston Finley, former president of New York University says that a general tendency to specialize too soon in education is manifesting itself now. He argues that education should prepare the student for the right sort of leisure.

Doctor Finley points out that this aim of education is more important than ever with the present economic system resulting in an ever-increasing amount of leisure time.

One must agree with Doctor Finley's statement that specialization too soon makes life narrow. One should see and appreciate various fields and know the contributions and experiences of the race before specialization in any specific field is started.

Doctor Finley goes on to say that the student should not begin to specialize until after four years of study. Therein lies the point at which his arguments may most likely be attacked. Granted that his previous arguments are sound, the last point if carried out would increase the cost of education by approximately fifty per cent. It would likewise cut down the number of college graduates. Many students would find their school days of necessity at an end without having learned to do anything save spend their leisure time well.—University Daily Kansan.

Everybody's Pal: The Chiseler

That minor vice called chiseling is on the increase, as any college person will attest. The fact that almost everyone has less money now for personal expenditures evidently does not occur to offenders. They know they have little money, but believe they are exceptional in that respect. Selfish and self-pitying, they take the attitude that their friends and acquaintances might as well make it possible to have another pack of cigarettes or the evening cup of coffee and sandwich.

Boldly the chiselers ask a chance companion for the "loan" of a quarter or dime to pay for his restaurant check. The "lender" can hardly refuse because the request is so petty, and because it has been expressed as an accommodation that will be made up the next day. Yet both parties realize at the time what the true conditions of the transaction are. The victim may not be any better off financially than the chiseler, but his odd pride will keep him from asking for repayment of a 25 cent debt. The chiseler usually is careful to distribute his requests widely, so that he owes no one a sum large enough that he will be asked to pay it. His couching the chiseling act in the phrase of a loan protects him, too, from being accused as a leech. If anyone victimized makes the error of raising a fuss, he is immediately put in the wrong by the chiseler who promptly pays up, securing a lot of sympathy, an excellent basis of future chiseling success, as the injured party.

The chiseler who is an old hand at the art knows the wisdom of being host when his beneficence is not likely to prove expensive and yet be unusually appreciated. It is only the infrequent guest who realizes that subsequent financial aid to the chiseler-host more than makes up for the treat.

It is not odd, then, that the habitual chiseler has only a narrow circle of friends. College people are not so unaware of his impositions that they are willing to be played for suckers all the time. Even the campus "big shot" who expected others to pay for the privilege of being seen with him, soon comes to realize this. (Look at the fall "Prince Mike Romanoff" took!)

Not all our campus chiselers are financial ones. Less costly but equally obnoxious is the academic type: the student who expects special leniency because he has to work or because he is an athlete or a busy, altruistic "activities man." The press of outside duties entitles him, he is apt to point out, to consideration that will enable him to get as good a grade as his harder-working classmates.

Chiseling is not, of course, peculiar to the present poor era, but those who are plying their trade at it now are specially contemptible. They take an advantage of people at a time when men, conscious of the general economic situation, are more open-handed than in many cases they can afford to be.

Tar Heels And Cavaliers Play In Annual Tilt Today

Classic to Be Called at 3:00 O'clock in War Memorial Stadium at Greensboro.

DANCE FOLLOWS CONTEST

Andrews, Carolina; and Luck, Virginia; Probably to Oppose Each Other on Mound.

Carolina and Virginia are scheduled to meet this afternoon at 3:00 o'clock in their annual baseball classic at War Memorial stadium in Greensboro.

This will be the all-important game between these two ancient rivals as it is the only one that will be played this season. The two Universities were scheduled to meet three times on the diamond this year, but the first contest at Charlottesville and the second one on Emerson Field yesterday were both canceled, due to rain.

Led by the American Legion the citizens of Greensboro are planning on staging a big Carolina-Virginia day. As an added attraction to the ball game the annual Carolina-Virginia dance will be held in Winter Gardens, with Kay Kyser playing. The members of the two ball clubs and important Greensboro citizens will act as a receiving line to those attending the dance.

Nate Andrews, star sophomore, will probably be the choice of Coach Hearn to twirl for the Tar Heels as he was slated to start yesterday's battle. However, Joe Griffith, big ace who downed Wake Forest, will be ready to go and may get the call. Peck Luck, veteran slow ball hurler, is the likely Virginia pitching choice with Rogers, a southpaw, and Brewer being kept in reserve.

The Cavaliers have won their last four conference games in a row. Carolina won six straight conference battles before losing their first of the year to State last Tuesday by a 7-6 score.

Johnny Phipp's sore arm is much better and the star Tar Heel shortstop will be ready to go today. The probable Carolina line-up follows: Peacock, centerfield; Phipps, shortstop; Weathers, second base; McCaskill, catcher; Brandt, rightfield; Zaiser, left field; Captain Powell, third base; Dixon, first base; and Andrews, pitcher.

Virginia's likely line-up follows: Chase, second base; Drissell, centerfield; Rogers, rightfield; Poss, catcher; Lee, shortstop; Purvis, first base; C. Brewer, leftfield; Bozarth, third base; and Luck, pitcher.

WAKE FOREST LOSES TO W. AND L. BASEBALLERS

Washington and Lee shaded the Wake Forest nine, 3-2, Thursday afternoon in a thrilling game played in Lexington. This was the last home game for the Generals this season.

Prior to the licking at the hands of the Virginia aggregation, the Wake Forest baseball team had suffered defeat but once and that was at the hands of Carolina. Last week Joe Griffith, Coach Bunn Hearn's ace moundsman, out-pitched June Barnes, Demon-Deacon pitching ace, the Tar Heels winning 4-2.

GEHRINGER LAMS AS YANKEES WIN

Although the New York Yankees soundly bested the Detroit Tigers, 5-2, in a thrilling encounter staged in Detroit Thursday afternoon, Vernon Gomez was denied entrance into baseball's Hall of Fame when Charley Gehringer clouted a homer in the ninth, breaking up a potential no-hit, no-run game.

Gomez, goofy Castilian, had allowed no safeties until the final rack, and it looked as if his knock on the door to fame as one of baseball's immortals would be answered. Gehringer, star keystone sacker for the Tigers, smacked Gomez' first pitched ball in the ninth to the right field bleachers. Gerald Walker followed this score with a double which was eventually converted into another score.

The New York nine had little trouble tying knots in the tails of the Tiger club although Gomez seemed to weaken noticeably when he realized that his perfect game had been denied by the wiles of an unkind fate. Dickey, veteran catcher for the Yankees, had a perfect day at bat, making good all three of his chances.

IMPORTANT TILTS SCHEDULED TODAY

Baseball, Tennis and Track Teams Play Away; Tracksters Meet Penn State.

Carolina athletic teams go through one of their biggest afternoons of the year today with five events taking place. All the events are away from Chapel Hill.

With two contests already postponed by rain Carolina's baseball team will journey to Greensboro where they meet Virginia in the annual classic. This contest will take on more importance as it will mark the first meeting between these two teams this year. One game scheduled for Charlottesville and one carded for Chapel Hill were called off due to rain. Nate Andrews, Tar Heel, and Peck Luck, Cavalier, both ace pitchers on their respective teams will probably face each other on the mound and as a result a tight battle is expected.

The track team has one of its biggest dual meets of the season and will have a tough time keeping its record clean when Penn State is met at Penn State. Carolina has a comparative advantage over the Lions as a result of scores last week. Carolina downed Duke 66 to 60, while Penn State was losing to the Army 74 to 52.

The two tennis teams are still away from home and will finish their long trips. With sixty-one straight wins behind them the varsity netmen meet the strong Brown team at Brown. The freshmen are at Washington, D. C. and face St. Albans.

Durham is the closest that any of the teams get to Chapel Hill. The freshman cinder team journeys over to Duke where they take on the Blue Imp team. Last week the Tar Babies barely eked out a 65 to 61 win over

TWO SOPHS LEAD TAR HEEL TRACK TEAM IN SCORING

Childers, Sprinter-Broadjumper, And Abernethy, Hurdler, Top List With 27 and 24 Points.

Two sophomores, Odell Childers and Franklin Abernethy, are leading all scorers on the Carolina track team, which is busy with preparations for its big meet at Penn State today.

Childers has garnered 27 points in the sprints and broad jump and Abernethy 24 in the hurdles. The latter also set a new University record of 15.1 seconds in the highs in the Virginia meet.

Trailing close behind are three veterans, Oscar Mullis, who has scored 18 points in the shot and discus although he was at home for the meet with Virginia, and Wick Smith and Ralston LeGore who have taken the pole vault and javelin, respectively, in each meet for 15 points apiece.

Louis Sullivan in the two mile and Floyd Higby, who also has a new University record to his credit in the broadjump, come next with ten points apiece. Higby missed participation in the Duke meet due to illness Saturday, and will miss the meet today as he is still in the infirmary.

Other leaders have been Edwin McRae, Harry Williamson, and Bob Hubbard in the distances and Frank Armfield in the javelin with nine points each; Red Hamlet and Crook Stafford in the high jump with 8 1-3 and 8, respectively; John Gunter in the sprints and Charlie Hubbard in the broad jump with eight; Don Jackson in the vault with six; and Tom Hawthorne in the hurdles with five.

Man Of Steele Draws Long, Wicked Bow

(Continued from first page) men and women as archers, there is not a great deal of difference, except at the longer distances. At a distance of sixty yards or under, women are the equals of men in the sport, but few women can shoot accurately at a distance of more than sixty yards, because of the strength necessary to the operation of the heavier bows.

Co-eds at the University have some equipment, but it would seem that they are more skillful with the playfully poisoned darts of Cupid than with the yoeman's bow, as few of them do anything with archery.

Because there are a number of people at the University who are interested in archery, several efforts have been made to organize a club for the purpose of bringing them together. Such a move was made last year, but nothing came of the attempt. Sometime within the near future it is expected that the archers of the University will again attempt organization.

Duke and this week's meet is expected to be even closer as the Blue Imps will have the advantage of their home track.

Lead Cavaliers Against Carolina Today

Pictured above are two of Virginia's star athletes, who will lead them as co-captains of the Cavalier ball club against the Tar Heels in Greensboro this afternoon. Left to right are Poss and Brewer. These two men will be remembered for their play against Carolina's football team for the past three years. Poss will be Luck's battery mate today.

FROSH TRACKMEN PRIME FOR MEET WITH DUKE IMPS

Freshmen Have Advantage in Meet Last Saturday; Depend on Work of Stars.

Coach Dale Ranson and his Tar Baby tracksters will leave today at noon for Duke where they will meet the Blue Imps in a freshman dual meet. The events will be run off on the fine track in the Duke stadium.

In their earlier meeting last Saturday, the Carolina yearlings eked out a 65-61 victory over the Duke frosh. Both teams have been priming all the week for the renewal of relations today.

The Blue Imps present a galaxy of first year talent. The Carolina team will be centered around the efforts of a few men: Tucker, in the high jump; Napier, in the sprints; Keeney and Batt, 440; and Rankin and Montgomery, in the hurdles.

The Carolina frosh mentor has been pressing his charges hard in the distances, the mile and two mile; since it was in these events that his proteges showed their weakest men.

Bill Rankin, former Wilmington high track ace, did not make an impressive showing in the hurdles last week because of stumbling in the last few yards. But Coach Ranson will be pointing to some points from the tall Carolina freshman in today's meet.

MAJOR LEAGUE UMPIRE CLAIMS GREAT RECORD

George Hildebrande, veteran American League umpire, claims to have worked 3,098 consecutive games in his more than twenty years of "calling them" in the major loop.

Hildebrande says that in the twenty years he hasn't missed a single inning of a single game, that he had never missed a train, and that he had gone through with every contest that he was assigned to. The record doesn't include numerous spring exhibition games and games during world series week that he had worked.

SCHOLASTIC GOLF SQUADS ENTERED IN TOURNEY HERE

Charlotte, Winston-Salem, Durham, And Henderson Already Entered With Others Expected.

The second annual state high school golf tournament, with contests for teams and individual players, will be staged here at the Hope Valley country club Friday, May 19, sponsored by the North Carolina high school athletic association.

Teams of four or individual players may be entered by any high school which is a member of the association. To date teams have been entered from Charlotte, Winston-Salem, Durham, and Henderson high schools. Applications for entry in the tournament must be received by E. R. Rankin, secretary of the association, before May 13. Eligibility rules will be the same as the regulations which governed the interscholastic meet of this year.

A meeting of all contestants in the golf tournament will take place at the University Y. M. C. A. at 7:00 o'clock on May 18. Coach J. F. Kenfield of the University golf team will preside at this meeting and will be in charge of the tournament. Tournament play will start at 9:30 o'clock the following day.

High schools competing may enter one team of four men, or from one to three men for individual competition. The tournament will consist of eighteen holes in the morning and eighteen in the afternoon, scoring to be made by medal play only. The team making the lowest aggregate score, and the player making the lowest single score for the thirty-six holes will be winners.

Betting Favors Coe's Ladysman To Win Classic

Eastern Horse Favored to Triumph in 58th Annual Kentucky Derby, Louisville.

Today is Derby Day. The scene is already set for the 59th annual Kentucky Derby, race classic not only for Dixie but for the racing public in America.

Thousands of milling race fans are packing into Louisville where the race for three-year olds will be run off this afternoon. Already the usual colorful crowd has taken possession of the aristocratic center of racing; dowagers, politicians, glittering blondes and debutantes, hill folk, and shifty-eyed touts.

The derby, the annual horse race for some 58 years, now is the time-honored test for three-year olds at Churchill Downs. The scene for the race classic is a ramshackle track sprawled over a vast stretch of land on the outskirts of the city.

Pomponius From Coe Stables Already the betting and odds have reached fever-heated enthusiasm. William R. Coe's Ladysman will be the outstanding favorite among the experts holding a good 2 to 1 advantage over all competitors. The fine eastern horse will be pressed by its own stable mate, Pomponius. At race time today, however, track savants contend that although the Coe entries have held the favorite role all winter and spring, there will be even money for a wide-open race among some fifteen or eighteen starters.

The derby is nationally conceded to be the event of events. Hotels and all available rooming establishments are crowded to capacity. Street hawkers are doing a year's business in three days. The staid Ohio riverside community is transformed into a gay colorful madhouse.

A description of the race can be heard from either radio stations WEAf and WABC (both CBS) at 5:45 o'clock this afternoon.

NATIONAL GROUP ANNOUNCES TWO CONTEST PRIZES

Rules Are Given for Plans to Be Submitted in Wide Spread Undergraduate Competition

The National Planning committee for unemployed college graduates is conducting a contest to determine the best plan for the organization of jobless graduates for constructive public service, it was learned here yesterday.

Two prizes announced for the contest, which closes June 1, will go to the college man and woman undergraduate who submit the most practical plans. The winners will be given a summer in Europe with all expenses paid.

Requirements of the contest are that the plan should (1) state the problem briefly; (2) present a practical project, or projects, to engage the time and abilities of graduates in national, state, or community service; (3) meet the educational and recreational needs of this group of young people; (4) show how college graduates can be associated in activities with untrained youth; (5) list the agencies needed to operate the plan in your state; (6) present the financial requirements and suggest the sources of support.

In addition, it is required that the basic elements of the plan be printed in the contestant's college paper and that two editorials or student comments on the problem be carried in the paper. There is no limit to the number of plans which can be submitted by students of a given college, provided that all the plans appear in the student paper.

Judges for the contest will be announced soon. A number of educators and men in public affairs have commented favorably upon the contest.

PARKER ELECTED TO MEMBERSHIP IN LEGAL ORDER

Circuit Judge Named for Honorary Membership in Phi Delta Phi, Law Fraternity

The Honorable John J. Parker, judge of the fourth circuit of the United States circuit court of appeals, has been elected to honorary membership in Vance Inn chapter of Phi Delta Phi, international legal fraternity, it was announced yesterday. His initiation has been set for Monday night at 7:00 o'clock.

The following former members of the organization will aid in conducting the initiation ceremonies: Associate Justice George Connor of the North Carolina supreme court; Henry M. London, secretary of the North Carolina Bar association; J. Will Pless, member of the national council of Phi Delta Phi; and Dr. A. C. McIntosh of the University law faculty.

The initiation will be followed by a banquet at the Carolina Inn for visiting members of Hughes Inn of Phi Delta Phi from Duke, when Judge Parker will be welcomed by Pless. Judge Parker will make the principal address.

Bagby Address

Dr. English Bagby of the psychology department lectured on "Emotions of Children" before a child study group Wednesday in Newton. The lecture was one of a series sponsored for the group by the Newton American Legion Auxiliary, and was arranged by the University extension division.

School Limited to Eight Months

Yesterday the state senate by a vote of 29 to 14 refused to give any reconsideration to its action to limit the operation of schools in North Carolina to eight months. Cities of more than 2,000 may by popular vote supplement the state salary schedule in order to increase the pay of teachers and avoid standard reductions, but not to increase school term.

Many Want Beer Licenses

R. R. McLaughlin, chief of the license division of the state said yesterday that there were on his desk 1,000 licenses for retailers and around sixty applications for wholesale licenses. At present a staff of nearly 100 men are engaged in checking licenses and enforcing the new beer measure.

Tennessean Wins Pulitzer Prize

A new laurel has crowned the southern literary renaissance. T. S. Stribling of Clifton, Tennessee has been awarded the $1,000 Pulitzer prize for his novel The Store, adjudged the best of the year.

We Can't Help Wondering

"Seven bottles of beer are intoxicating," so said Harvey Lee, alias Harvey Deal, local white man when he was haled into the recorder's court this morning to face a charge of public drunkenness," reported the Durham Sun yesterday.

Also of interest was his description of the manner in which a bill introduced into either the house or the senate became a law. The steps necessary are: introduction of bill, title is read by the clerk and the bill is numbered. It is then referred to the committee which it concerns, they consider the bill and hear any discussion from other representatives. The committee then reports on the bill and if the report is not favorable it is usually killed. If the report is favorable, it is read in the house, discussed, amendments proposed and voted on. The amendments are voted on in inverse order, and the original bill is the last thing to be passed. If the bill passes three readings of the house, it is sent on to the Senate where the same procedure takes place. If any amendments are made in the Senate, these have to be passed by the house.

Mr. Goerch concluded his talk with several of his experiences as an airplane pilot, and finally stating that he felt he always disappointed college professors and school teachers who expect him to talk on educational subjects. He expressed his approval of the Federation and its work, and with a parting anecdote, concluded.

Koch Addresses Convention

Professor F. H. Koch spoke upon "Playmaking in North Carolina" before the North Carolina Federation of Women's Clubs in Raleigh Thursday. The annual convention of the federation, which has been meeting in the Sir Walter hotel since Wednesday, will be concluded today.

Dr. Harold M. Meyer of the department of sociology delivered the commencement address to a class of seventy graduating students in the Burlington high school last night.

Community School For Adults Conducted With Much Success

Education Department of the Community Club of Chapel Hill Sponsors Adult School With Cooperation of the Orange County and Carrboro Boards of Education.

"I don't have much, and I don't know much yet, but if someone were to offer me $1,000 for what I have learned, I would be bound to tell him that it was not enough."

Thus did Marvin Pendergrass, janitor of the Carrboro school building, express himself to Mrs. R. M. Grumman, his teacher, director of the Carrboro Community School for Adults. Less than a year ago this pupil could not read nor write his own name, but since entering the adult school last fall, he has completed the first two grades in the time that would be equivalent to two and one half weeks of day school.

So outstanding was his advancement that his work was taken to Raleigh and exhibited at the convention of the Federation of Women's Clubs of North Carolina. There it was judged the most "marked progress" of any pupil in the state and his notebooks showing his steady improvement were presented to the Governor.

Run for Two Years

For two years this school, sponsored by the education department of the Community Club of Chapel Hill, has been in existence and grows continually popular in the community. Attendance has increased yearly. It is similar to a number of other schools throughout the state conducted by the Federation of Women's Clubs.

Two nights a week, classes are held between the hours of 7:30 and 9:30 o'clock. The first hour and a half is devoted to regular class work; the remaining thirty minutes is spent in the discussion of civic problems. Often there are lectures that contribute to good citizenship by speakers provided by Dr. L. M. Brooks of the University department of sociology. The school has two divisions: the foundation, for those who have never exceeded the third grade; the continuation, for those above the third grade.

present system of the entire college representation.

Yesterday morning was devoted to the registration of delegates, more than forty arriving in the morning and over ten coming in later in the day.

At the luncheon, President Weeks presided over the meeting and Harper Barnes made a short welcoming address to the delegates, stating that the new University administration would support the Federation and its projects.

After President Graham's speech, there was a plenary session during which Haywood Weeks gave the history of the State Federation, and the treasurer's report was heard.

Coates Speaks

Mr. Albert Coates presented his constructive Institute of Government to this plenary session, explaining in full detail the project which he has worked out and the enormous part the students of North Carolina are to have in this plan. An unanimous motion was passed whereby the Federation would go on record as favoring and supporting fully this Institute and would cooperate with the officials in it.

Mr. Carl Goerch, veteran newspaper man and radio columnist addressed the gathering at dinner last night.

Festival Postponed

The local high school May day festival, which was scheduled to take place yesterday morning on the school lawn, has been postponed. The fete will be conducted as soon as the weather permits.

ship by speakers provided by Dr. L. M. Brooks of the University department of sociology. The school has two divisions: the foundation, for those who have never exceeded the third grade; the continuation, for those above the third grade.

Though sponsored by the Community Club of Chapel Hill, the school receives the cooperation of the Orange County and Carrboro boards of education, the missionary societies of the various churches, the Parent Teacher's Association, and the Kiwanis and Rotary clubs.

Scholarships Offered

The Kiwanis and Rotary clubs, each, gives a scholarship to the Opportunity School at Berea College to those who meet certain requirements. These scholarships have done much toward creating interest in scholastic work. One student, Nellie Brockwell, who won a scholarship last year, was so well pleased with her term at Berea that she saved money and returned last January with Mrs. Ida Watts and Coy Sparrow, winners of the scholarships this year.

Members of the Community Club who assist Mrs. Grumman in teaching the night school are: Mrs. E. C. Metzenthin, Mrs. Raymond Adams, Mrs. J. B. Woosley, and Mrs. Taul White.

The success of the Carrboro educational movement is another indication of the influence and good to be obtained from a state university. Infused with the spirit of universal education, these women have undertaken on their initiative to remedy the too frequently publicized educational state of the south.

Blondell In Roll Of Gangster at Carolina

Joan Blondell, red-hot blonde, and Chester Morris, portrayer of many characters of mystery, will play the leading roles in today's production at the Carolina—"Blondie Johnson." The picture gives a portrayal of certain features of gangster life and intrigue with a woman playing the role of attraction.

Joan Blondell plays the part of this charming racketeer, enticing men of wealth and position and showing them no consideration. She is perfectly heartless in her association and contacts with women. The poster asserts "her kisses were fire . . . her heart was ice." The role she plays is comparable as a feminine parallel of James Cagney in "Public Enemy." Chester Morris gives his usual dramatic presentation in a manner that astounds all persons who have made a study of his technique, and holds the audience breathless in periods of suspense.

The picture has received many favorable criticisms from numerous well-known motion picture critics although it has not been rated as the first of the year. It is a picture of a charming blonde and a dramatic expert in an atmosphere comparable to the underworld of Chicago.

Professors Talk in Raleigh

Dr. E. R. Groves and Dr. Harold D. Meyer spoke in Raleigh last night at the meeting of the North Carolina Federation of Women's Clubs. Dr. Meyer spoke at the welfare luncheon. This ended the convention which began last Tuesday.

EDUCATION GIVEN AMERICANS SAID TO STANDARDIZE

Leading Educators of World Review Subject at Request of Harvard "Teachers' Record."

Cambridge, Mass., May 5.—(NSFA).—America's educational system was recently evaluated by four leading educators at the request of the Harvard "Teachers' Record." A summary of some of their comments follows:

Paul L. Dangler, director of the Austro-American Institute of Education in Vienna: "There is a growing revolt against standardization. The best minds in America are seeking new values, and more and more voices are raised in protest against the mass production of high schools. More quality, rather than quantity, is demanded."

Sir John Adams, formerly professor of education at the University of London, now at the University of California at Los Angeles: "American education tends to exhibit a lack of thoroughness. Americans think there is enough thoroughness in their system as it stands, and they are repelled by the fear of unnecessary dullness. There is no danger whatever of American education becoming dull, while there is a real danger of American instruction becoming superficial."

Robert Ulrich of the Ministry of Education in Saxony: "Gifted children are retarded for lack of stimulus and are harmed by being sent forth in life with the feeling that any task can be accomplished without much effort. Mistaken vocational choices are favored, and democracy is in danger of becoming a cult of incompetence."

A. Desclos, French school official: "The attempt to offer equal opportunities to large groups of students is endangered by a tendency to sacrifice quality to quantity by a general lowering of standards."

Comprehensive studies of American schools have been made by each of the four educators, according to the "Record."

COLLEGE BUILDING AT WAKE FOREST RAZED YESTERDAY

Wait Hall, 98-Year-Old Administration Building, Destroyed by Fire Of Unknown Origin.

Wait hall, administration building at Wake Forest College, was completely destroyed by fire early yesterday morning. The loss was estimated at $200,000.

The four-story building was the oldest on the campus and had been the center of college affairs since its construction in 1835. The old college bell in a small tower of the building was destroyed.

The structure contained the business office, a majority of the regular classrooms and dormitory accommodations for about 100 students.

Although the fire was discovered about 2:30 a. m., all of the students in the building escaped without injury.

The cause of the fire was not known, but it was thought to have started in the classroom section of the building. Wake Forest and Raleigh firemen vainly fought the flames which had gained too much headway to be conquered.

The students who had roomed in the building were established yesterday in the Wake Forest hotel, owned by the college. Classes formerly held in Wait were transferred to the library.

The heavy loss was only partially covered by insurance.

SPANN TO SHOW WAR PLAY AGAIN

will be supported by Dr. Urban T. Holmes of the French department who gave an excellent performance in the first presentation. Beverly Thurman and Robert Linker are the other faculty members in the play. Foster Fitz-Simons and Ellen Stewart are playmakers who have volunteered their services. Tom Johnson, Dan Weiner, George Hellinger, Jules Aaron, and Nathan Shapiro are students taking part in the play.

The play was originally written by Herman Rossman, a young German playwright who was himself a war pilot on the Western front. War pilots who have seen the play have expressed an opinion that all the technical features are accurately portrayed and that many of the scenes are of actual happenings.

CATE ANNOUNCES COMPLETE PLANS FOR SENIOR WEEK

Class Meeting This Afternoon In Gerrard Hall at 2:00 To Begin Program.

Complete plans for senior week were released yesterday by Arlindo Cate, president of the class. They constitute several changes from last year's procedure.

Cate urged all seniors to wear their senior sweaters throughout the entire period. He asserted that in order to make the annual week affair a success it was necessary for all fourth-year students to cooperate wholly with class officers in the program.

All seniors were requested to obtain their sweaters from Randolph-McDonald tomorrow.

Commencement Bids on Sale Cate also made an important announcement yesterday regarding commencement invitations, further information of which will be given at the class meeting tomorrow night. Cate stated that orders will be taken Tuesday and thereafter, and that members of all classes could obtain them from committee members.

The week's activities will begin tomorrow night with a short meeting of the class in Gerrard hall at 2:00 o'clock. At this time President Cate will explain the altered plans for commencement and hear discussion on the subject. A report by the diploma committee will also be in order.

SALON ENSEMBLE TO GIVE RECITAL

University Musical Group to Play at Prospect Hill Tuesday.

The Carolina salon ensemble, conducted by Thor Johnson, will present a concert in the high school auditorium at Prospect Hill Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock. The appearance is sponsored by the local parent-teachers' association and was arranged by the principal of the school, H. McSwain, an alumnus of the University.

The presentation will be in the form of a lecture concert in which Johnson will explain the uses of the different instruments of the orchestra. The use of each instrument will be illustrated by members of the group. Burke Smith, flutist, Harry Lee Knox, pianist, and Raymond Brietz, baritone, will appear as soloists. Knox will also play the solo part to Hazelman's Grainger in the Mountains which was presented for the first time by the ensemble in Winston-Salem April 21.

The entire program will include Farandole, from the Arlésienne Suite No. 2 by Bizet; Mountain Song by Stringfield; Ungarische Melodien by Keller; Bella, Aubade, from Le Cid by Massenet; and Prelude du De-

Treasurers To Meet With Student Auditor

Treasurers of the following organizations are requested to meet R. H. Sherrill, student auditor, in the business office in the basement of South building tomorrow or Tuesday afternoon between 2:00 and 4:30 o'clock.

Freshman, sophomore, junior, and senior classes; Civil Engineering Society; American Institute of Electrical Engineers; American Institute of Chemical Engineers; Medical Society; Law association; Pharmacy association; Woman's association; Mechanical Engineering association; and the Interfraternity council.

If the treasurer of any one of these organizations is unable to meet Sherrill at this time, he is asked to telephone and arrange for a conference at a suitable time.

CAMPUS GROUPS SPONSOR DANCES

Seven Social Affairs Included in Week-end Program Which Ended Last Night.

Four dances on the social bill for yesterday afternoon and last night brought to a close the week-end program of seven dances given by several campus organizations.

Guests at the house parties conducted by Phi Kappa Sigma and Kappa Alpha were entertained at a tea dance at the Carolina Inn yesterday from 4:30 to 6:30 o'clock. Music for the occasion was furnished by Jelly Leftwich and his orchestra.

In connection with the Tau Epsilon Phi house party, the fraternity staged a dance at the Carolina Inn last night from 9:00 to 12:00 o'clock, with Archie Davis's orchestra furnishing music. Chaperones at this event were: Dr. and Mrs. J. P. Harland, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Addestone, and Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Evans of Durham.

Annual Society Affairs The annual entertainment given by the Phi Assembly and the Di Senate took place yesterday in the form of a dance at the Bynum gymnasium. The affair, at which Archie Davis and his orchestra played, lasted from 6:30 to 9:00 o'clock.

The Order of the Grail closed its spring schedule of dances last night at Bynum gymnasium. Jelly Leftwich and his orchestra played. At the dance, which ran from 9:00 to 12:00 o'clock, the new members of the Order who were inducted Thursday night were honored.

Virginia Delegation Addresses Cabinets

Members of the three-man delegation from the Virginia Theological Seminary of Alexandria, Virginia, will address the Y. M. C. A. cabinets tomorrow night at the last regular meetings of the groups.

Henry Johnson, formerly Dean Bradshaw's assistant here, will address the freshman friendship council, Doc Hines will speak to the sophomore cabinet, and Reverend A. C. Zabriskie, professor of history at the seminary, will address the junior-senior group.

Opinion, However, Is Divided; Three Say They Will Fight Under No Circumstances.

By Lonnie Dill and Milton Stoll "Farewell to Arms" may be the theme song of northern colleges, but student opinion on the University of North Carolina campus seems to be divided on the subject of going to war. Out of thirteen interviews twelve students voiced an opinion definitely opposed to an aggressive war, the thirteenth not defining his stand on the Martian question.

Four students declared that they would fight only if the United States were invaded; three, that they would enlist following the Congressional declaration; three, that they would fight under no circumstances; and two, that they would submit to a draft.

In spite of these widely differing opinions, it was evident that the students had thought carefully about the matter of going to war and were expressing themselves honestly.

War Rooted in Human Nature

Tom White of Hertford, member of the junior class and football letter-man, doesn't believe that much can be done about preventing war. "I would enlist," he says, "out of patriotism, but I am opposed to war and its causes, which seem to me to originate in the faults of human nature. It is difficult to say whether these faults may be overcome."

Carolina's Inventor Of Bunsen Burner Deprived Of Due Credit

Dr. Francis P. Venable, Known as "Grand Old Man of Chemistry," Invented Burner Used in Laboratories Today, Yet Credit Was Given to German.

"Ten years ago I was walking down a street in Heidelberg, Germany; I came to the public square and saw a statue: 'To the Memory of Robert Wilhelm Eberhard Bunsen'... I felt like picking up a brick and knocking hell out of the statue!"

This murderous remark coming from the usually mild Obie Harmon, manager of Swain hall, was occasioned by his recalling the famous case of Dr. Francis Venable, former president of the University, and the Bunsen burner. Although the dispute over the credit of the invention occurred many years ago, Obie, an intense admirer of Dr. Venable, still feels indignant that the great invention is not titled, "The Venable Burner."

Received No Credit Dr. Venable, nationally known as a great chemist, considers his greatest contribution to chemistry the invention which improved to perfection the once crude Bunsen burner. For this, his most significant piece of work, the aged scientist has never received due and fitting credit and honor.

Robert Wilhelm Eberhard Bunsen, upon whose statue loyal Harmon has such ferocious designs, invented the first apparatus which most nearly resembles the modern Bunsen burner. This apparatus proved to be most inefficient, because it burned with a large smoky flame without producing

BRADSHAW TELLS N. C. FEDERATION OF POSSIBILITIES

Dean of Students Cites Simonism of Last Century as Example.

"Perhaps more than any other time, the old line about the fate of the country lying in the hands of youth is applicable now," Dean Francis Bradshaw told the delegates to the congress of the North Carolina Student Federation at their luncheon yesterday, the concluding day of the congress.

Centering his talk around the progress which evolved from a cult in France called St. Simonism in the early 19th century, Bradshaw pointed out that the spirit behind the movement, young St. Simon, conceived his ideas in his youth, continued them throughout his life, changing them as he saw better ideas for the betterment of mankind.

Development of Ideas

Having its beginning as a new religious cult, Simonism tended to deal with mysticism and immorality for a time; but the youthful ideas of the group changed and they saw that a scientific group, with an aim to help mankind settle its problems would begin a movement to change the course of civilization. One of the first works that they sponsored was the construction of the Suez canal and from that other industrial movements were begun. In spite of its idiosyncrasies, Simonism put into human thought

Bill Roberts Dies In Auto Accident

Bill Roberts of Marshall, popular senior, member of Beta Theta Pi, and prominent in social activities, died yesterday as a result of an auto accident. He was thrown from the car, a roadster driven by Ralph Myers, when the car struck a wagon just this side of Hope Valley on the Durham road last night.

Roberts died before anyone could pick him up. He was bleeding badly and his skull must have been fractured. Myers was not seriously injured. John Boynton, the third member of the party was seriously injured, but the Duke hospital reported that it would not be fatal. This is the third serious accident in two days.

ORGANISTS OPEN MEET TOMORROW

Student Organists' Competition At Presbyterian Church to Feature Program.

The North Carolina chapter of the American Guild of organists will open its annual spring convention at 2:00 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the Hill Music hall. Professor Nelson O. Kennedy, dean of the chapter, will preside.

A feature of the convention will be a contest for organ students of this state at the Presbyterian church beginning at 4:00 o'clock. This contest will be open to the public. The meet will be closed with a recital in Hill Music hall at 8:00 o'clock by Lawrence C. Apgar, organist and instructor at Duke University. Apgar is a graduate of Yale University and the Curtis Institute of music where he was also associated as instructor in organ. He has been connected with Duke University as organist and carillonneur for the past year.

Apgar's program will include Prelude and Fugue in G major and Chorale Prelude by J. S. Bach, Dreams by Hugh McAmis, Brittany Suite by Dupre, Scherzo by Gigout, Pavane and Gigg by William Byrd, Toccata by Farnam, Carillon by Delawar, Chorale Prelude on a theme of Bach by Zechiel, and Westminster Chimes by Louis Vierne.

Kennedy Concludes Series Of Recitals

Professor Nelson O. Kennedy will conclude his series of vesper organ recitals with a concert in Hill Music hall this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock.

The program will include Variations de Concert by Bonnet; Sketch by Shuman, Priere by Jongen; Festival Prelude, based on the hymn Ein Feste Burg, by Faulkes; Andante Canabile by Tschaiakowsky; Cradle Song by Iljinsky, and the Prelude to act III from Wagner's Lohengrin.

Resolution Passed Favoring Cooperation Between Big Five And Little Seven.

Wendell Horne, out-going president of the Duke student body, was unanimously elected president of the North Carolina Federation of Students and Margaret Plonk, president of Woman's College student body at Greensboro, was chosen vice-president, also by a unanimous vote.

Other officers elected at this session were Virginia Garnett, president of the student body at Meredith College in Raleigh, secretary, and James Phillips, president of the student body at Wake Forest, treasurer. All offices were unanimous.

Choice of Salem College

After considering discussion on the advisability of having the site of the congress on the same campus with the president of the Federation, a motion was defeated whereby each president would automatically invite the congress to his campus. Winston-Salem was chosen by a unanimous vote for the site of the next congress, with Salem College for women acting as host to the delegates.

The congress, in a plenary session, adopted all the motions passed by the separate discussion groups which met during the day. Among important resolutions passed was one favoring the non-interference of the faculty with the functions of student government except for an advisory board or appeal board and an orientation program which would acquaint

CONTEST WON BY MRS. MACMILLAN

Young South Carolina Dramatic Soprano Becomes Eligible For National Debut.

Mrs. Flora MacMillan of Lawrens, S. C., was declared winner in the contest for young artists of the South Atlantic district in Hill music hall Friday evening under the direction of the Federation of Music clubs. By winning this contest Mrs. MacMillan becomes eligible to compete for a $1,000 cash award and a concert debut in the national contest sponsored by the federation in Minneapolis late this month.

Mrs. MacMillan, a dramatic soprano, is a student of Fredrich Haywood of New York City. She has attained the highest contest ranking possible for an amateur musician by qualifying in the young artists classification which requires that each contestant have a complete concert repertoire committed to memory.

Salem Girl Wins

In the contests in the student musicians classification Mary Mills, contralto, of Salem College, was winner in the women's division. Ward Wiles of Lenoir College was winner in the men's class. Fletcher Moore of Elon College won in both the

Congress Adjourns

The fourth annual congress of the North Carolina Student Federation was concluded yesterday with a series of discussion groups which attempted to probe into the problems confronted by most student bodies. These discussions, led by men and women well acquainted with their respective topics, were developed through suggestions from individuals.

Although the Federation can make no definite move nor take any decisive action, its purpose is to bring together representatives from different schools, men and women's, whose system of government and regulation of student activities vary. Through group meetings of delegates from these schools it is hoped that problems of the colleges can be clarified and that constructive programs can be presented for the approval of the congress.

The Federation has proven its worth in the mere four years it has been in operation by the increase in the membership of the organization and through the programs which have been effected by the annual congresses.

It is obvious that one of its chief assets is the closer relation of student bodies which the Federation tends to bring. One of the first moves of the Federation, before it was well established, was to sponsor the Friendship Trophy between Carolina and Duke so as to bring about a more friendly rivalry between these institutions.

That the Institute of Government in this State has officially taken into its group the student leaders of the colleges of the state shows that students are rapidly assuming a place in the government of the nation which they have never had before.

The congress this year has made marked strides in fulfilling the purpose for which it was organized. Each student body in the state should find it almost imperative to become affiliated with this organization which brings into closer union the work of the students.—C.G.T.

Tennis Parnassus And the Ploughed Field

The Carolina tennis team is to be congratulated on its successful northern trip. It cannot but give Carolina men a thrill of pride to realize that a team from Chapel Hill is unmatched in tennis prowess throughout the land. Yet this national team championship has been costly. It has brought about an aristocracy in our tennis world. The great throng of University tennis players whose enjoyment of the game exceeds their technical skill and who feel the need of exercise rather than the lust for victory have been left out in the cold world to shift for themselves as they may. Tennis players of sub-varsity calibre at the University are not encouraged. They appear to be tolerated.

It seems to be a question, then, whether the price we pay in order to be represented by half a dozen racquet gladiators is not a bit exorbitant. There are at present two varsity courts in good condition. There are also a great many other sandlots nearby which when viewed from a hazy distance bear a striking resemblance to tennis courts. It is these last over which University proletariats fight for the privilege of use. A close-up view of these pseudo-courts cannot but dismay even the most incredulous. The nets are dilapidated and full of gaping holes which wary players (smartly adjusted to the new situation) are quick to take advantage of at strategic points in a rally. The absence of lines adds a fascinating guessing game to the festivities. But most intriguing of all are the mounds and depressions and all varieties and degrees on what might be called the playing surface. No one has played on these "courts" but has known the jolly humor involved in seeing his opponent's embarrassed face as an anticipated forehand shot suddenly becomes a backhand.

If there is any one in charge of these non-varsity courts, the charge has not been taken very seriously. There is absolutely no evidence that these courts have ever had any attention since the summer of 1932. The raw material is there for the development of dozens of perfectly playable tennis courts, yet some of them are in such hopeless condition that no one has even been sanguine enough to place nets on them. Perhaps the athletic association could be persuaded to spend a little less on trips and hundreds of new balls for the team and turn their attention to the numerous Carolina men who play merely because they like the game. If the athletic treasury cannot pay for the rolling, leveling, and marking of the courts, then they should establish a court fee to keep them in necessary condition. Students would prefer to pay ten cents an hour, if it is necessary, for the use of the courts in good playing order than to continue under the present exasperating conditions.—B.B.P.

The Grass Grows Taller Every Day

We wonder if the current excitement over junior-senior dance funds has reached such a pitch that even the grounds squad must let other matters go in order to participate in the general tumult and shouting. We refer to the increasingly abundant growth of herbage which seems to be running riot all over the campus where formerly well controlled grass plots held sway. Have University funds reached so low an ebb that there is no where-with-all to compensate mowers of lawns for keeping the campus in a reasonably respectable condition? Or perhaps the caretakers of the quadrangles have organized a strike for more tender grass, or clover which does not grow so fast. We do not believe that the recent expenditure for the new walk on the north campus was so terrific as to put the grass committee financially on its back.

A great deal of noise has been made lately about students becoming so degenerate as to wander disrespectfully across grass plots at will with an utter disregard for walks or signs protesting the practice. Now that the students have ceased to trample under foot the ill-treated grass, its guardians have allowed it to take on a most bedraggled and long-behind-the-ears appearance. If the campus cannot get a haircut at regular intervals we suggest that the sheep behind Caldwell Hall be given a chance at it, and if the job proves too much for them, then certain farmers might be found who would gladly accept so lucious a pasture in behalf of any of their pet bovines that would be willing to conduct themselves with decorum on a University campus.—R.L.B.

Still Peasants—

A few weeks ago, we read a story of the Russian Revolution. It seems that an ignorant servant woman had possessed herself of all the jewelry, the fine clothing, the money, of a countess, her former mistress. In fact, she was trying to gain possession of the ancestral castle and had well nigh succeeded. The noble lady was humbled, and in threadbare clothes was leaving her home forever. As she came to the door, though, she slowly turned and, raising her head high, looked over at the one who had been kitchen slave and was now raised to such a position of grandeur, and she smiled upon her in scorn and said, "You are still a peasant."

So do we say to those who would raise themselves above their rightful places, not by dint of honest endeavor and intelligence which no sane man will gainsay them, but by lowering those who are normally above them and should rightfully remain there. So do we say to those who, not understanding the scope of knowledge, not wanting it for its own sake, not knowing how best to use it, are endeavoring to obtain it for the sake of advancement over their fellow men. So do we say to those who gain a high position in this world not by virtue of their blood or of their learning, or even of their native ability, but by trickery and guile.

So do we say to those rulers of today who, coming from the common masses, are proving over and over again the old adage of the impossibility of making a purse out of a sow's ear. So do we say to those newly rich, who are beyond their capabilities in endeavoring to manage their new found manna, who make utter fools out of themselves. So do we say to those without desire for moderated advancement, who use the same wooden plow that their grandfather used before them.

Remain where you are, unless you have either the brain or the capacity to work that will honestly raise you above your present position. No matter how long we may vehemently protest against the statement, it is still a fact that all men are not created equal and were not meant to be. So, if you have not that brain or that aforementioned ability, though you be bedecked with jewels, adorned with the robe of power, and living in the most luxurious of palaces, the world will still say unto you, "You are a peasant."—W.H.W.

German Labor

The seizure this week of the offices of the labor unions by the Nazis and the arrest of labor leaders is but the first step in Adolph Hitler's program to consolidate his position as the ruler of Germany. It is to be noted that the chief opposition to Hitler's regime has emanated from the ranks of organized labor. Moreover both the Socialists (Social Democrats) and the Communists depend upon the labor unions for the great bulk of their support; the nationalization of the unions which Hitler plans will be equivalent to liquidating his formal opposition. Whether the unions will react peacefully or not remains a moot question.

The announcement of Dr. Krupp (head of the great Krupp steel works at Essen and president of the Federation of German Industries) that organized industry will immediately come under Nazi control reflects once again the harmony which exists between the East Prussian capitalists and the Nazis. Whether Hitler can reconcile his friendly protestations to labor with his intrigue with big business continues to be an interesting problem for students of Germany to puzzle over.

Versailles Again

The disarmament talks which have been going on between Guido Jung, Italian special envoy, and President Roosevelt once more brings our attention to the fundamental difference between the French and Italian arms position. The dispatching of a representative of Italy to talk with the American president was an extremely erudite move on the part of Premier Mussolini. Not pushing his own plan forward but accepting that of Prime Minister MacDonald might seem a step backward, but in reality it is a clever stratagem. With the French opposition to the nullification of the Versailles Treaty so strong, Mussolini could not afford to divide his political strength by urging much. He has compromised, but he seems likely to win his primary point: the revision of the Versailles Treaty to permit territorial readjustments.

Sanchez Cerro

The assassination of President Sanchez Cerro of Peru is strikingly reminiscent of the attack made upon President Roosevelt some two and a half months ago. Press reports state that President Cerro and Premier Manzanilla were reviewing troops when the shooting took place. The state of tension which exists between Peru and Colombia over the possession of a large strip of territory east of Ecuador has led to partial mobilization by both countries and a declaration of war has been expected at any time. The death of Peru's president (who was a former general), nationalistically inclined and virtual dictator, was laid to the hands of one Alberto Mendoza. It does not take much acumen to see that the attack was motivated by a desire for national peace at the cost of life if necessary (Mendoza was a radical). It is hard for Americans to realize the passions which political ideals—especially in Latin temperaments—can arouse.

THOSE NEW BOOKS

May Scribner's carries a story by Tom Wolfe. Many months ago he was to publish his second novel. Announcements about it have long since ceased. Can it be that he has disjoined the finished portions and is giving it to us in small doses?

May Lambertson Becker conducts a column in the Saturday Review of Literature known as the "The Reader's Guide." She gives evaluated information to her correspondents in such a sprightly manner as to set the casual reader off on the similar trails.

Miss Becker is to be the guest of the library school this Tuesday. At 7:30 o'clock, Gerrard hall, she will talk of "Important Review Books." No advance information is available as to what books are important enough to rate mention. If we were to believe publishers' advertisements, the lecture would last far into the night. But we know Miss Becker to possess rare discrimination. In the space of one hour she will pick out those titles and tendencies which are really significant.

Further Pulitzer Prize announcements: Grover Cleveland by Allen Nevins (biography); Conquistador by Archibald McLeish (poetry); Both Your Houses by Maxwell Anderson (drama).

The stage coach, carved by Mr. Strudwick of Hillsboro and brought here during the Dogwood Festival, is said to be one of the best in the country. Each horse has individuality, yet the four are united in a spirit of a headlong animation. This fine piece of work will be on display at the Bull's Head for a few more days. It does add zest to the shop, and is the proper adornment of our mantle. Mary Dirnberger.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

To the Editor,
DAILY TAR HEEL:

I should like to call the attention of the student body to a serious problem of vandalism in the University library.

Within the past week two volumes of the new edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica, one of the new editions of the Encyclopedia Americana, and two volumes of the Dictionary of National Biography have had a large number of pages cut out, practically ruining the sets from which they were taken. The mutilation was apparently the work of careless, irresponsible individuals with no thought except their own convenience. I am sure the student body as a whole would thoroughly condemn such actions. The guilty persons marked themselves as unfit to be Carolina students and we shall, of course, make every effort to discover and punish them.

This is a particularly serious matter at the present time, because the library's book fund has been so curtailed that there is no possibility of replacing the mutilated volumes.

Tar Heels Make Clean Sweep In Sports

Virginia Rivals Swamped 11-1 In Annual Meeting

Coach Hearn's Men Bunch Runs In Two Big Innings to Defeat Virginians.

DIXON IS CAROLINA STAR

Big First Baseman Clouts Out Three Bingles, Batting in Four Markers.

(Special to the DAILY TAR HEEL.) Greensboro, May 6.—After having two games postponed on account of rain, Jupe Pluvius let up for awhile to allow Carolina and Virginia to meet in the annual Greensboro classic yesterday, with the Tar Heels overwhelming the Virginians by an 11-1 score.

Carolina had two big innings yesterday, the first in which the Chapel Hill aggregation tallied four times and the seventh when six runs were shoved across the plate. The Cavaliers tallied their lone marker in the sixth frame.

Peck Luck, veteran Cavalier slowball artist, who opposed Joe Griffith on the mound, was unable to find the plate in the first inning and walked Peacock and Phipps. Weathers beat out a bunt to fill the bases. McCaskill sent a long fly to center scoring Peacock. Vick beat out an infield hit to score Phipps. Powell walked and Dixon sent Weathers and Vick across the plate on his sharp single.

Carolina's fruitful seventh started with McCaskill getting a free pass to first and the Tar Heel catcher went to second on Brandt's sacrifice bunt. Vick singled and the bases were filled when Captain Willie Powell also came through with a one base blow. Dixon singled for his third hit of the game to score McCaskill and, when Rogers unloosed a bad throw to the plate, Vick also scored. Griffith and Peacock both singled to tally Powell and Dixon. Phipps walked and at this point Rogers took the hill for the visitors. Weathers greeted the left-hander with a sharp one base blow scoring Griffith and Peacock to make the score 11-1. Neither team added to their total in the remaining innings.

HIGH NINES WILL MEET HERE MAY 20 IN TITLE GAME

Gastonia, Greensboro, Rocky Mount, And Durham Struggle in Class A Baseball.

The state baseball championship contest between class A high schools continued with a Rocky Mount-Durham game yesterday morning in Durham to decide the eastern title-holder. The western winner will be decided by two out of three games between Greensboro and Gastonia during this week.

The state championship will be decided between the two winners here at 3:00 o'clock Saturday, May 20.

For the championship of class B high schools Roanoke Rapids played Angier at Henderson yesterday for the eastern title and Mount Airy met Paw Creek at Mount Airy for the western supremacy. Both Roanoke Rapids and Mount Airy are past champions, in 1932 and 1931 respectively. Both schools played in the finals here last year.

The final game between eastern and western title-holders will be played here at 3:00 o'clock Friday, May 12. Thirty-nine high schools competed in the class B contest this year.

TAR HEEL FROSH DECISIVELY LICK DUKE BLUE IMPS

Napier, Evins, and Rankin High Scorers as Tar Babies Humble Duke Frosh Again.

The Carolina freshman track team yesterday defeated the Duke Blue Imps in a return meet by a score of 71-13 to 54-2-3. Last week the Tar Babies took a thriller from the Blue Imps and won only by a few points. The meet yesterday was run off within the space of one hour. The day was ideal for the meet but the track was a bit slow from the rain Friday.

The one mile race provided a thriller for the few fans that attended the meet. Thompson of Carolina led for the first three quarters but Paist of Duke and Umstead of Carolina came in fast on the last lap and finished in that order with Thompson third. They finished in the same order last week.

Bennett Napier, star Tar Baby sprint man, again took both the 100 yard and 220 yard dashes. He finished well in front in both events. In the 100 Bryan of Duke and Tucker of Carolina followed him in that order. Sizemore, Duke's big threat came in fourth. In the 220 Sizemore and Bryan, both of Duke trailed Napier to the tape.

Bernie Keeney who took the quarter mile last week repeated again and led Everhardt of Duke and Rosser of Carolina at the finish. Bill Batt, star Tar Baby quarter miler, was on the sidelines due to a bad cold.

Brains and pluck won the 2 mile distance race for Louis Conte, diminutive Tar Baby. Faced with the fact that Neal, who won the race last week could not compete because he was called home due to the illness of his mother, the little two miler let the two Duke entrants fight between themselves for seven laps and then on the last lap unleashed a spurt that had him 20 yards ahead at the finish. MacQuarrie and Wetherill of Duke were second and third respectively.

Bill Rankin took first in the 120 yard high hurdles and second in the 220 low hurdles. He led the high hurdles by a large margin. Phillips and Moss of Duke took the other places. Sizemore of Duke took the low hurdle race but was closely followed by Rankin and Montgomery also of Carolina.

Duke took first and third in the 880 yard race as Ford beat Vandell. Ford also won the event last week. Dearborn came in third. Mark of Carolina led most of the way but tired and finished fourth to Dearborn in what was a thrilling duel for third place.

Carolina took the field events again as Evins led the scorers. He took the shot put with a heave of 42 feet 2 inches, and the discus with a throw of 117 feet 11 1-2 inches. Williams and Wesselhof of Duke were second and third in the shot while Barwick of Carolina was second in the discus with Krausbone of Duke third.

Tucker again won the broad-jump with a leap of 20 feet. Plump of Duke and Moore of Carolina were second and third. Bear, Tar Baby polevaulter, tied the class B contest this year.

Lead Tar Heels To Important Victories

Pictured above are six of the outstanding athletes in yesterday's contest. The upper three are track stars who were instrumental in Carolina's 64½-61½ win over Penn State. Childers scored three first places for fifteen points. Hawthorne had a first and a second in the hurdles, and McRae turned in a first in the mile run. The three men shown below were the leaders in Carolina's 11-1 massacre of Virginia in baseball. Weathers and Captain Powell were two heavy hitters in yesterday's fray while Joe Griffith halted the Cavaliers' four-game winning streak, setting them down with four measly bingles. The Daily Tar Heel regrets that it has no picture of Narcissus Dixon, who clouted out three hits and batted in four runs.

Carolina Tennis Team Wins From Brown University, 8-0

FIVE INTRAMURAL BASEBALL TEAMS LEFT IN RUNNING

Two Fraternity and Three Dormitory Teams Undeclared as Last Week Begins.

As competition in the intramural baseball leagues swings into the last week, two fraternity and three dormitory teams are left in the list of the undefeated. Only one nine, the Sigma Chi's, fell during the week from the list of leaders.

Chi Psi with seven wins and Beta Theta Pi with five victories are the teams which constitute the unbeaten class in the fraternity loop. In the dormitory league, three teams, Carr, Best House, and the Laundry Club, with seven victories each, are all undefeated. Carr is scheduled to meet Best House early in the week and the Laundry Club later, so the week's play should show some decided changes in the standing of teams in that loop.

Four Clubs With One Loss
The line-up of teams who have lost only one contest, and are therefore still in the running, has been materially changed. Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Sigma Chi, and Zeta Psi are the fraternity teams in that category, while Lewis is the sole representative of the dormitories in the class.

In the tennis campaigns only two dormitory and six fraternity teams are left in the unbeaten class. The dormitories are Ruffin and Carr, while Chi Psi, Sigma Nu, Sigma Phi Sigma, Sigma Chi, Phi Delta Theta, and Pi Kappa Alpha are still undefeated in fraternity competition. Only two of the leaders, Chi Psi, and Ruffin scheduled to see action tomorrow.

One team in each sport was dropped from the list of unbeaten during the past week. In tennis, Old West received its first setback from the hands of Ruffin, while Sigma Chi was beaten by Kappa Alpha in baseball competition.

Trackmen Dash To Close Victory Over Penn State

TAR HEELS HAVE HEAVY SCHEDULE STARTING MONDAY

Track, Tennis, Baseball, and Golf Teams See Action During Current Week.

Tar Heel teams will see action in tennis, track, and baseball this week with the state track meet, Southern Conference tennis tournament, and several baseball games scheduled. Besides tennis seven regular events, the Southern Conference team, individual, and doubles tournaments are being run off, the state track meet takes place, and the Southern Conference golf tournament gets underway.

Only two of the regular events are scheduled for Chapel Hill, however, the tennis tournaments, lasting four days, are being played on the University courts. The varsity baseball team sees action against two Big Five teams one here and one away.

The frosh baseball team, which has four games during the week, all away from home, opens its week's work Monday, playing Wake Forest's yearling nine at Wake Forest.

Tuesday the varsity tennis team returns home from their northern trip and meets the University of South Carolina's net team. Also on Tuesday the varsity nine plays a return game with Wake Forest, state title holder, at Chapel Hill. In the first meeting of these two teams this year the Tar Heels handed the Deacons a 4 to 2 beating. The third event for Tuesday is the Tar Baby-State baseball game, at Raleigh.

The first of the Southern Conference tennis tournaments is carded to be run off on the University courts Wednesday. This is the team tourney and is scheduled to be completed on the first day.

Thursday the individual and doubles Southern Conference tennis tournament begins and continues through Saturday. This is also on the Carolina courts. The only event besides the tennis on the card for Friday is the Tar Baby-Blue Imp baseball game which is to be played at Duke.

Another big Saturday is scheduled for next week-end with all the varsity teams seeing action. The varsity baseball club plays their first contest of the year with the Blue Devils, and although the game is at Duke a big Carolina crowd will probably witness it. The varsity track team is also at Duke where the annual State championship meet is taking place.

The individual and doubles tennis tournaments end Saturday. Coach Kenfield's golfers see action at Sedgfield, where the annual Southern Conference golf tournament gets underway. The golf continues through Monday and Tuesday. The frosh nine is the fifth Carolina team to see action Saturday and plays Oak Ridge at the Cadet institution.

Carolina's Phantom Sprinters Take Fourth Straight Dual Meet by Close Score.

CHILDERS HIGH POINT MAN

Mullis, Abernethy, Hawthorne, McRae, LeGore, Jackson Also Take Firsts in Meet.

(Special to the DAILY TAR HEEL.)

State College, Pa., May 6.—Splashing and plunging their way to ten first places, Carolina's Phantom Sprinters registered their fourth straight dual victory of the spring here today over the highly touted Penn State crew by the nerve-racking score of 64 1-2-61 1-2.

Odell Childers, Carolina's Galloping Ghost, took both the dashes and then scored his first five points of the season in the broad jump, to take high scoring honors for the day with fifteen points. The Tar Heel flash finished ahead of Dale, Penn State star in both the 100 and 220 sprints.

Oscar Mullis was next to Childers in scoring two firsts against the Nittany Lions. Mullis took both the discus and shot put. Frank Abernethy and Tom Hawthorne tied for third in total points scored as each had a first and a second for eight tallies. Abernethy took the high hurdles while Hawthorne came in ahead of his teammate in the lows. These two men alternated for second place in these two events.

Ralston LeGore in the javelin, Ed McRae in the mile, and Don Jackson's tie for first in the pole vault, completed Carolina's share of the possible fourteen firsts. Hawthorne, Abernethy, Sullivan, and Stafford scored Carolina's second place points. Sullivan placed second to King in the two mile run and Crook Stafford tied for second in the high jump. Fox scored Carolina's only point in the 440 run while Hubbard and MacDonald were the other third place winners for the Tar Heels.

Coach Bob Fetzter reported that about two thousand spectators braved the rainy weather to witness the meet. Coach Fetzter stated that it had rained continuously at State College since Friday. The rain and sloppy condition of the track made fast times almost an impossibility.

INTERVIEWS SHOW STUDENT LEADERS OPPOSED TO WAR

town, Ohio, a junior and an active participant in campus affairs, voices a decidedly different opinion. He declares himself "opposed to warfare on every ground." "I would not bear arms abroad, nor would I fight if the country were invaded by a conquering army. Unconditional pacifism and the immediate disarmament of nations is mandatory in the face of modern Europe's 'Armed Camp.' ... Without disarmament war is inevitable in the near future."

International Movement

Opinions such as these have been solicited on many campuses, reverberations of the furor created in England when earlier this year the Oxford Union went on record saying that "under no circumstances" did they intend to bear arms "for King and country." Echoes of this movement were first heard across the seas when the Brown University Daily Herald called for a united protest by American college students against future wars. The Columbia Spectator, stormy petrel of collegiate newspapers, then undertook to determine by a poll the proportion of the American college students that would refuse to bear arms in any future war. This survey represents the first attempt to secure voluntary interviews on a campus, which, as the following indicate, show a variety matched only by the independence of thought.

Ben Proctor of Chapel Hill, widely known on the campus as candidate for president of the student body this year, sounds a cynical note. "The only kind of war that happens now is caused by international anarchy in economics which result from our capitalistic mode of production. These wars are senseless, and I refuse to bear arms under any circumstances to defend the mistakes of Morgan, Rockefeller, et al. I shall keep myself out of any conflict that is not for social betterment."

Would Volunteer Several

"I don't believe in war," says Jim McCachren of Charlotte, freshman athlete. "I favor settling international disputes by arbitration. But if a war should be declared, I would enlist and not wait to be drafted. But aside from this, I should like to add that the C. M. T. C. appears to me to be an excellent character-builder."

Tom Parsons of Rockingham, senior and light-heavyweight boxer, declares that there is little advantage in "entering the ring in order that the world be made safe for the Continental Oil Company." He added further that he would unhesitatingly go to war in national defense. "But war can and should be avoided. It is merely a question of not being duped by the brass band and the military uniform."

A sociology student, Nat Ames of Boston, senior, looks at the matter from its effect on the population, among other considerations. "By selection, armies are superior physically and mentally—if not morally—to the common population. War exterminates the best progenitors of the future generations, facilitating, as it does, a survival of the unfit. Personally, only if our backyards were invaded would I take up arms."

Pass Resolutions on Athletics
In regard to athletics the following resolutions were approved both by discussion groups and the plenary session: That the Federation go on record as favoring and aiding in the development of a method of cooperation in athletics between the Big Five and the Little Seven, and that the Big Five create a trophy similar to the Little Seven trophy, which would be awarded to the school amassing the greatest number of points in athletics during the year;

That the Federation go on record as approving the awarding of scholarships on athletic as well as scholastic ability, but should go no farther (practice of giving sinecures definitely commercializes college sports); That the Federation oppose the tendency of over emphasizing athletics; That colleges in North Carolina cooperate in reducing fees for athletic events for the students of the schools participating.

making me believe that war was the only avenue of escape."

Pete Ivey of Rocky Mount, incoming editor of the Buccaneer, thinks that going to war is no laughing matter. "But," says Pete, "if the United States would go to war tomorrow, I would probably enlist. It would be best to volunteer and be a hero."

"I should like to see the cannon fodder of the next war refuse to bear arms," declares J. C. Robbins, senior of Jamestown. "War seems to be only an imperialistic scheme of national governments, and the sooner individuals refuse to be influenced by the well-directed propaganda of national leaders, sooner wars will cease to exist."

War Economic Travesty
John O'Neil of Henderson, this year's Phi Beta Kappa president, student councilman, and commerce student, gives the economic interpretation. "War is a puerile expression of bravado, dictated by a few in order to preserve properties they own or are interested in. I would not bear arms unless in case of physical compulsion."

To complete the survey, Haywood Weeks of Swansboro, retiring president of the student body, adds that he is a pacifist to the extent that he believes in exhausting all diplomatic possibilities before entering into a war. "However," he said, "if the war involved our national welfare, I would do my part to defend it."

Applications for Degrees

Must Be Filed Tomorrow

Students expecting to complete the required work for a degree by June must file an application for the degree at the registrar's office by tomorrow, it was announced yesterday. It is important that this be done unless an application has already been filed with one of the deans.

Junior-Senior Dance Committee

Bill McKee has announced that the junior-senior dance committee will meet in Graham Memorial this evening at 9:00 o'clock. All members are urged to be present as some important details of the dance must be discussed and decided upon.

Freshmen to Hear Quartet

The negro quartet of the Pearly Gates troupe which will give a performance Tuesday night will entertain freshman assembly tomorrow morning in Memorial hall at 10:30 o'clock. Attendance of the first-year class will be checked.

Iris Garden Opens

Bill Hunt announced yesterday that his iris garden will be open to visitors until Thursday of this week. Cards have been sent out in the state, and many are expected to visit the garden today.

Committee to Meet

The Arts and Crafts committee of the Dogwood Festival will convene at the home of Mrs. George Howe tomorrow night at 8:00 o'clock to discuss plans for next year.

Feature Board to Meet

Members of the feature board will meet with the chairman for the regular weekly meeting in the offices of the DAILY TAR HEEL tomorrow afternoon at 2:30.

for week program.

Later in the evening at 11:00 o'clock the class will be tendered a free performance at the Carolina theatre through the courtesy of E. Carrington Smith, theatre manager.

Complete Program

Vesper services will take place Wednesday night at 7:00 o'clock in Gerrard hall. Immediately following the services, election of permanent class officers will be in order.

A similar vesper will be conducted Thursday night at the same time, after which there will be meetings of the several commencement committees.

Dances Next Week-end

Friday night the first of the set of three junior-senior dances will be given in the Tin Can with Bert Lown and his Hotel Biltmore orchestra furnishing the music. This dance, known as the Junior Prom, will begin at 9:00 o'clock and last until 1:00 o'clock Saturday morning.

The second in the dance series will be given Saturday afternoon in the Tin Can, known as the junior-senior tea dance.

The week's activities and the week-end's festivities will come to a close with a formal evening affair Saturday night in the Tin Can. This Senior Ball will start at 9:00 o'clock and continue until 12:00.

Club Meeting Put Off

Due to the inability of the speaker for the occasion to attend, the meeting of the North Carolina club for tomorrow night will be postponed.

manufacture and sale for the sum total of six burners. Bunsen sent the University a half-dozen of the improved burners.

The burners still remain "Bunsen" in name, although Dr. Venable was the true inventor. As time has worn on, more and more people have come to feel that he was virtually robbed of the credit and reward rightfully his. Students laboring here in the building conceived by and named for Venable are generally unaware that the burner they use so often is actually an invention of the head of the department emeritus.

When Dr. Venable was growing into manhood, chemistry and the natural sciences were in their primitive stages. As an undergraduate, he was especially interested in the sciences and classics. For some time he was confronted with the problem of being unable to make a choice between the two. It is difficult to conjecture what the outcome would have been if Dr. Venable had chosen to pursue his study of the classics rather than that of chemistry. However, the contributions of the "Grand Old Man of Chemistry" are evident to anyone who passed through the library and laboratories of the building which bears his name.

Although he did not receive full credit due him for his valuable work, Dr. Venable still and spread the main ideas of advancement which were to be the development of the next hundred years. "They were the seed of the growth of the last century," claimed Bradshaw.

Bringing the moral of his talk to the present time Bradshaw asserted that youth today was facing another turn in the civilized world and should be ready to discard the old ideas of government which obviously would not work. Someone has to work out new ideas.

"What this new turn will be, no one knows," he continued. "How it will appear seems clear when youth is freed from take-it-for-grantedness and inertia of the elders. The world challenges youth to find a new way of thinking and living."

One way that the federation can help carry the world into a new epoch is to continue its associations after undergraduate days, Bradshaw claimed. The federation is well suited for the work and can start a youth movement here in America if it will continue to develop a unified manner to govern the scale of life.

PRESIDENT GIVES COMPLETE PLANS FOR FINAL WEEK

Cate Outlines Program of Commencement to Seniors at Meeting Last Night.

The complete program for the 1933 commencement was announced last night by President Arlindo Cate at a meeting of the senior class in Gerrard hall which officially inaugurated senior week.

The combined exercises as announced, will last only three days this year. They covered four last year.

Meeting Follows Vespers

Cate stated before giving the commencement details that immediately following the senior vespers service tonight at 7:00 o'clock in Gerrard hall a meeting of the fourth-year group will take place. More information regarding the dance bids will be forthcoming at that time.

The vespers will be conducted by Professor Horace H. Williams of the philosophy department. Dr. Williams' service is an annual feature of senior week.

Cate also announced that the diploma fee has been reduced to five dollars. The regular charge in the Association of American Universities is twenty-five dollars.

The seniors will be guests at a free show tonight of E. Carington Smith, manager of the Carolina theatre, at 11:00 o'clock. Only seniors in class sweaters will be admitted.

Commencement Program

On Sunday, June 4, the commencement exercises will begin with the Baccalaureate sermon in Memorial hall at 11:00

LAST RITES HELD FOR BILL ROBERTS

Fraternity Brothers Attend Services at Home of Student in Marshall.

Funeral services for Bill Roberts, popular University student who was killed in an automobile accident Saturday night, were conducted yesterday at Marshall, his home. A group of members of Beta Theta Pi, Roberts' fraternity, attended the rites.

The car in which Roberts was riding struck a car near Hope Valley, and he was thrown from the machine. The other members of the party were not seriously hurt.

Roberts' remains were sent home Sunday accompanied by Henry Anderson, his fraternity brother, who awaited the group that attended his funeral.

Roberts was well-known about the campus, having participated actively during his college career in extra-curricular organizations. As a freshman and sophomore he was a prominent member of the Y. M. C. A. cabinets and of the TAR HEEL staff, and his scholarship ranking was well above average.

Ralph Myers, driver of the automobile, and Miss Verdie Lavesque of Durham, were discharged from Duke hospital yesterday afternoon. Attaches at the institution reported that John Boynton, who was also in the car, spent a comfortable day.

Students In Accident Reported Improving

Miss Dorothy Norman and D. Allen Green, University students injured Friday night when the car in which they were riding skidded into a ditch on the Raleigh road, were reported as showing considerable improvement yesterday at Watts hospital in Durham.

Miss Norman's back was injured, painfully but not seriously, and she suffered minor cuts and bruises. Green was badly shaken up in the accident.

Officer John N. Blake, University policeman, also in Watts hospital, was said to be getting along nicely.

SCIENCE ACADEMY TO CONVEENE HERE

1934 Meeting of North Carolina Scientists Will Meet in Chapel Hill.

The North Carolina Academy of Science will meet in Chapel Hill next year, it was decided at the meeting at Davidson Saturday.

The officers for the year 1934 were elected at the closing session. B. W. Wells, professor of botany at State College, was elected president of the academy, and Miss Helen Barton, professor of mathematics at the Woman's College of the University, was elected vice-president. H. L. Bloomquist, professor of botany at Duke University, was elected secretary-treasurer. The executive committee for the coming year, in addition to the officers mentioned above, is composed of F. W. Sherwood of the state experiment station, E. T. Browne, professor of mathematics in the University, and Charles Heck, professor of physics at State College.

The officers of the chemistry section are H. D. Crockford of the University, chairman, J. E. Saylor of Duke, vice-chairman, R. W. Bost of the University, secretary and treasurer, and N. Isbell of Wake Forest, councillor.

The officers for the mathematics section are E. L. Mackie, chairman, and E. R. C. Miles, secretary; for the physics section, E. K. Plyler of the University, chairman, and C. C. Warfield, secretary.

C. F. Korston, professor of forestry at Duke University, was selected as representative to the American Association of the Academies of Science.

The silver loving cup, the high school prize given by the academy, was won by Lane Barksdale of the Greensboro high school. His essay was entitled "Orchid Hunting in Guilford County."

In addition to the election of officers, 31 new members were elected to the academy.

DANCE LEADERS TO MEET IN GERRARD

A meeting of the eighteen men who have been selected to lead the Junior-Senior dances this week-end has been called by Lindy Cate, president of the senior class, at chapel period this morning in Gerrard hall. Some time ago the class of '33 and '34 each chose nine representatives to serve as dance leaders and all these students are urged to attend this short but important meeting.

FAMOUS SINGER TO APPEAR HERE

Louise Bernhardt, Operatic Star, Sings in Last Student Entertainment Program.

Louise Bernhardt, celebrated American contralto and former Chicago Civic Opera star, will sing here at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow night in Memorial hall, as a feature on the student entertainment program.

Tickets for the program, other than student entertainment tickets, have been reduced from $1.00 to $.50 and will be on sale in the office of Dean A. W. Hobbs today and tomorrow.

Prize Winner
Miss Bernhardt, of Connecticut, has been winner in the National Federation of Music Clubs contest in 1931 and of the Walter W. Naumberg musical foundation prize the previous year. She was a member of the Chicago Civic Opera company for a season and of the American Opera for three seasons.

During the past two years Miss Bernhardt has made three coast-to-coast tours, appearing in some eighty concerts. Throughout the tours she has received generous praise from an enthusiastic press.

Miss Bernhardt has been repeatedly praised for her dramatic ability, acquired during operatic experience, with which she enlivens her concerts. Audiences are delighted by her charming stage presence as well as by the rich tonal quality and control of her voice.

"The youthful, slender, blond singer presents a figure of more than usual dignity and poise," the Herald Tribune wrote after a recital in New York. "Miss Bernhardt's voice is one of considerable volume and flexibility. It is warm in timbre and of good range. Her phrasing is always intelligent and in good taste."

PARKER INDUCTED INTO MEMBERSHIP OF LEGAL GROUP

Four Former Members Assist in Initiation of Circuit Court Judge.

The Honorable John J. Parker, judge of the fourth circuit of the United States circuit court of appeals, was initiated last night into honorary membership in Vance Inn chapter of Phi Delta Phi, international legal fraternity.

Four former members of the organization aided in conducting Judge Parker's initiation. They were: Associate Justice George Connor of the North Carolina supreme court; Henry M. London, secretary of the North Carolina Bar association; J. Will Pless, member of the national council of Phi Delta Phi; and Dr. A. C. McIntosh of the University law faculty.

A banquet at the Carolina Inn for visiting members of Hughes Inn of Phi Delta Phi from Duke followed the initiation. At that time, Judge Parker was welcomed by Pless. The new member of the group delivered the principal address.

Spann To Speak

The Chapel Hill branch of the American Association of University Women meets as usual tonight at 8:00 at the parish house of the Episcopal church. Dr. Meno Spann will speak on "The Present Situation in Germany."

DANCE BIDS MAY BE BOUGHT TODAY

Sale of Invitations to Students Other Than Juniors and Seniors on at Y.

Students of the University other than juniors and seniors may purchase bids to the annual Junior-Senior dance set for $1.50. The sale of these bids will be conducted in the lobby of the Y. M. C. A. today and tomorrow.

The time for the sale of the bids will be during chapel period today and tomorrow, and from 2:00 to 5:00 o'clock on both of these days. The money obtained from the sale of these bids will be used to help defray the senior's share of the expenses of the dances according to a plan adopted by the classes.

Seniors Pay 50 Cents

Juniors and seniors will obtain their bids in the Y lobby tomorrow, Thursday, and Friday. Invitations will be given out to the members of these classes at chapel period on these two days and also from 1:30 to 5:30 o'clock Thursday and from 2:00 to 4:00 Friday. Seniors will be required to pay a fee of 50 cents in order to receive their bids.

This annual series of dances will take place Friday and Saturday of this week and will include three dances. The junior prom opens the set Friday night, 9:00 to 1:00 o'clock, in the Tin Can. Saturday, there will be a tea dance 4:00 to 7:00 o'clock and the senior ball comes that night, 9:00 to 12:00 o'clock.

Bert Lown and his nationally known orchestra will furnish the music for all the dances. His orchestra is now playing an engagement at the Park Central hotel in New York and is generally considered one of the finest dance bands in the country.

THOR JOHNSON TO DIRECT CONCERT OF SALON GROUP

Presentation Will Be Made Tonight at Prospect Hill High School.

The Carolina Salon Ensemble, under the direction of Thor Johnson, will appear in a concert in the Prospect Hill high school auditorium tonight at 7:30 o'clock. The recital is sponsored by the Parent-Teacher association there and was arranged by the school principal, H. McSwain, an alumnus of the University.

The appearance will be in the form of a lecture concert in which Johnson will point out the uses of each instrument in the orchestra. Burke Smith, flutist, Harry Lee Knox, pianist, and Raymond Brietz, baritone, will perform as soloists. Knox will play the solo part of Hazelman's Grainger in the Mountains.

The complete program is as follows: Farandole, from the Arlesienne Suite No. 2 by Bizet; Mountain Song by Stringfield; Ungarische Melodie by Keller Bella; Aubade, from Le Cid by Massenet; and Prelude du Deluge by Saint-Saens.

Magazine Deadline

The deadline for contributions to the next issue of the Carolina Magazine is today, it was announced yesterday by E. C. Daniel, editor.

Mickle Selects Soph Executive Committee

Russell Mickle, president of the rising sophomore class, yesterday announced appointments to positions on the executive committee. The group will meet Thursday night at 7:30 o'clock in 215 Graham Memorial to formulate plans for next year.

Those named to the committee are as follows: Barney Keeney, chairman, J. C. Grier, W. C. Durfee, J. R. Taylor, Vivian Grisette, Jack Clare, Al Miller, Walter Graham, Lewis Barnes, Francis Fairley, David Scott, Irving D. Suss, Earl Connell, Bill R. Weaver, Bill Yandell, John Briggs, Bill Daniels, and Bill Reid.

PRACTICE DRAMAS TO BE PRESENTED

Eight Studio Productions Directed by Playmaker Students Start Thursday.

Eight studio productions, directed by students in Professor Samuel Selden's play-directing course, will be presented Thursday, Friday, and Saturday evenings of this week in the Playmaker theatre as the next feature on the Playmakers season-ticket program. Seven of the productions are original plays by Playmakers, with one by a professional dramatist.

The Stronger, by Johann August Strindberg, the one professionally written drama, will begin the program Thursday night. Directed by Martha Hatton, the cast includes Margaret Hervey, Ellen Stuart, Walter Terry.

Author Harris

Judgment Comes To Daniel follows, written by Bernice Kelly Harris and directed by Mrs. H. R. Totten. In the cast are Muriel Wolf, Irene Fussler, Aileen Stewart, Elizabeth Bolton, C. K. Carmichael.

The concluding production on Thursday is Foster Fitz-Simons' A Little Boat To India, directed by Jo Orendorff. Peggy Hervey, Foster Fitz-Simons, Eugenia Rawls, Walter Terry, Forney Rankin compose the cast.

The Friday program opens with Martha Hatton directing her own play Comedy At Five, with a cast of Margaret Hervey, Foster Fitz-Simons, Forney Rankin, Eugenia Rawls. Elizabeth Barnett directs Eternal Spring by Robert Barnett, which follows. The cast is Ed Martin, Margaret Hervey, Ellen Stuart.

Ed Martin directs the last play of the evening, William Boyun's Blow Me Down, with a cast of William Pitt, Malcolm Moore, Edgar Broadhurst, Kathrine Jamieson.

The final trio of plays on Saturday night opens with Ellen Stewart's The Queen Was In The Kitchen, directed by James Thompson. Foster Fitz-Simons, Ellen Stewart, Marion Tatum are included in the cast.

Eugenia Rawls' play in two acts, Etoah Plantation, is directed by the author and presented by Aileen Ewart, William Wang, Robert Leeper, Betty Bolton, James Thompson, Foster Fitz-Simons, Phoebe Barr, Bob Reid, Bill Boyun, Brad White, Harry Coble, Red Rankin, Frank McIntosh, Wilbur Dorsett, Ed Conrad, Elmer Oettinger. The play will be accompanied by Thor Johnson.

HALL PRESENTS NEGRO MORALITY DRAMA TONIGHT

Trained Cast of Thirty Students Will Be Assisted by Local Chorus.

The production, Pearly Gates, will be presented tonight in Memorial hall at 8:30 o'clock by students from Clark University and the Gammon Theological seminary in Atlanta, Georgia. Aside from the cast of thirty students, there will be a negro chorus selected from Chapel Hill and Durham.

Pearly Gates is based on the negro spiritual and is written and directed by Professor Frederick Hall of Clark University. Professor Hall is widely known among negro musical teachers and is head of the departments of music in Clark University and Gammon Theological seminary.

The musical morality play strives to intensify the meaning of the spiritual through songs and pantomime, and to outline more clearly the religious beliefs and the simple philosophies of those who originated them.

The play is divided into three scenes: the first shows a street near the meeting ground of a revival; the second is at the revival ground where the negro chorus gets into full swing; and the last portrays the Celestial City as the darkies see it. The negro chorus is on the stage throughout the play, as spirituals are sung at frequent intervals.

The drama is being presented by the University Y. M. C. A. as the year's feature program under the committee on race study and inter-racial cooperation.

LITERARY CRITIC SPEAKS TONIGHT

Mrs. May Lamberton Becker, Well Known Author, to Give Lecture.

Under the auspices of the school of library science Mrs. May Lamberton Becker, authoress, critic and lecturer, will speak tonight at 7:30 o'clock in Gerrard hall on "The Important New Books."

Mrs. Becker is the authoress of Adventures in Reading and other standard guides in reading, editor of a collection of stories, which includes Golden Tales from the Old South, and conductor of a column in the Saturday Review of Literature.

At a meeting this afternoon, Mrs. Becker will speak on "Literature for Young People."

Tomorrow at the meeting of the North Carolina Library association convening at the Women's College in Greensboro, her talk at a dinner meeting will be upon "Books and Plays for a Changing World."

DAILY TAR HEEL STAFF WILL CONVEENE TODAY

Regular meetings of two divisions of the DAILY TAR HEEL staff will be conducted this afternoon at the office in Graham Memorial.

Members of the reportorial staff will gather at 3:00 o'clock, and city editors and desk men will meet at 3:30 o'clock. Attendance at these meetings will be required.

DEACONS LEADING IN RACE

Griffith Is Given Rest Until Conference Game With Blue Devils Saturday.

Fresh from an easy 11 to 1 victory over Virginia University, Carolina's baseball team meets Wake Forest, state champions, this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock on Emerson field.

The game will have little effect on Carolina's Big Five standing, as the Tar Heels are practically out of the race with three defeats. However, Wake Forest is at present tied with Davidson for the Big Five lead.
The Deacons are not in the conference.

In the first contest between these two teams, Joe Griffith pitched the Tar Heels to a 4 to 2 victory over Lefty Barnes, star Deacon southpaw. It was Barnes' first Big Five loss in two years. Barnes is scheduled to face the Carolina batters

TRACKMEN WORK FOR THIRTEENTH STATE TRIUMPH

Meet Will Indicate Likely Winner of Conference Outdoor Crown.

Thirteen may mean bad luck and ill omen for many athletic teams, but Coach Bob Fetzter's Carolina track team will not regard this traditional superstition in their thirteenth attempt to cop the annual North Carolina collegiate track and field meet which will be run off in the Duke stadium Saturday.

For the past twelve seasons,
Tar Heel track teams have maintained an unbroken line of state titles, and even barring the possible ill of the number "13," Carolina is favored by track dopsters to continue its reign as queen of North Carolina college track.

This state event is always regarded as the final preparation and finish for the annual Southern Conference outdoor track and field carnival which will be staged also at Duke over the two-day interim, Friday and Saturday, May 19 and 20. Since it is generally conceded by the sporting savants of Dixie track Carolina and Duke have the strongest teams in the conference, the performances of these two teams will be watched with more than casual interest.

The basis for the Tar Heels' inside on the favorites to cop the state crown will be Carolina's strength in the field events and enough potential seconds and thirds and even firsts in the running events.

But this year's meet will not be any walk-away by any club, however, neither the Carolina aggregation nor the ambitious Blue Devils can afford to disregard the potential strength of the "dark horse" Davidson club.
The Presbyterians will enter the meet as a strong contender for state title honors by virtue of their recent showing with the Devils in a dual meet in which Duke was lucky to win by a close margin.

The Wildcats will present one of the most brilliant runners in the south in Fred Fleagle, fine dash man, whose race against Johnny Brownlee, Duke, and Odell Childers, Carolina sophomore, will provide the fans with a three-cornered duel which should make North Carolina track history.

PHI SIGMA KAPPA DEFEATS STRONG SIGMA NU OUTFIT

Aycock Downs Mangum, 15-5,
In Only Other Intramural
Baseball Tilt Played.

Only two of the scheduled six contests on yesterday's intramural baseball program developed into actual engagements.

Sigma Nu, minus its star hurler, Ken Byerly, dropped a 9-4 decision to the strong Phi Sigma Kappa nine, which wound up its season with a record of six wins in eight starts. The game was also Sigma Nu's wind-up, and gave the Snakes a season's record of five victories in eight games.

Fitzgerald, on the mound for the winners, was invincible for four innings, while his mates ran up a 6-0 lead. Sigma Nu got three tallies in the fifth and one in the sixth, but the Phi Sigma Kappa outfit was too far in the lead to be headed.

Long and Person stood out for the losers, who gave their pitcher poor support, while the entire winning team played well.

Mangum Bows

Aycock took a 15-5 win from Mangum in an abbreviated contest. The winners went right to work and got themselves nine tallies in the first frame. Four more in the third and a lone run in each of the second and fourth innings clinched the victory.

Spenser stood out for the losers,
while for Aycock Rankin,
Cox, and Smith played best.

S. A. E., Phi Gamma Delta, and Phi Delta Theta took forfeits from Chi Phi, Sigma Phi Epsilon, and Lambda Chi Alpha respectively. The Delta Kappa Epsilon-Beta Theta Pi contest was postponed.

TENNIS RESULTS

Grimes won his sixth tennis match in seven starts and knocked Ruffin, previously undefeated, from the league lead, 2-1.
Carr remains the only undefeated dormitory net outfit, with two matches to go. The Ruffin doubles outfit had match point in the deciding doubles engagement, but lost it and subsequently the match.

Onasch won his singles for Ruffin, 4-5, 5-1, 5-3, over Abernethy, and Mallonee beat Morris-son, 5-0, 4-5, 5-1, to even the count. The doubles went to Grimes tandem, 5-1, 4-5, 6-4.

S. P. E. downed Chi Phi, 3-0,
A. T. O. took Kappa Alpha, 2-1, and Best House, Phi Alpha, and Mangum gained forfeit decisions from Atlantics, T. E. P., and New Dorms respectively.

No intramural sports will be broad jump when Henry Fulmer and Floyd Higby, of Duke and Carolina, respectively, clash.

The Tar Heel entrant was not able to compete with the Blue Devil ace in the recent Carolina-Duke dual meet because of sickness. But Higby should be in fine form for the Saturday meet and may be able to smash a state record. Track fans of this section will recall last year's meeting between the two stars.

In the 120 high hurdles, Frank Abernethy, Carolina, who beat Brownlee in this year's dual meet, should be among the heralded performers among the timber clearers. Oscar Mullis and Ralston LeGore, both Tar Heel field men, will be favored to cop honors in their respective discus and javelin events.

The mile and two-mile should again provide fine performances centering again around Carolina and Duke entries. In the mile,

FIRST YEAR TEAM TO OPPOSE DUKE

Bernie Friedman to Meet Harris, Conqueror in First Meet With Duke.

Bernie Friedman will get his return match with Charlie Harris this afternoon when the Carolina yearlings clash with the Duke freshman netters. In their first meeting Harris was the winner, 6-4, 6-1.

The team will also be out to avenge its defeat of 6-3 earlier in the season. The team will show a new line-up from the one which represented Carolina in the last match. Sobol, Williams, and Baukney will not appear due to ineligibility.

The team to play today will be Friedman, Hunter Lott,
Mark Lynch, Jimmy Johnston,
Z. V. Linker, and D. P. Jones.
The doubles teams have not definitely been paired.

The freshmen will close their season with Devitt Prep of Washington on May 17 and 18.
One match will be played by the varsity reserves with the Devitt School. There is a match pending with the State College freshmen.

CAROLINA TRAILS IN BIG FIVE RACE AS FRAY GOES ON

Davidson and Wake Forest Lead
While Duke and State Are Tied for Second.

Anything might happen in the Big Five baseball race this week as all the teams see action. Five games are on the schedule, with Wake Forest and Davidson, tied for top position, seeing action in three and two contests respectively.

Davidson and Wake Forest are leading the race, each with two victories and one defeat.
Duke and State, each with two losses, are tied for third, while Carolina occupies the cellar alone as a result of three defeats.

Carolina and Wake Forest are matched this afternoon in the first of the week's battles.
The Tar Heels handed the leaders a beating in the first meeting of these two teams. Wednesday, Davidson, the other leader, plays Duke. Duke handed Davidson their only Big Five loss in an earlier battle.

Providing both Davidson and Wake Forest each win today and tomorrow they will have a fine chance to decide the lead Thursday in their scheduled contest at Wake Forest. None of the teams see action Friday.

Saturday every team is carded to play but Davidson. Carolina has their first battle of the year with their old rival, Duke, at Durham, while State and Wake Forest oppose each other at Wake Forest. Wake Forest downed State in an earlier contest.

Last week only one game was played in the Big Five race.
State downing Carolina 7 to 6.
All the teams battled out of state opponents with Duke staging a very successful northern trip getting wins over Fordham, Manhattan, and Princeton.

Red Lewis and Ed McRae are slated for another great fight while in the two-mile Lewis Sullivan and Bob Hubbard will defend Carolina.

Ray Rex, gigantic and colorful State field man, will enter the meet. Although State does not have a regular track team this year, they will enter several strong men of fine prep and freshman records. Rex, himself, set frosh records in the shot and discus.

VARSIITY GOLFERS TO TAKE ON DUKE

Carolina Linkmen Will Be Seeking Revenge for Early Defeat Today

With a 36 hole match with Duke scheduled for today and the Southern Conference tournament set for May 13-16,
Carolina's varsity golfers have a busy week ahead of them. In the early part of the season
Duke defeated the Tar Heels, but today things may be different as Coach Kenfield's boys have shown a vast improvement over their early season form.

The match will be played over the Hope Valley course, with the individual matches being played at 9:30 and the foursomes at 2:30. In the individual matches Alan Smith will face Roger Peacock, Erwin Laxton takes on June Caldwell of Duke, Captain Billy O'Brien of the Tar Heels encounters Bayard Storm, and Carl Cramer plays Jerry Sullivan of the Blue Devils. In the foursomes
Smith and Laxton face Peacock and Caldwell, while O'Brien and Cramer oppose Storm and Sullivan.

TAR BABIES BEAT BABY DEACONS IN RETURN GAME 15-9

Womble Stars With Homer and Three Singles as Montgomery
And Yeager Also Feature.

Getting off to a fast start Carolina's freshman baseball team downed Wake Forest 15 to 9 at Wake Forest yesterday.
It was the third win in four Big Five starts for the Tar Babies. The Baby Deacons won the first game between the teams.

Womble starred both abat and afield for the Carolina frosh. He clouted for the circuit and also smashed out three singles in his six times at bat.
Montgomery and Yeager also featured in the Tar Baby hitting spree. Montgomery smacked out a triple in one of his two chances while Yeager hit a three sacker, a double, a single in his four times up.

Rogers, cast in the role of a Wake Forest frosh relief twirler, had a perfect day at bat although shelled from the mound.
Rogers hit four singles.

Quacks Defeat Frosh

In a closely played and hotly contested baseball game between the freshman ball club and a team from the medical school played on Emerson field last Saturday, the "Quacks" eked out a 3-2 victory. Red Merritt, for-

Coaches Fetzter and Ranson wish that all Carolina track men report early today in order that there will be no conflict with the baseball game.

AROUND the FIELD

THE SENTIMENT AT DUKE

before the recent Carolina-Duke track meets was that the "boys at the Hill had better beat us in something this year because it is going to be their last chance."
This feeling existed just after the mammoth tennis carnival and on top of the double licking our tennis squad had handed them. Then came the track meet and Carolina won. It was a surprise win for many but these did not know that at least three Ransons had scouted the Devils in their meet with Washington and Lee. These brothers don't miss a trick, indeed they returned to the Hill with two notebooks full of hokey apiece.
All that night Dale had to figure out his notes in order to tell whether it was Brownlee or Red Lewis that took so many steps for this or that.

ODELL CHILDERS TURNED

in firsts in both the 100 and the 220 dashes against Penn State
Saturday in very impressive fashions. The track was in terrible shape due to heavy rains, and on top of that a high school and prep school meet had been held on it Saturday morning.
Carolina's mud-horse ploughed on through without much trouble, however, while his opposition slid around in the mire.
Childers finished comparatively clean while those behind looked as if they had been tarred and feathered. We ought to pray for a cloudburst along about this Saturday. Then Childers and Fleagle, of Davidson, might stop this Brownlee in the state meet.

TENNIS TEAM TO END DUAL MEET SEASON TODAY

Line-up Remains Same as Line-Up Used on Successful
Northern Trip.

The varsity is scheduled to play its last dual meet of the tennis season this year with the University of South Carolina here this afternoon. If the team wins today it will be its sixty-third consecutive victory.

Wilmer Hines will bring to an end his successful campaign of of varsity singles. Hines is still undefeated in four years of freshman and varsity competition. Harvey Harris is the only other varsity man who has gone through the season undefeated in varsity singles play.

Line-up

The team slated to play today will be the same as the one which represented the school on the successful northern trip:
Hines, Wright, Harris, Shuford,
Willis, Morgan, and Levitan.
The last two playing positions will be selected from the last three men.

Wilmer Hines and Lenoir
Wright, state intercollegiate doubles champions, will play first in the doubles matches.
Harris and Levitan will be teamed as the second pair. The remaining team is Shuford and Morgan.

The team closes its season with the Southern Conference tennis tournament to be played here beginning tomorrow. Wednesday morning and afternoon the team championships will be contested. From Thursday through Saturday the singles and doubles will be played.

POPULAR SHOWS SCHEDULED FOR LOCAL THEATRE

Slim Summerville Plays Today
At Carolina in "Out All Night."

May Day, marked by the advent of beer in Chapel Hill, has passed but the Carolina theatre is still celebrating the season with a "May shower" of popular movie attractions. Many of the presentations have been requested by patrons of the Carolina and the local cinema house plans to finish up the school year in fine style.

Tall, lean Slim Summerville continues the "May shower" today when he frolics in "Out All Night." Other attractions for this week are: James Cagney in "Picture Snatcher" tomorrow; Joe E. Brown as "Elmer the Great" Thursday; Maurice Chevalier in "Bed Time Story" Friday and "Central Airport" Saturday. Sunday a return engagement of "Madame Butterfly" will be shown.

Other Attractions

Other attractions to be shown in the movie feast before the end of the year are: "Today We Live" with Joan Crawford and Gary Cooper; "Temple Drake" starring Miriam Hopkins; "Working Man" with George Arliss taking the lead role; "Lily Turnip" with Ruth Chatterton; Charles Bickford in "Song of the Eagle"; "The White Sister" as shown by Helen Hayes and Gary Cooper; "Looking Forward" with Lewis Stone and Lionel Barrymore; Laurel and Hardy playing in the "Devil's Brother"; Edward J. Robinson in "Little Giant"; "Hell Below" with Robert Montgomery; John Barrymore in "Reunion in Vienna"; "Gold Diggers of Broadway," a musical comedy; Peggy Hopkins Joyce in "International House"; and "The Barbarians" starring Raymond Navarro.

Two return engagements of shows which have proved popular here have been billed. "State Fair," on which Paul Green collaborated, and "So This Is Africa" will be shown again.

JAMES TO LEAD FIRST OF WEEK'S DEVOTIONAL

"Pardner" James will lead the first of the optional Y. M. C. A. devotions for the week this morning at 10:30 o'clock in Memorial hall. Walter Patterson will play the organ.

Other leaders for the week will be Charles Bond on Wednesday and Sherwood Barefoot on Thursday. For the next week, the last week of the devotional programs this year, John Acee will lead on Tuesday, Bill Minor on Wednesday, and Jack Poole on Thursday.

ELISHA MITCHELL CLUB TO HEAR COBB TONIGHT

The Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society meets tonight at 7:30 o'clock in Phillips hall.

Two scientific talks will be given: "North Carolina Granites in Art" by Dr. Collier Cobb and "A Mathematical Problem Unsolved" by Dr. E. T. Browne. Election of officers will follow the lectures.

Quartet Fails to Appear

The freshman chapel period yesterday lasted only long enough for Harry F. Comer to announce the Negro quartet that was scheduled to sing a few numbers had not appeared. Comer announced that the quartet would probably sing this morning. A notice as to their appearance will be posted in the Y. M. C. A.

PRESIDENT GIVES COMPLETE PLANS FOR FINAL WEEK

o'clock in the morning. The Right Reverend E. A. Penick, Bishop of the Diocese of North Carolina of the Protestant Episcopal church, will deliver the address. Seniors will gather at the old well in caps and gowns an half-hour before the service.

At 4:00 o'clock Sunday afternoon a band concert will take place in Memorial hall, at 5:30 o'clock the class will meet in Gerrard hall, and at 8:30 o'clock that night the annual Oratorio will take place in Hill Music hall.

Monday, June 5, will be the annual Alumni Day on which class reunions, luncheons, and dinners will be in order, to which all seniors are invited. A reminiscence meeting of reuniting classes will take place in Gerrard hall at 10:30 o'clock in the morning and will be followed by the annual Alumni Luncheon in Swain hall at 1:00 o'clock. The Playmakers' production, Midsummer's Night Dream, will be given in the Forest theatre at 3:00 o'clock that afternoon, and at 5:30 President Frank P. Graham will tender a reception for the seniors, their parents, and their friends at his home. Reunion class suppers will be in order at 6:30 and the annual alumni reception and ball at 9:00 o'clock.

Senior prayers will be conducted Tuesday morning at 10:00 o'clock in Gerrard hall, which will be followed by the Class Day exercises under Davie Poplar at 10:30. The Mangum Medal oration will take place in Gerrard hall at 11:30, and the Bingham debate in the same place at 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

Final graduation exercises will take place in Kenan stadium at 7:00 o'clock the night of Tuesday, June 6.

Previous to Cate's explanation, Dr. C. S. Mangum, who has charge of the graduation day exercises, gave details regarding procedure at that time. He called a meeting of the class for Tuesday, May 23rd, at 4:30 o'clock in Gerrard hall, for the purpose of discussing final plans and making preparations.

President Cate also appointed six committees to look after various functions in connection with commencement. The members of the groups will be announced in the DAILY TAR HEEL tomorrow.

again today and will be out for revenge.

Nate Andrews, sophomore righthander, will be Coach Hearn's choice to work on the mound for Carolina, with Crouch being held in reserve. Griffith beat Virginia in last Saturday's game and will be given a rest until the important conference battle with the Blue Devils Saturday.

"Zippy" Zaiser will likely get the call to work in leftfield against the southpaw. The rest of the Carolina line-up will be the same as usual, battling in the following order: Peacock, center field; Phipps, shortstop; Weathers, second base; McCaskill, catcher; Brandt, rightfield; Zaiser, leftfield; Captain Powell, third base; Dixon, first base; and Andrews, pitcher.

Coach Hearn sent the Tar Heels through an inter-squad game yesterday in order to get them loosened up after the Sunday rest. Captain Powell, who has been a little ill, stayed on the bench but will be ready to go today.

REGISTRATION DATE FOR TOURNAMENT EXTENDED

The management of the game room in Graham Memorial has extended the time for registration in the individual ping pong tournament until closing time tonight. There is no entrance fee for the tourney. Play will begin this afternoon at 2:00 o'clock and all participants are asked to call by the game room today for information as to opponents and time of play.

A schedule of matches has been posted on the bulletin board. Any conflicts in time must be reported to the management at once.

SEMINARY DELEGATION SPEAK TO Y CABINETS

The members of the delegation from the Virginia Seminary of Alexandria, Virginia, addressed the Y. M. C. A. cabinets last night in the last meeting of the year.

Henry Johnson, former assistant to Dean Bradshaw addressed the freshman friendship council, Doc Hines spoke to the sophomore cabinet, and Reverend A. C. Zabriskie, professor of history at the seminary, talked to the junior-senior group.

PHI ASSEMBLY MEETS IN NEW EAST TONIGHT

The Phi Assembly will meet tonight in New East at 7:15 o'clock to discuss the following bills: Resolved: That the giving of dictatorial powers to President Roosevelt on matters of inflation, banking, unemployment, and other affairs be condemned; Resolved: That subscription to the Buccaneer be made optional; and Resolved: That the Louisiana citizens' petition to oust Huey Long be condemned.

TEA GARDEN PROCEEDS WILL GO TO LOAN FUND

Proceeds from sales at the tea garden established in the Tin Can during the junior-senior dances this week-end will be donated to the Student Loan Fund, it was announced yesterday by Bill McKee, chairman of the dance committee.

The concession for the garden has been granted the Book Exchange and it is to be run by members of the sales force with Tubby Henson in charge.

Young Artists To Exhibit Paintings

Friday afternoon the Art Students' Guild of Chapel Hill will give an exhibition of paintings from the Philadelphia Academy of Fine Arts in connection with an exhibition of their own work. The exhibition will be given in their studio in Hill Music hall.

From 4:00 to 6:00 o'clock tea will be served by the members of the guild and an invitation will be extended to all those of the Chapel Hill community who are interested in art.

On the walls of the studio will be seen many crayon and water color portraits of familiar campus figures who have sat as models for the class.

The Art Students' Guild meets for classes two nights a week under the instruction of James A. McLean, founder of the Southern School of Creative Art in Raleigh.

been playing the first bag mighty nifty lately, even though he did try to do a bit of a cavotte in the State game last week. One reason for his brilliant play lately has been the fact that the weather has been clear and Narcissus has been able to see his shadow. Manager Taylor gave Dixon his new name after observing him in a recent infield practice. The first baseman kept watching his shadow after throwing or stopping a ball. This manager is a clever one, he remembered the story about Narcissus who fell in love with his own shadow and pined away for want of it. Sentimental athletes we have, some need rain and others must have sun to make their little shadows. That's all right, Knoxville is trying to get Narcissus to play their first bag.

COACH BUNN HEARN HAS A good bunch of ball players. He lost his catcher, a shortstop, a first baseman, an outfielder, and four pitchers by graduation last year. Then too, there is only one sophomore that is doing any playing this year. Our team has turned in a good average with these facts being considered. They beat Wake Forest once and may do the same thing this afternoon. Nothing would be better than to stop the cocky Devils Saturday in Durham. Remember what happened to Bobby Coombs last year over here? He hurt his arm, it's true, but he hadn't been faring so well to that time. They will probably start Flossy Flohr against us.

THE GOOD THING ABOUT the ball club is the spirit they have shown all year. The club is inexperienced, it's true, but what it lacks in experience it makes up in determination. During the vacation the writer traveled with the squad in their two games against Davidson and the excellent spirit shown by each player was most impressive. There is one evil that several men on the team have. These men are "score book crazy." That is, they always run to the scorekeeper to find out if they got a hit on this or that. If these men would think more about the number of runs they scored and how few errors to make, instead of the number of useless bingles, more games would be won.

Murchison to Speak

Dr. C. T. Murchison of the economics department will speak before a conference on unemployment in Washington Thursday night, on "The Effect of the Depression on Southern Industrial Conditions." Dr. Murchison's address is one of a series sponsored by the Julius Rosenwald fund.

LOCAL STUDENT ENTERS CONTEST

A. C. Furchgott Receives Notice Of Boeing Air School Scholarship Award Date.

As an entrant in the national scholarship competition of the Boeing School of Aeronautics at Oakland, California, A. C. Furchgott, Jr., student of the University, has been notified that final decision of the judges will be made today. The scholarship, which calls for a master transport pilot course at the school, attracts essays from students in all colleges of the country.

Judges of the essays will be Dean Baldwin Woods, of the engineering school of the University of California; W. B. Stout of the Stout engineering laboratories of Detroit, and K. A. Kennedy, general traffic manager of United Air Lines, it has been announced by T. Lee, Jr., director of the Boeing school.

Four Awards

Four scholarships awards are made annually by the Boeing school. In addition to the master pilot course as first prize, three courses are offered in master mechanics and the fourth award is a nine months instruction in the master pilot ground course. The value of scholarships is $7,500.

The Boeing school, organized in 1929, is credited by aviation authorities as being one of the leading schools in the country. It holds all the approved certificates of the Department of Commerce and has a fleet of training ships valued in excess of $100,000 and ground school equipment of a like value, available for use of the students.

The winner in this contest will have the privilege of entering the school either July 5 or October 2. All instruction courses under the scholarships require nine months.

Five Students Taken Into Pharmacy Group

Five students were inducted into membership in Xi chapter of Rho Chi, national pharmaceutical society, at the spring initiation last night. They were: M. L. Cline, W. L. Hickman, U. S. Puckett, S. G. Clark, and Frank B. Ham. A banquet followed the initiation.

C. S. Curry and C. H. Cobb are president and vice-president for next year, the offices being automatically filled on the basis of the highest scholastic averages. Dr. H. M. Burlage retains the position of secretary-treasurer.

Rho Chi is a national pharmaceutical fraternity whose membership is made up of individuals who have obtained high scholarship for a period of three years.

COMMENCEMENT INVITATIONS GO ON SALE TODAY

Samples of Two Types of Invitations Will Be Displayed at Y and Pritchard-Lloyd's.

Commencement invitations will go on sale today at chapel period in the Y. M. C. A. The sale will close Friday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock. Samples will be on display in the Y. M. C. A. and at Pritchard-Lloyd drug store.

Two types of invitations will be used this year. One is made of blue leather with a picture of the Graham Memorial on it, and sells for 50 cents each, or 45 cents if a half-dozen or more are purchased at a time. The other type is made of cardboard and will cost 25 cents, or 20 cents if one dozen or more are taken.

Deposits of 25 and ten cents apiece are required, respectively, on placing orders for the leather and cardboard bids. The rest of the price is payable on receipt.

Saunders Leads Vespers
President Arlindo Cate announced yesterday that the vespers services tonight will be conducted by J. Maryon Saunders, alumni secretary, at 7:00 o'clock in Gerrard hall. All members of the senior class are requested to attend.

Saunders will discuss the duties and obligations of University seniors when they become alumni.

A change in the program for senior week was announced yesterday by Cate. Permanent class officers will not be elected after tonight's vespers, as originally scheduled, but tomorrow night after the services.

Carolina Students Behave Oddly During Days Of Beer And Spring

Popularity of Marbles With Graduate Students Threatens to Have Game Exchanged as Spring Sport for Baseball or Tennis; Practice in Front of Smith Building Daily.

Are Carolina men cracking up? It's hard to say, but the combination of beer, spring, and a wild dancing week-end seems to have been a little too much for some of the boys. The police in Greensboro are fuming, Mrs. Whales over at the graduate club is contemplating psychiatry, the Blue Grass stables tremble for their stock, and the absent-minded professors remain absent-minded.

A Horse! A Horse!
Hie! I Crave a Horse!

Three point two couldn't have done it, because it takes more than that to make a man not only strongly desire to eat a horse, and not only really believe that he could eat a horse, but also to make demand in no uncertain terms over and over again that a horse be brought to him. Besides, he wanted a horse baked. His friends tried to dissuade him; he still wanted his baked horse. However, this paper knows of no eating establishment in Chapel Hill with baked horse on the menu, so it is most unlikely that the delicacy was served, either on the hoof or on the platter.

COBB DELIVERS ELISHA MITCHELL SOCIETY TALK

Dr. Collier Cobb, former head of the geology department, addressed the Elisha Mitchell Scientific society last night on "North Carolina Granites in Art."

Nearly half the area of North Carolina is covered with high grade granites valuable for structural and ornamental purposes, Cobb revealed. North Carolina granite has been used in some of the most attractive buildings and statuary in Washington, including the Buchanan monument made of pink granite from Salisbury, and the new national museum.

This meeting is the result of letters written by Guy B. Johnson of the University social science department to some 50 persons who might be interested in the organization of a society of this kind.

Those who are assisting in bringing about the organization of this society are Douglas Rights of Winston-Salem, secretary of the Wachovia historical society and curator of a large collection of Indian relics from the Piedmont section of North Carolina; Burnham S. LITERARY CRITIC DISCUSSES WORK OF BEST WRITERS

Mrs. Becker Well Received by Audience in Gerrard Hall Last Night.

Current novels of exceptional interest were discussed last night in Gerrard hall by May Lamberton Becker, well known critic of The Saturday Review of Literature. Mrs. Becker had recently attended a library conference in Greensboro and journeyed to Chapel Hill especially for last night's address.

By rapidly, yet inclusively, sketching the plots of several of the season's more important fiction works and interspersing with these summaries humorous anecdotes on literary affairs, Mrs. Becker kept a good-sized audience thoroughly interested for the better part of an hour.

Praises Stribling's Work
She congratulated the Pulitzer prize committee on its choice of T. S. Stribling's The Store as the best American novel of the year, commenting that the book represented work in progress as it was part of an excellent trilogy. At the same time, Mrs. Becker regretted that Ellen Glasgow's The Sheltered Life did not receive the award, as most critics expected it would. She considers the Virginian novelist the creator of one of the most important groups of American fiction.

Henderson and Shaw
With a preliminary bow to Archibald Henderson as the official biographer of Bernard Shaw, she launched into a rapid fire review of The Adventures of the Black Girl in Search of God. In estimating the volume, the Metropolitan critic advanced the startling theory that it indicated that Shaw, arch-atheist of the generation had come home to God. According to Mrs. Becker, "H. G. Wells writes the best first chapters of any living novelist and Somerset Maugham the best first pages." Wells, she feels, has lacked the power recently to carry his excellence through more than half a novel. However, his latest work, The Bulpington of Blup, was warmly praised by Mrs. Becker as a significant attack on super-aesthetics.

Kind Word for Lewis
"You can't compress Sinclair Lewis any more than you can the telephone book," said Mrs. Becker in regard to Ann Vickers which she regards as an indication that the Nobel prize winner has not lost his power. Still, she does feel that his latest work is inferior to many of his earlier efforts.

Other books commented upon during the lecture were Union Square, by Albert Halper, Hardy Perennial, by Helen Hull, and One More Spring, by Robert Nathan.

PLANS ARE NEAR COMPLETION FOR CLASS DANCE SET

Junior Prom Opens Series in Tin Can Friday Night; Senior Ball Saturday Night.

Preparations for the annual Junior-Senior dances to take place here Friday and Saturday of this week are nearing completion. The Tin Can, in which the three dances that make up the series will be staged, has been appropriately decorated for the occasion and bids to the dances are being given out.

Three dances will make up the series, the first being the Junior Prom, which takes place Friday night, 9:00 to 1:00 o'clock. At this dance the nine dance leaders elected by the class will lead the figure.

Saturday afternoon there will be a tea dance from 4:00 to 6:00 o'clock, and that night the Senior Ball will take place from 9:00 to 12:00 o'clock. The figure at the senior dance will be led by the nine leaders from that class.

Dance Leaders
Clyde Boyles, president of the junior class, will be the leader of the Junior Prom, and his assistants will be John Barrow, Stan Heist, Alex Andrews, Cliff Glover, Alan Smith, Red Rankin, John Womble, and Jimmie Nowell. Senior leaders will be as follows: Arlindo S. Cate, president, leader; B. Cabell Philpott, John S. Gorrell, Charles G. Rose, Harry M. Hodges, E. C. Daniel, George Phillips, and B. Perry Collins, assistant leaders.

Bert Lown and his orchestra have been signed to furnish the music for the dances. Lown's orchestra has filled a number of important engagements throughout the country among which was a lengthy one at the Biltmore hotel in New York. At present he is playing at the Coconut Grove restaurant of the Park Central hotel in New York. The band played for a series of dances at Sweet Briar College last week-end.

Junior-Senior Bids May Be Had Today

Today is the last day on which bids to the Junior-Senior dance set may be purchased by students other than juniors and seniors. The sale of the invitations will be continued in the lobby of the Y. M. C. A. at 10:30 to 11:00 o'clock and 2:00 to 5:00 o'clock today.

Juniors and seniors will obtain their bids in the 'Y' lobby tomorrow and Friday. Invitations will be given out to the members of these classes at chapel period on these two days and also from 1:30 to 5:30 o'clock tomorrow and 2:00 to 4:00 o'clock Friday. As previously announced, seniors will be required to pay a fee of 50 cents in order to receive their bids.

Infirmary List

Fourteen students were confined to the infirmary yesterday. They were: Hue Porter, W. J. Jervy, W. A. Houston, Louise Pritchard, Vance Young, Kenneth Byerly, L. B. France, Frank Smith, M. J. McGill, George Stronock, W. E. Collier, F. D. Higby, L. T. Hammond, and C. A. Frazier.

PRESIDENT ANNOUNCES DIPLOMA FEE REDUCED

Because of prevailing economic conditions, the diploma fee for this year has been reduced to $5.00, it was announced from President Graham's office yesterday. All students who have paid a $10.00 fee will be refunded the difference upon application to the business office.

Candidates for degrees at the June commencement who have not already paid the diploma fee are urged to do so at once, and to file in the registrar's office an application for the degree. This information is needed at once by the engravers, if diplomas are to be ready on time.

ASSEMBLY PICKS SCHOOL TRUSTEES

Former Governors Max Gardner and Cam Morrison on List Approved at Session.

After the list of nominations for University trusteeships had been subjected to severe criticism and had undergone several changes, the general assembly yesterday elected 34 trustees of the institution. The original list of trustees, offered a few weeks ago, contained the names of seven members of the committee which drew up the list and also the names of 11 legislators and several blood relatives of assemblymen.

A substitute list carrying the names of nine legislators, two brothers of legislators, and including that of former Governor O. Max Gardner, whose name was left out of the original draft, was presented at a joint legislative session yesterday, where it met great opposition.

MISS BERNHARDT COMES HERE FOR CONCERT TONIGHT

Former Opera Star Will Present Program of Songs by Well Known Composers.

Louise Bernhardt, nationally acclaimed contralto and former Chicago Civic Opera star, is presented at 8:30 o'clock tonight in Memorial hall as the final feature on the student entertainment program.

Tickets for the program, other than student entertainment tickets, have been reduced to 50 cents and are on sale in the office of Dean A. W. Hobbs today.

Former Opera Star

In addition to winning first prizes in two national musical contests within the past few years, Miss Bernhardt has appeared in Chicago Civic Opera and American Opera presentations. She has presented some 80 concerts during three coast-to-coast tours, being popularly received in every performance.

Miss Bernhardt is noted for her dramatic ability, with which she enlivens her concerts, as well as for her charming stage presence and talented voice.

Readers Famous Compositions

Included in her recital tonight will be Adieu Forests from Tchaikowsky's Jeanne d'Arc, Jager Ruhe by Schubert and Kommt dir Manchnal by Brahms. Other numbers are by Gluck, Caccini, Wolff, Massenet, Poldowski and Ravel.

Among the lighter numbers are American Lullaby by Rich, Parodies by Hughes, Sea Poem by Bibb and Jasmin by Dobson. Miss Bernhardt will be accompanied by Miss Mary Feller.

Chemistry Student Given First Graduate School Degree In 1883

William Battle Walker First of Long Line of Distinguished Research Students at University; Master's and Doctor's Degrees Not Offered by School Until 1877.

"The leadership in the new research movement in this department, South is traceable to one institution and to certain men and women in it, the University of North Carolina," said Frederick A. Ogg, professor of political science at the University of Wisconsin, in his book A Survey of Research in the Humanistic and Social Sciences published in 1928. The first of a long line of scholars to carry out a prescribed schedule of work in the graduate school, the man to whom goes the credit of receiving the first Doctor of Philosophy degree is William Battle Phillips.

Phillips obtained the degree of Ph.D. as a member of the class of 1877. In the field of chemistry he excelled as an undergraduate, and following his graduation he worked as an assistant under Dr. Albert R. Ledoux, who had been selected by the board of trustees to head an experiment station at Chapel Hill to conduct research in fertilizers for the state agriculture department.

Received Degree in 1883

The first doctorate was conferred on him in 1883. He had specialized in the fields of chemistry and geology. In 1885 Phillips was elected to the chair of agricultural chemistry and mining at the University. But since the University had not the necessary appliances for instruction in this department, the entrance of Dr. Phillips to the faculty was postponed. He was said to be too young—he was 28 at the time—and not sufficiently trained for his august position. To prepare himself he spent a year studying at the School of Mines in Freiberg, Germany.

He attained professorial rank in 1886 and for two years was on the faculty. From 1891 to 1893 he was professor of chemistry and metallurgy at the University of Alabama. He held many other positions of trust, including the directorship of the University of Texas mineral survey, 1901-1905, and was president of the Colorado School of Mines, 1914-1916. Before his death in 1918, he had written over three hundred bulletins in scientific and technical productions on many topics.

Research Established Early

Graduate work at the University may be said to have been started when in 1792 apparatus was purchased to facilitate research in physics and astronomy. No formal division of graduate study was established prior to 1876, although a plan for instruction designed for such establishments at least as far as the Master of Arts degree was contemplated in the

A Suggestion—

Following in the wake of what began as pleasure trips, came the death of one University student and the injuring of several others in automobile accidents over the past week-end. Although the fatal accident has caused much comment throughout the community it must be borne in mind that this was the first of such nature to a student within a year; and we must be thankful. Indeed, when compared with other communities in the state and universities elsewhere, Chapel Hill may be considered to possess an unusually low record for such accidents.

Yet each time such an accident does occur there is always some discussion of whether the University should take steps against permitting students to have automobiles. It has, in the past, been brought up in faculty meetings and received serious discussion, although no steps have been taken.

In the light of the clean record which the University has it appears that such a movement would be out of place and to no point. Under the present conditions no such drastic regulatory actions are necessary or fitting. It would hardly be possible to lower the fatality record and even the list of the injured would not be materially affected. But while such drastic steps might be out of order, some form of regulation or control of student drivers would materially help to keep accident rates low and protect the University from criticism which would result from a series of accidents involving student driven cars.

An excellent system would be for the University to require the registration of automobiles kept in Chapel Hill for any length of time, a form of student-driver's license. Under this plan the University would continue the policy of allowing operation of cars by students, but would at the same time reserve the right to revoke the licenses of those students who became known as reckless drivers. Such a system might likewise be used as a punitive measure for continued traffic violations, driving under the influence of whiskey and the like.

But if it did nothing else it would serve to keep cars from the hands of student drivers who are notoriously careless and help to promote better driving.—V.C.R.

American Idols—

Year by year the enrollments at our hundreds of colleges increases, year by year more perfected and advanced systems of education are devised for the advantage of the American college student. Finer instruments and laboratory equipment are used to demonstrate to them the sciences, while new facts being constantly discovered make the scope of knowledge attainable larger and larger to each successive class.

The struggle for existence draws more and more the attention of both pedagogues and students alike. Courses in commerce, business law, and economics are replacing the classics which cannot be translated into dollars and cents. A college education is being rid of the "frills" and is no longer just something for a rich man's son, but a necessity available to all.

Yet with all these innovations the colleges are sadly failing in several important respects. The effect of the gradual extinction of the classics in favor of utilitarian subjects is destroying the aim for which colleges were intended—the pursuit of culture. Many consider the "useful" subjects to be more important than Latin, literature, or philosophy and it is certain that American culture has been nipped in the bud by our outstanding characteristic—the lust for money.

Not only have the commercial trends effected an atrophy of our culture but the new sciences are taught in many places in such a way as to deliberately lead the student away from the religious beliefs with which he comes to school. Reared in the more or less rigid faith of the parents, the college student is often led to discover in science a total abnegation of the beliefs that have been instilled into him causing him to veer sharply away, ridding himself of some unimportant dogmas while losing a spiritual outlook, the value of which is inestimable.

The American college must face the grave charges of destroying both our culture and our spiritual life while substituting for the former an enhanced earning capacity and for the latter a contemptuous attitude towards the most highly to be treasured possession—a faith in God.

With the transformation of colleges into business schools and the replacement of religion by a supercilious pseudo-scientific doubting, America is further on her way to becoming completely a sacrifice to her idols—the almighty dollar, big business, and a "progress" of taller buildings and faster cars.—J.F.A.

Is Our Education Out of Step?

What's wrong with our present educational system? Is the ever-increasing volume of criticism coming from naturally prejudiced unemployed graduates who have taken a sour-grape attitude toward the institutions which a few years ago flaunted much-coveted positions before the eyes of the oncoming college graduate, or is it a more firmly based criticism from men who have been educated in the school of experience as well as our higher institutions of learning to eventually succeed in their chosen field? Surely it is for they, rather than us, to say what is superfluous and what is necessary in the curriculum of our colleges.

Henry Morton Robinson has a rather interesting article in the May issue of College Humor entitled "Lost 4 Years and $5,000." Although he treats the subject rather lightly and consequently exaggerates to some extent the uselessness of almost everything in the curriculum of our present day colleges, there is undoubtedly much food for thought in what he says.

We all know that many of the required subjects will never be used after signing the pledge at the close of our examinations. Perhaps it is all necessary to become a truly cultured gentleman, but, as Robinson suggests, who would possibly be interested in hearing us recite our infinitesimal knowledge of Latin, Greek and oftentimes unimportant theories of ancient scholars? We come to college to specialize in some chosen field that we may take our place in our highly specialized civilization of the machine age. No one wants an unbalanced education, but surely many of our required courses amount to little except a waste of valuable time and money. If our educational system is, as some suggest, out of step with the rest of the progress of the age, surely the time has come to make a careful study of the situation and introduce whatever changes are deemed necessary.—L.M.J.

Looking Toward London

What about the war debts? This question has proved to be the proverbial "fly in the ointment" to every discussion of the world economic situation since the war. The question cannot be evaded. It is too intimately linked up with tariffs, reparations, money standards, etc., to be accurately considered as a separate issue.

To Americans generally the issue seems relatively simple: European nations contracted loans from the United States; the United States has repeatedly scaled down her payment-demands until the figure is now but half of its original value; the debtor nations have pledged their solemn honor to pay these debts; it is a question of ordinary business,—the debts should be paid. However, if we view the situation in all its aspects, at the same time holding ourselves to be patriotic Americans, a certain amount of doubt enters our minds as to the advisability of forcing all these debts to be paid. Here's the "rub": the payment of these obligations on time will necessitate further taxation on an already heavily over-taxed European citizenry. Further tax burdens, it is generally recognized, would lead to a rapid growth of radicalism in the various countries (witness Germany), with an increased possibility of revolution and consequent repudiation of the debts by the incoming regime.

Not only that, but the increased taxation of the people of Europe would necessitate a withdrawal of millions of dollars' worth of purchasing power from the foreign consumer of American products and shunt this productive monetary power into the hands of governments. Foreign trade would naturally be affected in an adverse manner and economic stagnation in some quarters would result.

The whole matter has been complicated beyond measure by the dangerously foolish provisions of the Versailles treaty, which place such an unfair burden upon Germany. Reacting against the concept of sole World War guilt, reacting against the Ruhr invasion, reacting against the reparations payments—Germany has again turned towards a nationalistic chauvinism. France, alarmed by the threat of a fascist Germany, has refused to scale down her armaments. Thus the situation has reached an impasse in regard to a reduction of armaments preceding further debt cancellation.

The solution of this international tangle calls for a type of statesmanship which is probably non-existent in our world of today. The approaching London economic parley offers the opportunity for such statesmanship; and so we should view this conference with great interest and deep concern.—V.J.L.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

To the Editor,

DAILY TAR HEEL:

The University-buildings department, because of lack of adequate funds due to a greatly pared budget, has been unable to attend to the caring for the lawns and paths of the University campus, a fact mentioned editorially in the DAILY TAR HEEL yesterday. Undoubtedly the unkempt appearance of the grounds has caused considerable comment among visitors to Chapel Hill, the faculty, and the student body.

In order to come to the aid of the University in its financial difficulties, to relieve to some extent unemployment in Chapel Hill, and to maintain our traditionally beautiful campus, we submit the following plan which may be altered if warranted:

1. A meeting of the treasurers of all fraternities and campus organizations at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon in St. Anthony Hall to discuss the situation and to report to their respective organizations any final plan agreed upon for immediate ratification by these groups.

2. A suggestion that each organization pledge $5.00 (or any sum which the above representatives agree upon) to a fund for the amelioration of the appearance of the grounds.

P. L. Burch of the buildings department stated the following facts relevant to the situation: that the condition of the campus has resulted from the lack of adequate finances to cover the repair of the two power-mowers, and that a sum of approximately $200.00 will be sufficient for the machine repairs. He also stated that labor for the project could be secured from the Orange county unemployment relief organization under George Lawrence without cost. He further asserted that if such a fund as suggested above be pledged so that these machines could be fixed, he would guarantee thorough co-operation and that the buildings department would carry out the entire program of rehabilitation.

R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, was in hearty agreement with the plan, and stated that the administration would be highly appreciative if the project is carried out.

St. Anthony Hall has guaranteed $5.00 to start the fund and hopes that all other organizations will make similar contributions.

Signed:
Members of St. Anthony Hall.

To the Editor,

DAILY TAR HEEL:

A student who finds it cheaper to mail his soiled clothes home and pay the postage both ways than to send it to the local washery showed me the last two bills he received. One is for $1.53 and the other is for 93c—postage, in each case amounting to 18c, is included in these prices.

We figured up the amount that the University laundry would charge for washing the same amount of clothes and found it to be $2.32 and $1.71—51% and 80% higher than the home-town laundry's prices, which included the postage one way!

It would seem that this case, in itself, presents an unanswerable condemnation of the prices charged by the University laundry.

Instead of charging more for laundering than the average commercial plant, it would seem from a common-sense point of view, that the local establishment, because of its many obvious advantages, should be in a position to furnish much cheaper service.

Among its advantages are:

Certainty of patronage: The local plant is assured of a certain amount of business, for one reason because it has the power to collect twenty-five cents from each student's deposit every time he fails to have his laundry bundle ready on collection night.

Advance payment: The local establishment enjoys the privilege of having its bills paid far in advance by the process of collecting a deposit of $8.50 from each student at time of registration.

Centralization of patronage: The University laundry collects its bundles easily for the most part, because the greater part of its customers are grouped together in dormitories, boarding houses, and fraternity buildings.

Another factor is the one of time. The commercial laundry adjusts itself to the convenience of its customers, which means that its trucks must make frequent journeys, often to the same section, whereas the University laundry trucks collect from each section only at stipulated times.

The commercial laundry also furnishes a constant service; the University laundry does not, for example, provide service to the few students remaining in dormitories during the Christmas holidays and spring vacations.

If the local plant, then, is not making a much larger per cent of profit than the average commercial laundry, it might be well for it to import a manager or two from such a business and learn from these outsiders how to operate more efficiently.

To arrive at the conclusion that the University laundry is not doing all in its power to do right by the students, it is not necessary to look at its price list.

1. Note how sloppily the additional laundry deposits—when required—are handled. One must either have five dollars to deposit at South building, or else one must walk two miles to the laundry to pay additional charges—even though they amount to as little as five cents.

2. Note that students to whom the laundry owed a debt (Continued on last page)

Andrews Hurls No-Hit Game

Hurler Blanks Deacons In Masterful Exhibition

Zaiser, Peacock, and McCaskill

SECOND WIN OVER DEACS

Heels Disappoint Barnes for Second Time; Earp and Brogden Lead Former Champs.

If Horatio Alger had incorporated the story of the Wake-Forest-Carolina ball drama which was enacted yesterday on Emerson field into one of those novels which thrilled us in our youth, he might well have become more famous. For Nate Andrews on the mound for Carolina realized the dream of every pitcher when he masterfully hurled the first no-hit, no-run game of the college year, whitewashing the Deacons, 3 to 0, in the best exhibition seen here this season.

Not only did Andrews treat the Wake Forest base runners colder than a dowager's snub, but he struck out five and permitted only two men to reach second and two first, and he was also responsible for two of the Tar Heels' three markers.

Covering more territory than the blue network, Gene Zaiser and Johnny Peacock in the gardens, and Norm McCaskill behind the bat greatly enhanced Andrews' no-hit game by remarkably fine catches. Zaiser pilfered two certain hits from the Deacons with great running catches while Peacock snared a sure base knock off Earp's bat in deep center with a spectacular play. McCaskill behind the plate made two beautiful catches of hard hit foul balls.

Peacock Clucks to Open
Peacock started activities in the Carolina half of the initial stanza the way the 3,500 fans desired, by hammering Lefty Barnes' first southpaw slant for a triple. Phipps struck out but Vergil Weathers then drilled a timely single through short to score Peacock.

Carolina concluded its run mustering in the second frame registering two runs. Captain Powell walked and was sacrificed to second by Dixon. Andrews then poled a one-base wallop into right field to score Powell. Peacock fled out, but Phipps got life on Bunting's error, Andrews going to second. Reliable Weathers then clouted his second timely single to score his pitcher.

After the first two innings, Barnes settled down and limited the Hearn-coached team to three hits for the remainder of the time he was in the ball game, but the damage already had been done. Herring replaced him in the eighth and allowed one hit.

Whimpy Leads Stickers
Vergil Weathers led the bludgeon wielders with three hits for four, while Peacock and Zaiser with two for four also performed well.

For the Deacons, vociferous Hicks, Deacon catcher, did the backstop duties in excellent manner, while Earp and Brogden turned in fine fielding plays.

ATWOOD LEADS IN BOWLING TOURNEY

Ten Highest Scorers Will Compete
Today in Semi-Final Round.

Twenty-one of the 29 men who equalled or surpassed the qualifying score of 150 for the Graham Memorial bowling tournament have played the two required games in the run-off for the selection of the 10 highest scorers, who will participate in the final rounds of the tourney.

The ten men with the highest scores will bowl three games today, and the three highest of this group will play in the final round tomorrow. Two trophies, a cigarette case and an ash tray, will be given. Both articles have figures of bowlers engraved upon them.

The highest scores turned in during the run-off are: Bob Atwood, 327; Alfred Hamilton, 305; George Jones, 278; Dave Bland, 276; Jim Hudson, 276; Gus McIver, 264; L. C. Bruce, 260; C. Pergler, 258; R. J. Loville, 254; and Billy Harrison, 249.

TEN CHAMPIONS TO COMPETE IN MEET SATURDAY

Carolina Track and Field Team To Meet Strong State Aggregation at Duke.

"History never repeats," some old sage is known to have said. But there will be ten champions and a trio of record-holders of last year's North Carolina state college track and field meet essaying to defend their own marks and even trying to better them when the state meet is run off Saturday in the Duke stadium.

The defending record-holders are Oscar Mullis, shot put, and Ralston LeGore, javelin throw, both of Carolina, while the third record holder will be the defending Duke mile relay team.

New Marks Expected
In these three events new marks are expected to fall. Last year Oscar Mullis, Carolina, tossed the shot 45 feet 1 1/2 inches to better the old mark of 39 feet held by Albert Spurlock, Lenoir-Rhyne star, now Raleigh high coach. Ray Rex, gigantic State weight man, will afford Mullis keen competition. Rex, as a frosh, put the shot some 44 feet.

LeGore, hefty Tar Heel spear tosser, has repeatedly bettered the state mark of 187 feet 9 inches which was established last year.

Johnny Brownlee of Duke, whose time of 23.3 seconds in the low hurdles last year beat the existing state record by over a second was barred due to a helping wind. Brownlee is back again to make a state record in the same event which he has held in the Southern conference for two years.

Only one man of the fast Duke mile relay club has graduated. He is Bill Hicks, Charlotte high track mentor. This team ran the mile in 3:22.4 seconds. His place will be filled by either Crist or Reichman, both of the Blue Imps' mile relay champions last year. Hicks, Bradsher, Brownlee, and Fulmer were the winning quartet last year.

Open Conference Stand Today

DUKE IMPS BEAT FROSH NET TEAM

Yesterday Marks Second Defeat of Tar Babies by Duke Freshmen.

The Duke freshman tennis team repeated its 6 to 3 victory of earlier in the season over the Tar Baby outfit yesterday afternoon in Durham. Bernie Friedman was also loser for the second time to Charlie Harris after two hard sets, 6-3, 8-6.

Friedman had his opponent at set point eight during the second set. Bernie had the set advantage in the second set when the score was 5-4. The Carolina player had the point set four times at this point. The super-steady Duke player proved too much for the local leader throughout the match.

Hunter Lott scored over Parsons, 6-2, 6-0. Lott played the match in excellent style. The other Carolina victory was chalked up by Mark Lynch in the No. 3 singles over Taylor, 5-7, 6-2, 6-1. Jimmy Johnston was downed by Kunkle after three sets, 6-4, 11-13, 6-2.

Z. V. Linker lost a close match to Hamilton, 4-6, 7-5, 6-0. In the second set Linker had the set point twice when the score was 5-4, but he could not come through. Caton of Duke downed Hugh Taylor, 6-4, 3-6, 8-6.

Lott and Johnston won the only Carolina doubles match over Parsons and Kunkle, 6-4, 6-2. Friedman and Lynch lost to Harris and Hamilton, 6-3, 4-6, 6-2. Remy and Caton defeated Taylor and Linker, 4-6, 6-2, 8-6.

SINGLES PLAY THURSDAY

Captain Hines Favored to Win
His First Conference Individual Title.

The undefeated Carolina tennis team will be the favorite in the first day of the Southern conference play here this morning and afternoon. The team championships which will be played today will include Duke, Virginia, and possibly State College.

Carolina has beaten Duke twice this spring and was a 9 to 0 victor over Virginia in the fall. The same team which made the northern trip will play in the team matches. Those men to see action will be Hines, Wright, Harris, Shuford, Willis, Levitan, and Morgan.

The singles and doubles championships will be played tomorrow and through Saturday afternoon. Wilmer Hines will be the favorite in the singles play. Hines is undefeated in four years of varsity and freshman singles team matches.

This tournament will mark the end of the season for the Carolina players. It will be the last time that Lenoir Wright and Wilmer Hines, co-captains of the team will play for the Tar Heels.

The entry list for the tourney has not been completed yet. Full teams have been entered by Duke and Virginia, while State College and V. M. I. are sending part of their teams. Other entries are expected for the individual championship.

Tar Babies Whip Wolflets With McKeithan On Mound

SIX PLAY TODAY IN INTRAMURALS

Laundry Club, Carr, and Best House,
All Undeclared, End Their Season Today.

After a one-day layoff on account of the Carolina-Wake Forest baseball game yesterday, the intramural campaign will continue action this afternoon, with six more games being played.

The feature contest of the regular season will come off today when the Laundry Club and Carr tie up on field two at 3:45. Both outfits have come unscathed through all seven of their games to date, and this game will mark the season's windup for both clubs. Best House, the only other undefeated dormitory nine, has a comparatively easy game for its final and will probably meet today's winner in the league play-off.

Two Leaders Meet

The winner of the Carr-Laundry Club setto will have proved its mettle, for both teams have played spectacularly throughout.

CONFERENCE WILL DRAW NUMEROUS STAR TRACKMEN

Sports Savants Concede Duke And Carolina Greatest Winning Potentiality for Meet.

With only one more week-end to work, Southern conference track coaches are pressing their proteges hard, anticipating keen competition for their entrants in the Dixie outdoor track and field meet which will be run off in the Duke stadium Saturday, May 20.

Southern conference fans have already started comparisons of teams, based on their past records and potential strength on paper. Although most of the track and field enthusiasts will not agree on the winner, most any of the self-dubbed savants will admit that the victor of the meet will have to best either Carolina or Duke and maybe both in order to cop the Dixie track and field crown.

Both Clubs Winning

Both clubs continued their winning habits in their dual meets which were participated in over the week-end. Carolina nosed out the Penn State club by a scant three points while the Duke tracksters handed the Davidson aggregation its first defeat of the current season.

Virginia's "Big Four" members of the Southern conference family staged their annual state track meet in Lexington last Saturday. Virginia's Cavaliers bested the strong field of competitors, but a wet and soggy field prevented any records being smashed.

Many Stars

Among the array of state stars who should look good in the Dixie conference affair May 20, is Captain Billy Lauck, leader of the Virginia Cavaliers, who won the half in 1:58 minutes and captured first in the two mile. Coles, Virginia weight man; Turner, V. P. I. high jumper; Dunaj, Washington and Lee two miler; Wellford, V. M. I. middle distance runner; and Everett, Virginia; Finklestein, Washington and Lee, in the hurdles—all should be potential point-getters for

Freshmen Get 5-1 Victory With McKeithan, Bullock, and Shapiro Hitting Hard.

TAR BABIES FIELD WELL

Carolina Pitcher Works Second Game in Two Days, Allowing But Four Hits.

With McKeithan pitching four-hit ball, Carolina's freshman baseball team took their second game in two days, downing State's first year team 5 to 1. It was the fourth Big Five win in five starts, and the second in two starts over State.

McKeithan turned in an iron-man stunt in pitching the Tar Babies to the win. McKeithan went in as a relief pitcher against Wake Forest Monday and twirled six innings making a total of 15 frames in two days. McKeithan had everything on the ball and had the State players well under control throughout.

The whole Tar Baby team turned in a beautiful game back of the big right-hander and made but one error. The freshmen played errorless ball in Monday's battle. Moore, third baseman was especially outstanding in the field.

The Tar Babies started the scoring in the first frame on two hits. Shapiro led off with a single and went around to third on Montgomery's sacrifice and Yeager's fly-out. Irwin drove the lead-off man in with a single.

McKeithan counted for another run in the fourth when he hit a long triple and slid in home on Montgomery's second sacrifice. McKeithan hurt his pitching arm on this play but continued the game and even pitched better. Two runs crossed the plate for the Tar Babies in the seventh on Shapiro's walk, Montgomery's two-bagger and Womble's one-timer.

Bullock scored the last Carolina run in the eighth frame on a Ty Cobb play. Bullock tripled and a moment later stole home while the pitcher was trying to figure what to do with the ball.

The only State run was made in the third when McKeithan got a little wild. The Carolina pitcher walked two men and gave up one hit for the score.

Flythe twirled the first seven innings for State and Freeman the last two. Between them they allowed the Tar Babies ten hits. McKeithan, with two triples, Bullock, with a triple and a single, and Shapiro, with two singles, led the Carolina hitting. No one got more than one hit for State.

JAMES CAGNEY STARS IN "PICTURE SNATCHER"

Taking the title role of the movie, James Cagney appears today in "Picture Snatcher" at the Carolina theatre. As a former crook Cagney shows himself adept at the art of stealing pictures and becomes a star member of a tabloid staff.

In fitting himself for the picture Cagney worked for one hour on a Los Angeles paper; he got his story and his picture, but his reportorial experiences lasted just one hour.

Patricia Ellis is his leading lady in the attraction today while others in the cast are Ralph Bellamy, Alice White, Ralf Harolde, and Robert Emmet O'Connor.

LIBRARY SOCIETY CONVENES TODAY

North Carolina Association Will Meet at the Woman's College for Two Days.

The North Carolina Library association convenes at the Woman's College in Greensboro today and tomorrow.

Mrs. Mary Lamberton Becker, well known literary critic, who spoke here last night, will speak on "Books and Plays for a Changing World" tonight at 7:00 o'clock at a dinner meeting of the association.

Graham Speaks

This afternoon at 2:00 o'clock Dr. Frank P. Graham will speak on "Citizen Library Movement in North Carolina." Miss Tommie Doris Barker will also speak at this time on general library conditions in the southeast.

The program for tomorrow will begin at 9:30 o'clock with meetings of the college library and public library sections of the association under R. B. Downs, University librarian, and Miss Lily Moore.

At 11:00 o'clock there will be meetings of the children's section with Louel Collins in charge, the school library section with Mrs. M. P. Douglas in charge, the catalog section under Miss Elizabeth Sampson, and the trustees section under the direction of Mrs. H. A. White.

At 2:00 o'clock business meeting, the American Library association retirement plan will be discussed by E. T. Mulvey.

The officers for the next year will be elected at the close of the meeting.

Engineering Order Selects New Officers

Officers for next year were elected by the members of the Tau Beta Pi fraternity, honorary engineering order, at a meeting Monday night. The following men were chosen for offices: Bill Ridenhour was elected president; Ed Brenner, vice-president; Fred Calvern, corresponding secretary; John Marvin, treasurer; and Paul Hayes, cataloguer.

For the last gathering of the year, a supper was planned for tonight, to be given in honor of the seniors who graduate this year and for the installation of new officers.

SPANN GETS AUTHENTIC EQUIPMENT FOR SHOW

The cast of the German play, Fleiger is busy practicing for the performance to be given next Monday. Dr. Meno Spann of the German department has received some equipment from a World War veteran residing near Chapel Hill. Among these are a propeller from an English bombing plane that was felled in the war, and wheels of conquered French planes. Dr. Spann, who takes the role of the war pilot, is peculiarly able to give an authentic representation of the character since he comes from a long line of German army officers and actors.

The meeting is open to members of the faculty and students.

Forest Play To Feature Colored Costume Effect

Mrs. Oramae Davis, Designer, Encountered Difficult Problems in Costuming.

Colorful and varied costumes will be a major feature of Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream, which will be presented May 19 and 20 in the Forest theatre as the final Playmaker production of the year. Three distinct styles of costumes will be seen in the production, harmonizing with character types.

In designing the costumes, Mrs. Oramae Davis encountered the same difficult problem met in staging the production—that of designing for a cast which appears both in stately Grecian and farcical Elizabethan scenes. As a result the play will offer three styles of costumes: classical drapes for Grecian scenes, more colorful and rustic appearing tunics for Elizabethans, and simple, airy effects for the fairies who will perform dances.

For the Playmaker production Mrs. Davis has not intended to reproduce authentic style-examples of the periods represented, since they would be uninteresting if not impossible. Instead in each scene the costumes will present a life-like picture, rich in harmonizing color and emphasizing the spirit of the action.

In the impressive opening scene, Grecian characters will appear draped in classical robes embodying subtle blends of color, in spirit with their dignified speech. A soft, heavy crepe is used to produce the traditional stately lines. Tunics in shades of red and purple predominate during the climaxing wedding scene, in which Elizabethan characters are featured.

The fairies who dance in the play have been freed of the conventional and unwieldy wire-frame wings.

Senior Committees

The following committees have been appointed by Arlindo Cate, president of the senior class, to function during and for commencement: Baccalaureate sermon committee, W. E. Armstrong, J. L. Baird, Bob Barnett, and Milton Barber; oratorio committee, Claude Sawyer, Ernestine Groves, Henry Weiland, Howard Wilson, and Dan Lacy; Playmaker committee, Bob Novins, Betty Barnett, Perry Collins, and Jack Bessen; President's reception committee, Benton Bray, Bob Mebane, Shorty Kornegay, Lenoir Wright, and I. W. Hughes; senior prayers committee, John Burroughs, M. T. Cameron, Tom Davis, Frank Ham, George Hines, and Jimmy Stallings; class day exercises, Ray Johnson, H. T. Lyons, E. C. Daniel, Ward Peetz, and E. C. Willis.

ERRATA

Two corrections are to be made for the announcement in yesterday's TAR HEEL concerning the art exhibit and tea of the Art Students' Guild to be given between the hours of 4:00 and 6:00 o'clock in Hill Music hall this afternoon.

The exhibit will be works of the Chester Springs school of the Philadelphia Academy of Fine Arts instead of the works of the Philadelphia Academy itself.

The second correction is concerning those invited to the tea given in connection with the exhibit. The invitation is extended to students and not all of those in the Chapel Hill community interested in art.

Cam Morrison was substituted for that of W. L. Long, a brother of State Senator T. W. M. Long, upon motion by Representative Murphy of Rowan.

The names of several legislators and relatives of assembly men were also stricken from the list.

Those elected, the senate voted 40 to 0 and the house 97 to 1, were:

Terms expiring April, 1941: S. B. Alexander of Mecklenburg; Miss Annie Moore Cherry of Halifax; Hayden Clement of Rowan; Josephus Daniels of Wake; J. D. Grimes of Beaufort; R. O. Everett of Durham; C. C. Efrd of Stanly; W. D. Fauette of Halifax; Richard T. Fountain of Edgecombe; William T. Hannah of Haywood; James A. Gray of Forsyth; George C. Greene of Halifax; R. L. Harris of Person; Cameron Morrison of Mecklenburg; R. E. Little of Anson; A. W. McLean of Robeson; Mrs. Lillie C. Mebane of Rockingham; Harris Newman of New Hanover; Clarence Poe of Wake; Mrs. May L. Tomlinson of Guilford; Miss Easdale Shaw of Richmond; J. F. Spruill of Davidson; Irvin B. Tucker of Columbus; Kenyon Wilson of Pasquotank; and Graham Woodard of Wilson.

Terms expiring April 1, 1939: O. Max Gardner of Cleveland; H. D. Bateman of Wilson; W. H. S. Burgwyn of Northampton.

Term expiring April 1, 1937: I. F. Davis of Dare; J. D. Beatty, Jr., of Bladen; W. R. Dalton of Rockingham; John W. Aiken of Catawba; and John W. Clark of Randolph.

Treasurers to Meet

Treasurers of campus fraternities and other organizations are asked to meet this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock in St. Anthony Hall (Delta Psi) to discuss a plan for improving the condition of the campus grounds. All groups are asked to cooperate.

posit-balance were unable to get their last bundles of the term ending during the recent bank holiday, unless they paid cash or presented their new registration slip—this at a time when only a few of the students had been permitted to register. (The failure to refund deposit-balances at such a time was excusable, but it would have been a simple task for the laundry to have moved the student accounts to the lobby of the "Y" and there to have given to those students possessing sufficient balance their much needed bundles.)

3. Restrain your mirth, if you can, at the spectacle presented by the "1932 Summer School Health Notice" distributed at a time of the year when the laundry wished more business than it had: It forbid summer school students—under the tender guise of solicitude for their health—to: 1. Hang damp clothes in dormitory rooms. 2. Use any bed-linen for more than one week.—The "Health Notice," behind which the guiding hand of the University laundry was pitifully evident, was signed by the "Summer School Health Officer"—an honest and enterprising local veterinarian.

4. Notice the huge wasteful ads upon which the University laundry spends part of the profits it makes from washing student clothes. Advertisements inserted by the laundry in football programs and student publications are wasteful because they do not increase patronage, the season. Carr, with Anglin on the mound, looks to have a decided advantage in that department, for its moundman has hurled superlative ball all season and is rated as the best intramural hurler on the campus. Laundry Club, on the other hand, boasts the hardest hitting intramural aggregation in recent years, and if any outfit can shell Anglin from the mound, this is the team to turn the trick.

The complete schedule for today follows:

Baseball: 3:45—(1) Theta Chi vs. Alpha Tau Omega, (2) Carr vs. Laundry Club, (3) Phi Kappa Sigma vs. Delta Kappa Epsilon; 4:45—Everett vs. Mangum, (2) Sigma Phi Epsilon vs. Sigma Chi, (3) Chi Psi vs. Delta Tau Delta.

Tennis: 3:30—(1) Chi Phi vs. Chi Psi, (2) Phi Alpha vs. Sigma Alpha Epsilon, (3) Delta Tau Delta vs. Delta Kappa Epsilon; 4:30—Sigma Phi Sigma vs. Zeta Psi, (2) Tau Epsilon Phi vs. Sigma Chi, (3) Sigma Nu vs. Phi Sigma Kappa.

he was teaching. He fumbled with it. No doubt he said unkind things about it under his breath. He tried to stick the button somewhere. It refused to go. It was extra; his vest had too many buttons on it. That was it, his vest had too many buttons on it.

When the absent-minded prof got out on the campus he realized that he was that day wearing two vests cleverly interbuttoned as no two vests have ever been interbuttoned on one man before. He now claims to be sympathetic with anyone who sleeps through an eight-thirty.

In Spring a Young Man's Fancy Lightly Turns—

To thoughts of marbles. That is, if the young man isn't too young. Nobody ever saw a freshman playing marbles on the campus; nobody ever saw a senior being intrigued by the bright little pellets. But the graduate students! Ah, it is the graduate students who enjoy the little game. Watch them some time in front of Smith building. They seem to get a real kick out of it. Perhaps the faculty will join them next, with the deans forming various teams and President Graham acting as judge. Marbles may become famous. Who knows but that one day the game will replace baseball and tennis as a spring sport?

How to Beat The Depression

In spring also come white shoes, and with white shoes come worries over how to keep them clean, especially when the depression is still depressing. But the University furnishes chalk, and also erasers, and quick-witted students have discovered that they can either rub their shoes with the white crayon, or put on the powdered chalk from an eraser, using it like a powder puff.

Prosperity may be just around the corner, but the class-room is nearer, if you have a pair of white shoes.

as all students are already enforced customers.

After examining the above evidence it is difficult to arrive at any save one of two conclusions:

A. The University laundry is profiteering.

B. The conductors of the laundry are grossly inefficient.

... What is your verdict?

their teams.

In the South Carolina meet which was also run off during the week-end, the two seeded stars of the Clemson track team came through in great style to cop firsts. Lynn, probably one of the best dash men in Dixie, ran a fine 100 in 9.8 over a muddy track. Curry, a teammate, cleared the bar at 12 feet 6 inches in the pole vault to look like a strong competitor for Smith, North Carolina, in the meet Saturday.

"Red" Lewis, veteran Duke miler, looked good in his event clipping off 4:36.8 minutes in the mile in the Davidson dual meet. Mullis, Carolina discus star, heaved the discus 135 feet 10 inches against the Nittany Lions Saturday. Both men should cop firsts in the Dixie track and field games.

Carolina will be essaying the first Southern conference crown of the new college group, while Duke, having had a banner year in all sports will be trying to keep up the 1932-33 win precedent. Virginia has a fine chance of being the "dark horse" team and taking off the Dixie title.

NEW BUSINESS STAFF TO MEET TOMORROW

There will be a meeting of all candidates for next year's business staff of the DAILY TAR HEEL tomorrow night at 7:00 o'clock in 203 Graham Memorial, it was announced yesterday by Marcus Feinstein, business manager for 1933-34.

At the meeting, Feinstein will explain policies for the conduct of the business department next year. Two new departments, a promotion and a sales division, will be created in addition to the departments already set up.

DURHAM STUDENT WINS MATH PRIZE

C. B. Widgery Is Given First Place in High School Mathematics Contest.

Claude B. Widgery of Durham high school was awarded first place in the annual state high school mathematics contest this year, it was announced yesterday by Dr. Archibald Henderson, chairman of the awarding committee. The contest is conducted annually under joint auspices of the school relations department of the University extension division and the mathematics department.

Second place went to Maurice Polk of Greensboro high school and third place to George Cople of Albemarle. Thirty-eight high schools participated in the contest in April, entering 489 students. One paper was submitted by each school. The committee of judges in the contest consisted of Dr. Henderson, Dr. E. T. Browne, and Dr. J. W. Lasley, Jr.

Dr. Henderson stated that the most interesting treatment of any question in the papers submitted was an unusual solution of a geometry problem by Harvey Woodruff of Roanoke Rapids high school.

Seniors To Be Given Silverware At Tea

In connection with the regular co-ed tea at Spencer hall this afternoon, an exhibition of fine art in sterling by Gorham will be displayed from 2:00 to 6:00 o'clock.

Invitations to the exhibit have been sent to all seniors and members of the faculty. Upon presentation of their invitations, seniors may get a teaspoon engraved with their initials.

Highlights of the display are pieces of Argentine ware, the originals of which were made in 100 B.C.; the unfinished masterpiece; $5,000 tea service; formal and informal dinner tables; aristocratic flatware of period design; Paul Revere reproductions; and processes in making a pitcher.

Tea will be served between the hours of 4:00 and 6:00 o'clock.

Mrs. McIntosh to Teach

Mrs. C. E. McIntosh went to Shelby Monday of this week to teach an intercession class for the University extension division. She is replacing Mrs. Grace Woodman, who is ill in Asheville. The class will continue for a period of six weeks, and will be conducted in the city high school building.

NUMBER 165

BIDS FOR DANCES AVAILABLE TODAY IN Y.M.C.A. LOBBY

Juniors and Seniors May Obtain Invitations at Set Times Today and Tomorrow.

Juniors and seniors may obtain their bids to the Junior-Senior dance series today and tomorrow. The invitations will be given out in the lobby of the Y. M. C. A. both days at chapel period, and from 1:30 to 5:30 o'clock today and 2:00 to 4:00 o'clock tomorrow.

The set as previously announced will consist of three dances on Friday and Saturday of this week with Bert Lown and his orchestra playing. The Junior Prom will come Friday night in the Tin Can from 9:00 to 1:00 o'clock. Saturday there will be a tea dance in the afternoon followed by the annual Senior Ball in the evening which closes the series.

Bert Lown's nationally known orchestra, which will furnish the music for the dances, has been a regular broadcaster over the Columbia and the National broadcasting networks and may be heard several nights during the week over one of these systems. At the present time they are playing in the Coconut Grove Restaurant of the Park Central hotel in New York City.

During the past few years the band has played a number of important engagements. Before going to the Coconut Grove, it played for some time at the Biltmore Hotel in New York. Its most recent engagement in this part of the country was at Sweetbriar College in Virginia, where they filled an engagement last week-end.

SENIORS CHOOSE CLASS OFFICERS

Permanent Leaders to Be Selected Tonight in Gerrard Hall Following Vespers.

Election of permanent class officers by the senior class will take place tonight in Gerrard hall following the regular vespers which will begin at 7:00 o'clock. Mr. Agnew Bahnson of Winston-Salem will speak at the services.

Tonight's meeting will be the last function of senior week outside of the annual Junior-Senior dances which will begin tomorrow night.

J. Maryon Saunders, alumni secretary, conducted the vespers last night, and emphasized the importance of general alumni co-operation after graduation.

Other features of senior week have included a service by Professor Horace H. Williams, a business meeting Monday night, and a free show at the Carolina theatre Tuesday night. Senior sweaters have been worn throughout the last few days.

Harper Barnes, new president of the student body, was elected permanent president of the class of 1932 last year.

A.B. Senior Notice

Seniors in the liberal arts school are urged to present a statement from their major and minor departments showing completion of required credits at Dean A. W. Hobbs' office as soon as possible.

BARNES SELECTS REUNION CABINET

Harper Barnes, permanent president of the class of 1932, announced yesterday the appointment of an executive committee in preparation for a reunion of the class this June.

The reunion of the class will occur at commencement, June 4-6. There will be a class banquet Monday evening, June 5. The members of the committee include: Herbert Taylor, chairman, Tarboro; John Stallings, Wilson; Peter Gilchrist, Charlotte; James K. Kenan, Atlanta, Ga.; John A. Park, Jr., Raleigh; Harry Finch, Wilson; Hamilton Hobgood, Bunn; Miss Josephine Parker, Asheville; Thomas Alexander, Charlotte; John Gillespie, Greensboro; Archie Davis, Winston-Salem; Billy Atkinson, Wilmington; and Stephen A. FIRST OFFERINGS IN THEATRE SET STAGED TONIGHT

Production of Two of Plays Tonight in Playmakers Theatre Begins Three-Day Series.

Together with several new Playmakers, 3.2 beer will make its debut on the Playmaker theatre stage with the production of three bills of eight new plays tonight, tomorrow and Saturday at 8:30 o'clock. The beverage appears in Ellen Stewart's The Queen Was in the Kitchen.

The plays, directed by students in Professor Samuel Selden's course of play direction, are not experimental plays but constitute a regular offering on the Playmaker season-ticket schedule. Season tickets, not transferable, will secure admission to the set of three programs. Other tickets are 25 cents for each evening.

The first bill tonight opens with a professionally written drama, The Stronger, by Johann August Strindberg, directed by Martha Hatton. The play is a monologue with two characters, one of whom acts in pantomime, and is in the nature of a character study, with a woman addressing her husband's former mistress.

Judgement Comes To Daniel, by Bernice Kelly Harris and directed by Mrs. H. R. Totten, is second. The play was a prize winner among community original plays in the drama festival here early in the spring.

Jo Orendorff directs Foster Fitz-Simons' A Little Boat To India, which climaxes the evening with light comedy. An intricate plot deals with a young socialite, Leonard Stuart, who discovers early in the play that his wife doesn't love him. Mrs. Stuart is entertaining a poet, who is eloping with someone's wife. Both couples have quarrels and in the end Stuart runs away with the errant wife.

Plays to be presented tomorrow night are Martha Hatton's Comedy At Five, Eternal Spring by Robert Barnett, and Blow Me Down by Bill Bonyn, with Martha Hatton, Betty Barnett and Ed Martin directing.

In the final trio are The Queen Was in the Kitchen by Ellen Stewart and directed by James Thompson, Etowah Plantation written and directed by Eugenia Rawls, and a second production of Comedy At Five.

Enviably Hurling Record Made By Hearn While Playing For Toronto

Carolina Coach Pitched Twenty Scoreless Innings Against Jersey City in 1913, Holding Skeeters Hitless Over Regulation Distance and Yielding Only Six in Extra Frames.

By Jack Bessen

"Game called on account of darkness." That cry by the umpire isn't any too significant; it has happened numbers of times, but that Tuesday evening of August 12, 1913, this hoarse shout ended one of the most remarkable exhibitions of hurling that the grand old game has ever known.

Toronto and Jersey City, both near the bottom of the heap in the International League race, met in the latter's stadium, the West Side Park. On the mound for the Skeeters was the reliable Thompson, ace hurler of the Jersey City club. Opposing him was a young burly left-hander, Bunny Hearn, up from the Springfield club of the Three I League, where he made the enviable record of winning 27 games while dropping five.

Hearn in Rare Form

Both Thompson and Hearn were in rare form, and the present Carolina mentor didn't allow the Skeeters a hit over the regulation nine innings. But the Maple Leafs were unable to cross the plate and the game went into extra innings. In the thirteenth frame, Thompson was removed in favor of pinch-hitter Manser, and Brandon continued where Thompson left off.

With the score tied at 0-0, the umpire called the game on account of darkness in the twentieth inning, after three hours and twenty minutes of play. In all, Hearn allowed Jersey City six hits, three of them being garnered by Arthur Bues, a Giant player of 1911.

Jersey City fans, ranking with Brooklyn addicts for rabidness, paid Hearn great tribute for his masterful pitching exhibition, for after Thompson's removal in the thirteenth, they were with the Toronto hurler.

Papers Praise Hurling

The Toronto papers were loud in their praise of their young pitching hero, the Toronto Mail and Empire saying this of the contest:

"Hearn, the Toronto hurler, pitched one of the most remarkable games in the history of baseball. Not only did he last throughout the whole game, but finished in as good condition as when he started. With a baffling assortment of curves at his command, he held the Skeeters hitless throughout nine full innings, and allowed only a half dozen in all."

Nor was the Toronto World less profuse in its praise:

"Only once before have two

CHOIR PRESENTS BENEFIT CONCERT

The Guilford College A Cappella choir, directed by Max Noah, will appear in Hill Music hall Tuesday evening, May 23, in a program of choral music sponsored by the University department of music. The proceeds from the concert will be turned over to the student loan fund.

The Guilford College choir appeared here two years ago in a similar concert. It is now in its fifth year and has received praise as one of the finest college choral groups in the south. Noah, a graduate of Columbia University and the Westminster choir school, has conducted the organization on several national concert tours. The program of the group will consist of selections from the standard masterpieces of choral literature.

NORTH CAROLINA BISHOP WILL BE FINALS SPEAKER

Bishop E. A. Penick to Deliver Baccalaureate Sermon at University Commencement.

Bishop Edwin Anderson Penick, who recently accepted an invitation to deliver the baccalaureate sermon at the University this year, succeeded the late Rt. Rev. Joseph Blount Cheshire as bishop of North Carolina last year.

The sermon will be delivered in Memorial hall Sunday, June 4, the opening day of commencement. Monday, June 5, will be Alumni day, and the final exercises of the graduating class, the reception by President and Mrs. Graham, and the graduating exercises proper, at sunset, will take place Tuesday, June 6.

Interested in Education

Bishop Penick, who was consecrated Bishop Coadjutor of the Diocese of North Carolina in 1922, has long been actively interested in education in the south. He has served as a member of the board of trustees of the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn.; St. Augustine's College, Raleigh; and the Bishop Payne Divinity School, Petersburg, Va.; and as president of the board of trustees of St. Mary's School, Raleigh.

Received M.A. at Harvard

After receiving his bachelor of arts at the University of the South in 1908 and his master's degree from Harvard University in 1909, he was graduated from the Virginia Theological Seminary in 1912 and entered the ministry.

He became a deacon in 1912 and a priest in 1913. From 1912 to 1922 he was rector of Episcopal churches in Bennettsville, S. C., Charleston, S. C., and Charlotte.

Was Civilian Chaplain

Bishop Penick served as a civilian chaplain in the Episcopal Church War Commission at Camp Jackson from February to September, 1918, and became First Lieutenant Chaplain in the U. S. Army. After being discharged in 1919, he went to St. Peter's church in Charlotte.

Bishop Penick is a native of Frankfort, Ky., the son of Edwin Anderson and Mary Atchinson (Shipman) Penick. He was married to Miss Catherine Inglesby Dial of Charleston, S. C., in 1917. They have three children.

DELEGATES TAKE FURTHER ACTION REGARDING LAWN

Treasurers of Campus Organizations Meet Again Today to Discuss Forward Project.

Treasurers of all campus organizations, including fraternities, clubs, and dormitories, will meet in Graham Memorial this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock to take further action in the campaign begun yesterday to better the condition of the University campus.

Representatives from eight fraternities met yesterday afternoon at St. Anthony Hall to discuss the situation and several definite steps were taken.

Work Begins Today

Work will be begun this morning by the building department with a power-cutter belonging to the town of Chapel Hill. Scythes and sickles will also be employed on the denser parts of the campus.

The project was initiated by members of St. Anthony Hall through a letter of the DAILY TAR HEEL yesterday in which it was stated that, in order to come to the aid of the University with the sliced budget, some action should be taken by campus organizations.

$200 Is Needed

A statement by P. L. Burch of the buildings department revealed that the department is without adequate funds to cover the costs of repairing the University's two power-cutters and consequently work has been abandoned on the lawns. A sum of $200 is needed to cover the expense.

Burch also asserted that the

HOUSE APPROVES SCHOOL MEASURE

Defeats Action Providing for Extra School Month With Voters' Agreement.

After refusing to reconsider its action providing for the operation of schools for nine months if the voters agree, the state house yesterday passed the biennial school machinery bill on second reading by the vote of 72 to 20.

An amendment prohibiting any local division which is in default in interest and principal on its indebtedness from operating schools for nine months was also adopted in spite of opposition from Representatives Turner and Sullivan.

The senate passed the conference report on the biennial revenue bill on second reading by a vote of 27 to 16. Senate leaders predicted its final passage this morning without amendments.

The report was accepted, however, only after the defeat of two amendments to revenue compromise.

The house reopened the school fight by reconsidering and defeating an amendment it put to the senate bill Tuesday night under which any local school unit could have supplemented state funds if the voters agree.

Barefoot to Lead Devotional

Sherwood Barefoot will lead the Y. M. C. A. devotional at 10:30 o'clock this morning in Memorial hall. Walter Patterson will play the organ.

N. C. C. W. READY FOR GRADUATION

Greensboro Branch of University to Celebrate 41st Commencement June 3, 4, 5.

With details of the program practically complete, students at the Woman's College are ready for the celebration of the school's 41st annual commencement, which will be observed June 3, 4, and 5.

Park night ceremonies, coming June 2, will again be the preliminary step to the regular program. The celebration will take place at Peabody park in the evening.

Opens Saturday

The regular commencement program will get under way on Saturday morning, June 3, at 11:00 o'clock, with the annual general assembly of alumnae. The alumnae senior luncheon comes at 1:00 o'clock that afternoon at South dining hall.

Exercises of the class of 1933 will take place at the front campus at 4:00 o'clock in the afternoon of Alumnae day. Alumnae class reunion suppers at various places in the city follow.

Three Events Sunday

Three events are scheduled for the program Sunday morning. At 11:00 o'clock, the Reverend T. Guthrie Spears of Baltimore will deliver the baccalaureate sermon. The annual informal gathering for faculty, seniors, and alumnae will take place that afternoon at the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. I. Foust.

Parts two and three of Gounod's The Redemption will be presented in the evening by the college chorus, assisted by the college orchestra and several soloists.

The commencement address, which will be delivered by Senator Alben William Barkley of Kentucky, is set as the final act of commencement.

CAROLINA BEAUTY CHOSEN SPONSOR

Senior Superlative Winner to Act as Sponsor at First Annual Cotton Festival.

Miss Sara Walser of Lexington, who recently was voted the most beautiful co-ed in the senior class, has been tendered an invitation to act as one of the sponsors at the first annual Cotton Festival to take place in Raleigh, May 19. A list of 200 North Carolina society girls have been similarly invited.

Miss Carolyn Winston of Chapel Hill also received a bid to attend as sponsor.

The Cotton Festival, which is being held in connection with National Cotton week, will feature Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians, widely claimed as the greatest novelty band in the world. Waring will furnish the music for the brilliant Cotton Ball, a part of which will be broadcast over the network of broadcasting systems.

University Student Marshals

Although the list is not complete as yet, a number of University students have been included as marshals for the affair. They are Frank Alexander, Charles Tomlinson, Hilliard Wilson, Harry Hodges, J. C. B. Ehringhaus, Jr., Homer Lucas, Armistead Boyd, Claude Clark, and Bill Coan. Mrs. J. C. B. Ehringhaus will honor the sponsors and marshals at a tea at the executive mansion the afternoon of the festival.

Sponsors and marshals will also be guests of honor and be presented in the figure at the Cotton Ball.

The festival will include in addition to the ball a cotton street parade and a cotton fashion show. Pathe and Paramount newsmen will be on hand to take pictures of the events.

The Daily Tar Heel

The official newspaper of the Publications Union Board of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill where it is printed daily except Mondays, and the Thanksgiving, Christmas, and Spring Holidays. Entered as second class matter at the post office of Chapel Hill, N. C., under act of March 3, 1879. Subscription price, $4.00 for the college year. Offices on the second floor of the Graham Memorial Building.

"Hark the Sound"

Many attempts have been made in the past to rationalize the old Carolina spirit off the campus, but those who believe that this has been accomplished are deceived or all ill informed. It may be true that the old spirit does not take the form of boisterous cheering at athletic events as it used to do and this may be a regrettable fact, but to those who still have eyes to see and wisdom to discern, no better evidences could be wanted, of the loyalty which exists in the hearts of the present student body for their Alma Mater, than the fine spirit of cooperation and sacrifice manifested since the beginning of the present quarter, made necessary by stringent economic conditions.

Not only was it willing to postpone holidays and to exert all its influence in behalf of the University during the recent legislative session, but now, when the grass on the campus is assuming grazing-ground proportions and it is being made unsightly by rank weeds and other parasitical plants, and the buildings department finds itself financially unable to remedy the situation, the organizations and students are coming bravely to the rescue by attempting to raise funds to supplement the efforts of the University to keep its grounds neat and attractive.

Many students there are who cannot contribute money to this worthy enterprise, but if the opportunity presents itself for them to give of their time and labor, it is not to be doubted but that the response would be prompt and hearty. There have been times when it seemed that student loyalty was on the wane, and much criticism has been leveled at the seeming laxity, but when the crises come, that ancient Carolina spirit always rises to meet the occasion. Perhaps we might generalize on the old saying "still water runs deep" and add that silent loyalty lies deep.—W.A.S.

The Tin Cup as A Last Resort

Spring rains may come and go, but never have they left the tennis courts in such an unplayable condition.

If we could conscientiously blame the holes in the courts and the gaps in the nets on the ravages of Mother Nature, there would be little more to say than that tennis devotees should resign themselves to the unpreventable and console themselves with ping-pong. But unfortunately we can only attribute the condition of the courts to the apparent negligence or indifference of the administration.

Although we must realize the fact that appropriations for University athletics have been decreased and that consequently there is at present only approximately half the usual force of men at work on the courts, these are at best only excuses and not justifications for the disadvantages under which our tennis-playing student body labors. For in spite of the reduction of expenditures, we are still paying the same ten dollars' for athletic association fees, and if a part of these fees is supposed to defray the expense of keeping up the courts, then the student body is not getting all that it is paying for.

However, if the administration honestly cannot pay for the upkeep of the courts, other means can be found to keep them in condition. Self-help students, for instance, could be more extensively employed in this work. Or, if the University pleads lack of funds to the extent that it cannot make use of this means, we might charge a small fee for the use of the tennis courts—or establish a free will offering. The students want decent courts and there is no reason why they cannot have them.—A.T.D.

Our Knowledge—

What of It?

"I'd have my son know Seabury instead of Cicero," and Mr. Heywood Broun, author, essayist, critic, swells the ranks of educational skeptics. Because "Silas Marner" has no bearing directly on the social problems of today, Mr. Broun cannot understand why the work should be of scholastic value. Is modern education keeping step with the times? Why study the dead languages, old literature, dry mathematics, profound philosophy? In short, what is the use of this knowledge?

We are in for it again. Once more the complacent utilitarian is clanging his hollow bell to hear the echoing sounds and quaint reverberations. Again he swoops like a hawk down upon the fields of learning, but like that menacing bird of prey, he swoops away again, leaving the scene of action far behind. But this hawk's victim is merely another mouse or another sparrow; there are many more, unharmed and unscathed, running below.

Not only Mr. Broun, but many other critics of education seem to take pleasure in biting off a small sample of the educational problem, and leaving the rest alone until such time as appetite will move them again. That the problem of education is a large one no one will deny. That it must plead guilty to lacking solution seems evident. Yet it is hard to see how the cause of learning is to be helped by those who use arbitrarily practical criteria in judging it.

The remark about Seabury and Cicero shows an amazing shallowness of thought, such as can only be explained by the omnipresent distrust of knowledge as such. This distrust amounts to a positive fear, a fear of learning for its own sake. Is it possible that these critics could point out with specific delineation the points at which knowledge which is alive will become dead and at which knowledge now dead will become alive? When has the study of history been more vital than today? When have we been in more need of men who, with a knowledge of the language, the literature, the traditions of the past, can construct a valid sociological formula? How can the present, with its new problems which are old and its old problems which are new ever be isolated from the past as long as the common denominator of both is perplexing humanity?

First our critics must learn that the "liberal arts" have not lost their fascination for those who seek enlightenment; second, they must know that men who love knowledge and the things of knowledge are the men and the only men who will succeed in the realm of theory and in the realm of practice.—B.B.P.

Whoopie Girls!

House Parties—

The week-end approaches and with it the much-publicized junior-senior dances. All over the campus people are preparing for it as the one social event of the year which everyone can attend. Many fraternities are making plans for house parties which the members think to be one of the main necessities of the group of festivities.

By making assessments upon the individual members each of the fraternities seek to convert their houses into gorgeous palaces for the esthetic enjoyment of the numbers of the fairer sex who are to grace the shady, much-beloved campus of the University. Rugs, tapestries, plate glass mirrors, and paintings are brought forth from places of hiding to adorn the walls of bedrooms. Forgetting the need for study during the week and the fact that the dances will not occur until the week-end, everyone attempts to outdo the other with the magnificence of the decorations set to please the eye of his feminine guest.

Every fraternity giving a house party seems to think that a social event such as the junior-senior deserves far more work than studies which have to be attended to every day, and which are really the prime end of coming to school. This whole week will witness a falling off in class preparation that is absolutely unnecessary.

It is time that the fraternities on the campus were realizing that there are other things to be attended to besides house parties and dances, and that although these things provide a useful form of recreation, there is such a thing as too much emphasis being placed upon them. If these fraternities cannot see that by their preparation so far in advance for an event which will last only two short days, they are hurting themselves far more than a house party will help them, then house parties either should be abolished, or less care should be taken in advance to insure the neatness of the quarters of the young ladies attending the dances.—F.P.G.

With Contemporaries

Another College President Joins Ranks of Reactionaries

When, a few years ago, an editor of the Columbia Spectator was expelled from the university, a certain amount of doubt was cast upon the reality of the allegedly liberal tendencies of Columbia's administration, headed by Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler.

More speculation has been caused by the recent case of a Columbia instructor who wanted "reconstruction of the social order," and who wasn't backward in telling his classes about it.

He was fired. A mass meeting was held immediately, at which the action of the administration was freely criticized, not only by students, but by two professors. Parenthetically, this aspect of professors in the role of critics of the administration seems novel to a campus such as Stanford.

Dr. Butler was severely condemned for his move, which was thought to be directed against freedom of opinion and toward conservatism and reaction.

Few American university professors are noted for their liberal tendencies. Dr. Butler has long been conspicuous among his colleagues for his apparently sincere individualism, which may, after all, have been due chiefly to his anti-prohibition sentiments.

It may be that Dr. Butler and his press agent have been misleading the American public. If this be so, as these two expulsions at his university would indicate, it is unfortunate—unfortunate for the advancement of American education that another college president is revealed as marching in the ranks of the reactionaries.—Stanford Daily.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

To the Editor,
DAILY TAR HEEL:

In his summary of evidence which conclusively shows that the University laundry is operated either inefficiently or on a profitable basis, Mr. R. B. neglected in yesterday's DAILY TAR HEEL to point out two of the most damning bits of evidence.

(1) The Raleigh Towel Supply company, which certainly does not operate in Chapel Hill simply for the convenience of townspeople here, supplies the University itself with towels and restaurant people with white jackets for waiters. Operated efficiently, the University laundry should be able to save the University and restauranters money and make a reasonable profit on this type of business.

(2) At least one Durham laundry finds it possible to make a profit on Chapel Hill business and to save local residents money on their laundry bill.

Though comparisons are odious, particularly to those not heightened in fame by them, I should like to call to the laundry's attention the fact that at Clemson College, laundry is done for six cents a pound, cheaper than the price quoted by Mr. R. B., and (the statement of an informed laundry operator as confirmatory evidence) the laundry makes a handsome profit.

When some proponent of the present best of all possible laundry systems replies to Mr. R. B. and to me, I ask that interested readers keep in mind Mark Twain's remark about liars, and statisticians: the figures which will undoubtedly be pointed out by some minion of the University laundry will probably be both jockeyed an unapplicable.

Opponents of present high prices and the Moll Tearsheets methods which sent back three of my shirts sleeveless last week do not fear the quoting of figures. They do, however, protest against setting up false prices such as these: Shirts here, 10 cents; elsewhere, 15 cents; for the price is 15 cents here if one has his collars starched. Besides, any commercial laundry of standing gives to persons having flat work (sheets, pillow slips, and towels) a special pound rate such as that spoken of in connection with the Clemson College laundry. (The practice prevails at other colleges, including the University of Mississippi, Mississippi A. and M., Georgia Tech, and numerous others, no doubt, about which I do not know.) This pound rate should be put into operation here, or piece-work prices should be lowered—that is, if the laundry cares to escape well-founded accusations of mismanagement, profiteering, or both.

No Beer at Stanford

Stanford University, Calif., May 10.—Stanford administration officials stand ready to "fight to the last ditch" to keep beer off the campus, Almon E. Roth, comptroller of the university, announced this week.

They will also oppose all efforts to legalize the sale of 3.2 per cent beer or any stronger alcoholic beverages in Palo Alto, where legal beer now may building department would cooperate with any movement to the betterment of the condition and that labor through the Orange county unemployment relief could be secured.

Clubs Give Five Dollars

A suggestion at yesterday's meeting was made that each fraternity and organization contribute $5.00 to a fund which would make Burch trustee and to be used by the building department to fix the machines. Today's session in Graham Memorial will be devoted to further pledging for the fund and more action in the matter.

A definite goal of $200 has been set by the organizers of the effort. Investigation yesterday showed that the machines have been steadily deteriorating for a year due to lack of appropriations for maintenance, and that a great deal of work is necessary for their improvement. They cost originally $400 apiece.

The one machine loaned by the town cannot cover the work. Burch guaranteed that if the two University cutters were fixed, the campus would receive the utmost attention this spring and throughout the entire summer.

The fraternities who met at St. Anthony Hall yesterday were: Phi Delta Theta, Phi Kappa Sigma, Tau Epsilon Phi, Pi Kappa Alpha, Pi Kappa Phi, Beta Theta Pi, Chi Psi, and St. Anthony Hall (Delta Psi).

not be sold because of local ordinances and because of a law which prevents the sale of liquor within a mile and a half of the university.

Vocal cords made of coal!

Typical of Western Electric care and precision in manufacturing Bell Telephone apparatus, is the making of the transmitter button which transforms spoken words into electrical impulses.

This transmitter button—the telephone's vocal cords—contains coal. Only a fine grade of selected anthracite, specially treated, is suited for this delicate work. First the coal is ground into fine granular form—next it is carefully sifted and washed. Then, after being roasted in special ovens, it is put into the transmitter button. Approximately 50,000 tiny grains must go into each button—too few or too many would impair transmission.

Such infinite care with "little things" is one reason why Bell System apparatus serves so faithfully.

Carolina Net Squad Wins Conference Championship

Lenoir Wright Loses in Starting Upset to Bowen of Virginia for Only Loss.

HINES FAVORED IN SINGLES

Three Matches to Be Played Off Today; Singles and Doubles Tourney Gets Underway.

The Carolina varsity tennis team cinched the Southern conference team championship yesterday by winning five out of the six matches played. One singles and two doubles matches will be played off today.

The singles and doubles tourney will get under way today with five schools competing. They are Carolina, Duke, Virginia, V. M. I., and State College. Morgan and Shuford will not play for the individual championships. Carolina will enter Hines, Wright, Willis, Harris, Levitan, Dillard, McGlinn, Minor, and L. Jones.

Hines Is Favorite

Wilmer Hines will be the favorite in the singles play while the doubles championship should be a battle between Hines and Wright, state intercollegiate champions, and Barney Welsh and John Higgins of Duke. The individual race will continue through Saturday.

The team matches were played as a triangular meet in each man's individual team ranking. One man drew a bye while the other played the match. The winner met the player who did not see action. Lenoir Wright lost the only singles match for Carolina to Bowen of Virginia in a startling upset. After winning from Higgins of Duke, Wright lost, 6-4, 6-3.

Wilmer Hines won the first singles from Morrison, the conqueror of Welsh, 6-4, 6-3. Hines played superb tennis

CARR WINS AGAIN TO RETAIN LEAD IN DORM CIRCUIT

Anglin Hurls Club to 8th Consecutive Victory as Laundry Club Succumbs, 1-0.

Bill Anglin twirled Carr to its eighth consecutive intramural baseball victory yesterday and in the process handed the Laundry Club its first setback of the season, 1-0. The victory gave Carr a place in the van of the dormitory circuit with only Best House still having a chance at the title. The latter has a comparatively easy game this week for its windup and is expected to meet Carr in the league play-off early next week.

Don Jackson, on the mound for the Laundry Club, had the lawyers baffled for three innings, during which time he fanned seven of the eleven batters who faced him. Baley poled a single in the first, and Andrews reached first on an error in the third, proceeding to third on two more errors.

Anglin Makes Tally

In the fourth frame Baley flied out and Anglin drove a double to right, going to third on a grounder by Markham. Gillespie drove the pitcher home with a clean single for the only run of the game.

Both pitchers turned in good records during the afternoon. Anglin gave only five hits, fanned four, and issued no passes, while Jackson allowed only three bingles, fanned nine, and gave no free trips to first.

PING PONG SEMI-FINALS WILL BE PLAYED TODAY

Preliminary play in the individual ping-pong tournament being conducted at the game room of Graham Memorial was completed yesterday. The semi-finals will take place today, and the final rounds will be run off tomorrow afternoon.

The winners yesterday were: Draper over Lever; Mosier over Baukey; Fountain over B. Kalb; and Martin and M. Kalb over Humphries and Jones by forfeit.

HIGH NINES WILL CLASH FOR TITLE

Roanoke Rapids and Mt. Airy To Play Here Friday at 3:00 For "B" Championship.

Mt. Airy and Roanoke Rapids high school nines will clash here Friday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock for the class "B" championship of the state.

The same two teams met in the finals last year with Roanoke Rapids winning the title 9 to 6 after a thrilling game of rallies and counter-rallies.

Large crowds are expected from Mt. Airy and Roanoke Rapids for the final game as both teams have come through with fine records this year, and each has high hopes of a victory.

Mt. Airy defeated Paw Creek 11-2 for the western title Monday, after winning their other district championship game by downing Granite Quarry 2-1.

Roanoke Rapids beat Snow Hill 21-10 in their first district championship game and downed Angier 14-3 for the eastern title last Saturday.

George Underwood, formerly of Elon, is the Mt. Airy coach, while the Roanoke Rapids team is tutored by J. C. Hoyle, a Guilford man.

Their game here Friday will likely produce a feature pitching duel between two south-paws. Aces of their respective clubs and two of the best class "B" pitchers to come up in sev-

WHITE PHANTOMS PLAY NINE HOME GAMES NEXT YEAR

Two Northern Trips Are Included in Schedule Which Begins January 3.

Carolina's 1934 basketball team will play nineteen games before the Southern Conference tournament, according to the card released by Coach Bo Shepard yesterday.

Nine of the games are scheduled for Chapel Hill, which includes all the Big Five teams. Two games each with Wake Forest and Davidson, and one with Navy are the only games scheduled out of the Conference.

The squad has two long trips to take, both with three games. The first trip, starting January 11, will find the White Phantoms meeting V. P. I., V. M. I., and Washington and Lee on successive days. Virginia, Maryland, and Navy will be played on the second trip, which starts January 29.

Two Games Added

The two South Carolina entrants in the Southern Conference are both on the 1934 card and are the only new teams on the regular schedule that Carolina meets. Clemson is scheduled to play the opening game

TAR BABIES FACE BLUE IMPS HERE

Two Freshman Nines Battle This Afternoon in Important Big Five Tilt.

With four straight victories behind them, Carolina's freshman baseball team is all set to face the undefeated Duke Blue Imp team on Emerson field this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock.

These two teams are practically the only teams left in the frosh Big Five race for top honors, and at present Duke holds a slight advantage. The Blue Imps have won all their Big Five games to date while Carolina has dropped but one of theirs. If the Tar Babies win this afternoon and next week's game with Duke, they will take the championship without a doubt. Duke however needs only one win over the Tar Babies to get the title.

The Tar Babies have played several more games than Duke and to date have eight victories to the Blue Imps' six. The Carolina first year team has won eight out of the last nine starts.

Coach Cerney said yesterday that he would probably start Spiers on the mound today. Spiers has an underhanded delivery with a nice fast ball and probably the best curve of any of the Tar Baby pitchers. Connie Mack, Jr., may hurl for the Blue Imps.

There will be little change in the rest of the Carolina line-up.

BASEBALL TEAM WORKED LIGHTLY BY COACH HEARN

Mentor Puts Squad Through Easy Workout in Preparation For Duke Game Saturday.

Still somewhat excited over Andrews' great feat Tuesday, Coach Bunn Hearn let his baseball team off with only a light work-out yesterday.

The Carolina club went through a long batting drill with all the squad out getting a rap. Coach Hearn then gave the infield a short drill and sent the squad in early. Quite a few of the Tar Heels, among them Andrews, journeyed to Durham to watch the Duke-Davidson battle there yesterday.

Although Griffith will probably hurl against the Blue Devils Saturday, Andrews will probably face Duke in the second contest that Carolina plays them here next week. Griffith has had a bad finger and there is a chance that the no-hit-twirl-er will see action this week-end. Looking over the Big Five Womble, first; Montgomery, second; Irwin, short; and Moore, third will round out the infield. Shapiro and Bullock are certain starters in left and center field, while Orr, Croom, Tatum, or Marcom will play in right field. Yeager will get the call behind the plate.

Wage Raises Announced

A brighter outlook for national business recovery developed yesterday as thousands of workers went to their jobs with announcements that their wages would be boosted in accordance with the President's appeal to employers to keep wages up. Wage raises ranging from 5 to 20 per cent and going into effect either yesterday or within a week were announced in the following cities: Philadelphia; Uniontown, Pa.; Akron, O.; Suffolk, Va.; Cleveland; Anderson, S. C.; Charlotte; and Martinsville, Va.

Paraguay Declares War

With President Eusebio Ayala signing the declaration at 11:00 o'clock yesterday morning, Paraguay formally declared war on Bolivia. Although intermittent fighting has kept the two countries armed, the formal status of warfare had not been reached for 50 years until the declaration. Great demonstrations in cities in Paraguay were provoked by the action.

Japs Control Lwan

The Japanese army yesterday succeeded in establishing control at the Lwan river, where hostilities have been going on the past few days, according to Japanese dispatches reaching Tokyo. A further report stated that a fresh brigade of Japanese troops had smashed a Chinese concentration across the Lwan at Sahochia, ten miles south of Hsiefengkow, one of the important great wall passes.

Storm at Charlotte

Dr. C. T. Murchison of the economics department will address a conference on unemployment at Washington tonight on "The Effect of the Depression on Southern Industrial Conditions." The address of Dr. Murchison is one of a series sponsored by the Julius Rosenwald fund.

Phi Announces Date For Debate Tryouts

The Phi assembly considered and voted on constitutional amendments at the meeting Tuesday night. Try-outs will be held next meeting for the Mary Wright debate which will be held commencement week. Only juniors are eligible for the debate. The Phi members will debate the Di senate, taking the negative of the query: "Resolved: That Japan's foreign policy be condemned."

The constitutional amendments that were passed pertained to the payment of dues. Hereafter, no member may vote, speak on bills, or hold office unless his dues are paid. The initiation fee and dues combined for a new member next year will be three dollars.

Carolina Net Squad Wins Championship

Harris Wins Two

After Harvey Harris had beaten Taylor of Virginia, 8-6, 6-2, he subdued John Peake of Duke in an easy fashion, 6-2, 8-6. In the number four match Hedges of Virginia tallied over Hardy of Duke, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3. Harley Shuford is slated to meet Hedges in the final match this afternoon.

Ricky Willis won the number five singles competition after he had first defeated Butler of Duke, 6-1, 6-3. In the final match Willis scored over Robman of Virginia who had drawn a bye. The scores were 6-3, 6-3. Walter Levitan won from Fletcher of Virginia, 6-3, 6-1 in the first round and then defeated Nixon in the final, 6-0, 6-2.

One Doubles Match Played

Only one doubles match was completed yesterday. The competition was cancelled because of darkness. The other two matches, the first and second doubles, will be played today.

In the third doubles Nixon and Hardy of Duke drew a bye, while Morgan and Shuford won from Morrison and Robman, 6-0, 6-0. In the final match the Tar Heels allowed the Duke boys but one game, 6-0, 6-1. Harley Shuford was hitting the ball in excellent fashion.

Hines and Wright drew a bye in the first round and will meet Welsch and Higgins of Duke today. Duke won from Hedges and Bowen of Virginia after three sets which lasted until dark. The scores were 6-4, 6-3, 7-5.

Harris and Levitan Lose

Harris and Levitan dropped the doubles in the first round to Peake and Butler of Duke, 6-1, 6-1. Taylor and Fletcher of Virginia will meet the victorious Duke men today in the final match.

This team championship is the first ever awarded by the Southern conference. It will be an annual championship. In former years under the old conference group, only individual titles were contested for. The matches were formerly played at Tulane University, now a member of another conference.

New Tar Heel Business Staff Will Meet Tonight at 7:00

Candidates for next year's business staff of the DAILY TAR HEEL will meet with Marcus Feinstein, incoming business manager, tonight at 7:00 o'clock in 203 Graham Memorial, at which time Feinstein will explain policies for next year's conduct of the department.

Delta Tau Delta. Gayle Rogers turned in another masterly performance on the mound and his teammates captured an easy victory.

Dudley, Wilday, and Holman played well for the winning outfit, while Rouiller and Fowler stood out for Delta Tau Delta.

Theta Chi Bows

Alpha Tau Omega took a 16-9 decision from Theta Chi as Blanton scored three runs for the winners. A. T. O. had little difficulty, scoring in five of the seven innings, while Theta Chi was effective only in the third when it drove over four tallies.

Nowell, Weeks, and Napier stood out for the losers, while Smith and Pollard played best for A. T. O.

Everett, Sigma Phi Epsilon, and Delta Kappa Epsilon gained forfeit victories over Mungum, Sigma Chi, and Phi Kappa Sigma respectively.

TENNIS RESULTS

Chi Psi gained its seventh successive intramural tennis win as it defeated Chi Phi, 3-0. Atwood defeated Hudson, 1-5, 5-0, 5-1, and Laughlin took over Wilkinson, 5-1, 5-2, in singles, and Atwood and Laughlin paired to down the Chi Phi pair, 2-5, 5-2, in doubles.

Sigma Phi Sigma chalked up its sixth victory of the season in as many starts as it downed Zeta Psi, 3-0. Lovill beat Stokes, 0-5, 5-0, 5-3, and Froneberger defeated Albright, 5-2, 5-1, in singles, while the Sigma Phi Sigma tandem took the doubles, 5-3, 5-2.

Phi Sigma Kappa lost to Sigma Nu, 2-1, as the latter gained its sixth consecutive victory. Old beat Vick, 5-1, 5-1, while Kaveny gained the losers' lone point with a 5-0, 5-2 win over Lynch in singles, and Sigma Nu doubles outfit took a 5-2, 5-4, win from Vick and Kaveny in doubles.

S. A. E. and D. K. E. gained forfeits over Phi Alpha and Delta Tau Delta respectively.

Today's Schedule

Baseball: 3:45—(1) Tau Epsilon Phi vs. Zeta Psi, (2) Aycock vs. Swain Hall, (3) Phi Alpha vs. Theta Kappa Nu; 4:45—(1) Theta Chi vs. Phi Delta Theta, (2) Kappa Alpha vs. Beta Theta Pi, (4) Grimes vs. Lewis.

Tennis: 3:30—(1) Phi Alpha vs. Sigma Phi Epsilon, (2) Atlantics vs. Carr, (3) Pi Kappa Alpha vs. Zeta Psi; 4:30—(1) Tau Epsilon Phi vs. Phi Delta Theta, (2) Old East vs. Mungum, (3) Aycock vs. Lewis.

Joe Brown Has Lead In 'Elmer The Great'

A Napoleon of the great American past-time will appear here today.

"Elmer, the Great," ball player extraordinary, will be shown at the Carolina theatre with no one less than that of the great Joe E. Brown taking the title role.

Patricia Ellis, Claire Dodd, Frank McHugh, Preston Foster and Russell Hampton are the supporting cast in the exhibition of the pathos and humor of the American game.

Humor seems to be the order of the week at the Carolina for tomorrow Maurice Chevalier, as carefree and debonair as usual, appears in "A Bedtime Story", which, it is claimed, keeps everybody laughing from beginning to end.

Helen Twelveteers, Edward Everett Horton, and Adrienne Ames are members of the supporting cast.

RUSSIAN SCHOOL OFFERS SUMMER COURSES ABROAD

Three American educational sociologists—Professor Daniel H. Kulp, II, of Teachers College, Columbia; Harvey W. Zorbaugh and Irving V. Sollins, of the New York University school of education—have announced a unique venture in summer study abroad. Under their joint direction the newly-organized American summer school in Russia will offer two courses abroad in conjunction with a tour to the Union of Soviet Republics.

Both courses are to take 60 hours each, and they will be given with the cooperation of the faculties of the universities of Moscow and Leningrad and the Soviet educational authorities. Enrollment is now in progress. Applications for registration should be made to Irving V. Sollins, school of education, 75 South building, Washington square east, New York University.

BOTANY INSTRUCTORS FIND UNUSUAL TREE

After the meeting of the North Carolina Academy of Science at Davidson, Dr. H. R. Totten and T. G. Harbison of the University botany department, who were delegates at the meeting, took a field trip into Davie county.

In this county of rich soil and large trees, they found a tulip poplar and a white oak with measurements much larger than the section of a cypress tree from Florida on display in Davie hall.

Arrow and Sparrow Have Little Mix-up

The oft stated fact that "anything can happen in the game" was upheld when a sparrow flew into the path of a speeding arrow down on the archery range one afternoon this week.

While a member of the Chapel Hill archery club was target-practicing Tuesday afternoon, he was bewildered at the peculiar behavior of his fleeting arrow. Upon retrieving his missiles he discovered a sparrow transfixed to one of them.

A similar incident occurred once before in archery history when a hawk was caught in the path of an arrow, but perhaps the most unusual occurrence of this kind was that of a woodpecker meeting a golf ball in flight and deeply penetrating it with his firm beak.

Enviably Record Made By Coach Bunn Hearn

teams waged a longer battle without either side scoring. This was played between the Fargo and Devil's Lake teams on July 18, 1891. These rivals battled for twenty-four innings without a score being made. There is nothing authentic, however, to show that this was a regular league game. Though a record is a record, nevertheless, the award for the longest scoreless game in the leagues must be to the game contested at Jersey City yesterday.

Never in Danger

"The most remarkable part of it all is that Hearn, the Toronto hurler, twirled the entire fatiguing route for the Maple Leafs, and he yielded only six sparse hits. Never was he in danger of being scored upon and his performance will go down in major league history as the most notable achievement in the box up to 1913."

Coach Bunn will readily admit that this was the biggest thrill he has gotten after some twenty-two years in organized ball. But he will never forget an exhibition of batting which will be hard to surpass, certainly never by a hurler. This occurred in 1912 when Hearn was pitching for Springfield against Danville. Bunn got four for five, three of which were out of the park. But best of all was that in the seventh inning of that game Bunn was up twice and twice he crashed the ball for circuit trips. Incidentally, Springfield won, 20-6.

standings one can see that the Tar Heels still have a chance to either tie things up or win the championship, regardless of their three defeats. Davidson is the only team with but one loss and they still have Wake Forest and Duke to face twice, and State once.

If Carolina should win the rest of their games, two with the Blue Devils and one with State, they would go ahead of Duke and be tied with State. Wake Forest still has games with Duke and State which may end in defeats for most anybody and leave just about any of the Big Five teams on top.

SENATE PASSES SALES TAX BILL

State Biennial Revenue Bill Given Final Legislative Approval Yesterday.

The state biennial revenue bill, including the modified general sales tax of three per cent, yesterday was given final legislative approval, and it will become law upon ratification, probably today.

Immediately after the passage of the measure, the state merchants association, through Secretary Willard McDowell informed the legislature that the constitutionality of the sales tax will be contested in the courts.

Without a hitch, the revenue measure was passed by the senate in morning session, and the upper body is ready to work on the school machinery bill, which was sent from the house yesterday.

Conference Measure

The bill as passed yesterday was the report of a conference committee, which was appointed after the two divisions of the general assembly failed to agree on the terms of the bill.

The main point of difference between the measures drawn up by the two bodies lay in the fact that the senate boosted the two per cent general sales tax proposed by the house and struck out the house's provision for a kilowatt-hour tax on power.

The conference committee, which worked on compromises last week, retained the main proposals advanced by the upper house.

Five Visitors To Be On Summer Faculty

Five visiting instructors will serve on the summer school faculty of the University, it was announced yesterday. Four of the visiting teachers are in the school of education. They are: Dr. Robertson R. Hollingworth, formerly of State Teachers College, Cedar Falls, Iowa; Miss Mary Huffham, head of the department of English at Bennet School, Millbrook, New York; Dr. Orbie Earl Michie, formerly professor of secondary education at Kansas State Teachers College; and Dr. James S. Tippet of Columbia University. Tippet is an author of well known books for children.

Miss Johanne Gjerulf of the faculty of the American Institute of Dalcrose Eurythmics, New York, will teach music. All visiting instructors will remain for both terms of summer school.

MAGAZINE OFFERS MANY FEATURES IN SUNDAY ISSUE

Daniel's First Number Will Shed New Light on Post-Civil War "Scalawags."

New interpretations of the careers of Rowan Hinton Helper and Solomon Pool, hated scalawags of the post-Civil war days in North Carolina, are among the features of the Carolina Magazine to be issued Sunday by E. C. Daniel, Jr., the new editor.

J. F. Alexander describes Helper, author of a book denouncing slavery, as "North Carolina's hated friend." In his short sketch of Solomon Pool, Reconstruction president of the University during Holden's administration, Walter Terry offers historical evidence condemning Mrs. Cornelia Spencer's stand against Pool, whom he depicts as a friend to the University and a brilliant man.

In an amusing essay that is both comic and serious, Walter Rosenthal applies a universal law to an explanation of why fat men are happy. A story by Thomas McKnight, on the front page of Sunday's issue of the Magazine, contains dialogue described by the editor as "robust and realistic, worthy of Ernest Hemingway."

In his usual satirical vein, Robert Berryman gives an interesting critical estimate of the policies of the DAILY TAR HEEL under the last two editors. Included in a full page of criticism in the new Magazine are a review by Mary Dirnberger of the North Carolina Professional Artists' exhibit in Hill Music hall, a story on the handicraft show

Art Guild To Exhibit Paintings Here Today

A variety of charming portraits and landscape canvases from Chester Springs summer school of the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts has been hung for an exhibition this afternoon in the studio of the art guild in Hill Music hall. In connection with this exhibit the work of Mr. McLean's Chapel Hill class will also be shown.

There will be an informal tea from 4:00 to 6:00 o'clock. All students and townspeople interested in art are cordially invited.

NEW ADVERTISING PLAN INTRODUCED

Tar Heel Advertising Agency Established to Serve Local And State Advertisers.

The formation of an advertising agency under the direction of the DAILY TAR HEEL business staff was decided upon last night at an organization meeting of that group. This innovation was proposed by Marcus Feinstein, business manager of the publication for next year.

The service is offered free of charge to local merchants and is the first venture of its kind to function in connection with a college publication. The concern, to be known as The DAILY TAR HEEL Advertising Agency, will open activities when Feinstein assumes his duties as business manager.

Statewide Service Offered

The agency will offer local and statewide advertisers a complete service, including copywriters, lay-out men, artists, and mat equipment. The business manager wishes it understood that the service is extended to all Chapel Hill merchants for whatever advertising medium they may choose. Out-of-town merchants who advertise in any student publication are invited to partake in the benefits of the agency.

In organizing this agency, the business manager feels that it

Contralto Exhibits Affability And Pleasing Stage Personality

Louise Bernhardt, in Interview With Tar Heel Representative, Declares She Has Never Been "Stage Frightened" and That She Is "Fed Up" on Opera.

There is nothing about Louise Bernhardt's personality that suggests the popular conception of a concert artist. "I like people," she declared after the concert Wednesday night, and this simple declaration explains perhaps better than anything else her completely unrestrained manner and affability. Besieged by autograph-hunters, who even blocked the entrance to her dressing room, she remained smiling through it all until she had granted every request for her signature.

Probably no singer conveys her personality to an audience more than Miss Bernhardt. She establishes by a word or gesture that casualness and intimacy which so many connected with the stage strive for. After completing one of her numbers, Miss Bernhardt announced that she would sing the Parodies when her next rendition was listed on the program as American Lullaby. "I vary my selections so much," she explained after her concert, "that I can scarcely keep up with them." And on being corrected by her accompanist, she laughed audibly at her mistake and converted a probably tense or slightly embarrassing situation into one which the audience enjoyed for its human touch.

Never Frightened

"I never have stage fright," she declared on being asked whether she ever felt the qualms of facing a large crowd of listeners. "I have been on the stage ever since I was ten years old." Miss Bernhardt began her career at this early age as a dancer. This reminiscence led her to explain that her

Martha Hatton's Comedy at Five to Open Second Night Of Student Productions.

A sophisticated comedy in the modern vein, Martha Hatton's Comedy at Five, opens a second bill of three studio productions tonight at 8:30 o'clock in the Playmaker theatre.

The program of plays, directed by students in play direction, is continued from last night with three productions tonight and three Saturday. The plays are included in the Playmaker season-ticket series, with other tickets at 25 cents.

Comedy at Five is produced by the author, with Margaret Hervey, Eugenia Rawls, Forney Rankin and Foster Fitz-Simons.

Betty Barnett directs the second play, Eternal Spring, by Robert Barnett, which is presented with Ed Martin, Margaret Hervey, and Ellen Stewart. William Bonyun's swaggering comedy of Long Island, Blow Me Down is the last. The cast of Katherine Jamieson, William Pitt, Malcolm Moore, Edgar Broadhurst is directed by Ed Martin.

The productions tomorrow night are The Queen Was In the Kitchen, by Ellen Stewart; Eto-wah Plantation, by Eugenia Rawls; and a repeat performance of Martha Hatton's Comedy at Five.

Executive Group To Name Financial Head

At the first meeting of the executive committee of the rising sophomore class last night, a resolution was adopted that a financial chairman be appointed who is to confer with the class president, Russell Mickle, and the student auditor of the University to prepare a class budget. Financial matters will be considered in open meetings.

The committee went on record as approving an investigation of student entertainment programs, and it was recommended that the sophomore class take on the duty of orientating the freshmen. Nominations were made for the University dance committee. Those nominated were: Phil Hammer, Van Webb and Frank Rogers.

Another meeting of the committee was called for 7:30 o'clock Thursday evening, May 19, in Graham Memorial.

ANDERSON NAMED PERMANENT HEAD OF CLASS OF 1933

Manning Elected Vice-President And Philpott Secretary by Seniors Last Night.

Francis Anderson was elected permanent president of the class of '33 at a meeting of the senior class in Gerrard hall last night, defeating his only opponent, Robert Novins. For the vice-presidency, John Manning defeated Percy Idol, and for secretary-treasurer, Cabell Philpott won over Robert Barnett.

Agnew Bahnson, an alumnus of the University now connected with the Reynolds Tobacco company, gave a short talk at the beginning of the meeting in which he emphasized the importance of character and personality as an aid to success in business. After his talk the floor was opened to nominations for the permanent class officers.

Other Business

A question of choosing a class day prophet, poet, historian and testator was brought up at the meeting. Lindy Cate appointed a committee to investigate eligible men for the offices and report to the class Thursday.

Dr. Charles Mangum will address the class Thursday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, giving advice and instructions for commencement week.

Lindy Cate also stated that graduation invitations were now on sale at Pritchard and Lloyd Drug company and the Y. M. C. A.

Carolina Student Given Commission

Ervid E. Ericson, law student, recently received his commission as second-lieutenant in the Field Artillery reserve corps.

Lieutenant Ericson has been a sergeant in the 316th Field Artillery for two years and has continued his army studies in the troop school held fortnightly in Davie hall. He is the son of E. E. Ericson, professor in the University department of English.

A supper in honor of the new commission officer was given by Captain Henry R. Totten to the 316th Field Artillery officers of Chapel Hill and Mebane.

CAMPAIGN DRIVE FOR LAWN FUND CONTINUES TODAY

Twenty-One University Organizations Donate $105; Group Treasurers Meet Again.

With 21 campus organizations donating a total of $105.00, the campus improvement fund after a concerted drive that lasted until late last night successfully closed the first day of campaigning. Thirty dollars more was pledged for payment today or tomorrow.

The two power cutters belonging to the University were sent early this morning as agreed by P. L. Burch of the buildings department to High Point for repairs. Work on the lawns and gutters on the entire campus to supplement the present labor utilizing the power cutter of Chapel Hill township will begin tomorrow morning.

The following organizations cooperated in yesterday's canvassing: St. Anthony Hall, Pi Kappa Alpha, Beta Theta Pi, Pi Kappa Phi, Lambda Chi Alpha, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Pi Beta Phi, Kappa Sigma, Chi Psi, Phi Kappa Sigma, Zeta Psi, Tau Epsilon Phi, Delta Tau Delta, Phi Sigma Kappa, Phi Delta Theta, the Thirteen Club, the Order of Gimghoul, the Order of Shells, the Y. M. C. A., Sigma Chi, and the Debate Council.

Goal of $200 Set

The goal set by the campaign that is necessary to fix both of the University cutters is $200. The present collection will allow for the repair of one of the machines.

The Power of Student Action

In the face of the recent controversy over the wild expenditures involved in sponsoring our Junior-Senior dances this week-end, some nineteen organizations have fallen in line with the sponsors of the "cut the grass program." Money is needed, it is true, to finance such a program, but this money is to be spent for a common purpose, one that is of vital interest to the pride of every Carolina student.

Approximately two hundred dollars is needed to repair the University's power mowers and more than a hundred dollars has already been procured. Eighteen fraternities, one sorority and four campus organizations have each donated five dollars towards the amount required.

Indeed, the inmates of one dormitory turned out en masse Wednesday and, with borrowed implements, cut the lawn surrounding the building, clipped the shrubbery, and in general improved the appearance of their Chapel Hill home a hundred per cent.

The efforts of the various organizations and the exhibition of the men in the dormitory stand out as the biggest step taken by the students as a whole at Carolina in a long while. It shows, beyond any doubt, that there exists today, as in the past, a strong love and admiration for the campus and a desire to have it keep its position as one of the most beautiful campuses in the country.

Such a movement as this one, organized and advanced by the students themselves, is just the thing that will make the University's critics in the legislature and elsewhere stop, admire, and finally come to our support.

Vandalism—

The numerous reports of books being taken from the library, of whole pages being cut out of encyclopedias and newspapers is a sad commentary on the sense of honor which presumably exists among some students here. When the University administration decided to introduce the honor system here at Chapel Hill, it was going on the assumption that at least ninety-nine students out of a hundred would be fair enough to themselves and to their fellow students not to cheat. The greater offense of vandalism was not seriously considered as constituting a menace to the school; however it seems that unless a far greater respect for University property is shown in the near future some sort of drastic action will undoubtedly be taken.

It is one of the prides of a student here at the University that his restrictions are few; he is considered a man capable of trust and responsibility. It is obligatory on his part to show his appreciation of this confidence by his loyalty and cooperation to the school. The type of mind which perpetrates such outrages represents an individual who does not deserve to be called a university man.

Suspicion for these acts has fallen upon one or two freshmen who were working upon term papers. Whether this be correct or not does not matter a great deal; it is to be hoped that the culprits were not persons who have been here at the University long, since such a situation would hint that these gentlemen had not profited much from their college years. Be that as it may, such acts of vandalism deserve the express condemnation of each student as well as the student body at large. We here at the University of North Carolina have a tradition of honor and accomplishment to uphold; let it not be said that we are failing in this respect.—V.J.L.

Where Is Our Intimacy?

There once was a custom at Carolina, still prevalent at many schools, that required students, passing one another on the campus to exchange a word of greeting. While not yet extinct this is a usage that becomes rarer as the years go by and is now the exception rather than the rule. True, there is no tremendous gain to be had by the perpetuation of the custom; if it dies out Carolina will be about the same school and would suffer no considerable setback for its demise. Yet its survival would impart to the campus an intimacy and a friendliness that it possessed in days gone by.

North Carolina as a southern school should endeavor to stress one of the south's finest virtues—cordiality. A nod or a "howdy" is a far more pleasant means with which to pass a person on a narrow walk than is a stony stare.

Few students at the University are so rushed and overworked that they are forced to conserve every moment and go to and fro with the grim silence and pre-occupied mien of a Wall Street banker. Old Chapel Hill boasts a certain charming languor which might well be enhanced by an air of friendliness and greeting.

Carolina is an old school proud of her traditions which are fine ones that she does well to treasure. The exchange of salutations was once such a tradition and it is a pity to see it go by the boards. It is a practice that if not overdone may be a pleasant and agreeable little ritual. It has ought to be recommended it other than mere courtesy and the kinship that might be expected to exist by all who attend this University. For the time at least we are all schoolmates and all townsmen and we can show the world that the rush of present day life and the new high pressure efficiency has not robbed Chapel Hill of the intimacy and courtesy of our student body.—J.F.A.

Do Honor Systems Ever Work?

The honor system of one of the south's greatest universities, Tulane, has been declared unsatisfactory and is undergoing a thorough investigation by a faculty committee. Blame for the conditions have been placed by the committee on the failure of students to offer sufficient cooperation.

The Tulane Hullabaloo discusses the matter as follows:

"Three possible courses are open to faculty members and students who will determine the future of the system. One is to retain it in its present form. This should logically be accompanied by a campaign to educate students to their responsibility and create a willingness to enforce, as well as observe personally, the existing system. Another course would involve recognizing the almost insuperable reluctance of students to report their erring fellows, and cultivating a student attitude against cheating which would substitute personal honor for formal enforcement. The third course is simply to discard the honor system as ineffective and undesirable and substitute some form of proctorial supervision."

The handicaps listed by the Hullabaloo, unwillingness of students to report those cheating on exams, and lack of sufficiently strong feeling against cheating among the mass of the students, beset any honor system in any university. In view of them it might well be asked, do any honor systems work?

They do work in some schools, but not in many. Louisiana State has not been able, despite agitation for such within recent years, to establish an honor system. Examinations are given in one or two schools, on such a basis, but even these have had their moments of uncertainty.

An honor system, to operate properly, requires a high sense of honor and responsibility in every student; it also requires that every student be willing to report any fellow whom he might see cheating or giving aid on an examination.

He is a rare optimist who imagines that nearly all the students in any university possess the first requisite; he is worse than an optimist who imagines that any student body can be prevailed upon to report every one of its members seen cheating.

Honor systems established after many years of effort in a school of the very highest scholastic standards may function with some efficiency, but under even them there will be found probably as much cribbing on examinations as under any other system. A sense of honor and responsibility on the part of many students might be encouraged, but on the whole, any student who will cheat while under the eye of a professor will cheat all the more when that professor leaves the room.—L. S. U. Reveille.

The Musical University

By Vermont C. Royster

Presenting to a Chapel Hill audience for the first time in several years a notable contralto to voice, Miss Louise Bernhardt appeared in Memorial hall Wednesday night under the auspices of the Student Entertainment Committee, offering a program more varied in promise than in the performance.

So frequently of late has the University been host to artists of the first water that it is becoming increasingly difficult to maintain towards them an orderly, critical attitude, a difficulty which arises over the adoption of a criterion. Miss Bernhardt possesses a voice of such flexibility and range, combined with intelligence in her phrasing, as to rank her among the most promising of the contraltos. Yet there is, withal, something essential to the mastery of her expression which is unfortunately lacking.

A glance at Miss Bernhardt's program shows a variation sufficient to bring out the full possibilities of an artist, possibilities which she left dormant. In the second number of the first group, a plaintive composition of Caccini, Miss Bernhardt first displayed the full richness and resonance of her voice. In this and the following number of Schubert's she raised the hope of a brilliant performance, which made some of the succeeding renditions decided disappointments.

It was in the second group of compositions, all from the pens of Germans, that she gave the poorest performance of the evening's program. These unfortunate selections, however, did not long leave impressions upon the audience, for the third group found her at her best again. The Spanish melody by Aubert was possibly the number most familiar to her audience, and this with Ravel's Tout gai gave her a vivacity not heretofore attained.

So favorably did the audience react to these last two numbers that she returned to encore, for which she chose, as is the popular custom, an Irish folk song. Yet the greatest rendition of the evening came after Tchaikovsky's Jeanne d'Arc which Miss Bernhardt offered as her piece de resistance.

The final group consisted for the most part of American numbers delivered in a humorous vein. Rich's American Lullaby was something of a novelty and reminded one of Tibbett singing Short'n' Bread. In Sea Poem, a short number by the comparatively unknown Bibb, Miss Bernhardt showed her ability to gather range, a thing of which there had already been intimations in Nuages by the French composer Georges.

Miss Bernhardt's performance would have been much more enjoyable, to this critic at least, had she left off her attempted histrionics. In her efforts to throw her personality across the foot-lights she became too stagey, as though she were trying to ape the vivacity of Mary Garden ten years ago. In her Parodies, in which she gave her interpretation of those tenors who take themselves too seriously and those who take Bach more seriously than he ever intended, she was unconsciously burlesquing her own singing. Had the words been otherwise and her gestures absent there would have been no hint of the burlesque.

As to Miss Bernhardt's voice, it possesses a richness of timbre and shows itself to be a product of severe training, but there is lacking in it that intangible finish which is the difference between the performer and the artist.

Willis And Levitan Pull Upset And Advance To Quarter-Finals

Willis Defeats Welsh, Duke; Levitan Downs Bowen of Virginia, in Singles.

WILL CHARGE SPECTATORS

Hines Advances to Quarter-final Singles; Levitan to Play
Wright Today.

Ricky Willis and Walter Levitan scored the outstanding upsets of the second round yesterday afternoon in the first day of the Southern conference tennis tournament play. Both the singles and doubles matches advanced to the quarter-finals.

Willis made a slow start in his match with the Duke leader, Barney Welsh, losing the first set 6-1. Willis had his backhand shots working in excellent order. Willis' service was nothing but steady, however his ground shots were fast and well placed. Ricky scored the next two sets in an easy manner 6-4, 6-1.

Walter Levitan had every department of his game working when he sprung an upset over Bowen of Virginia. Levitan won in straight sets, 6-1, 7-5. Levitan will be favored to win his quarter-final match with Lenoir Wright this morning at 11:00 o'clock. Walter defeated Wright at Pinehurst, and Lenoir met defeat in the team matches from Bowen, Levitan's victim.

Hines Eliminates Minor

Wilmer Hines eliminated Ike Minor of Carolina after a 6-4, 6-4 tilt and advanced to the quarter-finals. Minor defeated Carr of V. M. I., 6-1, 6-2, in the first round, while Hines won by default from State College. State defaulted six matches having failed to send any of the men they entered in the tournament.

Barney Welsh drew a default from the State College team in the first round. Willis scored over John Peake in short order, 6-0, 6-1. Willis met and defeated Welsh in the second round after three sets.

After Harvey Harris won from McNeil of Duke by default he defeated Rohman of Virginia who had advanced to the second with a bye. The scores were 6-4, 4-6, 6-1. Morrison downed John Dillard of Carolina, 6-4, 6-2 in the second round after he had won from Hardy of Duke, 6-0, 6-1. Dillard advanced by a default from State College.

McGinn Wins in Upset

Both Taylor and McGinn won by default from State College in the first bracket. John McGinn scored a surprising upset over Taylor of Virginia to advance to the quarter-final round. The scores were 6-3, 6-0. McGinn was playing his best game of the year.

Higgins of Duke eliminated Butler of Duke in the second round, 6-2, 6-2. Higgins had tallied over Fletcher of Virginia 6-0, 6-1. Butler advanced by a default. In the first round Bowen of Virginia won over Morefield of Duke, 6-4, 2-6, 6-3. Levitan downed Nixon, 6-4, 6-1. In the second round Levitan eliminated Bowen.

Lenoir Wright won from Hedges of Virginia in the first round, 6-4, 6-2. Morgan of V. M. I. lost to Wright in the second round after he had advanced with a bye, 6-0, 7-5.

One Doubles Round

In the doubles only one round was played. The quarter and semi-finals rounds will be played today. Hines and Wright defeated Fiore and Watson of Carolina, a substitute team for the defaulted N. C. State team, 6-0, 6-2. Hines and Wright will play the winner of the Cartland and Markham-Stokes and Harrison match in the quarter.

ROANOKE RAPIDS AND MT. AIRY TO PLAY HERE TODAY

Eastern and Western Class B High School Champions to Clash for State Title.

Roanoke Rapids and Mt. Airy high school nines will meet at 3:00 o'clock today on Emerson field for the Class B championship of the state. The game will renew a grudge fight that began when the same two teams met in last year's finals, won by Roanoke Rapids 9-6. Large crowds from both towns as well as from here are expected to attend.

This year's battle will probably produce a feature pitching duel between the southpaws, Lefty Acree of the eastern and Lefty Dean of the western champions.

District Champions

The Roanoke Rapids team, which is coached by J. C. Hoyle of Guilford College, beat Snow Hill 21-10 in one of its district championship games and won the eastern title from Henderson, 14-3. The Mt. Airy club, piloted by George Underwood of Elon, won its first district championship game from Granite Quarry, 2-1, but went on a slugging spree to defeat Paw Creek for the western title, 11-2.

Both schools will offer veteran teams, for Mt. Airy will have five regulars and Roanoke Rapids will have six regulars back from the teams which battled for the championship last year.

The probable lineups:

Roanoke Rapids: I. Dickens, short; Allsbrook, second; W. Dickens, left; Stark, center; Hardison, right; Pridgen, catcher; Garris, first; Grant, third; Acree, pitcher.

Mt. Airy: M. Fuller, second; Belton, left; D. Fuller, catcher; Dean, pitcher; Eldridge, first; Badgett, center; Tesh, short; Simmons, third; and Childress, right.

BOB ATWOOD WINS IN BOWLING TOURNAMENT

Bob Atwood, with a total score for three games of 465, yesterday won the University bowling tournament, which has been run off at Graham Memorial since Monday. He will be awarded a cigarette container with the figure of a bowler as a trophy. Bill Harrison, with a score of 415, Jim Hudson with 412, Alfred Hamilton, and R. J. Lovill followed. For winning second place in the tournament, Harrison will be awarded an ash-tray topped by the symbol of a bowler.

BETAS CONTINUE WINNING STREAK BY BEATING K. A.

Zeta Psi Downs T. E. P.; Lewis Dorm Takes Games;
Aycock Wins.

Beta Theta Pi advanced one game closer to finishing its season undefeated yesterday as it handed Kappa Alpha, conqueror of Sigma Chi, a 9-2 defeat. The game was the feature of the next to last day of the intramural baseball season.

The Betas gained a 2-1 lead in the first inning, but K. A. tied things up at 2-2 in the second. The Beta nine got another tally in the third when Henry Anderson, its pitcher, singled and circled the bases on a series of infield miscues.

In the last half of the fourth Beta came to bat holding a 3-2 advantage and proceeded to drive over six runs on five hits and two errors. Neither team scored during the rest of the game.

Anderson pitched great ball for the winners, setting K. A. down scoreless after the second and giving only five hits. He struck out seven and issued only one pass. Morrison, who twirled for Kappa Alpha, gave eight hits, fanned five, and gave one walk.

Zeta Psi Wins

Zeta Psi downed T. E. P., 14-5, in a free scoring contest. Barber led the winners on the attack, crossing the plate four times and making several spectacular plays.

Patterson stood out for T. E. P., which was unable to solve Bill Clark's slants with any degree of accuracy.

Lewis Wins

Lewis took a 7-3 decision from Grimes as Stoll led his team to victory both at bat and afield. Willis, Lowdermilk, and Kleit-

CAROLINA GROOMS FOR IMPORTANT TILT WITH DUKE

Varsity Baseball Squad Takes Fast Work-out Before Game
In Durham Tomorrow.

The varsity baseball squad at a meeting yesterday afternoon voted to drop Dixon from the squad for the rest of the year for infraction of training rules.

Carolina's varsity baseball team took a fast work-out yesterday afternoon on freshman field in preparation for the important tilt with Duke at Durham tomorrow.

The club took a long batting drill and then one of the fastest, snappiest infield practices it has had in a long time. Andrews was back out and in pretty fair shape. The famous no-hit hurler strained his back a little in Tuesday's great exhibition.

In tomorrow's battle with the Blue Devils the Tar Heels will be out to break a long advantage that Duke has held. Carolina lost both games with Duke last year and has taken only one since 1927.

Last Win in 1931

With Westmoreland doing some beautiful pitching, the Tar Heels took their last Duke series in 1927. Longest has gotten the only Tar Heel victory since then, which was in 1931. At that time last year's captain pitched a beautiful 6 to 2 win over the Blue Devils.

At present Coach Hearn is grooming Joe Griffith, big right-hander, to hurl against Duke tomorrow. The rest of the Tar Heel moundsmen, including Andrews, will be ready if needed, however. Duke will likely start Flohr in the box as Coombs is scheduled to work in the Duke-Davidson contest this afternoon.

Galaxy Of College Stars Enter State Meet At Duke Tomorrow

Many Records Doped to Fall at Annual Track and Field Carnival;
More Than Half of Old Records Have Already Been Equalled in Previous Meets.

History should be made by the fine galaxy of collegiate track and field talent representing Tar Heel colleges in the North Carolina collegiate track and field carnival which will be run off in the Duke stadium tomorrow morning and afternoon.

Although five varsity and six freshman marks were bested and one first year mark tied in the record-smashing meet last year, the 1933 state track meet should provide even more housecleaning of the records hung as invincible.

Times and distances in the state dual meets are a clear indication of what may be expected in the field games Saturday. Already more than half of the old records have been equalled in the state meets and with the added color of the surrounding environment of the track meet, extraordinary efforts should be put forth by the performers.

Duke vs. Carolina

More than casual interest has already been manifested by sports fans, and the hope bucket has been replenished. The majority of track enthusiasts concede the meet to be fought between Duke and Carolina with Davidson providing just enough interest which may spoil the hopes of either club for the state track crown. Duke, which has always proven itself to be a strong conference meet club, may bank on its handful of stars to win the meet while Carolina with its versatile and better balanced team may find trouble because of a general

GOLF TEAM WILL DEFEND TITLE IN SOUTHERN MEET

Link Men Will Enter Conference Tournament at Sedgfield Club This Week-end.

Coach John Kenfield's Tar Heel linkmen will be entered in the Southern conference golf tournament which will be staged at Sedgfield country club in Greensboro this week-end.

The defending Dixie team champions will be minus the services of last year's best individual golfer, Joe Adams, but the quartet of Alan Smith, Erwin Laxton, Captain Billy O'Brien, and Carl Cramer will endeavor to retain the club title for Carolina. In order to win the team crown, the victor must have the lowest aggregate score for 36 holes.

Coach Kenfield also named his entrants in the individual tournament which is scheduled for Monday and Tuesday. They are Wilson Coffin, Ed Michaels, Jim Hudson, and Henry Bridgers. The individual winner must have the best score for 18 holes.

Duke Will Be Strong

The strongest contender for Dixie golf laurels will again be Duke, and in order to win the crown, Carolina will have to beat the Devils.

Alan Smith, Carolina No. 1 man and last year's state collegiate individual medalist, will lead the field of seeded entrants in the individual tournament. Smith will find keen competition from Roger Peacock, Duke golfer.

"Y" Officers to Meet

There will be a meeting of all the old and new officers of the "Y" cabinets Monday night. Plans for next year will be made at the time.

Errors and Poor Base Running
Cause Loss of Conference Game.

SPIERS PITCHES NICELY

Irwin, Shapiro and Yeager Star
For Carolina Frosh
Team at Bat

As a result of several bad errors in the field and some poor base running, Carolina's freshman ball team lost to Duke 5 to 4 in a ten inning battle yesterday.

Duke's winning run which was the only earned one for them during the contest came in the tenth frame as a result of Corbitt's triple and Moore's infield out. The Tar Babies threatened to even things up in the same inning, but with one out and a man on first and second, Bullock hit a hot grounder to Alexander at third who turned it into a neat double play.

Spiers Scatters Hits

Spiers pitched nice ball for Carolina and had the Duke hits well scattered but his mates in the field let him down in one big inning. Spiers fanned six of the Blue Imp batters. Naktanis, a lefthander, worked the whole game for Duke and struck out ten Tar Babies. The Duke team played errorless ball.

The Blue Imps jumped into a big lead in the third frame when they scored four unearned runs. The Carolina team committed three errors in this frame which was climaxed by Konopka's long triple.

Tied in Fifth

Carolina tied things up with four more runs in the fifth frame. Shapiro led off with a triple and Montgomery, Yeager, Irwin and Glasgow followed him with singles to bring in a count. The Tar Babies had a good chance to put the game on ice in the seventh inning as a result of a double and a triple by Yeager and Irwin in a row, but both boys were put out on attempts to stretch the long blows.

Irwin snapped out of his batting slump in beautiful style, leading both teams at bat with two singles, a double and a triple in four trips to the plate. Shapiro, with a triple and a double, and Yeager, with a single and double, were the other Tar Baby batting stars. Konopka, catcher, was the big offensive star for Duke, with a triple, double and single in four times up.

RETURNING CLASS WILL FIND MANY CHANGES AT U.N.C.

Class of 1908 Will Meet for Twenty-Fifth Year Reunion
Here on June 5.

Members of the class of 1908, returning to the University June 5 to celebrate the 25th anniversary of their graduation, will find an institution that has undergone many changes since their day.

A hasty perusal of the University catalog for 1908 recalls that the student body of that year numbered 771, as compared with the 2,500 of today. The same catalog boasted of the University's new library, erected by Carnegie funds, which housed 47,000 volumes. The 250,000 volumes of the present library are housed in the magnificent new building, finished and dedicated in 1929.

Financial Change

Board in Commons Hall, according to the 1908 catalog, was $9 per month, while rooms were advertised from 75 cents to $2.75 per student per month. Heating and lighting were extras, costing $2 per month.

The class of 1908, which graduated a total of 72, has 58 surviving members. Their president is William C. Woodard of Rocky Mount, who has been named chief alumni marshal for commencement. Other members of the class include: T. Wingate Andrews of High Point, Frank L. Dunlap of Raleigh, George M. Fountain of Tarboro, James A. Gray of Winston, Judge Walter P. Stacy of Raleigh, and Fred I. Sutton of Kinston.

CAMPAIGN DRIVE FOR LAWN FUND CONTINUES TODAY

The meeting will take place in 215 Graham Memorial this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. Those who are able are asked to bring ready checks.

The following six organizations definitely pledged $5.00 apiece yesterday to be paid today or tomorrow: The Order of Golden Fleece, the Order of the Grail, the Graduate Club, Phi Gamma Delta, Delta Kappa Epsilon, and Phi Alpha.

Mr. Burch has been stipulated trustee of the fund which will be used by him in the repair work. The present condition of the campus has been due to lack of funds in the buildings department to repair the cutters in order to keep the grass cut.

man were other outstanding members of the winning nine, while Onasch and Brown led the losers.

Aycock got ten runs in the fourth inning to overcome a big Swain Hall lead and take a 15-11 decision. Smith, Freeman, Efland, and Cox were outstanding in the winning team's big inning, while Kennerly and Watts played best for the losers.

Theta Chi gained a 7-3 win over Phi Delta Theta. Both teams played carefully, but Theta Chi gained an early lead and was never headed. Napier, Weeks, and Temple excelled for Theta Chi, while Mosier and Watson played best for the losers.

Phi Alpha gained a forfeit victory over Theta Kappa Nu.

Chevalier Appears In New Film Here Today

A new Maurice Chevalier will appear at the Carolina theatre today as the French star dons bedroom slippers and begins fire-side romancing in "A Bedtime Story," his latest release. He is still gay and debonair, but his activities are confined to the hearth by a year-old founding abandoned in his automobile. He and his valet try to care for the baby, leading to confusion, but the situation is saved when a nurse is found, all of which leads to a happy romance.

Helen Twelvetees plays the nurse; Edward Everett Horton the valet and Adrienne Ames one of Maurice's former flames. Baby Leroy, selected for the role from among thousands of West Coast babies, is the youngster.

COASTAL SURVEY MADE IN GEOLOGY

Magnetometer Used in Study of Strata Spheres in South Carolina.

The geological party consisting of Dr. W. F. Prouty, Dr. G. R. MacCarthy and J. A. Alexander, which made a reconnaissance magnetometer survey of the northeastern portion of the coastal plain of South Carolina during the recent Easter recess, has demonstrated the usefulness of the magnetometer in working out unknown facts concerning the older rocks buried beneath the coastal plain sediment.

A cross-section of the coastal plain extending from Myrtle Beach to Darlington, S. C., shows that the crystalline rocks which underlie the coastal plain rise with a rather steep but uniform gradient inland to about Cool Springs, where the gradient becomes much less steep. These facts seem to bear out the hypothesis of a steeper "fall-line peneplain" near the coast, cut by a less steep, younger peneplain farther inland. The cross-section also shows the extent of the buried triassic basin near Florence, S. C.

Another trip is planned for the near future to gather more data concerning the profile of the buried crystallines, and more evidence concerning the origin of the so-called "meteor scars" (bays). These trips are being financed by a small grant from the research fund of the Rockefeller foundation.

of Duke's truck horses, "Red" Lewis, Bird and Bray. Already Carolina stock has jumped several points with the report that Bob Bird is lost to the Blue Devils because of an ailing leg. This injury may be well in time for the meet just like the proverbial Notre Dame halfback's injuries. But we pick Lewis in the mile with McRae, Carolina, second, and Waldrop and Cordle, Tar Heels, along with Wake Forest's entry fighting for third. The two-mile will be decided on the extent of Bird's ailing leg.

High and Low Hurdles

The hurdles will find Abernethy, Hawthorne, Gleen, Carolina; Brownlee, Duke; Pratt and McPhail, Davidson, all fighting for honors clearing the timbers. In the highs, we choose McCallie or Abernethy, the lows, Abernethy or Brownlee.

Duke's defending mile relay team may prove the winning factor in victory, but Coach Bob Fetzer has already promised to put a strong aggregation in the field. The Carolina team will be chosen from Pruden, Marsden, Bost, Williamson, Turpee, and Trubnick. The highly publicized Duke "Four Horsemen" will come from Brownlee, Bradsher, Fulmer, Reichman and Crist. We string along with the Tar Heels.

The track meet will be a part of the Duke athletic association's double bill of fare. Following the state collegiate track and field games, Carolina will meet Duke in a baseball headliner, slated to start at 4:00 o'clock.

Time of Events

Here is the time of the events: the varsity discus throw, shot, and javelin preliminaries along with the six freshman field events will start at 10:00 o'clock in the morning. The first of the running events will begin with the high hurdles at 10:30 o'clock. The sprints and low hurdles will follow immediately. Both varsity and freshman running events will start at the same time.

The finals will start at 1:45 o'clock and the grand finale of

SOCIALISTS WILL CONVENE TONIGHT

Local Group Will Discuss National Economics Congress.

Reports of delegates who attended the Continental Congress for Economic Reconstruction, which gathered at Washington last week-end, will form the principal part of the program of the meeting of the Socialists club tonight at 8:00 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

Several delegates and visitors from Chapel Hill were present at the session of the congress Saturday and Sunday. The local group, led by Alton Lawrence, state secretary of the Socialist party, included Ben Proctor, Dr. E. E. Ericson, R. L. Hodges, Arnold Williams and Vernon Ward.

Tonight's meeting will be given over to a discussion of the results achieved at the congress, including the appointment of a committee of correspondence and action to effect a mobilization of labor, farm and unemployed groups. Interested students are invited to attend.

finals. Stokes and Harrison won the first set 14-12 while their opponents won the next 6-0. The third set will be played this morning.

Bowen and Hedges scored over Morgan and Shuford, 5-7, 6-2, 6-1. The winner of the Fletcher and Taylor (Virginia), Carson and Odum, Carolina scrub players, match will meet Bowen and Hedges this afternoon. Higgins and Welsh downed Minor and Levitan, 6-3, 6-4.

Morrison and Rohman of Virginia won from Nixon and Morefield of Duke, 6-0, 6-1. Carr and Morgan of V. M. I. lost to Dillard and McGinn, 6-4, 4-6, 6-1. Peake and Butler trounced Willis and Harris, 8-6, 7-5.

Twenty-Five Cent Charge

Twenty-five cents will be charged for the matches this afternoon. One ticket will be good all morning and afternoon. They can be purchased at the tennis courts. Play will be carried on all day.

In the remaining team matches, Shuford defeated Hedges of Virginia, 6-4, 6-2. This win ran the Carolina score up to six points. Duke won one doubles match when Peake and Butler defeated Taylor and Fletcher of Virginia, 6-1, 6-3.

The score now stands Carolina, 6; Virginia, 1; and Duke, 1, with one more doubles match to be played. This match will feature Hines and Wright of Carolina versus Higgins and Welsh of Duke. It is expected that these two doubles team will go to the finals where the match will be played off as two. Otherwise this match will require a play-off sometime next week.

Eighteen in Infirmary

The following were confined in the infirmary yesterday: W. J. Jervey, William Batt, Kenneth Byerly, L. B. French, George Stronock, F. D. Higby, L. T. Hammond, W. J. Garis, Don Shoemaker, F. R. LeGore, H. D. Hatch, T. L. Cordle, M. J. McGill, G. F. Shepherd, H. Winberly, P. A. Burchett, H. M. Walton, and L. M. Rouse.

the meet, the mile relay, at 3:45 o'clock will conclude the track and field games. The distances, the mile and 2 mile, will start off the afternoon's card of finals.

Through the courtesy of the Duke athletic office, Carolina students will be admitted to the meet on presentation of their student pass books and 25 cents.

Library Group Meets At Woman's College

The biennial meeting of the North Carolina Library association which met at the Woman's College yesterday and Wednesday came to a close yesterday afternoon with the election of Charles H. Stone, of the Woman's College, president for the coming year.

R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, in his talk Wednesday on the citizens library movement in North Carolina, observed that the love of reading is the beginning of libraries. He further stated that two principles are necessary in the success of the citizens library movement: one, the principle of growth, depended on the willingness to start little and grow big; and the other, a common sense principle which calls for the putting of first things first.

War Play Hero To Attack Hill From Air Today

Spann Will Bombard Town With Circulars and Free Passes
From Speeding Plane.

The hero of the German war play, Flieger, will fly today over Chapel Hill between the hours of 1:00 and 2:00 o'clock. Dr. Meno Spann, who is directing the play and also taking the lead role, will be in the plane accompanied by a pilot.

The attack on Chapel Hill will be preceded by maneuvers and the bombardment will begin sometime within the hour. From five different angles the plane will swoop down on this peaceful village and Frank (Dr. Spann) will hurl his bombardment of advertising circulars on the students and townsfolk.

Amidst the roaring of the ammunition the students and townsfolk are expected to run hither and thither in search for the circulars, for they will be of some value. Of the 1000 circulars to be distributed, 20 will bear the signature "Dr. Spann," and the 20 lucky people who fetch the signed circulars will receive free passes to the show on presentation of the circular to Spann.

The show, which is a representation of the war and love life of a German war ace, will be presented at the Playmakers theatre Monday night at 8:30 o'clock. Spann will be assisted in the performance by several members of the faculty and by Playmakers.

Of especial interest since the advent of beer will be the singing of several beer drinking songs by the cast.

Louis Shanks of the Ethyl gasoline corporation was the featured speaker at the meeting of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers last night. Shanks presented a demonstrative lecture on "Anti-Knock Fuel."

SENIOR BALL TO CONTINUE DANCE SET IN TIN CAN

Lindy Cate Will Lead Figure Of Last Dance of Series.

Continuing the series of dances in the third annual Junior-Senior dance set, a tea dance will take place this afternoon in the Tin Can. The week-end activities will close with the Senior Ball tonight from 9:00 to 12:00 o'clock.

The set opened last night with the Junior Prom. Bert Lown and his orchestra, featuring the present style of soft music, are playing for the entire series.

Lown and his orchestra have been appearing at the Coconut Grove restaurant of the Park Central hotel in New York, and one of his most important engagements was at the Biltmore hotel, where he first gained national prominence. The band played for a series of dances at Sweetbriar College last week-end.

A feature of last night's dance was the junior figure, led by President C. E. Boyles. Assistant leaders were: John Barrow, Stan Heist, Alex Andrews, Cliff Glover, Alan Smith, Red Rankin, John Womble, and Jimmie Nowell.

The senior figure, which will take place at the ball tonight, will be led by Lindy Cate, president of the senior class, assisted by the following: B. Cabell, Philpott, John S. Gorrell, Charles G. Rose, Harry M. Hodges, E. C. Daniel, George Phillips, and B. Perry Collins.

In connection with the dances, several fraternities are conducting house parties. They are: Phi Delta Theta, Alpha Tau Omega, Phi Sigma Kappa, Delta Sigma Pi, Sigma Phi Epsilon, and Lambda Chi Alpha.

SALON ENSEMBLE PLAYS TOMORROW

Thor Johnson Will Lead Group
In Final Recital of Year in Graham Memorial.

The Carolina Salon ensemble, directed by Thor Johnson, will present the last in its series of concerts in the lounge of Graham Memorial tomorrow afternoon at 4:00 o'clock.

The group inaugurated this series of Sunday afternoon presentations in January. They have been well attended both by students and visitors. This Sunday's recital will feature three students as soloists in addition to its ensemble program.

Dan Field, violin-cellist, Harry Lee Knox, pianist, and Thor Johnson, violinist, will play Mendelssohn's Trio in D minor. These three have appeared several times on the campus and in connection with "Y" programs in other towns.

Student composition will be represented by several recent works of Herbert R. Hazelman, student in the school of music. His Grainger in the Mountains, written for piano and small orchestra, will be played by Knox and the ensemble. This work

DOCTORS TO CONDUCT SCHOOL CLINIC HERE

A clinic to provide an examination of all children who will enter the local graded school in the fall has been arranged by the Parent-Teacher association, and will be conducted from 9:00 to 12:00 o'clock in the school building Tuesday morning.

Dr. A. M. McBride, Dr. Jean Craven, and other physicians from the Duke hospital, will conduct the clinic, for which there will be no charge. Dr. R. R. Clark and Dr. J. P. Jones of Chapel Hill will make dental examinations.

LIBRARY EXHIBITS JACKSON PAPERS

Mrs. Randolph Preston, Granddaughter of Jackson, Makes Indefinite Loan.

A valuable collection of General Thomas J. (Stonewall) Jackson material, including important letters, photostatic copies of military papers, an autograph album, and other mementoes of the famous Confederate leader, have just been placed on exhibit in the library of the University and will remain on view until June 10.

This is one of the most important historical acquisitions the University library has ever received.

An Indefinite Loan

It is an indefinite loan from Mrs. Randolph Preston (Julia Jackson Christian) of Charlotte, the granddaughter of General Stonewall Jackson and his wife, Anna Morrison, of a distinguished North Carolina family. In making the loan Mrs. Preston writes that she is particularly interested in placing this collection at the State University, for she feels that "it is well for the younger generation to have their interest stimulated by the past."

Special attention is called to certain items of the collection. There are, for instance, eighty-eight sheets of photostatic papers, copies of military papers, of inestimable value to the historian, and military critic, which will bring scholars not only from America but from many parts of the world to this University.

An autograph album contains the names of those dear to the Southern heart. The first page

TOWN NUMBER OF TAR HEEL TOPICS SENT TO PARENTS

Chapel Hill Issue of University Paper
Edited by Dean Francis F.
Bradshaw.

The Chapel Hill number of the Tar Heel Topics, edited bi-monthly by Dean F. F. Bradshaw, has been released to be sent to parents of University students.

The Tar Heel Topics is published in eight issues a year by the University, to convey information about the University to parents of students and prospective students.

Four bi-monthly issues are edited by Dean Bradshaw for parents of students attending the University. These issues contain news from Chapel Hill and information concerning student welfare. Four other issues during the year are edited by J. Maryon Saunders, of the alumni department, for parents of prospective students.

Ruffin Occupants Enter Barber Business And Give Grass Haircut

Half-score Students Borrow Lawn-cutting Implements from Buildings Department and Mow Down Tall Herbage Between Dormitory and Stadium at Emerson Field.

It remained for a half-score of the occupants of Ruffin actually to do something about the unshaven appearance of the University's neglected lawn. Many students have bewailed the lengthening of the grass, several have written editorials and open forum letters to the Tar Heel on the subject; but a group of Ruffin men, tired of hearing much talk and little action, decided to do something to remedy the situation.

There is a stretch of lawn between Ruffin and the road leading to Emerson stadium. Passers-by along this road were recently startled to see about ten boys, dressed in shorts and other informal attire, attacking the grass with scythes—others with rakes gathering the clippings into neat piles.

"Shorty" Williams of the buildings department was one of the passers-by. He stood watching for a moment, his hands on his hips, a troubled frown on his brow; for if students of other dormitories follow the lead set by Ruffin there may soon be no need of a buildings department.

Group Starts Work

The way it all happened is that after dinner, a group of students were loafing about the front door of Ruffin. Someone remarked that the grass certainly needed a haircut. Someone else suggested that the bunch borrow some tools from the buildings department and clip all the grass around their dormitory. The others agreeing, the work was started. As easy as that!

Hope has been expressed that the example set by Ruffin will result in other dormitories helping in the work of beautification. Already, since this concrete demonstration of University spirit, several organizations have banded together to raise enough money to give the entire campus a haircut.

Newcomer Among Beverages Pushes Others Out Of Sight

Vendors Differ in Opinion as to Whether Sale of Beer has Harmed
Other Liquid Refreshment; Sales of Legal Wine Slowed Up, Due to High Price.

If the storekeeper is out when you enter, your first guess may be right. No, he is not cooling off with a "coke"—it's a beer now.

But how have the other beverages withstood the entry of this new claimant for popularity as a summer beverage? The consensus of opinion among buyers and sellers seems to indicate that despite a falling off in their sale, the other drinks must now move over in order to welcome this new-comer, which has carved out a new clientele for itself without infringing very far into the territories of the others.

Some Do and Some Don't

The places selling beer report a consequent falling off in demands for the other beverages. But those not dealing in the amber liquid report that their sales of dopes and grapes have remained unmarred.

It appears that since the novelty of sipping the once-forbidden "suds" has worn off, the sensation seekers have dropped back to their former level—cokes and iced-tea. While those who felt that the more prosaic "dope" would no longer be their speed have continued to imbibe.

Coffee Not Selling

Since the Smoke Shop has taken out its fountain and installed its polished bar, accurate check-up on comparative sales have not been kept, but the feeling is that the once much-demanded soft-drinks have started on a decline there. Gooch's cursory check-up reveals that the sale of coffee has fallen off more than 20 per cent in favor of the demon-beer. But since the state of the weather accounts for some of this decline, this figure cannot be taken as a criterion. Right now Charley Gooch is debating whether to run his percolator at all after the usual supper hour because for the last three days he has sold only two

Last Hold-Out

George Chiopelas of the Tar Heel Cafe, who does not sell the far-heralded "suds," takes the stand to assert that his business has not been harmed in the least by his refusal to handle the "stuff." For ample testimony he pointed to the large crowds he says he accommodates.

Harry's Grill reports that orders of milk at meals have suffered a 50 per cent loss. Coffee and iced-tea have been backed off the picture, not to such a large extent, but to the point where the waiter has to ask twice to know if he has heard correctly. The Coffee Shop reports no change at all in the percentage of its beverage orders with meals since it adopted the new liquid.

—and Wine!

With the coming of beer there also arrived another once esoteric drink—3.2 per cent wine. Gooch's has been selling this product in tall, green bottles, under a quart in capacity, for $1.50 a throw—a tariff that has held the pleasures in the sparkling liquid from reaching the general public. There is an apologetic note on the back of each bottle, the message in which has elected much comment.

The message comes supposedly from Louis Mouquin, owner of the famous concern, and reads: "My attitude on the present 3.2 per cent wines is that though being far from perfect, they are better than nothing at all and I warn you not to expect too much of them. Perhaps, however, they may help to bring a renaissance of taste which may later be fully satisfied by wines of man's manipulation, can alone perfect." This is propaganda to be sure, but signs can be heard from every table where the regal-looking bottle stands erect.

PROFESSOR TOY WILL MAKE COLLEGE STUDY

Professor Walter D. Toy of the University German department has accepted an appointment to conduct an investigation into the facilities offered by American universities giving work leading to doctor's degrees and has begun the work.

The appointment was made by the American council on education through its committee on graduate instruction, of which Dean W. W. Pierson of the University graduate school is a member.

PLAYMAKERS TO PRESENT DRAMAS

Patrons Will Be Admitted to Bill
Of Three Plays on Season
Tickets.

Three plays presented tonight at 8:30 o'clock in the Playmakers theatre conclude a program of eight studio productions, produced in three bills by students in play-directing. The plays tonight are among those which were written by Playmakers.

James Thompson directs the opening production, The Queen Was In The Kitchen, a modern comedy by Ellen Stewart. The cast is Foster Fitz-Simons, Ellen Stewart, Marion Tatum.

Etowah Plantation, based on a legend of the old south, adds a touch of romance to the bill. The two-act drama is written, directed by Eugenia Rawls. According to the legend, while General Sherman was devastating Georgia he spared only one plantation—Etowah Hall—and that because of an 18-year-old vow to a celebrated Southern beauty. The play will be accompanied by the Carolina Salon ensemble.

Martha Hatton

Martha Hatton's Comedy At Five, in a second performance is the final production. In the cast of four are Eugenia Rawls, Margaret Hervey, Forney Rankin, and Foster Fitz-Simons.

The program is a season-ticket feature, with other tickets at 25 cents.

GEOLOGY SECTION PLANS TO STUDY CAROLINA HILLS

Summer Field Party to Visit Hills
Of North Carolina and West Virginia in Survey.

Some scenes very favorable for the study of geology are to be visited this summer by the geological field party headed by Dr. W. F. Prouty.

This trip, which covers the first session of summer school, will be taken into the hills of North Carolina and West Virginia. The first three weeks will be spent in camps of Bluefield and the Narrows of West Virginia. The Narrows is cut through by two railroads and a highway, leaving exposed the upheaved strata and offering a splendid opportunity for the study of its rock formation.

At the invitation of S. T. Henry, an alumnus of the University, members of the party will spend the remaining three weeks in his private camps at Spruce Pines in this state. Spruce Pines is the center of the state's mineral industry.

Applications from the states of Tennessee and West Virginia have been received.

CAMPAIGN TOTAL SWELLS AS DRIVE CONTINUES TODAY

Additional Donations Advanced As Lawn Improvement Campaign Gains Momentum.

Developments in the lawn improvement campaign yesterday resulted in the donation of additional sums to the swelling total to be used in the repair of the University mowing equipment.

Although figures were not available last night, it is estimated that approximately $140 has been collected by the students in charge of the drive. The campaign will continue through Monday night.

Work Starts Today

Official statements from P. L. Burch of the buildings department were issued to the effect that work would be begun by one of the power cutters this morning along with that belonging to the town of Chapel Hill. An extended effort with a dozen or more workers and several machines will be made Monday.

Plans were made yesterday by campaign leaders to establish a permanent grounds fund to be available in the future on the strength of the present activity. Although no surplus is expected from the drive, as $200 is needed for the repair work, a definite fund is in order that can be used with contributions for any such purpose next year.

Campaign Progressing

Leaders also felt that fraternities and other organizations have been responding well. All donations or pledgings should be made through St. Anthony Hall.

Considerably favorable comment has circulated throughout the state regarding the students' action.

A complete list of all contributing organizations and a detailed report of the campaign will be announced in tomorrow's paper.

RIGHTS SELECTED TO HEAD SOCIETY

Group Organizes Here to Conduct Study of Indian Lore
Of North Carolina.

The Reverend Douglas Rights, curator of the Wachovia museum at Winston-Salem, was elected yesterday as president of a group formed at the University for a study of Indian lore of North Carolina.

Several members of the University faculty and other persons interested in making such a study gathered in Graham Memorial yesterday afternoon to form a society whose purpose will be "The Study of the Culture of the Indian in North Carolina."

The gathering yesterday was the result of letters written by Guy B. Johnson of the University social science department to about 50 persons who were thought to be interested in the proposed study.

Others who assisted in bringing about the meeting were: Burnham S. Colburn of Biltmore, who has in a private museum the best collection of Indian relics in existence; A. R. Newsome, secretary of the North Carolina historical com-

A Summer Job—

With only three more weeks of school left most of us are beginning to make plans for vacation. There will be holidays at the beach, in the mountains, and at home, but all during the cessation from studies we will all carry thoughts of the University with us.

It is up to those of the students who will come into contact with men, possibly women, who will be eligible for admission to the University to attempt to influence these people to attend this educational institution, and to show them the need for the studies which can be pursued here better than anywhere else.

The University may send out men to talk to the high school students graduating this year and to tell them of the advantages of an education secured from an institution which is ranked one of the ten best in the United States by Oxford University, but these delegates cannot possibly have the influence on them that a personal friend can in pointing out the real utilitarianism of coming to the University of North Carolina.

The students here should be able to describe our superiority in the field of engineering, library science, commerce, mathematics, chemistry, and other forms of learning which they, as students here, recognize as above any other school in the South, much better than a representative of the alumni association whom the high school pupils would naturally assume to be prejudiced in favor of the University.

The wealth of tradition prevalent on the campus of the country's oldest university should provide a background of culture to give the prospective student a basis for an approach to the world of business and society which he necessarily has to enter later on in life, and which would probably mean more to him than the education secured, although the latter is an absolute necessity in this time of economic distress and change.

It is through the students who now know the real meaning of an education at the University of North Carolina that the University can make more progress toward increasing the enrollment than through any amount of paid representatives. A few minutes casual talk with a prospective student by a friend who has known him all his life would serve to build up the number of the student body and would require no extra effort upon the part of the student doing the talking.—F.P.G.

An Insurance Policy

An editorial appearing in these columns last Wednesday advocating a University drivers license for students has caused considerable comment, and the general consensus of opinion seems to have been that the plan might be applied to an even larger field here as in other states. The plan was for the University to require the registration of automobiles kept in Chapel Hill for any length of time, a form of student driver's license. Under this plan the University would continue the policy of allowing operation of cars by students, but would at the same time reserve the right to revoke the licenses of those students who became known as reckless drivers.

Such a system might well be used by the student council or other penal board against those students who are continually violating traffic regulations, who drive while under the influence of intoxicants or in any way endanger the lives of their fellow students.

A movement is already under way throughout the state for the creation of a state-wide driver's license, and it has been pointed out to the board that this would take care of the situation, making such a system at Carolina superfluous. However, to those who are familiar with the gap which exists between the movement for a bill and its passage there seems to be little hope for such a law in the near future. But assuming for a moment the existence of such a law, the advisability of such a plan here is not altered. Authorities here have long been desirous of handling our own disciplinary cases, and oftentimes where punishment from the state would be unwarranted the University should take some action.

The University has been peculiarly fortunate in its scarcity of deaths from motor accidents, yet the adoption of some such regulatory plan would be additional insurance for the future.—V.C.B.

The Old Guard Dies of Old Age

The Republican Old Guard, points out an article in this month's American Mercury, has given its last dying gasp. With Hoover's defeat that once powerful inner circle of the Republican party suffered the shock that caused its long-awaited demise.

Headed by such paragons of conservatism as Senators Aldrich and Penrose, the Old Guard stood for many years as the legislative watchdog of American moneyed interests. But even after its power had dwindled, the principles of the Old Guard lingered on in the Republican scheme of government. And the past campaign saw the revival of an old phrase when the progressive G. O. P.'s forgot their party loyalty and dubbed Hoover a "standpatter."

Faced with a national crisis, a depression of such scope that ordinary legislative means could not combat it, the Roosevelt administration came into office and undertook methods unheard of in American government. In startling and swift succession, in the short time of two months, ideas have been put into practice that have been little short of revolutionary in comparison with former policy. Government partnership with industry in fighting depression, the President's emergency power over currency, banking reform—any one of these would make the Old Guard turn over in its well-deserved grave.

For the "New Deal" is no misnomer. It represents a reversal of ideas which our economic philosophy long cherished as sacred, but which have since been deemed inapplicable to these times. "The great natural laws of supply and demand" used to be the moth-eaten phrase that was dragged out in connection with every economic issue while legislators sat back and did nothing in the simple expectancy of seeing price levels restore themselves and industry revive—all through the magic working of "the great natural laws of supply and demand." For the sake of our economic welfare we can be thankful that such an apathetic attitude no longer exists, that instead of crying, "Hands off," government puts its shoulder to the wheel.—A.T.D.

Beer—

The Devils Bait?

Many earnest prophets and prophetesses predicted—perhaps hoped—that when beer came to Chapel Hill it would bring with it such a spirit of hilarity and revelous debauchery as would jolt the state back into its proper sense and thereby end the reign of the beverage in this serene community.

Those who made such far fetched prophecies or had such hopes have been disappointed. An interim of thirteen days has brought no radical change in Chapel Hill. It is true that those who prepared for a thriving new business to begin on May 1 have not gone unrequited, for long lines of Carolina men have filed by the counters over which the new drink was being dispensed and have come away with their thirsts quenched. But what has been the result of these indulgences? The casual observer can discern no great difference in the demeanor of the student today and that of a month ago; there has not been an unusual amount of "hell raising" going on for the past fortnight to mark the new freedom; there is no less studying among students today than was the case in April; ladies still walk the streets and stroll over the campus unmolested and apparently unconcerned for their safety.

On the whole, beer has not had the inebriating effect on Carolina students that was feared and advertised by the many who were so vitally, and doubtless seriously, concerned about the welfare of our youth here at the University. The men and women who compose this student body have proved that they are able to take care of themselves, even in the face of beer, and while appreciating their concern for our welfare, we believe there are more profitable and more urgent fields in which the energy of these good people—so anxious to play the wet nurse—could be expended.—W.A.S.

Hitler Again Runs Amuck

"As good almost kill a man as kill a good book: who kills a man kills a reasonable creature, God's image; but he who destroys a good book, kills reason itself, kills the image of God, as it were in the eye. Many a man lives a burden to the earth; but a good book is the precious life-blood of a master-spirit, embalmed and treasured up on purpose to a life beyond life."

Hitler's latest brilliant idea seems to be an intense effort to boil off or evaporate any and all such life-blood which may be attempting to circulate through the intellectual veins of Germany. Berlin today may be a far cry from the miserable little fisherman's village on an island on the Spree, but the spectacle of a mob of students, fantastically garbed, howling derisively as truck-loads of books are consigned to bonfires, is certainly not greatly removed from our modern conception of barbarism.

We are struck by the utter futility of the gesture, as if one sect or nation or even one people as great and powerful in their own eyes as are the Germans could possibly hope to exterminate from the face of the earth the printed thoughts of super minds. If it is merely a demonstration of the German attitude toward anything anti-German as the nation under Hitler stands today, then the demonstration will only serve to aggravate any anti-German feeling which may today be felt by the people of the world.

The German has come a long way and has lived to take his place among the first minds of the world, but he has not yet weeded from his being the tendency to throw off the restraint of civilized culture and run amuck. This time it happens to be in the realm of human thought rather than human life.—R.L.B.

Phi Beta Grade Grabbers Get Another Slap—

From Kansas, Now

"I know Phi Beta Kappa upon whom I would place no dependence, and then there are others with average intelligence upon whom I would place all confidence. Some of those in Phi Beta Kappa have good grades and write Spanish and French vocabularies because they memorized them, but they're still dumb."

Thus does R. H. Wheeler, professor of psychology at the University of Kansas, pay his respects to honor students. The professor compares such students to circus animals learning tricks. Giving good grades "is like dangling a piece of meat before a lion to get him to climb upon a pedestal; a student sees those grades always before him and works to get good grades. The best grade-getters are those who know the professors' pet hobbies and throw them back at them. They all get excellent grades—but they're dumb."

The statements made by the Kansas professor are in line with the argument against grades as set forth in a letter to the Creightonian (Kansas student publication) this week. A trifle more forceful perhaps and given to the use of the vernacular, but the Kansas professor has much the same idea as the head of the local Progressive Educational Association: "Grade-getters are apt to be dumb."—U. S. C. Daily Trojan.

bears the signatures of T. J. Jackson, Mary Anna Jackson, R. E. Lee, and Mary Curtis Lee. There is also the signature of U. S. Grant—"not so dear at that time," as Mrs. Preston points out.

Perhaps the articles of most sentimental value is the iron stirrup in which the great General's foot rested when he rode Old Sorrel over many a famous battlefield.

And there is also his pair of field glasses, through which he viewed the field, made his rapid but careful decisions, struck the enemy at the weakest point, and accomplished the great and almost miraculous victories that have made his name a synonym for military brilliance wherever the art of warfare is studied.

The collection of letters is unique and of rare interest, containing letters from Generals Lee, A. P. Hill, Ewell, Pendleton, etc. There is also a letter from Jefferson Davis and one from Judah P. Benjamin, Secretary of War in President Davis' cabinet.

A letter from Colonel G. F. R. Henderson of the British Army is interesting, as he was the author of the famous life of Stonewall Jackson, and one of the great military critics of the world.

There are letters and a number of papers in Jackson's handwriting, a military map drawn by him, and many other things of historical interest.

was given its premier performance by the ensemble in Winston-Salem last month. It is a humorous sketch mimicking the style of composition of Percy Grainger.

Hazelman's latest composition, Suite pour Contrebasse et piano, will be played by John Murphy with the composer at the piano. This suite consists of three pieces, Prelude, Chanson, and Danse. It was originally written merely to display the solo qualities of the bass viol but has been expanded into a concert selection. Hazelman's other contribution to the program will be an arrangement for orchestra of a short descriptive sketch by Joseph Clokey, contemporary American composer, entitled Grandfather's Wooden Leg. This piece was originally written for organ.

CAROLINA PRESENTS AIR THRILLER TODAY

The First National picture is a romance of the skies and has two other stars supporting Barthelmess. Sally Eilers and Tom Brown appear with him in the production which is said to be as thrilling as "Dawn Patrol" and "The Last Flight."

Theft Reported

Several cases of theft in University dormitories, resulting in a total loss of about $40 and a watch, have been reported to the student council. It was announced yesterday by Harper Barnes. Students are warned to lock their rooms upon leaving the dormitory, as the identity of the thieves has not as yet been discovered.

Wilmer Hines Meets Wright In Conference Finals Today

Two Tar Heels Smash Convincing Wins in Yesterday's Semi-Finals.

Carolina sent Wilmer Hines and Lenoir Wright through yesterday's semi-finals of the Southern conference tennis tournament to earn a monopoly on this afternoon's singles honors.

Play will be resumed this morning and afternoon, with chief interest centering on the singles championship which are scheduled to start at 2:00 o'clock and the doubles matches, following immediately afterward.

Wilmer Hines eliminated two Carolina players in yesterday's play. In the quarter-final round Wilmer downed John McGlinn in straight sets, 7-5, 6-2. McGlinn made a fast start by capturing the first three games from Hines, but after Wilmer had warmed up the match was entirely one-sided.

Hines downed Harris in the semi-final round in straight sets 6-3, 6-2, 7-5. Harris played good tennis and made a number of outstanding shots. Hines had his service and forehand working with speed like the kick of an irritated mule. In the quarter-final round Harris eliminated Ricky Willis after three sets of close competitions, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3.

Lenoir Wright won a thriller from John Higgins of Duke in the semi-final round. Higgins made a fast start in the first set taking an early lead of two games. Lenoir chalked up the next two games making the score 2-all. In the next game the Blue Devil player broke Wright's service and won his in the following frame. After Wright won the next game, Higgins tallied the winning number as the set ended, 6-3.

TWO TEAMS TIED FOR INTRAMURAL LEAGUE LEADERS

Betas Tied with Chi Psi; Best House Even with Carr Dormitory.

The intramural baseball season came to a close yesterday as Beta Theta Pi advanced to a tie for the fraternity league leadership by virtue of a crushing 18-5 defeat of Delta Kappa Epsilon. Best House advanced to a tie for dormitory league supremacy by gaining a forfeit win over Everett. The Betas will meet Chi Psi and Best House will take on Carr early next week, the winners to meet for the campus championship.

Starting off on the right foot the Betas drove across three runs in the first frame and six more in the third before the Dekes could score. The latter outfit got three in the third and two in the fourth, however, and, with the score 9-5, the teams went scoreless through the fifth.

In the sixth the Betas added a run when Betts singled, stole, and scored on a clean hit by Barnett. Holding a five run advantage at the beginning of the seventh the eventual winners went out and scored eight runs to make their triumph conclusive.

Anderson Pitches for Betas

Henry Anderson and Bud Ziehn, the winning battery, led the winners, Anderson hurling superlative ball, and Ziehn playing a great game behind the bat. Anderson allowed nine hits, struck out two, and gave no walks, while Lassiter, losing hurler, was reached for fourteen hits, gave five free trips to first.

TAR BABIES PLAY OAK RIDGE TODAY

Ray Glasgow, Former Cadet Star, Will Likely Pitch for Carolina Freshmen.

With two victories and one loss already this week, Carolina's freshman baseball club journeys to Oak Ridge this afternoon to meet the strong Cadet team.

In the first contest between these two nines the Tar Babies eked out a very narrow win in an exciting and fast battle. This will be the next to last game for the Carolina team and they will be out to add to their winning column. The last Tar Baby game is scheduled with the Blue Imps next Wednesday.

Ray Glasgow, righthander, will likely work on the mound for Carolina. Glasgow played with the cadets last year and thinks he is good enough to give them a trimming. On the other hand Oak Ridge will be out to do all they can to beat their former mate.

The rest of the freshman team will probably be the same as Thursday, except for first base. Womble, regular first sacker, has a bad leg and will hardly be able to play.

TAR HEELS MEET DUKE AT DURHAM FOR GAME TODAY

Joe Griffith and Lefty Flohr to Face Each Other in Important Game.

Worried very little as a result of the loss of a player, the Tar Heel baseball team is all set to play the important contest with Duke this afternoon. The game will be called at 4:00 o'clock in the Duke park at Durham.

George Brandt will fill in at first for the suspended Dixon. Big George has been looking good around first for the last two days of practice, and if anything he will be an improvement over Narcissus. Vick, who bats left-handed, will take Brandt's place in right field.

Joe Griffith will get the call to hurl for Carolina, while Lefty Flohr is the likely Duke choice to work on the mound. Last year these same two twirlers hooked up in a pitchers' battle at Durham in the last game of the Carolina-Duke series. The Duke southpaw came out on top with a 3-2 verdict when Griffith weakened in the closing frames.

The Tar Heel team will be out to break a long jinx that the Duke team has held. Carolina hasn't won a two game series since 1927 when Westmoreland

MT. AIRY DOWNS ROANOKE RAPIDS FOR STATE TITLE

"Lefty" Dean Pitches Beautiful Ball for Winners, Also Bats in All Four Runs.

With "Lefty" Dean twirling three-hit ball and hitting hard, Mt. Airy won the state class 'B' baseball championship over Roanoke Rapids yesterday on Emerson field 4 to 2. The same two teams met last year for the title with Roanoke Rapids coming out on top.

Dean, a tall southpaw with a fast ball, pitched beautiful ball and except for the fourth and fifth frames held the losers hitless. Dean also was the big batter for Mt. Airy and drove in all four of his team's runs with two singles. Acree also pitched nicely for the losers and allowed only two earned runs.

The winners opened the scoring in the very first frame with two runs. M. and D. Fuller reached second and third as a result of Roanoke Rapids errors. With one down, Dean, hitting in clean-up position, drove a single into right field, both Fullers counting.

Roanoke Rapids tied things up in the fourth and fifth inning with a marker in each. Allbrook first up in the fourth

State Track Meet At Duke Headlines Athletic Events

AROUND the FIELD

THE BLUE DEVILS OF DUKE

are boasting what they call their "Four Horsemen of Track" which includes Brownlee, Fulmer, Lewis, Bradsher, I suppose, and they are counting on these horsemen to break Carolina's long state winning streak. Coach Bob isn't a bit worried though as he proudly boasts of his "Eight Jackasses." Like the old Notre Dame horsemen, it was the work of the seven jackasses in front that cleared the way. Carolina's jackasses may be clearing the way for the Duke horsemen this afternoon. Boy, would that jolt Duke. They'd have a stroke over there 'cause they haven't recovered

Student Passbook

Carolina students will be admitted to the Carolina-Duke baseball game in Durham today upon presentation of their athletic passbook and fifty cents. They will also be allowed to attend the track meet for twenty-five cents and their passbook.

Carolina and Duke Are Doped As Favorites for Title.

COMPETITION IS INTENSE

Schools From All Over State Enter Large Number of Athletes.

Headlining all sports events on North Carolina's athletic bill of fare will be the state collegiate track and field carnival which will be run off on the fine track in Duke's new stadium. Carolina, doped a favorite along with Duke, will be essaying its thirteenth state title while the Blue Devils, in the role of the host, will be trying to gain their first state track crown.

A large field of athletes from all over the state will make competition intense and interesting from the spectator's view point. Although many records were smashed in last year's state meet, still more records are slated to be set today, if the current season records of the teams can be counted for a comparative basis.

Aid To Observers

By a system of highly magnified rules, fans will be able to follow the distances in the field events with maximum ease. Added to this facility, Duke will

"As long as We're Settling things

SUPPOSE YOU TELL ME WHY YOU SMOKE GRANGER"

"WELL, it's like this. Back in the old days, when men wore high hats and frock coats, they had plenty of time to think things out, and they had sense, too. They used to sit down on a log and take the time to whittle their tobacco from a plug, to be sure of having a cool smoke.

"In those days, a man named Wellman, right here in Quincy, Ill., made about the best tobacco you could get. He knew how to keep the flavor fine and mellow.

"Well, sir, the people who make this Granger Rough Cut acquired Mr. Wellman's method, and they must have known how the old boys used to whittle their tobacco to make it smoke cool. Yes, sir, this Granger is the real stuff. The same mellowness and fine flavor that Wellman used to hand out to his friends. And it's whittled into big shaggy flakes all ready for the pipe. 'Rough Cut' they call it—'cut rough to smoke cool' is the best way I can describe it.

The Granger pouch keeps the tobacco fresh

"Regardless of price, Granger is about the best pipe tobacco I ever smoked. That's why I smoke it, and that's why they call it America's Pipe Tobacco, sir."

Now we wanted to sell Granger for 10¢. It was just a question of how to do it for the price. So we pack Granger in a sensible foil pouch instead of an expensive package, knowing that a man can't smoke the package. We give smokers this good GRANGER tobacco in a common-sense pouch for 10¢.

GRANGER has not been on sale very long, but it has grown to be a popular smoke. And there is this much about it—we have yet to know of a man who started to smoke it, who didn't keep on. Folks seem to like it.

Plane Spreads Advertising For New Production

Second Showing of 'Der Flieger' Receives More Advertising Than First Presentation.

The hero of many an air battle in Herman Rossman's modern war play Flieger yesterday again ascended into the clouds and swept down upon Chapel Hill releasing a fusillade of circulars into Franklin street.

The plane swooped low over the heads of the populace. Many of the visitors in town who did not know what the stunt was all about shrank back in fear that the pilot had lost control of the plane. But no, Frank was not the one to lose his head over a mere publicity stunt when he had remained cool in so many air battles.

The war hero leaned out from the cockpit and waved to the assembled populace below; then he let loose a barrage of circulars. The crowd hustled to and fro in search of the circulars and every once in a while a victorious whoop could be heard signifying the discovery of a signed circular which will serve as a free pass to the show.

Five times the plane swooped down on this peaceful village, and five times there was a downpour of circulars. Then the plane left the Chapel Hill battle scene and left for other parts. The stunt was successful in that it attracted the attention of all. It brought big city advertising to Chapel Hill. The plane swooped down closer than any other plane had swooped before.

The street cleaning department of Chapel Hill will have a bit harder job today and he will no doubt foam at the mouth if he sees another "SEE FLIEGER—GERMAN WAR PLAY—PLAYMAKER THEATRE—MONDAY NIGHT," after he gets through with his day's work.

Linker and Ziehn, with three hits and three runs to each of their credits, led the winners at bat, while Hall, Walker, and Alexander used the willow to the best advantage for the Deks.

Phi Kappa Sigma handed Kappa Alpha, one of the strongest teams in the league in spite of its four defeats, a 9-2 setback. The winners bunched their hits to get five runs in the fourth and three more in the sixth, thus assuring themselves of the victory. Morrison, regular pitcher, caught the game for K. A., and turned in a brilliant performance. For the winners Wilson, Powell, and Taylor excelled.

T. E. P. Wins

Scoring five runs in the third frame, Tau Epsilon Phi beat Kappa Sigma, 8-6, in the season's windup for each outfit. Murray Kanner pitched nice ball for the victors, allowing the opposition more than one run in only one frame, the sixth. For Kappa Sigma White and Eagles played good ball.

Zeta Psi, Lewis, and Theta Chi won forfeits from Sigma Phi Epsilon, Manly, and Chi Phi respectively.

Tennis Activities

Beta Theta Pi, already defeated in its defense of the campus championship it won last year, set back Pi Kappa Alpha, 2-1, for the latter's first defeat of the season. Old West gained its sixth win in seven starts, beating Everett, 3-0. Sigma Nu downed A.T.O., 3-0, for the snakes' seventh win in a row. Pi Kappa Phi lost to D.K.E. by forfeit.

Around The Field

completely from our dual victory. And Red Lewis, well—, FOR SOME REASON ALL THE publicity that is coming from Duke and Durham is saying that the Tar Heels were upset in the indoor meet, as though we were the favorites. Everyone here and anywhere else knew that the outcome of the indoor meet was to be between Duke and Virginia. Sounds like a little bit of hokey to me. Maybe the Duke coach doesn't want to make his men over-confident. Yeah, maybe. Jake Wade in Charlotte is figuring on Duke and Davidson in the dashes and everything else, leaving Carolina in the cold. Sounds like he hopes we get whipped. All I can say is that we will be giving them trouble all the way round, and if the track is wet today, our Childers will throw mud in both Brownlee's and Fleagle's faces.

SAT IN THE DAVIDSON DUG-out yesterday at the Duke-Davidson game in Durham. The Wildcats put it all over the Devils behind some excellent pitching of Charlie Pearce. All the Davidson team was sorry to hear that Dixon had been suspended from the Tar Heel team. Narcissus made quite a hit with the Davidson team, as he has everywhere this year, and they were sorry to hear that he had continually broken training ethics. Everyone agreed however that Coach Hearn's and the team's action was the only thing that could have been done. If a man doesn't adhere to the proper rules after repeated warnings, suspension is the only thing left. No matter how good ball players are, the best ones have to walk a straight line.

COACH COOMBS SAVED both Bobby Coombs and Flossy Flohr for us this afternoon. He sent Bobby up as a pinch hitter against Pearce and Charley struck him out. The chances are that Flossy will start the game this afternoon, despite the fact that there were rumors yesterday to the effect that Flohr had a sore arm. Coach Coombs is a crafty mentor and tries many flashy plays in a tight ball game. Yesterday he had Michael steal home on Pearce's wind-up and also sent a man on an attempted steal of third in the first inning on the throw back from the catcher to the pitcher.

MCCASKILL WILL MEET HIS hardest opposition this afternoon for the all-state catcher's berth. In Wagner, Duke has a timely hitting receiver who has built up quite a reputation for himself. Wagner has an advantage over Lamy though in the fact that he is ordered not to give the pitcher's any target. The Duke pitchers work themselves, figuring out the batter's weaknesses, etc. When it comes to foul flies though, McCaskill has it in a walk. Wagner missed a couple Tuesday and failed to chase others. Mac gets them all, anywhere. Watch these babies throw to second, that is, if anybody is fool enough to go down.

Sale Closes

The sale of seniors' invitations, which has been going on this week, closed yesterday afternoon.

Track Meet At Duke Heads Athletic Events

make use of an amplifying system to announce times and incidentals on the running events. Chances for Carolina retaining the state title will lay on the performances of the Tar Heels in the field events. Duke is conceded the edge in the running divisions, but since the Blue Devil aggregation is built around the efforts of a few, Carolina may take enough points to cop the meet.

Yesterday, a detailed account of the track events and their results, as doped by this correspondent, were run; today the field events will be discussed in similar fashion.

Tar Heels Strong in Vault The Carolina pole vaulters should be given an edge on the win-pickings. Wick Smith, Tar Heel, has done consistent work all season and should lead the field. Ripley, Duke; and Jackson, Carolina; will fight for second while McDonald, Carolina; Carmen, Duke; and Flynn, Davidson; will fight it out for the remaining points.

In the high jump, again the Tar Heels will have the dopesters' edge. Crook Stafford, brilliant Carolina performer, should take first with comparative ease. Second place will account for heated competition in this event. Rhyne, Davidson; Hamlet and Reid, both Tar Heels; will compete for second honors. Final laurels will be fought over by Gammon, Davidson; and Canipe, Duke.

Broad Jump Close In the broad jump, probably the most-hotly contested individual duel will take place between Floyd Higby, Carolina; and Fulmer, Duke. Although Higby has just returned to the Carolina line-up after an attack of flu and although Fulmer is given the favorite's role, we are going to put our money on Higby. Last year, you recall Higby playing the part of the "dark horse," upset Fulmer. We count on history to repeat again today.

The next few places should be just as hotly fought over. Childers, Carolina; Wilkie, Guilford; C. Hubbard, Carolina—all staging a lively battle for next honors. Flynn, Davidson; and Clarke, Duke; should finish up fifth.

The shot-put will involve a tri-cornered race between Ray Rex, State; Cochrane, Davidson; and Mullis, Carolina. Hodges, Carolina; and Means, Andrews, and Stevens, all three of Duke; will fight for the remaining honors in the event. We will string along with Mullis although Rex, human giant of the Techs, may come through.

Sure of Javelin Carolina should feel reasonably safe with results in the javelin throw. Ralston LeGore, big Tar Heel who has rated the national track honor roll, should cop first laurels. Armfield, Carolina soph, is doped to take second while another three-way fight should occur between Chandler, Carolina; Ripley and Crawford, both of Duke. This scribe is picking Carolina for all three places.

Mullis, Carolina; and Cochrane, Duke; will do the honors for the first laurels in the discus. A grand mix-up should follow for the remaining places in this event, Rex, State; Schmukler, Carolina; H. Lewis, Andrews, and Crawford, of Duke.

According to announcement, as of yesterday, the preliminaries for the field events will start at 10:00 o'clock in the morning while the finals begin at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon. Both varsity and freshman events will be run off simultaneously.

World News Bulletins

Rules 3.2 Illegal

Disregarding the opinions of some of the ablest constitutional lawyers in the country, district judge Claude C. Coffin, sitting at Greeley, Colo., yesterday declared the passage of the bill legalizing 3.2 beer as being in conflict with the constitution. His decision denied the Greeley Elks' club and Fred N. Fetch, cafe owner, a writ of mandamus which they were seeking to compel the city council to issue beer permits.

Economy Measure Passed

The house, by a vote of 249 to 118, yesterday passed the $543,578,936 independent offices supply bill that halves veterans' costs and grants the President powers to reduce government outlays. The allotment to the veterans now will be $493,988,000 as compared with the existing appropriation of $927,949,000.

Stocks on the Up

Despite heavy profit-taking, stocks in general extended their advances yesterday. After early regularity, shares started upward soon after noon when the so-called "wet" issues and a number of other favorites became strong.

Gandhi Unable to Move

Beginning the fifth day of his projected three weeks' fast, Mahatma Gandhi was yesterday too weak to move without being carried. Since he is determined to fast in protest of the treatment given the lowest Indian caste, the "untouchables," until May 29, fears that the aged leader may die increased.

Farm Strike Today

Miles Reno of Des Moines, president of the National Farmers' holiday association, declared yesterday that the national farm strike will start today despite President Roosevelt's action in signing the farm bill and urging farm creditors from foreclosing on mortgages.

Tariff Truce Adopted

The American proposal for an international tariff truce was unanimously adopted yesterday at a meeting of the organizing committee of the world economic conference at London. The armistice was agreed upon after the representatives of the eight nations on the committee had been in session over three hours. President Roosevelt and Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, German representative, in a joint statement issued at Washington declared that the conference could not be a success unless military disarmament went along with "economic disarmament."

Students Asked to Meet

All students and instructors interested in diplomatic and consular service will meet Campbell Turner, of the Washington Diplomatic and Consular Institute, in Dean Bradshaw's office at 10:30 o'clock this morning. Anyone unable to attend the meeting may make appointments during the day.

Ping Pong Tourney

In the ping pong tourney which is taking place in the Graham Memorial, L. H. Fountain yesterday defeated E. D. Cartland to advance to the semi-finals, which will be played today. The scheduled match between M. L. Kalb and Bob Woerner was postponed until today.

Chi Omega at Home

Epsilon Beta of Chi Omega will be at home tomorrow afternoon between 4:00 and 6:00 o'clock to invited guests.

Wilmer Hines Meets Lenoir Wright Today

Both players suffered from the heat and the condition of the courts which were slippery. In the first set, Wright failed to keep his shots within the court. He overdrove more shots than he netted. Higgins showed a degree of weariness from his match with Morrison of Virginia whom he conquered in the quarter-final round, 3-6, 6-0, 6-2. Higgins opened the second sets by winning his service. Wright won his own service in the following game and then broke through Higgins' service. At the opening of this set Wright began to open up. He played more freely and stroked his shots with more confidence and accuracy.

Each game was evenly played. Higgins tied the score at 2-all, after which Wright amassed two more games. The set ended at 6-3 in favor of Wright. Wright's net game became brilliant at this point. His lobbs were executed with deadly accuracy and put-away shots at the net had sharp angles.

Higgins had been run back and forth by Wright's cross-court volleying which had enabled him to score points on the Duke player's errors. Higgins had ceased to put pace on his balls and showed more strain than Wright. Each man had been losing his services and winning his opponent's.

The next set was more closely contested with Higgins serving the only love game. The set was won by Wright at 6-4.

Wright won over Walter Levitan in the quarter-final round, 6-2, 6-3. Both players failed to reach their usual games in the short time played. Levitan was completely outclassed before he got underway.

In the doubles Hines and Wright won from Cartland and Markham by default to advance to the semi-final round. The Tar Heels played two sets of tennis with Bowen and Hedges of Virginia late in the afternoon. Carolina won the first set 6-4 and Virginia won the next, 6-1. The match will be continued at 10:00 o'clock this morning.

Higgins and Welsh won the first set of their quarter-final match, 6-2 from Morrison and Rohman of Virginia. Dillard and McGinn advanced to the semi-final round by trouncing Peake and Butler of Duke.

MT. AIRY DOWNS ROANOKE RAPIDS FOR TATE TITLE

doubled. Two walks loaded the sacks and with one down Allsbrook scored on affluke single back of second. Allsbrook also hit and counted in the fifth. This time the Roanoke Rapids' second baseman drove a home run into deep center field.

Mt. Airy put the game on ice in the seventh with their last two markers. Childress and D. Fuller got singles, with Childress going to third and Fuller to second on the throw-in to third. With two down the winning pitcher came through with his second big hit counting both men.

Both teams looked plenty good in the field with the losing team especially fast and accurate. For Mt. Airy, Dean turned in six assists from the mound, while Tesh starred at short. I. Dickens, short, and W. Dickens left field were outstanding on defense for the losers.

Allsbrook was the big hitting star of the contest, getting a homer and a triple, for two of his team's three hits. Besides Dean's two hits, Belton, D. Fuller, and Badgett each hit two safe blows for Mt. Airy.

was doing the pitching for the Tar Heels. The only Carolina victory since 1927 was in 1931 at which time Longest, last year's captain, twirled them to a 6-2 win.

Today's game will follow directly after the Big Five track meet which will be run off this morning and early afternoon. Both teams stand pretty low in the state race but each has lost only one Southern conference battle, which was to N. C. State both times. A win for either team will put it second only to the undefeated South Carolina team in the conference race.

WAR PRODUCTION FEATURES SPANN IN LEADING ROLE

"Flieger," Air Drama, Presented
By German Department at 8:30 Tomorrow Night.

The German department will give a presentation of Flieger, the German war play that aroused so much favorable comment abroad because of its fairness to all nations in depicting the scenes. The performance will take place at the Playmaker theatre at 8:30 o'clock.

The play concerns the adventures of a German Flieger or war pilot who has become famed as an air fighter. He is in constant fear of meeting his death at the hands of an equally famous English ace, but when the British champion challenges him he goes into the fray.

Spann Takes Lead

The principal role is taken by Dr. Meno Spann who directed the vehicle. It was Dr. Spann who suggested presenting the play here April 7 and 8. It was enjoyed so well by the small audiences that Spann felt that with the favorable comment of the people that saw the play it ought to draw much better in a second performance.

Assisting Spann will be several members of the faculty including Dr. Urban T. Holmes, Robert Linker and Beverly Thurman. The other members of the cast are members of the Playmakers and students including Foster Fitz-Simons and Ellen Stewart, Playmakers, and Tom Johnson, Dan Weiner, Nathan Shapiro, George Hellinger and Jules Aaron, German students.

Scenes Are Authentic

Several former war aces from both sides have offered comments asserting the fact that the action scenes in the play are authentic. Spann has received during the week some property from an ex-soldier

PHI MU ALPHA INDUCTS FOUR MEN INTO GROUP

Phi Mu Alpha sinfonia has announced the initiation of the following four men: Edwin Raymond Brietz, Jr., John G. Briggs, Jr., Ray Wilson Foster, and Richard Joseph Simmons.

It was also announced yesterday that the regular monthly business meeting of the organization will take place tonight at 9:00 o'clock in Hill Music hall.

FOREST THEATRE PROGRAM STAGED

Playmakers to Present "Midsummer Night's Dream" from Natural Stage.

After a lapse of two years in the series of Forest theatre productions the Carolina Playmakers will undertake their most difficult program of the year with the presentation of Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream in the Forest theatre at 8:30 o'clock on Friday and Saturday evening of this week.

Plans for this year's presentation are more elaborate than any ever made for any of the 15 productions which have been played on the woodland stage.

Beautiful Stage Set

Reclining on the floor of the forest's natural auditorium, the audience will view the set, 100 feet across, depicting the palace of Theseus and Hippolyte and the fern bower of the fairies. The huge set, designed by Mary Dirnberger, is being executed by students under the direction of Professor Samuel Selden.

The performance will be embellished by a number of features, including a presentation by the Salon ensemble of the music written by Mendelssohn for the play—not omitting the famous wedding march.

Dances Are Features

Phoebe Barr, new director of dancing for the Playmakers, is devoting much time to perfecting the court and fairy dances

Setting of Shakespeare Play

Here is the setting for the most ambitious program the Carolina Playmakers have undertaken this year. It is to be used Friday and Saturday of this week when the group presents Shakespeare's comedy, "Midsummer Night's Dream," at the Forest theatre. The set, which was designed by Mary Dirnberger, includes the palace of Theseus and the fern bower of the fairies.

SALON ENSEMBLE PRESENTS FINAL PROGRAM TODAY

Thor Johnson Will Conduct Group in Last of Its Series of Graham Memorial Concerts.

Thor Martin Johnson will conduct the Carolina Salon ensemble in the last of its series of Graham Memorial concerts this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock.

Today's program will include compositions of modern French, English, and American composers. A feature of the program will be the rendition of the Allegro Moderato movement from Mendelssohn's Trio in D minor by Thor Johnson, violinist; Dan Field, violin-cellist, and Harry Lee Knox, pianist.

A premier performance will be given of a new composition by Herbert R. Hazelman, undergraduate music student, titled Suite pour Contrebasse et piano. This suite, consisting of Prelude, Chanson, and Danse, will be played by John Murphy with the composer accompanying at the piano. Another recent work by Hazelman, Grainger in the Mountains, will be played by the ensemble with Harry Lee Knox as piano soloist.

Series Continued Next Year

This concert concludes a series of Sunday afternoon entertainment inaugurated by the Student Union and the Salon ensemble in January. Their reception by students and visitors indicates that they will be continued next fall.

The remainder of this afternoon's program will include Bizet's Furandole from L'Arlesienne Suite, Aubade from the ballet Le Cid by Massenet, Mountain Song by Stringfield, Handel in the Strand by Grainger, Grandfather's Wooden Leg by Clokey, and Hungarian Dance No. 5 by Brahms.

Exhibition Attracts Chapel Hill Folks

Approximately one hundred visitors attended a tea given Friday afternoon by the Students Art Guild in Hill Music hall for the exhibition of paintings from Chester Springs summer school of the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts and their own exhibit of classroom work.

The Chester Springs collection of oil paintings include a great variety, with character study portraits, still life, and landscapes. The exhibition will continue through Tuesday.

Several members of the art division of the Community club and ladies of Chapel Hill aided in the reception.

BRADSHAW ADDRESSES ASSEMBLY TOMORROW

Dean Francis F. Bradshaw will address the freshman class at the assembly period tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock in Memorial hall. Songs by a duet composed of Jesse Parker and Sam Lane will also feature the program.

All members of the first-year class are required to attend since two unexcused absences cause automatic probation.

BINGHAM DEBATE SUBJECT CHOSEN

Annual Declamatory Clash Between Di and Phi Speakers to Take Place On Class Day.

The subject chosen by the campus literary societies for this year's Bingham debate, annual commencement contest between members of the Di senate and Phi assembly, relates to the China-Japanese situation and the action which the rest of the world should take in regard to it.

Specifically, the question will be as follows: Resolved: That the states of the world should intervene in the conflict between China and Japan in the interests of the world at large. The members of the Di are to uphold the affirmative and the members of the Phi the negative side of the question.

The Bingham debate was instituted in 1899 by the Honorable R. W. Bingham, present United States ambassador to England, in memory of members of his family. The debate this year is to take place at 3:30 p.m. on Class Day, Tuesday, June 6, in Gerrard hall. The Bingham medal goes to the best speaker of the winning side.

Try-outs for the debate are being conducted by each of the societies this Tuesday at 8:00 o'clock immediately after their regular meetings to select two members to represent them in the debate.

Merry Frolickers Cut Capers On Hot But Joyous Weekend

Bedraggled Juniors and Seniors Find Going Tough But Thoroughly Enjoyable; Campus Shines Show Their Stuff and Politicians Find Time to Stir up Activity for Future Campaigns.

By Joe Sugarman

Two tux-clad students met in Harry's early Saturday morning. Between sips of coffee, one asked the other his opinion of the Junior-Seniors.

"Not so hot," replied his companion. The waiters in Harry's work-ed three-quarters of an hour to bring him around and remove the imprint of his erstwhile friend's fist on his jaws.

Hot! The perspired, bedraggled, faces and bodies of 1500 dancers, the limpness of the black and silver decorations, and the blaring and tooting of Bert Lown's merry men gave a concerted, cumulative effect of a living, dancing, struggling Hades.

But it was a pleasant Inferno. Not the sort that Dante, Vergil, or Homer might have enjoyed, but exactly the kind that such old hands as Harry Finch, Wofford Humphries, Vass Shepherd, and E. C. Daniel, Jr., reveled in.

BRILLIANT SERIES OF JR.-SR. DANCES ENDS LAST NIGHT

Third Annual Dance Set Featuring Bert Lown Brings Senior Week to Close.

With Bert Lown and his famous orchestra furnishing his equally well-known slow rhythm, the Senior Ball, lasting from 9:00 until 12:00 o'clock, brought to a close last night the third annual series of Junior-Senior dances.

The affair was preceded by the Junior-Senior tea dance in the afternoon. Lown also played for this function in the Tin Can.

Cate Leads Figure

The senior figure, led by President Arlindo Cate, took place at the dance last night. Assistant leaders were: B. Cabell Philpott, John S. Gorrell, Charles G. Rose, Harry M. Hodges, E. C. Daniel, George Phillips, and B. Perry Collins.

Lown's band with its dreamy tempo performed splendidly in the same manner which has brought it nation-wide fame. Lown has played three years at the Hotel Biltmore in New York, and has filled long engagements at the Lawry in St. Paul, the Bell-Reeves in Kansas City, the Ambassador in Los Angeles, and the Park Central. He also makes records exclusively for the Victory company. Six new hits will be recorded by his band during the coming week.

Holds Long Record

He and his orchestra hold the longest single engagement record in the orchestral business, playing steadily and successfully at the Biltmore for three years. His performance of ten consecutive weeks at the Park Central is the longest of any band ever playing there. His contract will last until next October with the option of renewal.

Activities of senior week closed last night with the dance.

Lown Believes Arrangements In Syncopation Are Essential

Famous Band Leader in Daily Tar Heel Interview States That Popularity of Such Bands as Ossie Nelson's and Abe Lyman's Is Due to Varied Assortment of Playing Styles.

By Phil Hammer

"Rhythm in dance music is coming back again," asserted Bert Lown, famous band leader yesterday in a special interview with a reporter of the DAILY TAR HEEL. "It is the primary secret of success in modern syncopation, whether slow or fast."

Lown furnished the music for the third annual Junior-Senior dance series which ended in the Tin Can last night at the conclusion of senior week. A flawless harmony and slow beat afforded ideal dance arrangements and the crowd of hot, packed dancers were lavish in praise of his performance.

Times Have Changed

The ability of Bert Lown to keep consistently at the top of the heap of stellar dance orchestras is attributed to his elaborate arrangements of popular tunes. A few years ago dancers demanded choruses and plenty of them, but times have changed and the demand seems to be for competition between hands as to which can produce the finest arrangements. And that is where Lown has the jump on the rest of the boys. Of the fifteen recognized arrangers in New York, he has contract with eleven.

"While I admire each dance leader for his ambition to keep the type of music that has brought his fame," Lown went on, "the most popular are those like Ossie Nelson, Abe Lyman, Ted Lewis, Don Bestor, and Duke Ellington who use a varied assortment of arrangements. The best proof of this is that Lombardo, who I admire as being the greatest sensation that New York ever saw, was forced to leave the Roosevelt because his music, without rhythm and assortment, is monotonous."

Aside from a steady position as his present one with the advantage of the radio, Lown always prefers playing for proms and dances first of all. His second choice is performing at deb dances. He said that he finds playing at proms a continual education in the fact that he can

Athletics And Education

The primary purposes of education are mental, moral, and physical development. The great educators have always held that it is detrimental to the well-being of the individual if either of the factors are neglected. A good education involves participation in athletics, as well as the pursuit of books.

At this University there are ample facilities by which a person may develop his mental capacity. The library is very adequate, and the faculty is competent and willing. This part of the individual's education is well covered.

The chance to participate in athletics is not so pronounced. It is quite true that none of the varsity athletic squads are cut by order of the coaches, but only a very small percentage of the students are willing to go out for the varsity.

Of all the sports in which the boys of non-varsity caliber wish to participate tennis is the most popular. The intramural department provides competition in this sport, and many persons take advantage of this opportunity. In the other intramural sports fair equipment, at least, is provided. In tennis the balls which are supplied could hardly be called even mediocre, and the courts are in terrible condition. The lack of "Mother Nature" to supply rain paved the way for a terrific mutilation of the courts provided for intramural play, to say nothing of some twenty others scattered along the terrace.

The upkeep of these courts is a problem for the University administration and for the persons who use them. It is known that the University is struggling along in a financial rut, and that the athletic gate receipts have fallen off this year. Even with these facts there seems to be no reason why the varsity courts which receive attention every day could not be neglected for one morning every week, and the labor ordinarily at work on them be devoted to the courts which the rest of the University players use. This improvement would necessarily be slow. Once the work is started it is up to the students to preserve the courts in order to speed up the results. After all, one day's work on the courts will amount to little if care is not practiced in their use.

Tennis is a sport in which almost any person can compete. Of course every man is not as skilled as his neighbor, but he can derive a great deal of physical exercise and pleasure from his participation. Athletics have their place in education. So why not provide at least fairly adequate facilities in this sport in which so many can and want to take part?—N.A.T.

Behind Honor System Violations

The honor system has always been a subject of much discussion, perhaps too much. There have been many and various solutions proposed but none of them seem adequate to meet the need of some system to prevent cheating in class-rooms.

The most pertinent thing to do would be to start, as all other investigations are started, at the bottom of the situation. The first question which would need an answer, therefore, is why do men, especially freshmen, cheat? In answer to this question it would be advisable to divide the freshmen into two groups, the fraternity and non-fraternity.

The fraternity group should be made up of able men; not always is this so. And the men are not always capable in every subject. However, the standards of the fraternity must be upheld and, as a result, some of the brothers to the pledges who have been through the same course or who are probably more capable than the freshmen proceed to do the work for them, so that they may get good grades during the year.

The freshman has been getting good grades throughout the year on his papers and outside work done by his fraternity brothers. When the time of exams arrives, he has little or no knowledge about the course he has been taking. He realizes that he must uphold the scholastic standing of the fraternity, but at the same time feels that he cannot make a passing mark on the exam. So the only alternative is to resort to an underhanded and crooked way of obtaining knowledge,—cheating.

Much in the same way the non-fraternity men are faced with a similar problem. Only this time they have only their own standard to uphold and have no one here who is more than casually interested in their grades. For these men there is the group of fellows who make a business of doing outside work, charging for it fees which are usually scaled by the grades attained. When this non-fraternity man reaches the period of exams, he also is ignorant of the course and must join with the others in their cheating.

If the honor system is to be upheld, the more underlying cause for the cheating must be eliminated. It is therefore necessary for the upper-classmen to take upon himself a certain sense of responsibility to his fellow student and his school, and rather than to do work for the student, aid him or send him where aid may be found. It is also for the investigators of honor system violations to wipe out this practice which, without doubt, leads to constant cheating.—C.G.T.

Tax Evasion From Higher Up

With law and order dodged and circumvented by the multiplicity of major and minor rackets throughout this country, the government has left one thread of control to which it is tenaciously clinging. This thread is the well-known income tax evasion statute which has put the country's public enemy number one in a safe place (for a period which everyone wishes were longer) and which is now causing considerable embarrassment to Charles E. Mitchell, international financier.

But it must be confessed that there are few of us who were prepared to find the astute Mr. Andrew W. Mellon ensnared in the clutches of this law. Perhaps no man in the financial history of the United States has been at once so cordially hated and so well beloved. To some people a symbol of financial strength and security, to others he has been an example of the oppressing capitalist spirit. For those who vouch for his magnanimity and integrity there are many more whose hatred of the man approaches mania. And there have been others, too, who having no extreme feelings about the man, have nevertheless been haunted by a strange curiosity and sense of mystery about him, a great element of wonder which naturally attaches to a man of multitudinous wealth.

And now it appears that these last are to have their curiosity at least partially satisfied. "Andy" Mellon has been dramatically challenged on the floor of our national House of Representatives of a "specific tax evasion" to the extent of $6,700,000. Such a sum can hardly be laughed off, and Attorney General Cummings' supervision of the preliminaries of the case vouches for the severity of the charge. The evasion seems to have taken the form of the creation of a dummy company which sold stock from Mellon to Mellon, a company's severe loss, it seems, falling on none but the federal government.

No one can doubt but that this sort of business irregularity (to put it lightly) has been continually going on. It has been an important element in the amassing of exorbitant incomes and in the subsequent stock upheaval. The Mellon case involves not merely the guilt of a prominent political and banking leader, but also the question as to whether there ever has been, is, or will be such a thing as business ethics in the modern economic world.—B.B.P.

Programs To Suit Public

Of the radio programs on the air, there are few which have been of more educational or cultural value in its substance nor more ably presented and broadcast than the series of concerts given by the celebrated American composer-conductor, Walter Damrosch.

Now the National Broadcasting Company has announced that this program will be discontinued, because of lack of sponsorship. That the country as a whole should lose one feature which really has proved the "educational value" of the radio would seem as if the radio companies were losing their sense of obligation to their listening public.

For many years the newspapers, which the broadcasting companies have hurt through cutting down their advertisers, have faithfully served the American public, giving them the news and making money through their advertising at the same time. Now that radio has joined the newspapers as a valuable outlet for features and advertising, they also should be ready to serve the public whenever possible. Too much commercialism in broadcasting companies will lead to neglect of the public to whom they owe their very existence.

If features as valuable as the Damrosch broadcasts continue to disappear from the air, then is the time for the Federal Radio commission to exercise the power they wield. The British broadcasts are sponsored by the people and they have found that no advertising is necessary for the presentation of exceptional programs and entertaining features. By placing a small tax on each radio in American homes, the United States government could easily present programs which are not only of worth and have entertainment value, but could eliminate that most unwelcome static, advertising talk.—P.G.H.

World Affairs

DEBTS

The most important developments in the international scene this past week have been in the field of international debts. In the case of Great Britain, it seems that her original hostility to consider tariff revision unless America granted a debt holiday has given way to a more cordial consideration of the tariff problem. Prime Minister MacDonald, speaking in the House of Commons, voiced his belief in the early settlement of the debt angle before the convening of the London Economic Conference on June 12th. He was purposely vague, not wishing to embarrass President Roosevelt. It is highly probable that Britain will ask some debt readjustment if she is to agree to scale down her tariffs. As the situation now stands, she is in a position to ask for certain considerations, since it is the United States which is forcing the tariff parity.

The French government, undecided at first as to what course to follow—Herriot pulling one way, the Paris press backed by business men pulling the other—has at length agreed to pay the deferred December 15th (1932) installment of her war debt to the United States provided that her June 15th installment (which falls due three days after the convening of the Economic Conference) be postponed. Under the circumstances, the United States can do nothing else but comply; the London parity must be made a success and Washington is extremely likely to grant this request.

WAR

Japan, having reached a hurried agreement with Russia in regard to the Chinese Eastern Railway, has again returned to the attack. Evidently desirous of creating a North China confederation amicable to Japanese interests, she is going to great lengths in propagandizing the Chinese civilian population. Bundles of leaflets scattered over Peiping describing the Utopia which a new rule will bring about probably will have little effect. China cannot easily forget the Shanghai incident or the other lesser affronts on her national integrity. She is continuing her dogged resistance, turning back a determined Japanese offensive north of the "Imperial City."

MORE WAR

After months of sporadic fighting in the Chaco region, Paraguay has at last declared war on Bolivia. There can be no doubt that one or the other would have declared war sooner or later. The attempts at arbitration and territorial readjustment have come to naught; both countries are too far gone in the "self-hypnosis" of the war spirit to listen to reason. Reports of 50,000 casualties during the few months of warfare should be taken with a grain of salt. Evidently the opposing general staffs are trying to make the war look respectable by exaggerating its idiotic waste of life and property.

BOOKS

Book-burnings in Germany have been proceeding apace. The works of Emil Ludwig, Thomas and Heinrich Mann, Remarque, Feuchtwanger, Schnitzler and Wassermann—to mention a few of the great and near-great modern German writers—have been condemned to the flames. This systematic destruction of these literary works again impresses one of the almost incredible narascertain a general trend in dancing months before that new step becomes popular. The conglomeration of boys and girls from all parts of the country affords an ideal study of dance changes, which invariably demands a modification of the rhythms now most popular into another stage that will be popular six months from now.

The peculiar thing about Lown and his success is that he himself is no musician at all; he has never studied music nor does he desire to.

"The reason for this," he said, "is that I employ the very finest talent in the field and the best and most modern arrangers. I don't need to be a real musician; I leave it to them, as most have a liberal idea of modern syncopation. I control them to the extent that the music they play must satisfy my ear so that I can understand it. Then I know that the public will, too, and that's what I want."

Lown is known as being the best business man in the orchestral game and his orchestra is known as the most commercial. He is the only leader who maintains his one booking office and does all his booking himself. He has twelve different orchestras in New York working for him.

"I like the personal touch idea," he stated when questioned as to the reasons for his carrying out all his own business. "If the bookers can sell me, why can't I sell myself? I know I can do it more legitimately and honestly. Then again, I have more of the moral obligation and so does the band. That is shown in the fact that I have never failed to appear for a prom engagement."

Lown has played extensively in colleges and schools during the last five years. In that time, he has furnished music for functions at Wellesley, V. M. I., Sweetbriar, Syracuse, Rennselaer, M. I. T., Brown, Hackley, Briarcliff, and here. Lown explained that "promming" was a difficult thing. To come to Carolina this week-end, he had to pay $300 for Lou Conrad from the Statler in Boston to take his place, and was even threatened to be fired by the hotel management if he left there to attend the series here.

Lown admits the business is pretty tough. He spends no evenings at home, has no steady hours, and sleeps only three hours a day. But it is fascinating and there is no monotony.

rowness of the Nazi mind and the danger to liberty and enlightenment which their program contains.

The leader said that he was personally sorry about the disagreement between the two upper classes at the University regarding his playing for the dances. He feels that he has been paid a deep compliment by his reception and admitted that he had never enjoyed a week-end more.

"And look what I have to go back to," he smiled wearily. "Two radio programs tomorrow, auditions and records Monday morning, dance music at..." and he rambled on.

An orchestra leader must get tired; Lown said his greatest ambition was to spend a whole month fishing. What a goal for a man whom has been called hundreds of times "America's premier band leader."

Joe Griffith Hurls Five Hit Ball To Best Coombs And Conquers Devils, 2-1

Duke Pitcher Allows Eight Hits; Duke Scores in Last Inning To Avoid Shutout.

ZAISER AND PHIPPS STAR

First Victory for Tar Heels Since Longest Won Here In 1931.

With Big Joe Griffith pitching five-hit ball, the Tar Heels hammered Bobby Coombs for eight hits, one a triple by Gene Zaiser, and two runs to defeat the Blue Devils, 2-1, yesterday in the Duke park.

Griffith hurled what was probably the best game of his career and until the ninth inning, Duke had got but three scattered hits off his sharp-breaking curve and blinding speed ball. In the final frame, the losers threatened to tie up the score, but Griff tightened up and that was that.

Zaiser Clucks Rock
Gene Zaiser was responsible for both the Tar Heel scores, tripling to deep right in the sixth frame and counting when Kersey made a bad throw to Wagner. In the eighth session Phipps walked, stole second, and went to third when Michael dropped Coombs' throw to catch Johnny napping. Zaiser then sent a sharp single to Michael which was too hot for the Duke short stop and Phipps tallied with what proved the winning run.

Phipps Hot Afield
Johnny Phipps was back in his early season fielding form and turned in several brilliant stops. Phipps' all-round play, his support afield and his heady base-running stood out for the Tar Heels.

Both Coombs and Griffith were in fine form and both had high perfect control. Bobby fanned six Tar Heel batters and walked one, while eight Devils succumbed before Griff's slants.

Griff Loses Shutout
Griffith would have undoubtedly had a shutout victory had not Michael's grounder to Weathers taken a freak hop that permitted Coombs to score.

Blue Devil Golfers Take Southern Title

Duke University's golfers yesterday won the Southern conference team match by grossing a total score of 611 at the Sedgefield links, Greensboro. Carolina's four-man team trailed, amassing 637 strokes. Laxton of Carolina and Storm and Peacock of Duke tied for low qualifying score with 149 each. The Southern conference individual championships begin Monday.

ATHLETIC SEASON NEAR CONCLUSION

Schedules in Track, Golf, and Frosh Baseball End This Week; Varsity Nine Travels.

With only two weeks of school left, Carolina athletic teams either closed their seasons last week or will bring them to an end this week. The varsity and freshman tennis teams and the frosh golf team finished their schedules last week.

This week there are the Southern conference track and golf meets, which will bring these two teams' seasons to a close. The yearling baseball team finishes up Wednesday. The varsity nine is the only team whose schedule runs into next week.

Baseball Team Goes North

The varsity baseball team leaves the University today on a three-day northern trip. Monday the Tar Heel nine opens its schedule, meeting Georgetown there. On the same day the Southern conference golf tournament which opened yesterday, will continue at Sedgefield. The team tourney was run off yesterday and the individual tourney gets under way tomorrow.

Tuesday the conference golf tourney will close, finishing the season for the Tar Heel linksmen. The varsity nine moves on to College Park where it meets the University of Maryland.

Carolina Plays Navy

The northern baseball trip is concluded Wednesday with the Tar Heels taking on Navy at Annapolis. The freshman baseball team closes its season on the same day when it meets the Blue Imps at Durham.

No contest is scheduled for Thursday. Friday the annual Southern conference meet opens. This will be the first outdoor meet with only the teams of the present conference entered. The affair will take place on the Duke track.

Saturday, after a week's absence, the Carolina baseball outfit returns and meets State at Raleigh. This will be the final game of the year between these two teams. State won the first contest, which was played in Chapel Hill. The conference track meet will be concluded at Duke Saturday, and with its close will come the end of Carolina's track season.

Yearling Ball Team Loses To Oak Ridge

Carolina's freshman baseball team lost their second game in a row, this time to Oak Ridge 9 to 8. The game was close and changed leads several times, with the Cadets getting the margin of victory in the closing frames. The freshmen downed Oak Ridge in the first meeting of these two teams at Chapel Hill.

Glasgow and Hutchison worked on the mound for the yearlings. Both were hit hard with the latter pitcher receiving credit for the loss. Bullock, center fielder, led the Tar Heels at bat with a home run and a double.

Children's Concert

Under the auspices of the local Community club, a second concert for children will be given Wednesday afternoon in Hill Music hall. Mrs. Fred McCall is in charge of the program.

Lead Tar Heels To Smashing Triumphs

These four men were outstanding in yesterday's drubbings the Tar Heels handed the Dukemen, sort of wholesale like. Wick Smith looked good in the pole vault though he failed in his attempt at a new state record. Wick finished his competition in state meets yesterday, turning in his usual first place. Harry Williamson ran a beautiful half behind Duke's star, Bradsher and then turned in one of the most sterling performances of the day as he finished like a burst of wind in the relay to help defeat one of two Duke teams entered. Floyd Higby got out of bed and jumped far enough in the pit to gain much needed points in the broad jump. Big Joe Griffith sent the Blue Devil ball players home with tears in their eyes, giving up only five thumps.

Hines Takes Individual Honors In Southern Conference Tennis

Wins Conference Title

Wilmer Hines yesterday rode home in his first Southern Conference individual championship and ended a brilliant four-year record in athletics at Carolina. In tennis he has played four years of undefeated single competition in team play, captaining the club this past year through its third undefeated season. In basketball, he was a brilliant performer for three years, captaining the club this past year.

Yearling Tracksters Capture State Title After Close Meet; Duke and State Trail.

Carolina's Tar Baby track team eked out a close victory over the fighting Duke frosh yesterday afternoon in the state freshman track and field meet held in the Duke stadium collaborating with the varsity intercollegiate games. The decision of the meet was in doubt until late last night, due to the poor officiating. The final result of the meet: Carolina 53; Duke 51½; State 26; Davidson 22½; Wake Forest 5; Lenoir-Rhyne 6 and Guilford 1.

Napier again led the Carolina runners tying for first with Sizemore in the 100-yard dash and winning the 220. He also ran anchor on the winning relay outfit. Rankin also starred for the Tar Babies by tying for third in the high jump and winning the 120-yard high hurdles and finishing third in the low hurdles.

TENNIS FEATURES WEEK'S ATHLETICS

Last Week of Intramural Court Activities Full of Close Matches for Titles.

With the intramural baseball season completed except for league play-offs and the campus championship game, the last week of the tennis campaign will hold the center of the stage this week.

Five teams remain undefeated in the fraternity net loop; Chi Psi and Sigma Nu with seven wins each, and Phi Delta Theta, Sigma Chi, and Sigma Phi Sigma with six victories apiece. In the dormitory circuit only Carr has an unblemished record, but the lawyers must meet Ruffin, vanquished only once in seven matches, tomorrow. Should Ruffin win this match the league lead would resolve itself into a tie which might involve as many as five teams.

Sigma Nu must hurdle S. A. E. Tuesday to maintain its perfect record. The S. A. E. team has won five out of six matches. Sigma Phi Sigma encounters Phi Sigma Kappa the same day, and then meets S. A. E. later in the week.

Sigma Chi winds up its season against T. E. P. and Zeta Beta Tau, neither of them strong outfits. Phi Delta Theta stacks up against Zeta Beta Tau and Sigma Phi Epsilon the latter part of the week, while Chi Psi plays T. E. P. in the season's wind-up.

Baseball Playoffs

Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 Chi Psi and Beta Theta Pi, the teams which tied for fraternity league leadership in baseball will meet to decide the league championship. At 4:45 the same day Carr and Best House will come together to contest the dormitory league leadership. These games will be regular nine inning affairs played according to the regular playground rules which have been in effect all season. Dave and Jim McCachren and Dan Jones are the probable selections for umpires in these crucial contests.

In the final survey of standings in the dormitory loop, Laundry Club and Lewis came in right behind the two undefeated clubs, each winning seven of the eight games played. In third place was Aycock with six victories and two defeats.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Zeta Psi, each with seven wins out of eight starts, tied for second place, while Phi Sigma Kappa and Sigma Chi deadlocked for third position.

Other teams which finished the season with better than even breaks were Grimes and Manly among the dormitories and Alpha Tau Omega, Delta Kappa Epsilon, Phi Alpha, Phi Gamma

HUBBARD TAKES TWO-MILE

Veteran Sets New Record at Distance as LeGore and Mullis Also Break Old Marks.

Duke Stadium, May 13.—Foiling the jinx of the number, "13," Coach Bob Fetzter's Tar Heel tracksters displaying the elixir of life won their thirteenth consecutive state track crown on the thirteenth day of the month. A colorful crowd of more than 1700 fans sprawled lazily throughout the confines of the Duke stadium, watching representatives of Carolina, Duke and State smash nine state records and equaling two more.

The official scoring tabulation: Carolina 82½; Duke 64; Davidson 12; and State 6.

Johnny Brownlee, Duke star, turned in a fine all-round performance for the afternoon, cracking two state records and tying another.

Duke Strategy Wins

Coach Carl Voyles besides presenting a troupe of record-smashing athletes gave the Tar Heels a lesson in relays gratis. Voyles dared a piece of strategy which gained for him necessary points in the relays. The Duke mentor entered two fleet relay combinations in the varsity intercollegiate meet while in the frosh classic Voyles entered three complete combines. His varsity combination, number one edition of the "Four Horsemen" set a new mile relay record.

Starting off the pyrotechnics with a series of scintillating outbursts of speed and stamina, the Blue Devils looked good for the meet and threatened to snatch the crown from the defending visiting club.

Lewis Sets New Mark

In the opening event, "Red" Lewis, bespectacled and elongated Duke distance man, clipped off a fast mile to set a new mark 4:22.2. McRae, Carolina miler, ran one of his best races of his

Bob Woerner Takes Ping Pong Tourney

Bob Woerner easily swept aside all opposition to capture yesterday the individual ping pong tournament, which was conducted in the game room of Graham Memorial during the past week.

Playing a fast and consistent game, Woerner quickly defeated L. H. Fountain in three straight sets to advance to the finals, where he won over M. K. Kalb by 6-3, 6-1, 6-4. Woerner took the lead from the first and held it throughout.

The management of Graham Memorial has awarded the new champion and Kalb the privilege of free ping pong for the remainder of the year.

FAULKNER'S WORK GIVES BASIS FOR CAROLINA OPENER

Joan Crawford and Gary Cooper Appear in "Today We Live" to Open Week's Movie Bill.

William Faulkner, brilliant American writer, has furnished the vehicle for the combined appearance of Joan Crawford and Gary Cooper in "Today We Live," which tomorrow opens the week's bill at the Carolina theatre.

Miss Crawford, fresh from successful work in "Grand Hotel" and "Letty Lynton" is cast as a member of a British ambulance unit in Faulkner's tale of love behind the lines while Cooper takes the principal male lead as an American aviator.

The activities of the British navy play a prominent part in the action of "Today We Live" with other exciting episodes centered on the aerial spectacle of bombing squadrons. Though the war serves as a background for the plot, the conflict does not, according to Faulkner, submerge the strong personalities of those entangled in the struggle for life and love between the lines.

Roscoe Karns and Louise Closser Hale give the drama lighter touches while Rollo Lloyd and Hilda Vaughn are in the supporting cast.

of the play, and 25 people are being trained for these dances alone.

Children are enacting the parts of the fairies. For the first time in Playmaker history, two children, Bobby Koch and Jane Knight, are being given speaking roles in a major production.

Due to financial difficulties, there were no Forest theatre productions in 1931 and 1932. However, last summer Euripides' Alceste was presented by the Playmakers in Kenan stadium. This year President Graham and members of the faculty urged Professor Koch, upon the basis of interest shown in the past, to revive the woodland productions.

Since the opening of the University's open-air theatre in 1919, with the coming of Professor Koch, Shakespeare has been presented through his plays eight times, Housman and Barker once, R. B. Sheridan, Eleanor Gates, Rostand, Percy MacKaye, and Joseph Jefferson, each once. Professor Koch has directed all of the productions except the presentation in 1930.

Merry Frolickers Have Hot Week-End

was strangely missing. Neither "Bob-White" Linker nor "Square" Pegg had been located when the last person staggered from the hall. Of course they may have been there, but after 180 precincts had been counted with 240 missing, they had not been accounted for.

It was good pickings around the orchestra. In addition to the most attractive collection of femininity, the sight-seer could have cashed in on some excellent political gossip. A bespectacled gent and a portly dance leader flanked by a well-known automobilist and a conservative journalist just sat and talked and talked. A stray line from the conversation—"And if somebody sews up Mangum..."

Garcon!

It happened only some twenty times. Those trick little white jackets caused considerable embarrassment. One lady from out Asheville way, where they are supposed to be in the know, insisted on ordering a "dope" from three gentlemen attired in the tiny coats. All of them report that she is still a thirsty little girl.

Lest it be forgotten, that would-be columnist and politician B. C. Proctor did some fine tangoing. He retails the story of taking his girl's vanity and giving her his cigarette lighter and then quarter of an hour later trying his darndest to light up with a perfectly beautiful little Hudnut vanity case.

One Smart Soph

After activities finally did get under way, the general complaint seemed to be that nobody could get to dance with whom he wanted when he wanted it. One little sophomore squirt solved the problem by sidling up to a ravishing lass, breaking and saying:

"If I didn't meet you at the Junior-Senior last year, I've made a terrible mistake."

"But I wasn't here last year."

"Well, then, I've made a terrible mistake."

And Down-Town Later

As usual Franklin street put on an excellent show after one o'clock. The all-night places mixed orders with as much abandon as the customers mixed beverages, and the strong arm of the law gave up after the seventy-fifth car whizzed by at seventy-five miles per hour.

The A. T. O. lodge still wants to know just what called the policeman over to the steps of the nearby church early in the morning. Joe Gant ventures that a certain embryonic student physician was consummating his long-remembered marriage, but Tom Webb and Bill Northrup say no.

by tossing the bar 180 feet 11½ inches. Armfield of Carolina formerly held the record.

Zori of State broke the record for the discus and even out-distanced the varsity record. In a later exhibition he beat the Southern conference record by 10 feet. His throw in the discus was 152 feet 1 inch. He also won the shot-put with a heave of 42 feet 11-3/8 inches. Evins of Carolina was second in the shot.

Sizemore of Duke tied the state broad jump record formerly held by Childers of Carolina with a jump of 21 feet 8-3/4 inches. Tucker of Carolina finished second. On one jump Tucker broke the record by a foot but fell backwards and so the jump did not count.

In the pole vault two Davidson freshmen were tied at a new record of 11 feet 6 inches. There was a four-man tie for third including Bear of Carolina.

Arthur, Ranson, Conte, Keeney, who won the 440-yard run in good style, Yandell, Mark, Glenn, Rosser and Montgomery also scored points to help the Carolina total.

Hines Takes Honors In Tennis Tourney

The fourth and final set opened with Wright winning the first two games. Hines won his own service in the following game. After Lenoir made the score 3-1, Hines pulled the match up to 3-3. Wilmer took the lead at 4 to 3 and Wright tied the score at 4-all. The final score of the match was 6-4.

Shortly after the singles were completed two tired teams, Welsh and Higgins of Duke and Wright and Hines took to the court for the finals of the doubles play. Carolina boys emerged victoriously after four hard sets, 3-6, 6-3, 6-2, 6-3.

Both Hines and Wright played well with Wright making a number of beautiful shots at the net. The Carolina team lobbed the Duke leaders murderously throughout the match.

In the semi-final round Hines and Wright eliminated Bowen and Hedges of Virginia after five hard sets, the first two of which had been played the day before. The scores were, 6-4, 1-6, 6-0, 2-6, 6-1.

Higgins and Welsh won their semi-final match from Dillard and McGlinn of North Carolina. Neither of the latter boys had appeared in competition together for Carolina, but they made a valiant stand in a four sets match, 6-1, 8-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Cliff Sutter, national intercollegiate champion, was in the stands watching the Hines-Wright tilt. Sutter is on his way to Canada for the Davis Cup matches. He was a member of the United States team when they defeated Mexico.

OFFICERS OF STUDENT UNION ARE INSTALLED

The new officers of the Baptist Student Union, who will serve during the remainder of this year and through next year, were installed in office last week.

They are as follows: Vernon Brown, president; Sid Usry, first vice-president; Ruby Dimmette, second vice-president; Joe Howard, recording secretary; Evelyn Page, corresponding secretary; Jimmie Wadsworth, treasurer; Jimmie Underwood, publicity manager; Mr. Kiker, correspondent for the Baptist Student; and Professor Cecil Johnson, faculty advisor.

NOTED ARCHITECT PRESENTED HERE

Albert Simons, prominent architect of Charleston, will give an illustrated lecture in 111 Murphy hall Thursday night at 8:00 o'clock. Mr. Simons will speak on "Tendencies of Modern American Architecture."

The well-known designer is being brought to the University under the auspices of the American Institute of Architects, of which he is a member. The Fine Arts committee of the University is sponsoring the program.

Mr. Simons will acquaint his audience with the development of the American style of architecture and with the aid of illustrations show the tendencies of modern art in this field.

Admission to the lecture will be free. Everyone is invited to attend.

college career, but could not cope with the pace of the Dukester.

Fulmer walked off with honors in the 440, tying a record of Ken Marland, member of Carolina's 1932 state champs, by running a great race, timed at 49.4 seconds. Reichman, a teammate, trailed the winner to the tape while Dennis Fox, Carolina, ran third.

Brownlee Takes 100

The century provided still more fireworks. Johnny Brownlee led a fast field to the tape. On his heels came Childers, Carolina sophomore ace; Tar-rall, Duke; and Fleagle, Davidson. The race was clocked at 9.8 seconds.

Following close on the heels of this fine showing of individual track talent, Ray Rex, State soph, cracked Oscar Mullis', of Carolina, shot-put record as he put the weight 45 feet 5-7-8 inches.

And so the events were run off with each individual doing his share to give the fans, suffering in the heat of a furious sun, their money's worth. Mullis, Carolina, in the shot; Abernethy, Carolina, in the 120 high hurdles; Bradsher, Duke 880 runner; Brownlee, in the 220 hurdles and straightaways; R. Hubbard, Tar Heel two miler; LeGore, Carolina, javelin; and the Duke relay club—turned in fine record performances.

The sprint and both hurdles events also gave their contribution to the thrill-hungry spectators. In the 120 high hurdles, Abernethy, Carolina, came over the high timbers in good time to equal the eight-year-old record of Holt Moore, Carolina star; time 15.3 seconds. He was followed by his teammate, Tom Hawthorne and McCallie and Pratt, Davidson entries.

The 220 lows found Brownlee showing the way to the finish of a fast field, being trailed by Abernethy and Hawthorne, speedy Tar Heels; and McCallie, Davidson. The Duke hurdle star broke another record which has stood since the days of Holt Moore in 1925.

Now that the Carolina aggregation has taken off its thirteenth straight North Carolina intercollegiate track and field games title, Coach Fetzer will start tomorrow drilling his charges for the eleventh annual Southern conference track and field carnival. Once more Duke and Carolina will head the list of the Dixie track entries.

When Bradley (no kin to the Cleveland prexy), Dr. Lawson, and Coach Bunny Hearn got together it was a real reunion for all three. Bradley was playing third base for Toronto August 12, 1913 when Bunn pitched twenty scoreless innings against Jersey City. Later Bradley went up to Cleveland to become one of the greatest guardians of the "hot corner" the game has known. Dr. Lawson pitched for the Boston Red Sox while Bradley was at Cleveland.

CONFERENCE SET FOR BLUE RIDGE

Gathering Sponsored by Southern Field Council To Be Attended by Student Delegates.

The annual Southern Students Conference sponsored by the Southern Field Council, student division of the Young Men's Christian Association, will take place at Blue Ridge, N. C., June 15-24. The conference is attended by delegates from various colleges in the south, and has as its purpose "to create a knowledge of one's self, environment, and resources."

The gathering will be under the leadership of faculty members of the southern schools and universities. Dr. W. Aitken Smart of Emory University will have charge of the religious activities of the meeting and Kirby Page, noted author and editor of The World Tomorrow, will conduct the Bible study. Other conference leaders are the Reverend J. Marvin Culbreth, ex-secretary of the Wesley foundation and a minister in West Durham, Dr. Marcer G. Evans of Emory University, R. B. Eleazer, and Francis P. Miller of Yale University.

The University holds the record for having sent more delegates to a conference than any other school. This was accomplished in 1923 when Carolina was represented by 58 delegates.

The conference is given especially for colleges as a part of their summer work.

CLASSES FORMED IN THREE TOWNS

Three inter-session extension classes have been organized by the University extension division in Shelby, Rockingham, and Lumberton for the benefit of teachers in schools which have already closed. The classes are to be completed before the University summer school for teachers opens.

Organized at the request of teachers and others who desire to complete extra credits before attending summer schools, the following classes are being conducted: a course in natural science by Mrs. C. E. McIntosh in Shelby; in Rockingham a course of curriculum construction under Dr. William F. McKee, and a half course on North American geography under Kenneth Byerly; in Lumberton a half course on economic and social North Carolina by Dr. S. H. Hobbs, Jr., and a half course on North American geography under Byerly.

FAMOUS DENTAL MEN TO BE HERE

Outstanding Authorities Will Address North Carolina Dental Association.

A number of outstanding authorities in dentistry have accepted invitations to address the annual convention of the North Carolina Dental society, which is to conduct its sessions this year at the University June 6, 7, 8, according to announcement made Saturday by Dr. F. O. Alford, chairman of the publicity committee.

Among the prominent speakers already selected are Dr. U. Garfield Rickert, Dr. L. L. Langon Sheffield, Dr. Robert L. Dement, Dr. Willard Camalier, and Dr. Harry Bear.

Dr. Rickert, of the University of Michigan, who is ranked as one of the leading research men in the dental profession will address the convention on "Diagnosis with Special Reference to When Teeth Should be Extracted and When They Should Be Treated" and on "Root Surgery Techniques."

Dr. Sheffield of Toledo, Ohio, is well known for his work in the field of prosthetic dentistry. In addition to reading a paper on his favorite subject, he will conduct a clinic.

A former president of the National Association of Dental Examiners, trustee of the American Dental association, and a member of the National Legislative committee, Dr. Camalier, whose home is in Washington, D. C., will discuss some of the problems now facing the latter

Anderson Appoints '33 Permanent Committee

Appointments to the permanent executive committee of the class of 1933 were announced yesterday by Francis I. Anderson, permanent president. There will be a supper meeting of the group Thursday evening at 6:30 o'clock in Graham Memorial.

Members of the committee are as follows: Alec Webb, Robert Hubbard, Ed Brenner, Perry Collins, Percy Idol, Vass Shepherd, Lee Greer, Sara Walser, Mary Frances Parker, Thomas R. Taylor, Jr., Sparks Griffin, Billy McKee, W. W. Johnson, Robert Novins, and Allan McLean.

DRIVE EXTENDED UNTIL TOMORROW

Work on Campus Grass Begun Today as Result of Contributions of Organizations.

The closing date for the campus improvement fund campaign has been extended to tomorrow to allow for possible donations from organizations with meetings tonight. All such societies are asked to present the matter before their members so that contributions can be received tomorrow.

At the present the fund contains $150 composed of donations from thirty campus organizations. A goal of $200 has been set, this amount being necessary to carry out the complete program of rehabilitation.

Work Begun Today
Work was begun in earnest this morning with one power cutter, 12 men, and a horse-drawn power mower leveling the grass. The other power machine will be put in commission as soon as the remainder of the fund has been collected. Present facilities, however, can take care of the work though not as quickly.

The campaign was inaugurated last Wednesday when much comment was made by students and visitors regarding the unshorn appearance of the campus. The administration, with a greatly pared budget, was unable to ameliorate the situation and with the aid of P. L. Burch of the buildings department a plan was worked out whereby $200 which would cover the repair of the University power cutters would be adequate to keep the lawn in shape through next fall.

Only four students were confined to the infirmary yesterday, making the lowest list in several months. Those confined were E. C. Bodenheimer, W. J. Jervey, B. E. Smith and E. C. Willis.

Chapel Hillians, Accompanied by Negroes, Refused Food at "Penny Lunch" Counters.

Bernarr McFadden, publisher of the magazine Liberty and philanthropist extraordinary, apparently doesn't believe Negroes deserve charity, judging from a report carried back to Carolina by several University delegates who attended the Continental Congress in Washington May 6 and 7.

The delegates from Carolina, representatives from the Socialist local here, attempted to eat in one of McFadden's "penny lunch" establishments in Washington while accompanied by colored delegates to the congress. They were refused food.

Another incident involving the race question arose when one of the hotels in Washington refused to admit a Negro delegate. Several hundred representatives to the convention withdrew from the hotel.

The delegates themselves showed no race prejudice, even when sleeping in the same room with members of the other race.

Thousands at Congress
Thousands of delegates representing liberal and radical organizations all over the country convened at Washington slightly more than a week ago to discuss the present economic situation and to outline a plan for action.

The Socialist organization at Carolina was represented by Howard Hodges, Alton Lawrence, Vernon Ward, and Arnold Williams. Among the speakers at the Continental Congress, whose name is derived from the

Frosh Excused From Regular Assemblies

With the singing of "Hark the Sound," the freshmen yesterday closed the chapel exercises for the year. Unless a contrary announcement is made the freshmen will have the half hour free every morning.

Jesse Parker and Sam Lane opened the program by singing a selection composed of songs dedicated to mothers. They were accompanied by Walter Patterson, University organist.

R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, then gave a short talk urging all students to try their best to return to school next year in spite of the abolition of free tuition. According to House there are 125 endowed scholarships here and also loan funds for the aid of needy students.

IVEY'S FIRST COMIC OFF PRESS TODAY

The first issue of the Buccaneer edited by Pete Ivey, newly elected head of the publication, will be out today and on the campus tonight. This issue, the last of the current year, is called the "Commencement Number," with a special campaign promise section in which campus politics are satirized.

The new staff has given the Buccaneer a "new deal," making several significant changes. A new font of type is being used and a change from three to two columns per page has taken place. A special effort has been made by the new editor to keep his first issue free of pornographics.

UNIVERSITY MEN HONORED BY O.D.K.

Professor Meyer, Governor Ehringhaus, Hill, Everett, Inducted Into Duke Chapter.

Three alumni and one professor of the University were signally honored Saturday night at Duke University when the Duke circle of O. D. K., national honorary society, tendered them honorary memberships.

The honored Carolina men were Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus, John Sprunt Hill, Durham financier, R. O. Everett, state senator, and Professor Harold D. Meyer, acting director of the sociology department.

The order corresponds in the field of extra-curricular activities to Phi Beta Kappa in scholarship. Twelve are inducted yearly. The five qualities considered are scholarship, athletics, social life, forensics, and literary achievement.

Three other University men have been similarly honored by the order. Dr. Frank P. Graham, Professor Archibald Henderson, and Professor Frederick H. Koch are honorary members.

George Watts Hill of Durham, another Carolina alumnus, was also accorded an honorary membership by the Davidson circle.

Heat Drives Students Out Of Dorms For Restful Slumber

Phi To Have Election For Officers Tonight

The Phi assembly will meet tonight at 7:15 o'clock in New East to elect officers for the fall quarter. This will be the last meeting of the year.

Try-outs for the Bingham debate, the annual commencement contest between the members of the Di and the Phi, will be conducted after the election. The Phi will uphold the negative of the query: Resolved: That the states of the world should intervene in the conflict between China and Japan in the interests of the world at large. Only juniors will participate in this debate.

The Di senate will convene tonight to discuss the resolution, Resolved: That the University should require that all freshmen and sophomores live in dormitories. Try-outs for the Bingham debate for members of the Di will take place.

GERMAN CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS FOR 1933-34

At a meeting of the German club in Gerrard hall yesterday afternoon, Dave Morgan of Asheville was elected president of the organization for next year.

Other officers chosen are: Bob Reynolds of Asheville, vice-president; Charles Woolen, secretary-treasurer; and Chapen Litten of Lake Charles, La., assistant secretary-treasurer.

The executive committee of the club will be appointed later by Morgan.

Composition Conditions

The spring quarter examination for the removal of composition conditions in any course will be given in 201 Murphey hall this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock. No theme is required in advance of the examination.

AWARD EXAM TO START SATURDAY

Walker Accounting Award Dates $35 to Student Making Highest Grade on Exam.

It has been announced through the commerce department that the competitive examination for the Walker Accounting Award will be given Saturday. This award, instituted in the commerce school last year, gives the candidate who has obtained the highest grade on the examination a prize of $35. The examination will be on accounting and all related subjects, and all members of the senior class who are majoring in accounting and who have maintained an average of C on all courses prior to the examination are eligible to take the exam.

The donor of the award is Carbis A. Walker, one of the state's leading accountants, who has offices in Winston-Salem and who donated the prize for the purpose of encouraging those students aspiring to enter the accounting profession to strive for the highest possible attainments in the subject from the standpoint both of principles and practice.

The time of the examination will be announced later.

Pyjama-Clad Figures, Armed With Blankets and Quilts, Take Cool Rest on Sward.

The sun-worshippers have added a new group to their long line of followers—the moon worshippers. With the temperature in Chapel Hill these past few days flirting gaily with figures closely approximating three numbers, the general atmosphere has not been exactly conducive to restful sleeping.

Here was the Nudists' Cult, thought these twilight sufferers from the heat, prepared to meet nature on somewhat more even terms than those decreed by sartorial custom. Stripped to shorts these somehow managed to evade the flashing sun-rays.

Sleep Relief Legislation

What did it matter, further mused the over-heated dormitory dwellers as the sun went down, if brains were baked to such a degree during the afternoon hours that all the energy for evening study had evaporated off as sweat? Wasn't relief of some sort gained?

So a page was taken out of the book of instructions of the day-back-to-nature-ists, and forth trooped numerous pyjama-clad figures in the twilight. Bath robes, blankets, whose warmth precluded use indoors, and even quilts were carried to the stretches of grass between the dormitories.

Some enterprising souls in Ruffin and Grimes dormitories tossed their mattresses bodily out of the window onto that plot of grass which the Ruffin grass-cutters have recently made famous by their untoward activities and prepared for a night's cool rest. This morning they claimed that they slept like babes.

Here Come the Grasshoppers!
Users of the more effete mattresses were not bothered so much by bugs and ants, but the

NEGRO SCIENTIST SPEAKS TONIGHT IN GERRARD HALL

Dr. Carver, Aged Negro Chemist, to Deliver Illustrated Lecture at 8:00 O'clock.

Dr. George Washington Carver, Negro scientist from Tuskegee Institute, will give an illustrated public lecture at Gerrard hall tonight at 8:00 o'clock. For the past week Dr. Carver has been in Raleigh, speaking at State College and Shaw University.

Dr. Carver who was born a slave and was once traded for a horse is one of the leading agricultural chemists in the world. He has envolved 285 products from the peanut. Within a few moments he can produce from peanuts "grade A" milk, facial cream, and black shoe polish. Besides these he can derive hair tonic, soap, axle grease, and many other everyday products without the least trouble.

Other Products

His accomplishments are not limited to the peanut. He has produced 115 products from sweet potatoes and 35 paints and dyes from Alabama clay. The pecan has been changed into 78 products, with the shell alone producing 27 of these.

A member of the Royal Society for the encouragement of Arts, Dr. Carver founded the agricultural department at Tuskegee Institute. At one time he was said to have been offered a position by Thomas A. Edison, but he refused to leave his work at Tuskegee.

PLAYMAKERS TO GIVE LAST PLAYS

Tryouts for Roles Tomorrow in Final Experimental Productions of Year.

Tryouts for the final Playmaker experimental productions of the year will be conducted tomorrow at 4:30 o'clock in the theatre, when inexperienced actors will be given an opportunity to show their talent. There are twelve plays with comedy predominating, offering about fifty roles. They will be presented May 24 and 25.

The plays, written in Professor F. H. Koch's playwriting course, are Burgundy for Breakfast, an effervescent farce by Martha Hatton; Henna Rinse, a play of "Ye Venus Beauty Shoppe," by Marion Tatum; Beer On Ice, or "burp of a nation" by Harry Coble; Three Muggy Rooms in the Bronx and Bull Session by George Brown.

Other plays are The Moon Turns, a drama of college youth by Elmer Oettinger; A Mocking Bird Singing, a romance of the South by Foster Fitz-Simons; Keep In Shape, a play of professional pugilism by Frank McIntosh; Twilight, a tragic romance by B. C. Kendig; What's the Use of Talking, a small-town comedy by Wilbur Dorsett; Presents For All, a play on the same subject by J. M. Ledbetter; and an unnamed play by Ed Conrad.

Y. M. C. A. Devotional

Jack Pool will lead the optional Y. M. C. A. devotional service in Memorial hall at 10:30 o'clock this morning.

Students' Responsibility—

Tennis is known to be a clean and healthful game, but there is no necessity for incessant play by the students to the extent that the courts are damaged thereby as is generally the case immediately after a hard rain. A few, in their insatiable desire to better their ability at the game, cannot resist the temptation to hasten to the courts, although they are forced to play upon ground so soggy with water that the elasticity of the balls is lowered so much that a good set cannot be successfully finished, hurry the deterioration of the courts to such an extent that the expensive work of the caretakers is almost useless.

Also, the condition of the courts is not due entirely to the negligence of the University, nor to the over-zealousness of tennis players, but to a certain extent to the non-players. After a walk in the woods these persist in tramping back across the courts in heavy leather shoes without knowing or caring whether or not anyone else is able to play upon the courts after they dig immense craters and ravines all over the surface.

Complaints have been made all over the campus that the tennis courts are in a run-down condition due to the negligence of the caretakers, and at last these complaints have resulted in work being done to remedy the existing conditions. The general attitude of the students is that the University is able to pay for their carelessness and that it should be made to pay, but the students should realize that the treasury of the school is in a sadly depleted condition and that cooperation upon their part is needed. It is now the business of the students to see that the courts remain in a playable state.

If the work which has been expended upon the courts for the convenience of the students is to be really worthwhile, it falls upon the shoulders of the persons using them to keep them in as good a condition as possible.—F.P.G.

A Spirit Club—

An outcome of the Student Federation meeting has been the formation at Duke of a so-called "spirit club," which has for its purpose the promotion of school spirit on that campus. There has been much talk at this University in favor of a group with a similar purpose, but most of it has tended toward the possibility of organized cheering. Although the movement has not accomplished anything definite toward organized cheering, it has at least helped to bring about a revival of the Monogram club.

But the purpose of the Duke spirit club is more than merely to stimulate student support of athletic teams, and it brings before us the need for an organization with a similar purpose on this campus. For this group not only advocates student support of the home teams but seeks to encourage a hospitality toward visiting teams. The spirit club intends to welcome players from other schools, to make them feel at home and to entertain them during their visit—a phase of school spirit which we have unfortunately overlooked.

This is not to be understood as meaning that there is no willingness on the part of Carolina students to extend a welcome to visiting athletes. On the contrary, no such narrow-minded attitude exists among the members of our student body. But we cannot carry out our good intentions successfully through the means of individual effort; only a permanent group can give them the time and organized effort that would compel cooperation on the part of the whole University.

School spirit is a fine thing; it should extend not only to Carolina teams but to visiting teams as well. We could improve ours by following the lead of our rival university and make some provision for an active appreciation of the fact that visiting teams are our guests.—A.T.D.

The Height Of Gratitude—

The men in the many veterans' camps surrounding Washington are supposedly patriots. Sixteen years ago, they went to war for their country, and in the heat of enthusiasm, we promised them a bonus in 1945. Now they are besieging our capitol in mobs, demanding favors which are not theirs by right. They say that they want work, and the payments due them twelve years from now. Not forced to give either of these, the government has yet given them opportunity for honest employment.

But the second Bonus Army has bluffed. President Roosevelt has offered them that work for which they so ardently longed, and they have refused it. Jobs remain open for any of them in one of his forest camps, but they shake their heads and remain idle.

Of course it is more agreeable to lounge in army tents, and to eat government food at Fort Hunt, but if they are the patriots they claim themselves to be, realizing the government's plight, they will get down to business, and forget their fancied troubles.

When they lose the self-respect, and the knack for buckling down to a job, that their idleness will lose for them, they will also lose any popular support that they may have at present. In that case, their condition will be much worse than it is now.

They must remember that the government is not obligated to them. They are treading on dangerously thin ground. Let them bear in mind the old story of the man who killed the goose that laid the golden egg. Wishing for more than was his, in the end he received nothing.—W.H.W.

Justice Must Be Swift—

The only solution for stopping the kidnapping crime which is considered the most dastardly of any, would be to inflict a swift and certain death penalty on the offenders, leaving no loop-holes through which they could escape justice.

It is easier to prove a kidnaper guilty than to prove a murderer guilty. A murderer sometimes has provocation, excuse, a legitimate reason for his action; a kidnaper has none—unless the extortion of money through inflicting of mental agony and pain on parents of children, often driving mothers to insanity, can be called provocation.

The infamy of devilish plots which are conspired and designed to wreak money from panicky parents was first brought most forcefully to the mind of the American public by the discovery of the dead Lindbergh child a year ago this week.

Although that case, with which the whole of the United States, in fact, the world, was concerned, should have served as a lesson to the people and should have brought about immediate reform as to the punishment of perpetrators of such plots, practically nothing has been done to discourage extortionists and kidnapers. As soon as the passion of the people had worn off last year, kidnapers, reassured by the success of the Lindbergh plotters, resumed activities with even greater daring than before.

There should be no leniency for the kidnaper. Only swift and merciless justice can ever wipe out the crime that is planned and executed by depraved persons, without scruples, morality, or humanness; morons that are, rather than men, beasts of prey.—C.G.T.

With Contemporaries

Sweeping the University Of Heretics

A professor of Northwestern University was dismissed recently. He stated that he felt the reason for his dismissal was the fact that he is a member of the American Civil Liberties Union, the League of Industrial Democracy, and held unorthodox attitudes on problems of peace, race and industry.

Does this mean that college professors may not be allowed to teach if their views do not coincide with majority opinion, which can usually be counted on as being conservative opinion? Is the opinion of the majority to dictate to college professors what and how they shall teach?

Perhaps without knowing more of the circumstances of the case we have cited, we should not draw conclusions. But it seems an unfortunate tendency that faculties, especially in state supported institutions, are fearful of expressing opinions on controversial issues. Any progress which may possibly result from training in institutions of higher learning will likely be stultified if professors feel obliged from a sense of self-preservation to muffle their own ideas and to "stick to facts."

If professors are forced to shun expressions of opinion, we agree with the Wisconsin Cardinal that "we might just as well stay with our books of half a century ago and our dogmas of the last 500 years."—Daily Nebraskan.

Teaching is still the favorite profession of American girls, according to a poll taken recently by the Girl Scouts. Of 10,575 girls between the ages of 11 and 18 interviewed by the organization, 9,962 said they expected to support themselves. Sixty-four per cent of them wanted professional careers, and the majority planned to become teachers. Nursing came second in popularity in a list which included writing, dancing, window dressing, interior decorating, newspaper work and acting in the movies.—Ring-Tum Phi (N.S.F.A.).

On Thursday, Friday, and Saturday evening the Carolina Playmakers presented their thirty second, thirty third, and thirty fourth bills of studio productions. The plays were written and produced by students enrolled in English 56, 126, and 63.

Reviewed by Robert W. Barnett

The Carolina Playmakers' annual studio productions are the culmination of the year's creative dramatic efforts. In these productions we find a few of the better student written plays grasped by student directors and acted by student actors in front of scenery designed and executed by the directors and their student assistants. The plays this year boasted a polish, variety, and general evidence of craftsmanship which offered immediate satisfaction to the audiences and should give an abiding satisfaction to those responsible for their production.

We found ourselves classifying the bits of acting during these plays into three general categories. For convenience we call them the interpretative, the au naturel, and the mangled groups. To the first group, the one in which we find the actor reading a richer meaning into the part than lies in the mere delivery of lines, we first name Miss Stewart for a distinguished and insinuating non-speaking performance in Strindberg's Stronger. There was a subtlety and a sustained fascination in her interpretation of the part of Mlle. Y which was quite as good as anything that has been done on the Playmaker boards.

Miss Wolff and Mrs. Fussler turned in authentic interpretations of two old women, one of them a confirmed misogamist with a faculty for voicing morbid thoughts with an alarming casualness, the other a bloodless and nervous sister-in-law. But in their play, Judgment Comes to Daniel, the kudos go to Miss Ewart who gave fullness and interest to the unornamented part of Etta. The only superior bit of acting in Fitz-Simons' play, A Little Boat to India, was done by Mr. Terry who gave a clammy interpretation of the half-man and poet Kingsley St. Dennis. Miss Rawls captured first honors for acting in her characterization of the Baroness Marguerite, a woman at once demure and insidious, in Miss Hatton's Comedy at Five. Mr. Martin contrasted with Misses Stewart and Hervey, in Eternal Spring, in that his acting lacked unity, but contained the best and worst acting in the play. Miss Hervey imparted a gentleness and general intelligence to her part which made her work in this play superior to her other characterizations. Mr. Pitt as Kass Zeigel, in Blow Me Down, effectively captured the defensive ill-humor and husky pride of Mr. Bonyun's oysterman. Miss Tatum at moments gave to Mrs. Leopard an interest and authenticity which lay not entirely in the lines of Miss Stewart's play, The Queen Was In The Kitchen. And it is in this ability to give to parts a depth and importance and meaning apart from words and sentences that lies the difference between histrionic intelligence and mere adequacy.

And now a word about those actors who turned in adequate performances, which though lacking in genius did not lack in effectiveness. Mr. Fitz-Simons' many appearances on the stage were like so many repetitious entrances and exits by the same personality in various situations. It is true that Mr. Fitzsimons possesses enviable poise and an affable stage presence, but that is all one can say for him. It is inconceivable that three authors had him in mind when writing their plays and yet in three plays we found not different characters, but Mr. Fitz-Simons again. Miss Hervey and Miss Rawls made pleasant impressions upon a responsive audience in A Little Boat to India, but were in no way impressive. Mr. Moore as Jim, in Blow Me Down, represented the full possibilities of the au naturel type of acting. His excellence was an accident of casting and though he was more than satisfactory it was because he happened to be Jim, and not because he understood Mr. Bonyun's Jim. What has been said of Mr. Moore might also be said of Miss Jamison, who did make a very lovely and attractive Lida in the same play.

Of those actors who did less than the minimum for their parts it is only necessary to list Mr. Carmichael's unfortunate inclusion in the cast of Judgment Comes to Daniel, Mr. Rankin in Comedy at Five, and the many southern "Yankees" who poured out their lines in Etowah Plantation and contrasted noticeably with the one Yankee, Mr. Conrad.

We are grateful to Miss Hatton for selecting Strindberg's Stronger for production. Perhaps we are reading an absent meaning into the play when we conclude that the play reveals the struggle of a married actress to elude the ghost of the passionate wilful self that she was before marriage.

Judgment Comes to Daniel, by Miss Harris contains an irritating abundance of realistic detail, a superfluity of humor, woven into a design which is static and tiresome.

For trivial wit and excellence of pattern, Mr. Fitz-Simons' A Little Boat to India was the most superior play on the program. However, Mr. Fitz-Simons seems to lack entirely the quality of depth or sound thoughtfulness in his work. And to those who feel that one should not expect this quality in a comedy we refer to a rather successful dramatist in the person of Mr. Coward, a man whose influence Fitz-Simons has obviously felt.

Miss Hatton's Comedy at Five is a satisfactory comedy which possesses many dramatic values, among them character contrast, suspense, and swift, casual humor. But, Miss Hatton deprives her play of much of its possible naturalness and effect by over-writing many of her lines and making them sound like sentences lifted out of a corrected English theme rather than conversation.

Eternal Spring, by Mr. Barnett, concerns an interrelationship of souls which is destroyed by an inherent prejudice which is, in the nature of things, outside its scope. Mr. Barnett tends to be obscure and much of the value of his thesis lies in more than meets the eye, which is not always dramatically sound.

Mr. Bonyun's Blow Me Down, depends, in a large measure, upon the questionable device of obscene language to produce laughs. This play, nevertheless, was neatly constructed and contained some intrinsically funny moments.

Miss Stewart's The Queen Was In The Kitchen failed to come off. If there was suavity in her lines the acting gave no indication of it. If her situations were intended to be inherently comical, again the audience was not made aware of it. Miss Stewart is capable of writing slight, whimsical themes with extraordinary delicacy and so we hesitate to dispose of her play with this despatch, but the production of her latest play almost belies our confidence in her talent.

Miss Rawls' Etowah Plantation is a vaguely conceived and loosely patterned work which depends upon an extravagance of phraseology and general sentimentality of tone for its effect. Although pretty it is neither interesting nor important. Mrs. Barr, as Cecelia Stovall, delivered a rather speechy and very noble exit speech very impressively and brought to the play a sharp and touching climax.

With a surprising economy of stage properties and scenery the plays were all attractively produced and credit should be given to the directors, Misses Hatton, Orendorf, Barnett, and Rawls, Mrs. Totten, and Messrs Thompson and Martin.

Howard Makes Addresses

How To Avoid BONERS

A MAYOR IS A FEMALE HORSE

AND you haven't heard the half of it! The other day Bill Boner said the Sphinx were a tribe of people living in Egypt!

Won't some kind friend tell him what to do before it's too late? What he needs is a good pipe and good tobacco. Of course, the right tobacco is necessary—but that's easy. A recent investigation showed Edgeworth to be the favorite smoking tobacco at 42 out of 54 leading colleges.

And here's why: Edgeworth isn't just another smoking tobacco. It's an individual blend of fine old burleys. And you'll know that difference with the first cool puff of Edgeworth.

Tar Heels Take Easy Win From Georgetown U. 12-0

Matheson, Vick, and Zaiser Get Homer Apiece; Brandt And Peacock Hit Triples.

CROUCH WHIFFS TWELVE

Tar Heels Get 14 Hits Off Hogan, Holding Georgetown Batters to Only Four.

Georgetown University, Washington, D. C., May 15.—Starting off their northern trip with a complete shut-out against Georgetown University, the Carolina nine amassed more runs than they have in any other game of the season. Taking 12 runs and 14 hits, the Tar Heels allowed their opponents no runs and but four hits.

Crouch and Matheson, the battery for Carolina, showed their merit as Crouch fanned eleven. Matheson played good ball from behind the bat, also scoring one of the three home runs knocked in. Hogan and Scetini were working on the Carolina batsmen.

Carolina Bats Well

The Tar Heels showed their batting power with Matheson, Zaiser, and Vick each knocking one for a jaunt around the bases. Brandt and Peacock hit one each for triples, while Vick and Zaiser were also good for a two-bagger apiece.

Rapp, playing shortstop for the losing team, showed up mighty well for the Georgetown boys, and Vick showed fast ball-playing on the bases for Carolina.

ONLY TWO HOME MEETS ON CARD FOR 1934 BOXERS

Navy Replaces Penn State on Schedule; Captain Levinson Only Fighter Leaving.

Carolina's varsity boxing squad, with only one letterman leaving this year as a result of graduation, have six dual meets on its 1934 schedule.

Only two of the meets are carded for the Tin Can, one opening the season and the other closing the season. Only one change from that of last year was made in the schedule. Instead of Penn State the team is taking on Navy.

V. P. I. will be the opening match which takes place in the Tin Can, January 13. The regular season will close with Duke in the Tin Can, February 17. The Southern Conference meet will be staged February 23 and will probably take place at Charlottesville.

Marty Levinson, last year's captain, is the only man lost as a result of the three year rule. Both Platt Landis, elected captain for the 1934 season, and Norment Quarles, Southern Conference champions in the heavy and feather weight classes, respectively, will be back. Along with the rest of the 1933 team there will be several good freshman prospects coming up. The first year team lost only one match last year.

The complete schedule follows:

Jan. 13—V. P. I., here.
Jan. 20—N. C. State, there.
Jan. 27—Virginia, there.
Feb. 3—Navy, there.
Feb. 10—V. M. I., there.
Feb. 17—Duke, here.
Feb. 23—Southern Conference tournament.

AROUND the FIELD

THE PUBLICITY FROM DUKE still points to a Carolina victory in the conference meet this week. Since we took the state meet by twenty points from Duke everybody over there thinks we can beat anything. This Duke news puts Virginia in third place behind Duke. The Cavaliers have the best balanced team in the conference and yet they are being placed third. It looks to me like a battle between Duke and Carolina for second place behind the Virginians.

CAPTAIN BILLY LAUCK OF Virginia turned in a most spectacular time Saturday in the meet with Navy. Lauck, the sterling little distance runner, toured the mile run in 4:15. This is some six seconds better than the old conference record of Galen Elliott's which he set in 1926 at 4:21.2. If Red Lewis is in shape Saturday to push Lauck, the Cavalier may turn in another staggering time. Also our own Ed McRae may profit by Lewis' ambitiousness and pull ahead of the Duke star for second place.

HOW 'BOUT DUKE ENTERING all those relay teams. She had three in the frosh meet and two in the varsity battle. Coach Voyles is a disciple of the belief that there are four places in a relay event as well as in any other. Therefore he argued that he had a right to fill out the four places with his teams. "We've got a lot of boys over here who are anxious to run the relay, and we want to give them all the encouragement we can," he told Coach Bob. That's all very nice, but I wonder if it was fair to Davidson or State, or even Carolina? Some of the entrants were a long way from home and could not bring relay teams. Duke, the home club, enters two.

OF COURSE THE DUKE coaches figured the meet would be close and that their two relay entrants in the varsity competition would garner the necessary points to insure a Blue Devil victory. If they figured otherwise they would have announced the intention of running more than one team earlier. Coach Bob and Coach Voyles discussed the possibility of running two relay teams prior to the meet but nothing definite was done. Coach Bob left Voyles with the statement that "Well, that's something we can think about." When the relay event was called, Duke lined up two teams. Fortunately Carolina had enough points to win before the relay, but still Harry Williamson beat the anchor man of the second Devil team just to rub it in. In the frosh meet the Tar Babies won by a point and a half despite the fact that the Blue Imps ran three relay teams.

NORMAN McCASKILL IS OUR unanimous choice as all-state catcher. Lamy caught a beautiful game at Duke Saturday and wiped out any doubt as to how he stacked up against the highly touted Wagner of Duke. Neither McCaskill nor Wagner hit safely in four trips, but Mac handled Griffith well and fielded his position like a leaguer. Wagner looked bad on a throw in from the outfield which got by him and allowed Gene Zaiser to come in from third. He also had a little trouble stopping Coombs' pitches cleanly. Mac is the man.

entertainment board representative for next year.

FRESHMEN WORK FOR BLUE IMPS

Tar Baby Baseball Team Ends Season Against Duke Freshman Nine Tomorrow.

Coach Cerney put the freshman baseball team through an extra long work-out yesterday afternoon in preparation for its last game tomorrow with the Blue Imps.

After a hitting drill the yearlings went through a lengthy inter-squad game which lasted until after 6:00 o'clock. Longest, last year's varsity captain, worked part of the game on the mound for the second team and gave the Tar Babies plenty of nifty pitching to look at. Lefty Barnes hurled the whole game for the first team, and there was some doubt as to whether the game ended 5-5 or 6-5 in favor of Lefty's team.

Duke Has Perfect Record

According to the average it seems as though the Blue Imps have the Big Five frosh race already sewed up but the Tar Babies have some sort of claim in that they have played several more Big Five games. To date the Duke first year team has had a perfect season. If the Tar Babies can spoil this record with a win tomorrow it will be their biggest victory of the year.

Womble, hard hitting first baseman, who was out of the last Duke contest because of a bad leg, is back in shape and will add much needed power to the Tar Baby attack. McKeithan's arm is getting along fine and the righthander will likely start tomorrow's battle.

Andrews Attributes Success Partially To Good Fortune

No-hit, No-run Pitcher Says Game Responsible to Support by Team As Much as Good Pitching on His Part; Has Also Played For Presbyterian Junior College.

Nate Andrews, Carolina right hander who attained the goal of all pitchers Tuesday by turning back Wake Forest without a safe blow, is authority for the statement that holding the opposition hitless produces plenty of strain not only on the body but the mind.

"For the first six innings," he says, "it was all right. I don't guess I even realized until then that I had a chance to pitch a no-hit game. Then I got to thinking about how nice it would be if I could pitch one, and it began to worry me a little."

"The crowd started getting excited and cheering good plays more than ever about then, and that made a difference, but I just kept on throwing them in there low, and Wake Forest didn't seem to be able to hit 'em."

Nervousness Appears

It wasn't until there were two out and two strikes on the third man in the ninth that Andrews actually became nervous. With but a single strike to throw and end the game Andrews saw White, Deacon right fielder, hit more than a half dozen fouls, most of which were dumped within a few feet of the plate.

"I thought after he'd fouled so many, he'd end up by getting a hit," Nate says, "but he worked for a walk and I felt better then. I got the next one all right, and had my no-hit game, but I guess I was pretty lucky."

Will Assault Oldest Conference Record

Red Lewis of Duke, left, and Captain Billy Lauck of Virginia, shown above, will attack the conference mile record Saturday in the Duke stadium. This record of 4:21.2 is the oldest mark in the conference. Lewis broke the state record last Saturday while Lauck ran a phenomenal mile against Navy in 4:15. The Virginia leader may do even better Saturday if pushed hard enough by Lewis.

THREE TEAMS END TENNIS SEASONS WITH NO LOSSES

Carr, Sigma Nu, and Chi Psi End Perfect Year; Sigma Phi Sigma Gets 7th Straight.

For the first time this season no intramural tennis team saw fit to forfeit its match yesterday and a full program of six engagements was run off. Chi Psi, Sigma Nu, and Carr wound up their seasons undefeated, while Sigma Phi Sigma won its seventh consecutive match.

Carr captured the dormitory league tennis championship by handing Ruffin its second defeat in eight starts, 3-0. Bailey defeated Bell 5-2, 5-4 in the opening singles encounter, and Markham downed Mallonee by the overwhelming margin of 5-0, 5-0, to clinch the match. The doubles match went to the lawyers uncontested. As no other team came through its schedule without a setback, Carr is assured a place in the match for the campus championship.

Chi Psi Scores

Chi Psi won its eighth straight fraternity league match, taking a hard match from Tau Epsilon Phi, 2-1. Atwood, of the winners, beat Shohan 5-2, 5-3 in the first singles, but Morty Ellisberg evened the count for the Teps by defeating Loughlin 5-4, 3-5, 5-4. Atwood and Loughlin won the doubles 5-2, 5-3 to clinch the match. Chi Psi thus joined Carr in having both its intramural entries, baseball and tennis, finish the season without defeat. Except for the Carr tennis outfit, however, play-offs will be required to determine the final winner of each league.

S. A. E. Bows

Sigma Nu defeated Sigma Alpha Epsilon, 3-0, as it too wound up its regular schedule with a record of no defeats. Jones beat Harris 5-2, 5-1 and McKee won from Freeman 3-5, 5-1, 5-2. The doubles went to Sigma Nu by default.

Sigma Phi Sigma downed Phi Sigma Kappa 2-1 after a long, hard battle. Lovill won his singles 3-5, 5-1, 5-1 for the winners, but Vick evened the score by defeating Froneberger 5-2, 5-3. Lovill and Froneberger took a hotly contested doubles match 5-2, 0-5, 5-2 to clinch the decision.

Phi Gamma Delta defeated Zeta Beta Tau 3-0. Fisher beat Simkowitz 5-2, 5-3, and Hicks

HEELS FAVORITES FOR TRACK MEET IN DUKE STADIUM

Probable Score Indicates That Tar Heels Will Score 37 Points and Duke 28½.

By Ted Mann
(Duke News Service)

Durham, May 15.—A compilation of winning times and distances in various dual meets this season indicates that North Carolina will cop the championship crown in the 11th annual Southern Conference track meet to be held in Duke stadium here Friday and Saturday.

Although the mythical results are merely a prediction and will be upset in many cases, yet they form the most reliable information that can be given prior to the meet.

Probable Results

This is the order and scoring of the teams as reached by the probable results: North Carolina 37; Duke 28½; Clemson 17; Virginia 17; V. P. I. 13; South Carolina 13; V. M. I. 11; Washington and Lee 11; Maryland 6½.

These figures do not include the mile relay race because of the few times that event is run in dual meets. Nor is North Carolina State included; the Raleigh school does not have a formal track team, although several of its individual stars will be entered.

N. C. Trails in Runnings

North Carolina is expected to trail Duke in the running events but to overcome the Blue Devils' lead by heavy scoring in the field competition, the margin by which they turned back the Duke boys in the North Carolina state meet last week.

The fight between Clemson and Virginia for third place appears to depend on the flying feet of "Mountain Goat" Lynn of the Tigers who is favored to win both the 100 and 200-yard dashes.

Records to Fall

Another such record-breaking spree as hit the North Carolina state meet which was held in Duke stadium and showed the speed of the Duke cinders is expected when the conference performers gather here for the two days of action. Nine state marks were broken and two tied as Duke and North Carolina, the two favored teams in the conference, battled for first in the state meet.

The 100, 220, 440, 880, mile and two-mile, the low hurdles, high jump, shot put, javelin and mile relay only eleven of the 15 events, are slated for the sacrificial alter.

While much faith cannot be placed in predictions, the figures show clearly that the conference track classic will not be awarded to the winner on a silver platter. The victor must be a real champion.

Professor Bill Olsen Sparkles At Debate Fete

Dr. Meno Spann of German Department Speaks to Squad on Hitlerism in Germany.

Professor Bill Olsen proved his ability as an efficient toastmaster with many a sparkling witticism at the annual debate squad banquet at the Carolina Inn Thursday evening.

The banquet started off with a bang when Toastmaster Olsen pulled out a Texaco "fire chief helmet" to be worn by the best story teller. As soon as this intellectual headpiece was brought forth, Professor Ericson let loose with some of his choicest stories. Unfortunately, due to the censoring of the Publications Union Board, the spicy jokes that followed can not be printed. In the meantime, Johnny Wilkinson and Don Seawell succeeded in working a racket in depriving the management of as many delicacies as possible.

Debate Trips?

Vivid accounts of the debating trips were reiterated by Rankin, Seawell, Russell, Kaplan, and Eddleman on such vital subjects as co-eds, dates, and dances. These gentlemen seemed to get a great satisfaction in revealing embarrassing incidents of the trips about their companions.

Next, Olsen, with due pomp and ceremony, announced the awards in debating for Phillip Russell, a freshman, and A. S. Kaplan. Remarks were also added about this year's debates and the prospects for next year.

Dr. Meno Spann, concluded the festivities with a short talk on "Hitlerism in Germany." Dr. Spann seemed to bring his jovial audience back to thought and reason as Mr. Olsen terminated the banquet in a very serious mood. (Imagine him in a pensive mood.)

won from Frankel 5-1, 2-5, 5-3. The doubles went to the winners uncontested.

Phi Kappa Sigma downed Beta Theta Pi 3-0. Odum defeated Anderson 5-0, 5-2 and Carson trimmed Brandt 5-2, 5-2 in singles, while the winners took the doubles by default.

This afternoon at 3:30 Chi Psi and Beta Theta Pi will meet for the fraternity league baseball championship on intramural field No. 2. At 4:45 Carr will oppose Best House for the dormitory loop supremacy. Both games will be nine-inning affairs.

Today's tennis program follows:

3:30—(1) Old West vs. Aycock, (2) Delta Kappa Epsilon vs. Alpha Tau Omega, (3) Phi Alpha vs. Chi Phi; 4:30—(1) Phi Gamma Delta vs. Sigma Phi Epsilon, (2) Best House vs. Old East, (3) Sigma Chi vs. Tau Epsilon Phi.

Capital Delegates Find Discrimination

Revolutionary war body, was Norman Thomas, leader of the Socialist party.

One of the interesting side-lights on the convention reported by the representatives from Chapel Hill is that two men from the state legislature of Utah bummed into Washington to attend the congress. They saved a little money to have their clothes pressed, and appeared quite spick and span.

Farmers to Strike

Among steps to be taken by the congress is a food strike of the farmers of the middle west. By bringing the pressure of a food shortage to bear upon the industrial classes of the cities, the farmers hope to force the laborers to take over the machinery of industrial centers just as the farmers themselves have taken over the farms in the west when foreclosure was attempted by the holders of mortgages.

Should such a step be successful, the United States would become a socialized country. However, Arnold Williams expressed the opinion that the farmers were not capable of sufficient cooperation to put the project across.

It is obvious that any sort of a food strike on the part of the farmers, even if not successful in bringing about the socialization of the country, would have the effect of forcing the already rising commodity prices to still higher levels. In the event that wages failed to accompany such a rise, it would work an obvious hardship on the working man.

The congress, before it adjourned, elected a permanent committee to carry on the work of the convention. There will be another meeting of the congress, probably in the middle west this time, and probably at the end of the summer. Williams believes that the course of events will be so swift during this summer, that by the end the nation will have a pretty good idea of how it stands, and what the effect of inflation will be, and it will then be time for the Continental Congress to meet again.

As Williams analyzed the convention, most of the conservative element at the recent one in Washington was from New York state. Since the next convention is likely to be held in or near Chicago, it will be in a more radical atmosphere, and at the same time, it will be more difficult for conservative elements to reach it.

If economic conditions do not improve before the next meeting of the Continental Congress, and if the body convenes in a more radical atmosphere, it is not beyond the realm of the possible for the country to be faced with a revolution of some sort or other. As Williams interpreted the convention just passed, the farmers seemed to be more radical than the laborers. It is hardly necessary to point out that this is a marked departure from the usual state of affairs, since the landed population of a nation is almost always the most conservative element.

On the other hand, if the nation meets with even a partial return of prosperity before the end of the summer, it is highly possible that the program of the congress will lose backing and become ineffective. As has been pointed out by Williams, a rise in commodity prices due to a farmers strike may induce farmers to begin selling again, with the result, of course, that the teeth would be drawn from the plans of the Continental Congress.

BICYCLES HAVE COPS GUESSING

Capt. David Flynn, head of the traffic detail of Chicago Police Department, isn't sure whether Lilyan Graft (left) and Fern Van Arsdale, who work at 333 N. Michigan Ave., can park their bicycles in front of the building or not.

CHICAGO.—Bicycle riding has returned to such popular favor that it is now presenting a traffic problem to the police.

Traffic Expert Captain David Flynn of Chicago was one of the first to encounter the new problem. He said he was kept busy enough trying to handle autos and trucks, but it looked as though he would have to begin thinking in terms of the bicycle, too.

Whereupon, he hauled out a copy of the Uniform Traffic Code for the City of Chicago and finally found a reference to bicycles on Page 43, Section 46, which read:

"Riding on handle bars prohibited. It shall be unlawful for the operator of any bicycle or motorcycle, when upon the street, to carry any other person upon the handle bar, frame or tank of any such vehicle, or for any person to so ride upon any such vehicle."

"But we want to park," replied Riders Graft and Van Arsdale. "We are not interested in riding on handle bars."

"That's right," admitted the captain. "I suppose I'll have to draw up a set of special rules if all this bicycling keeps up."

Attention Candidates For Degrees

The ceremonies incident to the conferring of academic degrees include certain mechanical procedures and uniform practices in conduct, dress, etc., which cannot be successfully carried through without the intelligent and informed cooperation of those upon whom degrees are conferred. Therefore I am asking all candidates for degrees to assemble in Gerard hall Thursday at 4:30 p. m. in order that I may give them the instructions necessary to prevent delay, confusion, and possible personal embarrassment.

The actual ceremony will take place in Kenan stadium at 7:00 p. m., preceded by the academic procession which will form on the south campus and march to the stadium. At 6:15 all candidates for degrees will assemble and form in columns of twos, on the walk leading from the Playmakers building, by Steele, Saunders, and Murphy, towards the stadium. The head of the column will be in front of Bingham hall. The candidates will fall in by twos, facing the stadium, the members of each division in alphabetical order, reading from left to right. At the head of the column will be the candidates for the degree of A. B., and behind them the other divisions in the following order:

1. Bachelors of Arts.
2. Bachelors of Arts in Education.
3. Bachelors of Science in Chemistry.
4. Bachelors of Science in Geology.
5. Bachelors of Science in Medicine.
6. Bachelors of Science in Pharmacy.
7. Bachelors of Science in Chemical Engineering.
8. Bachelors of Science in Civil Engineering.
9. Bachelors of Science in Electrical Engineering.
10. Bachelors of Science in Mechanical Engineering.

Ruth Chatterton In "Cooch" Dancer Role

Ruth Chatterton will appear at the Carolina theatre today in what is claimed to be the most astounding characterization she has ever portrayed on the screen. She will take the title role of the First National picture "Lilly Turner."

As the "Cooch" dancer and come-on girl for a carnival, she has more clandestine love affairs than most actresses portray in a lifetime. She fits from one love to another with a wild abandon. When she finally awakens to real love, the ghosts of her many sweethearts rise up to haunt her.

The picture is based on the stage success by Phillip Dunning and George Abbott. George Brent plays the leading masculine role, the first time that he and Miss Chatterton have appeared together since their marriage last fall. Others in the case are Frank McHugh, Ruth Donnelly and Guy Kibbee.

Heat Drives Students Out Of Dormitories For Restful Slumber

other sleepers who laid their weary bones on merely blankets and bath robes reported they had minute, crawling visitors all through the night.

One group from Aycock and Lewis took its bedclothes to the grassy lawn between Everett and Graham dormitories and prepared for sleep. Quite naturally a bull session was started, and it wasn't long before voices became heated in argument. Some tennis players were sleeping at that time in the usually deserted Graham dormitory and at the racket raised over "Whether a liberal university ought to emphasize classics or sciences as cultural courses," these became much incensed. A pillow sailed out of the window, but with poor aim. Another came.

The ruse had succeeded, for the schoolmen retrieved the downy cushions, placed these under tired heads, and went to sleep.

SEVENTEEN NEW MEMBERS TAKEN INTO SIGMA XI

Honorary Scientific Society Selects New Officers at Annual Banquet Last Night.

The North Carolina chapter of the Sigma Xi scientific society had its annual initiation supper last night at the Carolina Inn during which the new men were initiated and the elections of officers for next year took place.

Dr. A. S. Wheeler of the University chemistry department addressed the group after the dinner, the subject of his talk being "The Carbon Atom." Dr. Wheeler has been engaged in a study of carbon for some years.

New Officers Chosen

The following officers were elected at the meeting: president, Dr. R. E. Coker of the zoology department; vice-president, Dr. E. T. Browne of the mathematics department, re-elected; secretary-treasurer, E. L. Mackie of the mathematics department, re-elected; councilor, J. G. Douglas of the geology department; and ex-officio member of the executive committee, A. S. Wheeler, retiring president.

The men who were last night taken into the society as full members were Major James S. Simmons, an alumnus of the University and now with the Army Medical school in Washington; Jacob Addlestone, a graduate student in chemistry here; Bernard L. Johnson and Robert D. Norton, both advanced graduates in chemistry; and Henry N. DeWick, advanced graduate in psychology.

A number of others were initiated as associate members. (Continued on last page)

SALON ENSEMBLE WILL PLAY MUSIC OF MENDELSSOHN

Famous Compositions Written For Shakespeare Comedy To Feature Forest Production.

One of the attractions of the Forest theatre production this week-end will be Mendelssohn's music for Midsummer Night's Dream played by the Carolina Salon Ensemble under direction of Thor Johnson. Three of the pieces are probably Mendelssohn's most widely known compositions—the opening Overture, the familiar Wedding March and Nocturne.

The entire orchestral accompaniment was composed as a sort of musical pantomime of the action of the play incorporating a variety of effects to represent incidents and characters. In the Overture the bray of an ass is effected by long sliding notes, for the boorish Bottom who was given an ass's head by Puck. Busy, tripping strains in high key accompany the fairies, visualizing the grace and lightness of their queen Titania.

Dignified Measures

Broader, more dignified measures accompany appearance of Duke Theseus and his train, while some themes are in mood with the passionate chases of the lovers and others with the buffoonery of the rustic clowns. In this strain is the popular clown-dance movement, concluding the Intermezzo which ef-

BILL EDDLEMAN ELECTED TO HEAD SENATE IN FALL

Ike Minor Chosen President Pro-Tem; Phi Assembly Postpones Selection of New Officers.

The Di senate last night in executive session ended its official school activities for the year with the election of officers for the fall quarter of 1933. The Bingham debate try-outs were postponed to a date to be announced later due to the inability of certain eligible men to be present. President Lyon appointed Bill Eddleman to represent the Di senate on the debate council for next year.

Bill Eddleman was unanimously elected to the presidency for the fall quarter. Ike Minor was chosen over Ernest Hunt and Senator Block as president pro-tem. Elmer Oettinger was elected critic over Ernest Hunt. Bill Weaver was chosen as clerk and Carl Crowell sergeant-at-arms after hot contests.

Reports Accepted

The reports of all committees were accepted and the senate rose to give a vote of appreciation to the outgoing president, Howard Lyon. Plans were discussed for the senate's policy for the coming year and Senators Weaver and Eddleman were appointed to a committee for summer planning.

The Phi assembly met in a stormy session last night to elect officers, but due to quibbling over eligibility of certain members to vote, was unable to proceed with the election of officers. To open the session F. A. Rankin and L. H. Fountain were nominated for presidency and there ensued a battle as to the eligibility of members which continued until 8:55 o'clock when Fountain and Rankin were appointed as a committee to determine the eligibility of voters and the meeting was postponed until tonight. The debate try-outs were put off until this afternoon.

Seven in Infirmary

Seven students were confined to the infirmary yesterday. They were as follows: E. C. Bodenheimer, W. J. Jervy, J. R. McInner, James Mallonee, B. E. Smith, J. W. Temple, and G. H. Crane.

Co-ed Tea

The weekly co-ed tea will take place at Spencer hall this afternoon between the hours of 4:30 and 6:00 o'clock.

Tar Heel Tennis Stars Establish Finest Record Of Any Collegians

Stellar Court Performers of Carolina Crash Through With Fourth Undeclared Season and Capture Third Straight National Championship After Triumphant Northern Trip.

The University of North Carolina tennis team has just rounded out what is believed to be the greatest record ever made by a college tennis team in this country.

The 1933 team put in a fourth undefeated season, won a third national team championship on another undefeated tour of the east and topped its season by sweeping all honors at the Southern Conference Tournament which ended here Saturday.

In the six seasons since John Kenfield became coach in 1928 the Tar Heels have won 76 matches, tied one and lost only two. The 1928 team was beaten only by Georgia Tech, the 1929 team only by Princeton.

Undefeated for Four Years

The last four teams have been undefeated, and the only tie was by Tulane in 1930. During the last three years the Tar Heels have played the best teams in the country on long, hard northern trips, and have come off without a defeat to give North Carolina the leading claim to the national team championship each year.

In addition to putting out the strongest teams in the country, Coach Kenfield has also inherited and developed at Carolina a long line of brilliant individual stars who have swept all honors in the last six state tournaments, except for the singles title in 1928, and who have taken most of the titles at the Conference tournaments in which they have participated.

Individual Stars

Heading the individual stars have been: Bryan Grant, national claycourts champion in 1930, who won the state singles championship in 1931 and 1932 and captured the doubles title with Hines in 1931, and who, while he never got to play in a conference tournament, was runner-up in the National Intercollegiate last summer.

Wilmer Hines, former national junior champion, who won the state doubles title with Grant in 1931 and with Harley Shuford in 1932, and who this year won the state and conference singles titles and paired with Lenoir Wright to capture both doubles titles.

Ed Yeomans, who was runner-up in the conference tournament in 1931, and Hinkley Hendlin, who paired with Yeomans to win the conference doubles title that year.

Asked to suggest reasons for this remarkable record, John Kenfield, who has coached the Tar Heels for the last five years, mentioned the large number of courts available here, the good weather which makes for long playing seasons, good material, and the hard and faithful work of the players. But never a word did he say about his own work in attracting players to Carolina by the record of his teams and his success in developing them.

Supply Of Reviewers Lacking As Conservative Policy Rules

Appearance of Anything to Criticize in Past Years Meant a Holiday; Some Reviews Were Even So Successful as to Drive Campus Dramatic Club Out of Existence.

Practically nobody wants to be a critic or reviewer of campus activities to-day. Until a few months ago various critical chairs were kicked about from person to person, with exceedingly capable individuals refusing to accept the posts. Bull sessions, not the pages of campus publications, seemed to be the only safe medium for criticism.

However, not so long ago, reviewing was a healthy practice on the campus. The system worked out so that everything and everybody reviewed everything and everybody else. The DAILY TAR HEEL maintained an extensive critical department which reviewed almost anything that turned up. Sunday morning almost invariably brought a broadside attack on the latest issue of the Carolina Magazine, while the critics apparently had a Roman holiday when the Buc-caneer appeared.

So bitter was the rivalry between the various publications a few years ago that frequently two or three stories condemning a sister paper would be run simultaneously. The Yackety-Buc-Tar-Mag competition last fall may be considered a civilized hangover from the days when each thought the other three heads of publications were morons and had no qualms at saying so.

One possible result of the publications war of yesteryear is the fact that in recent years the Yackety Yack has not been issued until the last TAR HEEL has appeared. It is only human for an editor to try to avoid seeing the work of a year torn to shreds in a two-column review.

Discretion, tact, and kindness were completely lacking in the old-time reviews. Rather the policy was to devise the greatest variety of methods for proclaiming a product the worst ever. Individuals, concepts, and issues met a like fate. Criticisms gradually degenerated into undisguised mud-slinging.

Out of Business

The dramatic organization on the campus came off poorest. The now defunct Wigwag and Mask, which sporadically used to offer a musical production, was to a certain extent driven from the campus by the bitterness of the critical attack.

On a certain November evening in 1927 this group produced an opus known as the "Kalif of Kavak." The following morning the TAR HEEL greeted it with the headline, "Kalif of Kavak is Grand Flop According to Reviewer."

The balance of the heading revealed that the book was atrocious as were the songs and that in some inexplicable way the Kalif forgot himself. The lead paragraph, which will give (Continued on page two)

MAGAZINE DEADLINE SET FOR NEXT MONDAY

Next Monday will be the final deadline for copy for the last issue of the Carolina Magazine this spring. Since the Magazine has to be issued a day early next week, Editor E. C. Daniel has asked that all contributors try to send in their copy by Sunday or on Monday at the latest.

Loan Fund Addition

The emergency student loan fund was recently augmented by a contribution of the Pattie Battle circle of the Episcopal church. The contribution of $68.61 represents the profits made from the sale of refreshments at the Junior-Senior dances last week-end.

ANNUAL AWARDS NIGHT SCHEDULED FOR NEXT WEEK

Harper Barnes Announces Date For Extra-Curricular Recognition as Thursday.

The annual awards night ceremonies, when students in extra-curricular activities are given campus recognition for their work, will take place Thursday night, May 25, at 8:30 o'clock in Memorial hall, it was announced yesterday by Harper Barnes, student body president.

Following a custom established last year, the old procedure in which each man walks to the platform to receive his award will not be used this year.

Names to Be Read

Instead, the list of the names of students who will be given charms and other awards will be read out, thus speeding up the procedure and eliminating a waste of time.

The student council is also planning to have a program of entertainment, of which Ed Martin will be in charge. It is intended that the program will consist of a series of skits.

Further Announcements

Arrangements for the program have not been completed as yet, but further announcements concerning the performers secured for the skits will be made in a later issue of the paper.

Among the leading awards to be announced Thursday night are: the Patterson Memorial award; the Deke trophy, which is given to the fraternity outstanding in scholarship and athletics; the Grail awards, which are given to the outstanding scholar-athlete in each of the four major sports, freshman athletics, and intramural competition.

GREENSBORO NEWSPAPER WINS NATIONAL HONORS

Greensboro high school's stellar bi-weekly newspaper, High Life, recently received national recognition by being placed on the All-American Honor Roll of secondary school publications. The judging contest was sponsored by the National Scholastic Press Association at the department of journalism in the University of Minnesota.

The High Life has consistently won state honors and has captured the Thomas Hume cup for journalistic excellence on several occasions.

DR. G. W. CARVER LECTURES ON HIS SCIENTIFIC WORK

Aged Negro Chemist Exhibits Variety of Products Derived From Peanuts.

Dr. George Washington Carver of Booker Washington Institute in Tuskegee, Alabama, for over an hour, held spell-bound an audience in Gerrard hall, as in simple words, he unfolded the story of his marvelous victories over nature in the interests of humanity. The celebrated scientist, clad in a threadbare grey coat and faded blue trousers, betraying by his outward appearance nothing of the greatness that the world has recognized in him, took no credit for his wonderful discoveries.

With heartfelt sincerity, and in humble reverence, he told of the reason for his work. As he expressed it, "I asked the Creator a simple question. 'What is the peanut? And to what use' is the peanut to be put? And the Creator answered unto me that it was to be used in the way that man found uses for it."

CLUB PRESENTS SECOND CHILD'S MUSICAL TODAY

Program Arranged by Mrs. McCall Starts at 3:30 O'clock in Hill Music Hall.

The second concert for children given under the auspices of the Chapel Hill community club will be presented in Hill Music hall this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. The program will be in charge of Mrs. F. B. McCall. Classes of Miss Huneycutt and Mrs. Mann in the Chapel Hill and Carrboro schools have formed a chorus which will sing Hayden's Toy Symphony accompanied by an orchestra under the direction of Professor Harold S. Dyer. A group of songs will be sung by the chorus and the audience.

Composition by Anne Bagby

A feature of the program will be the first performance of a composition by Anne Bagby, daughter of Dr. English Bagby, titled The Mayflower. This piece was originally written as a descriptive suite for piano and has been orchestrated by Herbert Hazelman. It will be conducted by Lamar Stringfield.

Other numbers on the program will be a bass violin solo, Danse from Suite pour Contrebasse et piano by Hazelman, played by John C. Murphy with the composer at the piano, and a twelfth century traditional melody Love Breathes its Blessing sung by the chorus. The concert is open to the public.

The Truth Must Be Told—

A University student visiting out of town on a recent week-end heard another student, speaking before a young people's church organization, correct several misconceptions of radicalism and atheism alleged by outsiders to exist in Chapel Hill. People in the provinces of North Carolina are many of them convinced that Chapel Hill is the center of godlessness, that half the professors are atheists and the other half bolsheviks, that sex license and vice in all forms are taught in the regular curriculum.

It is the duty of responsible students to correct these erroneous impressions. At every opportunity offered they should try to educate the people of their respective communities in the University's creed of tolerance and tell the undistorted truth of conditions in Chapel Hill. The University has nothing to fear from the truth but can suffer greatly in the eyes of the state from the sort of falsehoods told by David Clark and L. A. Tatum.

Already, the alumni association has organized a corps of students to induce the better class of high school and preparatory school graduates to come to the University. This same group of students should take the responsibility for seeing that the University is at no time misrepresented to the people of their home towns. Perhaps a permanent organization of University students, supplementing the work of the Y. M. C. A. deputations, should be organized to carry out a program of educating the state to a true perspective of the University.—E.C.D.

Where to Draw The Line?

The Daily Nebraskan is rightfully perturbed at the dismissal of a professor from Northwestern University for membership in certain liberal organizations and for the tenure of views not in accord with those of his employers. It is an old, old story. A short time ago a professor at State College lost his job for some such reason and even around 1850 a teacher here was dismissed for attacking the institution of slavery.

The question as to what a teacher may teach and keep his job is a ticklish one. It is important to the people of the state who do not want their young people's views subverted by dangerous long-haired radicals and the structure of their government endangered. The millionaires who hold the state legislatures in so tight a grip do not want any alteration in the system that permits them to fatten off the sweat of underpaid, overworked men, women and children. The crooked politicians, wallowing in their graft and corruption, do not long for their exposure or punishment by an outraged youth. The church in its now desperate struggle for survival will not tolerate attacks upon its most minor tenets no matter how absurd they may appear in the light of modern science.

The professor on the other hand does not wish to teach or condone errors or untruths. He desires to point out where our present institutions have fallen down so that a rising generation may build them up. A teacher worthy of the name is unwilling to continue day after day dryly recounting to his classes what someone else has written into a dull text book. He wishes to correct false points of view, to condemn evil, and attack inequitable conditions. The average professor dependent upon a meagre salary must often choke down protests that he dare not utter for fear of losing his scant livelihood. Here and there one arises whose indignation overcomes fear of starvation and he lays about him showing his students the whys and wherefores of existing wrongs. He is prompted by a desire to construct and not to tear down, and more than that by the faith that "ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free."

Neither side is unreasonable. The teacher feels a sincere call to instruct youth and demonstrate the truth as best he can. Such is the purpose of education. The officials and supporters of a state school particularly, figure that they are paying the teacher to work for them and while he is so doing he must do their bidding or go. An employee must do as he is told and a teacher can only teach what he believes. Hence a conflict which can never be settled and it will go on forever. Liberal men losing their jobs to save their consciences and crabbed conservatives raving and praying for the destruction of evil "radicals" attacking the very foundations of our wonderful civilization.—J.F.A.

Education Through Motion Pictures—

It has become the fashion in the United States to use our school system as an apology for our multitude of social errors and omissions. When there is an outburst of criticism against the weaknesses and failures of our banking system the apologists reply that we have a wonderful system of schools in the country; when millions walk the streets in search of work or food the apologists say that education is the hope of the nation; when a cabinet officer turns out to be utterly incompetent and dishonest the apologists retort that our American educative system is laying the foundation of a higher civilization.

We admit the great strides education has made during the last century; we admit its essentially hopeful character; we admit its importance in the life of the community. However, there are tremendous handicaps under which it labors. The full present-day possibilities of education have hardly been touched. For example, take the use of the motion picture as an instrument of enlightenment in the schools. The technical advances made in this field during the last several years have been tremendous. The popularity of this form of entertainment cannot be gainsaid—it is the premier recreation of the American people—we are in the habit of enjoying motion pictures. At present, the cost of producing a photoplay of the ordinary type would be prohibitive to a public school system such as ours. But evidence points to the fact that excellent full-length features can be made with a fraction of the ordinary expense. Shorter films would be of greater use to schools, however, and would offer an excellent medium for illustration of facts in biology, history, economics, physics and chemistry.

A highly organized plan of motion picture production for use in grammar, secondary schools and colleges (in collaboration with authorities in the various fields affected) would be extremely beneficial in the presentation of facts. A government with high social ideals would do well to divert some of its funds to the exploitation of this educative method.—V.J.L.

A Tribute to Dr. Carver—

Ranked among the first five living Negroes, the honorable Dr. George Washington Carver, who spoke here last night, is the possessor of a record which might well be the envy of his white brethren. During the years of the present century the old man has become one of America's leading research chemists and has been heralded far and wide as the patron saint of the lowly peanut.

The venerable colored doctor was born into slavery just prior to the Civil War, and has risen to his present position of influence and importance through sheer persistence. The story of his fight for education in the years following the war when feeling was exceedingly bitter stands as a greater testimonial to his force of character than the account of his subsequent success. His education was a long time in the making, broken intermittently by periods when he was forced to work at the most menial of tasks in order to earn money to continue. But today he holds a doctor's degree and is the head of the agricultural department at Tuskegee.

His greatest contribution to science comes from his work in the by-products of the peanut. From this one subject he has produced 285 separate products, each as apparently unrelated to the peanut as anything could be. Among them are milk, facial cream, shoe polish, hair tonic, soap, axle grease and a host of other everyday items. The accomplishments of this singular gentleman are by no means limited to the peanut, though it is upon this that his fame was made.

So much of an authority is he considered that he has twice appeared before a congressional investigating committee and his word has been accepted as law. He has received enormous offers to leave the Institute, yet such is the loyalty to the college and his race that he refuses to do so. Thomas Edison, Henry Ford and the late President Coolidge persuaded in vain.

We might praise him for his genius, his accomplishments, or his loyalty, yet we choose rather to take off our hats to the man.—V.C.R.

With Contemporaries

A Fraternity Trend

All trends in the upward direction are being observed with extraordinary great gratification, and now American college fraternities have opportunity to share in the general optimism by virtue of a definite upward trend that has been shown in the past few years in the scholastic achievement of their members.

According to a long-time survey conducted by the National Interfraternity Conference covering 153 educational institutions with an enrollment of nearly 70,000 fraternity men, there has been a steady improvement in the grades of fraternity men for the past five years.

To no discredit to the unfiliated students, but merely for the purpose of denoting improvement, the unorganized elements of the 153 campuses has been used as a basis of comparison, and the results of the survey show that in the five year period the general fraternity grade average progressed from a figure slightly under that of the general average to a point which is now considerably higher than the average of both fraternity and non-fraternity students.

The most outstanding advances of the past year were found to have been made at Brown University, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Rutgers, Columbia University, North Dakota State, Lafayette College, and the University of Wisconsin.

It is also interesting to note that the abolition of old-fashioned fraternity hazing in favor of intellectual and social encouragement has been the common thing among the national fraternities.

Presented in its general significance the survey taken by the Conference should debunk the old argument that modern fraternity life is detrimental to the academic welfare of the college student, and should aid in establishing a new parental attitude which would see the fraternity as a good and not an evil influence upon these sons who are subjected to their environment.

However, stripped of its general aspects, the survey has no significance to the individual fraternity aside from a certain sense of satisfaction in knowing that the large group of which it is a very small part is steadily forging ahead and is achieving a worthy goal in a laudable manner.

The fact remains that regardless of the general average of fraternities in 153 schools, the attainments of any one of those fraternities will vary correspondingly as that particular organization handles its particular problems.—Purdue Exponent.

DR. G. W. CARVER LECTURES ON HIS SCIENTIFIC WORK

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

To the Editor,

The DAILY TAR HEEL:

It goes against the grain with me to display the slightest vestige of Puritanism, even in self-defense, but in justice to Professors McKie and Olsen, I must protest against the implications of your reporter's version of the Debate Club banquet last Thursday evening. I refer specifically to the passage in which, with a calm disdain for the conventions of English grammar, your reporter thus disports himself:

"Professor Ericson let loose with a number of his choice stories. Unfortunately, due to the censoring of the Publications Union Board, the spicy jokes that followed can not be printed."

This would give the campus and the outside world the impression that the affair was a protracted smut-session, in which professors and students joined.

Actually, here are the two stories (by no means "unprintable") for which Mr. Olsen awarded me the red hat. The first had reference to the Iowa farmers being so down-at-the-heel that they spoke frequently of "the good times we used to have under Hoover." The second had to do with Kansas, where, rumor has it, times are improving, since one sees occasionally in that state a jack-rabbit with only one man chasing him.

These innocuous stories were followed by reports from the debaters who made the inter-collegiate trips this year, narratives lighted up by occasional references to co-eds and amorous adventures, but all harmless enough to pass muster with the Honorable Anthony Comstock, had his venerable shade been present.

Things took a serious tone when Dr. Meno Spann held forth in a splendid fifteen-minute analysis of Hitlerism, after which Professor Olsen added lustre to his laurels in one of the fine extempore speeches for which he is noted, this time a spirited discussion of the relation of the comic spirit to philosophical profundity. The banquet ended with off-hand speeches by different people, the customary love-fest and mutual complimenting.

I make this explanation lest in addition to the charge of "teaching communism, atheism, and free love," a certain University critic, inglorious, but by no means mute, should by way of this article add to his list the ancient one of "corrupting the youth."

E. E. ERICSON.

COUNCIL PLACES CHECK SENTENCE

Freshman Violator of Bad Check Rule Placed Under Sentence of Suspension at Meeting.

At the weekly meeting of the student council Monday night, a freshman charged with violation of the bad check rule was placed under a sentence of suspension from the University, the sentence to take effect if he fails to make good his checks by the next council meeting, or if he has another check returned for reasons within his control.

A petition from a member of last year's senior class appealing from a decree of last year's council denying his petition for reinstatement was again denied. This man was under a suspended sentence from the council and he was automatically suspended upon his violation of the conditions of the sentence.

Supply Of Reviewers Is Now Lacking

an idea of the tenor of the scorching review is as follows: "The Kalif is undoubtedly, indubitably a flop. As a campus organization the Wigwag and Masque appears to be almost as efficient as last year's staff of the Yackety Yack, and their result is quite as bad. . . . The best thing about the songs were the titles and they were rotten."

The Magazine fared little better. Also commanding a front page anonymous review, it suffered the worse fate being the shuttle-cock between conflicting personalities.

"Prometheus," whoever he may have been, wrote of the first issue of 1927: "The Carolina Magazine descended upon the campus a veritable shower of paper. Its long-delayed appearance is due, no doubt, to that scurvy humorous sheet, the Buccaneer, which got the printers in finished form first, and to the inexperience of the editor. . . . Compared to previous Magazines the reviewer recognizes this first issue only by name."

Example after example could be quoted to illustrate the good old practice of riding down an opposing publication. However, the policy finally exhausted itself by developing into nothing more than a scandal-column affair. Reviews of the Magazine and Buccaneer were eventually discontinued and those of the dramatic efforts of student groups were treated with a fair amount of sincerity and constructive thinking.

Dramatic Portrayal At Carolina Theatre

A dramatic tale of modern youth will be portrayed at the Carolina theatre today as Miriam Hopkins appears in the title role of "The Story of Temple Drake."

Jack LaRue, William Gargan, and William Collier, Jr., head the cast in the story written by William Faulkner.

Miss Hopkins is cast as a wild young aristocrat who finds herself in the hands of a gangster in a desolate hide-away. She is found by a man whose love she has turned down and this furnishes the climax for the action which follows.

Frosh State Title Is At Stake In Carolina-Duke Game Today

Tar Babies and Blue Imps Will Decide Championship in Game At Durham at 3:00 O'clock.

FROSH WILL CLOSE SEASON

McKeithan or Hutchison Will Pitch for Carolina Freshmen; Naktanis for Blue Imps.

Carolina's freshman baseball team is all set to hand Duke's Blue Imps their second loss in a row this afternoon when the two meet at Durham. The game will be called at 3:00 o'clock.

The Tar Babies will be closing their 1933 season, and a win for the Carolina team will put them in a tie with the Blue Imps for the Big Five frosh title, Carolina having two losses and Duke one. Duke lost their first game of the season Monday to State's first year team, Flythe holding the Blue Imps to only four hits.

The Tar Babies lost their first Big Five game early in the season to the Deacon freshmen. The game went ten innings with the Blue Imps getting a 5-4 victory.

Carolina's first year team will also be out to end a two-game losing streak which has been the longest they have had since the start of the season. To date the yearlings have eight wins against five defeats. Their wins include two games over State's frosh nine and a win each over the yearling teams from Davidson and Wake Forest.

McKeithan, right hander, is the likely pitching choice for Carolina, with a chance that Hutchison, a southpaw, will get the call. McKeithan reached his best form last week in holding the State freshmen to only four hits. The day before Mac had worked six innings against the Baby Deacons. Hutchison hurled his best game of the season.

BETAS AND CARR WIN RESPECTIVE CHAMPIONSHIPS

Chi Psi Loses 8-6; Lawyers Win From Best House, 16-5, to End League Competition.

Beta Theta Pi and Carr entered the final round of intramural baseball competition yesterday as the Betas won the fraternity league championship by virtue of an 8-6 win from Chi Psi and Carr trounced Best House, 16-5, to annex the dormitory title.

The Beta-Chi Psi contest was by far the better of the two. After neither team scored in the opening session, Bud Ziehn, stellar catcher for the Betas, opened the second stanza with a crashing home run far into left field. After two were out Henry Anderson singled and scored from first on a bingle by Tennille. Three hits and a Beta error combined to give Chi Psi a run in the last half of the inning.

The Betas scored again in the fourth when five hits and a Chi Psi error in the outfield gave the Betas four more tallies. Chi Psi added one in the fifth when Yewens singled, Kavanaugh walked, and Wilday hit a clean single.

Two more runs in the sixth ended the scoring for the winners, while Chi Psi scored once that inning to bring the count to 8-3. Neither team scored again until the last of the ninth.

Taking their last turn at bat Chi Psi went out to win the game and nearly succeeded. Reynolds, Holman, and Lawrence connected in succession, the latter for

MATMEN CARDED FOR SIX MATCHES

Wrestlers to Appear in Only Two Home Meets According To New 1934 Schedule.

Carolina's wrestling team has arranged six matches on its 1934 schedule. Only two of the six are on the card for the Tin Can in Chapel Hill.

Duke, defeated by the Tar Heel wrestlers last winter, are not on the schedule as yet. A match will probably be carded with the Blue Devils, however, before the season gets underway.

Navy has been added and will be met by the matmen February 24 at the cadet school. The only home contests are with N. C. State, January 13, and W. and L., February 3.

Captain Percy Idol, the only Southern conference title winner, will be lost by graduation. However several fine wrestlers will come up from last year's freshman team, the most constant winners being Miller, Shipman, and Ranson. Clarke Mathewson has been elected to lead next season's team.

The schedule follows:

Jan. 13—N. C. State, here.

Jan. 20—V. P. I., there.

Feb. 3—W. and L., here.

Feb. 10—V. M. I., there.

Feb. 16—Davidson, there.

Feb. 24—Navy, there.

BASEBALL FINALS SET FOR FRIDAY

Durham and Greensboro Clash Here for State Class A Baseball Championship.

Durham and Greensboro high schools will clash here Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock for the class A baseball championship of the state's high schools.

Charlotte high school beat Durham for the title last year, and this year's game will mark the first time since the class A division was formed four years ago that the Queen City team has not been to the finals in football, basketball, or baseball.

Greensboro won its three-game series from Gastonia for the western championship. The Gate City team won the first game at Greensboro 7-1, lost the second at Gastonia 14-3, and took the deciding game there last Saturday 15-3.

Greensboro had previously come off with top honors in the Greensboro-High Point-Winston-Salem conference, while Gastonia had taken its series from Charlotte.

Durham finished in top position in the eastern conference standings, winning all its games except for one loss to Rocky Mount's Blackbirds.

Tennis Squad to Meet

All members of both varsity and freshman tennis squads are requested to attend an important meeting at Coach Kenfield's office at Emerson field at 2:00 today.

Notice to Athletes

Sergeant Keller requests that all athletic equipment be turned in at his office as soon as possible. The offices will be open daily from 9:00 until 6:00 o'clock.

Track Picture

Coaches Fetzner and Ranson request that the varsity track team report at Emerson field at 4:45 o'clock for group picture. Members are asked to wear their uniforms.

Sure Bets To Place In Conference Meet Saturday

These six men are sure to count points in the coming track gathering at Duke. Brownlee will figure in the sprints, the low hurdles, and the mile relay. Stafford will fight it out against Turner in the high jump. This Turner won the indoor high jump with a new record and also heaves the discus and the javelin. He may score in each of these also. Rex is the shot and discus man from State. He should place second or third in the shot. Fulmer will lead the broad jumpers and the 440ers. Finklestein should figure in both the hurdle races, probably third in each.

All these men, with the exception of Stafford, took part in the conference indoor games here in March and have continued their impressive work in outdoor meets.

TAR HEEL ENTRY LIST ANNOUNCED FOR DIXIE MEET

Coach Fetzner Gives Out Carolina List for Conference Meet Friday and Saturday.

With only two more days to work in preparation for the Southern conference track and field games which will be run off Friday and Saturday in the Duke stadium, Coach Bob Fetzner announced yesterday afternoon the complete list of the Carolina entrants in the Dixie meet.

The men are: sprints, Childers, Gunter, Alexander, and C. Hubbard; 880, Williamson, Donnell, Kimrey, and Marsden; mile, McRae, Williamson, Waldrop, Cordle, Jensen; 2 mile, R. Hubbard, L. Sullivan, H. Sullivan, McRae, and Waldrop; hurdles, Abernethy, Hawthorne, Glenn, and Moore; pole vault, Smith, Jackson, and McDonald; high jump, Stafford, Reid, and Hamlet; broad jump, Childers, Higby, C. Hubbard, and Alexander; 440, Fox, Pruden, Marsden, and Bost; shot, Mullis and Hodges; discus, Mullis and Schmukler; javelin throw, LeGore, Chandler, Armfield, and mile relay, Bost, Marsden, Pruden, Fox, Williamson, Stafford, Gunter, Childers, Abernethy,

JUPITER PLUVIUS HALTS CAROLINA AT COLLEGE PARK

Tar Heels Meet Navy Today at Annapolis; Griffith Slated to Oppose Davenport.

Carolina's fast traveling ball club was held up by Jupiter Pluvius yesterday in College Park and the game with Maryland was called off. The Tar Heels trip over to Annapolis today and encounter the Middies.

The game today closes the second northern invasion of Coach Hearn's men and should Carolina whip the sailors their two trips northward will have been complete successes. V. P. L., V. M. I., and Washington and Lee were beaten earlier in the season, and Georgetown took the count Monday. The first game with Virginia was rained out in Charlottesville and the Maryland deluge caused the cancellation of another game.

Carolina was counting on handing the Old Liners another defeat and thereby establishing themselves as undisputed leaders in the conference. State and the Tar Heels are tied now with the same number of wins and losses. The Carolina-State game in Raleigh Saturday will decide the conference champion.

Big Joe Griffith is slated to hurl today for Carolina against Davenport, star Navy chucker. Griffith has rested since his victory over Duke last Saturday and should be set for the Middies. Davenport turned in a no-hit performance in his last mound duty for Navy.

The Tar Heels return tomorrow and begin work for their all-important battle with State. The Wolfpack eked out a 7-6 win in the first game of the annual series.

Originally the composer wrote scores for the entire dialogue of the play, with all actors singing their lines in an operatic effect but the vocal music was dropped early. Symphonic interludes written to be played between acts are, with the Overture, all that remain of Mendelssohn's original accompaniments. Four out of six parts will be rendered by the ensemble.

After the third act, which closes with the two pairs of lovers sleeping in a forest, Nocturne is presented, quiet and dreamy, and including the well known French horn solo. The Wedding March, to which newlyweds still trip from the altar, appears between the fourth act, in which the pairs of lovers have been reconciled, and the last act, when preparations are being made for a grand mass wedding.

The Overture was composed for Midsummer Night's Dream by Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy at the age of 17, since the play had been his favorite from childhood. First written as a piano duet, it was afterwards scored for orchestra and the incidental music was completed 17 years later. Soft, dreamy strains at the opening and conclusion of the Overture represent the falling into and awakening from the midsummer night's dream.

HILLSIDE MEETING PLANNED SUNDAY

"Y" Cabinets Will Gather for Annual Induction of Officers in Forest Theatre.

The annual hillside meeting of the Y. M. C. A. cabinets will take place next Sunday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in the Forest theatre. This will be the last meeting of the cabinets of the year and all members and officers are to attend.

The outgoing officers will give their annual report and the installation of the new officers will be conducted. The retiring officers are: Jesse Parker, Mark Lynch, Van Webb, Jimmy Craig-hill, Bill McKee, Jim Steere, Ike Minor, R. M. McMillan, Claude Freeman, Ed Martin, Simmons Patterson, and Henry Emerson.

New Officers

The new officers are: Jesse Greer, B. S. Smith, Russell Mickle, Billy Yandell, John Acee, Bill Minor, J. D. Winslow, and Jack Pool. A member of the University faculty will speak to the group.

Each year the hillside meeting is conducted for the purpose of rounding out the program for the old year and preparing plans for the new year.

In case of rain the meeting will take place in the hall of the Di senate.

Tar Heel Tennis Stars Establish Fine Records

(Continued from first page) idea of the type of man Kenfield is—quiet, modest, affable, but an untiring worker. His players give him the best they have.

Kenfield is a mild-mannered individual, but is always firm in matters of discipline. It is recalled that he benched North Carolina's No. 1 player in 1930 on the eve of the state tournament.

Although a small man, five feet six and nearing 40, Kenfield is still an adept hand with the racquet and takes to the court with his boys regularly, teaching by precept as well as by word. By virtue largely of his uncanny shots and placements and field generalship he can still hold his own with his best players.

Kenfield didn't win any major tournaments during his days of competition, his nearest approach being as doubles semi-finalist in the National Clay-courts championship of 1920, but has followed the game as tennis pro since he was a young man. He was a pro at the Lakeshore Country Club, Glen-coe, Ill., for six years before coming to North Carolina in 1928. He still spends his summers there.

TAR BABY GOLF TEAM TO MEET DUKE FRESHMEN

Carolina Freshmen Seek Revenge in Play With Duke on Hope Valley Course Today.

Carolina's freshman golf team will meet the Duke yearlings in a return match this afternoon at 2:00 o'clock over the Hope Valley course. The Tar Babies are seeking revenge for the 11-7 defeat they suffered against the young Blue Devils earlier in the season.

In the singles matches Fulen-wider of Carolina will meet Perry, Duke player and Southern Interscholastic champion last year. In the No. 2 singles match Harris of the Tar Heels will oppose Grey. Valk, Carolina's No. 3 man, will fight it out with Budd of Duke. The No. 4 singles match finds Hudson, Carolina, pitted against Reavis of the Blue Devils.

In the foursomes matches Fulenwider and Harris will face Perry and Grey, while Valk and Hudson take on Reavis and Budd. Although the yearlings were beaten earlier in the season by the Devils, they are favored to take the match today as they are all shooting a much better brand of golf now than they were in the earlier part of the season.

Those who were admitted for work in chemistry are: William H. Baskerville, Robert H. Belcher, Daniel Brawley, James M. Early, Granvil C. Kyker, Joseph N. LeConte, and Laura C. Thomas. Others were Ernest S. Barr, physics, George W. Nicholson, mathematics, Joshua P. Reynolds, zoology, Mary Linda Vardeil, botany, and Blanche Zorn, psychology.

The society of Sigma Xi was founded at Cornell University in 1886 by a group of workers in engineering science. It has now become enlarged and has broadened to represent the general ideals of higher scholarships, especially research, in all branches of science. There are at present 68 chapters and 29 Sigma Xi clubs.

The officers of the North Carolina chapter for this year are Alvin S. Wheeler, president; Edward T. Browne, vice-president; Ernest L. Mackie, secretary-treasurer; John N. Couch and A. McLaren White, councilors.

The time schedule for the preliminaries Friday are as follows: field events, 2:30 o'clock while the running and hurdle prelims start at 3:00 o'clock; the finals Saturday, in the field events, 1:30 o'clock while the mile will start the finals in the running events at 2:00 o'clock. The meet will be terminated by the mile relay at 3:40 o'clock.

The millionaire host, Duke, has planned to hoist the flags of the winning schools in each event a la Olympic style. This is just a sample of the extensive plans that the Methodists are fostering in their preparations for the gigantic outdoor track and field carnival. This meet will be the eleventh annual meet and the first under new Southern conference officiating.

Frosh Tennis Team Plays

The freshman tennis team will meet the team from Devitt school, Washington, D. C., today at 3:00 o'clock here.

SCHOOL LINKMEN MATCHED FRIDAY FOR STATE TITLE

Eleven High Schools Compete, on Hope Valley Links in Second Interscholastic Meet.

Eleven schools have entered teams in the second annual golf tournaments for North Carolina high schools to take place over the nearby Hope Valley course Friday morning and afternoon. Winston-Salem High, which won both individual and team honors last year, heads the field. The other entries are Greenville, Charlotte, Henderson, Raleigh, High Point, Durham, Greensboro, Fayetteville, Scotland Neck, and Rocky Mount.

There will be 18 holes of medal play in the morning and 18 more in the afternoon, deciding both individual and team championships.

Contestants are to meet with John F. Kenfield, University golf coach, at the Y. M. C. A. building here tomorrow night at 7:00 o'clock, and the tournament will get underway promptly at 9:00 o'clock Friday morning.

A triple, scoring two runs. After two had been retired Kavanagh reached first on an infield miscue and Lawrence scored on the play. Wilday fled out to end the game.

Gayle Rogers, Chi Psi pitcher, suffered his first defeat of the year. However, he fanned seven men and issued no passes, while Henry Anderson, his opponent on the mound, struck out only three men and walked three.

Best House Trounced

Carr went right to work in the first frame and scored five runs on five hits and a walk. The lawyers had their eyes on the ball throughout the early innings and piled up a lead of 11-0 before Best House scored its first run in the fifth frame.

Bill Anglin was in good form and allowed the Best House boys only two hits until the fifth. In this frame Bryan singled and advanced and scored on a long fly.

Carr finished up its scoring in the fifth when it added five runs to its total. Best House added a run in the sixth and got three in the ninth when Anglin was taking things easy. Carr failed to score after the fifth and contented itself with coasting to an easy win without over-exerting itself.

Herman Snyder, who started on the mound for Best House, was no match for the slugging lawyers, who reached him for eight hits and six runs before he was relieved by Jim Bryan in the third. Bryan met with slightly better success, allowing eight more hits during the game. He was, however, scored on for ten runs.

Anglin had all the best of the pitchers' side of things, fanning eight, allowing only eight hits, and walking no one. Each Best House hurler issued two passes and neither succeeded in striking out a Carr batsman.

TENNIS RESULTS

Sigma Chi advanced another step toward entering a tie for fraternity league tennis honors when it trounced Tau Epsilon Phi, 3-0. Harlee won from Sugarman, 5-1, 5-2, and Lacy downed Patterson, 5-2, 5-2, in singles while the doubles went to Sigma Chi uncontested.

Sigma Phi Epsilon defeated Phi Gamma Delta, 2-1. M. Seawell beat Hicks, 5-4, 5-1, for the winners, while Fisher gained the losers' lone point, beating A. Seawell, 5-2, 5-2. The doubles went to the S. P. E. tandem, 1-5,

LAXTON WINNER OF GOLF CROWN

Sophomore Star Defeats Cramer Two Up for Conference Individual Championship.

Erwin Laxton, Carolina's sophomore star, won the individual golf championship of the Southern conference yesterday at the Sedgefield country club. Laxton defeated Carl Cramer, teammate and classmate, two up.

Both men turned in cards of 73 for the final rounds, but Laxton had the better of Cramer on two holes. Both advanced to the finals by virtue of spectacular play in the morning rounds. Laxton shot a blazing 70 to defeat Bayard Storm, Duke sensation, one up on the 18 hole.

In his semi-final match, Cramer bested Roger Peacock, Duke leader, two up.

Duke won the team championship last Saturday with an aggregate score of 611 to Carolina's 637. The Tar Heels were last year's champions in both the team and individual events. Joe Adams won the individual title last spring at Athens.

Frosh State Title At Stake In Game Today

Naktenis, a left hander, will likely work against Carolina. The Blue Imp portsideer went the full route in the first Tar Baby-Blue Imp battle. There is a chance that Connie Mack, Jr., will see action on the mound for Duke.

Davidson Defeats Deacons

The Davidson Wildcats continued their march to the Big Five title by dropping Wake Forest, 2-1, at Davidson yesterday. The Wildcats meet Duke there today in their third straight Big Five game of the week. Bailey is slated to hurl against Bobby Coombs.

5-2, 5-2.
A. T. O. defeated D. K. E., 3-0. Stimson beat Parsons, 4-5, 5-3, 5-1, and Smith drubbed Morris, 5-1, 5-1. The doubles went to A. T. O. by default.

Schedule

Today will be a day of rest for the league-leading baseball teams as they prepare for the campus championship game tomorrow. Today's tennis card follows:

3:30—(1) Everett vs. Grimes, Sigma Phi Sigma vs. S. A. E.; 4:30—(1) Zeta Beta Tau vs. Phi Delta Theta, (2) Pi Kappa Phi vs. Kappa Alpha, (3) Phi Kappa Sigma vs. Phi Sigma Kappa.

Auto Purchaser Buys Two Fords With Bad Notes

Stranger Calling Himself C. L. Bailill Disappears After Taking Dealers for Ride.

Local police are searching for a person calling himself C. L. Bailill, who bought a pair of Ford cars in Hillsboro and Chapel Hill over the week-end, paid for them with worthless checks, and disappeared Sunday.

Bailill's car-buying activities began Saturday morning when he appeared at the Ford Motor Company in Hillsboro, and paid for a car with a check on a Durham bank. He stated that he was connected with the United States Geological Survey and employed in reconstruction work near Hillsboro.

A little later, he was back with the news that he had wrecked the car, and that he would like to have it repaired so that he might make a present of it to his wife. Repair work was begun and services were paid for with another check.

Sunday morning he had a salesman bring him to Chapel Hill where he purchased another car from the Strowd Motor Company, gave a check for $385, and disappeared. He has not been seen since. The total amount of the checks issued was said by police to be approximately $700.

The check given Strowd Motor Co. was returned yesterday morning. Police said they were working on several clues.

Erratum

Due to a misunderstanding on the part of the reporter translating the telegram received by telephone from Durham Monday night, a mistaken report concerning the Carolina-Georgetown game was printed yesterday. Matheson, Zaiser, and Vick got three hits instead of three homers apiece.

DRAMA PRESENTS MOST TALENTED CAMPUS ACTORS

Cast of Forest Production Is Drawn From Students and Members of Faculty.

A cast composed of the outstanding dramatic talent on the campus will perform in the 14th Playmaker Forest theatre production Friday and Saturday, A Midsummer Night's Dream, directed by Professor F. H. Koch.

The characters include Playmakers, members of the Playmakers staff and of the French and German faculties. The variety is made complete by children of the village who accompany Titanis and Oberon, performing fairy dances directed by Phoebe Barr.

Spann and Holmes

The humorous characters of two rustic clowns are taken by Dr. Urban T. Holmes and Dr. Meno Spann. Dr. Holmes appears as "Bully" Bottom, the weaver, who swaggers through the play with an ass' head and who takes the part of the dotting Pyramus in the farcical skit of Pyramus and Thisbe. Dr. Spann, as Snug, the joiner, plays the part of a lion in the same skit, which is presented for diversion by a group of clownish laborers.

Appearing in a former Forest theatre production in 1928, Shakespeare's The Tempest, Dr. Holmes played the part of Shakespeare's "missing link" character, Caliban, as which he was compelled to enter upon the stage with a dead fish in his mouth.

Two other characters in A Midsummer Night's Dream appear. (Continued on last page)

BELL RINGERS TO MEET PATTERSON

University Carillonneur Will Organize Guild to Have Charge of Memorial Chimes.

Students interested in learning to play the Morehead-Patterson memorial chimes, and those who have played the carillon during the past year, are asked to meet Walter B. Patterson at the bell tower on Tuesdays, Thursdays, or Saturdays at 5:00 o'clock in the afternoon.

The purpose of these meetings is to prepare for registration in the Guild of Bell Ringers and to select members who will be on the ringing staff next fall.

Organization

The organization consists of several faculty members who ring occasionally; the master ringer, whose duty is to supervise the playing and to instruct those who wish to learn; the journeymen ringers who have contributed three melodies adapted and transposed to suit the chimes; and apprentices, who are receiving instruction and who are in the process of transposing selections to be played on the chimes.

The only prerequisite for candidates is a knowledge of note valuation and the ability to read easy passages at sight. Easy transposition will be taught those interested, and as soon as the apprentices have adapted three melodies they will be entered as journeymen and will be permitted to perform at regular times during the year.

Miss Beale To Address Library School Today

Miss Marjorie Beale, secretary and director of the North Carolina Library commission, will speak at a meeting of the library school today at 12:00 o'clock.

Miss Beale will lecture upon the state library extension agencies. Since assuming her duties September 1, 1930, she reports that 44,377 requests for books were filled by the end of the year 1932, and in addition to this, that the traveling library has at the same time served 1,005 places in the state and sustained a total circulation of 170,775 books.

COMPLETE PLANS ANNOUNCED FOR CLASS REUNIONS

Alumni Headquarters Will Be Established in Graham Memorial Sunday, June 4.

The complete program has been announced for the annual class reunion of Carolina alumni, for which graduates from the late 1870's to the class of 1932 will gather here June 5.

Alumni headquarters will be established Sunday, June 4, in Graham Memorial, where rooms will be assigned to visiting graduates. The reunion program begins Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock with a reminiscence symposium, presided over by Judge Francis D. Winston in Gerrard hall, when a roll call by classes will be made.

Alumni Luncheon

At 1:00 o'clock an alumni luncheon will be given in Swain hall, for which Judge John J. Parker, president of the University Alumni association, is to be toastmaster. Together with alumni, members of the faculty and all seniors are urged to attend the luncheon, since the formal installation of the class of 1933 into the Alumni association will be conducted. There will be a charge of 75 cents for the luncheon.

At 3:00 o'clock the Carolina Playmakers will present a program for alumni in the Playmakers theatre. This will be followed by a reception for seniors and their parents by President and Mrs. Frank Graham. (Continued on last page)

TROOP SCHOOL MEETS TONIGHT IN DAVIE HALL

The 316th field artillery troop school will meet in Davie hall tonight at 7:30 o'clock. All reserve officers and interested civilians are urged to attend meetings, which are devoted to study and instructions in the army extension courses. Tonight's class will be the final session of the school year.

Supper of Committee

The permanent executive committee of the class of 1933, appointments to which were announced Monday, will gather at a supper meeting tonight at 6:30 o'clock in Graham Memorial.

Editorial Board Meeting

The editorial board of the DAILY TAR HEEL will meet tonight at 7:00 o'clock in the office of the paper in Graham Memorial. Tonight's meeting will be the last gathering of the group for the year.

Killinger Finds Relationship With Prominent Nazi Leader

Letter From Close Friend of Hitler Declares His People Are Making Strenuous Effort to Rid Themselves of Poison That Has Collected in Its System Since World War.

Some months ago George Killinger, instructor in psychology, donned a snappy polo coat and strode into his laboratory. The derision that greeted him from the students was equalled only by that of his colleagues. Among the wise-cracks passed later was, "He looked like a German nobleman in that get-up."

Now Killinger has the laugh on the anonymous author of that breezy remark. For, polo coat or no polo coat, waxed moustaches or not, he is related to German nobility. Of course, he has but recently had occasion to make public his lineage, but that hardly renders thinner his noble blood.

Scientific Curiosity

It was the natural curiosity of a scientist that led Killinger to his discovery. Struck by the resemblance between his own name and that of an influential nobleman in the Nazi party, he wrote to a certain Manfred von Killinger of Dresden inquiring whether or not there existed a relationship.

There was indeed a common ancestry. The coat-of-arms of the American Killinger corresponded in its main features with that of a certain Johann Melchior Killinger, who in 1763 had nobility conferred upon him by Charles VII of Austria. Thereafter, the family enjoyed a steady, if unspectacular rise, until at the present date von Killinger is a name respected in the Nazi organization.

Manfred von Killinger descendant of Johann, is now "Reichskommissar fur das Land Sachsen," which simply means that he is the commissioner for the state in the province of Saxony.

Carver Abandons Study Of Peanut To Devote Efforts In Other Fields

Negro Scientist Has Won Many Victories Over Nature in His Services to Humanity; Will Spend Remaining Days in Endeavor to Extract New Things for Man.

Turning aside now in his old age from scientific study of the peanut, Dr. George Washington Carver, director of the department of agricultural research at Washington Institute, at Tuskegee, will spend the remainder of his days in other fields and in the development of other products. "No," he said in answer to a query as to whether he would further investigate the resources of the nut he has made great, "I don't think I'll ever go back to it. There is so much work for me to do and so short a while in which to do it that I shall have to leave that to others."

His shoulders were stooped and his hand shook as he spoke to the reporter in his high, nervous voice Tuesday night following his lecture here. The little old man seemed tired and somewhat out of patience with all the show and attention from which he had but a moment before escaped. There was nothing about him to suggest the greatness which is his. He was loath to talk of himself and only through questions concerning his work would he reveal himself.

The Negro scientist has no interest in the commercial aspects of his discoveries except for a small amount to enable him to carry on his investigations into

Famous Architect To Lecture Tonight

Albert Simons, well-known architect of Charleston, S. C., will appear in 111 Murphey hall tonight at 8:00 o'clock in an illustrated lecture on "Tendencies of Modern American Architecture."

The Fine Arts committee of the University is sponsoring the program, which is brought here under the auspices of the American Institute of Architects.

The speaker will acquaint the audience with the development of the American style of architecture and with the aid of illustrations show the trends of modern art in this field.

BOARD WORKS ON STUDENT REPORT OF EXPENDITURES

Annual Report by Auditors Under Sherrill Nears Completion for Release.

The audit board report which has been in the process of preparation for the past several weeks is about completed and will be ready for release the early part of next week. This report is compiled under the direction of R. H. Sherrill, auditor, and the student Audit Board.

The organizations in this report are divided into two groups: for one group the fiscal year ending on April 30; the second group runs on the basis of the school year. Those organizations in the first group are freshman, sophomore, junior, and senior classes, the electrical, civil, mechanical, and chemical engineering societies, the medical society, the law association, the pharmacy association, woman's association, student government, and the debate council. Among those organizations in the second group are Graham Memorial, athletic association, student entertainment, and the Publications Union board.

The Student Audit Board consists of two faculty members, Dean Bradshaw and R. H. Sherrill, and three student members, Haywood Weeks, Claiborn Carr and Francis Anderson.

CAIN SOCIETY MEETS TONIGHT IN PHILLIPS

The William Cain society, the University chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers, will convene tonight at 7:30 o'clock in room 319 Phillips hall.

Election of officers for next year will take place. A discussion will also take place on the rotation of the faculty sponsor and contact man. Final plans for the senior trip will be announced.

Engineers to Meet

The American Institute of Chemical Engineers will meet next Tuesday, May 23, as the meeting this Tuesday was postponed. At this time, the annual reward in chemical engineering will be announced.

Nine in Infirmary

The following were confined in the infirmary yesterday: E. C. Bodenheimer, W. J. Jervay, J. R. McIner, James Mallonee, G. H. Crane, H. A. Brooke, Sybille Berwanger, E. B. Kahn, W. T. Heady.

EDDIE DUCHIN TO PLAY FOR FINAL DANCES OF YEAR

Commencement Dances Presented by German Club to Be Presented June 6, 7, 8.

Eddie Duchin's famous broadcasting and recording orchestra has been signed to furnish the music for the final commencement dances of the German club. The annual series of dances will be given this year in the Tin Can Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, June 6-8.

This will be the first appearance of the orchestra on this campus, but to radio listeners it is already well known. Duchin has been a regular broadcaster over the Columbia network for some time and may be heard several nights each week over WABC and associated stations. The orchestra has also made many popular phonograph records for leading companies.

Duchin's well-known orchestra is at the present located at the Central Park Casino in New York City. They have been playing an extended engagement there since September, 1931, and it is from there that the orchestra does most of its radio broadcasting.

At Inaugural

The band was among those chosen to play for the recent presidential inaugural ball in Washington, where it is said to have made quite a favorable impression. University students who attended the ball report that Duchin had fully as many followers as the Lombardos or any of the other popular bands there.

Eddie is recognized by many dance fans as one of the outstanding. (Continued on page two)

SENIORS TO MEET FACULTY MARSHAL

Candidates for Degrees to Be Informed as to Commencement Procession.

All candidates for degrees are asked to meet with Dr. Charles S. Mangum, faculty commencement marshal, in Gerrard hall this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock to receive instructions pertaining to the academic parade on graduation night.

The parade will precede the graduation ceremonies, which, following a precedent set last year, will take place in Kenan stadium in the evening.

Candidates will assemble for the procession at 6:15 o'clock and form columns of two's on the walk leading from the Playmakers theatre by Steele, Saunders, and Murphey toward the stadium. The head of the parade will be in front of Bingham hall.

Liberal Arts Leads

At the head of the procession will be candidates for A. B. degrees, with the other divisions in the order to be announced in last Tuesday's paper.

The faculty, trustees, and alumni will assemble and form a column at the south entrance of South building.

Final instructions concerning the procedure at the stadium will be given by Dr. Mangum this afternoon. Candidates are urged to cooperate in order to prevent delay, confusion, and possible personal embarrassment.

Shrubbery Next—

A new walk has been built on the campus; the grass is at last cut short enough for passers-by to look over the top, but some of the older walks bordered with shrubbery are being left in a poor condition.

On the west side of Phillips hall, the south side of Venable hall, the northwest corner of Peabody hall, and several other places on the campus, the shrubbery which grows beside the walks has so overgrown its original position that it obstructs the way of everyone following them on the way to classes.

These bushes seemingly have not been pruned for some time, and are obviously in need of some sort of care. Not only have they lost all symmetrical shape, but in their exceeding growth they make it an effort for students to pass by on the paths beside which they are planted. Especially is this inconvenience irksome after a rain when the bushes are covered with droplets of rain which persist in falling down one's back or ruining one's clothes.

With men at work all over the campus cutting the grass, there should be little extra work placed upon their shoulders if they were to trim these bushes. To do this now would cause very little inconvenience to them compared with the improvement which would be made upon the looks of the campus, and also no one would be hindered in his way to classes or upon some other errand.—F.P.G.

Armageddon

For the third time since last September students' minds begin to be diverted towards the great final arraignment known as examinations, and those who hitherto have been idle now gird themselves round about with such knowledge as can be gained in a few crowded weeks, and march confidently forth to battle, to defend the intellectual honor of the family name.

Never has an examination period approached without being preceded by the curses and maledictions of those who believe the system to be wrong, and yet, the last word has not been said by the earnest members of the opposition. The system of examinations, as used here, and at most of the other institutions of higher learning, is little more than a series of battles between student and instructor. The one having the most ingenuity wins. It is, in most cases, true that the instructor does not make it his expressed purpose to "flunk" the unhappy pupil, but neither does our system encourage and foster in him those qualities and habits which will mean most to him as a citizen of the future. Rather, it is apt to kill all natural proclivities towards real scholarship and research which the student might have.

In order to do well on examinations, a student must give back to his instructor those facts and opinions which, for the quarter, have been thrown at him. It is not what he thinks, or has found to be true elsewhere, that is desired, but what the august professor has said to be true. The student must be a parrot; a sounding board if he is to cope successfully with his adversary. That man or woman who has opinions and expresses them is doomed under the existing order. It is recognized that some criterion for appraisal of the student is necessary, and is generally conceded that the one now in use is defective, but to the master mind of the future will fall the task of compounding a scientific and equitable substitute for the time-worn one now in use.—W.A.S.

Together We Stand

President Roosevelt's announcement of his foreign policy brings one more ray of hope to those who are anxious to see world leaders take some definite action toward disarmament. Signed simply "Franklin D. Roosevelt" and sealed without the usual stilted formality of a diplomatic message, the President's announcement went directly to the heads of the major foreign powers, its words ringing out a plea for disarmament, for abandonment of imperialistic designs and aggressive weapons of warfare.

But across this message of peace falls the shadow of a Germany fast in the grip of Hitler and his selfish "nationalism." For in spite of the limitations of the Versailles treaty, in spite of the German envoy's acquiescence to Roosevelt's policy, the land of the Nazi constitutes a real menace to the safety of nations. Although Hitler may proclaim to his Reichstag intentions of peace, they will be intentions of peace in name only.

For Germany, under the spell of Hitler, once more seeks a place in the sun. The means is to be a nationalism that is at once reactionary and destructive to the forces that should bring the nation up from the depths of defeat to an eminence which is suitable to the true ability of the German people. And Germany, through this abnormal nationalism, has assumed the position that she is accountable only to herself and that she is sufficient only to herself.

But there are other nations in this complex world of ours, and Germany has set her face against every progressive ideal that is a result of their civilizations. Any nation so dedicated cannot long endure.—A.T.D.

Germany's Plight?

There are great changes taking place in Germany. Adolf Hitler, Nazi leader, has become chancellor, and assumed the powers of virtual dictatorship, having overwhelmed the staid von Hindenburg by force of numbers. Now the world awaits his next move, fearing for the safety of his country.

His first action was a mixture of horrible brutality, bigotry, and ignorance. He boycotted Jews and Jewish products, placed a ban on the great works of Jewish authors, ordered to be burned the masterpieces of German literature that were written by Jews. The greatest living scientist, a Jew, left the country, and renounced his German citizenship in loathing and disgust for this man. But Herr Hitler was not through.

Still his decrees came. Today there is the tramp of marching feet on the banks of the Rhine. German helmets are to be seen again, and by the orders of Adolf Hitler, the munitions factories are at work once more. Germany is preparing to arm as she has never been armed since the hectic days of 1914. The cries of the anguished world for peace go unheard amid the din. The trembling voices of the men fearful of another war greater than any we have ever seen or imagined are unheeded. And through it all, stands the figure of Adolf Hitler, arm upraised in proud salute, the sign of the swastika emblazoned upon his sleeve.

But we have confidence in the world. We will not believe that Germany is blind, and that German mothers will let their sons fall upon the field of bigotry, and the maniacal desire for advancement of one man. We believe that his power will fall as quickly as it rose, and that in the near future, we will see a new, and a better Germany, striving for greater heights, in a period of sound economic reconstruction. We hope to see a sane Germany, guided by wisdom, led by experience, and looking forward to a universal and lasting peace.—W.H.W.

With Contemporaries

Home and Get Your Scanties...

Censorship of the immoral is a defense mechanism used conveniently by an immoral public to convince itself that it is not immoral. The public of today enjoys the obscene; but it enjoys a great deal more the censoring of the obscene. Because, with censorship comes the particularly delightful pillar-of-the-church and protector-against-evil sensation.

When we see the effects of censorship upon our civilization, we are forced much against our will to believe that we are existing in an age of insipidity. The censors have banned everything that smacks of immorality and the answer of modern producers to a public which is willing to pay for the obscene is the toning down of immorality to puerile innocuousness.

Let us take for example certain of our popular modern songs. "You go home and get your scanties; I'll go home and get my panties," and "—no cute little ones to spank. What's to do about it, let's turn out the lights and go to sleep."

Perfectly harmless, of course, but personally we prefer frank vulgarity of the "belly-laugh" type to sexy lingo about panties and scanties.

As a matter of fact, this direct reference to underclothing called forth quite a string of protests from certain radio listeners and the outcome was that "scanties and panties" were banned forever from the air and "closes and these-and-thoses" a much less familiar term, we must admit, was substituted.

One could continue indefinitely citing examples of peculiarity in our defense mechanism moral code. It is considered taboo, for instance, for the most degenerate of tabloid newspapers to print "hell" and "damn." "H—l" and "d—n" is the approved and completely moral form. However, the same newspaper can print a filthy account of the "attacking of a nude woman" and spare none of the horrible details. In fact, the more horrible details, the more the paper's sales increase.

And the situation will probably continue until someone gets the idea of censoring the censors.—Michigan Daily.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

Editor,
The DAILY TAR HEEL.

Dear Sir:
The Debate Banquet write-up was well-intentioned and even over-complimentary. It was too bad that it contained the totally false statement that Professor Ericson and others told unprintable stories. Messrs. McKie, Woodhouse, Olsen, Spann, Ericson, and Robson are put in the light of sanctioning and telling stories that could not pass censorship. This is a moral that enemies of the University will be glad to clip and use against us. The city editor, it seems to me, was grossly at fault in letting this get past his blue pencil.

Aside from this, we were sorry you could not get to the banquet. Though the write-up belied it, we struck a good balance between the frivolous and the serious.

William A. Olsen.

The Editor,
The DAILY TAR HEEL:

As an old and tried friend of the TAR HEEL, I record an unpleasant jolt from an item in its report of the debate squad's banquet: "Professor Ericson let loose with some of his choicest stories. Unfortunately, due to the censoring of the Publications Union Board, the spicy jokes that followed cannot be printed."

The natural—the almost inevitable—interpretation of the statement referred to above is that the professor named indulged in smutty stories unfit for print. I was not present. But Professor Ericson has promptly and effectively denied this imputation, recapitulating his stories in your issue of yesterday; and so far as I have learnt, there was not the slightest foundation for such a report.

Selecting the most generous diagnosis of your reporter's error, I attribute it to a lack of timing in his humor. Though this diagnosis relieves him of moral turpitude, it does not repair the damage done the professor, the University, the student-faculty relations, and the TAR HEEL. Doubtless we have in common the ideal that, while a paper's columns of opinion and criticism are its own, the reportorial columns constitute a public trust and that its first duty, therefore, is to secure trustworthy reporters.

To the Editor
The DAILY TAR HEEL:

In view of the onslaught of words that are utilized by various writers in this column, I wish to protest in behalf of the average college student who reads such undigestible reading matter. Although the authors might be attempting to display intellectual superiority by the use of uncommon words, the average reader is not able to comprehend the true meaning of these letters. Let us cite such incomprehensible phrases as "so much more flotsom," "a spirited discussion of the relation of the comic spirit to philosophical profundity," and "ubiquitous depression."

Therefore, I humbly submit a letter sent to O. O. McIntyre as a puzzle for intellectual users of pompous phrases. It read: "In promulgating esoteric cogitations and articulating superficial sentimentalities and philosophical and psychological observations, beware of platitudinous ponderosity, jejune babblement and asinine affectations. Let your extemporaneous descantings and premeditated expiations have intelligibility and vivacity without thrasonic bombast. Sedulously avoid all polysyllabic propensity, psittacous vacuity, ventriloquial verbosity and vainglorious vapidty.

"Shun double entendre, prurient jocosity and pestiferous, polluting profanity, either obscure or apparent. Don't call names or use big words but talk plainly, sensibly, and truthfully."

To the Editor,
DAILY TAR HEEL:

Your article in the TAR HEEL of May 6, entitled "Man of Steele Draws Long Bow" has stated that I have expressed views concerning archery which I have not expressed and with which I do not at all agree. The article also misinterpreted my interest in archery and gave a rather false interpretation of the sport.

Archery was replaced to some extent in the nineties by tennis and not by golf. Today archery is enjoying the greatest popularity it has ever enjoyed as a sport. National, sectional, and some state and local tournaments are held each year. The best archers are living, and the best equipment is being produced today. While the sport has not been taken up at this University it has been developed and organized in a minor way at the University of California, Miami University, Ohio State University, Wisconsin, Oregon State College, University of Utah, Stanford University, Drake University, University of Cincinnati, University of St. Louis, and many others. I do not believe that archery will become popular as a college sport, but I am sure that clubs can be formed in university and college towns which will be very successful. However, such comparisons as that of modern archery as a sport with Indian archery as is made in the above mentioned article will have a tendency to intimidate those not sure of their desire to learn the sport and will prove a drawback to any archery organization on this campus. As to the superiority of men over women, in all competition the ladies' division is separated from the men's just as it is in golf, tennis, etc.

The article would imply that I am in the archery equipment business in a small way. This is not true. Archery is a hobby with me and I make equipment only for people I am teaching to shoot or have a special interest in.

standing piano artists in the country. His ability as a player is the thing which gave him his start in popular music and he still directs his orchestra from the piano. He began his orchestral career with Leo Reisman's orchestra, in which he played that instrument. His solos while the rest of the orchestra was in intermission won for him instant recognition from the patrons of the Casino.

Duchin's orchestra consists of eleven performers, including himself. Two vocalists will accompany him in order to furnish additional entertainment on this southern trip, which will include besides his engagement here stops at John Hopkins and V. P. I., where he will play for final dances.

The German club's final dances are the last big social event of the school year and are generally considered one of the most enjoyable. In 1930 and 1931 Guy Lombardo's orchestra played for the set, and Duchin's orchestra is expected to furnish just as high type of pleasing dance music for this year's series.

Carolina Nine Triumphs Over Annapolis In Loose Game, 11-3

Tar Heels Shellack Two Naval Academy Hurlers for Eleven Safe Blows.

GRIFFITH STAR OF GAME

Powell, Brandt, and Phipps Lead Defensive Game for Local Aggregation.

(Special to the DAILY TAR HEEL) Annapolis, Md., May 17.—Shellacking two Navy hurlers for 11 hits, five of which went for extra bases, Carolina's Tar Heels won over the Middies here today by the score of 11-3. Joe Griffith, star hurler of the Southerners, set the Navy hitters down with five singles, only one of which went for extra bases. Smoky fanned 12 men and led the Tar Heel hitters with a few singles.

Brandt and Peacock

George Brandt turned in two long triples, Johnny Peacock got one also. Daunis got a triple for Navy, their only extra base blow. Along with Brandt's two triples, he bagged a double, as did Peacock.

The Middies scored their three runs in the fifth inning when Daunis collected his triple along with two singles and a couple of Carolina errors.

Campbell was the starting hurler for Navy, and was greeted by a deluge of four runs in the opening inning. He pitched six innings when he was relieved by Davenport. The two Middie hurlers were accorded ragged support, no less than five miscues being committed behind them.

Powell, Brandt and Phipps led the Tar Heels in the field, while Daunis and Napper starred for Navy both at bat and afield.

TRIPLE TIE NOW IN TENNIS RACE

Sigma Phi Sigma Advances to Front by Virtue of Victory Over S. A. E.

Sigma Phi Sigma advanced to a tie for fraternity league tennis honors in yesterday's intramural program as it defeated S. A. E., 2-1. This makes a triple tie for first, with two other undefeated teams finishing their seasons tomorrow. If both of these come successfully through their final matches, the resulting five cornered tie will necessitate one of the most complex playoff series in several years.

Lovill, of Sigma Phi Sigma, defeated Connor, 5-2, 5-3, but Harris evened the count for S. A. E. by defeating Froneberger, 5-1, 5-4. Lovill and Froneberger paired to take the doubles, however, 5-0, 3-5, 5-4, to clinch the match.

Phi Delta Theta won its seventh match in a row as it crushed Zeta Beta Tau, 3-0. Enloe defeated Frankel, 4-5, 5-4, 5-0, and Wilson beat Simkovits, 5-1, 5-2, in singles, while the doubles went to Phi Delta Theta by default.

Phi Kappa Sigma wound up its season with a 3-0 win from Phi Sigma Kappa. Odum won from Kaveny, 5-1, 5-1, and Carson downed Vick, 5-2, 5-4. The doubles went to Phi Kappa Sigma, uncontested.

Kappa Alpha won from Pi Kappa Phi by forfeit.

Today's Matches

Today's program, which will wind up the season for all the tennis teams except those involved in playoffs, follows:

4:30—(1) Phi Delta Theta vs. Sigma Phi Epsilon, (2) Pi Kappa Alpha vs. Pi Kappa Phi, (3) Sigma Chi vs. Zeta Beta Tau.

SHOULD FLY HIGH SATURDAY

Here are four of the leading high jumpers in the Southern Conference. At the track festival at Duke Saturday they are certain to engage in a warm duel. They will be led into the meet by Captain Turner of V. P. I., shown above at the top in action. Turner set a new conference mark in the indoor meet here this winter. Under Turner is Floyd Johnson of Virginia, also in action. Captain Johnson Craig of Clemson is in the upper right, and Crook Stafford of Carolina is pictured in the lower left. All these men have hit close to the record in dual meets this season.

Chapel Hill Takes Down Carrboro, 15-11

Chapel Hill junior high school wiped out all remembrance of an earlier defeat at the hands of Carrboro by handing them a 19-11 setback here yesterday.

Chapel Hill made 15 hits to the losers' seven. W. Cowell led Chapel Hill at bat with two homers and a single out of four trials. Tankersley had a perfect day at bat for the local high school juniors with three successes out of three attempts. He was followed by Jackson with two out of four. Upchurch with two out of five led Carrboro.

TENNIS RESERVES CONQUER DEVITT PREP SCHOOL, 3-1

Latona Wins Only Match for Visitors From McGlinn; Freshmen Play Today.

Devitt Preparatory School of Washington, D. C., was defeated here yesterday by the varsity reserve tennis outfit, 3 to 1. Tony Latona won the only match for the preppers from John McGlinn.

McGlinn led in the first set, 5-2. Latona was slow in opening up his game, but at the crucial point, he pulled out to win the set 7-5. Latona allowed McGlinn three games of the next set in which the Carolina player seemed to have lost his game. The match scores 7-5, 6-3.

In the second singles match John Dillard, No. 9 player of the varsity, won from Shore of Devitt, 7-5, 6-4. Kendall of Devitt Prep won over Kasen of Carolina, 8-6, 2-6, 14-12. Dillard and McGlinn, semi-finalists in the Southern conference doubles tourney, downed Latona and Shore, 6-4, 6-3.

The freshman tennis squad composed of Friedman, Lott and Johnston, will meet the Devitt men here this afternoon. Three singles and one doubles match will be played.

Blue Imps Win 3-1 and Clinch Championship for Big Five Yearling Teams.

McKEITHAN PITCHES WELL

Tar Babies Out-Hit Blue Imps, Who Earn None of Their Runs, by 7 to 6.

Carolina's freshman baseball team closed its season yesterday with a heart-breaking 3-1 loss to the Duke yearlings at Durham. The win gave the Blue Imps the undisputed state frosh title.

McKeithan of the Tar Babies and Naktens, Duke southpaw, hooked up in a beautiful pitchers' battle, the Carolina boy looking better all the way. McKeithan held the Blue Imps to only six hits and bore down in great style during the pinches. Duke didn't earn any of its runs, all three coming on passed balls. The Tar Baby hurler got credit for nine strike-outs.

Naktens Fans Fourteen

Naktens scattered seven Tar Baby hits over the first seven innings. The Duke left-hander had plenty of trouble with the big end of the Tar Baby batting list but came out of his holes at the expense of the weaker end, fanning fourteen men for some sort of a record.

For the second time this season, the Blue Imps got all the breaks, all three of their runs coming after two were down. (Continued on next page)

DRIVE FOR FUNDS TO MOW CAMPUS ENDS LAST NIGHT

Campaign Falls $50 Short of Goal, But Negotiations Are Made to Cover Cost.

The campus improvement campaign ended last night after a week's drive in an effort to raise a fund to be used to cut the University lawn. One hundred and fifty dollars was realized by donations from 30 campus organizations.

The goal was set at $200, which was the amount needed to repair the two power-cutters of the University. However, negotiations were made yesterday whereby the amount raised will adequately cover the repair work, and both machines will be used in the attack on the sward.

Work Progressing

Work has been progressing rapidly by a dozen or more men. In addition to the one power machine that was fixed last week with part of the raised total, a horse-drawn scythe has been employed on the lower campus to take care of the longer growths.

Not only will the lawn be groomed for commencement and the final dances, but it will also be kept in shape all summer and throughout the next fall quarter. P. L. Burch of the buildings department, trustee of the fund, has assured campaign leaders that an extensive program of improvement has been planned.

Comment Starts Campaign

The campaign was inaugurated last Wednesday by members of St. Anthony Hall, following adverse comment from students and visitors regarding the condition of Carolina's historically beautiful campus. Lack of appropriate budgets made it impossible for the buildings department to fix the power-cutters, which had been worn very badly, and the administration had planned to allow the growth to continue.

Considerable interest and publicity has been manifested throughout the state. Fraternities and the other contributing organizations were highly complimented on their project.

COKER REPORTS PROGRESS WITH PARIS RESEARCH

Professor of Zoology Is Now on Leave of Absence From Kenan Fund.

Dr. R. E. Coker, who is passing this year on leave of absence, at the Laboratoire d'Evolution des Etres Organisés, the University of Paris, writes that his work is progressing satisfactorily.

It is rather surprising that he writes of finding within the city limits many admirable collection places, according to Dr. H. V. Wilson. In the ponds of the park there is an abundance of the minute crustacea which he is studying. A report on some of his work entitled Arret du Developpement chez les Copepodis has just been published.

As was expected, the laboratory has fully satisfied his requirements in the matter of equipment and service.

Dr. Coker reports that much of the winter weather has been unusually bad, but with spring coming, he finds Paris as pleasant as it traditionally is to the American.

Report to Editor

Milton Kalb, Judah Shohan, Robert Barnett, and Walter Rosenthal are asked to come by the DAILY TAR HEEL office some time during the afternoon and report to the editor.

first leaders of the movement that is at the present time governing Germany. He is a personal friend of Hitler, and since Hitler has come into power, may rely upon his being given an influential part in the ruling of the new state.

George Glen Killinger is a Virginian, whose family has been in America for over ten generations. That would mean that it had probably emigrated from Germany about 1700, long before what is now the European branch had risen to prominence. Paralleling the rise of its foreign relatives the family of Killinger has enjoyed a position of distinction in this country.

It is Killinger's hope that at some date in the near future he may have the opportunity of visiting Germany, when for the first time in over 200 years, there will be a reunion of the branches of a family, so long separated.

season with a 7-1 win over Swain Hall. There followed in quick succession a 3-0 win from Grimes, a 19-3 victory over New Dorms, and an 18-0 whitewashing of Ruffin. Carr's next three games, with Old West, Steele, and Old East, went to the lawyers by forfeit, while in the wind-up of the regular season the team downed the Laundry Club, hitherto undefeated, by margin of 1-0.

The Betas started off with two close wins, beating Phi Sigma Kappa in the opener, 5-4, and then taking a 4-2 decision from T. E. P. Pi Kappa Phi forfeited, after which Sigma Phi Epsilon bowed, 15-8. The next two games, with Delta Tau Delta and Theta Kappa Nu, went to the Betas by forfeit. Kappa Alpha was beaten, 9-2, after which the team finished up the regular season in good style by crushing Delta Kappa Epsilon, 18-5.

This afternoon's game is expected to provide plenty of thrills for the spectators. Both outfits are well rounded, with the lawyers having a slight edge in pitching, while the Beta's batting power seems to have the edge.

FROSH GOLFERS WIN FROM DUKE

Carolina's yearling golf team upset the dope yesterday at Hope Valley by defeating the highly favored Duke freshman team by the close margin of 10 to 8.

In the singles play Fulenwider, No. 1 for the Tar Heels, defeated Cliff Perry, Duke player and southern interscholastic champion last year, by the score of 2½ to ½. Harris, Carolina's No. 2 man, made a strong comeback after being four down and seven to play, to split three points with Dave Grey of the Blue Devils. Valk of Carolina lost to Reavis of Duke 2 to 1. The No. 4 match was tied as Hudson of Carolina and Budd of Duke divided three points.

Foursome Play

In the foursome play Harris and Fulenwider clicked off consecutive birdies on 16 and 17 to win from Perry and Grey by 2½ to ½. These two birdies supplied the winning margin for Carolina. In the second foursome Reavis and Budd defeated Valk and Hudson 2 to 1. The individual scores for the match were: Fulenwider 75, Harris 77, Perry 76, Grey 79, Hudson 81, Valk 80, Reavis 79, and Budd 81.

Carolina will meet Duke in a return match Saturday morning at 10:00 o'clock over the Hope Valley course.

Reception and Ball

The annual alumni reception and ball will take place at 9:30 o'clock, at which President and Mrs. Graham and Judge John J. Parker will receive. Alumni are invited to attend senior class day exercises Tuesday morning and afternoon and the commencement exercises at 7:00 o'clock in Kenan stadium.

Graduates arriving Sunday are invited to attend the baccalaureate sermon delivered by Bishop E. A. Penick at 11:00 o'clock Sunday morning in Graham Memorial. At 8:00 o'clock Sunday night there will be a Chapel Hill Oratorio concert in Hill Music hall. Chimes and a band concert will take place during the afternoon.

Special efforts are being made to have all surviving graduates of the late '70's and '80's attend the reunion, with letters of invitation being sent to members of those classes by President Graham. This gathering will be celebrated as the 50-year reunion of the class of '83, of which only three graduates and 15 non-graduates remain. Invitations have been sent to the classes of '02-'05 and '21-'24 and '32 by the Alumni office assisting the class secretaries.

The dormitories to be used to furnish rooms for alumni are Old East, Old West, Steele and Carr.

Tar Babies Lose Tough Game To Duke Frosh

Yeager, Carolina catcher, found it hard to hold all of McKeithan's stuff and let three balls get by at critical times, a score resulting on each occasion.

The Tar Babies counted their only run in the sixth frame on two clean hits. Womble, first up, singled and then with two down, Moore drove a double down the first base line, bringing in the first-sacker. Carolina threatened several other times, once loading the bases with only one out, but could not get the hits when needed.

Irwin Stars in Field

Irwin turned in his usual beautiful game in the field, making four hard assists. Montgomery at second also did some nice fielding. For the Blue Imps Knopka, the catcher, was the most outstanding on defense.

Besides Moore's big double, Montgomery and Womble hit best for Carolina, each getting two singles in four times up. Moore's hit was the only extra base blow of the game. Shortell, Duke second baseman, got two for three and was the only man on the winning team to get more than one hit.

George Arliss Stars In Show At Theatre

George Arliss, considered one of the greatest of present stage and screen luminaries, comes to the Carolina theatre today in his latest Warner Bros. picture, "The Working Man."

The attraction is characterized as a delightfully entertaining comedy drama presenting Arliss in the type of picture which has brought his greatest successes on the screen. "The Working Man" is patterned along the lines of "The Millionaire," another Arliss hit, although the plot is entirely different.

Why, if you could go through my laboratory at Tuskegee and see the countless things I have on hand to occupy me, the many natural products from which I am endeavoring to extract new things for man, you could not ask such a question. I am always working and working on that which is at hand at the moment. I have no plans for the future. I just work and the future takes care of itself.

"Besides, people are always coming to me with the problems they want me to work out. I am never too busy to help anyone solve a problem of service."

In his experiments on a new product he hopes will help victims of infantile paralysis, Dr. Carver supervises all the treatments himself. He has assistants in his laboratory, but in the old days he became so accustomed to doing all the work himself that he must oversee every detail. He is up before the sun to walk in the woods and turn over in his mind the plans for the day's work, and when the last shadow of setting sun fades away his work for the day is done.

VIRGINIA CALLED DARKHORSE OF SOUTHERN MEET

Cavalier Team Is Well-Balanced With Full Quota of Outstanding Stars.

Durham, May 17.—Virginia's well-balanced track team, with its full quota of outstanding stars, will enter the 11th annual Southern Conference track meet in Duke stadium here Friday and Saturday labeled as the "darkhorse."

Runners-up in the conference indoor meet, winners of the "Big Four" meet in Virginia and victors over the strong Navy team, the athletes from Charlottesville are given the best chance of carrying the 1933 championship bunting outside the state of North Carolina.

Abramson Back in Sprints

Strengthened recently by the return to condition of several performers, including the fleet dash man, Abramson, the Cavalier's appear to be set now to battle to the last ditch the more favored teams of North Carolina and Duke, the former slated to take the meet although given a tough fight by the Blue Devils.

Virginia will put three of the outstanding men in the meet in Captain Billy Lauck, one of the greatest milers in the country who also runs the 880 and two-mile in record times; Everett, sophomore high and low hurdler; and George Coles, the hefty weight tosser.

The Cavalier captain made the mile in 4:15 in his team's victory last Saturday over Navy to turn in one of the best mile runs in the country this season. He is entered in the two mile and the 880 in the conference but it is not likely that he will run but two of the events. In Red Lewis of Duke, he will find a man that will press him in the mile run and that race should bring out a record-breaking performance from whichever is the winner.

George Coles is the heavy favorite to take the shot put event although a hard battle is forecast between a half dozen outstanding men including Ray Rex of N. C. State, Tom Craig of South Carolina, and Oscar Mullis of North Carolina.

LAST PLAYMAKER OFFERING STAGED ON OUTDOOR SET

"Midsummer Night's Dream" To Be Presented Tonight In Forest Theatre.

Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream" is presented tonight and Saturday in the Forest theatre at 8:30 o'clock as the 15th outdoor production of the Carolina Playmakers. The play, directed by Professor F. H. Koch, is the final Playmaker presentation of the year.

"Midsummer Night's Dream" will represent the most elaborate of the Forest theatre offerings, eight of which have been Shakespearean. Unusual sets designed by Mary Dirnberger, fairy dances directed by Phoebe Barr and brilliant costumes by Oramae Davis will feature the play, together with the most talented cast presented during the season. Thor Johnson's Carolina Salon Ensemble will accompany the production with Mendelssohn's music.

Began in 1919 Professor F. H. Koch is especially fitted to direct the play, with a broad background of Shakespearean drama. Koch instituted the Forest theatre tradition with "The Taming of the Shrew" in 1919 and has directed each of the following productions with the exception of "Romeo and Juliet" in 1930, in which he played Mercutio. All outdoor performances before 1926 were enacted by daylight, before the installation of lighting effects.

Professor Koch's interest in Shakespeare dates back to his senior year in high school, when he saw the celebrated Alexander Salvini play "Hamlet" in Peoria, Illinois. This was the first performance Koch had at.

HANDBOOK STAFF MEETING CALLED

Editor Expects to Have Work on Editorial Material Completed By Middle of June.

Carl G. Thompson, Jr., editor of the 1933-34 freshman "Handbook," has asked that his assistants on the booklet confer with him this afternoon as to the progress being made on completing the work to which they were assigned.

Thompson said that no definite date could be named for the publication of the "Handbook," but that he expected to have his editorial work completed before the middle of June.

Phil Hammer has been getting material from the churches and organizations to go into the "Handbook," Bill Anderson was assigned to handle the sports section; and Charles Bond has been working with the Y. M. C. A. officials for the 'Y' section. Vermont Royster has prepared an introduction to the University for the book.

W. T. Minor, business manager, has begun work for the advertisements which are to go into the pamphlet. Thompson announced that the cover would be red with black letters, indicating the colors of the class of 1937, and that the content will include a short explanation of the activities and requirements of every important organization on the campus.

FOUNTAIN NAMED AS PHI SPEAKER FOR FALL TERM

A. S. Kaplan Elected Speaker Pro-Tem; Charles Bond Chosen as Sergeant-at-Arms.

Lawrence H. Fountain of Tarboro was elected over Red Rankin as speaker of the Phi assembly for the fall quarter of next year at a special meeting of the group Wednesday night. The election was postponed from Tuesday night due to dissension over the eligibility of various members to vote.

A. S. Kaplan was unanimously elected speaker pro-tem and the nomination of Charles Bond as sergeant-at-arms was unopposed. Other officers chosen were: Albert Ellis, treasurer; A. S. Kaplan, representative on the Debate council; Winthrop Durfee, reading clerk; H. Rubin, chairman of the ways and means committee; and Frank Edmundson and Ezra Griffin, assistants to Rubin.

Campaign Committee The following committee was chosen to campaign for new members next fall: Ed Lanier, Charles Holley, I. S. Temple, and A. Ellis. After the incoming officers took places, the meeting came to a close.

Engineering Society Elects New Officers

At the meeting of the William Cain society last night, the University chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the officers for next year were elected. Fred E. Culbert was elected president, R. N. Dailey, vice-president, Sidney Franklin, secretary, J. Lynch, treasurer. T. F. Hickerson, professor of civil engineering, was re-elected faculty advisor of the society.

The senior trip is scheduled for next Wednesday to Roanoke, Virginia, where an inspection will be made of the steel mills.

BAND CONCLUDES 'CONCERT SERIES

University Symphonic Unit to Present Last Program Sunday in Hill Music Hall.

The University band, directed by Professor T. Smith McCorkle, will present its final concert of the year in Hill Music hall Sunday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock.

The concert band numbers about 50 players and was selected from members of the parade band which was organized in the fall. It is one of the few symphonic bands in the country and has been recognized in a national survey as one of the outstanding college bands.

Vocalist Included

Sunday's concert will include a group of vocal selections by William G. Barnett, baritone. Barnett was recently selected for the solo part in the presentation of Gaul's oratorio "The Holy City," conducted by Professor Dyer in Fayetteville, and also appeared in Debois' sacred cantata "The Seven Last Words" presented at Elon College last month.

The remainder of the program will include five movements from a suite by Bach, "Andante" from Mendelssohn's "Italian Symphony," "Cubaland Suite" by Sousa, "Bolero" by Ravel, and Wagner's symphonic poem "Entry of the Gods into Walhalla" from the "Gotterdammerung."

PRESS PUBLISHES LIFE HISTORY OF FAMOUS ACTRESS

Biography of Fanny Kemble, English And American Stage Star, Latest Release of Press.

"Fanny Kemble," a biography by Dr. Leota S. Driver, has just been released by the University Press. This work is a complete life of "the last of the Kembles" the historic family of the English and American stage. The early years of her life in England, her home, her years of study in France, her life in Italy and Switzerland and her happy 40 years in the United States, are all treated in the 214 pages of this book.

Her talents gained for her the recognition and friendship of the great and near great of two countries. She was received at court by Queen Victoria, and welcomed to the White House by Andrew Jackson.

Though opposed to slavery, she married a slave owner and lived for many years on his plantation in the state of Georgia.

Architect Lectures On New Tendencies

Albert Simons, prominent Charlestonian architect, delivered an illustrated lecture last night in Murphey hall on "Tendencies of Modern American Architecture."

The visiting speaker acquainted the audience with the development of American architecture and with the aid of illustrations, showed the tendencies of the art today.

Mr. Simons was brought to the campus under the auspices of the American Institute of Architects, of which he is a member. The program was sponsored by the Fine Arts committee of the University.

Dr. Odum Addresses Group At Tennessee

Dr. Howard W. Odum, director of the Institute for Research in Social Science in the University, addressed the Faculty club of the University of Tennessee Wednesday night.

He presented an outline of the work being done by his southern study group which is engaged in a two-year survey of the social and economic resources of the south.

While in Knoxville, Dr. Odum also held two conferences with the social science faculty of the University of Tennessee.

En route he stopped over in Asheville to address a meeting under the auspices of the open forum group there.

CHOIR TO APPEAR HERE IN BENEFIT CONCERT TUESDAY

Guilford College Group Brought To Chapel Hill by University Music Department.

For the benefit of the student loan fund, the University music department will bring to Chapel Hill the Guilford College choir for a concert Tuesday evening in Hill Music hall.

The choir is made up of college students who sing without accompaniment, and is under the direction of Max Noah. Now in its fifth season, the group has made great progress since its inception and is recognized as one of the finest musical organizations in the south.

Favorable Comment

Critics have commented favorably on the performances of the choir. A writer of the Baltimore Sun said: "The singing is infused with a serious religious spirit . . . which gives to the scholastic music that necessary touch of understanding which keeps it from being a mere vocal exercise in contrapuntal music."

Rob Roy Peery, noted composer and music critic, has said of the choir: ". . . every member gave evidence of careful training and thorough musicianship."

The program of the choir includes compositions of Mendelssohn, Healy Willan, Bach, da Palestrina, William Byrd, da Vittoria, Thomas Weelkes, Gretchaminoff, Nikolsky, Tschesnokoff, Christiansen, and Gustav Holst.

Tickets to the performance Tuesday may be obtained for 30 cents.

A similar benefit concert was presented several weeks ago by Kay Kyser and his former University of North Carolina band.

Stray Terrapin Finds Loving Care And Quiet Retreat In Battle Dorm

Tender-Hearted Student Offers Bed and Board to Wandering Reptile; Adopted Pet Provides Considerable Amusement And Embarrassment for Dormitory Residents.

"You like salads for meals, don't you?" the cashier in the Crescent cafeteria murmured in surprise when, for the second time that day, the grinning boy filed past bearing furtively upon his tray two orders each of spinach, asparagus tips, and lettuce.

Her surprise would have been still greater if she had noticed the boy furtively wrapping the "health-foods" in napkins. The mystery would have been completely solved if she had known about Xerxes, Xerxes who had adopted Battle dormitory as a place in which to live, Xerxes the terrapin. For the benefit of those not in the know, a terrapin is your old friend, the turtle.

Finds Shady Nook

One clear day Xerxes had waddled into Battle, because near the madding crowd he loves so much, near the roar of traffic he knew there would be a congenial atmosphere.

He waddled into the open room and was seized with joy by the occupant, who sensed that here in the mute creature there would be a sympathetic soul, one who would always listen patiently and not escape through the nearest exit like a more human roommate.

But the adoption of Xerxes also involved certain responsibilities. Food must be procured, hence the odd diet found on the owner's tray at each meal.

And Comfortable Bed

Any trouble incurred in raising the comatose terrapin was repaid during the week-end of the Junior-Senior dance set. Burning with youthful humor the owner managed to slip the horny-backed creature between the sheets of a neighbor's bed. When the roomer returned in the early hours of the morning he little suspected the presence of any bed-mate.

Other residents of Battle were let in on the secret and all gathered outside the door of the somewhat weary, unnaturally elated returned dancer.

It has been rumored that the results of the eavesdropping were so entertaining that the listeners have decided to pension the turtle for life.

Anchored to the radiator by a ribbon tied to its right hind foot, Xerxes basks all day on the window catching flies and bugs. The exercise he takes daily consists of an unwilling swim in the wash bowl for the edification of uninitiated residents of the dormitory.

No Jobs

In Sight

A poster in the Y. M. C. A. vestibule announces that the National Federation of Students will give a free trip to Europe this summer to the student who writes the best paper suggesting way and means to employ the nation's college graduates in 1933. It has been estimated, according to the poster, that only eight per cent of the national class of 1933 can be sure of immediate employment.

There are indications that business will be much improved by this time next year. However, the problem of employment for the average college graduate is as acute as it has ever been. A writer in College Humor last month suggested that students create jobs for themselves by doing something useful that nobody else has thought of doing. That suggestion, of course, will work only about one time out of ten. A graduate of last year reports that he is going into a government reforestation camp. But, then, every senior of 1933 cannot do that. Suggestions that students work at their chosen profession without remuneration until a job is offered them would leave to starvation more than ninety per cent of those who tried the scheme. Since the administration has gone in so strongly for economic planning, it might as well include jobs for college graduates in its scheme for national rehabilitation. It is most important that men with families be given first opportunities for jobs, but it would also be wise to encourage college graduates, to put to work young men who are prepared and eager to begin work. In mapping out his system for the control and regulation of national industry, President Roosevelt should stipulate in his plans the gradual absorption of college graduates into industry according to their ability.

If a planned program of that sort were pursued, graduates of the first rank would be placed in positions for which they were fitted, and graduates of a lower rank would be relegated to minor positions or shunted into occupations for which they are better fitted. Such a program would be ambitious and difficult to execute, but it is certainly no more ambitious or difficult than other proposals which the administration intends to carry out within the next biennium.—E.C.D.

Still Not on Speaking Terms

Although Roosevelt's message to Moscow is by no means a diplomatic recognition of the Soviet government, nevertheless it has afforded hope to the officials of that country that recognition may eventually be forthcoming.

The principal reason our foreign policy does not permit diplomatic relations with Russia is that the Soviet government has repudiated the debts of the old regime. Much may be said for the validity of this reason, although it is no uncommon thing for a new government to deny responsibility for the debts of the old. But if we are to make diplomatic recognition dependent on the payment of debts that were contracted in good faith, the default of the French government of its war debt payment would automatically exclude that nation from diplomatic intercourse. Fortunately, no such standard is set up as a general rule. But we have applied it in the case of the Soviet, and however unfair it may seem at times, it will continue to be a powerful factor in preventing relations between the United States and Russia.

Another reason and one which is not quite so tangible is the fact that we hold an unconscious aversion to the principles upon which the Soviet Republic has been founded. Largely through propaganda and its resulting unfounded prejudice, the American people hold in mighty distaste the Russian communism which they fancy is a constant menace to world civilization—even at the five thousand miles distance that separates us from Moscow. But in spite of our disapproval of the Soviet, we must realize that Russia has suffered a change since the war that has brought with it difficulties which few nations experience in so short a span of years. To meet these difficulties has required extraordinary means.

President Roosevelt's message cannot be construed as having opened the way for recognition of Russia. Whether he will eventually see fit to begin diplomatic relations will depend on his own sound judgment.—A.T.D.

A New Light On Germany

If the nations of the world want peace, which a cynical world doubts, their primary task is a complete revision of Germany's status. Any armament agreements now must be drawn up with recognition of the fact that Germany is returning to the strength she had before the war and will submit no longer to the dictation of her hereditary foes. The world knows that the war guilt thesis is a myth, that France and Russia were as active in bringing about the war as was Germany, if not more so. Germany lost and was forced at the point of the bayonet into a confession she and her oppressors knew was false.

We now must realize that America did not enter the war to "make the world safe for democracy" but to save the nations that owed us the most money. This is a legitimate reason if not cloaked in the hypocrisy of altruistic motives. During the early days of the war we almost fought England for damaging our shipping and the slogan would have been the same. New generations are coming into the control of world affairs and the absurd lies that led ten million men to lay down their lives to achieve the greatest depression and discontent the world has known no longer suffice as bases for sound transactions.

Germany rightfully balks at further submission to a treaty erected upon lies and sustained by force. For fifteen years she has tried it and been drained dry by her grasping conquerors. They fear Germany and her potential power. They shrink in horror from her dictatorship and the possibility of the Kaiser's return. Yet they are responsible for the conditions they decay, for forcing the German people to the wall and to extreme desperation. After the war for democracy Germany, Spain, Russia, Poland, Turkey, and Italy were under dictators, a joke that would be funny had it not cost ten million lives and untold human misery.

The world has a hope for peace only in honesty among nations. Elaborate laws in every land raise mankind higher and higher in civilization. Yet the nations still base their intercourse upon the lex talionis and the brute force of the caveman. If might is not right among men neither is it right among nations. Violence can engender only violence, and peace remain a pleasant dream. This nation is about to play an important part in the conclusion of new international agreements. If President Roosevelt can make the "new deal" international and see in Germany the "forgotten man" of the world there is hope that some alterations will be made in the requirements now exacted of her. In requirements that can be enforced only by war, the Germans too have an expression for "death before dishonor."—J.F.A.

Too Much Milk, Not Enough Price

Wisconsin in the throes of a milk strike! Hundreds of farmers endeavoring to keep a small minority of fellow-dairymen from having their milk transported to market—national guardsmen called out—violence and death—the picture is not one to be proud of. It is in such circumstances that the public demonstrates its strong and peculiar prejudices. The great bulk of American citizenry would glance at the newspapers, see that a strike has halted the distribution of one of life's essential foods, and immediately adopt a hostile attitude toward the strikers. This seems such a natural, common-sense reaction that it would evoke little attention of a spontaneous nature; and yet the formation of this bias represents a high degree of social ignorance.

The problem is much more fundamental than it seems. The milk is selling at such a low figure that to some farmers their costs cannot be met. Only the larger dairymen are able to make profits. Under such conditions it is only natural that the smaller producers, seeing their savings dwindling away, begin to organize to prevent the sale of the commodity until prices reach a compensatory level. The struggle is one of the many which are being waged along the economic front today: the smaller men are sullenly and rapidly being eliminated. They will not succumb without a great deal of needless violence and waste. The Wisconsin situation illustrates forcibly the need for a coordination of our productive and consumptive powers. The laissez faire philosophy cannot be successfully applied to our complex economic structure; it has taken its place among the anachronisms of our times.

The idea of national planning is coming more and more to be a serious contemplation by enlightened men in high places. It offers many problems of supply-demand adjustment, but it also offers a higher degree of hope for our future social and economic advancement.—V.J.L.

TENTATIVE PLANS ANNOUNCED FOR BARBERS' MEETING

Cannon Makes Announcement of Convention During June at Battery Park, Asheville.

The annual convention of the North Carolina Master Barbers Association will take place at the Battery Park, Asheville, June 25, 26, and 27, according to tentative plans just announced here by Y. Z. Cannon, secretary of the association.

Registration will begin Sunday, June 25. The meeting will be formally opened by invocation by Dr. W. A. Lambeth of Asheville, Monday morning, June 26. Then will follow an address of welcome by Mayor Wickes Wambolt of Asheville, and the response by M. C. Whitney, Winston-Salem.

Short talks by members of the association will precede a luncheon for delegates, a sight-seeing tour, and an address on scientific barbering by W. E. Burger, Asheville, in the afternoon.

A banquet, at which Walter Wagner, Chicago, representative of the Association of Master Barbers of America, will serve as toast master, and a dance, will conclude Monday's activities.

The convention will be brought to a close Tuesday morning with a business meeting at which new officers and next year's convention city will be selected.

Committees made up of members of the Asheville branch of the state association will make the complete arrangements for the meeting.

Judges For Essay Contest Announced

New York, (NSFA)—John Finley, Charles A. Beard, Spencer Miller, and Mary Van Kleeck have agreed to act as judges of the essay contest now being conducted by the National Planning committee for unemployed college graduates, according to the latest information obtained at the office of the committee, 450 Seventh avenue, New York.

Mr. Finley, noted educator and philanthropist, has been editor of the New York Times since 1921. Charles Beard, author of "The Rise of American Civilization," is known as the dean of American historians. Mr. Miller is active in educational circles and is now executive secretary of the Workers' Education bureau. Miss Van Kleeck, director of the department of industrial studies of the Russell Sage foundation, is considered an authority on labor and industrial problems.

Dean Of Southern Track Finishes Year With Thirteenth State Title

Bob Fetzer has Coached at Woodberry Forest, Clemson, and at Carolina; Once Turned to Chemical Engineering; Is Now Track Coach and Line Coach in Football.

Coach Robert A. Fetzer, director of athletics at the University who has produced 13 state championship track teams in as many years, quit the coaching game once to go into chemical engineering work but returned to his first love to become the South's most famous track coach.

Coach Bob, as he is affectionately known to thousands of students, alumni and sport fans, coached at Woodberry Forest for several years after finishing his college work at Davidson in 1907 and doing an extra year's graduate study and assistant coaching at Clemson.

Once Turned to Chemistry

He tried teaching chemistry for a year at N. C. State and spent three more years following the chemical engineering profession in Georgia and Alabama, but the lure of the coaching game was too great.

Coach Bob went back to "his boys," and after intervals of coaching freshman teams at Davidson and State and a second period of service at Woodberry Forest, he landed in 1921 at Carolina, where he has since become as fixed a part of the athletic department as South building or the Davie Poplar is a part of the campus.

It was the combination of the two Fetzer brothers, Bob and Bill, who put out Carolina's South Atlantic championship eleven of 1922, and it is Coach Bob who has been largely responsible for the powerful lines Carolina elevens displayed throughout the Fetzer regime and since Chuck Collins came here as head football coach in 1926.

Coach Bob has done his greatest work as director of Carolina's splendid program of "athletics for all," but it is as a track coach that he has won his widest recognition.

State Championship

Under Fetzer tutelage, Carolina track teams have won the state championship every year without a break. Superstitious folk said they would fail last Saturday, the 13th, but the Tar Heels ran wild to throw back the Duke threat and hang up Carolina's 13th state championship in a row.

The Tar Heels also won the southern outdoor titles in 1926 and 1930 and the southern indoor championships in 1931 and 1932, and several other meets have found them runners-up. In the 13 years of dual meets the Tar Heels have never lost to a southern foe, and they have dropped only two of their inter-sectional contests, one to Penn State and another to Princeton.

tended, and then with the disapproval of his conservative Methodist parents. Later, as a sophomore in college, he paid for his first full-dress suit with the proceeds of one-man performances of "The Taming of The Shrew," which he presented at Ohio Western University and nearby towns.

After graduating Koch attended performances of all the great Shakespearean actors of the "Palmy Days" era, among them the Polish actress Modjeska as Lady Macbeth and Thomas W. Keene as Richard III and Othello. Sir Henry Irving, acknowledged as the greatest actor of Shakespeare, and Ada Rehan, who is given credit for the greatest portrayal of Katherine the Shrew, were others. In Europe Koch saw Max Reinhardt's productions of "Midsummer Night's Dream" in Berlin and "Merchant of Venice" in Munich.

For five years after his graduation Professor Koch played Shakespeare professionally in New York and through the New England states to Halifax, Nova Scotia.

The performances of "Midsummer Night's Dream" tonight and tomorrow are included on the Playmaker season-ticket program. Other tickets are 50 cents for adults or 25 cents for children.

Janet Gaynor Stars In Musical Romance

Janet Gaynor and Henry Garat are featured in the new Fox picture "Adorable" playing at the Carolina theatre today. Garat is a continental star now appearing in American pictures. The story, which is a romance, has a musical setting that is an important adjunct of the picture. Three new song hits are presented in the picture including, "Adorable," "My Heart's Desire" and "My First Love to Last." The supporting cast includes, Herbert Mundin, and C. Aubrey Smith.

Crouch Stars As Team Defeats Randolph-Macon

Carolina Baseballers Hit Timely Behind Ace In Fast 4-0 Triumph Yesterday.

BRANDT STARS IN FIELD
Weathers, Vick, and McCaskill Get Two Blows Each In 3rd Northern Victory.

Ashland, Va., May 18.—Fred Crouch hurled his second victory of the week for North Carolina's Tar Heels here today as he allowed the Randolph-Macon batters two hits in shutting them out 4-0.

After he had beaten Georgetown Monday, Freddie took the mound here today and turned in another excellent performance. Crouch has allowed but six hits in the 18 innings he has twirled. Both Lamy McCaskill and Red Mathe-son did the receiving for the Tar Heels.

McGee on the mound for Randolph-Macon allowed ten hits and received ragged support afield. His mates committed no less than five miscues. Carolina had two errors to its credit also.

Johnny Phipps, Vergil Weathers, Thurman Vick, and Lamy McCaskill led the Tar Heel batters each connecting for two hits in four trips to the plate. Phipps, McCaskill, and Weathers each garnered a double. Captain Powell clouted out a triple as did Sledge for Randolph-Macon.

Willie Powell was the star in the field for Carolina, ably assisted by George Brandt at first. Sargent, shortstop, Wornam, left field, and Beall, catcher were the Randolph-Macon stars afield.

BOBBY GOLDSTEIN NAMED BY WEBB ON ALL-AMERICAN

Goldstein Was Selected in 135-Pound Class in Which He Is National Champion.

University, Va., May 18.—Bobby Goldstein, the Washington, D. C., boy who was captain of Virginia's boxing team for 1933 has been named by Spike Webb, Navy's ring coach, to a position on an all-time, all-college, all-American boxing team.

Goldstein has been selected in the 135-pound class in which he won the national collegiate championship last year and in which he now holds the Southern conference title.

Selected with Goldstein on this first all-time ring team selected by an authority are two Navy men, Rich Collins, 115-pounds, and Harry Henderson, 165-pounds. Syracuse also was given two places. These went to Al Wertheimer, 125-pounds, and to Ace Moran, 155-pounds.

Lassman Honored
The 145-pound class went to Al Lewis of Penn State, the 175-pound class to Eddie Egan, Yale's great boxer and Rhodes scholar, and the unlimited to the late Al Lassman, who was one of the greatest athletes ever turned out by New York University.

Virginia's ring team, captained by Goldstein, was the third in succession to win the Southern conference ring championship. It was the second to go through its dual meet season undefeated. The high spot of the winter was the match with Navy in Annapolis when the Middies were handed their first ring defeat in 14 seasons on their home floor.

MAPEL WILL SERVE AS STARTER FOR CARNIVAL

Durham, May 18.—William L. Mapel of Washington and Lee University will serve as starter in the 11th annual Southern conference track meet in Duke stadium tomorrow and Saturday. Well-known in southern track circles, Mr. Mapel is recognized as having few peers in the country in starting races. Dr. H. P. Barrett of Charlotte who so efficiently started the races in the state meet last week will serve as assistant starter.

DORMITORY NINE CAPTURES TITLE

Carr Upsets Beta Theta Pi, Frat Leaders, 9-8, to Capture Intramural Baseball Crown.

Carr dormitory annexed the campus intramural baseball championship on intramural field yesterday by defeating Beta Theta Pi, 9-8, in a thrilling contest. The teams were champions respectively of the dormitory and fraternity leagues.

The Betas got off to a poor start when they set the lawyers up to a six-run lead in the first frame. Playing loose ball, throwing wildly, and giving their pitcher almost no support, the Greek-letter men saw Baley, Markham, Gillespie, Ray, Andrews, and Eady score as a result of five hits, an infield error, and a walk.

Betas Trail in Third
The frat men came back with a run in the first and another in the second to trail, 6-2, at the beginning of the third. Each team got two tallies in the third, while the Betas outscored the lawyers, 3-1, in the fourth.

Neither team scored in the fifth, and the Betas got a lone tally in the sixth when Tennille scored after a long fly by Rose had been caught. In the last three innings, with the score 9-8, both outfits tried desperately to score, but no more runs were forthcoming. The Betas threatened in the seventh and again in the ninth, while Anderson, Beta pitcher, was holding his opponents well in check.

Pitchers Yield Twelve
Each pitcher yielded 12 hits, while Anglin whiffed four to Anderson's none. The lawyer hurler. (Continued on next page)

PLAYOFF SERIES TO START TODAY

Since the fraternity tennis league ended in a five-cornered tie, a playoff series will be inaugurated today to determine the winner. The team capturing the fraternity title will meet Carr, dormitory champions, next Tuesday for the campus crown.

Phi Delta Theta will oppose Sigma Chi, and Chi Psi will meet Sigma Phi Sigma this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock. Tomorrow morning at 10:00 o'clock Sigma Nu will take on the winner of the Phi Delta-Sigma Chi match, while Monday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock the winner of that match will oppose the Chi Psi-Sigma Phi Sigma winner for the league title.

Sigma Chi Wins
In the only match yesterday, Sigma Chi upset Zeta Beta Tau, 3-0, to end its season with a perfect record. Lacy downed Frank-el, 5-2, 5-2, and Harlee defeated Simkowitz, 5-0, 5-3. The doubles went to Sigma Chi uncontested.

Phi Delta Theta gained its eighth consecutive win at the expense of Sigma Phi Epsilon by forfeit. Pi Kappa Alpha likewise won from Pi Kappa Phi in the same manner.

LEAD TEAMS IN CONFERENCE MEET

Answers Goldy

Norment Quarles, conference 125 champion and conqueror of Bobby Goldstein in the 135 pound division, yesterday answered a tentative challenge flung at him by the Virginia captain. The two pugs may meet in Raleigh under the A.A.U. around June 20. Quarles embarrassed the all-time, all-college, all-American star in the Tin Can last winter with a decisive triumph.

PRICES FOR CONFERENCE TRACK MEET ANNOUNCED

Durham, May 19.—High school students will be admitted to the 11th annual Southern conference track meet in Duke stadium Saturday for 25 cents, according to the price list announced today.

The prices: high school students, 25 cents each day; college students, 25 cents each day with student books; general admission, preliminaries today, 40 cents; finals Saturday, 50 cents.

STATE ATHLETES CLASH IN FINALS

High School Baseball Title Game Set for Today; Golf Tourney Also to Be Played.

State high school athletes will conclude their seasons in two sports here today when Durham and Greensboro hook up this afternoon in the finals for the class "A" baseball title and the interscholastic golf meet takes place on Hope Valley course.

The baseball tilt will begin at 3:30 o'clock on Emerson field and the golfers will swing into action this morning at 9:30 o'clock.

Charlotte Not Here

This year's ball game will mark the first time in four years that Charlotte high has not been represented in the finals in football, basketball, and baseball. Greensboro won the western championship in a three-game series with Gastonia after the latter nine had vanquished the Queen City team. Durham copped the eastern crown after taking every encounter but one, dropping a close game to Rocky Mount early in the season.

Nine high schools are entered in the second annual golf tournament. Play will continue throughout the day. The meet is sponsored by the North Carolina high school athletic association of which E. R. Rankin is secretary. Eighteen holes will be in order this morning and again this afternoon, scoring to be made by medal play only. The team making the lowest single score will be awarded the state diadem.

The nine schools represented are Fayetteville, Greensboro, Durham, Greenville, High Point, Charlotte, Henderson, Winston-Salem, and Raleigh.

Carolina Blond Boxer Accepts Invitation to Meet Bobby Goldstein This Summer.

WILL FIGHT IN SUMMER

Match to Take Place Either in Raleigh or Richmond Sometime After June 20.

Norment Quarles, Carolina's blonde mauler and conference 125 pound champion, yesterday accepted a tentative challenge issued by Bobby Goldstein, Virginia's boxing idol and conference 135 pound champion, to meet in the ring in either Raleigh or Richmond sometime in June.

In a communication with Archie Allen, frosh boxing mentor, R. A. Dunaway, Sr., of Raleigh and father of State's Bill Dunaway, stated that he had received the challenge from Walter Heenan of the Richmond Y. M. C. A. Heenan, who was in Raleigh recently to see Dunaway on business, delivered Bobby Goldstein's challenge and asked Dunaway to pass it on to Allen.

The Quarles-Goldstein match will be staged either in the City Auditorium in Raleigh or in Richmond some time after June 20.

Form A. A. U. Team

Dunaway and Jimmy Briggs are organizing an athletic club in Raleigh with the intention of reviving interest in boxing there. They intend to join the A. A. U. in order to protect the amateur standing of the boys. Briggs and Dunaway are working on the most outstanding members of the State varsity and frosh teams and other amateurs in Raleigh to form a team.

events today and tomorrow. The millionaires boast of a troupe of athletes of unequalled ability. Some of their brilliant stars are Brownlee, Fulmer, "Red" Lewis, Bradsher, Ripley and a host of other fine performers.

An example of keen competition will be found in the 100-yard dash in which the race for laurels should center around the efforts of Gordon Lynn, Clemson; Earl Widmyer, Maryland; Johnny Brownlee, Duke; and Odell Childers, Carolina. All of this quartet have ran the century in less than 10 seconds, but their goal will be to break the existing conference record of 9.8 seconds.

From the spectators' viewpoint, the mile relay always proves interesting. Virginia, South Carolina, Maryland and Duke will offer the strongest representatives in this event. The Blue Devils are the defending Dixie titlists and also holders of the state crown.

More fun should fly when LeGore, Carolina, takes the field in the javelin throw. Ralston LeGore, throwing with a bad arm in the state meet, broke the existing state mark, and should better the record for the south in today's meet. His teammates, Armfield and Chandler, are also counted on for other points, placing two and three in the North Carolina track and field carnival.

The pole vault will hold more than its usual share of interest with a strong field of contestants entered. The Tar Heel trio of entrants, McDonald, Jackson, and Smith, will lead the field of strong favorites which will include Ripley, Duke.

Another thrilling race should take place in the mile when Captain Billy Lauck, Virginia; and "Red" Lewis, Duke, mix. Lauck ran a 4:15 mile against the star Navy milers last week while Lewis cracked the state mile record. But the up state school's entry will have to step some to even compete with the fast-stepping Cavalier miler. McRae, Carolina; and Dunaj, Washington and Lee; will also be in the money for honors.

The preliminary heats will start at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon with the field events while the hurdle and javelin throw heats will start at 3:00 o'clock. The finals will start tomorrow at 1:30 o'clock.

Cavaliers Offer Track Brothers

University, Va., May 18.—Virginia's track team will offer a brother act in the Southern conference track meet at Duke University tomorrow and Saturday.

The brothers are Roberts Coles, Jr., and George Minor Coles, sons of the Reverend and Mrs. Roberts Coles of Charlottesville. Roberts is a sprinter and hurdler, George puts the shot and throws the discus.

George is likely to steal most of the applause when the act comes off, but Roberts won't be jealous. He is used to seeing his younger brother take a couple of first places in every meet.

George Coles Stars

In Virginia's dual meet with North Carolina the shot put was won by George who pushed the 16-pound ball 48 feet, which is four and a half inches past the conference mark set by Jim Swart of V. P. I. in 1931. George has also hurled the discus 130 feet, but this is 14 feet less than the best Dixie mark.

Archie Hahn, Cavalier track coach, hopes that George will win both the shot and the discus throws at Durham.

Roberts will be entered in both the 100 and the 220 yard dashes and in the high hurdles. He is not as good a sprinter as either Milton Abramson or Henry Sackett or as swift a hurdler as Everett Russell or Linwood Antrim, but Coach Hahn counts on him to add several points to the total Cavalier score.

Roberts in Shape

A bad leg kept Roberts out of action all last season and prevented him from competing in the dual meets with North

Lecturer Discusses Library Commission

The activities of the library commissions throughout the United States were discussed in a lecture to the library school yesterday by Miss Marjorie Beale, secretary and director of the North Carolina Library Commission.

Special emphasis was placed on the library commission of this state and its work in rural districts with the small libraries, 4H clubs, and other units. Plans of the commission for putting books into circulation and extending its services to asylums and penal institutions were revealed, and Miss Beale laments the fact that state appropriations are not sufficient to enable the library to carry out this work.

fighters in Richmond, five of them being South Atlantic A. A. U. champions. The Richmond team won the last South Atlantic meet of the A. A. U. He has boxers from V. M. I., Washington and Lee, and Virginia.

As the arrangements now stand the Raleigh boxers are to meet the Richmond pugs there June 20, and then again in Raleigh about a week later. Bill Dunaway is scheduled to meet Freddy Wallmyer, South Atlantic A. A. U. 155 pound champion.

Quarles handed Goldstein a severe licking when the two met in the Tin Can during the past boxing season, the only defeat Bobby has against his four year collegiate record. Spike Webb, Navy coach, recently named the Cavalier fighter on his all-time, all-college, all-American boxing team at the 135 pound weight. He was the national collegiate champion in that class last year.

It's fine old Kentucky Burley that brings out the Best in other Tobaccos

Here's a leaf of genuine Burley Tobacco... the kind we get for Chesterfields from the Blue Grass Region of Kentucky.

Another Reason why
Chesterfields are Milder
and Taste Better

YOU could almost call Burley a new tobacco... for it was discovered much later than other kinds.

When curious tobacco men tried using this new leaf in cigarettes with other tobaccos... they found it gave character to the smoke.

Today Burley is one of the most important and widely-used tobaccos grown in America.

Naturally, we use a proportion of this good Burley tobacco in Chesterfields... and blend and cross-blend it so skillfully with the other good tobaccos that smokers notice just one good flavor and aroma.

Try Chesterfields — "They Satisfy."

There are four absolutely different types of tobaccos in Chesterfield Cigarettes. One of them is Burley Tobacco.

FEINSTEIN URGES SETTLEMENT OF YEARBOOK FEES

Seventy-Seven Students Owe Over $350 to Yackety Yack For Individual Space.

Marcus Feinstein, business manager of the "Yackety Yack," urges that all students and organizations in arrears in year book dues settle their obligations by Thursday of next week to preclude possible confusion when the books are distributed next week-end.

When the accounts were checked, it was discovered that 77 students owed the "Yackety Yack" for space in the publication, the total amount being $350.25.

Since they were registered in professional schools, 45 of these students did not pay for individual space, although space was given them in the book. Of this number, 18 are students of pharmacy, 20 of law, and seven of medicine. Each owes the publication $5.25.

Juniors Owe Money

The other students owing the "Yackety Yack" for space are all members of the junior class. These students paid dues to the sophomore class treasury, and each owes the year book $8.25.

The student council recommended to the business manager that all books be held back from those students who have failed to meet their obligations until those behind in payments had paid or had signed a three months' personal note.

It was decided, however, that books would be given only after the students and organizations who owed money to the "Yackety Yack" had settled their obligations.

N. C. SYMPHONY TO PLAY IN RALEIGH

Orchestra to Give First Capital City Concert Monday Under Junior League Auspices.

The North Carolina Symphony orchestra, composed of 50 professional musicians from all sections of this state with Lamar Stringfield as musical director, will offer a concert in the Raleigh Memorial auditorium Monday evening at 8:30 o'clock, under the auspices of the Junior league.

The Monday evening program marks the first appearance of this musical organization in Raleigh. It has appeared previously in concerts in Durham and Chapel Hill, and has been highly commended.

The North Carolina Symphony society, being the first organization of its kind in the United States, and the orchestra have received considerable attention from music enthusiasts in other states. Similar movements, modelling themselves upon it, have arisen in Virginia, Iowa, Louisiana, and Florida.

Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt is president of the organization and Lamar Stringfield is musical director. The public response to its appearance in Raleigh will greatly influence formation of the organization's future plans. The Symphony society believes there is sufficient musical interest among citizens of this state to insure the con-

Convicts Crossed Present Site Of Stadium In Thrilling Escape

Two Members of Chain Gang Engaged in Construction of Railroad Trestle Here in 1920 Fled From Authorities; Drew Gun Fire But Lost Guards in Dense Woods.

A shot rang out upon the still afternoon air. The silence was broken by the excited shouts of seventy men. Far to the right, under the cover of the brush, two fleeting figures in grey were to be seen streaking for the woods.

The scene was what is at present the trestle back of the buildings department structure. The time was the summer of 1920. The men were two of the convicts from the state prison in Raleigh, who were engaged in railroad construction. In the short hour before quitting time, just before 5:00 o'clock, they had worked their way over to the right of the large group, and when a short distance away, had suddenly taken to their heels.

Burch Involved

P. L. Burch, who is now heading the buildings department, had been connected with the supervision of the prisoners. It was he who told this story. It was he, it seems, who gave the first alarm, and who was largely instrumental in starting the formation of the large posse that followed the men.

It was not more than ten minutes before the prisoners were herded into their camp, a guard set over them, and the rest of the men set out on the hunt for the two who had escaped. For some distance the trail led clearly in a straight line toward the woods past Venable hall, through the ground that is now occupied by the library, over the old dirt road that is now the Raleigh highway, and finally into the underbrush on the other side of the road.

Make for Kenan Site

Here the trail was lost, and it took some minutes before one of the searching party luckily stumbled on a torn patch of a convict cap. From there, the track was again plainly to be seen for some distance. At the base of the huge poplar that used to stand where the North gate of Kenan stadium now is the prisoners had evidently halted for a hurried parley, but from there, they had hurried off again, perhaps warned by the crackling of branches, and the crunch of dry leaves, of the approach of their pursuers.

Quickly the posse followed the

GROUP WORKS ON YEAR'S PROGRAM

Hobbs Announces Tentative Features for Student Entertainment Committee Bills.

Tentative features for next year's Student Entertainment committee program were announced yesterday by A. W. Hobbs, dean of the school of liberal arts, who is retiring head of the program committee of the group.

It is very likely that Kruezeberg and Page, dancers, will be brought to the University by the committee next year. Other features which the group is considering booking for presentations here are: the Viennese Boys' choir; Maier and Patterson, pianists; Mischa Jullin, who appears with a theremin electro cello; the Boston sinfonietta, 17-piece orchestra; Dorothy Sands; V. L. Granville; and Stephen Leacock.

Granville appeared in "Dramatic Interludes" at the University last December 7 in the second presentation on the year's program.

The complete personnel of the committee for next year has not been announced, as several representatives are yet to be chosen. Members of the group who have been selected thus far are as follows: Dr. J. P. Harland, chairman; Walter Groover and K. W. Young of the commerce school; Harry Lee Knox of the rising senior class of the liberal arts school; Benton Bray and W. T. Davis of the school of education; and Professors Frederick H. Koch and Harold S. Dyer.

Nine in Infirmary

The following were confined in the infirmary yesterday: J. R. McIner; H. A. Brooks, E. B. Kahn, W. T. Heady, W. G. Propst, James S. Love, W. T. Davis, J. L. Crutchfield, Phillip Sasser.

SENIORS ELIGIBLE TO MEMBERSHIP IN ALUMNI GROUP

Fourth-Year Students May Become Junior Members of Organization for $1.

Members of the present senior class are eligible to junior membership in the Alumni association for a fee of one dollar, it was announced yesterday.

The regular fee for membership in the association is three dollars, but junior membership, carrying with it all the privileges of full membership, including a subscription to the "Alumni Review," may be obtained under the plan.

Seniors wishing to become members of the organization are urged to get in touch with members of the permanent executive committee of the class of 1933 sometime during this week or next to arrange to join the association.

Committee Members

Members of the committee are as follows: Alec Webb, Robert Hubbard, Ed Brenner, Perry Collins, Percy Idol, Vass Shepherd, Lee Greer, Sara Walser, Mary Frances Parker, Thomas R. Taylor, Jr., Sparks Griffin, Billy McKee, W. W. Johnson, Robert Novins, and Allan McLean.

Seniors may also get further information concerning the details of the plan from the following: Charlie Rose, Bobby Mason, and Arlindo Cate.

NEW SPIRIT CLUB SELECTS OFFICERS FOR COMING YEAR

Sophomores to Compose Membership to Foster Loyalty And Entertain Visitors.

The first steps toward the organization of the University club took place Thursday night at a meeting of representatives of the various campus organizations. This club has been organized in order to foster a spirit of loyalty to the University, and to provide a group to act as official hosts to the visitors to the University.

At the first meeting the election of officers took place and all were elected unanimously. Agnew Bahnson was elected president, Jack Pool, secretary, and Ralph Gardner, treasurer. An advisory committee of five was also appointed, which includes Johnny Phipps, president of the Monogram club, Irvin Boyles, president of the Interfraternity council, Coach Bob Fetzner, director of athletics, Harper Barnes, president of the student body, R. D. McMillan, president of the Grail, and as ex-officio member, Mayne Albright, director of Graham Memorial.

Sophs to Be Chosen

The members of the club will be chosen from the sophomore class at the beginning of the spring quarter and will serve throughout the spring quarter and two quarters of the next year. BAND WILL CLOSE YEAR TOMORROW

Musical Group to Present Final Concert of Year in Hill Music Hall at 4:00 O'clock.

The University band, directed by Professor T. Smith McCorkle, will present its final program of the year in Hill Music hall tomorrow afternoon at 4:00 o'clock.

The program will be greatly varied and will include a number of popular concert selections recently appearing on the programs of concert bands. An arrangement of a suite by J. S. Bach is being repeated from a previous concert by request. "The Pilgrims' March" from Mendelssohn's "Italian Symphony" will be presented as indicative of the possibility of successfully transcribing orchestral music for use by a symphonic band. In keeping with the custom of bands throughout the country to present one composition by John Phillip Sousa on each program during this year the famous bandmaster's "Cubaland Suite" will be played.

Present Wagner Composition
The feature number on the program will be Wagner's "Entry of Gods into Valhalla" and Ravel's "Bolero." Wagner's work is a descriptive composition in the form of a symphonic poem taken from his opera "Gotterdammerung." The "Bolero" is a recent composition by the modernist French composer. The Problem of the Future

The future of any school is dependent mainly upon the stream of manhood which flows through its doors. A corps of good professors and a healthy appropriation from the state legislature are primary necessities for the maintenance of this or any university, but all this preparation would go for naught if the youth of the state fails to seek its opportunity.

A chain is no stronger than its weakest link. The Carolina student body is no stronger than the weakest student. The weak will be weeded out by competition. Only the strongest will remain. It is to the interest of the students who plan to re-enter next fall to see that the empty ranks are filled by recruits who will be assets. Otherwise the general character of the student body will be seriously impaired.

Economic forces have created a need for new students. The state legislature, in seeking a source for economy, chose to cut the University appropriation. The administration will endeavor to have a large registration next fall in order to make up this loss. Without this large registration the general efficiency of the University will be seriously hampered.

These problems are mutual ones between the students and the administration. The latter will do all in its power to increase the enrollment. The former should make all possible efforts to attract strong recruits. The ends for which each are striving could be accomplished far more easily and effectively if the two should cooperate and work together.—N.A.T.

Injustice and The New Proposal

Dormitories are fast becoming empty due to the exodus of students into rooming houses and fraternity houses, and with this in view the trustees of the University are seeking to make it compulsory that all freshmen and sophomores stay in the dormitories. In their fervor for again having students room in the University's buildings the trustees have seemingly overlooked one important factor.

According to a statement made by Ed Lanier of the University self-help bureau: "A conservative estimate of the number of freshmen and sophomores now doing self-help work could not be lower than 225; of this number there are quite a few doing self-help work in return for their rooms."

Not only are a large percentage of the freshmen and sophomores engaged in working for their rooms in town, but there are others so financially disabled that the University is almost forced to give their room. At present there are twenty-five boys rooming in the Acacia House and the old Chi Phi House who are allowed to do so by the University merely for the payment of the actual costs of light, water, and heat. Of these twenty-five boys twenty-two are either freshmen or sophomores.

If the trustees see fit to adopt such a measure as they have proposed with no reservations, they will be injuring the University far more than the few extra dollars a month coming in from students in financial straits, who would be willing to work for their rooms elsewhere, but who would be forced to overburden themselves with room rent, would aid the University in paying the upkeep on the dormitories.

If, in spite of the general opposition which seems to be prevalent on the campus, the trustees should put into effect the rule forcing all men of the first two classes to reside in the dormitories, they ought at least to adopt a clause giving those freshmen and sophomores exemption from this rule who are able to show by a letter from the self-help bureau that they have secured a position to earn their room.—F.P.G.

Human Sacrifice Or Regulated Control

A heavy truck loaded with beer cruised along the public highway. The owner of the truck followed in an automobile. Suddenly a limousine swerved into the road and the truck crashed headlong into it. The front of the truck folded up and the driver was seriously injured, but Dr. John Grier Hibben, president-emeritus of Princeton University, was killed almost instantly. Such an accident inclines us to wonder "What price rapid-transit?" Is America to become as a pagan offering up human life as a sacrifice to the greedy Speed God? Does the owner of a commercial vehicle have the right to place his employee in an unfit machine and ride safely behind while that machine snuffs out the life of an eminent American educator?

The people have acquired an awful power in high-powered automobiles and roads over which they may be driven at terrific speeds but they yet need to acquire control over that power. Regulations, however numerous they may be, are not yet able to adequately specify who may safely exercise this power. Commercial hauling has put too many ponderous trucks upon the same road with smaller, lighter automobiles. Regulations should segregate traffic even more than the lane system does now. Commercial traffic might even be restricted to roadways separated from non-commercial traffic. As trucks and busses figure more and more frequently in accidents it would seem that such a solution becomes inevitable.

If transport companies are going to operate machines for profit let them either build their own road-beds as do the railway companies or pay a heavier tax than they at present pay for the privilege of using the public highway for private gain.—R.L.B.

To Stop The War Clouds

As this is being written, the situation in Europe, and especially in Germany, is one of great difficulty. The Nazis are arming, it seems in preparation for a new war, a war of revenge. Paraguay and Bolivia are up in arms in South America. Although she has never declared war, Japan continues her steady, relentless advance upon the crippled and almost helpless Chinese. There is hatred alive over the face of the globe, and it is smouldering, to break out in little spots every once in a while. We fear above all things that it will break out into open, riotous conflagration as it did just a few short years ago.

This time there can be no excuse to the effect that it will be a war to end wars, a war to make the world safe for democracy. This time it will be a war of retribution, a war of enroused passions, a war of hate and cruelty unparalleled in our history.

There is one way in which war can be ended, quickly and permanently. A campaign must be waged showing war to the youth of the world. Very seldom do we see a war veteran anxious for another experience the like of which he has already seen.

The youth sees the wild cavalry charge. He hears the tramp of marching feet, and his blood surges within him. The bold bugle call swells upon his ear, and lifting his head high, far he shouts the mad cry of youth for conquest. He sees the flag wave high, and his foot taps to the music of the march. He sees pictures of airplanes swooping down upon each other, the air livened by the sharp rattattatt of their guns. He sees the smart, trim infantry regiment parade by, wheeling in swift moving precision to the command of their officer. He goes to war. It is a game.

Then he sees war as he had never imagined it. He smells the vile rot of the trenches. He senses the all-pervading cloud of gloom and of steady drudge. The sickening, loathsomeness of it drops upon him. He sees men torn to a bloody mass of flesh by shrapnel. The thunder of the guns, and the scream of the shells is dinned in upon his ears by day, and makes restless his slumber. Under a grey, dead, cloudy sky, with mudcaked lips, he cries aloud his hate of it, and sometimes he goes nearly mad with terror. In the mad, panting horror of the charge, he sees the comrade he has known from boyhood fall beside him with a queer unearthly, choking in his throat, and with the stub of a bloody arm clutching a ghastly hole in his side. He is sick to his stomach, and he wants to die. There is a stinking live carrion of a horse in a mudhole a few feet away, screaming, tortured by thirst, dying from a gash in its stomach from which the intestines ooze in loathsome masses.

That is war, glorious war, patriotic war, war that is the bold brave charge of a cavalry regiment, a war of flags, and drums, and a march. That is war.

That is the war that the youth of our land, and of the German land, and of the French, and of the Italian, the British, the Japanese, the Russian should see. He would not go to war. There would be no more farces of conferences. There would be no more useless disarmament parleys. There would be peace, lasting, and universal peace.—W.H.W.

Flight Shots

By
C. G. THOMPSON

It has been one of our ambitions since entering the University to pull what might be termed a "Cornelia Spencer" so in one of our spare moments recently we climbed those three flights of stairs, up a long steel ladder, up, up, until finally before us was the bell which rang so valiantly to re-open the University many years ago. Only it isn't the same bell.

"The old order changeth, yielding place to the new." And we found instead of an old, worn, cracked, rusted relic, from which dangled a frayed rope, an absolutely modern bell with the legend inscribed: UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA, 1924.

We were disappointed to find that we could place our hands on the rope and heroically toll for something or other. Instead we examined a huge wheel which is operated from automatic clocks four flights below us. This wheel swings the bell to and fro, making to clang the clapper. On one sight was a what seemed a softer hammer; our guess was that it was the death toll.

Looking for interesting inscriptions and initials which we could puzzle over, we found practically nothing. That it was made by the Mereley Bell Co., Troy, N. C. was not of great interest. That there had been a visitor on June 20, 1929, only aroused our curiosity as to the unknown visitor.

Really the only exciting part of our visit was in the descent. We thought for a moment that the building was collapsing upon us. After regaining our composure to some extent, we realized that we were merely being called to class.

Of rather unusual interest to us is the little family of field rats which makes its domicile in the stone wall bordering the North Campus. This family has many little holes from which they scamper playfully. All of them quite tame, they often put on a miniature show before a small group of spectators. All very good, but occasionally they dart startlingly near one's feet.

Of greatest interest to us, though, is the biological oddity which is among them. For this family is cursed with an 'ugly duckling.' Distinguished from the drab grey of the rest, and perhaps ostracized by them, is one smaller rat whose skin is pure white.

Mayne Albright, University punster, tells one which involves no puns, but quips. He was visited a short time ago by a couple young University alumni who had the afternoon to spend in Chapel Hill. They were at a loss as to what to do. One, having been, in his undergraduate days, interested in Playmakers wished to see the current Junior Playmakers' production. The other preferred to call on his fraternity brothers. After some little arguing, the first announced decisively that he was going to see "Ali Baba." "All right," the other replied, "I'll go see the 'Forty Thieves.'"

We were startled out of the usual state of oblivion the other day when we saw a small baby, still in his three-cornered trousers, gazing intently at a sign in one of the down-town establishments. To see what interested him so, we peeked around and stole a glance at the sign. We are somewhat worried now as to what will become of the

Radio Clippings

About the same time Technocracy came into the popular view, Stoopnagle and Budd, air comedians, invented what they call Stoopnocracy. This cult devoted its time to inventing facilities to make the art of living easier. To join this party one need only invent some facilitator and send it to Stoopnagle and Budd. Among the latest of the inventions are collar buttons made of dynamite so you can find them when they explode, a swimming pool without water so you can't get cramps when you go in swimming, and automobiles with oval wheels for people who would rather go horse-back riding.

A big day is scheduled for the Radio calendar May 27 when the World's fair will open at Chicago. The CBS has announced that it will carry President Roosevelt's address opening the fair. SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

May 17, 1933.

Editor of the DAILY TAR HEEL, Chapel Hill.

Dear Sir: I read your article in today's paper about C. L. Bailill purchasing a couple of cars from me with bad checks. I would be very glad for the public to know just how this thing happened as just a part of the story will cause my creditors justifiable uneasiness.

This man Bailill was brought to me by one of the best known men in Hillsboro and stated that this man had made reservations at a local hotel for he and his wife, and had employed a crew of men to assist him in doing Government Surveying. I happen to be acquainted with Government Soil Surveyors and his activities were usual for this kind of work.

If you think my alibi will strengthen me with my creditors, I sincerely hope you will publish this letter.

Tar Heels And Wolfpack Battle In Important Tilt This Afternoon At State

Both Teams Have Eight Wins And One Loss in Southern Conference Title Race.

Carolina's fast stepping baseball team is scheduled to meet N. C. State at Raleigh this afternoon in probably the deciding contest of the Southern Conference championship.

The two opposing nines are in a deadlock for the Southern Conference lead, each with eight wins and one defeat. South Carolina has three wins against no defeats, but as it has no more conference battles this is hardly enough games to put it in the race. A win for State will assure it of the title, while a win for Carolina will at least give it a tie for top honors as the Duke game is its only other contest this season.

While State is already out of the Big Five race the game will be important for the Tar Heels. Wins for Carolina in both the state and Duke game will give it a tie with Davidson for the state championship.

In the first meeting of these two teams two weeks ago last Tuesday, the State team handed Carolina a 7-6 beating in a loosely played battle. It was the only conference loss the Tar Heels have had this season. State lost its conference game to Duke early in the season.

Andrews Scheduled

Andrews, who hasn't twirled since his great no-hitter last week, will be ready to go and will give the Wolfpack plenty of trouble. Griffith pitched the first game for Carolina against State and was nipped for ten blows. Seitz, State ace, will probably face the Carolina team, with Lynn being held in reserve.

Since the State defeat the Carolina team has been stepping in a fast way. The Tar Heels have six straight victories, three of them shut-outs. Only five runs have been counted on the Tar Heels and three of these were in the Navy game.

The Carolina team is in excellent condition after its northern trip and took a short workout yesterday. The first part of the practice was on the freshman field due to the high school game, but the Tar Heel infield finished its workout in a snappy drill on Emerson field.

Frosh Netmen Close Season With 8-1 Win

The freshman tennis team closed its season here yesterday with a win over State College, 8-1. Bernie Friedman defeated John Ames, 6-2, 6-2.

Lott defeated Penn, 6-0, 6-1. Lynch defeated Westbrook, 4-6, 6-4, 9-7. Johnston defeated Hornbeck, 6-1, 6-1. Linker defeated Williams, 6-4, 10-12, 7-5. Jones defeated Brown, 6-0, 7-5.

Lott and Johnson defeated Ames and Hornbeck, 6-4, 6-2. Primrose and Jones defeated Westbrook and Williams, 6-1, 7-5. Trainer and Linker of Carolina lost to Brown and Penn, 6-4, 6-2.

AROUND the FIELD

EARL WIDMYER FIGURES as how he will win the century dash this afternoon. After the trials yesterday, Earl, a little disgusted because he had loafed in the first heat of the 100 trials, said that he had a feeling he would take the dash. "Brownlee will have three men to worry about and I will only have one," said Widmyer, "that may be something in my favor." The Maryland speed merchant is worried only about the Duke star. He has beaten Mountain Goat Lynn of Clemson, and didn't seem to have any fear at all for our Childers. Widmyer beat Lynn by about a yard in the Penn relays for second place.

JOHN BROWNLEE SET A new record in the 220 low hurdles yesterday for the sake of convenience. He allowed as how he would be tired out by the time the low hurdles event arrives this afternoon so he broke the tape in 23.8 for a new conference record. His old record was 24 flat, made in 1931 and tied in 1932. "I'll be running the 100 and 220 tomorrow as well as the hurdles and the relay, so I thought I'd try and better this record today," he said yesterday after the race. John's old man was down from Philadelphia to see his son run for the first time. He was all smiles after the race as he walked up and down the track with his twenty-two year old offspring. Not bad when you have to portion off the days you are going to break certain records.

BILLY LAUCK OF VIRGINIA is all set to break the conference record in the mile and set one that will stand for a long while. Lauck's 4:15.7 mile against Navy is the best turned in for that distance in the country this year. Late yesterday the report was obtained that the Virginian had been scratched in the 880 and the two mile to assure a fresh race in his specialty. Besides this, Captain Billy has the post, the prized position at the start. Red Lewis also scratched in the 880 and the two mile. He must be counting on flying, cause that's the only way he can push Lauck. I still claim that Ed McRae will profit by Lewis' ambitiousness and may take second. Run your own race Ed, and wave to Red as you pass.

JOHN GUNTER PULLED THE surprise of the opening day. He qualified in both the 100 and 220 dashes. Johnny closed Tarrall, Duke threat, out of both these races, cutting points from their total that the Blue Devils figured as certainties. Gunter's work yesterday was a pleasing surprise to Coach Bob, 'cause points are dear in this meet. This Tarrall has a habit of jumping the gun. Widmyer said that the only reason he was in the finals of the indoor meet was that he jumped the gun. Earl said that he did yesterday also but to no avail.

VIRGINIA MAY HAVE THE most evenly balanced club, but Carolina is going to give them a race for first honors. To me, it seems that both Virginia and the Tar Heels will finish ahead of the ambitious Devils.

NATE ANDREWS WILL GET a chance to cut State down this afternoon in Raleigh. A Tar

FOUR STAR WEIGHT MEN OF CONFERENCE

3:10—Two mile run.
3:30—Low hurdles.
3:45—One mile relay.

The surprise performance of the day was the running of John Gunter, Carolina 100 and 220 man. Gunter finished ahead of Tarrall, Duke star, in both events and shut the Devil runner out of the finals. John finished third in the first heat of the 100 which was won by Widmyer, and second in the 220 heat which was won by Mountain Goat Lynn.

No other surprises or upsets were recorded in the opening day's events. Everybody waited anxiously to see the mile run today in which a hot race between Lauck of Virginia and Lewis of Duke is anticipated. Both men were scratched in the 880 and two mile runs, signifying their intentions of giving everything in the mile run. Lauck's phenomenal time of 4:15.7 last week against Navy is the best mile turned in in the country this year in college circles.

THREE FRAT NET TEAMS TIED FOR INTRAMURAL TOP

Chi Psi, Sigma Chi, and Sigma Nu In Semi-Final Round of Playoffs.

Chi Psi's intramural netmen swept to a 3-0 win over Sigma Phi Sigma yesterday to enter the final round of the playoffs for the fraternity league championship. Loughlin, No. 1 man for the chipis came from behind to win a 2-5, 5-1, 5-1 tilt from R. Froneberger, while Atwood annexed the second singles engagement for the winners, 5-4, 0-5, 5-3, over S. Froneberger. The doubles went to Chi Psi by forfeit.

Sigma Chi defeated Phi Delta Theta, 2-1, to enter the semi-final round. Lacy, of Sigma Chi, won the first singles engagement, 1-5, 5-4, 5-4, over Enloe, but Wilson evened the count for Phi Delta by defeating Harlee, 5-4, 4-5, 5-2. The doubles match went to Lacy and Harlee, who defeated Enloe and Parker, 5-3, 4-5, 5-3.

Sigma Nu, which received a bye to the semi-finals, will meet Sigma Chi at 2:00 o'clock Monday afternoon, the winner to oppose Chi Psi for the fraternity league championship at 4:30 the same afternoon.

Carr, winner of the dormitory league championship, will meet the frat champion.

BROWNLEE MAKES NEW RECORD FOR 220 LOW HURDLES

Duke, Virginia, South Carolina And Clemson Follow Tar Heels in Preliminaries.

Carolina's Tar Heels sent 20 men into the finals of the 11th annual Southern Conference meet, which is being held in Duke stadium today. In the nine events which saw competition in the preliminaries yesterday only one record was broken, that by John Brownlee when he broke his own 220 low hurdle mark.

The Duke star set the new mark at 23.8 in place of the old one of 24 flat made in 1931 and tied in 1932.

Duke with 15, Virginia, with 14, South Carolina with nine and Clemson six, led the qualifiers. V. M. I. had three, Maryland two, and W. & L., V. P. I., and State had one each.

The high jump, two mile, mile, 880, pole vault, and the mile relay did not have preliminaries and the finals in these will be run off this afternoon.

South Carolina had only six men in the preliminary events, but these six counted for the Gamecocks' nine places in the finals. More men are coming up from Columbia today, however, for the finals which required no preliminary trials.

HIGH TITLE WON BY GREENSBORO IN FAST BATTLE

Durham Loses to Greensboro 2 to 1 in State High School Championship Game.

Greensboro won their first state high school class 'A' championship yesterday afternoon on Emerson field, downing Durham 2 to 1. The game was unusually fast and well played throughout with each team committing only one error.

E. Clement turned in a beautiful game on the mound for the winners, holding Durham to only two hits, one a home run by Ferrell, cousin to the famous big league stars. The Greensboro twirler held the Durham team hitless until the seventh frame when the Durham outfielder rounded the sacks on his long blow. The last Durham hit was also made in the seventh, Norris, following Ferrell to bat, getting a single.

The Greensboro pitcher also made some sort of strikeout record. Mixing a fast ball with a nice curve and drop, Clement fanned fourteen Durham batters. Only thirty-two men faced the winning hurler.

Salmon, losing twirler, also did some very nice work on the mound. Although Greensboro got nine hits they were well scattered, not more than two coming in any one inning. Greensboro made only one earned run off of Salmon, who retired six of the winning batters by the whiffing method.

Greensboro scored both of its runs before the Durham team counted. Carroll tallied the first Greensboro run in the third frame. Carroll first up in the third inning led off with a single and went to second on Ray's perfect sacrifice. Shelton then brought Carroll around with the second single of the inning.

Crutchfield, the catcher, scored the winning run in the first of the seventh. The receiver led off with a single and advanced to second on the Durham pitcher's error of Carroll's grounder. Greeson, subbing for Smith in rightfield, drove Crutchfield in with a single.

Both teams played airtight ball in the field and turned in several fast plays. The Durham keystone combination made a double play in the eighth, Hunter, second baseman, to Cheek, short, to Norris, first. Carroll and Cheek, shortstops on Greensboro and Durham, respectively, were especially outstanding on defense. Carroll had five nice assists to his credit, while Cheek had six put-outs and four assists.

Shelton, with a double and a single out of four, and Fesmire, with two singles for four, led the winning batters. Ferrell's homer, and Norris' single were the only Durham hits.

SET PLANS GIVEN BY GERMAN CLUB

First Dance of Set to Take Place Place on Night of Commencement for New Custom.

The three-day program of this year's German Club commencement dances will include seven events as has been the custom in the past. The series of dances will take place Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, June 6-8 inclusive, with Eddie Duchin's orchestra playing.

Departing from the practice of past years, the first dance of the set will take place on the night of commencement instead of the following night. This opening dance will be in the Tin Can Tuesday night, 10:00 to 1:00 o'clock.

The next day, Wednesday, festivities will continue with a morning dance, 11:30 to 1:30 o'clock, followed in the afternoon by a tea dance, 4:30 to 6:00 o'clock. That night the day's activities will be closed by a formal evening dance, 10:00 to 1:00 o'clock at which time the figure will be performed by the commencement marshals and ball managers.

The final day will be taken up in the same manner, beginning with a morning dance and an afternoon tea dance, then closing with another formal evening dance. At the night dance the regular German Club figure will take place. At this time both the old and the new officers will take part. Lenoir Wright is the present president of the club and David Morgan will be the new leader.

Eddie Duchin and his famous radio and phonograph orchestra have been signed to play for the entire set, according to an announcement made recently by Milton Barber, secretary of the club. Complete announcements concerning the chaperons will be made later. Mrs. F. P. Graham heads the chaperon committee.

Executive Group For German Club Named

Dave Morgan, president of the German club, yesterday announced his appointments to the executive committee of the group for the year 1933-34.

John T. O'Neil has been appointed as chairman of the committee and Buck Harris, Pete Tyree, Phil Sasser, and Graham McLeod as members. The officers of the German club are Dave Morgan, president, Bob Reynolds, vice-president, Charles Woollen, Jr., secretary-treasurer, and Chapin Litten, assistant secretary-treasurer. These men will serve as ex-officio members of the executive committee.

DR. GRAHAM ADDRESSES CHAPEL HILL ROTARIANS

Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the Greater University, addressed the Chapel Hill Rotary club at its regular meeting at the Carolina Inn this week.

Dr. Graham described the obstacles that had to be overcome by those who fought for adequate support for the public schools and the educational and charitable institutions. A great deal of the opposition to appropriations requested was due solely to mis-information that was in time cleared up, for the most part, he said.

The club elected Dr. Graham to honorary membership.

Merchants Test Sales Tax
The North Carolina Merchants Association will decide in its June meeting what action to take regarding the recently levied sales tax, but advices from Charlotte said the local organization there would take steps immediately to test the laws' constitutionality.

Nanking Accused
The Canton government declared in a formal statement today that under the pressure of Japanese military power negotiations are going on in North China in which the Nanking government is preparing to permit Japan to exert direct influence over the affairs of all China.

Geneva Waits
Geneva was reported yesterday as waiting upon an outline of the United States' stand on various issues. Today's conference was expected to throw a new light on the German attitude. Meanwhile the Soviet government announced its willingness to participate in the London economic conference.

Japs Accept Peace Plans
A spokesman for the Japanese foreign office said today that acceptance by Japan "in principle" of the world peace appeal of President Roosevelt but with strong reservations likely will be sent to Washington next week. However, these reservations may virtually nullify acquiescence in Roosevelt's program.

South's Mills Booming
A gradual comeback of the steel industry in the Birmingham district was sensed according to the latest reports. Production is approaching the 30 per cent capacity mark. There have been no recent big orders but small lots are making up shipments that have depleted stocks and one by one the blast furnaces and open hearth works are resuming operations.

Boy Murderer Convicted
Harry Murch, New York schoolboy convicted of stabbing twelve year old William Bender, was sentenced today to serve from twenty years to life in Sing Sing prison. There was some doubt as to whether he was old enough to receive sentence, but the most authentic records said that he was seventeen years old and thus liable to the penalty. An appeal has been filed by the parents.

Around The Field

Heel win today would mean a conference lead and also a step forward in the Big Five race. Andrews slept most of the trip north and should be in great shape for today. Coach Hearn's men are going at a fast speed lately, I hope they aren't filling up with carbon. Narcissus Dixon set out for Knoxville on receipt of his suspension here, but Monday papers stated that he had been released after a two-day workout. Cordwood was a hard worker, its too bad he didn't think twice before he sipped.

CLARK GRIFFITH WAS HOST to Carolina's players while they were in Washington. The team saw Cleveland and the Senators tangle. Griffith asked immediately about George Brandt, husky Tar Heel first sacker who lives in Washington. George worked out with the Nats a bit last summer. Coach Bunn had 'em all meet Clark. Boy, did they feel big. Can't you see J. Whimpy Wellington Weathers? COACH BUNNY, BILL BRADLEY, Cleveland scout, and Jakey Taylor, manager, took the squad to some sort of show in Washington. During the performance the leading lady waltzed around in the audience, tickling the bald heads. Coach Bunn was down near the front with the spotlight reflecting off his head, the gal missed him and passed on to Weathers. Jakey tried to get her to rub Vergil's mediocre crop. "He's too young and ugly," she said and passed on to Red Matheson. He's the man.

now heavy track, back of the north goal posts, up past the ten yard line, zigzagging through the underbrush up to the fifty, cutting across the field, jumping rocks and branches in the mad pursuit. One of the men stumbled just as he crossed the other thirty yard line, but he managed to regain his balance and cross the south goal line untouched. The shreds of grey clothing on the branches indicated that the escaped prisoners had several times almost been brought down by a thorny bush, but had weaved and slid their ways past all takers until they reached the heavier forests on the other side.

Here the trail was lost, and all other effort to find it again proved fruitless. Far into the night, the search was kept up, but it was to no avail. The next day bloodhounds were brought from Raleigh to aid in the hunt, but they were no better than the humans at picking up the trail. Thus the men were never found.

"I remember one of those men clearly," remarked Burch as he concluded his story. "He was a handsome young fellow; had plenty of brain too. He had a knack for weaving little pieces of gold into rings, and of making pretty charms out of dimes and nickels." Here the narrator was silent for a moment. "You know," he looked up again, "come to think of it, I had a lot of talks with that fellow. He was in for murder, by the way, had shot a Greek down in Wilson I believe it was. Well, he'd told me he didn't intend to serve out his thirty years." Here Burch shook his head, and a grim smile played about the corners of his mouth. "Too bad I didn't take him seriously."

GEOLOGY GROUP MAKES WATER-FINDING RESEARCH

During the past few weeks, members of the University geology department have extended their geophysical researches into the field of water-finding and have made many tests around Chapel Hill.

The depths of the water-bearing horizons on the earth have been tested in 11 localities in the various types of rocks near the University. In all these cases the depth of the water-bearing horizons could be told with considerable accuracy, and in many of the locations, tests show that a more abundant water supply could be had by sinking to a lower level the well in which the tests were made.

This method could be of much assistance to any one contemplating sinking wells, especially those for artesian supplies.

"Song Of The Eagle" Is Carolina Feature

The march of events in America during the past two decades will be portrayed by "Song of the Eagle," motion picture drama shown at the Carolina theatre today.

Charles Bickford, Richard Arlen, Mary Brian, Jean Hersholt, Louise Dresser, Andy Devine, and George E. Stone play the leading roles. Ralph Murphy directs the film, which was produced for Paramount by Charles R. Rogers.

The picture chronicles war and peace, prohibition and speculation, and depression and sorrow, and goes into the future, dealing with restoration of prosperity and legalization of beer.

To anyone interested Womble would talk about the necessity of preparation for the future life. Sometimes he would clinch his point by showing his bearer his own grave and the inscription.

Dr. J. S. Hooker of Chapel Hill, who is the Womble family physician, has a high regard for the intellectual qualities of the seventy-five year-old fatalist. Womble often talked to him of his project in the graveyard. At his last anniversary party he discussed freely his "country place." A few days later about Easter time of this year, he died. The date "1933" was not wasted.

TAR HEEL STAFF EXECUTIVES WILL BE PICKED TODAY

Four Positions on Staff of Campus Daily to Be Filled at Elections at 2:00.

Members of all divisions of the staff of the DAILY TAR HEEL will gather at the office of the paper in 205-G Graham Memorial this afternoon at 2:00 o'clock to elect men to executive positions on the staff.

For the past month, several staff members have been in competition for various positions, and today's election will bring the contests to a close.

Positions Open

Positions for which men have been competing include: chairmanship of the editorial board, assistant sports editorship, one city editorship, and the position of dramatic critic.

Nominations for the chairmanship of the editorial board are as follows: Vergil Lee, Vermont Royster, and Lonnie Dill. Bill Anderson and Jimmie Morris have been competing for the post of assistant sports editor.

Four men—Milton Kalb, Bob Barnett, Judah Shohan, and Walter Rosenthal—are trying out for the position of dramatic critic. Reviews of the Playmaker production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," have been written by those four contestants.

There are two city editorships open on the desk. The following four men have been competing for this position: Phil Hammer, Bob Page, Jack Lowe, and Irving Suss.

One other executive position on the board has already been filled. Joe Sugarman, who has served over a year as chairman of the feature board, was unanimously named to the same position at the staff banquet.

ORCHESTRA WILL PLAY AT RALEIGH

North Carolina Symphony Group To Appear Under Auspices Of Junior League.

Under the auspices of the Junior league, the North Carolina Symphony orchestra will appear in concert tomorrow evening at 8:30 o'clock in Raleigh Memorial auditorium.

The group, directed by Lamar Stringfield, is composed of 50 professional musicians and is making its first appearance in Raleigh. Previously it has presented concerts at the University and in Durham.

The North Carolina Symphony society, of which Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt is president and Stringfield musical director, will be greatly influenced by public response to tomorrow's recital in determining its plans for next year.

Members of the society, which is the first of its kind in the United States, believe that there is sufficient interest in music in North Carolina to insure the continuation of its existence.

Compositions to be played in the Raleigh concert include: "Marriage of Figaro," overture by Mozart; "Symphony No. 1 in C Major," by Beethoven; "The Legend of John Henry," Stringfield's most recent symphonic work; "On the Steppes of Central Asia," by Borodin; and Tchaikowsky's "March Slave."

Public Administration School Closes Successful First Year

Walker Award Exam Finished Yesterday

Four students in the University school of commerce yesterday took the two-part competitive examination for the Carbis A. Walker accounting award.

The examination, consisting of questions in accounting and business law, was conducted in the accounting laboratory of Bingham hall with the following men competing: Jack Thompson, A. T. Oliverio, J. A. Stallings, and M. F. Stone.

The award, established last year by Carbis A. Walker of Winston-Salem, one of the leading accountants of the state, consists of $35 and a medal. Announcement of this year's winner in the competition will be made in a later issue.

LOCAL PRINTERS GIVEN CONTRACT

Carl G. Thompson, Editor, Makes New Addition to Carolina Handbook.

The Orange Printshop has been given the contract for the printing of the 1933-34 Freshman "Handbook." It was announced yesterday by W. T. Minor, business manager of the publication. For the past several years, this printshop has been printing the Y. M. C. A. "Handbook" and the precedent set will probably be continued.

Carl G. Thompson, editor of the book, also announced that work on the different sections of the editorial material in the book was reaching completion and that the assistant editors were cooperating in his endeavor to get the editorial matter completed before the middle of June. Although the assistant editors will be able to leave here when exams are over, Thompson declared his intention of remaining here until the first proofs of the editorial copy were run off.

Charles Bond, who is in charge of the Y. M. C. A. section, has completed his work and has the copy ready to turn in. Phil Hammer, assistant editor, has completed the church section and many of the organizations. Bill Anderson, sports editor, said that as soon as the final results of the spring activities were in, he would be able to finish up the sports section. Vermont C. Royster, associate editor, has been working with Thompson on introductory material and make-up of the book.

A new feature will be added this year, Thompson announced, that of a sketch map of the campus, in which the buildings will be outlined so as to enable one make out their external appearance from the map.

Feature Board Meeting

The feature board will convene tomorrow afternoon in the offices of the DAILY TAR HEEL for the last time this quarter. All members are requested to attend promptly at 2:30.

Infirmary List Small

The following were confined to the infirmary yesterday: Max Block, H. E. Cope, E. B. Kahn, W. J. Jervy, James Love, J. R. McInner, W. L. Davis, W. G. Propst.

Youngest of University Divisions of Instruction Established Here Last Fall.

Although the youngest of University divisions of instruction, the school of public administration closes the first year of its existence with a record of achievement gratifying and satisfactory to its sponsors and the administration at large.

Quoting Dean W. C. Jackson, who has guided the department through its initial experiences: "On the whole the work of the school of public administration during the past year has been highly profitable and the results quite pleasing."

Surveying State Problem

Despite its youth, the school has felt its responsibility strongly enough to undertake an important research problem. The project now in progress is the study of the financial administration of certain North Carolina cities during the depression. The school has been cooperating with the governor's office of relief in this work. Dr. Roy M. Brown of the school is technical advisor to the relief administration, while George Lawrence is a district director under the Reconstruction Finance committee.

With Dean W. C. Jackson at the head of the department, the school of public administration was first established at the University last fall. It is an extension and an enlargement of the school of public welfare, which was established at the University in 1920.

Offers Many Courses

To those interested in public administration, the school offers training in the field of city management, county management.

Five Players In Salon Ensemble Go To Europe Free This Summer

Johnson, Field, Hazelman, Knox, and Murphy Will Sail July 8 on S.S. Tuscania as Ship's Orchestra; Are Members of Group Organized Under Johnson's Direction in 1931.

To sail to Europe, and to be paid for it in the bargain, is the lucky fate of Director Thor Johnson and four members of the Carolina Salon Ensemble. They will constitute the ship's orchestra this summer on the S. S. Tuscania of the Cunard line.

Those accompanying Johnson, all Carolina students in his orchestra, are Dan Field, Herbert Hazelman, Harry Lee Knox, and John Murphy. They will leave New York harbor July 8 and will return at the end of a month, after spending some time in Scotland. While on the ship they will play both dance and concert music.

Not Full Orchestra

The five players on the Tuscania represent only a small part of the entire Salon Ensemble, only those who could play more than one instrument being chosen for the trip. The complete orchestra consists of 18 pieces. Since it was organized under Johnson's direction in the fall of 1931, the group has played a total of 63 concerts, performing throughout the state as well as on the campus.

Early this spring the Ensemble applied for a job with the Cunard line, and were successful. In return for their

SYMPHONIC BAND TO GIVE PROGRAM THIS AFTERNOON

Group Under the Direction of Smith McCorkle to Appear in Hill Music Hall at 4:00.

The University symphonic band will appear under the direction of Professor T. Smith McCorkle in Hill Music hall this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock. This is the final concert to be given this year by the group.

Since its organization as a symphonic unit in the winter quarter, the band has presented several concert programs on the campus and out of town. In each program its director has stressed the importance of the superior type of symphonic music to the modern concert band. The Asheville Citizen recently described the University band as a "pioneer in a new movement for better band music."

Barnett to Give Solo

William G. Barnett, sophomore in the school of music, will offer a group of baritone solos accompanied at the piano by Professor H. S. Dyer. Barnett has received recognition throughout the state as a baritone soloist from his appearance in the presentation of Gaul's "The Holy City" in Fayetteville May 5. He was recently selected for the solo part in Mendelssohn's "The Elijah" to be presented here during commencement week.

The remainder of this afternoon's program will include "The Pilgrim's March" from the "Italian Symphony" by Mendelssohn, "Entry of the Gods into Valhalla" from "Götterdämmerung" by Wagner, an arrangement of a suite by J. S. Bach, Ravel's "Bolero," and Sousa's "Cubaland Suite."

New University Club To Hold Second Meeting Monday Night

Fraternities Asked To Send Delegates

University club representatives from the following fraternities failed to attend the organization meeting of the group Thursday night: Alpha Lambda Tau, Alpha Tau Omega, Beta Theta Pi, Chi Psi, Chi Phi, Delta Psi, Delta Sigma Pi, Kappa Alpha, Kappa Sigma, Lambda Chi Alpha, Phi Delta Theta, Phi Sigma Kappa, Sigma Delta, Sigma Phi Epsilon, Sigma Phi Sigma, and Theta Kappa Nu.

The above groups are asked to send their representatives to the meeting of the club tomorrow night in Graham Memorial.

TWO INSTRUCTORS GET FELLOWSHIPS

Arnold Kimsey King and J. Minor Gwynn to Study in North Next Year.

Announcement of the award of fellowships for study next year to two members of the University training school was made here yesterday through the University school of education.

The receivers of the two fellowships are Arnold Kimsey King, whose award was granted by the General Education board, and J. Minor Gwynn, whose fellowship was given by Yale University.

The fellowship given King carries a stipend of $1,800, and he will study at the University of Chicago, taking work in history and education leading to a Ph. D.

Gwynn's fellowship carries $500 and tuition for one year, the total value being $900. He will do graduate work in the department of education at Yale on a program leading to the doctor's degree.

King received his A. B. in education at the University in 1925, and spent one year here taking graduate work in education. After one year's graduate study in education and history at the University of Chicago, he received his master's degree there. At present he is head of the department of history in the training school.

Gwynn received his A. B. at the University in 1918, and after teaching school at Reidsville for several years and serving as superintendent there, he came back to the University as instructor in Latin.

He did graduate work in Latin here for one year and was given his master's degree in 1927, with a major in Latin and a minor in education. He spent one year at the University of Chicago in graduate study and at present is head of the department of Latin in the training school and superintendent of the Chapel Hill high school.

NEW BOOKS RELEASED BY UNIVERSITY PRESS

Two books have just been released by the University press: "Joseph Wharton's Essay on Pope" by W. D. MacClintock of the University of Chicago, and "Gibbons Antagonism to Christianity" by Shelby T. McCloy, instructor in English at Duke.

All Members of Recently Organized Campus Representative Body Urged to Attend.

FOR UNIVERSITY LOYALTY

Plans Will Be Discussed for Entertainment of Visiting Athletes Next Fall.

The second meeting of the newly formed University club, organized last week by representatives of campus organizations, has been called for tomorrow night at 7:00 o'clock in room 214 Graham Memorial.

Business to be brought before the members at tomorrow's meeting will be a discussion of plans for next fall's activities in entertaining visiting athletes.

Members Urged to Attend

The six non-fraternity members of the group and the fraternity representatives elected from each Greek organization are urged to be present at the gathering.

The non-fraternity representatives chosen are: J. D. Winslow, Snooks Aitken, Odell Childers, Norment Quarles, Ed Waldrop, and Walter Levitan. Some of these men failed to receive notice of their election in time to be present at the first meeting.

The advisory committee, composed of Harper Barnes, president of the student body; Johnny Phipps, president of the Monogram club; Coach Bob Fetzer; R. D. McMillan, president of the Grail; and Mayne Albright, director of Graham Memorial, is also asked to attend the meeting.

As expressed in yesterday's issue of the paper, the basic purpose of the organization is to foster a greater spirit of loyalty to the University and to provide an energetic group to act as official hosts.

Y CABINETS HOLD MEET IN FOREST

Annual Hillside Gathering of Members Will Close Activities for This Year.

The final meeting of the Y. M. C. A. cabinets will take place this afternoon as the organization holds its annual Hillside meeting in the Forest theatre at 4:30 o'clock.

As today's gathering will bring the year's activities to an end, all members of the "Y," all cabinet members, and all cabinet officers are urged to be present.

Installation Ceremony

The officers who are retiring this year will make their annual report and turn over their duties to the new officials, who will be installed this afternoon.

The new officers of the "Y," who will assume duties today, are: Jesse Grier, B. S. Smith, Russell Mickle, Billy Yandell, John Acee, Bill Minor, J. D. Winslow, and Jack Pool.

Outgoing Officers

Retiring officers are: Jesse Parker, Mark Lynch, Van Webb, Jimmy Craighill, Claud Freeman, Ed Martin, Simmons Patterson, Henry Emerson, Bill McKee, Jim Steere, Bill Minor, and R. M. McMillan.

The gathering will be addressed by Dr. Francis F. Bradshaw, dean of students. In case of rain, the meeting will take place in the hall of the Di senate.

At Last—Action!

The formation of the University spirit club Thursday night satisfies a long-felt need on this campus. We had talked about reviving school spirit, supporting our teams, and bringing back organized cheering, but toward these ends little more than talking was done. Now, however, we may give full credit to the initiative and the splendid cooperation shown by those representatives to the meeting, which resulted not only in making definite provision for a spirit club next year but actually in electing next year's officers.

The club has a dual purpose. First, it intends to encourage student loyalty to the University and, secondly, to provide a group to act as hosts to visiting teams. It is part of the general purpose of the Monogram Club to do both these things, and that organization has even appointed a committee to welcome visitors to the University. But it is especially significant that the student body at large can boast of a group that will supplement the work of the Monogram Club and will represent the hospitality of the entire University.

For the purposes of the University club reflect ideals that are infinitely greater than a selfish and narrow-minded school spirit. Although the club intends to foster school spirit, this is not its only reason for existence, and we may be proud that students of this University do not regard cheers for the home team as the sole expression of their support and loyalty. For good will toward the opposing team, a hospitable attitude toward the stranger within our gates, shows best how much we think of the University and how much we are anxious for our visitors to think the same thing.

Toward the accomplishment of its commendable purposes we wish the University club success throughout the coming years.—A.T.D.

Another Near-Sighted Act

When the legislature repealed the act providing free tuition for those students of the school of education who expect to teach in this state, it took a step the ugly footprints of which will be long in erasing from the educational system of North Carolina. Many years ago, a wiser body of men, acting in the same capacity, desiring to raise our schools out of the slough in which they had long been stranded, placed on the statute books a provision for free tuition for embryonic teachers of the state attending the University. This provision has been material in placing our school system on the plane of respectability which it occupied a few years ago, and was influential in making this at Chapel Hill the greatest educational school in the south.

Many defects have been found in the provision, and doubtless the contention that many students have availed themselves of free tuition who never really considered teaching as a permanent vocation is true, but granting these flaws in the law, the money spent by the state in carrying it out has not been wasted, for we have an excellent corps of high school teachers today, thanks largely to the fruits of that provision and our efficient education school here.

The teaching profession in the state is at present not an alluring one, and even with the attraction offered by free tuition, the finest young brains of the state are being diverted into more fruitful fields of endeavor. With salary scales for teachers as they are, and all attractions gone, it is easy to conceive that before long, our schools will be manned by second rate men and women, trained in cheap normal schools where standards are low and instruction is inferior. With its enrollment dwindling, as it likely will, our education school cannot long exist and a great and noble institution will have passed away. Then, too late, these men will awake to the folly which they have committed.—W.A.S.

Radicalism And Cheap Exhibitions

True to their schedule the over-enthusiastic "free-thinkers" of Columbia staged their second annual riot last Monday following agitation for the reinstatement of Donald Henderson, professor who was discharged for what he termed his "liberal ideas." Once again the patriotic students have brought notoriety and disgrace with their cheap demonstrations in the name of liberality.

It was just about this time last spring that Morningside Heights was the scene of another riot of the expulsion of Reed Harris, then editor of the Columbia Spectator. So well did the general public receive the rioters last year and so much did the discharged editor profit by the publicity that, Hollywood style, they decided to pull a follow-up at the first opportunity. Already this second riot has begun to attract notice in the national press. Columbia is in the limelight again.

Liberalism, if it is true progressive liberalism, is an essential ingredient to any higher educational institution, and it should be the aim of the institution to instill it into the students. Likewise, it should be the duty of every liberal thinker to resist any inclination towards bigotry, but the recent actions at Columbia savor too much of the "red" spirit. Men of intelligence do not need pamphlets urging them to "strike!" nor soap-box orators pleading for "freedom of speech" to convince them that one side or the other is right.

There is quite a difference between intellectual radicalism and liberalism, and mob movements. The actions at Columbia are to be regretted, and it is to be hoped that in the future that student body will conduct itself in such a way as to be a credit to its University.—V.C.R.

War or Peace?

Roosevelt is pointing out for the world the path which may lead to a lasting peace but before that path may be traversed there must be a whole-hearted spirit of cooperation which precludes reservations and conditions which apply to particular situations. Before this may be, there must be engendered a world attitude of mind which will make it possible for the peoples of the world and their governments to meet on a common footing and work for the universal good, divorcing all vestige of international prejudice and any tendency toward dissembling.

Through the President, the United States has called upon 54 nations of the world to follow the leader up the path which leads from the maze of world-wide economic instability and political discord. America has come out of her isolation and is extending a hand. She has abandoned her long cherished right to maintain order and the status quo in the western world by force of arms. Germany, the kicked-about outcast of Europe, has remonstrated against such treatment, demanding equality in return for the promise of accepting the full program of Roosevelt. She has backed up her words with action in agreeing to the British plan for an arms conference. Yet France maintains her army and doubts the sincerity of Germany while the Englishman from his island across the Channel stolidly observes that "Hitler still menaces world peace." Italy has fallen into line and even the Soviet union promises cooperation in spirit but Japan hems and haws about and finally announces that the world must accept her support under certain conditions which means that she is not yet ready to abandon her campaign of aggression in Manchuria. What may the cause of permanent peace reasonably hope to gain from a congress at which there are present parties who are ready to hurl the monkey-wrench into the machinery at the slightest provocation.

Such conferences have been tried in the past. For several hundreds of years the nations of the earth have been attempting to avert war by pacts and agreement with the result that every outstanding attempt at peace has been followed by wars of increasingly greater magnitude. The attempt of President Roosevelt is by far the most vigorous move made in this direction for a long time. Is it also to defeat its own purpose simply because some nations are still so wrapped up in hatred that they cannot see over their own back-yard fence? We sincerely hope that Roosevelt is a man powerful enough to stand up on his hind-legs and get the wrench-throwers told in the way which will do the most good.—R.L.B.

Library Thief a Genuine 'Public Enemy'

Unless stealing of books from libraries is curbed guards will be placed at the doors of Minneapolis libraries next fall to scrutinize book borrowers, was the warning sounded by the librarian of the Minneapolis public library. Not only has thievery of books from city libraries become prevalent but also mutilation of volumes has become a serious problem. Working on a curtailed budget, these inroads on the book supply are proving a serious handicap to Minneapolis libraries.

City libraries, however, are not the only libraries confronted with these problems. The library of the University of Minnesota has "lost" many a volume and has had to replace others because of careless treatment. It is a strange quirk of human nature which permits people to rob from public institutions such as a library without feeling that they are damaging someone. When a person steals or mutilates a book from a public library he is injuring not only that institution but every one of its borrowers. The crime is

By Vergil J. Lee, Jr.

The Geneva Conference

The long, hard road to world peace has reached another important point this week at Geneva with the opening of the world arm conference. Cynics are wont to say that the parley is more Roosevelt ballyhoo, or is just so much balderdash—a sop tossed to the peace-lovers of the world—or that the conference is the result of habit: there have been disarmament conclaves every year or two since the World War and the diplomats just can't help themselves.

Attempts at humor in this respect seem rather flat during the crucial period we are now passing through. In the first place, the parley represents a distinct pressure upon Japan to cease her imperialistic operations in China; secondly, it offers an opportunity to consider the case of Germany, which, under the new regime of Hitler, offers a distinct threat to the peace of Europe. Furthermore, it has come to be seen that no single conference can ever be effective in maintaining the peaceful attitude among nations. Conditions are always in a state of flux. Civilization is dynamic; its laws and treaties must be formulated to this end.

The Roosevelt Proposal

The idea of a non-aggression pact, as formulated by President Roosevelt, is certainly not a new one; the Kellogg Pact or the Pact of Paris outlawed war in therefore proportionately greater since the person robs not an individual but hundreds of people of the pleasure and profit they may derive from the volume.—Minnesota Daily.

no uncertain terms. The striking difference between the two proposals lies in the more concrete definition of aggression as set forth by the President. The terms of the treaty provides that no such thing as the crossing of borders by armed forces will be countenanced. Likewise, the kind of operations which the United States has been conducting in Nicaragua during the past few years would be prohibited. The British have raised objection on the grounds that their troops could not adequately protect the Indian frontier because they would be unable to pursue the murderous Afghan tribesmen. However, the striking out of this provision would negate the treaty's principal reason for existence.

Hitler's Speech

The relatively mild manner in which Chancellor Hitler's speech relating to armaments was couched continues to be a source of wonder to most observers; but certainly Hitler can gain nothing by rattling the saber at the very opening of a peace conference. The chancellor, by his suave, diplomatic statements, has spiked the guns of the French opposition. Although he asked for German arms equality, there was a distinct attitude of conciliation apparent in his words which contrast strongly with the fiery campaign oratory with which he swept most of Germany to his banner. Hitler must realize that the most effective way to accomplish his ends is to crystallize international opinion for revision of the Versailles Treaty. A continuation of the Jewish persecutions will go far to destroy any hope for world-wide sympathy toward German aspirations.

Carolina Sweeps To Southern Track Crown

Carolina Gets 66 Points To Top Duke, Virginia

Coach Bob Fetzer's Carolina track men did what yesterday seemed impossible, and beat Duke for the third time this spring to win the Tar Heels' third Dixie track crown. The Fetzer-coached team synchronized with the excellence of a well-oiled machine, copping some five firsts. The 11th Southern conference track and field games were run off in Duke stadium before a frenzied crowd of 4,000 track enthusiasts.

The meet was handled in fine fashion with weather conditions ideal, save for the possibly excessive heat. Five Dixie track and field records were broken while a couple of marks were tied. Here is the official score: University of North Carolina 66; Duke 52; University of Virginia 35 1-2; Clemson 17 1-2; University of Maryland 12 1-2; University of South Carolina 11; V. P. I. 10; V. M. I. 9; Washington and Lee University 8 1-2; and North Carolina State 2.

Records Broken

Plenty of records which had been regarded as almost impregnable against the ravages of future college track stars were lowered considerably, and now posterity will have to turn out even great super men. The mile record was cut down six seconds by "Red" Lewis, Duke, in one of the most thrilling events of the afternoon's card. Lewis was clocked at 4:15.7 minutes. Hill Wellford, V. M. I., clipped seconds off the 440 mark, running the quarter in 48.2 seconds. Bob Hubbard, Carolina, ran a great race to break the conference 2 mile record. Time 9:46.4 minutes. Brownlee, Duke, cleared the 220 low timbers in 23.8 seconds to establish another new mark. Duke's "Four Horsemen," state relay titlist, added still another laurel by bettering the old relay record, 3:18.8 minutes.

Speaking of the 2 mile, this event will go down in southern track history as one of the greatest tests of speed and

Winston-Salem Boy Takes Golf Crown

Joe Brownlow of Winston-Salem won the individual title and Charlotte won the team championship in the state high school golf tourney Friday.

Brownlow made the Hope Valley course in 72-78 for the low score of 150. Following the winner were Ray Hadley, Charlotte, with 73-78-151; Henry Poe, Durham, with 79-74-153; Charles Diffendale, High Point, with 74-82-156; and Charles Ross, Charlotte, with 83-77-160.

Charlotte's team had a low score for the thirty-six holes of 649, followed by High Point, 654; Winston-Salem, 662; Durham, 672; and Salisbury, 675.

AROUND the FIELD

NERO HUBBARD CERTAINLY turned in a fitting close to his varsity track competition yesterday when he ran his heart out in a beautiful finishing spurt to take the conference two mile run and set a new mark. The 9:46.4 time Bob had yesterday is the third time this year he has run the two mile under 9:50. He and Dunaj of Washington and Lee ran neck and neck on the last lap until the last turn when Bob cut loose with all he had and finished some five yards ahead of the General. "Ma" Baucom, who ran the two mile last year for Carolina and whose state record Bob eclipsed last week, was almost as happy as Nero last night. Bob has received news that friends have about succeeded in obtaining an appointment to the Army for him and he wants to go. "I can stand four more years of it, I guess," Nero said yesterday.

RED LEWIS PULLED THE major upset of the meet with his remarkable win over Billy Lauck in the mile. The time of 4:15.7 was the same Lauck did last week but this time he trailed. Coach Archie Hahn of the Cavaliers said after the race that he had been working Lauck to beat a record, not counting on Lewis, that is, he was racing the record and not Lewis. Coach Hahn said that the first lap of Lauck's was too slow, and he yelled this information to his star as he passed the starting point. Billy was very disappointed. "I ran my first lap too slow," he said, "I kept thinking that I would shake Lewis off, but he came on. My legs seemed unable to furnish the last spurt. 'Hey, Archie, do you want me to run the two mile.' Just like, having just finished the mile and still breathing hard from the strain. Lewis looked good in his win and carried out Coach Voyles' predictions of last week. This forecast was made after Red broke the state record and before Voyles saw the 4:15.7 time of Lauck's against Navy. Nevertheless, it was a correct one, though Voyles, would have preferred never to have made it after seeing last Sunday's papers.

ALL FIVE OFFICIAL WATCHES were clocked at the same time for the 440 run yesterday. This is something that seldom happens in any sort of track meet. Always there is a difference. The five in the 440 were stopped at 48.2 seconds flat.

COACH BOB WAS A HAPPY man last night, and rightly so. He has been worried and nervous for the past three weeks and now he can ex-lax so to speak. A state and conference title and another undefeated season has been won by a track squad which was hit hard by graduation and failures to return to school of good men. For some unknown reason Carolina was publicized as favorites to win yesterday as in the indoor meet. We were not the favorites by right of material, we won the state and conference meet and finished an undefeated season by virtue of continual and determined work on the part of the squad. Each member deserves the admiration of us all

He ran second in the 100 and was number three on the record-breaking Duke mile relay team.

TENNIS PLAYOFFS WILL FINISH BILL IN INTRAMURALS

Sigma Chi, Sigma Nu, and Chi Psi Will Meet in Greek Finals to Decide Opponent of Carr.

A very busy week brought the intramural program for the spring quarter almost to completion in the last five days, with the intra-league and inter-league playoffs taking place in baseball. Carr dorm, winner in its race, defeated Beta Theta Pi, frat champ, 9-8, in the campus championship contest. Best House and Chi Psi were runners-up in the two loops.

The regular tennis program was completed last week with Carr taking the dormitory championship, and five teams, Chi Psi, Phi Delta Theta, Sigma Chi, Sigma Nu, and Sigma Phi Sigma finishing in a deadlock for fraternity honors. A playoff series inaugurated Friday had resulted already in the elimination of two of these teams and the league winner will be determined tomorrow afternoon. Carr will meet the frat leader Tuesday for the campus championship.

In the playoff series to date Chi Psi has reached the final bracket by virtue of a bye and a 3-0 win from Sigma Phi Sigma. Sigma Chi, which defeated Phi Delta Theta, 2-1, in the first round, meets Sigma Nu, which received a bye, in the semi-finals at 2:00 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The winner of this match will take on Chi Psi at 4:00 o'clock for the championship of the greek-letter circuit.

Statement in Yesterday's News And Observer Proves to Be Erroneous.

NO NEGOTIATIONS MADE

As far as could be learned last night from University authorities, the statement which appeared in yesterday's News and Observer concerning a Carolina - Minnesota football game in 1934 at Minneapolis, Minn., was erroneous.

Coach Chuck Collins was entirely ignorant of any such negotiations. When questioned yesterday about the report, Coach Chuck said, "As far as I know there has been no game with Minnesota scheduled for 1934. I hope, for our sake, that no such game is arranged. That team of tough hombres would crush anything we could round up. To my knowledge, Wake Forest is to open our 1934 schedule."

C. T. Woollen, Sr., graduate manager of athletics, was just as uninformed. "I have heard nothing about it at all," he stated.

Harry Hodges, president of the Athletic association, declared that there had been no discussion of a Carolina-Minnesota game in that group.

In an attempt to obtain first hand information, the DAILY TAR HEEL wired the director of athletics at the University of Minnesota for a definite statement. The telegraph office reported that the answer could not be obtained until today.

There is a lot of speculation as to what southern team could have been scheduled by Minnesota in 1934. There were certain beliefs that the team in question was either the University of S. C. or N. C. State.

GAME WITH DUKE TUESDAY TO END HEEL SPORT YEAR

Win Will Mean First Series for Carolina Since 1927; Griffith May Face Coombs.

Carolina's spring sport's program comes to a close this week with the Carolina-Duke baseball game on Emerson field Tuesday.

The varsity tennis team completed its schedule with the Southern conference tourney last week. The netmen turned in another national championship and swept the team, doubles, and singles titles in the state and conference tourneys.

Carolina's golf team completed its schedule last Tuesday and although it did not win the conference team title, two Carolina boys, Laxton and Cramer, went to the finals of the individual tournament with Laxton coming out on top.

The varsity track team with a clean record in their dual meets and the state title tucked away, completed its card yesterday in the conference meet.

Baseball Team Back

The Tar Heel baseball team, after an absence of two weeks, comes back to Emerson field Tuesday to close its season and ring down the curtain for the Carolina sports' year.

If the Carolina nine downs Duke Tuesday it will be the first series for the Tar Heels since 1927. In the first meeting of these two teams the game resulted in a great pitcher's battle with Griffith of Carolina winning over Coombs of the Blue Devils 2 to 1.

There is a chance that these two aces will oppose each other again Tuesday. Both are seniors and it will be the last chance for either to pitch for their respective teams.

Raleigh Team Was Seventh Victim in Row for University Horsehide Artists.

Some twenty-five hundred spectators saw the Tar Heels defeat State yesterday, 7-1, on the Technicians' diamond and thus assure themselves of at least a tie for top honors in the Southern Conference race. The Tar Heels have one game left—with Duke at Emerson field Tuesday, and while a victory will give them the crown undisputedly, a loss will enable Coach Hearn's squad to tie State for the championship.

Nate Andrews, sophomore righthander who, ten days ago, blanked the Deacons without a hit, was on the mound for the victors, and pitched a good brand of ball. Only seven hits were garnered off his delivery although fine fielding by Phipps and Leonard helped him out of several tight places. Andrews also whiffed fourteen State batters. Seitz, who was tossing for the Doakmen, pitched fine ball until the ninth when the Tar Heels slammed his offerings for five of their eleven hits and crossed the plate four times.

Carolina Scores in First

Carolina didn't wait long before scoring, making two hits and two errors count for two runs in the initial session. Phipps singled and went to second when the first baseman muffed the throw on Weathers' grounder. An error by Morris, State third baseman, advanced both runners who scored on Brandt's infield hit. In the second frame Carolina scored again when Norm McCaskill, leading off, tripled to left and the Tar Heel catcher tallied on Peacock's single to center.

Nelms Gets State's Run

State averted a shut-out by scoring in the fifth inning. Lambeth, first man up, fanned. Jeffrey stopped a fast one with his ribs and Nelms ran for him.

CAROLINA'S BILL WILL OPEN WITH 'WHITE SISTER'

Clark Gable and Helen Hayes Make First Joint Appearance in Picture.

Helen Hayes and Clark Gable are co-starred in the "White Sister" which opens the bill at the Carolina this week and plays Monday and Tuesday.

Miss Hayes, who recently scored an outstanding hit in "Farewell to Arms," plays the part of Angela Chiaromonte, daughter of an Italian prince, in the picture beginning tomorrow. Gable, who played the lead in "Strange Interlude," has the role of Giovanni Severi, a lieutenant of the Italian army.

The period of the story was modernized to the World War with aerial bombardments and disasters of the conflict over the Alps. In the story he disappears and she enters the convent. The rest of the film consists in his attempts upon return from a prison camp to make her break the vows and his final heroic attempt to protect her convent from aerial bombardment.

Wednesday's picture stars Frederic March, Cary Grant, and Capole Lombard in the "Eagle and The Hawk." Lionel Barrymore plays Thursday with Lewis Stone and Phillips Holmes in "Looking Forward." John Barrymore plays Friday in "Reunion in Vienna," a daring romance, the stage version of which has been adapted for the screen.

Saturday Edward G. Robinson plays the role of a Hijacker gone high-hat in the "Little Giant," with Mary Astor and Helen Vinson.

QUAKER COLLEGE SINGERS PRAISED

Since its inception, the Guilford College choir, which will appear here Tuesday evening in a benefit concert, has made remarkable progress and is now recognized as one of the finest musical organizations in the south and is already showing its influence on church music.

The group made its initial appearance in 1929, the first appearance of such an organization in a southern institution. It introduced a new feature into the college and musical life of the south.

Training Required

The choir is made up of a number of college students who sing without accompaniment, and a definite musical training is required before any one is permitted to sing in a concert with the choir. In order to receive this training all members are required to take a course in music which deals with all phases of choir singing.

Great praise has been accorded the choir whenever it has appeared in concert. Dr. John Finley Williamson, director of the Westminster choir of Princeton, N. J., has remarked: "Your choir sings with a delightful feeling for emotional values, at all times guided by your own sound musicianship and cultured taste. . . I sincerely trust that you will find a way to let people gain from them the inspiration that you have given me."

Praise From Home State

Frederick Stanley Smith, organist of Southern Pines, has said of the group: "Under the able direction of Mr. Noah, the choir seemed a great cathedral organ with its mighty crescendo and delicate pianissimos, its perfect rhythm, and the majestic grandeur of its climaxes."

THOR JOHNSON RECITAL IN MUSIC HALL MONDAY

Thor Johnson will present a violin recital in Hill Music hall tomorrow afternoon at 4:00 o'clock. He will be assisted by Harry Lee Knox, pianist, and W. G. Barnett, baritone.

Johnson's major offering will be Beethoven's "Kreutzer Sonata." He will also play a group of three short compositions. Knox and Barnett will each present a group of solos.

stamina in Dixie track. Bob Hubbard, Carolina, beat Dunaj, Washington and Lee, to the tape to the tune of 9:46.4 minutes.

The highly touted Billy Lauck, captain of the Virginia team, found a tartar in the form of "Red" Lewis, Duke, who set the conference record for the mile 4:15.7 minutes, the same time that Lauck ran against Navy.

The 100 yard dash, usually a thriller, provided more than its usual share of thrills and heartaches yesterday. All the finishers had done better than 10 seconds and lived up to their customary form by running an extraordinary close race. Odell Childers, Carolina sophomore speedster, led the entire field of speed kings until the last ten yards. Here Lynn, Clemson; Widmyer, Maryland; and Brownlee, Duke, put on unusual bursts of speed to finish ahead of the Carolina runner.

Briefs Of The Meet

Lots of fans will wonder who the small queer-looking guy was who was always around the Virginia entrants . . . looking anxiously at a huge watch and then pulling nervously on a big pipe. That was Archie Hahn, the Cavalier track mentor; he was one of the greatest Olympic sprint men in history. Went to Michigan and has coached at Princeton . . . There were eleven Duke co-eds chosen on pulchritude to sponsor the meet and the ten captains. During the process of the meet, the debutantes were marshaled on the field and given beautiful flowers. Did you know that—Tom Craig, captain-elect of South Carolina's track team, had a brother, John, captain of Clemson's team? Both are weight men. At the end of the mile relay, Crook Stafford and Bob Hubbard were chosen honorary co-captains for the season just terminated. Both boys have done well on Carolina's track teams and deserve the honor. Ross Fairington and Morris Mason, Carolina rubbers, worked for Virginia and W. & L. also.

SEASON IS ENDED BY DRAMA GROUP

With the presentation of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" in the Forest theatre last night, the Carolina Playmakers closed their season-ticket program. The production also marked the final appearance of the Carolina Salon Ensemble.

A presentation of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" was originally planned a feature of commencement week, but the drama group has decided to stage instead a bill of three one-act plays.

The two performances of the Shakespeare comedy this year were featured by a cast of leading Playmakers and faculty members; Mendelssohn's accompanying music, played by the Salon Ensemble; massive sets designed by Mary Dirnberger; varied lighting effects; decorative costumes by Oramae Davis; and the fairy dances, directed by Phoebe Barr.

Hundred Years Of Progress

Student May See Sights of All Lands in Chicago This Summer;
Epochal Century Will Be in Review; Plenty of Amusement Just Off the Big Loop.

Chicago will depict a century of progress in its second world fair this summer, giving a brilliant picture of the achievements of mankind during the past hundred years. The work of science in uncovering thousands of useful discoveries which have made possible the linking of most distant lands with the industrialized metropolises by hundreds of thousands of miles of steel rails will be portrayed.

The growth of industry and the improvements in manufacturing by mass production machinery and highly developed business organization will be a part of the dramatic exposition of mankind's achievements from 1833 when agriculture dominated the United States.

Superior to Class Room

To the student this century of progress exposition will be history given in a manner far superior to the class room lecture system. There will be no hard seats and no suppressed yawns to the droning tune of a professor telling of our epochal struggles and achievements. The student will, through the exhibits and displays, further his knowledge of science, history, music, architecture, agriculture, and many other phases of modern civilization.

Depiction of Foreign Lands

To the student who has a yearning for travel there will be not only the trip to Chicago itself but also he may see condensed the experiences gained through many travels in numerous foreign countries. In the various picturesque foreign buildings, will be found people in national costumes, displaying the arts and handicrafts of their native lands. There will be numerous small cafes where the visitor may eat the food of each country and listen to the music of orchestras of the various nationalities.

To the student interested in sports there will be offered many athletic events. Football, baseball, track events, outboard motor races, boxing, swimming, diving, wrestling, archery, and numerous other events will be on tap. In these events persons of numerous nationalities will participate. Army shows, Indian shows, and real old Wild West rodeos will play their part in the exposition.

Orient Brought Home

The orient will be brought to the visitor by the Chinese Lama temple. This magnificent structure is the golden pavilion of Jehol, a reproduction of one of the Orient's most prized architectural shrines with painted gods of the East should give the student some idea of that civilization which seems endless in its continuity and in which art and not progress or material accomplishment predominates.

Along with this picturesque display of the slumbering Orient and days of the past there will be reproductions of the most modern achievements of man. A part of the modern will be the fascinating illumination of the grounds which will be visible from miles around Chicago. This spectacular illumination will include millions of dancing and scintillating colored lights, shadow effects, luminescent and iridescent features, vapor effects, water falls, flaming pylons, and other breath-taking effects.

There will be pleasant amusement in the Midway area, which, according to press reports, will be in itself a realm of thrills.

This combined with the glamor of the Big Loop and the Lake Front should make the summer in Chicago very enjoyable and profitable for any of the numerous unemployed students. The gang city may have lost some of its glamor by the appearance of 3.2 beer, but there will still be plenty of thrills—and education.

Nate Andrews Hurls Carolina To 7-1 Win

Fuller fanned but Seitz sent a long single to right, enabling Nelms to score.

Carolina put the game on ice in the ninth inning by tallying four times. Leonard grounded to short. McCaskill singled to left and went to third on Andrews single to right. On the throw-in Andrews went to second. Peacock singled to center scoring McCaskill and Andrews. Phipps flied deep to right. Weathers singled to score Peacock and Zaiser followed with another single to score Weathers with the final run.

Briefs

The Tar Heels were without the services of Captain Willie Powell who has been declared ineligible. Willie had a mix-up with the business office and, like an umpire, the business office won.

Good base-running by Gene Zaiser was responsible for a run in the initial inning. Zaiser scored from second on a hit to the third baseman.

Yesterday's victory was the seventh in a row for Carolina. Virginia, Wake Forest, Duke, Georgetown, Navy, Randolph-Macon, and State were victims in that order. And incidentally, only six runs have been scored by opponents in this septet, three of them by Navy.

Praise from Press

The Washington Post and the Herald were loud in their praise of the Tar Heels. The Post said that the locals were the best collegiate club seen in Washington this year while the Herald states that Carolina was just about the smoothest ball club to visit Annapolis.

Harry Lee Knox, termed by Johnson "pianist extraordinary," has appeared as a soloist in the ensemble and as both soloist and accompanist with the Glee club. He is a junior, 19 years old, and comes from Statesville.

The Carolina Salon Ensemble will be back next year to continue the Graham Memorial concerts, their appearances with the Playmakers theatre, and their concerts away from the Hill. Johnson hopes the orchestra will keep together after he is graduated from Carolina next year. He himself hopes eventually to work in the field of orchestral and operatic conducting.

Board Passes Motions Pertaining To University Students' Welfare

Recommendations of Administrative Group Will Be Referred To School Administration

JOINT SESSION OF TWO WELFARE GROUPS HELD

At a joint luncheon meeting of the Administrative Board of the Division of Student Welfare and the Student Advisory board in Graham Memorial yesterday afternoon, the administrative group adopted a series of motions pertaining to student welfare and passed them on to the University administration for appropriate action.

The motions were the result of a meeting of the Student Advisory board and were presented to the Administrative board by Haywood Weeks, president, as recommendations of the advisory group.

Audit Board

A motion was adopted to the effect that all student activities representing the University before the public or using University equipment or connections for income-producing programs be under the auditing authority of the Student Audit board.

In the matter of editorial guidance, motion was passed to the effect that since the advisory editorial staff for the "Buccaneer" recommended to the Student Activities group is now set up and presumably functioning, and since the DAILY TAR HEEL has given no cause for concern over its editorial discretion and responsibility

UNIVERSITY CLUB MAKES PROGRESS IN LOYALTY WORK

Club Receives Support From Other Organizations at Second Meeting.

The University club, newly formed organization devoting itself toward furthering the spirit of loyalty in the University, last night held its second meeting since formation. Agnew Bahnsen presided over the meeting.

To open the meeting Claiborn Carr gave a brief outline of the purpose of the organization. Carr is one of the organizers of the club. Continuing brief talks, Coach Bob Fetzter who, as director of athletics is a member of the advisory committee of the club, presented the needs of such a loyalty organization on the campus.

Phipps Pledges Support

John Phipps, president of the Monogram club, was the next speaker. He requested that each member of the club contribute something really worth while to the organization. He pledged the full support of the Monogram club in carrying out the ideals of the University club. Phipps is also a member of the advisory committee.

Mayne Albright, who as director of Graham Memorial is another advisory member, put the services of Graham Memorial at the club's disposal at all times.

The new business of the club commenced with the suggestion of Ralph Gardner that the club meet before every football game

NEW 'Y' OFFICERS INDUCTED DURING HILLSIDE MEETING

The annual Hillside meeting of the Y. M. C. A. cabinets was conducted Sunday afternoon in the Forest theatre. The meeting was the final gathering of all 'Y' members and cabinet members, and officially closed the year.

Reports by retiring presidents of the three cabinets were given. Bill McKee, outgoing president of the organization, officially turned the office over to John Acee, newly elected president, who replied with a short talk.

Jesse Parker entertained the group with a solo, and Dean Francis F. Bradshaw addressed the body on "Spiritual Relations of Today with Those of the Past." Each year the Hillside meeting is conducted for the purpose of closing the 'Y' year and inducting new officers.

COUNCIL OPPOSES PROPOSED FROSH HOUSING RULING

Interfraternity Council Declares Requirement Would "Spell Ruin to Fraternities"

Declaring that the proposed ruling to require freshmen to live in dormitories next year would "spell absolute ruin to practically all fraternities on the campus," and citing benefits that fraternities have brought to the University and Chapel Hill, the Interfraternity council, through President Irvin Boyle, presented at a joint meeting of the Administrative Board of the Division of Student Welfare and the Student Advisory board yesterday five recommendations to the University administration.

The suggestions are as follows:

1. Require the freshmen to room in the dormitories, but in return put the fraternities on the same tax basis as the dormitories and supply them with light, water, and coal at the same rate that the University is now supplying the dormitories. The tax basis can be obtained by turning over all the fraternity property to the University and the University in return will give each fraternity a lease for 50 or 90 years. The fraternities are a part of the school: they are performing the same functions as the dormitories, they are non-profit organizations, and they are boarding and rooming students just as efficiently as the University, with its dormitories, is doing.
2. Rent the vacant dormitory to professional fraternities and small social fraternities that have no house now or that have some small house they are renting.
3. Rent the dormitory on week-ends to girls for house parties and to visitors at football games.
4. Turn this dormitory over to the two girls' sororities and other girls who now live out in town.
5. Turn it over to the faculty as a faculty club and quarters for bachelor professors and instructors.

CHOIR TO SING IN BENEFIT CONCERT AT HALL TONIGHT

Guilford College Group to Present Concert for University Student Loan Fund.

The Guilford College Cappella choir directed by Max Noah will present a concert in Hill Music hall this evening at 8:30 o'clock. The concert is sponsored by the University department of music for the benefit of the student loan fund.

Formed in 1929 by Noah, a graduate of Columbia University and the Westminster choir school, the Guilford group is now in its fifth concert season. The organization's tours have included the eastern states from Massachusetts to Georgia, eliciting favorable comment from the press in all of its engagements. Its members were originally selected from the 400 students, which comprise the student body at Guilford, singing experience was limited to the special course in choir singing given by Noah. Since its inception, however, the choir has attracted such a great amount of musical talent to the school that it is regarded as one of the best trained organizations in the country.

Tonight's program will be a duplicate of the one offered by the choir in the Music hall of Columbia University April 1, and will include compositions of Bach, Mendelssohn, Palestrina, Gretchaninoff, Christiansen, and Bolst. The admission price will be 30 cents; all proceeds will be turned over to the student loan fund.

DAILY TAR HEEL STAFF MEETINGS SET TODAY

Three divisions of the DAILY TAR HEEL staff will convene for their regular weekly meetings this afternoon in Graham Memorial. Today's gatherings will be the last for the year.

Reporters, city editors, and desk men will meet with the editor and managing editor at 3:00 o'clock. Plans for the alumni issue of the paper, which will be distributed June 5, will be announced.

The editorial board will meet with the chairman, Virgil J. Lee, Jr., and the editor at 3:30 o'clock.

The Staff Election Theory Exploded

—AN EDITORIAL—

Staff elections of editors, or even of men to handle the executive positions on the staff, are not worthwhile. This statement is founded on the definite evidence that politics was being used within the staff as a means of obtaining offices.

The new administration announced earlier that a system of competition had been instituted for the purpose of selecting the executive heads. This move was taken in an effort to ascertain whether or not the proposal that all University publications elect their own editors was a well-founded one. Had the TAR HEEL staff been able to conduct its own elections devoid of any politics, then the way for staff election of the various editors would have been opened up, provided the staff executive choices proved to be sensible.

ANNUAL AWARDS NIGHT THURSDAY TO BE COLORFUL

Talk by President Graham and Skits on Campus Affairs Head Entertainment Program.

The annual awards night, which has in the past been one of the most colorful events of the year, will take place Thursday night at 8:30 o'clock in Memorial hall. Awards for all extra-curricular activities of this year will be given.

Ed Martin, chairman of the student council committee to provide entertainment for the affair, announced yesterday a tentative program and list of awards. Several skits concerning campus affairs are expected to be presented and an effort is being made to have various members of athletic teams take part in the plays.

Graham to Speak

Dr. Frank P. Graham is scheduled to be the principal speaker for the affair. Harper Barnes, president of the student body, will preside over the evening's activities. Barnes has announced that in order to speed up the proceedings and leave more time for entertainment, the winners of awards will not come to the platform, but the names will simply be read out and the awards given later.

The awards to be given Thursday include the publication awards, scholarship awards, athletic awards, debate charms, Playmaker awards, band and Glee club prizes.

Several individual awards are on the schedule of prizes, including the Grail awards which are given to the outstanding scholar-athlete in each of the four major sports, freshman athletics, and intramural competition. Other awards from organizations to individuals are the D. K. E., Alpha Kappa Psi, and Delta Sigma Pi scholarship awards, and the Patterson Memorial award.

Last Meeting for A. I. C. E.

The student chapter of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers will meet for the last time this year in Graham Memorial at 7:30 o'clock. Dr. A. M. White will give a short talk, after which the year's activities will be closed with the election of officers for next year.

PARSLEY SOUNDS PESSIMISTIC NOTE FOR NEW ANNUAL

Yackety Yack, to Be Released During Week-end, Called "Lousy" by Editor.

This year's publication of the "Yackety Yack", University year book, is "just better than rotten," Nutt Parsley, editor of the annual, stated yesterday. "In my opinion, it's lousy, but students are gullible and, we hope, sympathetic."

Barring hold-ups, the editor announced that the 1933 volume will be delivered to students just prior to examinations, which is the customary date of delivery. The publication is being printed in Raleigh.

Sounding another pessimistic note, Parsley stated that this number of the year book "would have more errors per square inch than any other issue on record, which for the 'Yackety Yack' is no mean accomplishment." He maintains, however, a Promethian determination that the book this year will lead to better annuals in the future, which, he continued, is what year book editors have been saying for years.

Obligations Failed

Charging that "certain musical organizations and individuals have failed to meet the matter fairly" by failing to pay immediate financial obligations, the editor stated that any delay in release of the annual will be due to "quibblings" over debts. Parsley indicated that it is incredible to the staff that in the face of tremendous financial difficulties and even sacrifices that those publishing the book should be put to such conditions. "Every possible effort is made by the staff to make student life permanent for the students," he asserted, "and cooperation in small matters is the least that can be expected."

A. B. Seniors Attention

All seniors in the college of Liberal arts are requested to present confirmations of the completion of major and minor credits which are required for graduation, at Dean A. W. Hobbs' office as soon as possible.

New Position Covers Work Formerly Done by Graduate Manager of Athletics.

NEW ASSISTANT ALSO BASKETBALL COACH

George E. (Bo) Shepard, assistant graduate manager and varsity basketball coach at the University, was last night promoted by the University Athletic council to a newly created position of Assistant Director of Athletics.

The council assigned to him and to R. A. Fetzter, director of athletics, the graduate manager's work formerly covered by Charles T. Woollen, whose recent election to the position of comptroller of the Greater University made it necessary for him to give up his work in athletics, in the management of which he had been identified for 23 years.

Native of Wilmington

A native of Wilmington and a member of the University class of 1929, Coach Shepard, who is 28 years of age, captained the freshman football team at Carolina in 1924 and the following year entered West Point where he won recognition as all-eastern guard in basketball.

Returning to Carolina in 1926 he helped coach the varsity five for a couple of seasons and was assistant to the graduate manager, but he first came into real prominence as a coach in 1931 when he stepped into

SPRING CAPER TO CLOSE ACTIVITIES OF DRAMA GROUP

Celebration Conducted for Playmakers and Connected Persons Is Annual Affair.

This Saturday night, in the Playmakers theatre, the Carolina Playmakers cut their Annual Capers. Every year, after working long and intensely on a full nine months' program of original plays, professional plays, a Forest theatre presentation, Sunday night readings, experimental and studio bills, the drama group caps the year with a night of exuberant and spontaneous fun.

This Capers is only for those who have been connected at any time with Playmaker activities, and includes an impromptu "melodrammer" entitled in part: "Our Little Nell, or Fate Intervenes, or Diamond in the Rough, or Angel of the Attic, or Fortune's Frolic" done by stock character types much in the fashion of Comedia dell'Arte.

The Capers Committee, composed of Ellen Stewart, Wilbur Dorsett, Bill Bonyun, and James McConaughy, asks that all interested Playmakers, new or old, submit their skits by Thursday. The best six or eight will be chosen for presentation. All those wishing to take part in the programs are also asked to notify the committee.

The program concludes with the awarding of Playmaker masks to those who have completed a sufficient amount of work, cakes and ale served in the Green Room, and dancing on the stage.

Education:

Yesterday and Today

In the days of medieval universities, a candidate for a degree was subjected to a thorough testing of his knowledge by his professors. For hours at a time he sat in the august presence of those learned men and submitted to a grilling. If satisfactory answers were forthcoming, the doctors recommended granting a degree to the candidate. During the past few years collegiate educational methods have been returning to this method of testing a student's knowledge. The modern comprehensive examination is a descendant of this medieval institution.

It seems to be looked upon with great disfavor by many students who never think of correlating any of their knowledge until they are brought face to face with these notorious examinations. Perhaps one of the greatest difficulties in the modern educational system is this lack of correlation between different fields of knowledge. It is only by taking a comprehensive view of the whole field that one is able to see the complete pattern of one's education. The student who has taken each course of study simply as an entity has lost the true sense of educational values. It is the power to fit together the educational units that makes an education worthwhile in later life.

The comprehensive examination allows the soon-to-be-graduated senior the opportunity of tackling new problems which will bring into play all of his acquired knowledge covering a four-year period. This is the real test of his ability to marshal facts, attack real problems. It is the test which shows his capacity for using his university education to meet the coming problems of life.—L.M.J.

Mussolini's

Plan

Il Duce's peace proposal has been ratified. The governments of Great Britain, France, Germany and Italy have announced their formal acceptance of his plan to keep the peace in Europe for a period of ten years. This pact is presumably the result of Prime Minister MacDonald's Italian visit of two months ago. During his stay at Rome, MacDonald conferred with Mussolini at great length upon the pressing problem of removing the ever-present fear of armed conflict (France being apparently the most fearful of the lot).

The treaty contains, among other things, the statement that revision of the Versailles Treaty is possible. This is an exceedingly interesting point: it panders to the desires of Germany and Italy, and yet it is negative enough in implications to suit France and Great Britain. One is struck once again by the alignment of opposing national interests which is manifest in this newest of diplomatic brain children: Italy and Germany on the one hand, Britain and France on the other.

The irony of the pact lies in its avowed purpose of guaranteeing that there shall be no war in Europe for a period of ten years. After that, what? The psychological effect of such a pact is to place the interested parties in an attitude similar to children made to toe a mark for a definite period of time. At the expiration of the allotted period there is an almost overwhelming tendency to "let go," to cut extraordinary capers. In the field of international politics the "cutting of capers" is not a harmless, childlike game. Unless extremely vigorous action for world-wide disarmament is taken soon this new Ten Year pact will not only be a fruitless gesture but a hindrance to peace as well.—V.J.L.

Educators, Not Teachers

The professor in a college should be an educator, not a teacher. He should be more proficient in one particular subject but should also be capable of and willing to deviate intelligently from his subject and discuss in an interesting manner things of value.

The student pays money, much money, to buy text books from which he is supposed to learn the set and required work for a certain course. He should not have to sit in class and hear the whole of it repeated. Should there be difficulty encountered it is only natural that the professor should explain it.

But it is the professor who does nothing but explain the studied subject, go over it and over it, talk constantly without heeding student comments that becomes boring and disliked by his pupils. Naturally it is somewhat up to the pupils to learn their work outside of class so that it won't have to be taught to them by the professor, but they are more apt to do this if the professor doesn't over-emphasize the work on class.

There are many ways through which the study of a course may be eased than by merely harping on that particular subject constantly. Telling anecdotes, not jokes, but interesting anecdotes which have a direct or indirect bearing on the course relieves classroom monotony and increases the student's interest in the course and the professor. By bringing all the subjects nearer to the subject, allowing them to take an active part in the class-room, yet guarding against boisterousness or frivolity, the professor may find that his popularity is on the increase and the number of flunks on the decrease. At least he would be giving knowledge which would last longer than until the next exam period.—C.G.T.

With Contemporaries

Antagonists

No Longer

A good many years have been necessary to stamp out the "student versus the teacher" attitude in college, but the present unusual circumstances in which these individuals find themselves are accomplishing what otherwise might never have been changed. It is rather difficult for the instructed and the instructing to be hostile to each other when both are fighting to keep themselves and the educational system on solid ground.

Traditional "antagonism" between the two in college has been, of course, a relic of grammar and secondary school days. The pre-college student takes for granted that his teacher will invariably line up against him. In more ways than that of discipline, the student and teacher are on opposite sides of a barrier that is not surmounted despite daily contact between the two. Growing up with such an idea, is it strange that the concept of "teacher vs. student" has been carried over into the higher branches of education?

The freshman has many adjustments to make, but the hardest for him to discover when he matriculates that his new teachers will accept him as a responsible adult, as a social, and frequently intellectual, equal. It takes him some time to realize the difference from high school in faculty-student relations as made evident by the friendliness and the interchange of opinion between the two groups, but he soon cannot avoid recognizing the existence of a difference.

More important than this observation, however, are the convincing illustrations of interdependence revealed by the unadvertised aid that members of the faculty and the administration have been rendering the students on whom, of course, their jobs indirectly are based. The givers cannot be accused of sacrificing for selfish ends because it is doubtful they would suffer greatly if they chose not to aid the undergraduates.

A number of faculty members and students can cite innumerable instances where students have been taken into the homes of University people to live, where essential jobs and financial aid have been secured for students through the unceasing efforts of the same group. Their contributions to funds for students have been generous and frequent, despite the cuts taken from the salaries of a class that always has been notoriously underpaid.

We shall not embarrass these often anonymous givers by offering our profuse thanks for their aid. We do offer them our lasting gratitude for having made more students know that no longer is there a basis for thinking it is still "student versus the teacher."—Syracuse Daily Orange.

Students at Stanford who plead "no money" when fined for speeding, are being required to wash the windows and generally clean up the Palo Alto jail and courthouse in lieu of fines. Three hours of hard work pays a five dollar fine! We don't suppose the city officials have any great difficulty keeping the "hoose-gow" presentable!—Wheaton News (NSFA).

College Clippings

By Irving D. Suss

According to the California Daily Bruin, Jack Oakie has again crashed through. It seems that Oakie, when he found out that Sari Maritza was known as Shahli Mahli in China, immediately questioned: "Was you dere, Shahli?"

Up Cornell way, they seem to go in for spring carnivaling in a big way. The feature of this spring's shindig will be a duck race on Beebe Lake. We venture to say that the race will be duck soup for the contestants.

The Cornell Daily Sun also prints the one about George Bancroft, intercollegiate wrestling champion in 1931, who threw the strong man at the Bausch carnival in 30 seconds. Following this feat, he was challenged by a farmer "with a reputation, an ego, and a loud voice." The farmer was just twice as good as the strong man; it took Bancroft a full minute to throw him.

At Nebraska a brown derby is awarded to the freshman law student who makes the "dumbest" retort on class. Three weeks ago the derby disappeared. An investigating committee reports that no clue has as yet been discovered.

Two Northwestern students were stranded on a lonely road at 5:00 o'clock one morning when the motor of their car refused to function. One of them hailed a passing car. The car stopped, and two officers of the law stepped out. The duty-bound, suspicious policeman decided to search the students before aiding them. A careful "once-over" revealed a water pistol and a tear gas bomb. The owner of the bomb said that together with a gas mask, it "served to create conditions conducive to study" in the fraternity house where he lives.

"Sigma Chi has pledged the editor of the Oregon Daily Emerald." This report was spiked when the paper revealed that editor Neuberger had merely borrowed the coat of his room-mate, a Sigma Chi pledge.

The Cadet reports that probably a new record has been set in the state of Virginia. During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1931, the accounts of 49 county officials and the treasurer of one state institution showed a shortage of $1,138,875.02. Of this shortage, over 50 per cent was due to misappropriation of funds.

The Stanford Daily runs an editorial under the caption, "The Kept Man Rears His Ugly Head at Berkeley." At the Berkeley institution, it seems, grades are given on a comparative basis. Two students made a contract with a third to flunk his exams with compensation in the form of dates and refreshments. By this method, the two students hoped to lower the class average enough for them to pass the course.

The Michigan Daily prints this definition of a kiss, offered by a Haverford student: "A kiss is a noun, though generally used as an interjection. It is never declined; it is more common than proper; used in the plural, and agrees with all genders."

THE THEATRE

(Editor's Note: The following review is one of three presented in competition for the position of dramatic critic for the DAILY TAR HEEL. This review was judged the best of the three and the writer has been named as the official critic for the coming year.)

By Robert Barnett

Shakespeare wrote "A Midsummer Night's Dream" at twenty nine. When Mendelssohn wrote the music for the play he was still in his early teens. The Carolina play-actors are young actors. The Carolina Salon Ensemble is composed of young musicians. And Professor Koch is and always will be a youthful spirit.

The production of "Midsummer Night's Dream" taking place in the evening in the Forest theatre possessed a youthful bouyancy, a light romantic flavor, and sustained lyricism which grew largely, of course, from the nature of the play, but also from the propriety of surrounding and the excellence of presentation.

After seeing "A Midsummer Night's Dream" once out of doors, an indoor production must now seem stifling and awkward. But this need not have been the case. Had the change of scene been clumsy and slow the outdoor setting would have accentuated its heaviness. But by ingenious lighting the progress of the play, scene by scene, was made swift and graceful. The Athenian colonnade and the fairies' bower were beautifully designed and together with the forest set, for which the theatre stage needed no embellishment, were the three settings for the action of the play.

Generally, audiences expect to find adults taking the parts of Oberon and Titania and the fairies. Professor Koch gave the play a charm and naivete which added inestimably to its effect when he selected children for those parts. The children's voices were astonishingly clear, strong, and natural, and were projected successfully into the large amphitheatre.

The pageantry of Mr. Koch's production owed much to the color of Miss Dirnberger's scenery and lighting, but equally to the color and grace of Mrs. Davis' costuming. The transparent foam of the fairies' dresses, the rich satin purple of Oberon's attire, and the loose vivid gowns of Lysander, Demetrius, Hippolyta, and Hermia were notable for their variety and loveliness.

The elfin movement of the fairy scenes found a design in the dances under Mrs. Barr's direction.

And now for a word about the acting. Shakespeare's drama has been frequently lost in a jargon of lyric verbosity, padded and static. This interpretation of his work has often destroyed much of its beauty. In Friday night's production we found a freedom of line delivery which came from full line appreciation by the actor and skillful expression of their meaning. This gave the action and conversation vitality and interest too often lacking in Shakespearean revivals. Special mention should be made of Miss Rawls and Tatum for exceptional performances as Hermia and Helena. Mr. Fitz-Simons captured nicely the romantic ardour of Lyander's character. Mr. Holmes gave a roistering, thoroughly comic interpretation of Bottom, and though he took a minor part deserves comment.

The Carolina Playmakers made a peculiarly happy selection when they chose "A Midsummer Night's Dream," for their Forest theatre production. They realized its possibilities and offered their audiences an entertaining and polished production.

RICHMOND SIGNS CAPTAIN POWELL FOR HOT CORNER

This Year's Captain Signs for Professional Career After Being Declared Ineligible.

Willie Powell, captain of this year's Carolina baseball team signed a contract with the Richmond professional baseball team of the Piedmont league yesterday according to information received last night. The Richmond team played Durham there last night and there is a chance that the former Tar Heel third baseman saw action.

The work of Captain Powell has been watched by baseball scouts for the past two years and he has received favorable recommendations from most of them. He is considered the best fielding third baseman among college teams in the state. Powell has a strong, and accurate arm that any infielder in baseball would be proud of.

Powell is one of quite a few Tar Heels that have been signed by professional teams during the past few years, and will be opposing two former teammates in the loop that he is getting a trial in. Louis Whitehead and Maus, center fielder and catcher, respectively, play with Greensboro of the Piedmont league. Maus was also a former Carolina captain. Other Carolina stars of recent years with professional teams are Burgess Whitehead, short-

Carolina's fast-stepping baseball team rings down its curtain this afternoon for the 1933 season, meeting the Duke Blue Devils on Emerson field at 4:00 o'clock.

Joe Griffith, big righthander, will hurl for the Tar Heels in the last game of his college career. Griffith has pitched beautiful ball all season, winning seven games and losing three. All his losses have been by one run margins. He has allowed only fifty hits in eighty-five innings, which is just a little over five per game.

Coombs, also a righthander, will likely start on the mound for the Blue Devils. Coombs is also a senior and will be in his last undergraduate diamond battle. There is a chance that the Duke coach may send Flohr, southpaw, against Carolina. Flohr beat the Tar Heels 3 to 2 last year.

Griffith and Coombs met in the first game between the Duke and Carolina nines this year, with both pitching masterful ball. The Carolina hurler came

The freshman track team will have its Yackety Yack picture taken this afternoon at 4:45 o'clock at Emerson field. All members of the frosh team are urged to be present.

SIGMA NU TAKES TENNIS TITLE BY BEATING CHI PSI

Frat Champs Slated to Meet Carr, Dormitory Leaders, for Campus Title Wednesday.

Without the loss of a set Sigma Nu yesterday swept through the semi-final and final rounds of the elimination tournament to determine the championship of the fraternity intramural tennis league. The regular season ended last week in a five cornered tie.

Sigma Chi was the semi-final victim of the snakes, 3-0. Lawrence Jones, playing first for Sigma Nu, crushed Harlee, 5-2, 5-4, while Bruce Old turned back Lacy, 5-4, 5-3. The doubles went to the winners by default.

Later in the afternoon Sigma Nu defeated Chi Psi, 3-0, in the final round of competition. Jones trounced Laughlin, 5-2, 5-1, while Old handed Atwood a 5-1, 5-2 lacing. The doubles went to Sigma Nu uncontested.

The match for the campus championship between Sigma Nu and Carr, dormitory loop champion, will be played Wednesday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock. Jones and Old are expected to represent Sigma Nu again while Markham and Baley will compete for the law-ryers.

JOHNSON APPEARS IN VIOLIN RECITAL HERE

Thor Johnson, director of the Carolina Salon Ensemble, presented a violin recital yesterday afternoon in Hill Music hall. He was assisted by Harry Lee Knox, pianist, and W. G. Barnett, baritone.

In addition to his major offering, "Kreutzer Sonata," Johnson played a group of three short compositions.

the breach left by Rex Enright's resignation and coached the Carolina freshmen to a Big Five title. During the same year he served as assistant graduate manager and director of intramural athletics.

Basketball Coach

He was appointed varsity basketball coach two years ago and his 1932 team went to the finals of the conference tournament, while his team this year went to the semi-finals. He has shown conspicuous ability both as administrator and coach.

Mr. Woollen, who has been connected with the University in an administrative capacity since 1901, has been identified with the management of athletics since 1910, when he accepted appointment as treasurer of the Athletic association. In 1913 he was also named graduate manager and continued as treasurer.

When he was asked to take over the management of athletic affairs in 1910, Mr. Woollen, with the hearty support of faculty and alumni committees on athletics, formulated a policy calling for increasingly higher standards for athletics and immediately set out to arrange the most attractive schedules possible and to place the Athletic association upon a sound financial basis.

During this period there have come to the institution more attractive schedules, steadily increasing attendance at games, better coaches, and better equipment, to mention a few of the improvements.

Mr. Woollen directed the movement which led to the gift by William Rand Kenan, Jr., of Kenan Memorial stadium.

His program of extension has also called for an adequate gymnasium, which is still greatly needed, but largely through his efforts the legislature was persuaded to alleviate congested conditions in the old gymnasium, built in 1904, by the construction of the large indoor sports arena known as the Tin Can.

Along with these improvements have come additional prestige and influence resulting from a wide administration of the University's athletic affairs and active participation in the Southern Conference and other organizations looking to the highest standards in scholarship as well as athletics.

The record shows that under the management of Mr. Woollen, University athletics took an upward turn and have never changed their course.

Notice To Athletes

R. A. Fetzter, director of athletics, requests all students with University athletic equipment to return same to Sergeant Keller at the store room Wednesday and Thursday from 9:00 to 5:00 o'clock. Prompt cooperation is expected in this request.

Famous Old Baseballer Enjoys Two Weeks' Stay At Carolina

Bill Bradley, Former Big League Star and at Present Scout for Cleveland Indians, Takes Rest in Southern Clime and Becomes Ardent Tar Heel Fan During Sojourn.

One of the most integral units of a big league baseball club is its scouting organization. In fact, several noted baseball authorities have said that a major league club is no better than its scouting system.

At present there is in Chapel Hill, in the capacity of an American League scout, one of baseball's greatest luminaries in the person of Bill Bradley, ivory hunter for the Cleveland Indians. As Bradley says, the past two weeks that he has been in Chapel Hill are among the finest that he has spent on the road, and he should know, for he has been hunting rookies for the past six years.

Rises From Sandlots

Bradley's career reads like a Horatio Alger novel; it was a rise from the sandlots to a point where he ranked with Jimmy Collins as the game's greatest third basemen. Bradley was born in Cleveland and played with some amateur sandlot clubs there when he attracted the attention of a Chicago National scout. After serving a four months apprenticeship in the minors, Bill broke in with the Chicago club in 1899. At that time, Chicago was a member of the twelve club National League. In 1901 Bill was sent to the Cleveland Indians where he reigned supreme as guardian of the hot corner for ten years.

At Cleveland he had to overcome handicap after handicap. One year he was laid low by a severe attack of typhoid fever and in 1906 when the Indians and the Yankees were fighting for the pennant, Bill's arm was broken by one the New York pitchers, Hobb. But in spite of that Bradley was a consistent .300 hitter, which was no little feat with the dead ball. In fact, in 1903 Bill was nosed out by Buck Freeman, an outfielder with the Boston Red Sox, for the slugging championship of the league, and that was by one base. That year Bradley out-slugged such hitters as Ed Delahanty, Nap Lajoie, his team

Prospects Point To Strong Nine For Heels In '34

With the last game today, Carolina baseball fans begin looking forward to a strong team next season. Only three men will be lost by graduation this year and things look even brighter for a great team next season.

Joe Griffith, ace pitcher, will be the only loss from the Tar Heel pitching staff. Captain Powell, star a third base, and Johnny Peacock, centerfielder, are the other losses. Although these positions will be hard to fill, several good freshman prospects are coming up and the other men will have profited by experience this year.

Contrary to information already given out, McCaskill is eligible for another year, and the hard hitting catcher should show up even better in his final season as a Tar Heel. Both Matheson, a junior, and Strayhorn, a sophomore will be back to assist Lamy in the backstopping.

Andrews and Crouch Back
Two pitchers have already shown their worth as hurlers this year besides the graduating Griffith. Andrews, sophomore ace, who hurled a no-hitter and has worked several other nice contests, and Crouch, who has pitched three shutout games during the season, will both be back next year and will likely do most of the Tar Heel moundwork. Whitley, Webster, Manly, and Anders are among the reserves who are prospects.

From this year's first year team McKeithan is probably the outstanding hurling prospect coming up. McKeithan has plenty of stuff and a nice fast ball. Spiers, who twirls underhanded, Glasgow, and Hutchison and Barnes, southpaws, are other pitchers that showed up well with the yearlings this year.

Irwin Fine Prospect

Although Powell will be gone, in Tommy Irwin the varsity team has one of the best infield prospects in many a year. Irwin, playing shortstop for the freshmen this year turned in a great record. Irwin made no errors in fourteen games that he played, and starred in all of them. Besides his great fielding Irwin batted in clean-up position and was second in hitting with an average well over .450. He hit two home runs during the season.

Irwin is almost a sure starter at short, leaving Phipps and Leonard to battle for third base. Montgomery, also hit hard for the freshmen and may give the veteran Weathers a fight for second base. The first year team also had a fast looking first baseman in Womble. Womble fielded nicely all year and led the team in batting with a few points better than Irwin's.

If Womble comes through at first, Brandt can be shifted back to the outfield, filling in the gap left by Peacock. Both Zaiser and Vick are sophomores. Shapiro and Bullock are the best looking freshmen outfield prospects while Barham and Broyhill are the best reserves this year.

DEBATERS PICKED BY PHI ASSEMBLY

L. H. Fountain, speaker, and E. M. Jess were chosen yesterday to represent the Phi in the annual Bingham commencement debate with a team from the Di Senate. Bill Eddleman and Bill Oettinger were picked to represent the latter organization in the declamation at try-outs last Wednesday.

The subject for the debate is, Resolved: That the states of the world should intervene in the conflict between China and Japan in the interests of the world.

Fountain was winner of the Mary D. Wright debate last fall. Eddleman is president of the Di senate.

Manning to Speak

The Cosmopolitan club of the University announced yesterday that it had secured John T. Manning, professor of history at Duke University, to speak at its meeting tonight in Graham Memorial. His subject will be "Latin-American Relations."

Powell Declared Ineligible

Captain Willie finished his career at Carolina last week when the Tar Heels met Randolph-Macon. Powell was declared ineligible to play the last two games of this season by University officials because he was unable to pay his University bill.

Powell, who is from Danville, Virginia, started his career at Carolina in 1930. Willie made the freshman team in his first year. In 1931, although only a sophomore, the Carolina star held down third base as a regular and hit .237 for the season.

Last year the Tar Heel captain played outstanding ball in every game and was elected co-captain along with Smokey Ferebee for this year. Ferebee did not return so Powell led the 1933 nine alone. Powell has been the main cog in the Tar Heel attack this season and the Richmond team is to be congratulated for being the first team to sign him.

Board Passes Motions For Students' Welfare

and published daily would make any kind of advisory board awkward in the extreme and since the "Magazine" very rarely seems to offend community taste, further action in this matter be postponed pending further experience with the "Buccaneer" plan.

Student Health

Under the head of University provision for student health, the following motions were passed:

1. We approve the projected addition to tuberculin tests to the physical examination schedule now in force.
2. These physical examinations should be administered to every student in the University once each school year, probably adding medical students to the examining staff.

3. Suggested that a voluntary competition in improvement of physical measurements with some sort of awards for maximum improvement be added to intramural and physical education programs.

4. Requested that the University provide a typhoid inoculation clinic for students.

5. Requested that the administration provide definite instruction in personal hygiene to be required of all freshmen.

6. Recommended that all cases involving student health which come to the attention of University officers be referred directly to the University physician, who has access to the services and assistance of any University agency.

7. Moved resolution expressing hearty approval of the present administration of the University infirmary.

8. Urged that a permanent director of student health be appointed by the next fall quarter and that all those phases of University activity such as infirmary, gymnasium, athletics (in so far as they affect health), sanitation and hygiene instruction be united in a department of student health under his direction.

Laundry Cost and Service

The following motion was passed concerning laundry costs and service: In view of current student discussion of University laundry service and cost it is recommended that an investigation of laundry service and costs be conducted by the University administration and a report made to the students in the DAILY TAR HEEL.

A recommendation pertaining to the proposed rule requiring freshmen and sophomores to room in dormitories next

Carolina Shows "White Sister" For Second Day

A new pair of screen lovers, Helen Hayes and Clark Gable, will make their appearance again today at the Carolina theatre in the second day's showing of F. Marion Crawford's romance, "The White Sister."

The combination of Miss Hayes and Gable has proved a strong one as, under the direction of Victor Fleming, they do an excellent job of acting in Crawford's stirring love story.

Buc Staffs to Meet

There will be a very important meeting of the editorial and business staffs of the "Buccaneer" tonight at 7:00 o'clock in the office in Graham Memorial. This refers to Bobbie Mason's staff and to the business staff of Bernard Solomon. Important business will be transacted.

Dance Regulations

The following motions concerning after dance conduct were adopted:

1. Young ladies attending dances are to stay in approved houses. A list of these houses is to be kept by Mrs. Stacy.

2. The owner of the house shall be responsible for informing the girls as to rules governing after dance conduct, and shall report to Mrs. Stacy within 24 hours after having entertained guests the observance or infractions of the regulations by their guests.

3. House party chaperons shall be passed on by Mrs. Stacy and a committee from the Interfraternity council. Failure to comply with the rules shall disqualify fraternities from giving further parties.

4. The operation and enforcement of all rules and regulations governing conduct before and after dances is to be centralized under one committee, thus giving the present committee on house parties responsibility for enforcing regulations governing private houses as well as fraternity houses.

Relating to the matter of the entertainment of girls in fraternities, the following motion passed: The dean of students, the advisor to women, the president of the Woman's association, and the president of the Interfraternity council study the problems involved in the entertainment of girls and bring in recommendations.

Due to a lack of time, discussion on the matter of the regulation of student-owned cars and life modelling by the art class was postponed.

next fall. Claiborn Carr suggested that the secretary compile information about each team that visits the University, and also agreed with Gardner that a meeting be held each week during the fall. The motion for the weekly meeting during the fall passed.

It was suggested that the various fraternities, the Grail, and the Athletic association each contribute a small amount toward taking care of whatever expenses the club might incur.

To Start at Once

The club also decided to commence activity at once by serving the Duke baseball team today. It was also suggested that the club seek to reach the freshman class and install a better spirit in them right from the start.

Among other suggestions were one that the club seek to get a page in the freshman handbook sent to all incoming men, describing its purpose, and a motion that the club obtain some sort of insignia.

After the meeting was adjourned, a constitution committee consisting of Agnew Bahnsen, Ralph Gardner, Jack Pool, J. D. Winslow, and Harold Bennett met to discuss the drafting of a constitution and plans for organization.

Author Visits Here

Mr. and Mrs. Virginius Dabney were guests of Dr. and Mrs. Richmond P. Bond here this week-end. A graduate of the University of Virginia, Mr. Dabney is one of the editors of the Richmond Times Dispatch, and the author of "Liberalism in the South," which was published last year by the University Press.

OLD BASEBALLER ENJOYS TWO WEEK STAY AT CAROLINA

Indians in whose employ he has been ever since.

In an interview yesterday with the writer Bradley gave his opinion of scouting in no uncertain terms:

"Scouting at best is a lonesome job. The main trouble is in passing the time, and in addition it is necessary that we keep our identities secret, for if a ball player knows a scout is looking him over, the psychological effect might prevent him from showing his best. And, for the sake of our jobs, we can't afford to slip up on any prospects."

Times Have Changed

"It's funny the way times have changed. In my playing days we hardly ever had youngsters sent up from college; almost invariably they came from the sandlots. In fact, in those days a college boy was looked upon as wealthy. Now, on the other hand, the colleges are sending up most of the rookies, and that's where the scout's greatest work lies."

In the short time that Bradley has been at Carolina, he has become one of the Tar Heels' most ardent fans. Of course his associations with Coach Bunn Hearn might be one reason, but the Cleveland scout thinks the "Tar Heels are the finest collegiate club he's seen in years"—and he's seen plenty.

When asked by the writer about the game with Duke today, Bradley was of the opinion that the Tar Heels should come out on top if Griffith continues the form he has been showing.

SAWYER RE-ELECTED PRESIDENT OF BAND

At its final business meeting of the year yesterday, the University band elected its officers for next year. Claude M. Sawyer of Winston-Salem was re-elected president, Walter King of Greensboro was elected to succeed Thor Johnson of Winston-Salem as vice-president, and John Murphy of Charlotte to succeed Thomas Taylor of Asheville as secretary.

A number of band members will remain on the campus during commencement week to play for the graduation exercises.

REPRESENTATIVES OF DI AND PHI TO MEET IN DEBATE

Complete Plans for Annual Bingham Competition at Commencement Announced.

The Dialectic Senate and the Philanthropic Assembly will clash in the annual Bingham commencement debate June 5 on the subject, Resolved: That the states of the world should intervene in the conflict between China and Japan in the interests of the world at large. This will be the second forensic battle of the year between the Di and Phi, the first having been the Mary D. Wright debate conducted just before Christmas.

Elmer Oettinger and Bill Eddleman will represent the Di on the affirmative side of the question and the Phi will be represented by Everett Jess and L. H. Fountain on the negative. The debate will be conducted under the formal rules and precedent of intercollegiate debates.

Important Question
The question was selected by the Phi after the side had been chosen on a similar question by the Di. Bill Blount reported that the question was selected as one which had for some time been under discussion in the League of Nations and because it was of current concern to the people of the United States as well as of interest to the students on the campus.

All speakers for both societies were selected after heated try-outs and in the debate the newly selected speaker of the Phi, Fountain, and the speaker of the Di for the fall quarter, Eddleman, will be lined up against each other. Fountain is the holder of the Mary D. Wright medal and Eddleman holds the University debate monogram and is a member of the debate council. Both Oettinger and Jess have brilliant records.

Radical Changes In United States Develop Through Eventful Week

Roosevelt Departs From Tradition and Makes Step Toward World Peace; Government Regulation of Industry Possible Under Proposed Legislation; Week Crowded With Events.

By Don Becker

History has been made by this country in the past week. Under increasing pressure from forces that have just recently reached a climax, President Roosevelt has made many radical departures from traditional American policy. The probabilities are that these excursions will prove to be wise and desirable.

With kaleidoscopic rapidity the President first appealed to the world for international peace and disarmament, and then the next day sent to Congress a bill making governmental regulation of industry possible, and most probable.

The first international move on Roosevelt's part is a departure from traditional American isolation. That this isolation has been nothing more than a political one for many years has been widely recognized. It is well that the President should realize that America has a stake in international events and is willing to participate with the other Great Powers to try to untangle the sorry knot the world has tied itself into these past few decades.

Conference Special Published Tomorrow

The special edition of The Daily Tar Heel, devoted to the annual Y. M. C. A. Blue Ridge Conference June 15-24, will appear tomorrow.

Tomorrow's issue will be the first Blue Ridge edition since 1931 and will present the program planned for representatives from colleges in ten southern states, the purpose of the conference, and other features of the annual meeting.

PERMANENT LAWN FUND SET UP BY STUDENT GROUPS

Surplus Left From Recent Drive For Campus Improvement Established as Basis

A permanent fund, known as the Students Campus Improvement fund, was established yesterday with a surplus from the recent drive for the improvement of the University lawn.

The new fund, consisting of $25, was set up by leaders in the campaign for possible use in the future as a basis for further campus work by students. The recent drive netted $150, of which only $125 was found to be necessary in the repair of the University power cutters.

Trustees Named
The president of the student body and the director of buildings were named as co-trustees and ordained with power to use the fund as occasions demand.

The surplus was not expected in the recent campaign, as it was publicly announced that $200 would be needed to repair the equipment for lawn improvement, but negotiations on the part of Mr. P. L. Burch of the buildings department made for the reduced cost. The es-

COUNCIL IMPOSES SEVEN SENTENCES

Disturbances Created in Dormitory Result in Strict Conduct Probation for Four.

By action of the student council Monday night, seven students received sentences for raising disturbances in the dormitories and damaging University property.

Four of the students were placed on strict conduct probation through the fall quarter of next year which means that a violation of the campus conduct code during this period is punishable by automatic suspension from the University.

One student was placed on conduct probation through all of next year. Two students were required to move out of the dormitory for the remainder of the school year, one of whom was put on conduct probation through the whole 1933-34 school year.

Another was put out of the dormitory for the balance of this year, and was denied the right to room in a University dormitory next year. All these students were held jointly responsible for the damage done to University property.

HOUSE CONTENTS DORMITORY PLAN IS MERE RUMOR

Executive Secretary Denies That Proposal Regarding Freshman Rooming Is Official.

R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, emphatically declared yesterday that the proposed ruling to require freshmen to live in dormitories next year was nothing more than a rumor and that any reports have been personal opinions. He said that no action whatever had been taken by University authorities regarding the question.

Considerable comment has been caused on the campus, mainly among fraternities, to the effect that it would "spell absolute ruin to practically all fraternities on the campus," and five recommendations were made yesterday by the Interfraternity council through President Irvin Boyle and presented at a joint meeting of the Administrative Board of the Division of Student Welfare and the Student Advisory board.

Recommendations Made
The recommendations stipulated that if the University ruling would go through that the administration put the fraternities on the same tax basis as the dormitories, with supplies purchasable at the same University rate. They also suggested methods of using the vacant dormitories instead of making the first-year men remain from the fraternity houses.

Efforts to verify the proposed plan in other University departments were futile.

Reigned Out

Due to the great attractive qualities of yesterday's Duke-Carolina baseball game, many official announcements which might have otherwise appeared in today's paper will be carried later in the week.

SOCIALIST GROUP TO HEAR LEADERS

National Organizers of Party to Address Weekly Meeting of Club This Evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Johnson, national organizers of the Socialist party, will address the weekly meeting of the local Socialist club tonight at 7:30 o'clock in room 210 Graham Memorial. As this is the last meeting of the group before the summer holidays, all members and interested persons are urged to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson have much to tell of conditions in Iowa, Arkansas, Louisiana, and other states where they have organized for the Socialist party. Recently they have been working with the Tulane Socialist club of Tulane University, New Orleans. They are particularly interested in the liberal movement among college students. Mrs. Johnson was for five years instructor at the Carnegie Institute of Technology in Pittsburgh.

After talks by Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, there will be a general discussion of the part college youth is playing in the radical movement of this country.

CHEMICAL AWARD GIVEN LAST NIGHT AT CLUB MEETING

J. B. Crutchfield Wins $50 Stipend; Old Elected President For Next Year.

J. B. Crutchfield was awarded the annual prize in chemical engineering last night, it was announced by Dr. A. M. White, faculty advisor of the student chapter of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers.

At the meeting of the organization last night at which the award was given, the following officers for next year were elected: B. S. Old, president; R. L. Huber, vice-president; H. J. Allison, secretary; and W. H. Bateman, treasurer. E. A. Gaskill was chosen associate editor of the Carolina Engineer for the A. I. Ch. E.

Dr. White addressed the group on "Shoes and Ships" which closed the meeting. In his speech Dr. White discussed the achievements of the past year in our great industrial corporations in chemical engineering.

The University chapter of the A. I. Ch. E. was organized in January, 1930, by Dr. White. The award given Crutchfield was established last year and holds a stipend of $50.

Y DIRECTORS TO MEET

MEMBERS GATHER TO PASS REPORT OF AUDIT BOARD

Annual Audit for Campus Organizations to Be Published Later in Week.

Members of the Student Audit board will meet this afternoon in the student government office in Graham Memorial at 2:30 o'clock to approve the annual audit board report which will be released later in the DAILY TAR HEEL, according to R. H. Sherill, auditor and compiler of the report.

Complete financial reports of 18 campus organizations and societies will be included in the audit. The preparation of the statistics has been in order for the past several weeks.

Two Groups
The organizations included in the report are divided into two groups: one group with the fiscal year ending April 30, and the other running on the basis of the regular school year.

Organizations in the first group are the freshman, sophomore, junior, and senior classes, the electrical, civil, mechanical, and chemical engineering societies, the medical society, the law, pharmacy, and Woman's association, student government, and the debate council.

Other Organizations
Those appearing in the second group are Graham Memorial, the athletic association, student entertainment committee, and the Publications Union board.

Other campus organizations are using the Student Audit board for all financial workings, but have not desired public announcements.

The members of the board are: faculty, Dean F. F. Bradshaw and R. H. Sherill; students, Haywood Weeks, Chaborn Carr, and Francis Anderson.

Instigation Of Awards Night Aimed To Achieve Spirit Of Campus Unity

Ceremony, Begun Ten Years Ago, Has Been Linked With the Completion of Graham Memorial and Is Considered by Deans and Student Leaders Marked Success.

In an effort to achieve a spirit of unity on the campus, the idea of awards night was inaugurated ten years ago. It is linked with the campaign to finish the Graham Memorial building. When a final effort was made to finish the memorial to President Edward Kidder Graham, those in charge declared that they wanted more than merely a stone structure. They wanted a spirit of unity on the campus. For this reason they conceived the idea of concentrating in one event all the scattered awards that were made for one reason or another throughout the year. This concentration became known as awards night.

Complimenting campus organizations on the fine work of the past year—whether in spite of, or because of, the depression—Dean of Students Francis F. Bradshaw expressed the desire that the whole school be present when the awards are made. Bradshaw feels that awards night is not an individual affair, or a program primarily for only a few organizations. He feels that it is a campus affair, something to foster a spirit of unity throughout the whole school. Mayne Albright and Haywood Weeks, both former presidents of the student body, together with Harper Barnes, present incumbent of that office, expressed opinions similar to Bradshaw's.

Good Entertainment
Awards night last year marked a departure from the usual program. Formal presentations were minimized, and instead the school enjoyed some rollicking entertainment. With Little Giant Billy Arthur as master of ceremonies, prominent campus figures killed Julius Caesar over again in a manner that would have slain Shakespeare.

As Caesar died in the parody of Shakespeare's play, he sang the mournful strains of "Please Don't Talk About Me When I'm Gone." The entertainment included a number of popular tunes, making it much like a musical comedy.

Three years ago some entertainment was introduced into the awards night program, but last year's seems to have been the most successful so far. Among those who participated

Encouragement

Is Needed

The organization of the University club follows the reorganization of the Monogram club in the determined steps of students to revive the fast waning Carolina spirit. The effect of the Monogram club has already been manifested and it remains for the members of the University club to show by their work whether or not their present enthusiasm will bring any definite improvements.

Since its reorganization, the Monogram club has gathered momentum slowly and, in spite of the adverse criticism the "Big Dumb Athletes" received, the group has taken the position of dignity and respect on the campus that it should hold. The lettermen have acted swiftly and uniformly in cases where infraction of the training rules appeared and as a result, the general spirit of the athletic squads has improved 100 per cent.

The newly organized University club has a definite job before it. The athletes have taken the lead and have made their determination and enthusiasm mean action. The student club must do the same; its members are working for no definite reward, and personal satisfaction gained from the knowledge of doing a job well is all that will be their compensation. Their is an unselfish duty, but to supplement the work of the athletes should be their goal.

The pendulum of victory seems anxious to swing our way, and if we are to be prepared to accept triumph in the correct spirit, we must have cooperation from the student body. Our teams are tired of losing, and they are also tired of entertaining a listless group of supporters all afternoon. They are determined to win regardless of student support, and have become accustomed to playing by themselves, so to speak.

The University club can and should help the student body support our teams as they should be backed. The determination and enthusiasm of its members must be encouraged by the entire student body.

Freshmen and Sophomores—

Whether aimed at the fraternities or not, the proposed University ruling to the effect that freshmen be required to live in dormitories next year would be a staggering blow to the Greek letter organizations on the campus. According to President Boyle of the Interfraternity council, such action would "spell absolute ruin to practically all fraternities on the campus."

It is an open secret that the fraternities have been in hot water for the last difficult years trying to meet the obligations incurred in better days. That they are in no position to take any further burden of a financial sort seems obvious. Yet the exclusion of freshmen from fraternity houses would precipitate a crisis.

The Interfraternity council has made five recommendations to the University administration, four of them suggesting rental of the vacant University dormitory to private organizations. The other and most important recommendation was the idea of turning fraternity property over to the University in order that the fraternities might benefit by the same tax rate as the dormitories. This last recommendation does not appear unreasonable. The fraternities at Chapel Hill are an integral part of the University social structure. The relationships and benefits that accrue from fraternity contacts are invaluable. The houses serve as dormitories of a smaller size, but they claim to be something more, inestimably more.

Clearly, the University authorities are not in favor of wiping out the fraternity structure, since it lies in their power to use more direct means. Then, it would appear that some reasonable adjustment can be made, especially inasmuch as the suffering of fraternities and their demoralization cannot but appear as a manifesttation of suffering of the University as a whole.—B.B.P.

The Little Man Again

The administration has once more placed itself on record in defense of the small-salaried American. It has refused to put through a sales tax. During the last two years the threat of a general sales levy has been hanging over the country. Under the aegis of William Randolph Hearst and certain Republican leaders a sentiment for the sales tax has slowly been gaining popularity as a method for the removal of deficits—both state and national. Considered purely from the economist's viewpoint this form of governmental finance violates one of the primary requirements of a good tax: it does not tax according to ability to pay.

In recognition of the short-comings of this type of levy, the President, through the House ways and means committee, has definitely placed his approval on other taxes to cover the approaching deficit; income taxes will be boosted, stock dividends will be taxed, and gasoline levies will be raised. Another feature of the committee's report is the provision for the continuation of the entire list of excise taxes as contained in the 1932-33 budget.

This financial program is entirely consistent with the President's pre-election promises of placing the tax burden on those who can best bear it. In practically all of Mr. Roosevelt's activities to date one can see the great contrast between our present executive and his predecessor. Mr. Hoover maintained that the best way to help the little man was to provide a few more crutches for "paralyzed industry"; Mr. Roosevelt has preached and acted "create purchasing power and industry will soon revive."—V.J.L.

The Price of Blood and Iron

Heywood Broun, who a short time ago was one of the foremost opponents of Hitler and his anti-semitism, has retracted a good deal of his objections toward the Nazi leader. There are two sides to the question, says Heywood, and the one that we have adopted is purely a revival of the old war-time hate for the German people.

We can hardly blame Germany, he states, for resorting to drastic methods in order to bring back her pre-war status, if we have insisted upon retarding her normal recovery with the vindictive Versailles treaty. The Kaiser was exiled, socialism has failed, communism has resulted only in civil blood-shed, and Germany has been left without the strength of a national leader—that is, until Hitler came along.

But in spite of this conciliatory attitude, we can hardly go to the extreme of pardoning Herr Hitler's methods or of justifying them because of the unfortunate plight of post-war Germany. Every man of destiny rises to his power by the unstinted application of Bismarck's phrase, "blood and iron." Since the Nazi leader evidently believes himself a man of destiny, it is only to be expected that he has followed the path of violence and left in his tracks the human suffering that is never justifiable.

Doubtless Germany would be worse off, from a standpoint of her place among nations, if Hitler were not the leader of the country. But it is certain that Germany would be infinitely better off if her ruler learned to apply his iron hand toward preventing violence instead of sanctioning it.—A.T.D.

With Contemporaries

Another Example of The Organization Mania

Among the records of achievement which some students pile up while in university is the record of belonging to as many organizations as possible. The campus affords innumerable opportunities for the "joiner." Everywhere he turns he finds a club which he can belong to if he is willing to pay out some specified amount of money. And in his senior year, the yearbook will carry under his picture and name a most imposing list of societies in which he claims membership.

A large proportion of the organizations on this campus are so innocuous that little can be said against them. Many of them of course have useful purposes. But there are some societies which not only have no definite purpose to fulfill, but fail even to provide a common interest for the members, and which are actually nothing but incipient rackets. At one time in the history of campus activities, these organizations were numerous. In time they became such pernicious institutions, and the political skulduggery which grew out of them created such a stench that they were abolished.

Those organizations were the well known class honoraries, which were created innocently enough as a result, no doubt, of some person's mania for organizations. But they became pure and simple rackets, dummy societies, used to further the political ambitions of certain of their members.—Daily Nebraskan.

Radical Changes In United States Develop During Eventful Week

gle for world peace. What James Truslow Adams has chosen to call "America's Lost Opportunity" is to be no longer lost. Under Roosevelt this country resumes the leadership of Wilson. That leadership had been temporarily stifled by the reactionary wave that swept the country after the World War and had been typified by three Republican administrations.

National Recovery Bill

Hot on the heels of his "new deal" to international diplomacy, Roosevelt sent to Congress a "National Recovery Bill" providing for a three and a third billion dollar public works program. This bill also provides for the licensing of industry and governmental control of it if necessary. It may mean suspension of the anti-trust acts to facilitate attainment of the aims of the bill.

This is another radical departure from traditional American individualism—"rugged individualism" that has proven too rough. Such a trend has been foreseen and predicted by both political thinkers and industrial leaders in the event that business did not regulate itself.

Business has failed to regulate itself. Under boom conditions the public could stand a lot; under the stress of depression the public has repudiated laissez faire and is going in for regulation. Industry and the banking system will be responsible to a popular "benevolent despot."

Is this trend in American policy to be permanent? The chances are good that some of the progressive legislation and policies will remain even after the return of prosperity. A complacent conservatism brought on by prosperity should act as much to prevent reactionary as progressive trends.

These are the more outstanding, but not the only important events of the past week or so that has been crowded with epochal events. Pending the world economic conference, an economic truce has been signed by the United States, the United Kingdom, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, Belgium, and Norway. This is another important departure from American tradition if it is true, as Walter Lippmann declares, that American post-war foreign financial policy had much to do with precipitating the depression.

While the general farm strike that threatened has been postponed, pending farm relief legislation, the milk strike in Wisconsin continues to rage with rioting and fighting.

The Japanese continue to advance southward in northern China, and when this is written, are probably in control of Peiping. Nippon has greeted Roosevelt's non-aggression proposals rather coldly, and probably will do so until she has achieved the hegemony of China.

Hitler Becomes Conciliatory

In his speech to the temporarily convened Reichstag, Adolf Hitler assumed a conciliatory attitude. His speech followed Roosevelt's appeal for international peace and disarmament. It is believed that this appeal also included a threat to any nation, such as Germany, which might persist in a policy of aggression against the will of the world. Hitler's speech liquidated the Geneva Crisis. He declared that the Reich was willing to disarm along with the others, but was not willing to remain an inferior nation.

Another event of this past week was the signing of the Muscle Shoals bill providing for government operation of the plant.

It is well to consider these events against the background of the last few years. A wave of reaction swept the country after the World War. The United States refused to join the League of Nations, the one shred of an ideal that Wilson was able to salvage from the Versailles Conference.

The world, except the United States, was bowed down with debt. The victors owed war debts; the vanquished reparations. America insisted upon a favorable balance of trade, refused payment of the debts in manufactured goods and raw materials, and expected a steady flow of gold to this country.

Germany and Austria were the first to break at the approach of the depression. Unemployment and hardship increased and economic warfare continued amongst the nations. The United Kingdom gave up its traditional policy of free trade and built a tariff wall to fight that of the United States. Then England went off the gold standard, and so did this country.

In the meantime, threats of war were increasing. It seems that the depression has aggravated the causes of war and at the same time acted as a restraining influence. However, in September of 1931 Japan began the conquest of Manchuria and North China Proper which has not yet spent itself. Russia, grim and waiting, watches Japanese expansion. If Japan goes too far and steps on Russia's toes—

In Germany, Hitler has come into power. Too late, the Powers made concessions to the Reich to prevent this. Reparations are, to all intents and purposes, non-existent. War debts, too, must be either scaled down or abolished.

That, then, is the background of the events of the past week. This country must take the lead toward (1) return of prosperity, (2) elimination of international economic war, and (3) international peace and disarmament. If President Roosevelt can gain the confidence of the world as he has gained the confidence of this republic, the United States may successfully take the leadership.

Wartime Air Picture To Play Here Today

Fredric March and Cary Grant play the lead roles in "The Eagle and the Hawk," wartime aviation picture, which is to be shown at the Carolina theatre today.

The story, written by John Monk Saunders, author of "Wings," centers around two wartime flyers who are an unbeatable combination in the air but the bitterest of enemies on the ground. March plays the pilot and Grant the observer in the duo.

Hollywood's famed "suicide squadron"—the organization of stunt pilots who risk their necks putting planes through required maneuvers—participated almost en masse in the filming of the air scenes.

Once held in Gerrard hall, the program now takes place in the larger Memorial hall. Last year it occurred on Thursday, May 26. At that time the Carbis A. Walker accounting award was first made.

Win Also Enables Team To Tie Davidson Outfit For State Baseball Lead

Big Joe Griffith Allows Enemy Only Two Blows as He Takes Second Win Over Duke.

PEACOCK LEADS BATTING

By Morrie Long

Climaxing his brilliant college baseball career with a beautiful pitching exhibition yesterday on Emerson field, Big Joe Griffith permitted but two safe blows and beat Duke for the second time this season 2 to 1.

Some 6,000 fans, the largest crowd of the season, saw Griffith tame the truculent Duke pachyderms and enable Carolina to capture the first Duke series since the halycon days of 1927.

Much water has flown under the bridge since Carolina has won a Southern conference baseball championship but not only has Coach Bunn Hearn's coterie turned in this trick (South Carolina has only three victories and can hardly be considered loop winners), it also has finished the season in a deadlock for Big Five honors with Davidson.

Duke Ace Beaten

Again as in the first game Griffith tied up in a hurling battle with Bobby Coombs, Duke's ace mound gracer, and though Coombs was nicked for ten blows, he struck out seven to Griffith's four.

Johnny Peacock, one of the best garden patrollers seen on a Carolina baseball team in recent years, opened the Carolina half of the first inning with a mighty smack into left which went through Wentz's legs, Peacock reaching third on the play. He died there when his mates failed to hit. Again in the second, after Griffith had not allowed Duke the least semblance of a hit, Vick singled only to be left on base when the Tar Heels didn't connect.

In the third the Tar Heels considerably deflated Booby Coombs' dreams of a shut out victory when McCaskill walked and was sacrificed to second by Big Joe. Peacock then drilled a single into center which scored McCaskill with Carolina's initial run.

McCaskill Scores

While setting the Duke club down with monotonous regularity, Griffith and his mates garnered another run in the fifth frame when McCaskill singled. Griffith's infield single pushed Lamey along and Peacock's walk choked the bases. With none away, Phipps fanned, but Weathers sent a timely single into center which registered McCaskill's second score of the game. Zaiser whiffed and Brandt flied out to end the inning.

The prodigious work of Griffith kept the anxious Duke bludgeon weilders far from a base knock until the eighth inning when Coombs sent a meandering single down the third base line for the first Blue Devil safe hit. A error, sacrifice hit, and a fielder's choice sent the Duke coach's nephew across the plat-

Finishes Career

Johnny Peacock, great center fielder, completed his last season yesterday as a Tar Heel baseball player. Peacock, who acted as captain in the absence of Willie Powell, played beautiful ball in the field and led the Carolina team in batting in yesterday's win over Duke. Peacock got two hits in three times up and drove in one of the two Carolina runs.

Star Shortstop and First Baseman Honored by Teammates After Duke Victory.

Directly after the Duke-Carolina game yesterday, the Tar Heel squad held a meeting at which Johnny Phipps, shortstop, and George Brandt, first baseman, were elected co-captains for next year's nine.

Coach Hearn thanked all the boys individually for their fine sportsmanship and work on this year's team. The coach said that he hoped that all that were eligible to play next season would be back. According to the coach this is the greatest team Carolina has had since he has been directing them.

Both of the boys elected to lead the Tar Heels are juniors this year and have one more season with the team. The co-captains succeed Willie Powell, another infielder, as head baseball players.

Brandt will be the only three-letter man left in school next year, receiving letters as 'end on the football team and center and guard on the basketball team besides the diamond sport. Brandt is from Washington, D. C.

Brandt played only part of the time last year, as an outfielder. This year before the season was well underway George hurt his ankle and was forced to the bench for several weeks. After the ankle healed

Carolina Battery Baffles Duke Twice

The above combination of Joe Griffith, pitcher, and Norman McCaskill, catcher, worked the second Carolina win of this year over Duke yesterday. Both scores were 2 to 1. Griffith pitched in his last game as a Tar Heel yesterday finishing a great year. He held Duke to only two hits, neither coming until the eighth frame. The lone Duke run was unearned. McCaskill completed his first season as a Carolina catcher, turning in brilliant work in every game.

You Americans take our best Tobaccos—

It's no wonder your cigarettes are good

Tobacco now makes up one-fifth of all the exports of the Republic of Turkey. From the districts famous for producing the finest Turkish, most of the crop is shipped to this country.

Of the Samsoun crop 70% is exported to America; 68% of the Smyrna crop; and even greater percentages of the crops of Xanthi and Cavalla.

The reason Americans go so far for a special kind of tobacco is... FLAVOR. For when real Turkish is left out you miss its rich, spicy taste and rare aroma.

In Chesterfield the right amounts of the right kinds of Turkish are cross-blended with mild, ripe domestic tobaccos. You can taste the difference.

PLAYMAKER BILL OF NINE DRAMAS WILL BE STAGED

Production of Experimental Plays Will Be Conducted Tomorrow Afternoon and Night.

Nine experimental productions, written by students in Professor F. H. Koch's play-writing courses, will be presented before an invited audience tomorrow afternoon and night in the Playmakers theatre.

"The Moon Turns," a youthful romance by Elmer Oettinger, and "Beer On Ice," or "Burp of a Nation," by Harry Coble, are first on the afternoon program at 3:30 o'clock. Following will be "Bull Session," a satirical comedy of college life by George Brown, and "For Poland," a tragedy of the great war by Ed Conrad.

At 8:00 o'clock the program will continue with "No Word From The Wise," a comedy of small-town life by Wilbur Dorsett, "A Mocking Bird Singing," a romance of the old south by Foster Fitz-Simons, "Burgundy For Breakfast," an effervescent farce by Martha Hatton, "Three Muggy Rooms In The Bronx" by George Brown, and "Henna Rinse," a play of Ye Venus Beauty Shoppe by Marion Tatum.

GEOLOGISTS FIND GOOD SPECIMENS ON FIELD JAUNT

Dr. Prouty Investigates White Lake Basin for Comparison With S. C. Craters.

Some well preserved shark's teeth and mollusc shells of the Miocene age were found by members of the geology department on a field trip taken in the Clinton - Elizabethtown area Saturday.

Dr. W. F. Prouty made investigations of the White Lake basin to determine whether or not it has the same origin as the so-called meteor craters of South Carolina of which he has already made some study.

This trip into the eastern part of the state by the geology students was in connection with the work of advanced historical geology. Its purpose was to visit strata of Cretaceous and Tertiary age and gather fossils.

Those who made the trip were Dr. J. G. Douglas, Dr. W. F. Prouty, Lindsey Hunt, J. B. Ward, S. M. Parker, J. C. Goldson, J. C. Dunlap, Jr., C. G. Peebles, W. T. Wilday, Ray Johnson, and Eddie Marshall.

down, Weaver scratched a hit inside the first base line which went for a single. Griffith walked Hendrickson, much to Carolina's dismay, but then forced Coombs to ground out to Leonard to end the game.

Besides the astute pitching of Griffith and the good work of Coombs, McCaskill's all around play stood out. Vergil Weathers handled seven chances nicely besides driving in one run. Johnny Peacock played spectacularly, getting two hits for three, while Vick got two for four.

INNING SUMMARY

First Inning
Duke: Kersey was tossed out by Leonard. Griffith pegged out Mitchell. Michael walked. Michael pilfered second. Wagner struck out. No runs, no hits.

Carolina: Peacock drilled a sharp single into left field which Wentz let go through his legs. Peacock reached third. Coombs struck out Phipps. Weathers flied out. Zaiser popped to center. One hit, no runs.

Second Inning
Duke: Thompson, Duke's basketball ace, was tossed out by Weathers. Wentz went down, Phipps to Brandt. Weaver walked. Hendrickson died Weathers to Brandt. No run. No hits.

Carolina: Coombs fanned Brandt. Vick singled. Leonard, who replaced Captain Powell, flied out. Vick was out stealing second. One hit, no runs.

Third Inning
Duke: Kersey's fly was taken by Vick. Mitchell was tossed out. Big Joe breezed three strikes past Coombs. No runs, no hits.

Carolina: McCaskill walked. Griffith sacrificed him beautifully to second. Johnny Peacock blasted one into center for his second single to score McCaskill with Carolina's first run. Phipps forced Peacock at second. Weathers was tossed out. One run, one hit.

Fourth Inning
Duke: Griffith struck out Michael. Wagner worked Big Joe for a walk. Thompson flied out. Weathers let Wentz's double play ball get away from him, Wagner taking second. Weathers tossed out Weaver. No runs, no hits, two left on.

Carolina: Zaiser smacked one into center for a single. Brandt forced Gene at second. Brandt stole second. Vick fanned, as did Leonard. No runs, no hits.

Fifth Inning
Hendrickson got life on Leonard's error. Coombs forced Hendrickson at second. Kersey flied out to Weathers. Mitchell was thrown out.

Carolina: McCaskill singled and took second on Griffith's infield hit. Coombs passed Peacock to choke the bases. Phipps struck out. Weathers sent a sharp single into center to score McCaskill with Carolina's second marker. Zaiser was called out on a doubtful low strike. Brandt flied out. One run, three hits.

Sixth Inning
Duke: Griffith mixed his fast ball with a fast breaking roundhouse and set Michael, Wagner, and Thompson down with feeble infield blows which were converted into outs. No runs, no hits.

Carolina: Coombs tossed out Vick. Leonard whiffed. McCaskill was thrown out. No runs, no hits.

Seventh Inning
Duke: The 6,000 fans began to realize Griffith's no-hit possibilities when Wentz struck out and Weaver and Hendrickson grounded out.

Carolina: The Blue Devil mound performer retired Carolina one, two three. Griffith flied out as did Peacock. Phipps was tossed out by Michael.

Eighth Inning
Duke: Coombs ruined Big Joe's hitless game when he trickled one down the third base line which Leonard could not touch. Phipps errored on Kersey's double play ball and Coombs reached second. Mitchell showed them along with a sacrifice.

Coombs scored Duke's only run as

Baseball Fans May See Team Of 1922 Play Present Outfit

Plans Are Being Made to Have Former South Atlantic Champions Meet Baseballers of '33 in Game Here June 5 As Part of the Commencement.

Efforts are being made to round up the members of the famous University baseball team of 1922 to play a game with the present Carolina varsity Monday, June 5, which is Alumni day of commencement. Manley Llewellyn, Concord attorney, was captain of the '22 outfit, and is attempting to get his teammates together once more to show the present-day collegians how the great American game should be played.

The 1922 team made what is perhaps the best record of any University baseball nine. The team boasted a trio of exceptionally good pitchers in Llewellyn, L. G. "Lefty" Wilson, and Herman J. Bryson.

Roy "Casey" Morris was catcher for the '22 team, ably assisted by Alan M. McGee. The infield was composed of E. R. "Mule" Shirley at first base, Joe McLean at second, A. M. "Monk" McDonald at shortstop, and Fred Morris at third. W. I. "Red" Johnston, Ed Sweetman, "Rabbit" Bonner, and "Moose" Tenney performed in the outfield.

South Atlantic Champions
Captain Llewellyn guided his team through a season of 19 victories to the South Atlantic championship. Virginia was whitewashed in the customary three-game series; Trinity, State College, Washington and Lee, and Wake Forest were defeated twice. On a successful

American Prize Contest
Over 800 manuscripts and drawings were submitted to the "Americana" magazine in the contest conducted by that publication among undergraduates for satiric literary and artistic work. The winner of the $1000 prize will be announced, and the prize-winning article printed, in the July issue of "Americana."

Weathers was tossing Michael out. Weathers made a beautiful stop of Wagner's drive, fumed and fumbled, but tossed him out in time. One run, one hit.

Carolina: Weathers greeted Coombs with a clean single. Zaiser's bunt was short and Wagner pegged Weathers out at second. Brandt's infield hit led to Zaiser's out when he tried to reach third. Vick beat out a slow roller to first and Brandt reached third on some pretty base running. Leonard forced Vick. Three hits, no runs.

Ninth Inning
Duke: Thompson was thrown out, Phipps to Brandt. Wentz lined to Peacock who came in fast. Weaver scratched Duke's second hit down the first base line. Hendrickson worked Griffith for a free ticket. Coombs forced Weaver at third. No runs, one hit.

northern trip the '22 team defeated Maryland, Swarthmore, City College of New York, and New York University. Washington and Lee was the only team to defeat the Tar Heels, winning 9-8 by the aid of a ninth inning rally that produced all nine runs.

The members of the '22 team have scattered widely, but "Big Law" who now presides over Concord's municipal court, feels that the lure of playing together again will bring the team together in a grand reunion.

"Casey" Morris is teaching and coaching at the Shelby high school, and "Lefty" Wilson is coaching at the Danville, Va., high school. Herman Bryson is state geologist, with headquarters in Chapel Hill.

Joe McLean is now the dignified Dr. Joseph A. McLean, of Ayer, Mass., while "Monk" McDonald is also a physician, being connected now with the Presbyterian hospital at Medical Center in New York. "Mule" Shirley is following professional baseball, and Fred Morris, who played for several seasons in professional baseball, is now in business at Fayetteville.

Ed Sweetman is a banker in Greensboro, and "Rabbit" Bonner is a physician with the Guilford county sanatorium. "Red" Johnston is reported to be in Jacksonville, Florida, in the automobile business, and Alan McGee is living in Norfolk.

Oral examinations of graduate students for degrees of Ph. D. will be continued during this week. Members of the graduate faculties of the various departments are invited to attend the examinations.

The examination of Thomas Bradley Stroup for Ph. D. in English will be given tonight at 7:30 o'clock in 112 Saunders; and of Archibald K. Shields for Ph. D. in romance languages at 7:30 o'clock in 316 Murphey.

Psychology Exam Tomorrow
Tomorrow evening at 7:30 o'clock examinations will be given Henry Nelson DeWick for Ph. D. in psychology in 207 New West and Mrs. Winnie L. Duncan for Ph. D. in sociology in 110 Alumni. Marvin L. Skaggs will be examined for Ph. D. of history in 313 Saunders at 2:30 o'clock Friday.

On Saturday, examinations will be given Charles N. Sisson at 9:30 o'clock in the morning, for Ph. D. in history, and Jose Gallardo, Jr. at 7:30 o'clock in the evening in 116 Murphey, for Ph. D. in romance languages.

SUMMER WORKERS MEET

A meeting of all students who desire to work this summer in soliciting subscriptions to the DAILY TAR HEEL has been called for 7:00 o'clock tonight on the second floor of the Y. M. C. A. by Craig Wall, next year's circulation manager for the paper.

Garden Contest Thursday

Mrs. H. R. Totten and Mrs. H. M. Burlage will be judges at a garden contest in Hillsboro tomorrow. The gardens which were begun last fall were first judged in September. They are to be judged upon improvement made since that time in their final inspection tomorrow.

GRADUATE CLUB ELECTS NEXT YEAR'S OFFICERS

At a recent meeting of the Shirley Graves graduate club, for the purpose of electing officers for the next school year, H. O. Farr was elected president, G. C. Blackwell and H. B. Whitmore were chosen as members of the governing board, G. E. Sensabaugh was named summer University representative, and M. P. Wells was again elected as the fall representative.

As is the custom at the Graduate club, the offices of vice-president, secretary, and treasurer will be filled in September. Among the retiring club officers who will not be back next year are Henry DeWick, president, H. T. Swedenberg, chairman of the governing board, Walter Patterson, chairman of the entertainment committee, and J. H. McCormick, secretary.

JOHN PHIPPS AND BRANDT ELECTED CAPTAINS OF NINE

Brandt broke into the line-up as regular right fielder. When the veteran Dixon was dropped from the team Brandt moved to first base which he filled in great style the rest of the season.

Phipps is from Fries, Virginia. He also does not limit his athletic ability to baseball, making letters for the past two years as a halfback on the varsity football team. Phipps did not make the Tar Heel nine last year but acted as an understudy to Smokey Ferebee at short.

After a long battle with Dutch Leonard, Phipps took over the regular shortstop position this year, and played beautiful ball all season in the field, besides getting some timely hits at bat.

Grumman Will Speak At National Meeting

Russell M. Grumman, director of the University extension division will leave here today for Bloomington, Indiana, where he is to represent the University at the annual meeting of the National University Extension association at the University of Indiana May 24, 25, and 26.

Grumman, who is a member of the executive committee, is to address the organization May 25 on "Opportunities of University Extension in Rural Adult Education." Membership of the group is made up of extension directors from 47 leading institutions.

E. R. Rankin, in charge of high school relations for the extension division, and Mrs. Irene Fussler, state representative of the Carolina Dramatic association, will attend the meeting.

Review Edited by J. Maryon Saunders Contains News About Distinguished Class Graduates.

The annual alumni reunion which will convene here June 5 and commencement programs are featured in the May issue of the Alumni Review, edited by J. Maryon Saunders of the alumni office.

The alumni classes of '83 and '08, in which distinguished graduates of the University will meet to celebrate their fiftieth and twenty-fifth reunions this year, are featured in the magazine. Other graduates in classes of the late '70's and '80's, the student bodies of '02-'05 and '21-'24, and the class of last year will also gather here Monday, June 5.

Stories are included on summer school and commencement, the first annual dogwood festival recently celebrated here, and alumni news.

LIFE TO SPONSOR NEW COLLEGIATE QUARTERLY

June 1 will see the release of "University," a new quarterly publication in the college field, to be sponsored by "Life" magazine.

The new magazine is being edited by George Eggleston, editor of "Life"; Gurney Williams, associate editor of "Life"; and Joseph A. Thompson.

The publication will include short stories, sports articles, humor from the various college magazines, and cartoons by many of the leading artists.

PRESIDENT GRAHAM SPEAKS ON AWARDS PROGRAM TONIGHT

PLAYMAKERS TO OFFER EXCLUSIVE PROGRAM TODAY

Only Members of Organization And Invited Guests to Attend Presentations.

Nine one-act plays are presented today in the Playmakers theatre at 3:30 and 8:00 o'clock, before an invited audience of authors and Playmakers. The experimental productions, staged under the supervision of Harry Davis, are written in Professor F. H. Koch's playwriting courses and are presented as supplementary work to the courses.

Elmer Oettinger's "The Moon Turns," directed by the author, is first this afternoon, with a cast of Ed Conrad, Elmer Oettinger, Jayne Smoot, Eva English. Two comedies follow: "Beer On Ice," by Harry Coble and directed by Phillip Milhous, with Mrs. Martha Wardlaw, Burdette Kindig, Wilbur Dorsett, Eugenia Rawls, Jo Orendorff, William Wang; and "Bull Session," written and directed by George Brown, offering a cast of Forney Rankin, Carl Thompson, and Harry Coble.

War Tragedy

Ed Conrad's tragedy of the war, "For Poland," concludes Eugenia Rawls, Betty Barnett, Marion Tatum, Ed Conrad, and Elmer Oettinger compose the cast.

"No Word From The Wise," a comedy by Wilbur Dorsett, begins the evening series. Jo Orendorff, Mary Davis, Harry Coble, Carl Thompson are the cast. A romance and a farce continue: "A Mocking Bird Singing" by Foster Fitz-Simons, with Phoebe Barr, Frank McIntosh, Marion Tatum, Foster

FORTY-SIX BOYS TO GET LETTERS

Carolina Athletic Teams Close Great Season, Winning Three Conference Crowns.

Forty-six athletes will be given awards tonight for work done this quarter in track, tennis, baseball, and golf. Twenty-six of the boys will be getting their first monograms and only five will receive awards for the third time.

Carolina athletic teams ended one of the most successful quarters in the history of sports. The tennis team completed another undefeated season winning the national, Southern conference, and state titles. The varsity track team also went through the season undefeated and untied, getting first places in both the state and Southern conference meets.

The Tar Heel nine, although not downing everything, won their last eight starts, took top honors in the Southern conference, and tied Davidson for the Big Five championship. Although the golf team did not win the state and conference meets, it was second in both and Erwin Laxton, sophomore, won the individual title in the conference tourney.

FRESHMAN CO-EDS SELECT OFFICERS

Polly Jacobson Is Chosen to Head Group Next Year.

Officers of the rising sophomore co-eds were elected at a luncheon meeting of the freshman co-eds yesterday afternoon. The gathering was the final meeting of the group for the year.

The new officers are as follows: Polly Jacobson, president; Suzanne Winstead, vice-president; Anna Cowles, secretary-treasurer; Gertrude Pridgen, athletic manager; and Frances Wood, publications manager.

A friendship committee for the purpose of helping the girls of next year's freshman class was appointed. The members are: Louise Helms, Nancy Pike, and Eleanor Lockhart.

Yesterday's meeting was the first of its kind ever held by freshman co-eds here.

ENGINEERS PLAN SURVEYING CAMP

Trimble to Be in Charge of Camp of 15 Men at Brevard.

The junior class in civil engineering will begin its summer surveying camp near Brevard, June 12. This camp is opened each summer for a period of eight weeks for prescribed courses of the civil engineering curriculum.

The preparatory course is given on the campus during the fall term, and the instruction in camp covers work in land, highway, railway, power, and other forms of engineering surveying, under conditions simulating those encountered in actual practice.

This is the 11th year the work has been conducted in the mountains. Professor R. M. Trimble of the engineering school is in charge of the camp this year. Fifteen men are eligible to attend.

SHOP TO REMAIN OPEN IN SUMMER

Betty Barnett to Direct Bull's Head Book Store.

The Bull's Head will remain open during summer school session under the management of Betty Barnett, since Mary Dirnberger, present manager, has accepted a position as designer for the Repertory Playhouse associates of New York.

Miss Dirnberger, who has been staff designer for the Carolina Playmakers during the past year, will design sets for about six productions of the Playhouse associates during nine weeks of the summer, in addition to conducting a class in scene designing for apprentices to the repertory company. She is now working on sets for two of the plays: "Squaring the Circle," which is adapted from the Russian, and "It's A Strange House."

Aileen Ewart of the Playmakers will also be with the Playhouse associates during the summer.

Hours of the Bull's Head during the summer will be 11:00 to 1:00 o'clock, 3:30 to 5:30 o'clock, and 7:00 to 8:00 o'clock. Weekly readings in the Bull's Head, to which the public is invited, will be continued through the summer; and new books will be added to the rental library at the rate of about two a week.

Varsity Golf Picture

All members of the varsity golf team will meet at 4:45 o'clock this afternoon at Emerson field to have a squad picture taken.

An Explanation

The editor of the Tar Heel feels that an explanation is due the student body for the reduced volume of news in this issue. The reason for it is that the business department came in late with an unusually large layout of advertising, and so some news was crowded out.

STATE SYMPHONY TO ARRIVE HERE FOR REHEARSALS

Society Orchestra to Appear in Raleigh Monday Evening in Spring Presentation.

Members of the North Carolina State symphony will arrive here tomorrow to begin rehearsals for the spring presentation of the Symphony society in Raleigh Memorial auditorium Monday evening at 8:30 o'clock. Rehearsals scheduled for tomorrow and Saturday will be conducted by Lamar Stringfield, musical director of the symphony society.

Eighteen towns and cities of the state will be represented by 50 players in the orchestra. This group was the first all state professional musical organization in the country and has received attention in Time and the Literary Digest as an important movement in the development of civic musical groups. The symphony society, headed by Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt, numbers about 400 members.

Make Raleigh Debut

Previously concerts have been presented by the symphony in Durham and Chapel Hill. The North Carolina Little Symphony, also affiliated with the symphony society, has appeared in Southern Pines. Monday evening's concert will be the first appearance of the group in Raleigh.

The program will include Beethoven's "Symphony No. 1 in C major," the overture to Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro," Stringfield's "The Legend of John Henry," "On the Steppes of Central Asia" by Borodin, and Tchaikowsky's "March Slav."

CARR WINS TITLE FROM SIGMA NU

Lawyers Take Second Campus Championship in Two Weeks As Netmen Get 3-0 Win.

Carr dormitory gained its second campus championship of the spring quarter yesterday as it defeated Sigma Nu, 3-0, to take the intramural tennis supremacy back to the dormitory league. The law outfit had previously won the campus-wide baseball championship by defeating Beta Theta Pi, 9-8.

In the opening singles match Jimmy Baley played a brilliantly steady game to turn back Lawrence Jones, 7-5, 6-3.

Billy Markham, No. 2, came from behind to turn back Bruce Old, 6-8, 6-3, 6-2. Markham's superior ability to keep the ball in play came to his rescue in the latter part of the match, and he won numerous points only after prolonged rallies.

The doubles match, which was not essential to decide the match, was won by Carr by default.

Special Edition Postponed

Due to the unexpected volume of advertising turned in by the business office for this issue of the DAILY TAR HEEL, the special Blue Ridge edition has been postponed until tomorrow.

Relation Of University To State Will Be Discussed

SUMMER SOCIAL PLANS ARE MADE

Archie Davis and His Orchestra Are Signed for Dances.

The summer school social committee has just completed contracts for the summer dances. Archie Davis and his 12-piece orchestra has been signed to play for the set.

Formerly a six-piece band has been used for the summer school dances, but this year the contract doubles the size. Davis and his orchestra have been playing for a local cafeteria during the past school year, and are noted in North Carolina for their dance music.

The marshals selected for the dances are: Haywood Weeks, chief marshal, Lindy Cate, Don Jackson, Jimmy Moore, Claude Rankin, Hamilton Hobgood, George Moore, and Cab Philpott. Pardner James has been appointed chief door-keeper.

Indications are that there will be a large enrollment in the summer school, and the dance set-up should prove an interesting feature of the summer school life.

SATURDAY ISSUE OF SUPPLEMENT IS LAST OF YEAR

Editor Daniel Reports Copy of Varying Content for Next Issue of Magazine.

Because of the suspension of the DAILY TAR HEEL for the examination period, the Carolina Magazine will appear Saturday rather than on Sunday as usual. An increase in the amount of fiction over that of last issue will be included in the last Magazine of the spring quarter.

Among the stories are "Doomsday," an account of the reaction of the people to a predicted second coming of Christ in the year 1000 A.D., by Virgil Lee; "Yellow Sheet," a newspaper story, by Don Shoemaker; "Broadway Stick Up" by Walter Rosenthal; "Almost Persuaded," a youthful religious experience, by Vernon Ward; "Song Without Words" by Vermont Royster; "Thick," a sketch, by Cecil Carmichael; "The Mind in Itself" by Carl Thompson; and "Sky-Hookers" by Karl Sprinkle.

Anonymous

There are two anonymous contributions in the forthcoming Magazine; one, a series of sketches of well-known co-eds; another, an article describing the working of the money motive among Carolina fraternities and extra-curricular leaders. Joe Sugarman contributes "Rockets Red Glare" in which he heralds and accounts for the rise of the "center" in American politics.

An article on the relations of the University to the state and a suggested way out of the annual appropriations fight with the state legislature are given in "Fetters of Tradition," based on a review of the Harvard novel, "Not to Eat, Not for Awards Will Be Given to Students in Recognition for Work During Year.

In conjunction with the tenth annual awards night ceremony in Memorial hall at 8:00 o'clock tonight, President Frank P. Graham will deliver an address to the entire student body. President Graham is anxious for every student in the University to attend this final mass meeting of the year, since his address will be of tremendous importance to everyone.

Since the drastic legislative steps taken recently in regard to the University, many students have been uncertain of their return next year. President Graham will explain in his address the meaning of the abolition of free tuition and scholarships, the effect the appropriation slash will have, and the relationship of the University to the state next year. He will also discuss the means by which students will be enabled to return to school next year.

Awards to Be Made

Achievements in student activities during the past year will be recognized by the awarding of charms and monograms. Short specialty acts, featuring prominent students on the campus, have also been arranged by Ed "Pepper" Martin, chairman of the program committee. Harper Barnes, president of the student body, will preside over the meeting.

The meeting will open with the singing of "Hark the Sound" by the assembly, accompanied by the University band. Walter Patterson will play several selections on the organ. President Graham will

Tonight:

Memorial Hall

The TAR HEEL, the Carolina Buccaneer, the Carolina Magazine, and the Yackety Yack are four of the outstanding college publications in the country, and they have secured their positions only through the work of many students whom very few people on the campus know and who have as their only rewards their names in the mastheads of these publications in small type and perhaps a publication's key.

The athletic teams are not made through individual efforts upon the part of the players, but through whole-hearted cooperation upon the part of each member of the team, each of whom is called upon many times to sacrifice individual glory for the sake of the school.

Studies are also an essential part of University work, and for a fraternity to attain a high scholastic standing, even though beset with the many other activities always present in such an organization, is a task worthy of far more honor than is usually accorded such a group upon their maintenance of a good record in studies.

Thursday night in Memorial Hall members of the publication staffs, the athletic teams, as well as other individuals who have secured honor for themselves through efforts which place them above other people on the campus are to receive a reward for their work in their several fields.

These men, especially the members of the various publications—except the chosen few who have been lucky enough to secure campus recognition, such as an editorship, for their work—are merely cogs in a machine which helps to give our papers and magazines the superiority which they hold. These men have gone to the various offices day after day to work upon any assignment which might be given them, merely for the personal satisfaction afforded by their activities. The donation of keys to these students by the Publications Union Board is a move which every person on the campus should realize to be a reward worthy of recognition.

For every student in the University to forsake his studies for a few hours on Awards Night and attend the presentation of the various medals and cups would cause him little trouble and perhaps cause the recipients to find that their work has not been in vain.—F.P.G.

Koch Et Cie

The campus is still commenting favorably and with admiration on the splendid production which the Playmakers presented in the Forest Theatre last Friday and Saturday nights. The host of workers who cooperated to give an authentic and realistic interpretation of one of the comedies of the immortal Shakespeare should receive the acclaim of the entire University.

Not only did each actor give a performance probably excelling anything he or she has previously done, but the execution of lighting effects and scenery was performed with alert expertness. The advantages of the Forest Theatre have never been so adeptly proven. The environment of the surroundings coupled with Miss Mary Dirnberger's appropriate scenery and Mrs. Davis' natural costumes created an atmosphere essential to the light fantasy of the play.

The children who played the parts of fairies, the dancing coached by Phoebe Barr, and the orchestra which gave a mystical musical background all deserve commendation.

With an advisory body of only three professionals, this group of amateur actors, amateur electricians, amateur stage hands, amateur designers—this group of Carolina students presented a Shakespearean comedy which could scarcely be rivalled by professionals. And those who attend such performances and applaud only the actors must not forget that behind the scenes, out of sight, are men listening as intently for cues as are the actors; these men could break the show by not being on the job when a change in lighting or scenery should occur.

If the Playmakers continue to give productions such as "Midsummer Night's Dream," they will undoubtedly create for themselves a reputation of being the best amateur company in the nation, and will help build within the University a spirit of culture necessary for full appreciation of art and life.—C.G.T.

The New University

Housing Plan

Under a new housing system proposed for Carolina, freshmen and sophomores would be required to live their first two years at the University in the dormitories. This plan is inspired by the house plans now in effect in several other schools but it seems particularly unsuited to this one. At Harvard for example, one of the foremost exponents in the house plan idea, the dormitories are large spacious buildings with libraries, smoking rooms, lounges and other recreational facilities at the disposal of the inhabitants. To require living in such buildings is different from demanding it in dormitories of our type where the student is confined to one small room.

Carolina is very proud of the atmosphere of freedom that permits the individual in Chapel Hill to go his way free from the interference that characterizes his life at other schools. To suddenly impose a rigid rule such as the suggested one would deal our liberal policies a very severe blow. Another tradition that would go by the board is our fine one that prevents the drawing of distinctions against lower classmen or the showing of favoritism or privilege to upper classmen. To draw a line as to who may live where they choose would destroy the equality that exists between all students regardless of class or age.

The financial question is probably the most important one (the new plan is doubtless intended to raise funds for the University which in these times is a very worthy intention). However, the fraternities which depend to a great extent on the lower classmen living in the fraternity houses would be dealt a very severe blow and a great many would be forced out of existence by this unfair competition. Property and business at Chapel Hill would suffer greatly and the entire rooming and boarding conditions be seriously disrupted. In the long run the result would in all probability be a loss to the University financially leaving the very important question as to the value of the fraternities and the wisdom in destroying them. Hence the new plan would be unwelcome here because our dormitory facilities are not adapted to it, because it destroys the personal liberty that is one of our most valuable assets, and finally because the financial gain attended by tremendous changes in the present status would very soon resolve itself into a loss to University and community alike.—J.F.A.

Distinguished Public Servant

The announcement last Monday of the appointment of Dr. John H. Hamilton as director of the North Carolina state laboratory of hygiene comes as a fitting reward for his distinguished service to the state. With the death in January of the late Dr. Clarence A. Shore, who for the past 25 years headed the laboratory, the state lost a man who had acquired an international reputation for his work in the study of rabies. Now, with the appointment of Dr. Hamilton, North Carolina bids fair to continue to hold its place as a pioneer in the field of public hygiene.

Although Dr. Hamilton's reputation has not been as large as his predecessor he is one of the more outstanding laboratory men in public health work in the country today. Since September, 1931, Dr. Hamilton has been state director of county health work, state epidemiologist, and director of the state bureau of vital statistics, the latter of which he will continue. Before going to Raleigh Dr. Hamilton was for eleven years county health officer in New Hanover county where he made quite a name for himself as a county health administrator. Some years ago the Rockefeller foundation secured his services for setting up a county health service in Kentucky and likewise in Tennessee. He is a Harvard graduate and at one time was instructor of laboratory technique in New York.

Such is the distinguished record of one who has devoted his life to improving public health conditions wherever his services were needed. Now he is to head the state laboratory at a salary much lower than that paid to former hands, a matter which is of little consequence to Dr. Hamilton if he can be of service. North Carolina is, and should be, proud to be the mother state of such an eminent health worker.—V.C.R.

A high school girl in Athens, Georgia, became such an expert tennis player that she defeated one of the boys on the first team. When the team went to Gainesville for a tournament, she dressed in boys' clothes and was making good progress until the coach of the opposing team became suspicious and showed a Georgia scholastic ruling preventing boys and girls from competing in the same event.—Athenaeum (NSFA).

The dormitories in the lower quadrangle—Lewis, Aycock, and Everett—are inhabited for a good part by out-of-state students, mostly from the middle and northern states. Graham dormitory which is also in this quadrangle has been dark and silent all year, except when it has been accommodating visiting athletes, delegates, and actresses.

NAPIER AND EVINS HEAD FROSH TEAM

Stars of Past Season Chosen Honorary Co-Captains of Yearling Tracksters.

Ben Napier, of Rockingham, and Tom Evins, of Oxford, were yesterday elected honorary co-captains of the freshman track season just terminated. The elections were held at a special called meeting.

Napier, who attended Rockingham high, ran the quarter in high school, but as a freshman did splendid work as a sprinter, running in both the 100-yard dash and the 220 straightaways.

Evins attended Woodberry Forest prior to coming to Carolina, and was considered one of the best weight men in the Virginia prep school conference. Tom handled the weights in fine fashion and should make excellent varsity calibre.

Good Scholars

An unusual sidelight concerning these two freshmen in their fine scholastic standing which runs a close second to their track ability.

Following the election of the honorary heads for the past season, Coach Dale Ranson made a short address to the team. He stressed the importance of training while competing in all kinds of athletics and urged the boys to adhere closely to the code of the Monogram club in going out for varsity athletics.

In their two dual meets, both with the Duke yearlings, the Tar Babies came out on top and then climaxed their season by winning the state freshman track title.

FORTY-SIX BOYS TO GET LETTERS

grams were given to track men. C. G. Stafford and Bob Hubbard were elected honorary co-captains for the season just finishing, while Ed McRae and Ralston LeGore were selected to lead next year's team. Bob Hubbard, two-miler, was the only man awarded his third letter.

Those receiving their second letters were S. M. Chandler, F. R. LeGore, F. D. Higby, E. E. McRae, O. L. Mullis, J. W. Smith, C. G. Stafford, and L. G. Sullivan. F. P. Abernethy, W. F. Armfield, T. L. Cordle, Odell Childers, D. B. Fox, J. W. Gunter, C. C. Hamlet, T. J. Hawthorne, C. S. Hubbard, D. F. Jackson, R. A. Reid, and H. W. Williamson. Joe Zaglin received a manager's monogram.

Five Seniors

Only five of the track team are seniors. These five are Cordle, Chandler, Bob Hubbard, Smith, and Stafford.

Thirteen men were awarded letters for work on the baseball team. Captain Willie Powell, and Johnny Peacock are the only men getting their third monogram for this sport. Besides those two, Griffith and Leonard will be the only ones lost by graduation.

Those receiving their second letters were Norman McCaskill, Joe Griffith, George Brandt, and Vergil Weathers, F. M. Matheson, Nathan Andrews, Fred Crouch, John Phipps, F. A. Leonard, Eugene Zaiser, and Thurman Vick. J. K. Taylor received a manager's monogram. Phipps and Brandt will lead next year's team.

Netters Awarded

The varsity tennis team was awarded major letters as a result of their outstanding record. Eight men were awarded letters. Captain Wilmer Hines, Southern conference and state title holder, and Lenoir Wright, Hines' double partner in getting the state and conference doubles

STORE APPLICANTS NOT TO HAVE INTERVIEWS

Due to the large number who have submitted applications for appointments of dormitory service room managers, the self-help committee, which is to meet tomorrow afternoon to make selections, will be unable to carry out its original plan of interviewing each applicant personally and will make selections on the basis of the written application and other information already known to the committee.

Directors' Meeting

The final meeting of the board of directors of the Y. M. C. A. will be conducted in the form of a luncheon at Graham Memorial today from 1:00 until 2:00 o'clock.

then deliver his address.

Scholarship Awards

Presentation of scholarship awards will then be made by John T. O'Neil, president of Phi Beta Kappa; John Allen MacLean, president of Tau Beta Pi; and Jack Thompson, president of Beta Gamma Sigma. Bob Woerner, president of the Publications Union board, will make the literary awards, and Coach "Bob" Fetzer, director of athletics, will present the monograms.

Following these presentations will come the short skits, the humorous nature of which has been withheld by Martin.

Dan Lacy, F. H. Koch, Claude M. Sawyer, L. B. Mann, and Mayne Albright will present the debating, Playmakers, University band, glee club, and bowling and ping-pong awards respectively.

Grail Awards

The Grail awards will be announced by R. D. McMillan, president of that organization. These awards will include the intramural cup, freshman cup, football scholarship award, basketball scholarship award, baseball scholarship award, track scholarship award, and the tennis scholarship award.

The fraternity scholarship-athletic award, given by the D. K. E. fraternity, will be made by Dean Francis F. Bradshaw. Jack Holmes, J. T. Comer, and Irvin Boyle will bestow the Alpha Kappa Psi scholarship award, the Delta Sigma Pi scholarship award, and the interfraternity scholarship award in that order.

Patterson Medal

The announcement of the winner of the Patterson medal by R. D. W. Connor will conclude the night's festivities. This award is made for general excellence and leadership in University athletics. This athletic award, which has come to be regarded as the chief recognition that can come to a University athlete, is given annually in memory of John D. Patterson, member of the University class of 1908. Three brothers offer the annual award, these being Lieutenant Commander D. F. Patterson, Albert F. Patterson, and Dr. Joseph F. Patterson, '04, of New Bern.

Winners Are Athletic Leaders

The Patterson medal has been awarded since 1924, and distinguished University athletic leaders compose the group of winners. The winner is selected by a committee, judging athletic ability, sportsmanship, morale, leadership and general good conduct.

Those who have been awarded the medal in the past are "Monk" McDonald, "Rabit" Bonner, "Red" Whisnant, Add Warren, Galen Elliott, Henry Satterfield, Ray Farris, Henry House and Staton McIver.

Barrymore Features In 'New Deal' Movie

The spirit of courage and enthusiasm which President Roosevelt championed in his inaugural address finds dramatic expression in Lionel Barrymore's newest starring vehicle, "Looking Forward," which is playing at the Carolina theatre today.

Included in the cast supporting Barrymore are: Lewis Stone, Benita Hume, Elizabeth Allen, Phillips Holmes, Colin Clive, Alec B. Francis, Doris Lloyd, Halliwell Hobbes, Douglas Walton, Viva Tattersall, Lawrence Grant, George K. Arthur, Charles Irwin, and Billy Bevan.

ANNUAL SESSIONS WILL BE OPENED THURSDAY, JUNE 5

Changes in Program for Students' Conference at Blue Ridge Are Announced.

The annual Southern students conference sponsored by the Southern Field council, student division of the Y. M. C. A., will take place at Blue Ridge, June 15-24. The conference is attended by delegates from various colleges in the south, and has as its purpose "to create a knowledge of one's self, environment, and resources."

The conference will open with a supper Thursday, June 15, and will close with breakfast Saturday, June 24.

The principal change in the program contemplated at this time is the abandonment of the guidance program and seminar and the devoting of two periods per day to training. One of these periods will be devoted to the campus: association work; fraternities; and church work. The other period will be given to religious, economic, and international problems.

Athletics in Afternoon

Athletics will begin at 3:00 o'clock each afternoon, leaving a period after lunch for rest or interviews.

The evening program will consist of a student hour, address and delegation meeting. In these addresses a background for the morning discussions will be created. The council will meet at breakfast.

The total cost per delegate will not exceed $28.00, with an excellent chance that this amount will be lowered by three or four dollars.

The University holds the record for having sent more delegates to a conference than any other school. This was accomplished in 1923 when Carolina was represented by 58 delegates.

The conference is given especially for colleges as part of their summer work.

SENIOR HEADS TO CONVENE AT 10:30

President Vergil Weathers Announces Executive Committee for Seniors.

Vergil Weathers, newly elected president of the rising senior class, announced yesterday the names of the members of next year's executive committee. Other committees of the class will not be announced until some time later.

A meeting of this new committee has been called for this morning at 10:30 o'clock in the Y. M. C. A. President Weathers urges that all members of the committee be present since important business is to be discussed.

The members of the new committee are as follows: Corney Bretsch, chairman, Ed Kahn, Claiborn Carr, J. P. Temple, J. S. Gentry, Ralph Myers, R. D. Barham, Ed McRae, Nat Townsend, Roy McMillan, and A. K. Hodges.

Reading Postponed

The Playreaders announce that owing to a multiplicity of events, the reading of "The Late Christopher Bean" is postponed until the fall.

High Top At Blue Ridge

Pictured above is High Top, one of the most beautiful peaks in the Blue Ridge range. Rising to a height of 4,000 feet just behind Lee hall, the conference hotel, it offers a challenge to those who like a sharp climb and a glorious view of the surrounding territory. This is only one of many picturesque and inspiring works of nature to be seen from the vicinity of the conference meeting place, and those who dislike mountain climbing will be privileged to view much of the beautiful scenery of the region from the porch of the hotel. But, to those hardy souls who like to climb to the peaks of the world, the view from High Top is eminently worthwhile.

BIDS ARE READY FOR DISTRIBUTION

Tickets for Finals May Be Obtained From 1:30 to 2:30 and From 7:00 to 8:00 Daily.

Final arrangements for the six commencement dances given by the German club, June 6-8, are almost completed according to announcements of club officials. Eddy Duchin's famous orchestra has been signed to furnish the music for the series, and the Tin Can, where the dances will be held, is being decorated.

Tickets for the series may be obtained from Milton Barber, secretary of the club, at the Zeta Psi fraternity house between the hours 1:30 to 2:30 and 7:00 to 8:00 o'clock every day from now through examination. Seniors in the University who have never been members of the German club will be permitted to obtain tickets at a special rate officials of the club have decided.

The series will consist of six dances held in the Tin Can. It will start Tuesday night at 10:00 o'clock following the commencement exercises. Three dances will be given Wednesday; a morning dance 11:30 to 1:30, a tea dance 4:30 to 6:00 o'clock, and a formal evening dance 10:00 to 1:00 o'clock. At this latter dance the figure will be performed by the commencement marshals and the dance managers.

On the last day, Thursday, a morning dance, 11:30 to 1:30 o'clock, and another formal evening dance with the German club figure will complete the program. In addition to these dances, a concert will take place Thursday afternoon in Memorial hall played for by Eddy Duchin's orchestra.

Community Club

The last meeting of the year of the Community club will be held at 3:30 this afternoon in the Episcopal parish house. Reports of the delegates to the state meeting of the Federation of Women's clubs will be read.

Board Meets Today

The Publications Union Board will meet this afternoon at 2:00 o'clock in Bingham hall.

DELEGATES FROM TEN STATES WILL GATHER AT RIDGE

Three Addresses by Dr. W. A. Smart of Emory University Will Open Y Conference.

Each summer representatives from colleges in ten southern states are attracted to Blue Ridge by the carefully planned program of the student Y. M. C. A. Last year the conference theme was "Building the South of Tomorrow," developed by the ablest educators and religious leaders. This year, with no formulated slogan, the same general emphasis will be continued, as men try together to learn how the teachings and spirit of Jesus may be worked out in individual and group life. The conference will begin with three addresses on "The Foundations of Religion," "Social Christianity," and "Personal Religion" by Dr. W. A. Smart of Emory University, widely and favorably known as a competent scholar and fearless thinker, especially acceptable to students.

He will be followed by speakers on various topics of general and urgent concern. Among them are Francis P. Miller of Fairfax, Va., chairman of the World's Student Christian Federation, lecturer at Yale University on Christian Internationalism; Robert B. Eleazer, educational director, Commission on Interracial Cooperation; and Dr. Mercer C. Evans, professor of economics at Emory University; Raymond C. Currier, formerly missionary in India, national secretary of the student volunteer movement. Each of these men will address the conference and lead discussion groups. There will also be abundant opportunity for personal and informal group conferences with them. Each morning the conference will meet as a unit, for study of Jesus under the leadership of Kirby Page, editor of The World Tomorrow. Two of his recent books, "Living Creatively" and "The Personality of Jesus," indicate the religious interest underneath his social passion, as well as his competence for the task assigned to him.

Students Active

Other well-known leaders will aid in conducting training groups on association, fraternity and church activities, and in other phases of conference

PLAYBOOK SHOWN AT WORLD'S FAIR

June Issue of Magazine Edited By Koch to Be Displayed in Chicago This Summer.

The "Carolina Play-Book," edited by Professor F. H. Koch, will be included in the national display of periodicals at the Century of Progress exposition in Chicago this summer, by invitation of World's Fair officials.

The June issue of the "Play-Book," now on the press, contains among other articles "The World and the Village" by President Frank P. Graham, "Bernard Shaw As A World Power" by Professor Koch. There is also an editorial on the fifteenth season of the Carolina Playmakers by Professor Koch; an article on the Carolina Dramatic Festival, which was conducted here this spring, by Rebecca Cushman; the prize-winning poem of the Dogwood Festival, "Dogwood" by Ethel Stephens Arnett and the prize-winning cut, Mary Dirnberger's program design for "Flieger."

With other outstanding periodicals throughout the country, the "Play-Book" will be displayed in the Time pavilion at the World's Fair in an exhibition sponsored by the weekly news-magazine. The dramatic periodical is now in its sixth year of publication, published jointly by the Carolina Playmakers and the Carolina Dramatic Association.

Leaders Urge Students To Interest Prospects

We believe that every student now in the University, having come here on the eve of, or during, one of the greatest depressions in the nation's history, has shared the problems of the University during several great crises. Consequently, these students have gained an unusually keen appreciation of the difficulties encountered and have a peculiar sense of University loyalty. We feel that this loyalty may be most adequately expressed in an effort to induce new students to come to Carolina, and therefore urge every student to encourage prospective attendants.

Other institutions are making concerted efforts to enroll every prospective college student, and unless similar action is undertaken by Carolina students, our publications, our athletics, our fraternities, our scholarship and all other phases of campus endeavor will suffer, but with the cooperation of undergraduates and alumni, service of inestimable value will be rendered the University in its attempt to deal with these unusual circumstances.

STUDENT PIANIST TO PLAY TONIGHT

Miss Zum Brunnen to Present Graduation Recital in Hill Music Hall at 8:30 O'clock.

Ida Lee Zum Brunnen of Salisbury will present her graduation piano recital in Hill Music hall tonight at 8:30 o'clock.

Miss Zum Brunnen, a senior in the school of music, is a student of Professor Nelson O. Kennedy, University instructor in piano and organ. Her program tonight will include "Prelude and Fugue in A-flat major" by Bach, "Sonata in A major" by Scarlatti, "Andante in F major" by Beethoven, Brahms' "Intermezzo in E-flat" and "Capriccio opus 76," Schubert's "Impromptu opus 90," Chopin's "Prelude opus 28 No. 15" and "Waltz opus 34," "The Island Spell" by John Ireland, and "Polonaise Americaine" by Carpenter.

FULL PROGRAM IS SET FOR MEETING

Good Schedule of Entertainment Is Arranged for Delegates at Blue Ridge Conference.

Sixteen hours is not long enough to do all that you really want to do each day at Blue Ridge, but you have to try to do with that, because in that atmosphere, with strenuous exercise and generous meals, you surely want eight hours' sleep.

You'll find more meaning in the day, if instead of rushing to breakfast with eyes still half-closed, you rise early enough for a brief stroll on the hillside, with a few moments of quiet. In these surroundings prayer, for most persons, seems very natural. One morning you may want to slip out before dawn and scramble up High Top with a party to see the sunrise.

Soon after breakfast comes conference Bible study, a helpful combination of worship, lecture and discussion.

The middle period of the morning is distinctly for training in improving the quality of our associated efforts at making the best of campus life: in the church, the fraternity or the Christian association.

With no long break, just enough to avoid hurry, one goes to the discussion of our modern social problems, considered from the point of view of students and how they may best contribute, now and later, to their solution.

The first hour of the afternoon is reserved for conversation or rest, a little shelf where you may put things that don't fit into an organized program. Of course, if you want to start your hike early, no one objects. Then come organized games, swimming, excursions, and a full-grown appetite. At least once during the conference, you will want to engage one of the leaders in a walk, a talk or a game. Let him know what you are thinking and see how he acts.

After supper comes sunset (from Lee hall porch—no one who has seen it will try to describe it): singing—hilarious, (Continued on page three)

BARNES LEADS MEETING

Program of Songs, Speeches and Presentations Feature Gathering Last Night.

With President Graham delivering an eloquent address in his final appearance this year before the student body, the annual awards program last night brought to a brilliant close Carolina's year of student activities.

A program of music, addresses and presentations, led by Harper Barnes, president of the student body, was presented to a large gathering. Riotous comedy provided by Jesse Parker and Nutt Parsley added to the interest.

A complete list of student awards, including scholarship, athletic, and activities recognitions, was made following an opening ceremony featuring the Carolina Alma Mater and selections by Walter Patterson, University organist.

Graham Praises

In his stirring speech President Graham praised the spirit of Carolina students and faculty in their enterprises this year, citing outstanding examples of Tar Heel supremacy throughout the state and the south, and made a plea that the entire body cooperate in supporting the University next year when it will admittedly need the hearty backing of every Carolina man.

In explaining certain elements of the past year, Graham gave a thorough analysis of the consolidation of the three colleges into the Greater University and an exact picture of the present state of the institution with its pared budget.

Graham showed the need for an increased enrollment next (Continued on page three)

SERVICE ON FINAL GRADES PREPARED

Registrar's Office to Enter Grades of Candidates for Degrees as Soon as Received.

The registrar's office is preparing to provide for all those expecting to receive a degree at the June commencement a final grade service on all courses now in progress, and on all courses in which any mark other than the final one is recorded, it was announced yesterday by Ben Husbands, assistant registrar.

A folder containing an all-inclusive roster of degree candidates has been made. As rapidly as reports are received from instructors they will be entered on the list, which will be available in the registrar's office during office hours for all students concerned. The list will be prepared for consultation on Tuesday, May 30.

Business Staff Candidates

Anyone wishing to try out for the business staff of the Carolina Buccaneer for next year is requested to meet this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock in the office of the publication in Graham Memorial.

Progress and Accomplishment

Another year has rolled away and in a few days we will be leaving the Hill, some forever, some for a few months till the old bell shall call us for classes in September. Looking back one cannot help but be impressed by the manner in which Carolina has weathered one of the most difficult periods in her long history. Despite the fact that we have suffered more than any large college in the country there has been no flagging of interest, no let-up of activity, but a renewed striving under President Graham and the other leaders who have guided us through the trying times.

This year has been a successful one. In the academic field the University has stood up bravely despite the loss of a few valuable men from our faculty and for the most part our standards of teaching and scholarship are as high as ever. In athletics we have been victorious, our teams have carried off honor after honor, and have been more successful than for many years in the past. Our literary organs still present the writing of young men and women that are as good as we have ever known and the other publications have continued to rise to new heights. The Playmakers have surpassed themselves with one of the most beautiful productions Chapel Hill has ever witnessed. The social life has been pleasant and we have had as good a time this year as ever in the past. The fraternities, orders, and societies too have stood the test and present to the future a solid and defiant front. In the face of the depression there has been no quitting and Carolina might well stand as an example to the nation.

Nor have these been the only great accomplishments of the year. There have been other happenings to mark this one of our greatest ones. The magnificent support of the student body in fighting the proposed budget cut and in giving up their vacation to tide the school over a bad place stands out. The great devotion of the faculty—which has uncomplainingly suffered cut after cut and has remained loyal to this college despite great personal sacrifice—is an inspiration to the student body. The support of friends throughout the state has demonstrated beyond doubt that North Carolina is still behind its University.

Encouraging too has been the steady improvement of relations with Duke and the discovery that losing to that school is not the greatest of calamities. Nor should our parents, many of whom have kept us here despite tremendous sacrifice, and the legislators who have done the best they could for us under existing circumstances be deprived of their share of credit for one of the most outstanding years that Carolina has seen in the long march of time from the little wilderness college to the great University of today.—J.F.A.

The Dormitory Situation

The proposals so far for repopulating the now vacant dormitory have been fruitless, so far as having reached an actual decision is concerned. A question of this nature is not to be solved without much effort. It is a problem which the authorities of the University have not been responsible for bringing about, and one which they cannot remedy without the aid of outside forces.

The fact that one entire dormitory is empty and many rooms in others are either completely vacant, or else contain only one occupant, may be attributed almost wholly to economic conditions. Due to straitened circumstances, many young people who would normally be enrolled at the University are unable to do so. Also, there are a great many students who would, in the natural course of events, room in dormitories, but who, because of financial difficulties, find it necessary to earn a part of their expenses, and who find it possible and convenient to pay their room-rent by firing furnaces and doing odd jobs around private homes, whereas it would not be possible for them to find such jobs if they resided on the campus.

The idea of any proposal having been made to the effect that freshmen be forced to room in dormitories sounds ridiculous, and has been denied by the authorities of the University. Only in case self-help work be supplied to every freshman who desires it would such a proposal sound reasonable.

About the only feasible plan for putting this vacant domicile into use, it seems, is that of converting it into a club for bachelor instructors and advanced graduate students. Even this may not accomplish the full results desired, but it might go a long way towards making this empty building pay. Nothing short of a complete recovery of economic prosperity can flood the dormitories again.—W.A.S.

Shady Dealings In High Places

Investigation of the private activities of J. P. Morgan's banking house has revealed many dubious transactions which, as a climax to the recent nation-wide banking crisis, cannot help having the effect of undermining further the confidence of the American people in their credit institutions.

Two days ago the testimony of Mr. Morgan himself revealed that his bank had offered stock at preferred prices—which amounted to almost half of what the market price was at that time—to favored buyers. In enumerating these buyers, the prominent banker brought into the lime-light of suspicion some of the most respected citizens in public life—Charles G. Dawes, Owen D. Young, Charles A. Lindbergh, Secretary of the Treasury Woodin, and last but not least our old friend Andrew Mellon. The stock which they bought at half the market price is now worth two dollars a share.

Such banking practices speak for themselves. There is no need to describe their destructiveness, for their effect on the buying and selling of the American public is obvious, and they can only result in undermining the normal behavior of the market.

J. P. Morgan, like Al Capone, was caught at his tricks by evading for two successive years the income tax. But this sinks into insignificance beside the pernicious forces emanating from the banking house which bears his name. No matter how vigorously he may defend his position and that of other private bankers throughout the United States, the American public is beginning to realize that, to prevent a recurrence of this scandal, a new policy toward private banking enterprise must be adopted by the administration. That policy, it is to be hoped, will take the form of greater supervision and control.—L.D.

Keep the Ball Rolling

The real test of a school spirit comes when the athletic teams are meeting defeat and when the school is facing huge odds. It is easy to support a winning team, but it requires a good school spirit for a student body to support a team when the going is rough and hard.

The students of this University have met such a problem this year. The administration fought a losing fight with the state legislature, and the football team met several disastrous defeats. It is not strange that the support of the students should wane a little. Human nature is so constructed that any other course was almost impossible.

Rather than condemn the student body for this waning of spirit, one should praise the way in which the students rallied back to the cause. In spite of financial difficulties and scholastic worries the basketball, baseball, and track teams were supported nobly. The administration received admirable cooperation during the banking holiday. After the storm the sun always shines. The storm broke last fall but the sun came forth in full strength this spring.

Last night saw the climax of this year's activities. At Memorial hall the students were rewarded for their year's work. The athletes received their monograms and the authors and debaters received their keys. In keeping with the revival the student body gave a great show of enthusiasm. Next fall the ball should be kept rolling. The lesson learned this year should not be forgotten.—N.A.T.

During the past six years the enrollment in French, Spanish and Latin classes has decreased 40 per cent, while the study of German has shown a marked increase, according to a survey of 21 colleges in the state made by the Kansas Modern Language Association.—University of Kansas Newsletter (NSFA).

Experiments at the University of Michigan prove that the ads one sees are sometimes right. The results of the experiments have shown that the lighting of a cigarette actually aids in maintaining nonchalance in moments of stress.—Ring-Tum Phi (NSFA).

Phipps And Weathers Hit Hard To Lead Regular Ball Players

Carolina's Southern Conference Champions Hang up Team
Hitting Average of .298.

The Carolina baseball squad which made the best record in the Southern conference this year, hit the ball for a fine team average of .298 and had ten players to bat .300 or better, according to the official averages for the season, released today by Manager J. K. Taylor.

Johnny Phipps, shortstop, and Vergil Weathers, second baseman, led the batters who played regularly all year, with averages of .325 and .320, respectively. Phipps collected 27 hits in 83 times at bat, while Weathers had 31 for 97.

Zaiser and Vick Beat Regulars
Two boys who started the season on the bench but wound up in regular outfield berths set an even faster pace. Eugene Zaiser hit 15 times in 39 tries for a .385 average and Thurman Vick hit 16 for 46 and a .348 mark.

The only better averages were those of Red Matheson, substitute catcher, who hit three for five and .600, and Lefty Hornaday, reserve outfielder, who collected five for 12 and a .416 rating.

Closely following Phipps and Weathers among the regulars were Captain Powell, third baseman, .309; Norman McCaskill, catcher, .304; Johnny Peacock, centerfielder, .302; and Bill Croom, left fielder, .300.

The other averages were George Brandt, outfield-first base, .274; Jim Dixon, first base, .266; Fred Crouch, pitcher, .230; Nate Andrews, pitcher, .210; and Joe Griffith, pitcher, .170.

Griffith Has .727 Average
Big Joe Griffith led the pitchers, winning eight of 11 games. Fred Crouch was victorious in three of four starts, and Nate Andrews won four of seven.

The leading extra base hitters were Peacock with four homers, four triples and three doubles; McCaskill with three homers, two triples and three doubles; George Brandt with six triples; Weathers with one homer, two triples and four doubles; Dixon with a homer, two triples and two doubles; and Phipps with a homer, a triple and three doubles.

FULL PROGRAM IS SET FOR MEETING

sentimental, or songs of simple worship—and stunts. Once or twice, there may be a camp-fire at the Council Ring.

The main address of the day comes an hour after supper, when everyone is at his best. It is a rare person who does not find himself grateful for something in this address: information, challenge, solution, resource.

Then while members of the Field Council talk over the conference program and plans for the year's work in the colleges, others meet in delegations, by schools, states, etc., to meet a leader more intimately, to share the experiences of the day, to discuss local plans, or for a brief period of meditation and prayer.

And so—if you are wise—to bed, for nine days is all too short and you want to be at your best till the last.

life. Students themselves edit the Daily Vu, take part on the program of the student hour just after supper, preside at conference sessions, constitute the majority in the daily deliberations of the Southern Field Council, and have full opportunity for self-expression in conference discussions.

Organized athletics will include tennis, swimming and handball for individuals, and playground ball and volleyball for teams, which will probably be made up on an intercollegiate basis. Golf may be played near Asheville. In addition to such organized and equipped competitive athletics, hiking and touring offer unusual attractions in this region.

View From High Top

Just behind Lee hall, the conference hotel, is High Top, rising to 4,000 feet, affording a challenge to those who like a sharp climb and a glorious view of the surrounding territory. There is probably no finer single view than the one from the porch of Lee hall, so that even those who prefer their athletic exercise to be vicarious are not underprivileged when it comes to scenery.

Within 20 miles are Mt. Mitchell, Biltmore, Grove Park Inn, and Montreat, offering to automobile parties most attractive excursions, for which special opportunity is usually given about the middle of the conference.

year. "Push the best students in your community . . . and invite them to come to this University," he said.

Chandler Wins Award

A feature of the evening's awards presentation was the bestowal of the Patterson award, emblem of athletic eminence, to Stuart Chandler, three-letter performer. Dr. R. D. W. Connor made the presentation.

Scholarship awards were made by presidents of the three honorary scholastic organizations. John O'Neill, Phi Beta Kappa; John Allen McLean, Tau Beta Pi; and Jack Thompson, Beta Gamma Sigma.

Robert Woerner, president of the retiring Publications Union Board, read the list of literary awards, and was followed by Coach "Bob" Fetzer, who announced the winners of monograms and numerals on the athletic teams.

The awards for debating, the Playmakers, the University band, the Glee Club, and bowling and ping-pong competition were also made.

For the second consecutive year, the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity captured the Fraternity Scholarship-Athletic award given by Delta Kappa Epsilon and presented by Dean F. F. Bradshaw. Three consecutive years of possession of the cup entitles the winning lodge to permanent possession.

R. D. McMillan, president, announced the seven Grail awards for the year. Pinkie Connor, of Sigma Alpha Epsilon, won the intramural trophy, and Tom Evins captured the Freshman cup for outstanding scholarship and athletics.

RADIO OPERATOR APPLICATIONS DUE

The United States Civil Service commission will accept applications until June 13 for the positions of assistant radio operator (airways) and junior radio operator (airways) to fill vacancies in the airways division, lighthouse service, department of commerce.

The salary for assistant radio operator (airways) is $1,800 a year, and for junior radio operator (airways) $1,620 a year. The salaries named are subject to a deduction of not to exceed 15 per cent as a measure of economy, and a retirement deduction of three and one-half per cent.

Applicants must have had certain experience as radio operator on board ship or at a shore station.

Full information may be obtained from S. W. Bynum, secretary of the United States Service board of examiners, at the post office here.

PARTY OPENS UP WITH WILD RUSH

Clerks Trampled Underfoot as Bargain Seekers Stampede Farewell Blow-Out.

With a thundering crash that rocked the peaceful, little village to its very foundations and startled the sleepy-eyed so-called students into trembling wakefulness, the gigantic Stetson "D" stag party swung underway early yesterday morning with a mob of eager bargain seekers jamming the entrance and delaying the official opening a full half-hour.

Employers strived vainly to maintain some semblance of order during the day but were trampled underfoot in the rush and had to recruit a new set of clerks at noon while they dragged their bruised and battered bodies away to receive first-aid treatment. After sweating bravely through the wee hours of the morning trying to get everything in readiness for the wild blow-out, they just couldn't take it. Vic Huggins, Stetson "D" master of ceremonies, who has just returned from a southwestern sales tour, said that the party eclipses any other Stetson "D" festival ever given.

One big, strong he-man fought his way valiantly through the mob, spent the morning examining sport coats, flannels, knickers, suits, and even tuxedos, finally bought a pocket handkerchief, and wobbled out of the melee hugging his precious purchase tightly to his chest.

John Law thought that the festivities were exceeding the bounds of propriety when Stetson "D" proposed to give away cash prizes of $15 and $10 to

Savant Socialists Savor Some Scandal

Socialists of the University of North Carolina will have a short call meeting tonight at 7:30 in 210 Graham Memorial to utilize the recently uncovered Morgan scandals in propaganda. the holders of the lucky tickets given with each purchase as a grand finale to the spree. The issue was compromised, however when each person fortunate enough to reach the inside of the store was given a ticket, regardless of whether he made a purchase or not.

Wires were kept hot yesterday by students caught without sufficient funds to enjoy the frolic. Many a poor father received a frantic S.O.S. for ready cash, but after hearing the big news, most of them cabled that they were on the way here to join in the fun.

According to a report from loan fund administrators yesterday, 16 needy students have been kept in school so far this year by the Stetson "D" contribution of five per cent of the total gross sales. From the appearance of the wild stag party now in progress, many another worried frown will be erased from the forehead of those with financial difficulties.

The party rages faster and wilder with each fleeting moment, boys. Let's meet at Stetson "D" this morning if we both survive the rush. Huggins says that his gang of marshals will be back in shape to direct the proceedings.

SELF-HELP GROUP WILL GATHER TO NAME MANAGERS

Managers for Service Rooms and Laundry Agents Will Be Appointed Today.

The Self-Help committee of the University will meet this afternoon to select the students who will receive the manager-ships of the dormitory service rooms, the inspectorships of the dormitories, and the laundry agents.

At present there are 24 students handling the manager-ships of the 12 dormitory service rooms. Out of these there are 20 asking for re-appointment. In all there are 70 applications for the manager positions. A large number of applications are in for the inspectorships and laundry agencies.

The members of the self-help committee are: Dean F. F. Bradshaw, dean of students; P. L. Burch of the building department; H. F. Comer, secretary of the Y. M. C. A.; J. O. Harmon, manager of Swain hall; R. B. House, executive secretary of the University; Dean A. W. Hobbs, dean of the A.B. school; E. S. Lanier, self-help secretary; W. D. Toy of the German department; and C. T. Woollen, comptroller of the University.

Reunion In Vienna Is Current Attraction

Robert E. Sherwood's stage masterpiece, "Reunion in Vienna," has been translated to the screen and will be shown at the Carolina theatre today with John Barrymore starred and Diana Wynyard in the leading feminine role.

The Sherwood play supplied Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne with one of their most successful vehicles and the film version is regarded by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as one of its most important undertakings during the present season.

Miss Wynyard, of "Cavalcade" fame, appears as Barrymore's leading woman for the second time, having recently scored with him in "Rasputin and the Empress."

Important roles in the picture are filled by Frank Morgan, May Robson, Una Merkel, Bodil Rosing, Nella Walker and Herbert Evans, Henry Travers, Eduardo Cinnelli, Bela Loblov and Morris Nassbaum.

YEARBOOK STAFF CONVENES TODAY

Alex Andrews, editor of next year's "Yackety Yack," has called a meeting at 1:30 o'clock today in the "Yackety Yack" office to discuss plans and make appointments for next year.

The following men are asked to attend: Billy Anderson, Billy Binder, John Chapman, Newton DeBardeleben, Henry De Vane, Bob Drane, Fred Eagles, Don Eason, Sam Elmore, J. C. Greer, Henry Haywood, Morrie Long, Sandy McLeod, Howard Manning, Armstead Maupin, Russell Mickle, Billy Pitt, Jack Pool, E. F. Room Regulations For Girl Visitors Posted

The following regulations governing house parties and rooming houses for finals are announced.

Each fraternity planning to have a house party during finals must apply at once to Mrs. Stacy at 301 South for permission. For each house party the fraternity will select one from a list of approved University chaperons. This list is in Mrs. Stacy's office. The chaperon will be paid by the fraternity for the house party and will be responsible for the enforcement of regulations governing chaperonage.

All the homes in the community that expect to furnish rooms to girls attending the dances must apply today to Mrs. Stacy for position on the approved list. Girls will not be allowed to stay in any home not on the approved list.

Sixteen Inmates

The following were confined to the infirmary yesterday: C. M. Davis, Stanley Heist, L. B. French, Thomas Wilson, Haywood Weeks, F. C. Thomas, J. R. McInnis, H. H. Montgomery, W. J. Jervey, C. C. Glover, E. C. Willis, Sarah Vann, J. M. Acee, J. Patterson, Henry Emerson, Henry Redding.

Staff Seeks Student Subscription Sellers

The business staff of the DAILY TAR HEEL desires representatives in cities and towns in North Carolina and out of the state, in which there are alumni or parents, to solicit subscriptions for the coming school year. A high commission is paid for subscription managers.

All students interested in the proposition are asked to meet Craig Wall, circulation manager, at 7:00 o'clock tonight in 203 Graham Memorial.

DAILY PUBLISHES ANNUAL REPORT OF AUDIT BOARD

Financial Reports of 14 Organizations Are Submitted by Robert H. Sherrill.

At a meeting of the Student Audit board Thursday afternoon, the financial reports of student organizations were submitted by Robert H. Sherrill and approved by the board. The committee report is printed elsewhere in this issue of the paper.

The following letter was submitted by Sherrill:
Mr. Haywood Weeks, Chairman
The Student Audit Board.
Dear Sir:

I submit herewith statements showing the results of operation for the year ended April 30, 1933, and financial condition as of that date for the following organizations: senior class, junior class, sophomore class, freshman class, Law association, Woman's association, Pharmacy association, Civil Engineering society, Chemical Engineering society, Mechanical Engineering society, Electrical Engineering society, Medical society, Debating council, and student government.

Organizations with fiscal years ending during the summer will receive their reports next fall.

Although the reports presented cover the fiscal year ended April 30, 1932, the new accounting system was not installed until October 15, 1932. This made it necessary to analyze expenditures for the first part of the year from the old systems, where full detail was not always available. As a result, the item "other expense" is larger than usual on some of the statements.

At the time of the preparation of the statements auditing cost had not been passed by the

GROUP SELECTED TO ASSIST PAPER

Committee Will Meet Today to Start Work on Agenda for Improvement of Paper.

In order to study the college newspaper field from every angle, to discover ways in which the DAILY TAR HEEL can be improved, a committee consisting mainly of newspaper men has been formed this year and will work during next year. The committee will meet for the first time 2:00 o'clock tomorrow, when an agenda for next year will be prepared. The individual committee members will carry on investigations in different parts of the country throughout the summer, and will be ready to report next fall.

The committee, as tentatively selected, consists of Harper Barnes, president of the student body; Claiborn M. Carr, editor of the DAILY TAR HEEL; Marcus Feinstein, TAR HEEL business manager; Joe Sugarman, chairman of the feature board of this paper, and Don Becker, member of the feature board.

That such a committee should be formed was first proposed in the general staff meeting of this newspaper following the past campus elections. The staff as a whole voted that the idea be followed through.

APPROVED HOMES FOR VISITORS TO FINALS SELECTED

Other Names May Be Added to List Being Prepared by Mrs. M. H. Stacy.

In conjunction with work begun to enforce the rules of the dance committee concerning the general conduct after dances, Mrs. M. H. Stacy, who was appointed as co-chairman with Dean Francis F. Bradshaw by President Frank Graham to look into the situation, announced last night the following townspeople have applied, and have been approved as homes suitable for entertaining young ladies visiting Chapel Hill for the final dances: Mrs. A. A. Klutz, Mrs. E. C. Branson, Mrs. John Lasley, Mrs. Wallace Patterson, Mrs. Bruce Stroud, Mrs. J. P. Harland, Mrs. Merritt Lear, Mrs. Calvert Peebles, and Mrs. V. A. Hill.

Other names may be added to the list, and the final approved list may be obtained from Mrs. Stacy at her office.

Check to Be Made

It is the plan of the committee to have the feminine visitors to the Hill stay in approved houses, and the owners of the houses will check on the conduct after the dances in accordance with the dance committee regulations.

Infraction of the rules on the part of the girls will be reported to Mrs. Stacy, and these girls will be placed on a blacklist; infraction of the rules on the part of the houses will result in the suspension of the house from the approved house list.

SENIORS MAY OBTAIN ALUMNI MEMBERSHIP

Seniors are again reminded by Francis Anderson, permanent president of the class of 1933, that they may obtain junior membership in the Alumni association for a fee of one dollar. Junior members are entitled to all the privileges of full membership, including a subscription to the Alumni Review.

Those students wishing to join the organization may pay the fee at the Alumni office or at the time they pay the diploma fee.

Enthusiastic Campaign of Two Campus Political Parties Features Spring Affairs.

With but five short months past, the year 1933 looms as one of the most eventful in the history of the University. As the school year terminates, ten events of more than passing importance stand out in the files of the DAILY TAR HEEL. No less than four of these had a profound effect on the state, while two may be accounted as nationally significant.

In summary the ten major news events of 1933 are: the University appropriation and budget struggle, the strange case of Jiasku Fukusato, the postponement of the holidays, the suicide of Dr. Eric A. Abernethy, the campus and class elections, the achievement of its third national championship by the tennis team, the battle between the junior and senior classes over Bert Lown, the Golden Fleece tapping, the death of Bill Roberts, and the founding of the University club.

Events of secondary importance, of which lack of space prevents development, include: the founding of the Student Open Forum, the promulgation of the "Buccaneer" proposal for staff election of editors, the founding of the national honorary commerce fraternity, Beta Gamma Sigma, the acquisition of the state and conference titles by the track team, and the rejection of the first Negro to apply to the University for admission.

From the standpoint of universal campus interest, the recent election was far and away the most important event of the year. Not in years had two parties so evenly matched waged such a hectic campaign for the 29 campus and class offices. The culmination of this terrific outburst of political interest and energy came on April 6 when over 1,800 students set a new high water-mark for ballots cast in a University election.

Spring Elections

Harper Barnes was swept into the presidency of the student body two days later in a run-off over Lindy Cate. All-Campus party candidate, by a 250-vote majority. The University party gained eight out of the 14 campus offices, including the editorships of the three campus publications. The rival factions

YEARBOOK STYLE CHOICE POSSIBLE

Juniors and Seniors May Choose Exclusive Cover Available For Them Today.

The 1933 "Yackety Yack" will be unusual in permitting students to have a voice in the style of their annual's cover. All covers are alike in design, but a number of them, sufficient to supply juniors and seniors, have been secured in the popular padded style, newly adapted to annual trade. Those who desire the padded style will be assessed a fee of ten cents which is the exact cost of the attractive feature.

This innovation has been carried out at the behest of the yearbook editor who is of the opinion that the dual style cover will solve many of the difficulties of personal taste in bindings. When it was found that the extra cost of padding would exceed the yearbook budget, it was decided that the students should have the option of obtaining these covers.

Class Distinction

It is thought by the staff that the plan would make possible a distinction between upper and lower class annual covers which is a custom at many of the larger colleges.

Juniors and seniors are to be given their choice of covers today which is set aside for the exclusive delivery to upper classmen. Those interested in the style recommended for their class are asked to bring ten cents in change when calling for the books.

At 2:00 o'clock this afternoon, the 1933 "Yackety Yacks" will be issued from the north campus window of the office of the Women's Association on the first floor of Graham Memorial. Since only a limited number of copies will arrive today, distribution will be limited to juniors and seniors, according to announcement by Marcus Feinstein, business manager of the annual. Further distribution will take place tomorrow, Monday, and Tuesday.

Distribution

According to P. U. Board rulings, announced by the business manager yesterday, members of certain organizations and various individuals will not receive copies of the book until full payments of money owed the "Yackety Yack" are made.

Members of the glee club must pay 50 cents before they

CAPERS TONIGHT TO END SEASON OF PLAYMAKERS

Awarding of Playmaker Masks Closes Most Successful Season in Years.

The annual Caper of the Carolina Playmakers will mark the completion of their fifteenth season tonight at 8:00 o'clock in the Playmakers theatre, with skits, impromptu "mellowdrammer," dancing, and presentation of mask awards.

All those who have at any time been connected with the Playmakers as actors, authors, house assistants, or members of stage crews are invited to the festivities. The program has been prepared by a committee of Wilbur Dorsett, Ellen Stewart, and James McConaughy, with Dougald MacMillan as master of ceremonies for the evening. Stage managers are Harry Davis, George Pearson, Rene Prud'Hommeaux, and Louis Hagood.

Featured on the program is a "totally original, spontaneous and picturesque drama," with the necessary tender heroine, true-blue hero, entitled "Bitter Reckoning" with various subtitles, and smirking villain. The cast is billed as Little Eva Rawls, Incorruptible Fitz-Simons, Scarlet Sister Stewart, and Efficiency Davis, who plays the villain. Well-seasoned Tatum and Our Will Dorsett play the aged mother and stern father of the heroine, while Eagle-eye Bonyun and Speed King take roles as the dauntless detective and the faithful messenger.

Special items on the program are "Harmony At Eight," "Meno The Magnetic" with Dr. Meno Spann, "A South-West Exposure" with Betty Barnett as South and Jo Orendorf as West, a "Nautchey Dance" by Phoebe Barr, "She Done It For Poland", and an Academic Bond Dance by R. B. House.

While the evening's program will conclude with the presentation of mask awards to Playmakers for commendable work in the various divisions of dramatic endeavor, the audience is requested to remain for cakes and ale in the Green room.

BARCLAY NAMED VICE-PRESIDENT

Frank Abernethy and Dave McCachren Picked as Secretary, Treasurer Respectively.

George Barclay was elected president of the Monogram club for the coming year at a meeting in Graham Memorial yesterday afternoon. Some eighty members of the club attended the last meeting of the year.

George Barclay was named vice-president, Dave McCachren, treasurer, and Frank Abernethy, secretary. John Phipps, retiring president, was named to represent the club on the athletic council, Dale Ranson was named to sit on the council as a representative from the coaching staff. Dr. Charley Mangum was elected to serve as representative from the faculty. Both Ranson and Mangum served in their respective positions during the past year.

The meeting opened with the induction of the new members of the club, those who have won their insignias this spring. Then monogram certificates were distributed to the football, cross-country, boxing, wrestling, basketball, golf, baseball, track, and tennis lettermen and each man was given the Monogram club's code.

The club discussed the plan of encouraging high and prep school students to come to the University next fall and fell in accord with the movement already begun towards this end.

Stuart Chandler, retiring vice-president, presided over the meeting in the absence of John Phipps, who was out of town.

ADMISSION RULES CITED BY OFFICE

Students Wishing to Take Condition Examinations Must Apply With Registrar.

Announcements concerning re-examinations and the eligibility of undergraduates were made yesterday by the registrar's office, as follows:

Students who wish to take re-examinations to remove grades of E or excused absences should make application for such examinations at the registrar's office before the examination.

In order to be eligible to continue in the University, undergraduates must fulfill the following requirements: a freshman must pass in his first quarter at least one subject, in two quarters at least two courses (or the equivalent), in three quarters at least five courses (or equivalent). After the freshman year, or after three quarters in residence, a student must pass at least two courses each quarter.

Deficiencies may be made up by correspondence work or in summer school, in which case only credits exceeding one course credit so obtained may count for readmission.

Additional Pledging

Theta Chi fraternity announces the pledging of Myron Boone of Milford, Delaware.

EXAMINATION SCHEDULE

Examinations for courses in engineering, including drawing and Engineering mathematics, are scheduled in Phillips hall. Examinations for courses in accounting will be announced by the instructors in these courses.

By action of the faculty, the time of no examination may be changed after it has been fixed in the schedule.

Cinderellas Must Be

Home Within an Hour

The conduct of the boys and girls after the dances is causing a serious problem to University officials and they are about to adopt a stringent plan of punishment for those who break the rules already adopted by the University.

Townpeople and mothers of visiting girls have complained about the seemingly unnecessary noise that has accompanied various week-end social affairs on the campus this year. Couples have been seen straggling in at daybreak and girls have reported to their mothers that they had not even seen the house party chaperons. Indeed a black and immoral picture has been painted of our actions here on week-ends. Naturally, the brunt of this criticism has been aimed at the fraternities, "those dens of iniquity."

The new committee, of which Mrs. M. H. Stacy and Dean F. F. Bradshaw are co-chairmen, is planning for strict enforcement of the one hour rule after the dances. The fraternities are to be required to obtain and pay one of the approved University chaperons. These chaperons are to be responsible to seeing that boys leave the houses at the end of the hour's time, and that all the girls are in by that time. Infractions of this rule will mean the forbidding of the guilty fraternity from holding any sort of social function for a period of two years.

In the case of townpeople taking girls during the dances, Mrs. Stacy has arranged a list of approved houses at which girls may stay. Any house not enforcing the rule will be black-listed and no girls will be allowed to stay there.

This committee is putting in these requirements entirely ignorant of student reaction. The members realize the difficulty in enforcing the one hour rule and have struck blindly at the present proposal.

There are going to be some who will answer the new actions by saying that the University's liberalism is being limited again. Others will object to the plan for other reasons. These objectors should make their feelings known to Dean Bradshaw in an effort to help the committee formulate its plans.

The Duty of Every Student

"The time has come," the walrus said, "to talk of many things, of shoes and ships and sealing wax, and cabbages and kings." The time has also come to the University when plans are being made for summer months, for vacations in the mountains, at the seashore, and at home, but along with the plans for enjoyment serious subjects should concern the students.

Every student here will at some time or other during his vacation come into contact with high school graduates now eligible for admission to college. Many of these men have formed no definite plans as to where their college career will be pursued, and a few minutes' talk by an intimate friend about coming to the University would have a far greater amount of influence upon him than any number of pamphlets or representation groups sent out through the Extension division.

Every college in this and other states is making a valiant effort to secure men for their student body. These colleges, most of which are supported only by student fees or endowments by their respective founders, realize that only through securing a large number of men from the present high school seniors will their existence be assured. These schools do not hesitate to employ all means within their powers to obtain a new freshman class. The University of North Carolina being a state-supported institution with its appropriations considerably lowered is in no position to use the methods of other colleges in getting new men.

All students in attendance here will during the summer months while playing and working form many associations with likely high school graduates who have records in scholarship, and sportsmanship which are worthy of any student at the University. These men would mean much toward helping the school in maintaining its leadership in various forms of activities. For the student, who is familiar with our records and our traditions, to tell these prospects of the advantages here would require little time or effort but would help the University to keep its superiority.

There should be, and there is, enough school spirit contained among the members of the undergraduates in school to make a successful summer as far as seeing that prospects with ability come to the University of North Carolina to continue their studies.—F.P.G.

The Growth of German Fascism

From the quaint old city of Munich there has come, in the scant space of fourteen years, the personality and the party which now rules Germany. A detailed history of the growth of the power concentrated in this man and his followers would read like a novel. Hitler and the Nazis! The very words must be spoken with gusto—and this is not so strange, since Hitler and his Nazis are being of such 'gusto.' It has been their boundless enthusiasm—almost child-like in nature—which has led them to the political heights.

One can imagine an informal little group of six people, in the year following the Great War, seated in an obscure room of a Munich inn—talking earnestly. It would not have taken long to discover the moving spirit of this group: he would have been a rather small, but well-built young man of about thirty-two, with a small, bristly, and very black moustache. This was Adolph Hitler. An Austrian by birth, early interested in politics, and possessed with an intense pride of Germanic culture, Hitler found in Bavaria the opportunity he was searching for. This little group of six, which formed the core of the German Workers party, later to be known as the National Socialist or Nazi party, "was a group . . . with no fixed aims, no programme, only the desire somehow to struggle out of the muddle of those days."

The internal chaos which Germany was experiencing made it doubly easy for the Nazis to capture the imagination of a desperate populace. The elections of 1931, when the Hitlerites seated one hundred and twenty-eight in the Reich, marked the definite upturn in their fortunes. From that time on there was a steady increase in Hitler's power. Summed up, the reasons for the sad state of affairs in Germany can be stated in eight items, namely: the economic distress, the sense of wrong evoked by the Versailles Treaty, the false accusation of sole responsibility for the World War, the Ruhr invasion, the loss of wealth due to war and inflation, the weakness of the government, the failure to carry the early revolution through with vigor, and the survival of many militarists and monarchists.

Despite this fertile field for their propaganda and the apparent strength of the party, there are forces at work in the National Socialist Party which may have a very deleterious effect on its continued success. The most difficult problem, to solve is the right and left wing antagonism in the party. Another situation to be faced is the possibility of trouble due to the promises which Hitler has made to the working classes while taking campaign money from capitalists who wish to put through a wage cut of twenty per cent. Furthermore, the tendency for German industry to fall into the hands of the government because of over-capitalization combined with the inefficiency of Nazi economic leadership bodes ill for the future. The outcome of Hitler's regime cannot even be subject to a general prophecy.—V.J.L.

The current metaphor for the present administration in Washington: A game in which the quarterback asks the captain for "faith" and for permission to invent secret plays that have never been rehearsed by the team; a game where the quarterback leaves his mates in a huddle and tells them nothing; a game where the only teamwork the spectator can see is in the band on the sidelines; a game where the ball is buttoned up under the quarterback's jacket and no one else is allowed to see it; a game where any move of any player except the quarterback is offside; a game where any measuring of gains by the linesmen is disloyal obstruction; a game where dodging through broken lines in both directions (including backwards) by the quarterback is the only play allowed—that game's not football, not to me. It's not even golf. It's Eliza crossing the ice—in Hollywood.—New York Evening Post (N.S.F.A.).

Events Of Prominence Feature Past Months

split the class offices, with the All-Campus party achieving three presidencies.

The most dramatic occurrence of the period was the imprisonment of Jiasku Fukusato, Japanese student enrolled in the University. Removed from Chapel Hill February 18 by immigration officials on charges that he had not passed enough courses to permit his remaining here, Fukusato was discovered in a Raleigh jail four days later by a TAR HEEL correspondent.

President Graham immediately secured his release through the power of Secretary of Labor William Doak. Chapel Hill, indignant at the inhuman, inhospitable treatment accorded the foreigner, received him the following day with sympathy and adulation. Arrangements have been made for Fukusato to remain in President Graham's custody until his departure for Japan August 1.

Most telling in the life of the University was the battle waged against the savage slashes in the budget by the state legislature. Threatened with a completely ruinous allotment, the entire University rose in its own defense. Telegrams, petitions, verbal entreaties from students, parents, state leaders, and friends of the University throughout the nation deluged the legislature. The spirit shown by the school had its effect when the opponents of the University were forced to raise the budget to $426,000. This is hardly a satisfactory figure, but President Graham and his staff grimly determine to cut their coat according to the cloth given them.

Banking Moratorium

Equally stirring was the unexpected proclamation on March 6 to the effect that the bank holiday necessitated postponing the spring holidays, scheduled for the following week, indefinitely. Disappointed but determined to aid the University in another crisis, the student body accepted the decision of its Council and the faculty and broke a ten-year precedent by beginning the spring quarter immediately after the cessation of the winter term.

The suicide of Dr. Eric Abernethy on March 22 shocked and grieved the entire student body. He had retired from his post as University physician in January because of ill-health and was one of the most affectionately regarded members of the University staff. Despondency and illness were given as reasons for his tragic act.

Tennis Season

The outstanding athletic event of the entire school year was unquestionable the performance of the tennis team. Handicapped by the absence of Bryan Grant, last year's champion, the team swept through north, east, and south to establish conclusively its claim to a third consecutive national title.

An unique spectacle was provided the campus early in May when the junior and senior classes battled over the advisability of retaining an expensive contract. An intensive campaign for a more reasonably priced dance waged by the DAILY TAR HEEL was at first supported by the junior class. Later, influenced by the opposition of the senior group, it repudiated its former stand. Campus opinion, however, was undoubtedly influenced against further large-scale dance expenditure in the face of economic depression.

Golden Fleece Taps

Golden Fleece staged its annual exciting and mysterious tapping April 27 when it admitted 11 campus leaders to its ranks. J. C. B. Ehringhaus, governor of the state, was made an honorary Argonaut.

The second tragedy of the spring quarter occurred the night of May 6 when Bill Roberts, popular University senior, was instantaneously killed in an automobile wreck on the Durham road. Ralph Meyers, driver of the car, was later completely exonerated from the charge of manslaughter.

A fitting close to the school year was the founding of the University club to foster better spirit between Carolina men and between the University and visiting athletic squads. Conceived and put into execution by Claiborn Carr and Harper Barnes, the organization has already laid plans for a effective campaign to revive the Carolina spirit next year. Agnew Bahson, of Winston-Salem, was selected president.

DAILY PUBLISHES ANNUAL REPORT OF AUDIT BOARD

Audit board. This amounts to about $94.00 for the fourteen organizations shown in this report.

With 23 organizations involved in this first period has necessarily been a difficult one, with some misunderstanding and confusion. On the whole, however, operation has been smoother than was expected, and from now on the system should operate efficiently.

I feel that the main accomplishments of the system to date have been:

1. It has made possible for the smallest campus organization to have an efficient book-keeping and auditing system at a reasonable cost.

2. In every case where purchases have been made through the auditor there has been a large saving over similar purchases of the preceding year. In the case of two organizations this saving has been about the same as the cost of auditing and bookkeeping.

3. Approximately $1,200.00 has been saved through gaining exemption from the federal admission tax. In neighboring institutions some of the same type of organizations are paying this tax.

4. By keeping all funds in one bank account a comparatively large balance is maintained, on which interest is allowed. This has amounted to $98.84 for the past eight months. However, experience has now shown the average working balance needed, so that a portion of the funds may be carried in a saving account, or possibly invested in safe, marketable bonds. I estimate that $350.00 in interest will be earned next year. This interest is pro-rated to the organizations on the basis of the average balance. In addition, if operating alone, a number of the organizations would have to pay a bank service charge of one dollar per month.

I wish to express my appreciation to the staff of the business office for its help and cooperation during the year. As an aid toward the establishment of the system, the administration has kindly agreed to make no charge for the bookkeeping services for this first year.

Subject to the fact that support for expenditures from May 1, 1932 to October 15, 1933, is lacking, and that the auditing costs for the year have not been set up, I HEREBY CERTIFY that, to the best of my knowledge and belief, the enclosed statements of income and expense reflect the true operation of the various organizations for the fiscal year ended April 30, 1933, and that the statements of financial condition reflect true condition as of that date.

Successful Intramural Sports Season Ends

Best House Keeps Title In Intramurals; A. T. O. And Lewis Rated High

Winners Score 1,002 Points as A. T. O. Gets 755.5 and Lewis 743.5 Points.

1,487 MEN PARTICIPATED

Best House, which gained the campus intramural championship last year with a total of 957 points, retained that championship during the intramural campaign just ended and improved upon its score of last year. The Best House athletes scored 1,002 points this year, according to figures released yesterday by Herman Schnell, assistant director of intramural athletics.

Eleven sports, football, cross-country, boxing, wrestling, basketball, free throwing, bowling, ping pong, baseball, tennis, and tennis against Duke, were included in this year's intramural activity.

Alpha Tau Omega led the fraternity outfits with 755.5 points to take second place among the teams of both leagues. Lewis dormitory placed third, close behind, with 743.5. Chi Psi, with 572.5, was fourth, Sigma Nu, with 537, was fifth, and Sigma Alpha Epsilon, with 536, was sixth.

The championship Best House aggregation gained its points as follows: football, 75; cross-country, 150; boxing, 175; wrestling, 175; basketball, 115; free throwing, 42; bowling, 25; ping pong, 25; baseball, 115; tennis, 95; mass tennis against Duke, 10.

THREE TAR HEEL STARS GET JOBS WITH PRO TEAMS

Powell With Richmond; Peacock With Wilmington; Griffith Goes to Cleveland.

With the baseball season of 1933 safely tucked away in the annals of the University, three members of this year's nine have signed contracts to play professional ball. Willie Powell, captain, Johnny Peacock, great center-fielder, and Joe Griffith, star pitcher, are the Tar Heel stars who have deserted the simon pure ranks.

Powell was forced to leave the team about a week before the close of the season because the business office declared him ineligible on account of failure to pay his debts to the University. Powell joined the Richmond Colts of the Piedmont league last week and has been playing a bang-up game at the hot corner for that team. His hitting has also been up to par.

The Wilmington Pirates grabbed Johnny Peacock from the clutches of other Piedmont league clubs. After the memor-

Athletes Notice

All students who have University athletic equipment must return it to the storeroom on Saturday or Monday. This is necessary to clear your name on the storeroom books, and to allow the Athletic Association to make the final check on equipment at the closing of the year.

With this issue this column does its swan song; in view of that it is perhaps appropriate to recount the thrills of the past four years which have been connected with University of North Carolina athletic teams.

Probably the most thrilling football game from a Carolina point of view came one Friday in October of 1929 when the Tar Heels journeyed to Atlanta to meet the much publicized Georgia Tech squad. The Yellow Jackets on New Year's Day had won the national championship at the Rose Bowl and were of course a heavy favorite to push over the Tar Heels. The Techmen started off like they meant business as Stumpy Thomason didn't lose any time in putting the home team ahead by a 7-0 score. But the national champions failed to figure with Jim Wagner and Johnny Branch of the Tar Heels. Wagner uncorked as beautiful a passing attack as has been seen on Grant Field while Johnny grabbed off individual honors by receiving a kick and weaving his way through Mizell, Jones, Dupree, Thomason, and the entire Tech team for sixty-five yards and a touchdown. The national champions had been upset—but as later events proved—it was no upset as Carolina went on to score 346 points that season to rank as the second highest scoring team in the nation.

The 1932 basketball tournament at Atlanta saw about as thrilling a basketball game as has been seen in years and which will vie with the South Carolina-Tar Heel game in the late tourney at Raleigh for punch and thrill. Carolina had defeated its first round opponent, Tennessee, and was scheduled to meet next the favorite, Kentucky, with Seale, Johnson, and Co. The Tar Heels were unable to meet the Colonels opening offensive but by half time had come close enough to still make it a ball game. And still the fans were waiting for Kentucky's vaunted attack—they weren't disappointed for as the final period opened, it seemed as if the favorites couldn't miss a shot. Again the first half was repeated as the Tar Heels with Hines, Edwards, and Weathers looping them in from all angles, began to catch up. With minutes to go the Colonels were leading, 40-39. Hines loops one in to put Carolina ahead but Seale sent his team ahead immediately on a crisp shot. As the timer lifted his gun to end the game, Weathers let one ride from near the center of the court; the ball seemed to hang on the rim for eternity before dropping in for victory. The Duke players who were watching this stirring contest rushed over to their neighbors and overwhelmed them with congratulations; the haggard Kentucky players, weary in body and spirit, walked slowly off the floor—the Tar Heels had again broken into the Conference spotlight.

UMPIRES SELECT ALL-STAR TEAMS

Laundry Club and Betas Lead By Placing Three Each on All-Campus Club.

The all-campus and all-league selections of baseball players were made public yesterday by Herman Schnell, director of intramural athletics. The selections were made by a committee consisting of Jim and Dave McCachren, Harry Hodges, Dan Jones, and Schnell, who officiated during the recently ended season.

Beta Theta Pi, fraternity league champion and runner-up for campus honors, and the Laundry club, which lost a 1-0 decision to Carr, the dormitory and campus champion, in the regular season, share the lead in the number of players on the all-campus team, each outfit placing three men.

Carr got two places, and Alpha Tau Omega, Aycock, and Delta Kappa Epsilon each received one berth. Dormitory league players, thus, led in the number of places received, six to five.

Two pitchers were named,

Library Hours

The University library will remain open from 8:15 o'clock to 10:30 o'clock during final exams, Librarian R. B. Downs announced yesterday. Beginning with Thursday, June 8, the library will open at 7:45 o'clock and remain open until 10:30 o'clock, except on Sundays the usual hours from 2:00 to 5:00 o'clock will be observed.

Anglin, of Carr, and Jackson, of the Laundry club, while Ziehn, Beta luminary, was awarded the backstop position.

The infield consisted of Bill Reid, Beta, at first; Stimpson, A. T. O., second; Cox, Aycock, short, and Baley, Carr, third. Outfield berths went to Tennille, Beta, Henson and Ferrell, Laundry Club, and Hall, D. K. E.

TO THE STUDENTS

To the Students:

The policy of the Athletic Council is to encourage universal participation in some form of healthful exercise and sport and to provide such a program that every student in the University can find at outlet for his athletic ability.

To this end the Athletic Association has invited and encouraged large squads in all sports and has been extremely liberal in providing and issuing equipment.

A request has already been made for the return of all athletic equipment. There has been some response to the first notice, but there are still a large number who have failed to comply. All equipment issued has been charged to your account and to clear your name it is absolutely necessary that this be returned by Monday afternoon.

Now when every item of unnecessary expense must be eliminated, I am making a special appeal for your prompt and unqualified cooperation. The Athletic Association has been most liberal with you. Now it is your turn to prove that their confidence has been well placed and to justify the continuance of this broad athletic program and liberal attitude in the issuing of equipment next year.

R. A. FETZER.

Tar Heel Makes Choice Of State's Best Players

QUARLES POINTS FOR FIGHT WITH BOBBY GOLDSTEIN

Stellar Carolina Featherweight Getting in Shape for Long-Heralded Clash Soon.

Norment Quarles, Carolina's Southern conference featherweight boxing champion, is already pointing for his fight with Bobby Goldstein, conference lightweight title-holder from Virginia, this summer.

Both Quarles and Archie Allen, who is managing the fight for the Carolina champion, have been trying for the past two weeks to get in touch with R. A. Dunnaway, who is promoting the Quarles' end of the fights. Yesterday afternoon contact with Dunnaway had not been made.

Norment, however, said that he was pretty sure the fight would be staged with several other outstanding amateur boxers also on the card, for the night. The match, which is to be in the form of a team from this section of the state meeting a team from Virginia, will likely take place June 20 at Richmond.

May Be Two Fights

A second match between the two teams may be staged in Raleigh a week later. Bill Dunnaway, conference title holder from N. C. State in the 155 pound class, will meet Freddy Wallmeyer, South Atlantic A. A. U. champion on the same card.

Goldstein made the first move toward a fight with Norment through a challenge issued by Walter Heenan, fight promoter of the Richmond Y. M. C. A. At the first meeting of these two pugs at Chapel Hill, in the Carolina-Virginia match, Quarles handed Bobby his first college defeat in four years of fighting.

Quarles Won Once

Quarles took the battle in great style, winning the first two rounds very easy and breaking even in the third. The winner almost scored a knockout in the first round. The outstanding feature of the fight was the ability of both boys to land hard and frequent with their left hands. The two have not met in the ring since.

In his two years of college boxing, one of freshman and one of varsity competition, Norm has won every fight by large margins and the majority of them by clean knockouts. He got two knockouts in his three fights for the conference championship.

At present the Carolina champion is in great shape, having taken light workouts since the boxing season closed. Norment will however go into intensive training for the battle just as soon as school closes.

He will probably do most of his hard work at Hendersonville, his home town, where there will be several good boxers ready to offer him competition. Among his sparring partners will be Herbert Quarles, Norment's older brother, who has been an outstanding lightweight battler for quite a number of years.

| Barnes | p | Wake Forest |

Six Carolina ball players are named on the DAILY TAR HEEL's all-state team. The men honored are Lamy McCaskill, Vergil Weathers, Captain Willie Powell, Johnny Peacock, Gene Zaiser, and Joe Griffith.

The placing of McCaskill, Zaiser, and Griffith on the first team may come as a surprise to many due to the fact that neither of the three were named on the so-called official Associated Press team. However, the selection above is based entirely on comparative performances, regardless of the number of years the candidates have participated in Big Five baseball competition.

Norman McCaskill gets the call over Hicks of Wake Forest mainly for his uncanny ability to snag foul flies and also his timely hitting. His average for the season was .304. Both Hicks and McCaskill are hustlers, and Hicks is more experienced, but Mac has handled his pitchers superbly and has caught a consistently superb game all season.

can receive their copies. Certain members of the Playmakers will not receive books except upon payment of a $1.00 fee.

Also, members of the junior and senior classes who have been notified that individual space fees have not been paid for, and who have not as yet paid them, will get the annuals only upon payment of the fee, or the presentation of a note for the amount due.

Members of the second year medical class will receive books only upon the payment, in lump sum, of a balance of $11.50 due from the class as a whole. Graduate students must present a slip from Mr. Thompson, at the business office, stating that they are entitled to the book. Those undergraduate students not cleared at the business office also will not receive copies.

People who are registered for only two quarters will be required to pay a fee of $1.50, while those who have registered for only one quarter must pay $2.50.

These amounts may be paid at the distribution window, and, since these are the orders of the P. U. board to the business manager, they are not open to dispute at the window. Copies are on sale to the general public at $4.00.

Best House Keeps Title In Intramurals; A.T.O. And Lewis Rated High

rule by downing Lewis, 7-6 on first downs in the campus championship game, started the greek-letter teams off right, but Best House took cross-country, boxing, and wrestling championships to put the dormitories far in the lead.

In basketball Old East trounced Sigma Alpha Epsilon, 28-12, for the campus championship. Alan Smith gained the free throw championship with a total of 76 good shots out of one hundred tries. Chi Phi and S. A. E. won the bowling and ping pong respectively. Carr dormitory had all the best of things in the spring quarter, winning the baseball championship from Beta Theta Pi, 9-8, and crushing Sigma Nu, 3-0, in tennis. No official champion was crowned in the mass tennis carnival with Duke, but Aycock dormitory had the distinction of seeing all its eleven entries emerge victorious in their matches.

Individual winners in boxing were: 115, Eustler, Sigma Nu; 125, Frucht, Lewis; 135, Cobb, Everett; 145, Sutton, Best House; 155, Pratt, Zeta Psi; 165, Edwards, Lewis; 175, Ellisberg, Tau Epsilon Phi; unlimited, Kanner, Tau Epsilon Phi.

Wrestling champs in their weights were: 118, O'Bryan, Old West; 126, Kellenberger, Mangum; 135, Rogers, Chi Psi; 145, J. Miller, Best House; 155, MacFayden, Alpha Tau Omega; 165, Shipman, Best House; 175, Cameron, Best House.

One thousand four hundred and eighty-seven different individuals took part in the intramural campaign during the year, breaking last year's all-time high of 1,436.

Final standings of the leading teams in each league follows:

field due to his consistent heavy hitting and speedy fielding. Although only in the lineup for a part of the season, Gene has proved himself to be one of the best gardeners in the state. His fielding was an important factor in Nate Andrews' no-hit victory over Wake Forest. Zaiser's average for the season was .385. He seems better than Morgan of Davidson, even though the latter poled a homer against Carolina. Zaiser is a faster fielder and has much the better throwing arm.

Big Joe Griffith gets the first string pitcher's berth over Bobby Coombs simply because he bested Coombs on two different occasions during the season. Griff won eight of eleven games and allowed no more than an average of five hits per game. Coombs is placed on the star team as second string hurler.

Nate Andrews is also a relief hurler, but he is named ahead of the idol of Wake Forest, Junie Barnes, and Charley Pearce, Davidson's big moment. Nate's no-hit no-run win over Barnes and his other exhibitions carry out the wisdom of naming him as the third string chucker. Not having the amount of speed, either Griffith or Coombs, Andrews has more on the ball than either of them.

The other Tar Heels named, Captain Powell at third, Weathers at second, and Peacock in centerfield were placed in their positions without competition.

Shrimp Morris, Davidson first sacker, is by far the outstanding first baseman in the league. He is rangy and can cluck that rock with the rest of them. Pee Wee Earp, of Wake Forest is planted at shortstop and had little trouble getting that berth. He and Vergil Weathers, two pals, should make a hot keystone combination. Willie Duke, N. C. State's clouting outfielder is in right field due to his speed and murderous clouting.

THE DOPE BUCKET

Undoubtedly the greatest thrill of the past season came in the first round of the Goldstein-Quarles fight in the Tin Can. In one corner we have Goldstein, Virginia's captain, national intercollegiate lightweight champion, and twice conference feather champ. On the other side of the ring is Normie Quarles, a sophomore, untested before this fight. There will probably be more money changing hands on this bout than any other event of the season. Both boys display mutual respect for one another and come out cautiously, each seeking an opening. Light jabs are exchanged. The pace is, in the eyes of the tensed crowd, killingly slow. Suddenly Quarles saw his opportunity and leaped in sending right and left hooks to the head and body and visibly punishing Goldy. . . . The champion goes down. It looks like curtains for the Virginia fighter, but like the champion he is, he rises slowly at the count of nine, a far away look in his eyes. No sooner had he risen when the bell rang ending the first round of the fight, which Quarles took by decision. No sooner had the decision been made when the Carolina supporters went into a frenzy of cheering that continued fully ten minutes. A great tribute to a new champion.

SUMMER SCHOOL REGISTRATION TO BEGIN THURSDAY

Two Terms, June 8 to July 18
And July 19 to August 25,
Will Be Conducted.

Registration will begin Thursday of this week for the 26th annual session of summer school since the opening of summer school in 1907. Instruction in all departments begins Friday morning at 8:00 o'clock.

A fee of $5.00 will be charged for registration after Saturday, and a fee of $2.50 for registration after Thursday. Registration for credit may not be permitted after 5:00 o'clock Tuesday of the following week.

Two Terms

Summer school is to be conducted in two terms, June 8 to July 18 and July 19 to August 25. The staff of instruction is composed of nine visiting professors in addition to 104 regular University instructors.

The courses will be organized in the college division, the graduate school, the library school and the division of elementary education. Work will be offered in the colleges of liberal arts, education, commerce, applied science, public welfare and engineering, according to the revised summer school bulletin.

Tuition Fees

Fees for tuition are $12.50 each term and for registration, $15.00, with additional fees for late registration, changes or extra courses. Three courses are included in the tuition fee. Students desiring rooms in University buildings should make reservation in advance. Applications should be made to Dean N. W. Walker, director of summer school, with $7.50 for the term.

SEVEN DANCES ON FINALS PROGRAM

Eddy Duchin and His Orchestra
Signed to Play for Entire Series of Club Dances.

In keeping with the custom of the past, the program for the German club finals will include seven events on the three-day schedule, which will be opened tomorrow evening in the Tin Can with a dance from 10:00 to 1:00 o'clock.

Eddy Duchin and his orchestra, well known for the leader's exceptional piano solos, have been engaged to furnish music for the entire series of dances.

The program continues Wednesday with a morning dance from 11:30 to 1:30 o'clock, to be followed by a tea dance from 4:30 to 6:00 o'clock. A formal dance in the evening from 10:00 to 1:00 o'clock will close the day's activities.

At the dance Wednesday evening, the commencement marshals and ball managers will participate in a figure.

The schedule for the final day, Thursday, will follow the same program with morning, afternoon, and formal evening dances. At the final dance in the evening, the German club figure, in which both the old and new officers of the organization will take part, is to be staged.

Lenoir Wright has served as president of the club for the past year. He will be succeeded by Dave Morgan, who was chosen a few days before exams.

Pictured above is a group of leading figures at the 138th commencement exercises of the University and the scene of last year's final ceremonies. Left to right, above are: President Frank P. Graham, who will speak at the graduation exercises; Charles T. Woolen, recently elected controller of the Greater University; and Bishop Edwin A. Penick, who delivered the Baccalaureate sermon yesterday morning. Below, left to right, appear: Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus, who will also be heard at the exercises tomorrow evening; Dr. Charles S. Mangum, faculty marshal; Judge John J. Parker, who presides over the Alumni luncheon today; Judge Francis D. Winston, who presides over the "Reminiscence Symposium" this morning; and William C. Woodard, chief alumni marshal.

Events Of State And National Prominence Fill Past Months

CHORUS PRESENTS ORATORIO 'ELIJAH'

Performance Is Feature of University Commencement Program.

As a feature of the program of commencement, a chorus of 100 voices presented the oratorio "Elijah" last night in Hill Music hall under the supervision of Professor Harold S. Dyer, head of the University music department.

Mrs. Roy S. Dearstyne, widely known contralto soloist and music teacher of Raleigh, was selected for the contralto part. Raimonde Aubrey of Danville took the part of Elijah. For the past three years soloist with the Virginia All-State Choral festival, Mr. Aubrey has attained a considerable reputation.

Other featured singers in the performance were Miss Virginia Hufty of Danville, soprano, and Dr. Robert T. Clark, Jr., of the Duke University faculty.

Alumni Luncheon Is Set at 1:00 O'clock

Alumni and their guests, faculty and members of their family, and townspeople are all eligible to attend the Alumni luncheon, held today in Swain hall at 1:00 o'clock.

Judge John J. Parker, president of the General Alumni association, will preside at the luncheon, and he and President Graham will be the principal speakers.

The luncheon is a long established feature of the commencement program.

Tickets for the luncheon are on sale at the Alumni headquarters in Graham Memorial building. The admission is 75 cents each.

Enthusiastic Campaign of Two Campus Political Parties Features Spring Affairs.

With but five short months past, the year 1933 looms as one of the most eventful in the history of the University. As the school year terminates, ten events of more than passing importance stand out in the files of the DAILY TAR HEEL. No less than four of these had a profound effect on the state, while two may be accounted as nationally significant.

In summary the ten major news events of 1933 are: the University appropriation and budget struggle, the strange case of Jasku Fukusato, the postponement of the holidays, the suicide of Dr. Eric A. Abernethy, the campus and class elections, the achievement of its third national championship by the tennis team, the battle between the junior and senior classes over Bert Lown, the Golden Fleece tapping, the death of Bill Roberts, and the founding of the University club.

From the standpoint of universal campus interest, the recent election was far and away the most important event of the year. Not in years had two parties so evenly matched waged such a hectic campaign for the 29 campus and class offices. The culmination of this terrific outburst of political interest and energy came on April 6 when over 1,800 students set a new high water-mark for ballots cast in a University election.

The most dramatic occurrence of the period was the imprisonment of Jasku Fukusato, Japanese student enrolled in the University. Removed from Chapel Hill February 18 by im-

DIRECTORY LISTS LOCAL PROFESSOR

Dr. J. F. Dashiell Awarded
"Star" in Fifth Edition of
"American Men of Science."

Dr. J. F. Dashiell, of the department of psychology, has been awarded a "star" in the recent fifth edition of "American Men of Science," edited by J. McKen Cattell. This directory, first printed in 1906, contains biographical sketches of all workers in the natural and exact sciences, now totalling some 22,000.

In the first edition 1,000 men had been selected by vote of their fellow scientists in the respective fields to be "starred" as the most eminent scientists of the United States. In each succeeding edition names have been similarly voted upon to be added to the list, partly as replacements for names removed by death. The principal consideration in such selection has been the value of the man's research work. Dashiell's research has been in the field of psychology, and largely in human learning and in animal behavior.

Of the present faculty of the University the following have received stars: in the first edition, H. V. Wilson (in zoology), F. P. Venable, A. S. Wheeler, and F. K. Cameron (in chemistry), in the second edition, W. C. Coker (botany), in the third, Otto Stuhlman (physics), in the fourth, R. E. Coker (zoology). Several Carolina alumni have been included in the starred list.

Graduation Exercises Set For Tomorrow Evening In Stadium

BINGHAM DEBATE SCHEDULED TODAY

Representatives from the Diocese and the Philanthropic assembly, University societies, will meet in the annual Bingham commencement debate this afternoon at 3:00 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

The subject for the debate has been chosen as follows: Resolved: That the states of the world should intervene between China and Japan in the interests of the world at large.

Elmer Oettinger and Bill Edleman will represent the Diocese on the affirmative side of the question, while Everett Jess and L. H. Fountain of the Phi will take the negative.

ANNUAL MEETING OF DENTISTS TO OPEN TOMORROW

Over 400 Expected to Attend
Convention of Society; Full Program Is Scheduled.

More than 400 North Carolina dentists are expected to attend the annual convention of the North Carolina Dental society, which opens here tomorrow morning with registration in Hill Music hall and which closes Thursday.

President Frank P. Graham of the University will deliver the address of welcome at the opening session, to which Dr. O. L. Presnell of Asheboro will respond. The business of the session will be completed with an address by Dr. Wilbert Jackson of Clinton, president, the report of the necrology committee by Dr. J. C. Watkins of Winston-Salem, and the reading of a paper on "Diagnosis" by Dr. U. Garfield Rickert of the University of Michigan.

Clinics in Afternoon

Tomorrow afternoon will be taken up with group clinics, which will be followed by a barbecue supper, given by the Durham-Orange Dental society at the University lake. The visitors will attend the University graduation exercises tomorrow evening in Kenan stadium.

Two talks are planned for the evening session. Dr. William deB. MacNider of the University medical school will speak on "The Relation of Dentistry to the Individual as a Whole," and Dr. L. Langdon Sheffield of Toledo, Ohio, on "Immediate Denture Service."

Program Wednesday

The program of the Wednesday session includes talks by the following men: Dr. C. Willard Camalier, president of the National Board of Dental Examiners, on "Dental Education of the Public;" Dr. Robert L. Dement of the Atlanta Southern Dental College on Periodontia; and Dr. Rickert on "Root Surgery Technique."

Notice to Seniors

Seniors are requested to register with the Bureau of Vocational Information at 204 South building today and tomorrow. The bureau cannot promise positions but wishes to have the names of the men graduating on file when requests for men are received.

FOUR HUNDRED TO RECEIVE DEGREES

Today Set as Alumni Day;
Class Reunions Feature Program of Activities Planned.

Following a custom established last year, the graduation exercises of the 138th commencement of the University will be conducted in Kenan stadium tomorrow evening at 7:00 o'clock, when approximately 400 members of the class of 1933 will be awarded degrees.

Plans for commencement activities provide for a three-day program, which was opened yesterday morning with the Baccalaureate sermon, delivered in Memorial hall by Bishop Edwin A. Penick of the North Carolina Diocese of the Protestant Episcopal church.

Today has been set as Alumni day, and the program will be featured by reunions for classes from the 70's down to the "baby" class of last year. A special reunion for all alumni in classes of the late 70's and 80's will bring back many prominent alumni of that period.

Alumni headquarters have been established in Graham Memorial and rooms will be assigned to the returning alumni there. A "Reminiscence Symposium" of the reunion classes, presided over by Judge Francis D. Winston in Gerrard hall, will open the program.

The Alumni luncheon will be served at Swain hall at 1:00 o'clock. There the alumni will hear Judge John J. Parker, president of the Alumni association, and President Frank P. Graham. At 3:00 o'clock, the Carolina Playmakers will present a bill of folk plays.

FUND INCREASED BY SENIOR GIFT

Class of 1933 Donates over $500;
Campaign Conducted to Sign Pledges for Additions.

The Class of 1933, in keeping with a precedent inaugurated by the Class of 1931, has made its class gift to the student loan funds of the University. More than $500 was involved.

The group is now conducting a campus-wide campaign to sign up pledges for future gifts to be added to this fund. The pledges are to be paid annually to the Alumni Loyalty Fund and will be credited to the loan fund already established by the class gift.

The campaign for pledges is being carried on by a committee of which J. Sparks Griffin is the chairman. In beginning the campaign Mr. Griffin issued the following statement:

"I wish very much that our Fund might grow into a really large figure. The Deems Fund started originally with only $600 and has grown until it now totals more than $66,000. The Class of 1933 Fund can also grow if we will add to it from year to year accordingly as we are able."

Felix A. Grisette, director of the Alumni Loyalty Fund, pointed out that the action of the class is in keeping with the practice of seniors in a majority of the leading universities of the country.

A Challenge to Be Answered

Those men graduating tomorrow represent a big investment and one which should now begin to pay dividends. For some fifteen years you seniors have been studying and absorbing information which should begin to produce results.

Your parents and friends have financed your education, in many cases not without sacrifice; and now the time arrives for you to prove that you have not been negligent to seize the opportunities offered. You have been sent through your apprenticeship because of the faith they have in your ability to "make good." Their eyes and the eyes of the University will follow your every move, applauding when you succeed and encouraging when the outlook is dark, but always wondering about the wisdom of their educational investment.

What a chance you have, what an opportunity to answer this challenge! Determination and not discouragement should be the keynote of your attack. Things look dark now, but they are set to change; your job is to be ready and determined to take advantage of any opportunity.

Attention Alumni!

The old well, Old East, Old West, South Building, Emerson Field, and the freshman rock pile all bring back many memories to the alumni who have graduated in years past. Those who have attended the oldest state University will always recall the culture and wealth of tradition which they found here during their student days and know that an education here is worth more to one than any which may be secured elsewhere in the South and few other places in the country.

It is only through the students who pursue their studies here that the University is able to maintain its high standing among the colleges of the country and to make supreme the culture and tradition for which it has always been famous.

Other colleges and universities in the state are doing all in their power to obtain men with ability in leadership and studies, men who will raise the standards of their respective schools. During this time of economic change and stress, the number of people who will be able to attend college is necessarily lessened, and each school, recognizing this fact, is making all possible efforts to get the greater number of outstanding high school graduates.

The University of North Carolina is a state supported institution and is therefore unable to expend the money in building up its student body that is spent by other colleges because of its large cut in appropriations. It must therefore fall back upon other means to reach the graduating classes of high schools in order to carry on in the face of the depression.

It is here that the alumni of the University can do their part in seeing that their school does not lose the prestige that has been built up since the founding of the institution. It is they who built up this prestige; it is they who have seen the University grow to its high position, and it is they who really know what an education at the University of North Carolina means.

With three months left before the beginning of another session there is much that can be done by the alumni to see that the University of North Carolina gets the best and one of the largest freshman classes in its history. The organization of alumni clubs in their respective towns and cities to form contacts with likely men, talks with men of ability from the graduating classes of high schools in their communities, and talks with the parents of these men about the real meaning of an education here, about the culture and tradition which they know of from personal experience would mean much to the University. This campaign would also help the alumni (many of whom have drifted away from contact with the University) realize that they are as necessary a part of the school as the undergraduates.—F.P.G.

Accomplishments On Parade

The academic year just past has been filled with interesting and stimulating occurrences. The students and alumni of the University of North Carolina can look back with pride on the many extra-curricular happenings which are so essential to a liberal education. Among the noted men and women heard at Chapel Hill this past year have been Axel Boethius, Dr. Charles A. Beard, Mrs. Mary Beard, Count Carlo Sforza, Dr. Chih Ming, Carlos Davila, Dr. Charles Stockard, and Dr. George Carver. Among those brought here by the efforts of the Open Forum groups were: Harry W. Laidler, Ernest Gruening, Dr. Winifred Chappell, Broadus Mitchell, Hubert Herring and Norman Thomas.

Musical and dancing performances of an excellent character were also presented here. Fritz Kreisler, Percy Grainger, the Boston Light Opera Company, Louise Bernhardt, Albert Spaulding and Helen McGraw offered musical programs of rare quality. "Pearly Gates," the Negro Morality play, was undoubtedly one of the finest things which has yet been brought to Chapel Hill.

Three "festivals" took place this year of 1932-33. They were the Shaw-Henderson Festival, the Playmaker Festival, and the Dogwood Festival. Each of these events once more reminded the interested spectators of the integral part this university plays in the advancement of American culture. Two other occurrences of extreme importance to the intellectual and spiritual life of North Carolina taking place here were the Liberal Religion Seminar and the Student Federation Congress. One must not forget the North Carolina Professional Artists exhibit which was held at the Hill Music Hall; neither should one fail to comment once again on the remarkable Playmaker production of Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream."

Three events of vital interest to everyone concerned with the university this past year were: President Graham's election as the head of the Greater University of North Carolina; the nomination of Dr. Louis Round Wilson to be President Graham's successor as the director of the Chapel Hill unit of the Greater University; and lastly, because of the untiring energy and enthusiasm of the students, professors, alumni and friends of the university, the appropriation granted by the State legislature was finally raised to the figure of $832,240.

It is particularly evident when one thinks back over the stirring events of past years that a finer and deeper meaning attaches itself to the University of North Carolina. Here is culture being created; here are the new leaders of North Carolina and America in the making; here are higher social and moral values being developed.—V.J.L.

At the banquet in Swain hall that evening, R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, will act as toastmaster, and Malcolm McDermott of the Duke University law school will speak. There will be a dance in Bynum gym Wednesday evening.

Addresses planned for the Thursday morning session are: "Flaskless Casting," by Dr. J. V. Turner of Wilson; "Common Interests of Medicine and Dentistry," by Dean I. H. Manning of the University medical school; "Activities of the American Dental Association," by Dr. Harry Bear of Richmond; "Practical Dentistry for Children," by Dr. G. A. C. Jennings of Richmond; and "The Floor of the Maxillary Sinus," by Dr. W. F. Mustian of Warrenton.

A general session will follow the meeting of the House of Delegates at noon.

Events Of Prominence Feature Past Months

migration officials on charges that he had not passed enough courses to permit his remaining here, Fukusato was discovered in a Raleigh jail four days later by a TAR HEEL correspondent.

Most telling in the life of the University was the battle waged against the savage slashes in the budget by the state legislature. Threatened with a completely ruinous allotment, the entire University rose in its own defense. Telegrams, petitions, verbal entreaties from students, parents, state leaders, and friends of the University throughout the nation deluged the legislature. The spirit shown by the school had its effect when the opponents of the University were forced to raise the budget to $426,000.

Banking Moratorium
Equally stirring was the unexpected proclamation on March 6 to the effect that the bank holiday necessitated postponing the spring holidays, scheduled for the following week, indefinitely.

The suicide of Dr. Eric Abernethy on March 22 shocked and grieved the entire student body. He had retired from his post as University physician in January because of ill-health and was one of the most affectionately regarded members of the University staff.

Tennis Season
The outstanding athletic event of the entire school year was unquestionable the performance of the tennis team.

Handicapped by the absence of Bryan Grant, last year's champion, the team swept through north, east, and south to establish conclusively its claim to a third consecutive national title.

An unique spectacle was provided the campus early in May when the junior and senior classes battled over the advisability of retaining an expensive contract. An intensive campaign for a more reasonably priced dance waged by the DAILY TAR HEEL was at first supported by the junior class. Later, influenced by the opposi-

Tar Heel Teams Rally To Take Titles Galore In Spring Season

After Uncertain Fall and Winter Seasons Teams Find Themselves and Finish Strong.

THREE TEAM TITLES WON

Baseball, Track and Tennis Teams Win Conference Titles; Individual Honor in Golf.

After floundering with more or less uncertainty during the fall and winter quarters, Carolina's athletic teams found their bearings this spring and proceeded to gather in practically every championship in sight.

In no sport did the Tar Heels fail to garner a title or at least a share of a title of some kind. The baseball team, after a low start, finished with a string of seven consecutive victories to tie Davidson for the Big Five championship and establish the strongest claim to the conference title.

The tennis team, triumphant in 13 matches, swept through a difficult seven-game northern trip, took singles and doubles honors in the State meet, won the team championship, the doubles, and had two men in the finals of the conference tennis tournament to leave little doubt as to its supremacy in both the South and East.

Comprised chiefly of youngsters who started slowly but became more and more expert with every meet, the track squad finished its dual meet season undefeated and then rose to its greatest heights in downing a highly respected Duke team in both State and Conference meets, thus adding Carolina's third Southern Conference, and 13th State championship since Coach Fetzer took the reins in 1921.

The golf team alone failed to turn in an impressive record. A fair percentage of meets were won, but the two most important ones, those to Duke, were lost 12-6 and 11-7.

In addition, the Blue Devils predominated in both the state and conference tournaments, although Carolina did gather a share of the glory by sending Alan Smith and Erwin Laxton through to win the state and conference individual championships respectively. After Duke had taken the conference team title by a substantial margin, Carolina proceeded to send both Laxton and Carl Cramer to the finals of the individual play.

Perhaps the biggest surprise of the season was the success of the baseball team. After erratic play early in the season which saw the Tar Heels throw away a number of games through errors, all to non-conference opponents, Coach Hearn's boys developed into one of Carolina's best teams in recent years before the conclusion of the season.

Duke and Wake Forest were each handed a pair of lickings, with Joe Griffith and Nate Andrews taking the mound honors. Andrews let the Deacons down without a hit in the game here, while Griffith stopped Duke twice by scores of 2-1 and allowed the Blue Devils nothing more than two scattered singles in the final game of the season.

Excellent individual performances were turned in by Wilmer Hines, who was undefeated in his final season on the tennis team, Oscar Mullis, and Frank Abernethy, each of whom set new state records in track, and Bob Hubbard who broke both state and conference records in the two-mile.

of 1922 will meet the present team in a feature game in the afternoon at Emerson field at 4:00 o'clock.

President and Mrs. Graham will be hosts to the seniors, their parents and friends at an informal reception at 5:30 o'clock.

Class reunion suppers are planned for 6:30 o'clock, and the Alumni ball will be staged from 9:30 to 1:00 o'clock at the Tin Can, with Archie Davis and his orchestra playing.

The Class Day program will open in Gerrard hall tomorrow with prayers led by Dr. Horace H. Williams of the University philosophy department. The final meeting of the class will take place under Davie Poplar at 10:30, and the oratorical contest for the Mangum medal will be conducted in Gerrard at 11:30 o'clock.

The annual debate between representatives of the Di Senate and the Phi Assembly, University literary societies, for the Bingham medal will take place at 3:30 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

Speakers at the final exercises tomorrow evening will be Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus and President Graham. The University's public address system has been set up to allow those attending the ceremonies to hear the speakers.

Carolina's Three-Letter Men

STUART CHANDLER

JOHNNY PHIPPS

GEORGE BRANDT

These three men are the only members of Carolina's exclusive three-letter club as the school year 1932-1933 is closed. Stuart Chandler is president of this club, having entered this exclusive class first when he received his third monogram last spring.

Chandler, a native of Durham, is the only athlete who is graduated this year, Phipps and Brandt being juniors. "Chesty," as Chandler is known about the campus, began his spectacular athletic career as a freshman making both the frosh football and track team.

As a sophomore he began his varsity climb to fame. He has made letters in football for three years as a halfback, quarterback, and fullback, and made the all-state team this fall with ease.

Stuart has also won two letters each in basketball and track. He played second string guard and forward on the court team and hurled the javelin for the tracksters. Climaxing such a brilliant athletic career, Chandler was presented with the Patterson Memorial award, the highest honor a Carolina athlete can receive, at the University awards night two weeks ago.

George Brandt, of Washington, D. C., was the second of the three men to enter the select circle. He was interested in freshman baseball and basketball, making good in both of these sports. As a sophomore Brandt was out for varsity basketball, making his first letter in this branch. In the spring of the same year George was out for varsity baseball, making good as an outfielder. He entered the three-letter group last fall when he received his third monogram as an end on the football squad.

Johnny Phipps entered the University from Fries, Va., the same year as Brandt. Immediately there sprang up a personal rivalry between the two for athletic honors. Phipps also got his start with the frosh teams, being interested in football and track. In his first year as a varsity man he made his first letter as a half in football. That same year he was out for track, winning honors as a broad-jumper. He was awarded his third monogram this spring as a shortstop on the baseball team.

Climaxing the personal rivalry between Phipps and Brandt, Stuart Chandler, Only Three-Letter Senior, Heads List Of Graduating Athletes.

When the members of the class of 1933 are handed their diplomas tomorrow night, the University will be deprived of the services of an unusually large group of stellar athletes who have already finished their athletic competition for Carolina.

Heading the list is Stuart Chandler of Durham, only three-letter man in the class. Stuart, who only a few weeks ago received the coveted Patterson award, symbolic of the finest athletic achievement in the University, was one of Coach Collins' aces during the past three years. Stuart's abilities were more needed at fullback than at his regular post as quarterback, and he quickly adapted himself to his new position. Although he did not break into the press as a high scoring back, Chandler was recognized as one of the best defensive backs in both outstanding members of this spring's nine, they were elected without opposition as captains of next year's team. Both now being tied for honors to date, their personal rivalry will have to be settled during their senior athletic year.

FEW CHANGES IN COACHING STAFF FOR COMING YEAR

Only Shifts Concern Odell Sapp And Al Howard, Who Will Work with Varsity.

The sports season of 1933-34 will see comparatively few changes in the personnel of the coaching staffs. Any changes that have been made, or where there is a possible change, concern the freshman coaches and assistants.

Chuck Collins will remain as head coach of football. Collins, when he came here in 1926 introduced the Rockne system of attack and defense, and has kept that system up to date in all his years here except last season when the ability of his players demanded that he eliminate the shift from the backfield and line activity.

Odell Sapp and Al Howard, freshman coaches last year, have been assigned to the assistant coach positions for the varsity squad. The varsity student assistants remain to be chosen. Coach Bob Fetzter and Bill Cerney, who was a teammate of Collins' on the famous Notre Dame team of 1924, will assume their new duties as freshman football coaches next season.

Dale Ranson, who was a track captain and star miler for the University in 1924 will again coach the cross-country men.

Shepard Still Basketball Coach
Going into the winter sports, we find "Bo" Shepard, newly appointed Assistant Director of Athletics, will again coach the varsity basket hawks. "Bo" is a member of the class of '29, but before that attended the United States Military academy and as a member of that institution's team was selected as an all-eastern guard. It is doubtful that "Sandy" Dameron, law student, who coached the frosh basketball squad will be back again next season.

Crayton Rowe will point the '34 boxers to an even better season than last year's. Rowe, another University man, began coaching here as a student since, being a professional, he was not eligible for college boxing. Archie Allen, '33 frosh coach will probably devote his entire time to law next year and a successor for him as frosh mentor will have to be chosen.

"Quinnie" Quinlan, who also acts in the capacity of trainer to athletic teams, will again coach the varsity and frosh grapplers.

Hearn to Have Same Team

The coaches who led Carolina athletic teams to one of our most successful spring seasons will all be retained for next year. "Bunn" Hearn, former big leaguer, manager and club owner who coached the Tar Heels to a Southern conference championship and a tie for the State championship this year will be back again to coach practically the same team. Bill Cerney, whose frosh nine won a great majority of the games this season, will again coach the yearlings in 1934.

Bob Fetzter, director of athletics and dean of Tar Heel coaches will attempt to coach his sophomore (juniors in '34) team of trackmen to another undefeated season, and to another series of state and Southern conference championships. Fetzter, a Davidson man, has coached Woodberry Forest Prep, and State College track teams. Since coming to Carolina in 1921, his teams have won the state championship every year, and have suffered no losses in dual meets in the south. Two dual meets have been lost in the north in this 13-year period. Fetzter al-

FINISH SEASON STRONG TO TAKE SOUTHERN CONFERENCE TITLE

Here are Coach Bunn Hearn's men who won seven straight contests to end a very successful season. Their record gained them a tie in the state race with Davidson, and a clear claim to the Southern conference flag. Sitting, front row, left to right: Griffith, pitcher; Andrews, pitcher; Whitley, pitcher; McKinnon, infielder; Webster, pitcher; and Manley, pitcher. Sitting, second row, left to right: Vick, outfielder; Weathers, infielder; Peacock, outfielder; Leonard, infielder; Captain Powell, infielder; Crouch, pitcher; Zaiser, outfielder; and Strayhorn, catcher. Back row, left to right: Manager Taylor, Coach Hearn, Matheson, catcher; Phipps, infielder; McCaskill, catcher; Joyner, pitcher; and Brandt, infielder.

Reunion Suppers

Suppers for the reunion classes will be held Monday evening at six-thirty o'clock.

Classes of the late 70's and 80's, the classes of 1902-03-04-05, and 1924 will hold their suppers at the Graham Memorial building.

Classes of 1908, 1921, 1922, and 1932 will hold suppers at the Carolina Inn.

Tickets for all the above class suppers will be on sale at the Alumni Headquarters in the Graham Memorial building. Individual tickets are seventy-five cents.

The class of 1923 is having a picnic supper in Battle Park under the direction of J. O. Harmon, Class President, also at six-thirty o'clock, Monday.

Leake Chosen Head Of Dance Committee

John Leake, Dave Morgan, and Ralph Gardner have been elected to position of chairman, vice-chairman, and secretary-treasurer, respectively, of the University dance committee formed for next year.

Other members for the committee are: sophomore representative, Van Webb; junior representative, Stuart Aitken; senior representative, John Leake; Grail representatives, Ralph Gardner and Walter Groover; German club representatives, Dave Morgan, Bob Reynolds, and Charles Woollen; Interfraternity council representative, Irvin Boyle; and holdover member from this year's committee, F. H. Kenan.

so coaches the freshmen. Dale Ranson and Sandy Dameron were assistants this year, but Dameron will probably have to be replaced.

Probably the most famous of Carolina teams is the tennis squad. John Kenfield, since coming here in 1928, has led the boys to three national championships. Under Kenfield the teams have lost but two matches and tied one. For the past three years the team has made a northern invasion playing the best the country has to offer and each time the Kenfield men were undefeated. The 1933 state champions, southern champions, and national champions, and their coach, John F. Kenfield, received nation-wide recognition for their achievement of 62 straight victories against the nation's best. Kenfield has also coached successful golf teams and will be retained for golf as well as tennis.

Battle Royal Expected Tomorrow As Wonder Teams Fight For Title

1922 Team Meets This Year's Club on Emerson Field At 4:00 O'clock.

MULE SHIRLEY ON FIRST

Hefty Olaf Located by Sheriff in Snow Hill and Vows He Will Be Here

Carolina's wonder ball team of 1922, South Atlantic champions, and the 1933 edition, Southern conference champs, will meet on Emerson field this afternoon at about 4:00 o'clock to decide the all-time Carolina baseball supremacy.

All but four of the 1922 team which won nineteen straight victories will be on the field today. Dr. Monk MacDonald, Dr. Joe McLean, Fred Morris, and Auto-Salesman Red Johnston, are the three who found business too pressing to allow them to return.

Mule Makes Swan Dive
Captain "Big Lou" Llewellyn announced that he would play third base in place of Fred Morris. She said that the rest of the lineup was being kept secret due to the fact that Big Mule Shirley and Casey Morris wished their batting positions withheld.

Mule is the big olaf which Coach Bill Fetzter sent in at full back during one of the exciting games in '22 and while she was en route to the line of scrimmage she lost her footing and took one of the most graceful spills ever seen on Emerson field. Mule never lived that incident down. The hefty first sacker announced Saturday that he would be here or break his neck getting here. Spike Saunders finally located him through the sheriff in the metropolis of Snow Hill.

Casey Morris has the distinction of being the only Tar Heel that has ever lost a ball. In the Trinity game in 1922, Casey hit one on the nose and it rode clean over the bushes in left field, landing somewhere near the present Raleigh road. The ball was never found.

Beside Casey, Mule and Big Lou, Herman Bryson, John Coffee, Ed Sweetman, Lefty Wilson, Rabbit Bonner, and Moose Tenney have all stated that they will be here.

Rabbit Bonner was the mite who dribbled the pigskin through the Maryland line in 1923. Bonner was sent in by Coach Bill Fetzter and Coach tion of the senior group, it repudiated its former stand.

Golden Fleece Taps

Golden Fleece staged its annual exciting and mysterious tapping April 27 when it admitted 11 campus leaders to its ranks. J. C. B. Ehringhaus, governor of the state, was made an honorary Argonaut.

The second tragedy of the spring quarter occurred the night of May 6 when Bill Roberts, popular University senior, was instantaneously killed in an automobile wreck on the Durham road. Ralph Meyers, driver of the car, was later completely exonerated from the charge of manslaughter.

A fitting close to the school year was the founding of the University club to foster better spirit between Carolina men and between the University and visiting athletic squads.

Bill had a pair of fits as he saw Rabbit take the ball from center, drop it, pick it up, and do the same thing again, all on one play.

Coach Bunn Hearn is coming back for the game and is bringing Thurman Vick, speedy outfielder on this year's team with him.

Lamy McCaskill, John Phipps, Fred Crouch, George Brandt, Vergil Weathers, Dutchy Leonard, and Bill Croom have said that they will be back to oppose the former wonders. Big Joe Griffith, who was signed by Cleveland after the season, has been asked to work the game in the box by Coach Bunn and he will probably face the old timers. Harry Montgomery, Bill Moore, and Mac McKeithan, all freshman stars this year will also play with the varsity.

There was an unconfirmed rumor Saturday that Bo Shepard and Goat Randolph would play for the alumni. Neither have ever played real baseball, though Goat lasted through a frosh game in 1922 making three errors, and getting no hits in three tries. Not bad. Shepard's record is better than Goat's; nothing at all is known of his prowess. Randolph has a collection of old TAR HEELS and "Yackety-Yacks" which should be of interest to alumni. They can be seen by dropping in Goat's shop down town.

the south. In addition to his football activities, Chandler has been a dependable forward on Coach Shepard's basketball team and a steady point-gatherer on the track team.

Other Gridmen Lost

While on football, let us not forget several other men who will be hard to replace next season. Harry Hodges, giant tackle for the past three years and all-state selection, leaves a wide hole at the tackle post. His loss will also be felt by the track squad, as Harry was a regular weight man, winning his monogram last season. Another all-state selection in the person of Erwin Walker of Charlotte remains to be filled. Walker played beautiful ball for three years and was a unanimous pick on the all-state eleven. In addition, he made several all-southern teams.

Two reserve guards, Herb Newcombe of Charlotte and Cab Philpott of Lexington, also graduate. In the backfield the only loss besides Chandler will be Norm McCaskill of Rockingham. Norm's football days are over but he still has another year of competition in baseball, a sport in which he shone this spring. Although it was his first year as a catcher, Mac was so impressing that he was commonly called one of the best college receivers seen in North Carolina in several years.

Court and Net Teams Hit

Carolina's basketball and tennis teams also receive hard jolts via old man diploma. Wilmer Hines of Columbia, S. C., receives his sheepskin this year. Wilmer was captain of the 1933 basketball team as well as co-captain of tennis with Lenoir Wright of Charlotte. Wilmer has played excellently at forward on a fine basketball team and for two seasons was the team's high scorer. As a member of the tennis team he established a perfect record, going through four years without a defeat in college competition. In addition Wilmer annexed the national junior title in the summer of 1930, thus adding another national championship to Carolina's string. Bryan Grant earlier won the national clay court crown.

In baseball Carolina loses three men, each of whom is now playing professional ball—a silent tribute to Coach Bunn Hearn. Joe Griffith, the first Carolina pitcher to win two games from Duke since 1927, capped a brilliant career by signing with the Cleveland Indians.

FETZER DIRECTS COACHING SCHOOL HERE IN SUMMER

Other Members of Carolina Staff Will Tutor Visiting Mentors in August.

Carolina's twelfth annual summer coaching school for athletic directors and coaches is scheduled to open August 21 and continue until September 2.

Using both theory and practice, the school instructs the students in the methods and practices used in the coaching of different branches of athletics. The school also attempts to foster high ideals in all sports.

Coach Bob Fetzter, head of athletics at Carolina, will be in charge of the school. The staff of instruction will be made up of Chuck Collins, Notre Dame; Bill Cerney, Notre Dame; Al Howard, Notre Dame; Bo Shepard, Army; P. H. Quinlan, Springfield; Crayton Rowe, Carolina; Odell Sapp, Carolina; Bunn Hearn, Carolina; Dale Ranson, Carolina; and probably several others, all from Carolina's coaching staff.

All Sports

Fetzter and Ranson will be in charge of track and cross-country; Collins, Fetzter, Cerney, Howard, and Sapp will take care of football; Shepard will direct basketball; Hearn and Cerney will be in charge of baseball; Rowe will supervise boxing; and Quinlan will act as trainer and wrestling director.

Since the school was organized in 1928 as an annual institution over six hundred have attended. Last year around a hundred athletic directors and coaches from universities and colleges all over the United States received instruction.

APPOINTMENTS MADE BY EDITOR ANDREWS

Alex Andrews, editor of the 1934 "Yackety Yack," yesterday made appointments to the staff. Those who will hold executive positions on the annual board next year are: managing editor, Bob Drane; assistant managing editor, Russell Mickle; athletics, Billy Anderson; fraternity, Newton DeBardeleben; activities, Russell Mickle.

Other appointments are: seniors, Sam Elmore; Juniors and other classes, Sandy McLeod; dance section, Howard Manning; organizations, Jack Pool and Irving Suss; pictorial, John Chapman; and head typists, J. C. Grier and Henry Devane.

Drane Gives Volumes

Dr. Robert B. Drane of Edenton has given the University library a collection of approximately 1,000 volumes from his private library. The collection includes much valuable church history, general history, and literature.

Johnny Peacock, hustling center-fielder, is holding down that position with Wilmington of the Piedmont league. Playing in the same circuit is Captain Willie Powell, third baseman de luxe.

The wrestling and boxing outfits being almost entirely sophomore teams, only one man is lost from each squad. Captain Percy Idol, southern heavyweight wrestling champion, and Captain Marty Levinson, featherweight and one of the most colorful fighters ever to don gloves for the Tar Heels, will graduate.

Two men are lost to the track team besides Chandler and Hodges—Captain Bob Hubbard, conference two-mile champion, and Floyd Higby, sprinter and broad jumper. These two men have been of invaluable service during the past years and their loss will be keenly felt.
